g Ye Iſraelites, to whom he now turneth his Speech. h Like Scullions that commonly lie down in the Kitchin among the Pots or Hearth-ſtones, whereby they are very much diſcoloured and deformed: Which is fitly oppoſed to the following beauty. Though you have been filled with affliction and contempt. i Or, ye have been. Which may ſeem more ſuitable to the Context, both foregoing and following, wherein he doth not ſpeak prophetically of things to come, but hiſtorically of things paſt. So the ſence of the Verſe is; Though you have formerly been expoſed to great ſervitude and reproach, and miſery, to wit, in Egypt, yet ſince that time God hath changed your condition greatly for the better. k Beautiful and glorious, like the feathers of a Dove, which according to the variety of its poſtures, and of the light ſhining upon it, look like Silver or Gold.

14. When

14. When the Almighty scattered kings ‖ in it l, ‖ it was white as snow in Salmon m.

l In Canaan, at the coming of the Israelites thither. m The Land was as white as Mount Salmon is with the Snow, which falls and lies for a long time upon it; which is opposed to the native obscurity of that Mountain by the many shady Trees which were there, *Judg.*9.48. But because there is nothing certain; Either, concerning the great height of this Mountain, or, concerning its Snow, as we do read of the Snow of Lebanon, Jer. 18.14. other Interpreters, both Hebrew and Christian, and the Chaldee amongst the rest, take this word Salmon for a Common, and not a proper Name, signifying Darkness or a Shadow, as the Root, from whence it comes, unquestionably signifies. Nor is it strange, if this word be no where else taken in that sense but here, because that is the lot of many Hebrew words, or of some significations of them, that they are to be found but in one Text of Scripture. This being granted, the words are or may be rendred thus, it was Snow-white, or thou madest it Snow-white in Darkness, or as the Chaldee renders this word, in the shadow of Death; (i.e.) Thou didst cause Light to shine out of Darkness; When the state of thy People, and of the Land of Canaan, which thou hadst given to them, was dark and dismal, or bloody, by reason of the Wars raised against them, by the Canaanitish Kings, thou didst quickly change it, and whereas it was red like Scarlet or Crimson, thou mad'st it whiter than Snow.

15. The hill of God n, is as the hill of Bashan o, an high hill as the hill of Bashan.

n (i.e.) Of Zion, the seat of God's Ark. o Equal to it, to wit, in height, as the next Clause explains it, which yet is not to be understood of an external and visible height, for Zion was a low and little Hill, and Bashan a very high Hill; but of its spiritual height, or exaltation, in regard of the glorious Privileges of God's Presence, and Worship, and Blessing conferred upon it; in which respect the Mountain of the Lords House, is said to be established on the top of the Mountains, and exalted above the Hills, Isa. 2. 2.

* Psal.87.1. & 132.13.

16. Why leap ye p, ye high hills? * this is the hill which God desireth to dwell in, yea, the LORD will dwell in it for ever q.

p Why do you triumph and boast of your height, and look upon poor Zion with scorn and contempt, as an obscure and inconsiderable Hill, if compared with you? He speaks to the Hills by an usual Figure called Prosopopœia. q This Hill, though despicable in your eyes, is precious and honourable in God's eyes, and chosen by him for his settled and perpetual Residence. For though the Ark was removed from this particular place, in which it was now to be placed, to the Hill of Moriah, upon which the Temple was built, yet it must be remembred, that Zion and Moriah stood one near to the other, being both in Jerusalem, and are by some said to have been but two tops of one and the same Hill.

* Deut.33. 2. Dan.7. 10. Heb.12. 22. Rev.9. 16. ‖ Or, even many Thousands. † Heb. Thousands of doubling, or, double ones.

17. * The chariots of r God are twenty thousand, ‖ † even thousands of angels: the Lord is among them s as in Sinai, in the holy place t.

r (i.e.) The Hosts or Armies (whereof Chariots were a great and eminent part in those times and places) which attend upon God to do his pleasure, and to fight for him and for his People. s (i.e.) An innumerable Company, a certain number being put for an uncertain, as *Psal.*3.6. and 91.7. and in many other places. t Here is not only the Presence of the Angels, but of the great and blessed God himself. And here the Psalmist seems to be transported by the Prophetical Spirit, from the narration of those external Successes and Victories, of which he had been speaking in the former part of the Psalm, unto the Prediction of higher and more glorious things, even of the coming of the Messiah; and of the happy and transcendent Privileges and Blessings accruing to Mankind by it, described in the next Verse. And the connexion of this new Matter with the former, is sufficiently evident. For having preferred Zion before other Hills, v.15,16. he now proves its Excellency, by an invincible Argument, because this is the place to which the Lord of Hosts himself, the Messiah, God manifested in the Flesh, was to come, as is manifest from *Psal.*2.6. and 110.2. *Isa.*2.3. and 28.16. compared with 1 *Pet.*2. 6. *Isa.*59. 20. compared with *Rom.*11. 26. and many other places of Scripture. And when he did come into the World, he was attended with a multitude of holy Angels, which celebrated his Birth, *Luk.*2.14. t God is no less gloriously, though less terribly, present here than he was in Sinai, when the great God attended with Thousands of his Angels, solemnly appeared there to deliver the Law. Heb. Sinai is in the Sanctuary, or holy Place. Which is a Poetical and a very Emphatical Expression, and very pertinent to this place. For having advanced Zion above all other Hills, he now equals it to that venerable Hill of Sinai, which the divine Majesty honoured with his glorious Presence. Here, saith he, you have in some sort Mount Sinai it self, to wit, all the Glories and Privileges of it, the Presence of Jehovah attended with his Angels, and the same Law and Covenant, yea, and a greater Privilege than Sinai had, to wit, the Lord Jehovah descending from Heaven, into an humane Body, as appears by his ascending thither again, which the next Verse describes, and visibly coming into his own Temple, as it was prophesied concerning him, Mal. 3. 1.

* Eph. 4. 8. † Heb. the Man.

18. * Thou hast ascended on high u, thou hast led captivity x captive: thou hast received gifts y † for men z, yea, for the rebellious also a, that the LORD God might dwell among them b.

u Having spoken of the Lord, and of his Presence upon Earth, he now turneth his Speech to him, as is most usual in this Book. And the Contents of this Verse do not agree to the present occasion of carrying the Ark to Zion, but have a manifest reference to Christ, and to his Ascension into Heaven, in whom, and in whom alone they are literally and fully accomplished, and to whom therefore they are ascribed, *Eph.*4.8. Although the Expressions here used, are borrowed from the ancient Custom of Princes, or Generals of Armies, who, after some glorious Atchievments and Victories, used to go up into their Royal Cities in triumphant Chariots, being attended by their captive Enemies, and afterward to distribute divers gifts to their Souldiers and Subjects, and sometimes, to do some Acts of Grace and Clemency even to their Rebels and Enemies, and to receive them into the number of his own People. x Either, 1. Those who did formerly take thy People captives. Or rather, 2. Those whom thou hast taken captive, as this word is most commonly used, as *Numb.*21.1. *Deut.*21. 10. *Judg.*5.12, &c. So poverty is put for the poor, 2 Kings 24. 14. This is meant of death and sin, and the Devil, and all the Enemies of Christ, and of his People, whom Christ led in triumph, having spoiled them, and making a shew of them openly, as it is expressed, Col. 2. 15. y Though as thou art God, thou art uncapable of receiving any thing more than thou hast, yet according to thy Manhood thou hast received from God all the treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge, and all those gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, which are necessary either to the perfection of thy Nature, or to the discharge of thine Office, or to the service and good of thy Church and people. z Not for thy self, for thou didst not need them, having the fulness of the God-head dwelling in thee bodily, Col.2. 9. but for the sons of men, or which thou mightest give unto men; whence for receiving for men, the Apostle justly saith, gave unto men, Eph.4.8. because he received them for no other end but to give them, and in such cases receiving or taking is oft put for giving, or for taking and giving, as *Exod.*25.2. *Judg.*14.2. 1 Kings 3.24. and 17. 10, &c. a Nor didst thou only receive gifts for, and give them to thy Friends and People, as the manner of other Conquerors is, but also to thy most stubborn and rebellious Enemies, whether Jews or Gentiles, who resolved to break thy bands asunder, and to cast away thy cords from them: As is said, Psal. 2. 3. And would not have thee to reign over them, Luk.19.14. Who crucified him, and put him to open shame; and yet to these, as well as others, thou didst give those saving gifts and graces, as we read *Act.*2. and elsewhere. b That having received such gifts, and thereby being made fit habitations for God, he who, as Man, is ascended into the highest Heavens, might, as God, come down to them, and dwell with them, not only in and by his Ordinances in which he is present, but also by his Spirit dwelling in their hearts by faith. Or, that they might dwell with the Lord God; the particle with being either understood, as it is in many places, or being contained in the Hebrew Verb Shacan, which, as some Hebrew Criticks observe, signifies not only to dwell, but to dwell with another; of which the Learned may see many instances in Forsterus his Hebrew Lexicon. So the sense is, that they who were estranged, and at a distance from God, and Enemies to him, might draw near to him, and dwell with him both here and in Heaven.

19. Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits c, even the God of our salvation d, Selah.

c And besides that great and glorious blessing of his Ascension which once he wrought for us, he is daily conferring new Favours upon us. Heb. Who layeth load upon us. Which may be understood, either, 1. Of the burden of Afflictions, for which God's People have cause to bless God upon many accounts. Or rather, 2. Of Mercies and Favours, which is now agreeable to the Context; wherewith in common speech men are said to be loaded by another, when they receive them from him in great abundance. d The only author and finisher both of our present and of our eternal salvation.

And this ſenſe ſeems to be confirmed by the following Verſe, wherein this fountain is diſtributed into its ſeveral ſtreams, the Tribes of Iſrael. But theſe words may be, and are by ſome joyned with the former, either thus, Bleſs——the Lord for the Fountain of Iſrael, (i. e.) for that fountain which God hath opened to Iſrael for the purging away of ſin and uncleanneſs, as it is expreſſed, Zech. 13. 1. even the Blood and Spirit of Chriſt and all thoſe ſpiritual Bleſſings which God confers upon his people in his Sanctuary, and by his Ordinances; which are oft compared to waters, as Iſa. 12. 3. Ezek. 47. 1. and to a Fountain or Well, as Joel 3. 18. Joh. 4. 14. See alſo Prov. 14. 27. Jer. 2. 13. Or thus, Bleſs——the Lord who is of the fountain of Iſrael, (i. e.) who though he be the moſt high God, yet according to the fleſh is deſcended from Iſrael, (as is noted, Rom. 9, 5.) But the firſt ſenſe ſeems moſt natural and eaſie.

27. There is x little y Benjamin z with their ruler a, the princes of Judah || and their counſel b, the princes of Zebulun and the princes of Naphtali c.

x Preſent in this ſolemn pomp of carrying the Ark to Zion under the conduct of David their King. y That Tribe is called little, partly becauſe it was the youngeſt, as being deſcended from Jacob's youngeſt Son Benjamin; and principally becauſe it was exceedingly diminiſhed, and almoſt extinguiſhed under the Judges, Judg. 20. and 21. He mentions this Tribe partly becauſe they were neareſt unto Judah, and to the place whither the Ark was going; and partly to note their reconciliation and ſubmiſſion to David, againſt whom they had ſtood out with more obſtinacy than any other Tribe, as having been ſo long uſed to govern, and loth to part with the Regal Dignity which was by God's appointment firſt ſcattered among them. a With the Prince of their Tribe, who marched in the head of them. Heb. the ruler (i. e.) the Tribe which had lately ſwayed the Scepter, but now ſubmitted themſelves to David, and waited upon him in this Expedition. But the firſt ſenſe ſeems the trueſt, becauſe the Princes of all the following Tribes are here mentioned. b Their Counſellors: or rather, their company, as it is in the Margent, the people of that Tribe who waited upon them in that action. Which may ſeem to be here noted to intimate, that though the Princes only of the following Tribes be named, yet the people are comprehended under them, and were preſent with them in that ſolemnity. c He mentions theſe Tribes, either, 1. Becauſe they excelled in Learning and Knowledge, as is gathered from Gen. 49. 21. Deut. 33. 19. Judg. 5. 14. Or, 2. Becauſe they were more hearty and forward in complying with David, and in his ſervice than the reſt, as may ſeem from the great number of them which came from the ends of the Land to David in Hebron, 1 Chron. 12. 33, 34. Or, 3. Becauſe they lived in the remoteſt parts of the Land of Canaan. And ſo by naming two of the neareſt Tribes, and two of the furtheſt, he leaves it to be underſtood that the other Tribes alſo did come upon this occaſion, as is manifeſt from 2 Sam. 6. 15, 19. and 1 Chron. 13. 2, 5, 6, 8. and 15. 3, 28.

29. Becauſe of thy temple h at Jeruſalem, * ſhall kings i bring preſents unto thee.

* Pſal. 72. 10.

k To wit, really: humble and chaſtiſe thoſe that will not bring preſents to thee, as the Kings did, v. 29. till they ſee their errour, and ſubmit themſelves, as it here follows. l So this word ſignifies here above, v. 11. and 2 Sam. 23. 11. Pſal. 74. 19. Or, the beaſt, or wild beaſt, as this word is elſewhere uſed, i. e. the beaſts; the ſingular being put for the plural: ſo the ſence is the ſame. m Heb. Of the reed, (i. e.) that uſe Spears or Arrows; which may be called reeds, either becauſe in length and form they reſemble reeds; or, becauſe anciently they were made of reeds. And this ſence ſeems favoured by the laſt words of this Verſe, in which he explains this and the other Metaphors of Warriours. Or the reed may be taken properly; and by the beaſt of the reed he may underſtand ſtand the King of Egypt, who then was a very potent and a moſt idolatrous King, and a great and old enemy to the true Religion, and to the people of Iſrael, whom therefore he deſires God to rebuke and humble, that he may acknowledge the true God, which is foretold that he ſhall do, v. 31. As for this enigmatical deſignation of this King, that is agreeable enough both to the uſage of the Prophets in ſuch caſes, and to the rulers of prudence; and upon the ſame accounts the Prophet Jeremy threatning deſtruction againſt Babylon, calls it enigmatically Sheſhach, Jer. 25. 26. and 51. 41. and S. Paul calls Nero the Lyon, 2 Tim. 4. 17. But then this one King, being eminent in his kind, is by an uſual Synecdoche put for all of them which were enemies to God's people. n By which he doubtleſs underſtands men of War, as the following words expound it, the great and potent and fierce and furious Adverſaries of God, and of his Church, as this word is uſed, Pſal. 22. 12. Iſa. 34. 7. And conſequently the calves muſt be their people or Soldiers depending upon them, and joyning with them in theſe acts of hoſtility againſt thine Iſrael. o This he adds as a limitation of his requeſt, Rebuke them, O Lord, not to utter deſtruction, but only till they be humbled and ſubmit themſelves, and in token thereof bring pieces of ſilver for preſents, as was foretold, v. 29. For ſubmit himſelf: It is in the Hebrew caſt himſelf down, or offers himſelf to be trod upon. But becauſe this ſupplement may ſeem too large and not neceſſary, the words are and may be rendred otherwiſe, that tread upon; or, walk proudly in; or, with fragments, or pieces of ſilver; wherewith eminent Captains uſed to adorn themſelves and their very horſes. And ſo this belongs to the bulls and calves, whoſe pride and wealth, and power is deſcribed in this manner. p Heb. He hath ſcattered, (i. e.) He will certainly ſcatter, according to the Prophetical Style. So this may contain an anſwer, or his aſſurance of an anſwer to his prayer: I prayed, Rebuke the company, &c. and God hath heard my prayer, and, I doubt not, will rebuke or ſcatter them. q That without any neceſſity or provocation, and merely out of a love to miſchief and ſpoil make war upon others, and upon us particularly: Now that thou haſt given thy people reſt, and ſetled the Ark in its place, O Lord rebuke all our malicious and bloody enemies, and give us aſſured peace that we may worſhip the Lord without diſturbance. And withal, David may ſeem to utter this for his own vindication. It is true, O Lord, I have been a man of War, and therefore have loſt the honour of building the Temple, and am now forced to lodge the Ark in a mean Tabernacle, which I have erected for it. But this thou knoweſt, that I have not undertaken any of my wars out of wantonneſs, or ambition, or love to war and miſchief, but only by conſtraint and neceſſity for the juſt defence of my ſelf and of thy people: and therefore do not lay my Wars to my charge.

31. Princes ſhall come out of Egypt, Ethiopia r ſhall ſoon ſtretch out her hands unto God s.

r He names only theſe, as the great and Antient Enemies of God, and of his People, and as a moſt wicked and Idolatrous and ſtiffnecked ſort of Men, ſee Jer. 13. 23. Amos 9. 7. but by them he Synecdochically underſtands all other Nations, and People of the like Character. s Either, in way of humble Supplication and Submiſſion, begging Mercy of him: Or, to offer up the preſents expreſſed, v. 29. But this Prophecy, as alſo the next Verſe; evidently belongs to the time of the Meſſiah, when the Gentiles were to be brought in to the knowledge and worſhip of the true God: with the thoughts and hopes whereof David oft comforteth himſelf in that confined and afflicted ſtate of the Church in his time.

z Acknowledge that he is mighty and able, to do whatſoever he pleaſeth for his People, or againſt his and their Enemies. a His excellent Power and Goodneſs. b Dwells among them, and is employed for them, as occaſion requires. He is indeed the univerſal Lord of the whole Heaven and Earth, but in a ſpecial and excellent manner, he is the God of Iſrael. c Or, in the heavens. He hath two dwellings and Thrones, the one in his Church and People, and the other in Heaven. See Iſa. 57. 15.

35. O God, thou art terrible d out of thy holy places e, the God of Iſrael is he that giveth ſtrength and power unto his people f: bleſſed be God.

d Or, Venerable, deſervedly to be both reverenced and feared. e Or, Sanctuaries. He uſeth the plural number, Either, 1. Of the Sanctuary in Zion, becauſe the Tabernacle and Temple conſiſted of three parts, the Court, the Holy Place, and the Holy of Holies. Or rather, 2. With reſpect to that twofold Sanctuary here mentioned, one in Zion, and the other in Heaven. And out of both theſe Holy places God appeared, and put forth ſuch Acts of his Power, as might juſtly terrifie his Enemies. f The ſtrength which the Kingdom of Iſrael now hath, is not to be aſcribed to my Valour or Conduct, nor to the Courage or numbers of the People, nor to that happy Union now made, and eſtabliſhed among all the Tribes, but only to the might and Grace of God.

PSAL. LXIX.

To the chief muſician upon Shoſhannim, a Pſalm of David.

This Pſalm of David conſiſts of his complaints and fervent Prayers and comfortable predictions of his deliverance, and of the ruin of his Enemies. But the condition of this Pſalm is, like that of divers others, wherein although the matter or ſubſtance of it agree in ſome ſort to David, yet there are ſome ſingular paſſages; which he delivers with a particular reſpect unto Chriſt, of whom he was an Eminent Type, and upon whom his Thoughts were much and often fixed, and of whom they are more fitly and fully underſtood: and therefore they are juſtly applyed to him in the New Teſtament, as we ſhall ſee.

1. SAve me, O God, for * the waters a are come in unto my ſoul b.

a (i. e.) Tribulations, which are oft expreſſed by waters; as hath been obſerved, b (i. e.) To my vital parts; ſo that I am ready to be choaked with them. My Soul is exceeding ſorrowful even unto Death.

2. * I ſink in † deep mire c, where there is no ſtanding d: I am come into † deep waters, where * the floods overflow me.

* Ver. 14. † Heb. the Mire of depth. † Heb. depth of waters. * Pſal. 18. 4.

c Heb. In the Mire of the deep Waters. I am not in the ſhallows, or nigh the Bank, but in the middle, and deepeſt parts, and in the very Mire, which is at the bottom of the waters. d No firm and ſure footing, but I ſink in deeper and deeper, and, without thy ſpeedy and Almighty help, ſhall be overwhelmed and deſtroyed.

3. I am weary of my crying e, my throat is dried f: mine eyes fail g while I wait for my God.

e I have prayed and cryed to God, long and fervently, and yet God ſeems to neglect and forſake me. f With loud and frequent cries. g With looking to God for that aſſiſtance, which he hath promiſed, and I confidently expected, but in vain.

4. They that * hate me without a cauſe g, are more than the hairs of mine head: they that would deſtroy me being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: then I reſtored that which I took not away h.

* Joh. 15. 25.

h Without any injury or occaſion given them by me. i Either, becauſe they unjuſtly and violently forced me to it: Or, becauſe I was willing to do it to my own wrong for peace-ſake. By this one kind of wrong, he underſtands all thoſe injuries and Violences, which they practiſed againſt him.

5. O God, thou knoweſt my fooliſhneſs, and my † ſins are not hid from thee i.

i This is added; Either, 1. As a proof of his Innocency which he had now aſſerted, by way of appeal to God, do thou, O Lord, Judge between me and them, whether I be guilty of thoſe Follies and Sins, which they lay to my charge. And ſuch Appeals indeed David uſeth, Pſal. 7. 3, 4. and elſewhere: But then they are delivered in form of a ſuppoſition, and not a poſitive Aſſertion, as this is. Or rather, 2. As an Exception to what he laſt ſaid. But, O Lord, although I have been innocent to mine Enemies, and have given them no cauſe to hate or perſecute me, as they do, yet I muſt confeſs, I am guilty of many ſins and follies againſt thee, and have given thee juſt cauſe to puniſh me, and to give me up into their hands, and to deny or delay thine help unto me. By fooliſhneſs he means ſin, as he explains it, which is commonly ſo called in Scripture; Or, by his fooliſhneſs, he means leſſer ſins committed through Ignorance, or Inconſiderateneſs, and by ſins, thoſe of a groſſer Nature.

6. Let not them that wait on thee f, O LORD GOD of hoſts, be aſhamed g for my ſake h: let not thoſe that ſeek thee, be confounded for my ſake, O God of Iſrael.

f (i.e.) Thy Godly people, who rely upon thy promiſes, which thou haſt made to all thine in general, and to me in a ſpecial manner, wherein they alſo are concerned. g (i.e.) Fruſtrated of their juſt hopes; which will make them aſhamed; Either, to look up upon God, or to look upon their Enemies, when they ſhall reproach them, for their confidence in God. h Either, 1. For the ſake of my ſins laſt mentioned, let, not all good men ſuffer for my ſins. Or, 2. Becauſe of my ſad diſappointments. For if they ſee me rejected and forſaken of God, whom they have eſteemed a great example of Faith, and Prayer, and all Vertue and Piety, they will be exceedingly diſcouraged by this Example; which will tend much to thy diſhonour and diſſervice:

7. Becauſe for thy ſake i I have born reproach: ſhame hath covered my face k.

i For my truſt is in thy Promiſe, and Obedience to thy Commands and Zeal for thy Glory, and againſt all wickedneſs: All which they turn into matter of Deriſion and Reproach. k In which mans Majeſty and Glory is moſt evident, which I am in a manner aſhamed to ſhew amongſt men.

l My neareſt Kinſmen eſtranged themſelves from me. Partly, out of fear, leſt they ſhould be involved in my ſufferings: and chiefly, out of diſlike of his Piety and exceſſive Zeal in Religion, as it here follows.

m This is the reaſon of that alienation of my brethren and others from me, becauſe there is a vaſt difference and contrariety in our tempers. They mind not the concerns of God and of Religion, but are wholly intent upon Wealth and Honour, and worldly greatneſs. n That fervent paſſion which I have for thy Houſe and Service, and Glory, and People. o Exhauſted and waſted my natural moiſture and vital Spirits, which is oft effected by grief and anger, and fervent love and deſire; of which paſſions zeal is compoſed. p That ſpeak contemptuouſly or wickedly of thy Name or Providence, or Truth, or Worſhip and Service. q Either, 1. By imputation: They reflect upon me, becauſe I am engaged in the defence of thy Cauſe and Glory, which wicked men oppoſe and deſpiſe, and therefore muſt needs ſuffer in it, and with it. Or, 2. By choice and affection. I have been as deeply affected with thy reproaches, as with mine own. This whole Verſe, though truly belonging to David, yet was alſo directed by him, or at leaſt by the Spirit of God in him, to an higer uſe, to repreſent the diſpoſition and condition of Chriſt, in whom this was more truly and fully accompliſhed than in David, to whom therefore it is applied in the New Teſtament, the firſt part of it, Joh. 2. 17. and the latter, Rom. 15. 3.

†Heb. and I wept in the faſt of my Soul, and that, &c. 10. † When I wept r, and chaſtened s my ſoul t with faſting, that was to my reproach u.

r For their impiety and reproaches, which they caſt upon God and Godlineſs. s Which word is here underſtood out of Pſal. 35. 13. as it is alſo in 2 Chron. 10. 11, 14. out of 1 Kings 12. 11. where it is expreſſed. t Either my Body; Or my ſelf, the Soul, being oft uſed both ways. u They derided me for my piety and devotion, and for my Faith in God's Promiſes, and hopes of aſſiſtance from him.

11. I made ſackcloth alſo my garment x: and I became a proverb to them y.

x Wearing it next to my ſkin, in token of my humiliation and hearty ſorrow, as the manner then was in days of Faſting. y They uſed my Name proverbially of any perſon, whom they thought vainly and fooliſhly religious.

12. They that ſit in the gate z, ſpeak againſt me, and * I was the ſong of the † drunkards a.

z Either, 1. Vain and idle perſons, that ſpend their time in the Gates and Markets, in which there uſed to be a confluence of people. Or rather, 2. The Judges and Magiſtrates, who uſed to ſit (which was their poſture, Exod. 18. 14. Prov. 20. 8, &c.) in the Gates of Cities, the uſual places of Judicature: For David oft complains of his hard uſage from theſe men, as Pſal. 58. 1, 2. and 119. 23. and elſewhere; which was the more grievous, becauſe thoſe who were obliged by their Office to protect and right him, did joyn with others in reproaching and oppreſſing him. a Of the ſcum of the people, of all lewd and debauched perſons. Thus both high and low conſpired againſt him.

13. But as for me, my prayer is unto thee b, O LORD, * in an acceptable time: O God, in the multitude of thy mercy hear me, in the truth of thy ſalvation c.

b But whilſt they ſcoff I will pray, and not be driven from God, and from my Prayers and other Duties, by all their reproaches or other diſcouragements. c Heb. In a time of acceptation, or Grace; Or, thy good will, or good pleaſure. Theſe words may be joyned; Either, 1. With the following words, by way of limitation: Hear me in thy accepted time, (i.e.) I do not limit thee to a day or time, but when thou ſeeſt fit, hear and help me. Or rather, 2. With the foregoing, as an Argument to enforce his Prayer, I pray in a time of Grace or Acceptation, I ſeek thee when thou mayſt be found, as Pſal. 32. 6. Iſa. 55. 6. in a good day, as they ſaid, 1 Sam. 25. 8. in the day of Grace and Mercy, in a time of great trouble, which is the proper ſeaſon for Prayer, Pſal. 50. 15. and whilſt I have thee engaged to me by promiſes, which thy Honour and Truth oblige thee to perform, I come not too late, and therefore do thou hear me. c Or, for, or according to thy ſaving Truth, or Faithfulneſs; whereby thou art obliged to grant unto me that Salvation, which thou haſt graciouſly promiſed.

* Iſa. 49. 8. 2 Cor. 6. 2.

14. Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not ſink: let me be delivered from them that hate me d, and out of the deep waters.

15. Let not the water-flood overflow me, neither let the deep ſwallow me up, and let not * the pit ſhut her mouth upon me.

* Pſal. 55. 23.

d Whereby he explains his meaning in theſe Metaphors of Mire, and Waters, and Deep, and Pit.

16. Hear me, O LORD, for thy loving kindneſs is good e, turn unto me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

17. And hide not thy face from thy ſervant, for I am in trouble: † hear me ſpeedily.

e (i.e.) Is eminently and unſpeakably good: the Poſitive degree being put for the Superlative, as it is, Luke 1. 28. 1 Cor. 12. 23, &c. It is moſt ready to communicate it ſelf to indigent and miſerable Creatures.

18. Draw nigh unto my ſoul f, and redeem it: deliver me becauſe of mine enemies g.

f To ſupport and relieve it, O thou who ſeemeſt to be departed far away from me. g Partly, becauſe they perſecute it, and greedily ſeek to deſtroy it; and partly, becauſe they are thine, as well as mine Enemies, and, if they ſucceed, will triumph not only over me, but in ſome ſort over thee, and over Religion.

19. Thou haſt known * my reproach, and my ſhame and my diſhonour h: mine adverſaries are all before thee i.

* Pſal. 22. 6, 7. Iſa. 53. 3. Heb. 12. 2.

h Thou ſeeſt how much of it I ſuffer, and that for thy ſake, as he ſaid v. 7. i Thou knoweſt them thoroughly, and all their injurious and wicked devices, and implacable malice againſt me, and all their impiety and contempt of thee; for which they deſerve to be utterly and ſpeedily deſtroyed.

20. Reproach hath broken my heart k, and I am full of heavineſs: and I looked for ſome † to take pity, but there was none l, and for comforters, but I found none.

† Heb. to lament with me.

k For reproach is moſt grievous to the moſt generous and noble Soul; and beſides, this was the higheſt degree, and the worſt kind of reproach, being caſt upon him for God's ſake, and upon God alſo for his ſake. l (i.e.) Few or none, as that word is frequently uſed, both in Sacred and profane Writers. For whether you underſtand it of David, or of Chriſt, there were ſome who pitied both of them.

21. They gave me alſo gall m for my meat, * and in my thirſt they gave me vinegar to drink n.

* Mat. 27. 34, 48. Mar. 15. 36. Joh. 19. 29.

m Or, Poiſon: Or, bitter Herbs, Hoſ. 10. 4. See Deut. 29. 18. Jer. 9. 15. Lam. 3. 19. In ſtead of giving me that pity and comfort, which my condition required, they barbarouſly added to my afflictions. n Theſe things were Metaphorically fulfilled in David, but properly and literally in Chriſt, the deſcription of whoſe whoſe ſufferings, was principally intended here by the Holy Ghoſt, who therefore directed David's Pen to theſe words, and poſſibly informed him, that this ſhould be accompliſhed in Chriſt. Which may not ſeem improbable to him that conſiders the following Imprecations, which are ſo many and ſo ſevere, that they may ſeem to exceed the bounds of Juſtice and Charity, if they be applied to David's Enemies, as a recompence for their injuries done to him; whereas they moſt deſervedly and fitly belong to the Enemies and Murderers of Chriſt.

* Rom. 11. 9, 10.

22. * Let o their table p become a ſnare before them q: and that which ſhould have been for their welfare, let it become a trap r.

o Theſe and the following words, which are expreſſed in the form of Imprecations, are thought by divers to be only Predictions, and that the Imperatives are put for the Futures, as ſometimes they are. And accordingly they tranſlate the words thus: Their table ſhall become a ſnare, &c. But if they be Imprecations, here was ſufficient cauſe for them. And beſides it is apparent, that they were not the Dictates of humane paſſion, but of Divine inſpiration, and proceeded from a juſt zeal for God's Glory, as hath been obſerved before. p (i.e.) Their food and all their proviſions for neceſſity or delight; Either, for Body or Soul; for the Curſes here following are ſpiritual and eternal, as well as temporal. And ſo this may comprehend their Sacrifices and other legal Ordinances, and the Word of God: all which became to the Jews, through their own default, a great occaſion of ſtumbling at Chriſt. And this puniſhment in their Table, exactly anſwers to their ſin, in giving Chriſt Gall for his meat, v. 21. q Heb. Before them (i.e. their table or meat, which is ſet before them, which is the uſual Expreſſion in this caſe, as Gen. 18. 8. 2 Kings 6. 22.) become a ſnare, (i.e.) the occaſion or inſtrument of their deſtruction. It is a Metaphor taken from Birds, or Fiſhes, that are commonly enſnared and taken with their Baits. r Heb. And as for their great peace (which the plural Number ſeems to import, all that tranquillity and proſperity which they do, or may enjoy) let it be a Trap. Or, And their Peace-offerings (which Sacrifices may be here mentioned, becauſe the offerers did partake of them, and feaſt upon them; and ſo this agrees with the Table expreſſed in the former Clauſe) a Trap. And ſo they were to the unbelieving Jews, whoſe falſe conceit of the Everlaſtingneſs of the Moſaical Diſpenſation, was one cauſe of their rejection of Chriſt. Or thus, And for recompences (i.e. an abundant compenſation of all their injuries) and for a Trap. For thus it is rendred by divers, both Ancient and Modern Interpreters, and, which is more conſiderable, by the Apoſtle, Rom. 11. 9.

23. Let their eyes s be darkned that they ſee not: and make their loins continually to ſhake t.

s Not the eyes of their bodies (for ſo this was not accompliſhed in David's, nor in Chriſt's Enemies) but of their minds, that they may not diſcern God's Truth, nor their own Duty, nor the way of Peace and Salvation. Puniſh them in their own kind: As they that ſhut their eyes and would not ſee, ſo do thou judicially blind them. This was threatned and inflicted upon the Jews, Iſa. 6. 10. Joh. 12. 39, 40. t This alſo belongs to the Loins of their Minds, or Souls; of which we read, Luke 12. 35. 1 Pet. 1. 13. The Loins of the Body are the ſeat of ſtrength, and the great inſtrument of bodily motions and actions. Which being applied to the Mind, the ſenſe may be; Either, 1. Take away their courage and alacrity, and give them up to puſillanimity, and terror, and deſpair: Or rather, 2. Take away their ſtrength and ability for ſpiritual actions. In the former Branch, he wiſheth that they may not be able to ſee, or chuſe their way; and here, that they may not be able to walk in it, nor to execute the good counſels, which others may give them. As on the other ſide, when God gives men ſtrength they are able, not only to walk, but to run in the ways of God, Pſal. 119. 32. Cant. 1. 4. Iſa. 40. 31.

24. Pour out thine indignation upon them u, and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them.

u In ſuch other ways and Judgments, as thou ſhalt think fit.

* Acts 1. 20. † Heb. their Palace. ‡ Heb. let there not be a dweller.

25. * Let † their habitation x be deſolate, and ‡ let none y dwell in their tents.

x Heb. their Palace, as this word ſignifies, Gen. 25. 16. Numb. 31. 10. Cant. 8. 9. Either their Temple, in which they place their Glory and Safety. Or rather, 2. And more generally, their ſtrongeſt and moſt magnificent Buildings, and Houſes, in which they dwelt, as it follows in the next Clauſe, which explains this. y Either, 1. None of their poſterity. Deſtroy them both root and branch. Or, 2. None at all. Let the places be accounted execrable and dreadful.

* Iſa. 53. 4. † Heb. thy wounded.

26. For they perſecute * him whom thou haſt ſmitten z, and they talk a to the grief of † thoſe whom thou haſt wounded.

z Which is an act of barbarous cruelty, and inhumane malice. a Reproaching them with, and inſulting and triumphing in their calamities.

27. Add ‖ iniquity to their iniquity b: and let them not come into thy righteouſneſs c.

b Give them up to their own vain minds and vile luſts, and to a reprobate ſence, and take off all the reſtraints of thy Grace and Providence, and expoſe them to the temptations of the World, and of the Devil, that ſo they may grow worſe and worſe, and at laſt fill up the meaſure of their ſins; as it is ſaid, Mat. 23. 32. Compare, Rom. 1. 28, 29. Or, Add puniſhment to their puniſhment; as this word is oft taken: Send one Judgment upon them after another, without ceaſing. c Let them never partake of thy Righteouſneſs, (i.e.) Either, 1. Of thy Faithfulneſs, in making good thy Promiſes to them: Or, 2. Of thy Mercy and Goodneſs: Or rather, 3. Of thy Righteouſneſs; properly ſo called, of that everlaſting Righteouſneſs, which the Meſſiah ſhall bring into the World, Dan. 9. 24. which is called the Righteouſneſs of God, Rom. 1. 17. Phil. 3. 9, &c. Which is ſaid to be witneſſed by the Law, and the Prophets, Rom. 3. 21. by, and for, which God doth juſtifie, or pardon ſinners, and accept them in Chriſt as righteous perſons. For this was the Righteouſneſs, which the Jews rejected to their own ruine, Rom. 10. 3. according to this Prediction. Thus as the firſt Branch of the Verſe maketh, or ſuppoſeth them guilty of many ſins, ſo this excludes them from the only remedy, the remiſſion of their ſins. And that juſtifying, rather than ſanctifying Righteouſneſs, is here meant, ſeems moſt probable from the Phraſe, which ſeems to be a judicial Phraſe, as we read of coming, or entring into Judgment, Job 22. 4. and 34. 23. and into condemnation, Joh. 5. 24. oppoſite unto which is this Phraſe, of coming into Juſtification; Or, which is one, into thy Righteouſneſs.

28. Let them be blotted out of the book of the living d, and not be written with the righteous e.

d Or, Of Life. 1. Either, 1. Of this Life: Out of the number of living men; which anciently uſed to be written in Catalogues, out of which the Names of thoſe who died were blotted: Or rather, 2. Of eternal Life, as both Jewiſh and Chriſtian Interpreters commonly underſtand it. Which agrees beſt, 1. To the uſe of this Phraſe in Scripture: For in this ſence men are ſaid to be written in the Book, Dan. 12. 1. or, in God's Book, Exod. 32. 32. Or, in the Book of Life, Phil. 4. 3. Revel. 3. 5. and 13. 8. and 17. 8. and 20. 12. and 21. laſt. 2. To the laſt Clauſe of the Verſe, which explains it, of that Book, wherein none but the Righteous are written; whereas this Life, and that attended with health and proſperity, is promiſcuouſly given to, and taken from good and bad men. 3. To the quality of the perſons, of whom this is ſaid; which are the malicious Enemies of God, and of his people, and the Murderers of the Lord of Glory; who ſhall be puniſhed with eternal death. In this Book, men may be ſaid to be written; Either, 1. In reality, by God's Election, or Predeſtination. Or, 2. In appearance, when a man is called by God to the profeſſion and practice of the true Religion, and into Covenant with himſelf, and profeſſeth to comply with it; and ſo is written, in the Writing of the Houſe of Iſrael, which is ſaid of all that are in the Aſſembly of God's People, Ezek. 13. 9. and ſo ſeems to others, and it may be, to himſelf, to be really written in the Book of Life. And when a man renounceth this Profeſſion and Religion, he may be ſaid to be blotted out of that Book, becauſe his Apoſtaſie makes it evident, that he was not written in it, as he ſeemed to be. For this is a known and approved Rule, for the underſtanding of many Texts of Scripture, that things are oft ſaid to be done, when they only ſeem to be done, and are not really done; as he is ſaid to find his life, Mat. 10. 39. who falſly imagined that he did find it, when in truth he loſt it; and to have, Mat. 13. 12. who only ſeemed to have, as it is explained in the parallel place, Luk. 8. 18. and to live, Rom. 7. 9. when he vainly conceited himſelf to be alive. And in like manner, men may be ſaid to be written in, or blotted out of this Book, when they ſeem to be ſo, by the courſe of their lives and actions. But that this blotting out is not meant properly and poſitively, is clear from the laſt Branch of this Verſe, which, after the manner of theſe Books, expounds the former, wherein this doubtful Phraſe is explained, by one which is evident and unqueſtionable, even by his not being written in it. For it is impoſſible, that a mans name ſhould be properly blotted out of that Book, in which it was never written. The ſence of the Verſe ſeems to be this: Let their wickedneſs be ſo notorious, and the tokens of God's wrath upon them ſo manifeſt, that all men may diſcern that they are blotted out, that is, that they never were written in the Book of Life, in which the righteous are written. (i.e.) In that Book of Life, in which all righteous or holy perſons, and only they are written, whereby it may appear, that whatſoever ſhew or profeſſion they once made, yet they neither are, nor were truly righteous perſons.

To the chief muſician, a Pſalm of David, to bring to remembrance.

The Contents of this Pſalm are almoſt all to be found, Pſal. 40. 13, &c. Nor is it ſtrange that they are here repeated, becauſe the ſame or like Occaſions were oft repeated; and David's returning Diſtreſſes might well make him ſometimes repeat the ſame words. And as theſe things were joyned with many other paſſages in Pſal. 40. ſo they are diſtinctly repeated, as a Form of Prayer, which himſelf or others might uſe in ſuch a condition. What is neceſſary for the underſtanding of this Pſalm, the Reader may find in the Notes on Pſal. 40.

* Pſal. 40. 13, &c. & 71. 12. † Heb. to my Help. 1. MAke haſt, * O God, to deliver me: make haſt † to help me, O LORD.

* Pſal. 35. 4. & 71. 13. 2. * Let them be aſhamed and confounded that ſeek after my ſoul: let them be turned backward, and put to confuſion, that deſire my hurt.

3. Let them be turned back for a reward of their ſhame, that ſay, Aha, Aha.

4. Let all thoſe that ſeek thee rejoyce, and be glad in thee: and let ſuch as love thy ſalvation, ſay continually, Let God be magnified.

* Pſal. 69. 29. 5. But * I am poor and needy, make haſte unto me, O God: thou art my help and my deliverer, O LORD, make no tarrying.

PSAL. LXXI.

The ARGUMENT.

The matter of this Pſalm plainly ſheweth, that it was written in a time of David's great diſtreſs; and his Old Age, mentioned v. 9. and 18. proves that it belongs not to Saul's time, but rather to the time of Abſalom's Rebellion; which happen'd in his Old Age.

* Pſal. 25. 2, 3. & 31. 1. 1. IN * thee, O LORD, do I put my truſt, let me never be put to confuſion a.

a This Verſe and the next are taken out of Pſal. 31. 1, 2.

2. Deliver me in thy righteouſneſs, and cauſe me to eſcape: incline thine ear unto me, and ſave me.

3. † Be thou my ſtrong habitation, whereunto I may continually reſort: thou haſt given commandment b to ſave me, for thou art my rock and my fortreſs.

b By which he underſtands God's Purpoſe and Promiſe; and his Providence, watching to execute them; All which are as certain and powerful as a Command.

4. Deliver me, O my God, out of the hand of the wicked, out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man.

5 For thou art my hope, O LORD God, thou art my truſt from my youth.

6. * By thee have I been holden up from the womb c; thou art he that took me out of my mothers bowels d, my praiſe ſhall be continually of thee.

* Pſal. 22. 9, 10. Iſa. 46. 3.

c (i. e.) From the time when I came out of the Womb. d (i. e.) Out of her Womb. Which he juſtly mentions, as a great and wonderful, though a common and neglected work of God's Power and Goodneſs.

7. * I am as a wonder e unto many, but thou art my ſtrong refuge f.

* Zech. 3. 8.

e Or, Prodigy; Either, 1. Of Mercy, for the wonderful Protections and Deliverances which God hath given me. Or rather, 2. Of Judgement, for my many and ſore Calamities, as appears from the next words. They wondred both at the Calamities themſelves which befel me, which were great, and various, and ſtrange; and that they ſhould befal me, one who have made it the chief care and buſineſs of my Life, to pleaſe and ſerve, and glorifie God; and one whom God hath owned in ſo eminent a degree, and crowned with ſuch a conſtant ſucceſſion of Bleſſings and Deliverances, from time to time. That ſuch a Man ſhould be forſaken by ſo gracious a God, and perſecuted even to death by his own Son, whom he had ſo tenderly loved; and deſerted by the Body of his own People, who had generally expreſſed ſo great an opinion of him, and affection to him, and had ſo many Obligations to him, and ſuch ſingular Benefits by his wiſe, and juſt, and pious Government; this was indeed cauſe of Wonder. f But although Men deſert me, and look askew at me, God is a ſure Refuge to me.

8. Let my mouth be filled with thy praiſe g, and with thy honour all the day.

g Give me occaſion to multiply my Praiſes to thee, for delivering me out of my preſent Diſtreſs.

9. Caſt me not off in the time of old age h, forſake me not when my ſtrength faileth.

h When I am moſt feeble, and moſt need thy Help, and one who is grown old in thy ſervice.

10. For mine enemies ſpeak againſt me, and they that † lay wait i for my ſoul, take counſel together.

i Or, Watch it, that they may find occaſion to deſtroy it, and that it may not eſcape their hands.

11. Saying, God hath forſaken him k: perſecute and take him, for there is none to deliver him.

k For his Adultery and Murder, and other Wickedneſſes, and therefore we ſhall certainly prevail againſt him.

12. * O God, be not far from me: O my God, make haſt for my help.

* Pſal. 70. 1.

13. * Let them be confounded and conſumed that are adverſaries to my ſoul: let them be covered with reproach and diſhonour that ſeek my hurt.

* Pſal. 35. 4, 26.

14. But I will hope continually, and will yet praiſe thee more and more l.

l For which I know thou wilt yet give me abundant occaſion.

15. My mouth ſhall ſhew forth thy righteouſneſs, and thy ſalvation all the day: for * I know not the numbers thereof m.

* Pſal. 40. 5.

m (i. e.) Of thy Salvations and Mercies vouchſafed to me, which being innumerable, oblige me the more to celebrate thy Praiſes.

16. I will go n in the ſtrength of the Lord God o: I will make mention p * of thy righteouſneſs q, even of thine only r.

* Verſ. 2. 15, 24.

n I will not ſit down in deſpair, but I will go on, or proceed in my buſineſs, courageouſly and chearfully, in making neceſſary Proviſions for my own defence. o Relying only upon thy ſtrength, and not upon my own Military preparations. p Partly, to praiſe and celebrate it: and partly, to ſupport and comfort my ſelf, with the remembrance of it. q Either, 1 Of thy Mercy and Goodneſs. Or rather, 2. of thy Faithfulneſs, and in making good all thy promiſes to me, as this word is moſt commonly uſed in this Book. r Not of my Subjects and Friends, who are falſe and perfidious to thee, and to me: Nor of my own; for I have been moſt unfaithful to thee, and have broken my Covenant with thee.

17. O God, thou haſt taught me s from my youth, and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works.

s Partly, by thy Word and Spirit, convincing and aſſuring me; and partly, by my own experience, of thy Righteouſneſs laſt mentioned, the wondrous Effects whereof I have received and declared from time to time, as it here follows.

18. Now alſo † when I am old and gray-headed, O God forſake me not: until I have ſhewed † thy ſtrength t unto this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come u.

t Either, 1. This further Act, or inſtance of thy ſtrength. Or rather, 2. Thy great Power, which will more eminently appear in this, than it hath done in former Deliverances, as my Danger is now greater, becauſe this is a Civil War, and the generality of mine own People are ingaged againſt me, and my Forces are very inconſiderable to theirs, and without thy help, my caſe is deſperate, u (i.e.) To all ſucceeding Generations, to whom I will leave a laſting Monument of this glorious Example of all-ſufficiency, ſuch as this Pſalm is.

19. Thy righteouſneſs alſo, O God, is very high x, who haſt done great things: O God, who is like unto thee?

x (i.e.) Moſt eminent and evident, as high things are.

20. Thou which haſt ſhewed me great and ſore trouble, ſhalt quicken me again, and ſhalt bring me up again from the * depths of the earth y.

* Pſal. 63. 9. & 88. 6.

y (i.e.) From the Grave, for I was like one dead, and buried, and paſt all hope of Deliverance, without thy Almighty aſſiſtance.

21. Thou ſhalt increaſe my greatneſs z, and comfort me on every ſide.

z I am aſſured that thou wilt not only reſtore that Royal Majeſty, which my Son hath invaded, to me, but alſo increaſe my Honour and Power.

22. I will alſo praiſe thee † with the pſaltery, even thy truth, O my God: unto thee will I ſing with the harp, O thou holy one of Iſrael.

23. My lips ſhall greatly rejoyce when I ſing unto thee: and my ſoul which thou haſt redeemed.

24. My tongue alſo ſhall talk of thy righteouſneſs all the day long: for they are confounded, for they are brought unto ſhame that ſeek my hurt.

PSAL. LXXII.

A Pſalm ‖ for Solomon.

That this Pſalm was made by David is evident, from v. 20. and that it was made with reſpect to Solomon, is no leſs certain from the very Title of it. And that David, or at leaſt, the Holy Ghoſt which dictated this Pſalm, did look beyond Solomon, and unto the Meſſiah, of whom Solomon was an Illuſtrious and unqueſtionable Type, ſeems as manifeſt from divers Paſſages of this Pſalm, which do not agree to Solomon, nor to any other King but the Meſſiah, and from the confeſſion of the Jewiſh Doctors themſelves, who ſo underſtand it. It muſt therefore be acknowledged, that as many others are; So this Pſalm is alſo a mixt Pſalm belonging to Solomon in part, and obſcurely and imperfectly, but unto Chriſt, more clearly and fully; divers Expreſſions being deſignedly ſo ordered, that the Reader might be led by them to the contemplation of Chriſt, and of his Kingdom upon this occaſion. Which was the more neceſſary for the ſupport and comfort of God's true Iſrael, becauſe the Spirit of God foreſaw Solomon's dreadful Apoſtacy, and the great Miſcarriages and Calamities of his Succeſſors, and of the Kingdom under their hands, and therefore was pleaſed to fortifie their hearts with that glorious condition, which they ſhould certainly enjoy under the Meſſiah, who ſhould certainly come.

1. GIve the king a thy judgments b, O God, and thy righteouſneſs c unto the kings ſon.

a Solomon, who was now anointed King, his Father yet living, 1 Kings 1. 39. And this Pſalm may ſeem to be made for that great and ſolemn occaſion. b (i. e.) Either, 1. Thy Statutes and Precepts, which are oft called God's Judgments; which as thou haſt given already in thy Book, ſo give them to him a ſecond, and a better way, by writing them upon his Heart, or by giving him a ſolid knowledge of them, and an hearty Love and Obedience to them. Or, rather, 2. Thy manner of Government or Adminiſtration, which is oft called Judgment, as Pſal. 94. 15. Iſa. 28. 6, &c. that he may follow thy Example in governing thy People, as thou governeſt them, to wit, in Righteouſneſs, as it follows. He ſaith Judgments in the plural number, becauſe though the Office of judging and ruling was but one, yet there were divers parts and branches, and acts of it; as to acquit the Innocent, to condemn the Guilty, &c. in all which he begs that Solomon may be directed to do as God doth, or would have him to do in ſuch Caſes. c That Grace of Righteouſneſs, which is a part of thine Image, and is abſolutely neceſſary for good Government.

2. He ſhall judge d thy people e with righteouſneſs, and thy poor f with judgment.

d To wit, if thou giveſt him what I have deſired. And by this prediction he doth tacitly admoniſh him of, and oblige him to the performance of his Duty herein. Or, Let him Judge, the Future being put for the Imperative, as hath been oft obſerved. So it is a Prayer. e For they are thine more than his; and therefore he muſt not govern them according to his own Will and Pleaſure, but according to the rules of thy Word, and for thy Service and Glory. f Or, thy afflicted, or oppreſſed ones; for ſuch are thine in a ſpecial manner, thou art their Judge and Patron, Pſal. 68. 5. and haſt commanded all thy People, and eſpecially Kings and Magiſtrates, to take a ſingular care of them, becauſe they have few or no Friends.

3. * The mountains g ſhall bring peace h to the people, and the little hills by righteouſneſs.

* See ver. 16. Jer. 3. 23.

g He mentioneth the Mountains and Hills, as bringing forth this bleſſed Fruit: Either, becauſe ſuch places are uſually Barren, and therefore this was an Evidence of extraordinary Fruitfulneſs, and a ſpecial Bleſſing of God: Or, becauſe they are dangerous to Paſſengers, in regard of the Robbers and Wild Beaſts, which commonly abide there. Whereby it is implyed, that other places ſhould do ſo to, and that it ſhould be common and univerſal. h All manner of proſperity and felicity, which the Hebrews frequently expreſs by that word.

4. He ſhall judge i the poor of the people, he ſhall ſave the children of the needy k, and ſhall break in pieces the oppreſſour.

i (i. e.) Vindicate them from their potent oppreſſours, as judging is uſed, Pſal. 43. 1. and oft elſewhere. k Whom the rich peradventure did ſeize upon for Bond-men, upon ſome pretence or other.

5. They ſhall fear l thee m as long as the ſun and moon endure, * throughout all generations.

* Pſal. 89. 36, 37.

l Or Reverence, or worſhip, as this word is uſed, Iſa. 29. 13. compared with Mat. 15. 9. and elſewhere. m Either, 1. Thee, O King, to whom he ſuddenly turneth his ſpeech. And ſo this is Hyperbolically true of Solomon, but truly and literally of Chriſt. Or rather, 2. Thee, O God, of whom he had ſpoken before, and that in the ſecond Perſon, v. 1, 2. as it is here; whereas he never ſpeaks of the King in the whole Pſalm, in the ſecond perſon, but conſtantly in the third. And ſo the ſenſe is, This ſhall be another bleſſed Fruit of this righteous Government, that together with Peace true Religion ſhall be eſtabliſhed, and that throughout all Generations, as it here follows. Which was begun in Solomon's days and continued, though not without Interruption, in the time of his Succeſſors, the Kings of Judah, and afterwards until Chriſt, in and by whom this prediction and promiſe was moſt fully accompliſhed. Heb. With the Sun, and before the Moon, (i.e.) Whilſt they continue in the Heavens. Others expound it thus, both day and night, as the twelve tribes are ſaid to ſerve God, Act. 26. 7. But the former Interpretation ſeems more probable, by comparing this Verſe, with v. 17.

6. * He ſhall come down n like rain upon the mown graſs o: as ſhowers that water the earth.

* Hoſ. 6. 3.

n To wit, by the influences of his Government upon his People under him. But this phraſe doth much better agree to Chriſt, who was yet to come, and who did come down from Heaven, and brought or ſent down from Heaven his Doctrine, which is oft compared to Rain, and the ſweet and powerful influences of his Spirit. o Which it both refreſheth and improveth, or cauſeth to grow and flouriſh, and therefore was very acceptable, eſpecially in Canaan, where Rain was more ſcarce, and more neceſſary than in many other places, becauſe of the ſcorching heat, and the natural dryneſs of the Soyl, and the want of Rivers to overflow, or water the Land.

7. In his days ſhall the righteous flouriſh p, and

and abundance of peace † ſo long as the moon endureth q.

p As the wicked ſhall be diſcountenanced and puniſhed, ſo good men ſhall be encouraged and advanced, and multiplyed. q (i. e.) As long as time and the world ſhall laſt. Which neither was nor could be true of Solomon, who lived not long, and the peace of whoſe Kingdom was ſadly diſturbed, and in a manner wholly loſt preſently after his Death, but was undoubtedly and eminently accompliſhed in Chriſt, who brought Peace upon Earth, Luk. 2. 14. and left it as his Legacy to his Diſciples, Joh. 14. 27.

8. He ſhall have dominion alſo from ſea to ſea r, and from the river s unto the ends of the earth t.

r Either, 1. From the dead Sea, or the Lake of Sodom, or from the Red Sea, to the Midland Sea. For ſo far did Solomon's Dominion extend; but ſo did David's alſo; and therefore in that reſpect Solomon hath not that pre-eminence, which this promiſe plainly ſeems to give him above his predeceſſours. Or, 2. More generally from one Sea to another, or in all the parts of the habitable World. So it was truly and fully accompliſhed in Chriſt, and in him only. s To wit, Euphrates: which was the Eaſtern border of the Kingdom of Canaan allotted by God, Exod. 23. 31. Numb. 34. 3. but enjoyed only by David and Solomon, and afterwards by Chriſt. Of whoſe Kingdom this may be here mentioned, as one of the Borders; partly becauſe the Kingdom of Chriſt is here deſcribed under the Type, and ſhadow of Solomon's Kingdom, whoſe bound this was: and partly, becauſe though Chriſt's Kingdom did for a time extend it ſelf beyond Euphrates, yet the chief part, and almoſt the whole Body of it, both did and doth lie on this ſide of it: and things do generally receive their Denomination from the greateſt part. t Either, 1. Of the Land of Canaan: Or, 2. Of the World.

9. They that dwell in the wilderneſs u ſhall bow before him: and his enemies ſhall lick the duſt x.

u In ſolitary places: Even rude and barbarous people, who lived without Order and Government among themſelves: Of which ſort great numbers ſubmitted to Chriſt, and received the Goſpel. x (i. e.) Shall proſtrate themſelves to the ground, in token of reverence and ſubjection, as the cuſtom of the Eaſtern People was. See Iſa. 49. 23. Mich. 7. 17.

* Pſal. 45. 12. & 68. 29.

10. * The kings of Tarſhiſh and of the iſles y ſhall bring preſents: the kings of Sheba and Seba z ſhall offer gifts.

y Or, of the Sea, (as Tarſhiſh is underſtood, 1 Kings 22. 48. Pſal. 48. 7.) and, (Or, that is: for that conjunction is oft uſed exegetically) of the Iſles. (i. e.) Of remote Countries, to which they uſed to go from Canaan by Sea; all which are frequently called Iſles in Scripture, as hath been noted before. The Kings that rule by Sea (where Solomon had no great power) or by Land. z Two Arabian Countries: unleſs the one be Arabia, and the other Ethiopia beyond Egypt.

11. Yea, all kings ſhall fall down before him: all nations ſhall ſerve him a.

a Which cannot be ſaid of Solomon with any Truth or Colour, but was unqueſtionably verified in Chriſt; of whom therefore this muſt be underſtood. For what is ſaid, 1 Kings 4. 21. that Solomon reigned over all Kingdoms, is there limited to them that Reigned from the River unto——Egypt: Whereas the Expreſſions here are unlimited and univerſal.

* Job 29. 12.

12. For he * ſhall deliver the needy when he cryeth: the poor alſo, and him that hath no helper b.

b The Fame of his juſt and merciful Government ſhall induce multitudes: Either, to put themſelves under him, or to ſhew great reſpect and reverence to him.

13. He ſhall ſpare the poor and needy, and ſhall ſave the ſouls c of the needy.

c Properly ſo called; this being Chriſt's proper work to ſave ſouls: Or, the Lives, which Oppreſſours ſhall indeavour to take away.

* Pſal. 116. 15.

14. He ſhall redeem their ſoul from deceit and violence d: and * precious ſhall their blood be in his ſight e.

d The two ways whereby the Souls or Lives of Men are uſually deſtroyed. e He will not be prodigal of the Lives of his Subjects, caſting them away merely to gratifie his own Revenge, or Covetouſneſs, or inſatiable Deſire of enlarging his Empire, as Earthly Kings commonly do, but like a true Father of his People, will tenderly preſerve them, and ſeverely avenge their Blood upon thoſe who ſhall ſhed it.

15. And he ſhall live f, and to him † ſhall be given of the gold of Sheba g, prayer alſo ſhall be made for him continually, and daily ſhall he be praiſed.

f To wit, long and proſperouſly, as Solomon did; yea Eternally, as Chriſt did. Other Kings muſt loſe both their Lives and Kingdoms: but this King, whom Solomon typified, ſhall live for ever, and his Kingdom ſhall have no end. g As a Preſent or Tribute. This was done to Solomon, 1 Kings 10. 15. and to Chriſt, Mat. 2. 11. and afterwards as need required. Although ſuch Expreſſions as theſe being uſed of Chriſt and his Kingdom, are commonly underſtood in a ſpiritual ſenſe. h His Subjects ſhall be obliged and excited by his righteous and happy Government, to pray heartily and frequently for him; Either, 1. For Solomon. Or, 2. For Chriſt, not ſo much for his Perſon, which needed not their Prayers, as for the Protection and Propagation of his Kingdom and Goſpel, and Intereſt in the World.

16. There ſhall be an handful of corn i in the earth k upon the top of the mountains l, the fruit thereof ſhall ſhake like Lebanon m, and they of the city n ſhall flouriſh like graſs of the earth o.

i Which intimates the ſmall beginnings of this Kingdom; and therefore doth not agree to Solomon, whoſe Kingdom was in a manner as large at the beginning of his Reign, as at the end; but it exactly agrees to Chriſt and his Kingdom, Mat. 13. 31, 32. k Sown in the Earth. l In the moſt barren grounds; and therefore this was an evidence of extraordinary and prodigious Fertility. m It ſhall yield ſuch abundance of Corn, that the Ears being thick and high and full of Corn, ſhall, when they are ſhaken with the wind, make a noiſe not unlike that which the tops of the Trees of Lebanon, ſometimes make upon the like occaſion. Which expreſſions, as well as many others of the like Nature in the Prophets, being applied to Chriſt, are to be underſtood in a ſpiritual ſenſe, of the great and happy ſucceſs of the preaching of the Goſpel. n The Citizens of Jeruſalem, which are here Synecdochically put for the Subjects of this Kingdom. o Shall both increaſe in number, that there may be mouths to receive the Meat provided, and enjoy great Proſperity and Happineſs.

17. His Name p † ſhall endure for ever: † his Name ſhall be continued q, as long as the Sun r, and * men ſhall be bleſſed in him s, all nations ſhall call him bleſſed.

p The Honour and Renown of his eminent Wiſdom, and Juſtice, and Goodneſs. Which agrees but very obſcurely, and imperfectly, to Solomon, who ſtained the Glory of his Reign, by his prodigious Luxury and Oppreſſion, and Apoſtacy from God, into which he fell in the latter part of his days. q Or, ſhall be propagated, or tranſmitted to his children. Which ſuits much better to Chriſt, from whom we are called Chriſtians than to Solomon. r Heb. before the Sun; Either, 1. Publickly, and in the Face of the Sun. Or, 2. Perpetually; as a conſtant and inſeparable Companion of the Sun, as long as the Sun it ſelf ſhall continue. See before, on v. 5. s Either, 1. As a pattern of Bleſſedneſs. When any man ſhall wiſh well to a King, he ſhall ſay: The Lord make thee like Solomon. See on Gen. 22. 18. Or rather, 2. As the Cauſe of it, by and through his Merits and Mediation.

18. Bleſſed be the LORD God, the God of Iſrael, who only doth wondrous things t.

t Who hath given to his People ſuch a Glorious and Excellent King and Governour, and ſuch wonderful Bleſſings as they do and ſhall enjoy under his Government.

19. And bleſſed be his glorious name for ever, and let the whole earth be filled with his glory u, Amen and amen.

u Heb. The whole Earth ſhall be filled with his Glory. For this may be either a Prayer for, or a prophecy of the ſpreading of the true Religion, in the Gentile-world. Which evidently relates to Chriſt and his Kingdom.

20. The prayers of David the ſon of Jeſſe are ended x.

x This Pſalm is called the laſt of David's Pſalms (which are called Prayers, becauſe they conſiſt very much of Prayers) Either, 1. The laſt of that part, or Book of the Pſalms, which reacheth from the beginning of the Pſalms hitherto, whereof the far greateſt number were compoſed by David, and all of them digeſted into this order; the reſt of which follow, being collected by ſome other holy Man, or Men of God, after David's Death, and compoſed part by David, and part by other Prophets. Or rather, 2. The laſt Pſalm which David compoſed: For this was done but a little before his Death, of which ſee the firſt Note on this Pſalm.

PSAL.

PSAL. LXXIII.

The ARGUMENT.

The Subject of this Psalm is the same with Psal. 37. concerning the promiscuous carriage of God's Providence towards good and bad men.

‖ Or, a Psalm for Asaph.

a Or, for Asaph, the famous Musician, to whom divers of David's Psalms were committed, as Psal. 50. 1, &c. But because Asaph was not only a skilful Musician, but also was Divinely inspired, and the Author of some Psalms, as is manifest from 2 Chron. 29. 30. and the style of this Psalm may seem to be something differing from that of David, it may be thought not improbable that Asaph was the Author or Pen-man of it.

1. ‖ TRuly b God is good to Israel c, even to such as are † of a clean heart d.

b Or, Nevertheless. The beginning is abrupt, and sufficiently intimates that he had a great conflict within himself about this matter, and that many doubts and objections were raised in his mind concerning it. But at last he breaks forth like the Sun out of a Cloud, and having by God's Grace silenced and conquered his scruples, he lays down this following Conclusion. c Though he may sometimes seem negligent of, and harsh and severe to his people, yet if all things be considered, it is most certain, and another day will be made manifest, that God is really and superlatively good, (i. e.) most kind and bountiful, and a true Friend to them, and that they are most happy in him, and have no reason to envy sinners, their present and seeming felicity. d To all true Israelites, who love God with their whole heart, and serve him in Spirit and Truth, and uprightness. See Joh. 4. 43. Rom. 2. 28, 29. So this Clause limits the former, and takes off a great part of the force of the Objection, even all that concerns the calamities, which befel the profane or false-hearted Israelites, which were vastly the greatest number of that people.

2. But as for me e, my feet were almost gone f: my steps had well nigh slipt g.

e Yet I must acknowledge this with grief and shame concerning my self, notwithstanding all my knowledge of this truth, and my own Experience and observation of God's gracious dealings with me, and other good men. f My Faith in God's Promises and Providence, was almost overthrown by force of this temptation; and I was almost ready to repent of my piety, v. 13. and to follow the example of ungodly men. g Heb. Were almost poured forth, like water upon the ground which is unstable, and runs hither and thither, with great disorder and uncertainty, till it be irrecoverably lost. So was I almost transported by my own unruly passions into unworthy thoughts of God, and a sinful course of life.

* Job 21. 7. Psal. 37. 1. Jer. 12. 1.

3. * For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked h.

h I grudged and murmured at it, and had a secret desire to partake of their Delicates.

† Heb. Fat.

4. For there are no bands in their death i, but their strength is † firm k.

i They are not dragged to death, neither by the hand and Sentence of the Magistrate, which yet they deserve; nor by any lingring and grievous torments of mind or body, which is the case of many good men; but they enjoy a sweet and quiet death, dropping into the Grave, like ripe fruit from the tree, without any violence used to them. Compare Job 5. 26. and 21. 13. k Heb. and their strength is fat, (i. e.) sound and good: the best of any thing being called Fat in Scripture, as Gen. 41. 2. Dan. 1. 15. And in their life-time, they have great ease and health, and content, till they expire like a Lamp, meerly for want of moisture.

5. They are not † in trouble as other men l: neither are they plagued † like other men.

l Either, 1. As good men frequently are. Or, 2. As men generally are. They do by a secret and favourable Providence of God, escape even common calamities.

6. Therefore pride compasseth them about as a chain m; violence covereth them as a garment.

m This Phrase notes both the extent of their pride, which appears on every side of them, in their countenances, discourses, gestures, &c. and their glorying in it. The like may be said of the next Phrase.

* Psal. 119. 70. † Heb. they pass the thoughts of the heart.

7. * Their eyes stand out with fatness n, † they have more than heart could wish.

n As they do in some fat persons, though not in others. The meaning is: They live in great plenty and prosperity, as the next Clause explains it.

8. They are corrupt o, and speak wickedly concerning oppression p: they speak loftily q.

o Or, dissolved in pleasure. Or, they corrupt themselves. p Wickedly boasting of their oppressions; Either, of what they have done; or of what they intend to do in that kind. q Arrogantly, presuming upon their own strength, and despising both God and Men.

9. They set their mouth against the heavens r; and their tongue walketh through the earth s.

r (i. e.) Against God, blaspheming his Name, denying or deriding his Providence, reviling his Saints and Servants. s Using all manner of liberty, introducing and reproaching all sorts of persons, not caring whom they displease, or hurt by it.

10 Therefore his people t return hither u: and waters of a full cup are wrung out to them x.

t Either, 1. The people of those wicked Blasphemers; all their Children and Servants, and Friends, encouraged by their Example. Or rather, 2. The people of God, who is oft understood under the Pronoun Relative, he or his, though he be not expressed, as Psal. 105. 19. Isa. 30. 23. See the like, Psal. 87. 1. Cant. 1. 2. But then as God's People are of two sorts, some that are so really and sincerely, and others that are so only in profession and shew, in which sence the whole Body of the Israelitish Nation, yea even the wicked among them, are called his People, as Psal. 81. 11. Isa. 1. 3. Jer. 2. 11, &c. so this may be understood; Either, 1. Of those true Israelites, v. 1. Even the godly were startled and stumbled at this, as David was, Psal. 37. and Jeremy Ch. 12. But although they might have some murmuring thoughts about this matter, it seems not probable that they would either give way to such thoughts, or break forth into such Expressions as are here ascribed to them, v. 11. nor are such things to be imputed to them without necessity; nor did either David or Jeremy in their conflicts, utter any thing of this Nature. Or rather, 2. Of the carnal and hypocritical Israelites, who perceiving the impunity and prosperity of these ungodly Wretches, were easily drawn to the approbation and imitation of their courses. And this may seem most suitable to the Context; for the description of the condition, and carriage, and words of these ungodly men, which begins v. 4. seems to be continued to v. 13. then follows the Psalmist's reflection and consideration upon the whole matter, from v. 13. to the end. u Or, turn hither, (i. e.) To this wicked company, or to their course. x Waters in Scripture do oft-times signifie afflictions, and as oft comforts and mercies. So the sence may be; Either, 1. And whilst the wicked prosper, God doth wring out waters out of the cup of tribulation, and causeth his holy Ones to drink them up: Compare Psal. 75. 8. and 80. 5. Isa. 51. 17. Jer. 25. 15, &c. Or rather, 2. And those hypocritical Israels find themselves gainers by their Apostasie, and they partake of the same prosperity with their Leaders, and God seems to give them a full cup of consolation, and to pour forth his Mercies upon them in such abundance, as if he would wring or squeez out all his Blessings out of his stores, to bestow upon them. And meeting with such success to their wickedness, it is not strange if they put that question, v. 11.

11. And they y say, How doth God know? and, Is there knowledge in the most High z?

y Either, 1. The godly. Or rather, 2. Those wicked ones, whose words and actions he hath been hitherto describing, or the People confederate with them. For these and such like opinions are oft ascribed to the wicked in Scripture, but never, as far as I know, to any good man. And Job, though he used many intemperate Speeches, and though some such Expressions as this were charged upon him by his Friends, as Job 22. 13. yet he utterly disowned them. z Seeing these cursed and impudent Blasphemers of God, and Enemies of all goodness are crowned with so many Blessings, how is it credible, that there is a God who sees and orders the Affairs of this lower World? For if God did know these things, certainly he neither could or would suffer them to be thus managed.

12. Behold these are the ungodly a, who prosper in the world, they encrease in riches.

a This is their condition and carriage in it. These seem to be the words of the Psalmist, summing up the matter, and preparing his passage to the other part of the Psalm.

13. * Verily I have cleansed my heart in vain b, and * washed my hands in innocency c.

* Job 21. 15. & 34. 9. & 35. 3. * Psal. 26. 6.

b Hence I was sometimes tempted to think that Religion was a vain and unprofitable thing, at least as to the happiness of this life, which yet God had promised as a reward to piety. True Religion is here fitly and fully described by its two principal parts and works, the cleansing of the heart from sinful lusts and passions, and of the hands, or outward man from a course of sinful actions. And although it be God's work to cleanse the heart, yet he saith, I have cleansed it, because every good man doth cooperate with God's Grace in cleansing it. Compare

2 Cor. 6. 1. and 7. 1. c (i.e.) Kept my hands (the great inſtrument of action, and conſequently the reſt of the members of my body) innocent and pure from evil practices. I have waſhed my hands, not only ceremonially with water, wherewith Hypocrites ſatisfie themſelves, but alſo morally, or with the waters of God's Grace and Spirit, Innocency or Purity.

14. For all the day long have I been plagued, and † chaſtened every morning d.

† Heb. my chaſtiſement was.

d Whilſt their ungodlineſs hath been attended with conſtant proſperity, my piety hath been exerciſed with continual afflictions.

15. If I ſay, I will ſpeak thus e: behold I ſhould offend againſt the generation of thy children f.

e I will give Sentence for the ungodly in this manner. f By grieving and diſcouraging and condemning them, and by tempting them to revolt from God and Godlineſs. But becauſe the Hebrew Verb, Bagad, in this ſence is always, ſo far as I have obſerved, conſtrued with the Propoſition, Beth, which is not here; and is conſtantly put before that Propoſition and Word which it governs, and not after, as here it is, I rather joyn with them, who render the place thus, which is more agreeable to the words and order of the Text, Behold the Generation of thy Children, (or, Behold theſe are the Generation of thy Children, as appears by thy fatherly care of, and indulgence and kindneſs to them, whilſt thou doſt at preſent ſeem to treat them like Baſtards, who are more truly called thy Children, dealing roughly and ſeverely with them.) I ſhall (or rather, ſhould, to wit, in ſpeaking ſo) tranſgreſs or prevaricate, ſpeak againſt the Truth, and againſt my own Conſcience, which aſſureth me that theſe are the haters of God, and hated and curſed by him.

16. When I thought to know this g, † it was too painful for me h.

g To find out the reaſon of this myſterious courſe of thy Providence. h I was gravel'd with the difficulty.

17. Until I went into the ſanctuary of God i. then underſtood I their end k.

i Till I conſulted with the Oracle, or Word of God. He alludes to the practice of thoſe times, which was, in dark and difficult caſes, to reſort to God's Sanctuary, and the Oracle in it for ſatisfaction. k There I learned that their proſperity was ſhort, and would quickly have an end, and that a moſt diſmal and terrible one; that their fair Morning would be followed with a black and dreadful Evening, and an everlaſting Night.

* Pſal. 35. 6.

18. Surely * thou didſt ſet them in ſlippery places l, thou caſtedſt them down into deſtruction m.

l Their happineſs had no firm foundation, it was very unſtable, like a mans ſtanding in very ſlippery ground. m The ſame hand which raiſed them, will caſt them down into the pit of utter deſtruction.

19. How are they brought into deſolation, as in a moment n? they are utterly conſumed with terrors o.

n Their fall is wonderful both for its ſoreneſs, and for its ſuddenneſs. o Either, with the horrors of their own minds: Or rather, with God's dreadful Judgments unexpectedly ſeizing upon them.

* Job 20. 8.
* Pſal. 7. 6.

20. * As a dream when one awaketh p, ſo, O LORD, when thou * awakeſt q thou ſhalt deſpiſe r their image s.

p Their happineſs is like that in a dream, wherein a man ſeems to be highly pleaſed and tranſported with raviſhing delights, but when he awakes he finds himſelf deceived and unſatisfied. q (i.e.) Stir up thy ſelf to puniſh them. Or rather, when they ſhall awake, out of the pleaſant dream, of this vain ſinful life, by death, and following it. For this ſeems to agree beſt with the Metaphor here before mentioned. And the Hebrew words being only theſe, in awaking, may be applied; Either to God, or to them, as the Context directs. r Not ſo much really, for ſo God ever did deſpiſe it, in the height of all their Glory, but declaratively, things being oft ſaid to be done in Scripture when they appear, or are manifeſted; as hath been more than once noted. Thou ſhall pour contempt upon them, make them deſpicable both to themſelves, and to all others, and raiſe them to ſhame and everlaſting contempt, as is ſaid, Dan. 12. 2. s (i.e.) All their Felicity and Glory, which as indeed it ever was, ſo now it ſhall be evidently diſcerned to be no real or ſubſtantial and ſolid thing, but a meer image or ſhadow, or vain ſhew, which can neither abide with them, nor yield ſatisfaction to them. See Pſal. 39. 6. Act. 25. 23. where what is rendred, Pomp in the Greek ſignifies a meer Fancy or Imagination, 1 Cor. 7. 31.

21. Thus t my heart was grieved, and I was pricked in my reins u.

t So as I have above expreſſed; for this Particle ſo taken, doth not belong to what he had now wiſely and piouſly ſaid in the next foregoing Verſes, but to what he had unadviſedly ſpoken in the former Verſes, as is evident from the following Verſe. Or, Nevertheleſs, as this Particle is oft uſed. Although I knew very well that the proſperity of ſinners would have a ſudden and diſmal end, yet I was ſo fooliſh as to be grieved at it. u I was heartily and deeply wounded with diſquieting thoughts, and tormenting paſſions, Envy and Sorrow, and Anger.

22. * So fooliſh was I, and † ignorant: I was as a beaſt x † before thee y.

* Pſal. 92. 6.
† Heb. I knew not.

x Heb. Beaſts, which may ſignifie a great Beaſt, a moſt ſtupid and ſottiſh Creature, like one not only void of Grace, but of Reaſon too: For reaſon it ſelf, eſpecially aſſiſted by the Holy Scriptures, did ſufficiently diſcover, that, all things conſidered, I had no ſufficient cauſe to envy the proſperity of wicked men. I minded only preſent things, as the Brutes do, and did not conſider things to come, as reaſonable Creatures do, and ought to do. y In thy ſight or Judgment, and therefore in Truth, Rom. 2. 2. howſoever I ſeemed to my ſelf or others, to have ſome degree of reaſon and diſcretion.

23. Nevertheleſs z I * am continually with thee a, thou haſt holden me by my right hand b.

z Notwithſtanding all my temptations, and my groſs folly in yielding to them. a Either, 1. In a way of Duty; Yet I did not depart from thee, nor from thy ways, but did at laſt conquer them, and firmly cleave unto thee by Faith. Or rather, 2. In a way of Mercy and Favour, of which he ſpeaks in the next Clauſe of this, and in the following Verſe. Although I gave thee juſt cauſe to caſt me off, yet thou didſt continue thy gracious Preſence with me, and thy Care and Kindneſs to me. And this Phraſe, with thee, ſeems to have ſome Emphaſis in it, as being oppoſed to the other with thee, v. 22. I was a Beaſt with thee, ſuch was my folly and wickedneſs: and yet I was in favour with thee, ſuch was thy goodneſs: thou didſt pardon and cure it. b That my Faith might not fail, and I might not be overthrown by this, or any other temptations.

24. Thou ſhalt guide me c with thy counſel d, and afterward receive me || to glory e.

c As thou haſt kept me hitherto in all my tryals, ſo am I aſſured thou wilt lead me ſtill into right paths, and keep me from wandring or ſtraying from thee, or falling into miſchief. d Partly, by thy gracious Providence, executing thy purpoſe of Mercy to me, and watching over me: Partly, by thy Word which thou wilt open mine eyes to underſtand, as Pſal. 119. 18. and principally by thy Holy Spirit, ſanctifying and directing me in the whole courſe of my life. e Either, 1. Advance me to honour here. Or rather, 2. Tranſlate me to everlaſting Glory in Heaven. For, 1. Thus God doth for his people moſt conſtantly and certainly, whilſt all the occurrences of the preſent life do happen indifferently to good and bad; which was the common Obſervation of Job, and David, and Solomon, and other Holy men of God in Scripture. 2. This is far more conſiderable than the former, and the more ſatisfactory relief againſt the preſent proſperity of the wicked, and the afflictions of good men. 3. This future Glory is that Myſtery which was to be learned only in God's Sanctuary, v. 17. 4. As the deſtruction of the wicked mentioned, v. 18, 19, 20. looks beyond this life, ſo doth the Glory of God's People.

25. Whom have I in heaven f but thee g? and there is none upon earth that I deſire beſides thee.

f Or, in Earth, as it follows. There is no other perſon nor thing in the World, from which I can ſeek or hope for happineſs, or which I am willing to accept as my portion. Let ſinners have an earthly proſperity, I am ſatisfied with thee, and with thy Favour. Since thou giveſt me ſupport and conduct here, and carrieſt me ſafe from hence to eternal Glory, what do I need more? Or what can I deſire more? g Which words muſt neceſſarily be underſtood here from the next Clauſe, where they are expreſſed.

26. My fleſh and my heart faileth h, but God is the † ſtrength of my heart, and my portion for ever i.

h In my ſelf; I confeſs I am a poor weak Creature, and my Body and Spirit may fail, and be ready to faint under ſuch temptations and tribulations as theſe, and I know I ſhall ſhortly return to the duſt, out of which I was taken. i But though I have no ſtrength in my ſelf, I have it in God, my never-failing refuge, to whom I will truſt whilſt I live, and who will be my portion to Eternity.

27. For lo, they that are far from thee k, ſhall periſh: thou haſt deſtroyed l all them that go a whoring from thee m.

k They that forſake thee and thy ways, preferring the Proſperity of this preſent evil World, before thy Love, and Favour, and Service; they who eſtrange themſelves from the Love and Life, and Acquaintance of God, that ſay to God, depart from us, for we deſire not the knowledge of thy ways, as they did, Job 21. 14. l Thou wilt certainly and dreadfully deſtroy them. m Thoſe who having profeſſed Subjection to thee, ſhall afterwards revolt from thee, and ſell themſelves to work Wickedneſs; which is called called Whoredom in Scripture. For none are more hateful to God, than wilful and wicked Apostates from the Principles and Practice of the true Religion, which once they owned.

28. But it is good for me to draw near to God n; I have put my trust in the LORD GOD o, that I may declare all thy works p.

n But whatsoever they do, I am abundantly satisfied, that as it is my Duty, so my Interest and Happiness to cleave unto thee, by Faith and Love, and Obedience, and diligent Attendance upon all thine Ordinances. o I depend upon him alone for all my Comfort and Felicity. p From which I know I shall have this benefit, that I shall have many and great occasions to declare God's Acts of Mercy and Kindness to me.

PSAL. LXXIV.

‖ Or, a Psalm for Asaph to give instruction.

a (i.e.) Composed by Asaph; Either, 1. By that famous Asaph, who flourished in David's time, and by the Spirit of God foresaw and foretold the things here mentioned. But the clear, and exact, and particular, and most pathetical Description of the thing here expressed, looks much more like a Narrative of what is past, than a Prophecy of what is to come; which usually is delivered more darkly. Besides such a Prophecy of the Destruction of the Temple before it was built, would have been a great discouragement to the building of it, and would probably have been taken notice of by Solomon in his Prayer for it, when it was newly built. Or, 2. By some of his Posterity, who is called by their Fathers Name, Asaph, as the Children of Israel are frequently called, Jacob or Israel; and David's Successors, David, as hath been noted. Or, 3. By some other Person of that Name, though of another Family; who then was a Man of Renown, though now his Memory be lost. Or this may be rendred for Asaph, (i.e.) For his Posterity; and it might be said by some other holy Man of God. But the former seems more probable. This is evident, that this Psalm speaks of the Destruction of the Temple, and of Jerusalem, and of God's People by the Chaldæans; though some think it looks further, even to the pollution of the Temple by Antiochus. Although the things said to be done, v. 6, 7, 8. agree much better to the former, and were not done by Antiochus.

1. O God, why hast thou cast us off for ever b? * Psal. 95.7. why doth thine anger c smoak against * the sheep of thy pasture d.

b So as to leave us no visible Hopes of Restitution. c Or, thy Nose. A Metaphor from a man who in a great Rage sends forth Fumes out of his Nostrils. d Against thy chosen and peculiar People.

2. Remember e thy congregation f, which thou hast purchased g of old h: the ‖ rod of thine inheritance i which thou hast redeemed, this mount Zion k wherein thou hast dwelt.

e Shew by thine Actions, that thou hast not utterly forgotten and forsaken them. f Thy Church or People. g Or, Redeemed, as it follows: Or, Bought, as it is *Deut.*32.6. Or, Procured, though without price, as this word is used, Ruth 4.9,10. h When thou broughtest them out of Egypt, and formedst them into a Common-wealth, and gavest them Laws, and didst enter into Covenant with them at Sinai. i That People which thou hast measured out, as it were by Rod, to be thy Portion or Inheritance, as they are called also, *Deut.*32.9. See also *Psal.*16.5,6. *Jer.*10.16. Or, the Tribe (as this word commonly signifies) of thine Inheritance, (i.e.) The Tribe of Judah, which thou hast in a special manner chosen for thine Inheritance, and for the seat of the Kingdom, and for the Birth of the Messiah. And thus here is an elegant Gradation from the general to particulars; First, the Congregation consisting of all the Tribes; then the Tribe of Judah; and lastly, Mount Zion. Nor is it strange, that he mentions this Tribe particularly, because the Calamity and Captivity here remembred, did principally befal this Tribe, and Benjamin, which was united with it, and subject to it, and the most that returned were of this Tribe: For the generality of the other Tribes were long before dispersed into other Lands, and continue in their Captivity to this day. k Which is oft put for the Temple, or the Hill of Moriah, on which it was built.

3 Lift up thy feet l unto the perpetual desolations m: even all that the enemy hath done wickedly in the sanctuary n.

l (i.e.) Come speedily for our rescue, and do not sit or stand still, as hitherto thou seemest to do. m Or rather, Because of (as this Prefix oft signifies) the perpetual Desolations. So it is a powerful Motive to God to come to their help, because otherwise our Destruction is everlasting and irrecoverable. n Or, against thy Sanctuary: Of which see v. 7.

4. Thine enemies roar o in the midst of thy congregations p, they set up their insigns for signs q.

o (i.e.) Make loud Out-cries; Either, from their Rage and Fury, against the conquered and captivated Israelites now in their power: Or rather, in way of Triumph for their Success and Victory. p In the places where thy People used to assemble together for thy Worship; whereby they designed to insult not only over us, but over thee also, as if their gods had been too strong for thee. q Or, Trophees, or Monuments of their Victories obtained over God, and over his People, as Conquerors used to do in like Cases.

5. A man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees r.

r So the meaning is this, The Temple was so noble a structure, that it was a great Honour to any man to be imployed in the meanest part of the work, though it were but in cutting down the Trees of Lebanon. And this Translation may seem to be favoured by the opposition in the next Verse; But now, &c. But others understand the words thus translated in another sense: That every one of the Enemies got Renown, accordingly as they shewed most barbarous Rage in destroying the thick Wood-work (which in the next Verse is called the carved work) of the Temple. But this seems not to suit well with the opposition between this work and that of the next Verse, which is ushered in by, But now. The words therefore may be (and in part are by some) rendred thus; It is known (or manifest, Heb. It will be known: It will be published to all Posterity, as matter of astonishment and admiration,) that, as one lifteth up his Axe (Heb. Axes, the plural Number for the singular, as it is elsewhere) upon thick Trees, to cut them down. This is the first part of the similitude, called the Protasis; Then follows the latter part of it, called the Apodosis, in the next Verse; So (Heb. And. Which is sometimes put for a Note of similitude, as in that passage of the Lords Prayer, *Mat.*6.10. as it is in Heaven; and oft in the Book of the Proverbs) now. (For though this Psalm was composed after the thing was done, yet he speaks of it, as if it were now in doing, as the manner of the sacred Writers frequently is, that it may be more lively represented to mens Minds.) They break down the carved work, &c. The meaning is, they neither regard the Sacredness of the Place, nor the exquisite Curiosity and Art of the Work, but cut it down as indifferently and rashly, as men cut down the thick and intangled boughs of the Trees of the Forest.

6. But now they break down the carved work thereof at once s, with axes and hammers t.

s See the Note on the former Verse. t It hath been ingeniously observed, that these two words are not Hebrew, but Chaldee or Syriack, words to point out the time when this was done, even when the Chaldæans brought in their Language together with their Arms among the Israelites.

7. * † They have cast fire into thy sanctuary, they have defiled by casting down the dwelling place of thy name to the ground u.

* 2 King.25.9. † Heb. They have sent thy Sanctuary into the Fire.

u First, they polluted it, and then they burnt it, and broke it in pieces.

8. They said in their heart, Let us † destroy them together x, they have burnt up all the synagogues of God in the land y.

x Root and Branch, one as well as another, or all at once. So they desired, and many of them intended, although afterwards, it seems, they changed their counsel, and carried some away Captives, and left others to manage the Land. y (i.e.) All the publick Places wherein the Jews used to meet together to worship God, every Sabbath day, as is noted, Act. 13.27. and upon other occasions. That the Jews had such Synagogues, is manifest both from these and other places of Scripture; and from the Testimony of the Hebrew Doctors, and other ancient and learned Writers, who affirm it, and particularly of Jerusalem, in which they say there were above four hundred Synagogues; and from the nature and necessity of the thing: For seeing it is undeniable that they did worship God publickly, in every Sabbath, and other holy Times, even then when they neither did, nor could go up to Jerusalem, both Conscience and Prudence must needs direct them to appoint convenient Places for that purpose.

9. We see not our signs z, * there is no more any prophet a, neither is there among us any that knoweth how long b.

* 1 Sam.3.1. Amos 8.11.

z (i.e.) Those Tokens of God's gracious Presence, which we and our Ancestors formerly used to enjoy; Either, 1. Miracles wrought for us, which are called Signs, Psal. 78.43. and 135.9. Or, 2. The Ordinances of God, the Temple, and Ark, and Sacrifices, and solemn Feasts, all which were signs between God and his People. a Either, 1. Any Teacher. We have few or no Teachers left to us; Or, 2. Any extraordinary Prophet, who can foretel things to come, as the next words explain it. For as for Ezekiel and Jeremiah, they might be dead when this Psalm was composed; and Daniel was involved in Civil affairs, and did not not teach the People as a Prophet; and the prophetical Spirit, which ſometimes came upon him, and made thoſe great diſcoveries to him, which we read in his Book, might poſſibly at this time ſuſpend his influences. Beſides it is not unuſual in Scripture, to ſay that there is none of a ſort of Perſons or Things, when there is a very great ſcarcity of them. But others make this their great Argument, that this Pſalm ſpeaks of that Perſecution in the time of Antiochus, when indeed there was no Prophet at all. b Either, 1. How long their Captivity ſhould continue: For though ſeventy years were determined, yet there might ariſe doubts among them, as there now are among us, whence they were to be computed, which might make their end uncertain. Or, 2. How long they ſhould lie under Reproach, as it follows v. 10. Which they really did, and might foreſee that they ſhould, even after the expiration of their Captivity, Neh. 1.3.

10. O God, how long ſhall the adverſary reproach c? ſhall the enemy blaſpheme thy Name for ever?

c Underſtand here thy Name, which is expreſſed in the next Clauſe of the Verſe, by ſaying that thou art either unkind to thy People, or unfaithful in thy Covenant, or unable to deliver thine out of their Miſeries.

11. Why withdraweſt thou thy hand, even thy right hand d? pluck it out of thy boſom e.

d Why doſt thou ſuſpend or forbear the exerciſe of that Power, which thou haſt ſo oft put forth on the behalf of thy People? e In which thou now ſeemeſt to hide it, as idle Perſons uſe to do, Prov. 19. 24. and 26. 15.——Beſtir thy ſelf on the behalf of thy People.

* Pſal. 44. 4. 12. For * God is my king f of old, working ſalvation in the midſt of the earth g.

f In a ſingular manner: It belongs therefore to thine Office to protect and ſave me. g In the view of the World: So ſaving thy People, ſo eminently and gloriouſly, that all people round about them obſerved and admired it.

* Exod. 14. 21. † Heb. Break. ‖ Or, Whales. 13. * Thou didſt † divide the ſea by thy ſtrength: thou brakeſt the heads of the ‖ dragons h in the waters i.

h Or, the Crocodiles. He means Pharaoh and all his mighty Men, who were like theſe Beaſts in Strength and Cruelty. i To wit, of the Sea, where they were drowned.

14. Thou brakeſt the heads k of leviathan l in pieces, and gaveſt him to be meat to the people inhabiting the wilderneſs m.

k (i.e.) The head, called Heads; Partly, for the greatneſs of this Beaſt, as that great Monſter is called Beaſts, Job 40.20. for the ſame Reaſon; and Partly, for the ſeveral Heads or Princes, who were and acted under his influence. l Pharaoh. m Heb. To the People in, or of the Deſart; Either, 1. To the Iſraelites, then in the Wilderneſs, to whom the Deſtruction of Pharaoh and his Hoſt, was Meat, (i.e.) Matter of great Support and Refreſhment. Or, 2. To thoſe ſavage people, to whom they were Meat; becauſe they lived upon Fiſhes, and might eat thoſe very Fiſhes which had devoured Pharaoh's Hoſt in the bottom of the Sea. Or rather, 3. To thoſe ravenous Birds and Beaſts of the Deſart, which after their manner, fed and feaſted themſelves upon the Carcaſſes of the Egyptians, who were caſt upon the Sea-ſhore, Exod. 14.30. which were properly and immediately Meat unto them. And when words can be taken properly, we ought to preſer that before the Metaphorical ſence, as is agreed by Interpreters. And this was a very ſuitable Puniſhment for this proud and inſolent People, that they who were ſo haughty, that they would not own nor ſubmit to the Lord himſelf, Exod. 5.2. ſhould be devoured by theſe contemptible Creatures, which was a great Reproach, 1 Sam. 17.44,46. and oft threatned by God, as a grievous Curſe, as Deut. 28. 26. Jer. 7.33. and 16.4, &c. Neither let any think it ſtrange, that the Name of People is given to theſe Creatures, for it is given to Conies, Graſhoppers, Piſmires, &c. both in Scripture, as Prov. 30.25,26. Joel 1.6. and in Homer, and other ancient profane Writers. Nay, here is an Elegancy in the Expreſſion; for theſe Creatures are ſignificantly called the People of the Wilderneſs, becauſe they are the only People that inhabited it, this being a Wilderneſs wherein was no Man, as is ſaid, Job 38. 26.

* Exod. 17. 5. Numb. 20. 11. Pſal. 105. 41. Iſa. 48. 21. * Joſh. 3. 13. † Heb. Rivers of ſtrength. 15. * Thou didſt cleave the fountain and the flood n, * thou drieſt up † mighty rivers o.

n (i.e.) Thou didſt by cleaving the Rock, make a Fountain in it, and a flood or ſtream to flow from it, for the refreſhment of thy People, in thoſe dry Deſarts. The Phraſe is like that Iſa. 47.2. Grind meal, (i.e.) By grinding the Corn, make Meal. o Either, 1. Jordan, which was then more mighty than ordinarily, as having overflowed all his Banks, and therefore may be called Rivers, becauſe it was now equivalent to two or three ſuch Rivers; or it is only an Enallage of the plural Number for the ſingular, whereof I have given many Inſtances formerly. Or rather, 2. Both Jordan and the Red Sea; for the Sea it ſelf; yea, a greater Sea than that, is called a River, Jonah 2. 3. for the Hebrew word is the ſame which is here uſed, though there it be rendred Floods. And the ſame Title is expreſly given to the Sea, by Homer and other ancient Writers. To theſe the ancient Chaldee Interpreter addeth the Rivers of Arnon and Jabbok, in or about which ſome extraordinary work was wrought, yea ſomething which was like God's work at the Red Sea, as may ſeem by the conjunction of theſe together, Numb. 21.14.

16. The day is thine, the night alſo is thine p: thou haſt prepared q † the light r and the ſun. † Heb. a Luminary and the Sun.

p It is not ſtrange nor incredible that thou haſt done theſe great and wonderful Works, for thou haſt made the heavenly Bodies, and the Viciſſitudes of day and night, depending upon them, which is a far greater Work. q Or rather, Eſtabliſhed, as this word oft ſignifies; not only created, but ſettled in a conſtant and orderly courſe. r Either, 1. That primitive light, Gen. 1. 3. which afterwards was condenſed and gathered into the Sun. Or rather, 2. The Moon, as divers both ancient and modern Interpreters underſtand it, called here the Light, to wit, the leſſer Luminary or Light; wherein there is either, a Synecdoche of the general for the particular, or an Ellipſis of the Adjective, both which Figures are very uſual. And that the leſſer Light is here meant, may ſeem probable; both becauſe it is oppoſed to the greater Light, the Sun here following, and becauſe this is to rule the Night, as the Sun is to rule the Day, Gen. 1. 16. and ſo this Clauſe anſwereth to, and explaineth the former, wherein both Day and Night are mentioned.

17. Thou haſt ſet all the borders of the earth s: thou haſt † made ſummer and winter. † Heb. made them.

s Thou haſt fixed the bounds, both of the habitable World in general, ſo as the Seas, though they do encompaſs and aſſault them, yet they ſhall never be able to remove them, and of all the Countries and People upon Earth, whom thou haſt confined to ſuch bounds as thou ſeeſt fit. And as this Clauſe of the Verſe ſheweth God's Power and Government over all Places, ſo the next Clauſe diſplays his Dominion over all Times and Seaſons. And both together are fitly alledged as a Motive to God, that he would at this time take care of his poor People, and reſtore them to their ancient Land and Borders, in which he had been pleaſed to ſet them.

18. * Remember this, that the enemy hath reproached thee O LORD t, and that fooliſh people u have blaſphemed thy name. * Ver. 22.

t Though we deſerve to be forgotten and deſtroyed, yet remember thy ſelf, and do not ſuffer thine and our Enemies to reproach and blaſpheme the Name of that great and glorious God, the Creator and Soveraign Lord of the whole World, whom they ought always to reverence and adore. u Who, though they think themſelves, and are thought by others to be wiſe, yet in truth are Fools, and herein ſhew their ſtupendious folly, that they vilifie and provoke that God, whoſe powerful Anger they can neither reſiſt, nor eſcape, nor endure.

19. O deliver not the ſoul x of thy turtle-dove y unto ‖ the multitude of the wicked z, forget not the congregation of thy poor for ever. ‖ Or, unto the wild Beaſts. So Gr.

x (i.e.) The Life: Thou haſt delivered thy People into Captivity; do not deliver them to Death, nor ſuffer their Enemies utterly to deſtroy them. y (i.e.) Of thy Church, which is fitly compared to a Turtle-Dove, becauſe of the great reſemblance of their Diſpoſitions and Conditions, being ſimple, and harmleſs, and meek, and faithful, and mournful, and expoſed to manifold Injuries, and unable to defend it ſelf from them. z Or, to the wild Beaſt, as this word oft ſignifies. Or, to the Troop, to wit, of her Enemies.

20. Have reſpect unto the covenant a, for the dark places of the earth b are full of the habitations of cruelty c.

a Made with Abraham, whereby thou didſt give the Land of Canaan to him, and to his ſeed for ever, and thou didſt further promiſe, that if thy People were carried captive into ſtrange Lands, and did there humble themſelves, and pray and turn unto thee, thou wouldſt mercifully reſtore them, 1 Kings 8.46, 47, 48, 49, 50. Do thou therefore now reſtore us to that pleaſant and lightſom Land, which thou haſt given to us. b (i.e.) This dark and diſmal Land in which we live, wherein there is nothing but Ignorance and Confuſion, and all the works of Darkneſs. Of which the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks in general terms, out of a principle of Prudence; becauſe the particular deſignation of the Place was unneceſſary, and might have been of ill conſequence. c Here is nothing but Injuſtice, and Oppreſſion, and Tyranny, under which we groan in all the Parts of this great Empire, where we have our abode.

21. O let not the oppreſſed return d aſhamed, let the poor and needy praiſe thy name.

d From thee, and from the Throne of thy Grace, to which they make their Reſort, in this their diſtreſſed condition.

22. Ariſe, O God, plead thine own cauſe e, * remember how the fooliſh man reproacheth thee daily.

e Maintain thy Honour and Worſhip, and Service againſt thoſe that reproach thee, as it here follows, and was noted before, v. 10. 18. As we are reviled and perſecuted for thy ſake; ſo thou art injured in all our wrongs.

23. Forget not the voice f of thine enemies, the tumult g of thoſe that riſe up againſt thee † encreaſeth h continually.

1 Sam. 5. 12.

f Their inſulting and reproachful Expreſſions againſt thee, as well as againſt us. g (i. e.) The tumultuous noiſe, or the loud clamours. h Heb. aſcendeth, to wit, into Heaven, being either directed thither by them; their mouths being ſet againſt Heaven, as theirs was, Pſal. 73. 9. or at leaſt being perceived there by God, whoſe Ears were pierced with the loud cry of their ſins. See Gen. 4. 10. and 18. 20. Or aſcending, may be here put for increaſing, as it is, Iſa. 55. 13. Jer. 46. 7. So the ſence is; they grow worſe and worſe, encouraging and hardning themſelves in their wicked Courſes, by their continual ſucceſs and proſperity, and by thy patience extended to them.

To the chief muſician, || Al-taſchith, a Pſalm or Song || of Aſaph a.

a As the Author. Or, to or for Aſaph; which may be put by way of oppoſition, to the foregoing and general expreſſion; to the chief Muſician, which is here limited to and explained of Aſaph. As Pſal. 62. having ſaid: To the chief Muſician, he adds to Jeduthun; and then follows the Author, David. This Pſalm was either compoſed by David, or by Aſaph in David's Name and Perſon, as it is not unuſual for Poets to bring in Princes, ſpeaking in their Poems. It ſeems to relate to the time when David had entred upon, but not got full poſſeſſion of the Kingdom.

1. UNto thee, O God, do we b give thanks, unto thee, do we give thanks, for that thy name c is near d, thy wondrous works e declare.

b I in my own, and in my peoples name. c (i. e.) Thy ſelf; or thy Power. d Is preſent with us, and moſt ready to help us, when we cry unto thee, as this phraſe is taken; Pſal. 34. 19. and 145. 18. Thou art not departed from us; thou doſt not now ſtand afar off, as once thou didſt, Pſal. 10. 1. e Wrought on my behalf, and for the good of thy people.

‖ Or, when I ſhall take a ſet time. So Gr.

2. ‖ When I ſhall receive the congregation f I will judge uprightly g.

f To wit, the whole Congregation, or Body of thy people, to wit, all the Tribes; which are now diſtracted and diſordered by a Civil War, which is a great hindrance to the Adminiſtration of Juſtice. Or, when I ſhall receive or obtain the appointment, (i.e.) What God hath appointed and promiſed to me, to wit, the full and firm poſſeſſion of the Kingdom: Or, the time, or place appointed by God for that work. Some make theſe and the following paſſages, the Words of God concerning his Church, or People. Which ſeems not probable; Partly, becauſe he ſpeaks of God in the third Perſon, as one diſtinct from him that ſpeaks theſe words, v. 7, 8. and partly, becauſe it is evident, that one and the ſame Perſon ſpeaks from hence to the end of the Pſalm, and the ninth verſe cannot be ſpoken by God. g I will not uſe my Power Tyrannically and Wickedly, as Saul did, and as moſt other Princes do; but holily and righteouſly for the good of my people.

* Pſal. 60. 2, 3. & 82. 5.

3. * The earth and all the inhabitants thereof are diſſolved h, I bear up the pillars of it i, Selah.

h Or melted, conſumed or deſtroyed; Partly, by the ill Government of Saul and Iſhboſheth, and the great Officers of State and War under them; and partly, by inteſtine Diviſions and Wars. i Howſoever I am traduced by mine Enemies, as the great diſturber of the Land, I muſt do my ſelf this right to affirm, that under God, I do ſupport and eſtabliſh it, by maintaining Religion and Juſtice, and by ſetting up good Magiſtrates, and encouraging good Miniſters, and good Men, which are indeed the Pillars of a Nation.

4. I ſaid k unto the fools l, Deal not fooliſhly m; and to the wicked, Lift not up the horn n.

k With Authority and Command; I charged them. l (i.e.) The wicked, as that is explained in the next clauſe. m Deſiſt from your impious and injurious practices, which ſhall not now go unpuniſhed, as they have done. n Do not carry your ſelves either, arrogantly boaſting of your own ſtrength, or ſcornfully and maliciouſly towards me, or others of God's people.

5. Lift not up your horn on high o, ſpeak not p with a ſtiff neck q.

o A Metaphor from untamed and Stiff-necked Oxen, which will not bow their heads to receive the yoke, but lift up their heads and horns to avoid it. Or, againſt the high, (i.e.) Againſt God, who is mentioned under this ſame Title, Pſal. 56. 2. though there it be rendred, moſt high. p To wit, againſt me and my Government. q With pride and contempt of my Perſon, and with Rebellion againſt God's Will declared concerning my Advancement, of which you are not ignorant: See 2 Sam. 3. 17, 18.

6. For promotion cometh, neither from the eaſt, nor from the weſt, nor from the † ſouth r.

r For though you envy and oppoſe my Advancement, becauſe I was but a poor Shepherd, and of a mean Family, yet you ought to know and conſider; what is notorious and viſible in the World, that the Dignities and Scepters of the World, are not always diſpoſed according to humane expectations, and probabilities; but by God's Soveraign Will and Providence, as it follows. It is true, men that expect Preferment, have their Eyes fixed upon the great Perſons of the World, who are thought to have the diſpoſition of them in their hands, and according to their ſeveral Inclinations or Intereſts; ſome look Eaſt-ward, others Weſt-ward, and others South-ward, expecting aſſiſtance from ſome of theſe quarters; but all in vain.

7. But God is the judge s, * he putteth down one, and ſetteth up another t.

1 Sam. 2. 7.

s To wit, the righteous Judge, and ſupreme Lord and Governour of all the Kingdoms of the World, giving them to whomſoever he pleaſeth. t It is he who hath rejected Saul and his Family, and put me in his ſtead? And who art thou that diſputeſt with God, and reſiſteſt his declared Will?

8. For u in the hand of the LORD x there is a cup y, and the wine is red z, it is full of mixture a, and he poureth out of the ſame b: but the dregs thereof c all the wicked of the earth d, ſhall wring them out e, and drink them.

u This Verſe is added; Either, 1. As a Reaſon or confirmation of the aſſertion, v. 7. and to ſhew that God in removing one King to make way for another, did not proceed in a way of abſolute Soveraignty, which yet he might have done, but in a way of Juſtice and Equity. Or, 2. As another Argument to inforce his Advice given, v. 4, 5. which he had now preſſed by one Argument, v. 6, 7. x God is here compared to the Maſter of a Feaſt, who then uſed to diſtribute Portions of Meats or Drinks, to the ſeveral Gueſts as he thought fit. y A Cup in Scripture, is ſometimes taken in a good ſence, for God's Bleſſings, as Pſal. 16. 5. and 23. 5. and ſometimes, and more frequently in a bad ſence, for God's Vengeance and Judgments, as Pſal. 11. 6. Iſa. 51. 22. Jer. 49. 12. Matth. 20. 23, &c. And ſo it is here underſtood, as the following words ſhew. z Such as the beſt Wine of Judea was, Deut. 32. 14. Prov. 23. 31. and ſo ſtrong and heady, and intoxicating. Or, is troubled; as the Word more properly ſignifies, and is rendred by divers. Which may note its newneſs, when it is in Fermentation, not yet cleared nor ſetled, and ſo more intoxicating. So he expreſſeth the Power and fierceneſs of God's Wrath and Judgments. a The Wine is mingled not with Water, as was uſual in thoſe hot Countries, Prov. 9. 5. but with Spices, as Cant. 8. 2. Or rather, ſtrengthning and intoxicating Ingredients, which Drunkards uſed, Iſa. 5. 22. b To wit, to the children of men, promiſcuouſly to good and bad. Whereby he removes the ſcandal, which his Enemies might take from thoſe troubles which God ſaw fit to inflict upon David and his followers. c The worſt and moſt dreadful part of thoſe Tribulations. d Or, of the Land, to wit, of Canaan, of which he ſpake, v. 3. e Which Expreſſion may imply either, that they ſhall be forced to ſqueeze out the worſt for their own drinking: Or, that this dreadful draught was prepared for them, and brought upon them by their own choice and wickedneſs.

9. But I will declare f for ever; I will ſing praiſes to the God of Jacob.

f To wit, this great and glorious work of God, or the praiſes due unto God for it, as the next words imply.

10. * All the horns of the wicked g alſo will I cut off h; but the horns of the righteous ſhall be exalted i.

* Zech. 1. 20, 21.

g Their Honour and Power, which they made an Inſtrument of miſchief to oppreſs good men. A Metaphor from horned and miſchievous Beaſts. h When I ſhall be advanced to the Throne, and have Power and Authority to do what now I can only deſire and pray for. i Good men ſhall be encouraged and promoted, and intruſted with the management of all publick Affairs, which will be a great Bleſſing to all my people.

PSAL. LXXVI.

To the chief muſician on Neginoth, a Pſalm or Song ‖ of Aſaph a.

‖ Or, for Aſaph.

a Or, for Aſaph. Either, it was compoſed by the Prophet Aſaph; or compoſed by David, or ſome other Holy Prophet of God, and committed to Aſaph, or to his Poſterity; it being uſual to put the Parents name for his Children, of which I have formerly given divers Inſtances. The ſpecial and immediate occaſion of this Pſalm was unqueſtionably, ſome eminent Deliverance vouchſafed by God, to his People of Iſrael, and eſpecially to Jeruſalem, which the Pſalmiſt thought fit to celebrate: But which and when it was, is both needleſs to enquire, and hard to determine.

1. * IN Judah is God known b, his name is great c in Iſrael.

* Pſal. 48. 1. &c.

b God's People do not worſhip an unknown God, as the Athenians did, Act. 17. 23. but one who hath made himſelf known, not only by his Word and Ordinances, but alſo by the glorious Effects of his Wiſdom and Power on their behalf, and againſt their potent and malicious Enemies. c (i.e.) Famous and Renowned, and greatly to be praiſed and admired.

2. In Salem d alſo is his tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Zion e.

d In Jeruſalem, which was antiently called Salem, Gen. 14. 18. Heb. 7. 1. e Largely ſo called, as it includes Moriah an adjoyning Hill, or another branch of the ſame Hill.

3. There f brake he the arrows g of the bow, the ſhield, and the ſword h, and the battel i, Selah.

f (i. e.) In Judah; Or at, or near Jeruſalem. g Heb. the ſparks, the ſparkling Arrows, bright and ſhining, ſwift and piercing, like ſparks of fire. h Both offenſive and defenſive Weapons, ſo as they could neither hurt God's People, nor ſave themſelves from ruin. i The force and fury of the Battle, and all the power of the Army, which was put in Battle-Array.

4. Thou k art more glorious and excellent than the mountains of prey l.

k O God: To whom he directeth his Speech here, as alſo v. 6, 7, 8. l Either, 1. Than the greateſt Kings and Emperor of the Earth, which in Prophetical Writings are oft compared to Mountains, as Pſal. 46. 2, 3. Iſa. 41 15. Jer. 51. 25. Hab. 3. 6. And they are called Mountains of prey; becauſe then they generally were eſtabliſhed by Tyranny, and maintained by preying upon their own Subjects, or other inferior Kingdoms. Or, 2. (which amounts to the ſame thing) than the moſt powerful Enemies of thy People, upon whom they uſed, and now deſired and expected to prey: Such Perſons being oft expreſſed by the name of Mountains, as Pſal. 144. 5. Zech. 4. 7, &c.

5. The ſtout-hearted are ſpoiled m, they have ſlept their ſleep n: and none of the men of might have found their hands o.

m Of all that Glory and Advantage, which they either had already gotten, or further expected from the ſucceſs of their preſent expedition which they promiſed to themſelves. They became a prey to thoſe upon whom they hoped to prey. n Even a perpetual ſleep, as Jer. 51. 39, 57. or the ſleep of Death, Pſal. 13. 3. called their ſleep emphatically, as being peculiar to them, and ſuch like Men, and not that ſleep which is common to the good and bad. Their Death he ſeems to call ſleep: Becauſe they were ſlain in the Night, when they had compoſed themſelves to reſt and ſleep, and ſo paſſed inſenſibly from one ſleep to another. For it is thought by many, that this Pſalm was compoſed upon the occaſion of that prodigious ſlaughter of the Aſſyrians in Judah, 2 Kings 19. 35. o They had no more ſtrength in, or uſe of their hands, againſt the deſtroying Angel, than they who have no hands.

6. At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, both the chariot and horſe p are caſt into a dead ſleep.

p The men who rode upon, and fought from Chariots and Horſes, who fight with moſt Advantage, and uſually have moſt courage; and much more unable were their Footmen to reſiſt or avoid the ſtroke.

7. Thou, even thou art to be feared, and who may ſtand in thy ſight q when once thou art angry?

q To wit, to contend with thee. Standing is here oppoſed to flight or falling before the Enemy. See Joſh. 7. 12. Dan. 8. 4.

* Pſal. 46. 6.

8. * Thou didſt cauſe judgment to be heard from heaven r; the earth feared, and was ſtill s.

r Thou didſt execute Judgment upon thine Enemies, by an Angel ſent from Heaven, which is ſaid to be heard: Either, becauſe that was accompanied with terrible Thunders and Earthquakes, which was not unuſual in the deſcent of an Angel, as Mat. 28. 2. and elſewhere: Or, becauſe the fame of it was quickly ſpread abroad in the Land, and in the World. s The effect of this terrible Judgment, was, that the reſt of the world were afraid to invade or diſturb the Land and People of Iſrael, and choſe rather to ſit ſtill in their own Territories.

9. When God aroſe to judgment t to ſave all the meek of the earth u, Selah.

t When God, who for a ſeaſon had ſat ſtill, began to beſtir and ſhew himſelf againſt his Enemies. Or, After God had riſen, &c. Or, Becauſe God did ariſe, &c. u To ſave all the godly Perſons (who are oft called meek ones, as hath been noted again and again) in Iſrael, for whoſe ſakes God wrought this great Deliverance, which reached to all people of the Land.

10. Surely the wrath of man ſhall praiſe thee x, the remainder of wrath ſhalt thou reſtrain y.

x The blaſphemous Speeches, and furious Attempts of thine Enemies, ſhall ſerve thy Glory, and cauſe thy people and others, to praiſe and magnifie thee, for that admirable Wiſdom and Power, and Faithfulneſs, and Goodneſs, which thou ſhalt diſcover upon that occaſion. y Thou ſhalt prevent and diſappoint the ſucceeding malicious deſigns of thine Enemies, who will meditate Revenge for thoſe ſhameful and terrible overthrows. Or, the remainder of Wrath thou ſhalt gird thy ſelf with, (i. e.) Put it on as an Ornament which the Girdle was; thou ſhalt adorn thy ſelf with it, as a Conqueror doth with the ſpoils of his Enemies.

11. Vow z, and pay a unto the LORD your God; let all that be round about him b bring preſents † unto him that ought to be feared c.

z Vow a Sacrifice of Thanksgiving; Either, at this time, for this wonderful Deliverance: or hereafter in all your future ſtraits and troubles, let this experience encourage you to make ſuch Vows to God, with confidence of ſucceſs. a But when God hath accepted your Vows, and given you the deſired Deliverance, forget not to pay your Vows. b Either, 1. All the Tribes of Iſrael, who have the benefit of this Mercy. Or rather, 2. All the neighbouring Nations on every ſide, to whom the fame of this mighty work of God ſhall come, I adviſe them for the future, if they love themſelves, to ceaſe from all Hoſtilities againſt God, or his People, and to ſubmit themſelves to the God of Iſrael. c Whom though they do not love, yet they ſee and feel, that they have great reaſon to fear and to ſeek his favour.

12. He ſhall cut off d the ſpirit e of princes, he is terrible to the kings of the earth.

d As men do their Grapes in time of Vintage, as the Hebrew Verb implies, to wit, ſuddenly, violently, and irreſiſtibly. This is all which they ſhall get by oppoſing him; and therefore it is their Wiſdom to bring Preſents to him. e Either, 1. Their Courage. Or rather, 2. Their Breath and Life, as he did in the Aſſyrian Army.

PSAL. LXXVII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm was compoſed upon the occaſion of ſome ſore and long Calamity of God's People: Either, the Babyloniſh Captivity or ſome other.

To the chief muſician, † to Jeduthun, a Pſalm ‖ of Aſaph a.

† Heb. upon. Pſal. 62. ‖ Or, for Aſaph.

a Either, that Aſaph who lived and propheſied in David's time: Or, one of his Succeſſors long after him called, as was uſual, by his Progenitors name.

1. I Cried unto God with my voice: even unto God with my voice, and he gave ear unto me b.

b This Verſe ſeems to contain the ſum of the whole Pſalm, conſiſting of two parts, to wit, his earneſt cry to God in his deep diſtreſs; and God's gracious return to his Prayers, by ſupporting him under them, and giving him aſſurance of a good iſſue out of them: of both which he ſpeaks more diſtinctly and particularly, of the firſt, from v. 2. to v. 10. of the latter thence to the end.

2. In the day of my trouble I ſought the LORD; † my ſore ran c in the night d, and ceaſed not: my ſoul refuſed to be comforted e.

c The hand in the Hebrew Tongue and Scripture uſe, is oft put put for a blow or ſtroke given by the hand. Heb. My hand or hands (the Singular number being frequently put for the Plural) flowed or poured forth, (i. e.) ſpread abroad to God in Prayer. This Phraſe he uſeth rather, than were ſtretched out, which is frequent in like caſes, to imply that his caſe was low and almoſt deſperate, his Spirits and ſtrength quite gone, ſo that he was not able to ſtretch them out, as he had done. d Which to others was a time of reſt and quietneſs, but to me of torment. e I rejected all thoſe conſolations, which either my Friends, or my own mind ſuggeſted to me.

3. I remembred God, and was troubled e: I complained f, and my ſpirit was overwhelmed g, Selah.

e Yea the thoughts of God, and of his infinite Power, and Truth, and Goodneſs, which uſed to be very ſweet and comfortable to me, were now matter of terror and trouble, becauſe they were all ingaged againſt me, and God himſelf my only Friend, was now very angry with me, and become mine Enemy. f Unto God in Prayer. g So far was I from finding relief by my complaints, that they increaſed my miſery.

4. Thou holdeſt mine eyes waking h: I am ſo troubled that I cannot ſpeak i.

h By thoſe ſharp and continual griefs, and thoſe perplexing and tormenting thoughts and cares, which from time to time thou ſtirreſt up in me. i The greatneſs of my ſorrows ſtupefie my mind, and make me both lifeleſs and unable to ſpeak; nor can any words ſufficiently expreſs the extremity of my miſery.

* Pſal. 143. 5. † Heb. the years of Ages. Gr. eternal years.

5. * I have conſidered k the days of old l, † the years of ancient times.

k If by that means I could get any comfort. l (i.e.) The mighty works of God done for his people in former times. Days are put for Events done in them, as Pſal. 37. 13. and 137. 7. Obad. v. 12. Mich. 7. 4.

6. I call to remembrance my ſong in the night m: I communed with mine own heart, and my ſpirit made diligent ſearch n.

m The many and great Mercies and Favours of God vouchſafed by him to me, and to his people, which have obliged me to adore him, and ſing his praiſes not only in the day, the time appointed for that work, but alſo by night, as oft as they come into my mind. n What ſhould be the cauſe of this ſtrange and vaſt alteration, and how theſe ſore calamities could come from the hand of ſo gracious and merciful a God, as ours is, and what might be expected as to their continuance or removal.

7. Will the Lord caſt off o for ever? and will he be favourable no more?

o His peculiar and choſen people? This doth not ſeem to agree; Either with God's Nature, or with that everlaſting Covenant which he hath made with them.

8. Is his mercy clean gone for ever p? doth his promiſe fail † for evermore q?

p Are all the ſtores of his Mercy quite ſpent? Doth he now ceaſe to be, what he hath ſtiled himſelf, the Lord gracious and merciful, long-ſuffering, and abundant in Goodneſs? q Will he never more make good thoſe gracious Promiſes, upon which he hath commanded us to hope?

9. Hath God forgotten to be gracious r? hath he in anger ſhut up his tender mercies s? Selah.

r Becauſe he hath ſo long diſuſed it. s So as they can never flow forth, no not to his own people.

* Pſal. 102. 24, 25.

10. And I ſaid t, This is my infirmity u: but I will remember x * the years of the right hand of the moſt High y.

t I thus anſwered theſe objections. u Theſe ſuſpicions of God's Faithfulneſs and Goodneſs proceed from the weakneſs of my Faith, and from the miſtake of a diſeaſed mind. x Which words may be underſtood out of the following Verſe, as other words frequently are in like caſes. y The years wherein God hath done great and glorious Works, which are oft aſcribed to God's right hand, as Pſal. 17. 7. and 20. 6. and 45. 4. and 118. 15. But the word rendred years, doth alſo ſignifie changing, and accordingly this Verſe is by other learned Interpreters, and may well be rendred otherwiſe without any ſuch Supplement as is in our Tranſlation, thus, And I ſaid, This is my affliction or grievance, (the ſumm of all, and the chief cauſe of my trouble and anxiety is this) the change of the right hand of the moſt High, that, that right hand which formerly hath done ſuch great and wonderful things for his people, is at this time not only hid in God's Boſom and not drawn forth for their defence, but is alſo ſtretched forth againſt them, and is the principal cauſe of all our preſent miſeries. I could bear the malice and rage of our Enemies, from whom we could not expect better things, but that our gracious and covenanted God ſhould forſake and perſecute his own people, this is that which makes it intolerable.

11. I will remember the works of the LORD, ſurely I will remember thy wonders of old z.

z And yet upon ſecond and ſerious thoughts, of what God had formerly done for his people, many times far above their expectations, I will take comfort in remembrance of them, becauſe God is ſtill the ſame that he was, in Power, and Goodneſs, and Love to his People, and therefore will pity and help us in this preſent calamity, as he hath oft done in others of the ſame Nature.

12. I will meditate alſo of thy work, and talk of thy doings.

13. * Thy way a, O God, is in the ſanctuary b: who is ſo great a God as our God c? * Pſal. 68. 24. &c.

a (i.e.) Thy doings, or the courſe of thy Providence, which is oft called God's way, the various methods and cauſes of thy dealings with thy people. b Is there contained and declared. As the proſperity of wicked men, ſo alſo the grievous calamities of God's people, are great riddles and ſtumbling-blocks to the ignorant and ungodly World, but a full and ſatisfactory reſolution of them, may be had from God's Sanctuary, as is obſerved in the former caſe by this ſame Aſaph, Pſal. 73. 16, 17. and here in the latter. Or, is in Holineſs. So the ſence is, God is holy and juſt, and true in all his Works; yea, even in his Judgments upon his own people, as will evidently appear from the iſſue of them. c And although our God at preſent ſuſpends his Power, and doth not put it forth to deliver his people out of the hands of their Idolatrous Enemies, who thence take occaſion to blaſpheme his Name, and to exalt their Idol-Gods above him, yet he is ſtill infinitely Superior in Power, both to them and to their Gods, and can, and will in his due time reſcue his people from them.

14. Thou art the God that doeſt wonders, thou haſt declared thy ſtrength among the people d.

d By the mighty Effects of it here following.

15. * Thou haſt with thine arm redeemed thy people e, the ſons of Jacob and Joſeph f, Selah. * Exod. 6. 6.

e To wit, out of Egypt after a long and hard Bondage. Which he here mentions to ſtrengthen his Faith in their preſent Captivity. f Whom he mentions; Partly, as a moſt eminent portion of the Sons of Jacob, branched forth into two numerous Tribes: Partly, becauſe the Sons of Joſeph were born in Egypt, which Jacob's other Sons were not: and partly, becauſe he laid the Foundation of that Redemption, by bringing them into Egypt, and preſerving and nouriſhing Jacob and his Sons there, as a little Child is nouriſhed, as it is expreſſed in the Hebrew Text, Gen. 47. 12. in which reſpect he was a ſecond Father to them, and they might well be called his Sons; without whoſe care (to ſpeak humanely) there had been no ſuch Redemption, nor people to be redeemed.

16. * The waters ſaw thee g, O God, the waters ſaw thee: they were afraid h; the depths alſo were troubled. * Exod. 14. 21. Pſal. 114. 3. Hab. 3. 8, 10.

g They felt the viſible Effects of thy powerful Preſence. h And ſtood ſtill as men, or beaſts aſtoniſhed commonly do.

17. † The clouds poured out water i, the skies ſent out a ſound: thine arrows k alſo went abroad l.

i When the Iſraelites paſſed over the Sea: In reſpect whereof the Iſraelites are ſaid to have been baptized in the Cloud, (i.e. Sprinkled with water, poured forth from the Clouds) and in the Sea, 1 Cor. 10. 2. k Either Hail-ſtones, or rather, Lightnings or Thunder-bolts, which are called God's Arrows, Pſal. 18. 14. & 144. 6.

18. The voice of thy thunder was † in the heaven, * the lightnings lightned the world, the earth trembled and ſhook l.

l This Tempeſt is not particularly recorded in its proper place, yet it may well be gathered from what is ſaid, Exod. 14. 24, 25. and is in effect acknowledged by Joſephus in his Hiſtory. And this is no new thing in Scripture, for ſome circumſtances of Hiſtory, omitted in the firſt and propereſt places, to be ſupplied in following paſſages; whereof inſtances have been already given.

19. Thy way is m in the ſea, and thy path in the great waters, and thy footſteps are not known n.

m Or rather, Was at that time: Thou didſt walk and lead thy people in untrodden paths. n Becauſe the waters ſuddenly returned and covered them.

20. * Thou leddeſt thy people o like a flock p, by the hand of Moſes and Aaron. * Exod. 14. 19. Pſal. 78. 52. Hoſ. 12. 13.

o Firſt through the Sea, and afterwards through the vaſt howling Wilderneſs to Canaan. p With ſingular care and tenderneſs, as a Shepherd doth this ſheep. And therefore I hope thou wilt take care of thy poor diſperſed and diſtreſſed flock, and bring them once again into their own Land.

PSAL. LXXVIII.

‖ * Maſchil of Aſaph.

* Pſal. 74. Tit.

The Scope of this Pſalm is plainly expreſſed, v. 6, 7, 8. and is this, That the Iſraelites might learn to hope and truſt in God, and ſtedfaſtly to keep his Laws and Covenant. Which great Leſſon he preſſeth upon them, from the ſad effects of the contrary practices in their Fore-fathers, of which he gives a brief, yet full account in a Recapitulation of the moſt remarkable paſſages in the Hiſtory of their Church and Nation.

1. GIve ear, O my people a, to my law b: incline your ears to the words of my mouth.

a If Aſaph was the Compoſer of this Pſalm, he might well call the Iſraelites his People, not only as he was their Prophet and Teacher, but alſo becauſe they were of the ſame Country and Parentage with him, upon which account this very Phraſe of my People is uſed of them, not only by Queen Eſther, Eſth. 7. 3, 4. but alſo by the Shunamitiſh Woman, 2 Kings 4. 13. b (i.e.) The doctrine which I am about to deliver to you, concerning your Duty, and the danger of neglecting it.

* Pſal. 49. 4. Mat. 13. 35.

2. * I will open my mouth c in a parable d: I will utter dark ſayings e of old f:

c Speak to you with all freedom and plainneſs. d Uttering divers grave and weighty Sentences (for ſuch are oft called Parables in Scripture) or paſſages of great moment for your inſtruction and advantage. e So he calls the following paſſages, not becauſe the Words and Sentences are in themſelves hard to be underſtood, for they are generally hiſtorical and eaſie, but becauſe the things contained in them, concerning God's tranſcendant Goodneſs to an unworthy People, and their unparallel'd ingratitude for, and abuſe of ſuch eminent Favours; and their ſtupid ignorance and inſenſibleneſs under ſuch excellent and conſtant Teachings of God's Word and Works, are indeed prodigious and hard to be believed. f Of things done in ancient times, and in a great meaſure worn out of mens minds.

3. * Which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us.

4. We will not hide them from their children, ſhewing to the generation to come the praiſes g of the LORD; and his ſtrength, and his wonderful works that he hath done.

g (i.e.) His glorious and praiſe-worth Actions, as the following words explain it.

* Deut. 1. 9. & 6. 7. & 11. 19.

5. For he eſtabliſhed h a teſtimony i in Jacob k, and appointed a law in Iſrael; which he commanded our fathers * that they ſhould make them known to their children l.

h This is juſtly put in the firſt place, as the chief of all the following Mercies, and the Foundation both of their temporal and of their eternal Felicity. i (i.e.) His Law, as it is called in the next Clauſe; which is very oft called a Teſtimony, becauſe it is a Witneſs between God and Men, declaring both the Duties which God expects from Man, and the Promiſes and Bleſſings, which Man in the performance of his Duty may expect from God. k Peculiarly: for no other Nation enjoyed this Privilege, as is more fully expreſſed, Pſal. 147. 19, 20. l Which Teſtimony or Law God revealed to them, not for their own private uſe, but for the benefit of all their Poſterity, whom their Parents were obliged to teach, Deut. 6. 7. and all their Children to hear, and read, and ſtudy. By which we may ſee how contrary to the mind of God, that fooliſh and wicked aſſertion is, That Ignorance is the Mother of Devotion.

6. That the generation to come might know them, even the children which ſhould be born: who ſhould ariſe and declare them to their children.

7. That they might ſet their hope in God m, and not forget the works of God, but keep his commandments.

m That by the conſideration of God's gracious Promiſes, and wonderful Works wrought by God for his people, they might be incouraged to truſt in him.

* Ex. 32. 9. & 33. 3. & 34. 9. Deut. 9. 6, 13. & 31. 27. † Heb. That prepared not their heart.

8. And might not be as their fathers, * a ſtubborn and rebellious generation; a generation † that ſet not their heart aright n, and whoſe ſpirit was not ſtedfaſt with God o.

n Who, though they outwardly and ſeemingly complied with the forms of Worſhip which God had preſcribed, yet did not direct, or prepare their hearts to the obedience and Service of God. o Who quickly diſcovered their Hypocriſie by their Apoſtaſie from God, and from the Religion which they had profeſſed.

* Amos 2. 15. † Heb. Throwing forth.

9. * The children of Ephraim p being armed and † carrying bows q, turned back in the day of battel.

p This paſſage concerns; Either, 1. The Tribe of Ephraim, and ſome exploit of theirs, wherein they met with this diſaſter; whether it were that mentioned, 1 Chron. 7. 21. or ſome other not particularly related in any other place of Scripture. For we muſt not think that all the Actions and Events of the ſeveral Tribes are recorded in Scripture, but only ſome of the moſt memorable ones. Or, 2. The ten Tribes, who are very frequently called Ephraim, becauſe that Tribe was the chief of them, and the ſeat of the Kingdom. And ſo this is referred by ſome to the Captivity of the ten Tribes, 2 Kings 17. Although the Hiſtorical references of this Pſalm ſeem not to go beyond David's time. Or rather, 3. All the Tribes and People of Iſrael, who are ſometimes deſigned by the Name of Ephraim, as Jer. 31. 9, 18, 20. Zech. 10. 7. as well they might be, becauſe of the Eminency of this Tribe, out of which came Joſhua their firſt Governour in Canaan, and in which the Ark of God continued for a long time, and whoſe people were both moſt numerous, and moſt valiant, and therefore they are fitly named for all to ſhew that this ſlaughter was not made amongſt them for any defect of power or courage in them, but meerly from God's juſt judgment upon them for their ſins here following. And that Ephraim is here put for all Iſrael, ſeems to be evident from the following Verſes, wherein the ſins, upon which this overthrow is charged, are manifeſtly the ſins of all the Children of Iſrael, and they who are here called Ephraim are called Jacob and Iſrael, v. 21. And ſo this paſſage is by divers Learned Interpreters referred unto that dreadful overthrow related 1 Sam. 4. wherein they did not ſtand to fight, but turned their backs and fled, as it is there expreſſed, which though it reached all Iſrael, yet Ephraim is particularly named, becauſe as the Ark, ſo the Fight was in that Tribe; and therefore it may be preſumed that the Ephraimites were a very conſiderable part of that Iſraelitiſh Army. And the Pſalmiſt having related this amazing providence and judgment of God upon his own people, he falls into a large Diſcourſe of the cauſes of it, to wit, the great and manifold and continual ſins of that and the former Generations, which having proſecuted from hence to Verſe 60. he there returns to this Hiſtory, and relates the ſad conſequences of that diſaſter, to wit, the captivity of the Ark, and God's forſaking of Shiloh and Ephraim, & removing thence to the Tribe of Judah and Mount Zion, the reaſon of which change of place he deſigned to give in the relation of this paſſage. q Which includes Arrows, and theſe being then the chiefeſt and moſt common Weapons are put for all other Arms.

10. They kept not the covenant of God, and refuſed to walk in his law r.

r Their diſobedience was accompanied with obſtinacy and contempt of God's Laws.

11. And forgat s his works, and his wonders that he had ſhewed them.

s Not hiſtorically, but practically. They did not ſo remember them as to love, and ſerve, and truſt that God of whoſe infinite Power and Goodneſs they had ſuch ample experience. Words of knowledge, ſuch as knowing, remembring, &c. in Scripture uſed frequently, comprehend affection and practice, as hath been oft obſerved.

12. Marvellous things did he in the ſight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, in the field t of Zoan u.

t (i.e.) In the Territory or Juriſdiction, not excluding the City it ſelf. In the like ſence we read of the field of Edom, and of Moab, Gen. 32. 3. and 36. 35. Numb. 21. 20. u An ancient, and eminent, and the Royal City of Egypt. See Numb. 13. 22. Iſa. 19. 11. and 30. 2, 3, 4.

* Exod. 14. 21. * Exod. 15. 8.

13. * He divided the ſea, and cauſed them to paſs through, and * he made the waters to ſtand as an heap.

* Exod. 13. 21. & 14. 24. Pſal. 105. 39.

14. * In the day time alſo he led them with a cloud x, and all the night with a light of fire.

x Which was very comfortable both for a ſhadow from the ſcorching heat of the Climate and ſeaſon, and for a companion and director in their journey.

* Exod. 17. 6. Numb. 20. 11. Pſal. 105. 41. 1 Cor. 10. 4.

15. * He clave the rocks y in the wilderneſs, and gave them drink as out of the great depths z.

y He uſeth the Plural number, becauſe it was twice done, once in Rephidim, Exod. 17. 6. and again in Kadeſh, Numb. 20. 1, 11. z In great abundance.

16. He brought ſtreams alſo out of the rock, and cauſed waters to run down like rivers a.

a Which did miraculouſly follow them in all their travels, even to the borders of Canaan. See Deut. 9. 21. Pſal. 105. 41. 1 Cor. 10. 4.

17. And

17. And they ſinned yet more againſt him, by provoking the moſt High in the wilderneſs b.

b Where they had ſuch ſtrong and ſingular obligations to obedience, both from the great things which God had then and there done for them, and from their dependance upon God's favour and help for their ſafety and ſubſiſtence. This was a great aggravation of their ſin and folly.

*Exod. 16. 2. 18. And *they tempted c God in their heart, by asking meat for their luſt d.

c Deſired a tryal and proof of God's power: as the next verſe plainly ſheweth. See Numb. 11. 4. d Not for their neceſſary ſubſiſtence for which they had Manna, but out of an inordinate and luxurious appetite.

*Numb. 11. 4. 19. *Yea, they ſpake againſt God: they ſaid, †Heb. Order. Can God † furniſh a table in the wilderneſs?

*Exod. 17. 6. Numb. 20. 11. 20. *Behold, he ſmote the rock, that the waters guſhed out, e and the ſtreams overflowed; can he give bread alſo? can he provide fleſh for his people?

e Which, all things conſidered, ſeems not ſo wonderful, ſince fountains of water ſometimes break forth unexpectedly from or through Rocks. But it is far more difficult to give us bread and fleſh, which we know not whether he can do. Or at leaſt we have juſt cauſe to doubt of his good will to us, who hath made ſuch a penurious proviſion for us, and denies us theſe common bleſſings of bread and fleſh, which he gives to the worſt of men.

21. Therefore the LORD heard this, and was wroth; ſo a fire was f kindled againſt Jacob, and anger alſo came up againſt Iſrael.

f Either properly, as it was Numb. 11. 1. or figuratively, the fire of God's anger, as it follows.

22. Becauſe they believed not in God, and truſted not in his ſalvation g.

g That he both could and would ſave them from the famine and deſtruction which they feared.

†Heb. The ſkies 23. Though he had commanded † the clouds from above, and opened the doors of heaven h.

h Which he compares to a Granary or Store-houſe, whereof God keeps the key, and either ſhuts or opens the doors of it, either gives or with-holds proviſions, as he ſees fit.

*Exod. 16. 4, 14. Pſal. 105. 40. Joh. 6. 31. 1 Cor. 10. 3. 24. * And had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven i.

i Which was made in heaven, or the air, and ſent down thence to the earth.

‖Or, every one did eat the bread of the mighty. 25. ‖ Man did eat angels food k: he ſent them meat to the full.

k Manna, ſo called either, 1. Becauſe it was made by the Miniſtry of Angels: Or rather, 2. Becauſe of its excellency, ſuch food as might befit the Angels, if they could eat food, and ſuch as hath ſome reſemblance with the bleſſed Angels in regard of its heavenly Original, its pure and ſpirituous ſubſtance, its vigour and efficacy, in preſerving and nouriſhing thoſe who uſed it according to God's appointment. Or this place may be tranſlated as it is in the Margent, Every one did eat the bread of the mighty, (i.e.) Even the common Iſraelites fed upon as delicious food as the greateſt Nobles and Princes uſe to do. l Which may belong, Either 1. To the fleſh mentioned in the following Verſes which God gave them even to ſatiety or glutting, which he threatned to do, Numb. 111. 18, 19, 20. Or rather, 2. To the Manna, of which he is here ſpeaking, which he gave them in ſuch plenty, that their deſire of other food could not proceed from their neceſſity, but merely from wantonneſs and luſt.

*Numb. 11. 31. †Heb. to go. 26. * He cauſed an eaſt-wind † to blow in the heaven: and by his power he brought in the ſouth-wind m.

m Either, He brought in firſt an Eaſtern, and afterwards a Southern Wind; or the wind was South-eaſt; from which Quarter theſe Quails might come as well as from the Weſt, where their more common abode is; this Work being confeſſedly miraculous.

†Heb. Fowl of wings. 27. He rained fleſh alſo upon them as duſt, and † feathered fowls n like as the ſand of the ſea.

n Heb. Winged Fowl, which is noted to ſhew that it was a ſupernatural work, whereby God took away from them the uſe of their Wings, and made them to fall into the hands of the Iſraelites.

28. And he let it fall in the midſt of their camp o round about their habitations.

o Heb. Of his Camp; either Iſrael's Camp; or God's Camp; for ſeeing Iſrael was God's people, and he dwelt among them, their Camp was his Camp.

29. So they did eat, and were well filled: for he gave them their own deſire p.

p What they deſired, both for quality and quantity.

*Numb. 11. 33. 30. They were not eſtranged from their luſt q: but * while their meat was yet in their mouths, q The ſence is either, 1. Whilſt their greedy appetite yet continued, and was not fully ſatisfied; before they began to loath it, as they did afterwards, Numb. 11. 20. Or, 2. Before they were deprived or deſtitute of their deſired food, whilſt they enjoyed it, and were ſtill feeding upon it, as the next Clauſe explains this. God's patience did not wait upon them till that food was ſpent, but fell upon them inſtantly.

†Heb. made to bow. ‖Or, young men. 31. The wrath of God came upon them, and ſlew the fatteſt of them r, and † ſmote down the ‖ choſen men of Iſrael.

r The moſt healthy and ſtrong, who probably were moſt deſirous of this food, and fed moſt eagerly upon it, and grew fatter by it, and leaſt ſuſpected their own danger.

*Numb. 15, & 16, & 17. 32. For all this * they ſinned ſtill: and believed not his wondrous works.

33. Therefore their days did he conſume in vanity ſ, and their years in trouble t.

ſ In tedious and fruitleſs marches hither and thither, ſometimes forward, and ſometimes backward, which they knew would never bring them in their own perſons to their promiſed and much deſired Land. t In manifold Diſeaſes, Dangers, Perplexities, and Horrors, of their own Minds and Conſciences.

34. When he ſlew them, then they ſought him u: and they returned x and enquired early after God y.

u They prayed to him to deliver them from their deadly dangers; which even Pharaoh frequently did. x To wit, from their Idols unto the outward worſhip of God: or being moved with fear, they ceaſed for the preſent from their groſly wicked courſes, which they might eaſily do, without a dram of true repentance, or hearty converſion to God. y Speedily and earneſtly ſought to God for eaſe, and ſafety, and comfort, as wicked men in ſuch caſes frequently do.

*Deut. 32. 4. 35. And they remembred that * God was their rock, and the high God their redeemer z.

z They conſidered that God and God alone had preſerved them in all their former exigencies, and that he only could now help them, and not thoſe Idols or Creatures which they had preferred before him, and therefore being driven by abſolute neceſſity they fled to him for relief.

*Hoſ. 11. 12. 36. Nevertheleſs, they did flatter him with their mouth, and they * lied unto him with their tongues a.

a They made glorious but falſe profeſſions and proteſtations of their ſincere reſolutions of future obedience, if God would ſpare them.

37. For their heart was not right with him b, neither were they ſtedfaſt in his covenant c.

b All their Confeſſions and Petitions were but hypocritical and forced, and did not proceed from an upright heart truly grieved for their former offences, and firmly reſolved to turn unto the Lord. c They diſcovered their hypocriſie by their apoſtaſie from God as ſoon as their danger was paſt.

†Heb. Atoned, or, expiated. Pſal. 65. 3. 38. But he being full of compaſſion † forgave their iniquity d, and deſtroyed them not; yea, many a time turned he his anger away, and did not ſtir up all his wrath e.

d Not ſimply and abſolutely, for ſo it is undeniably certain from the holy Scriptures that God pardons none but true penitents, ſuch as theſe were not, but reſpectively, and ſo far as not to deſtroy them at that time which he threatned, and was about to do, as the next words limit and explain it. He remitted their puniſhment, for iniquity is oft put for the puniſhment of it. Heb. He expiated their iniquity. He accepted of their atonement, or of their profeſſed repentance, ſo far as to compenſate it with a removal of this outward and preſent affliction; as he did alſo to wicked Ahab upon his hypocritical humiliation, 1 Kings 21. 29. And this God doth for the encouragement of all true penitents, who may hence learn how much greater and better recompences they may expect and ſhall receive from God. e But ſet bounds to it, and though he chaſtened them, yet he would not utterly deſtroy them, as they deſerved.

*Pſal. 103. 14. 39. For * he remembred that they were but fleſh f; a wind that paſſeth away and cometh not again g.

f Which here notes, either, 1. The corruption of their Natures, which was perpetually inclining them to ſin, and conſequently expoſing them to God's wrath, which muſt needs have conſumed them utterly and ſpeedily, if God had let looſe his anger upon them. See the ſame Argument uſed to a like purpoſe, Gen. 8.21. Or rather, 2. The frailty or infirmity of their Natures, as the next Clauſe interprets this; which is ſuch, that if I ſhould not reſtrain my wrath, I ſhould quickly cut off the body of this wicked people, and their children with them, whom I have promiſed to carry into Canaan, *Numb.*14.31. g That are quickly cut off, and when once they are dead they never return to this life.

z He commends David for the two neceſſary ingredients of a good Prince. 1. Integrity, whereby he ſincerely ſought the good and welfare of his people, avoiding and abhorring of thoſe counſels and courſes which were contrary thereunto. 2. Skilfulneſs; whereby he managed all the publick affairs with ſingular prudence, which is here aſcribed to his hands, not becauſe it was ſeated in them, but becauſe it was acted and diſcovered by them, and appeared in all his actions or adminiſtrations.

PSAL. LXXX.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm was Compoſed, either, 1. Upon the ſame occaſion with the former, to wit, the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Chaldæans, as moſt conceive: Which yet ſeems not probable, becauſe here is no mention of the Temple, nor of Jeruſalem, as there is in the foregoing Pſalm; nor of the Tribe of Judah, which was moſt concerned in that deſolation, but of Joſeph, Ver. 1. and of the Tribes of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, which were carried captive long before that time; nor do the expreſſions of this Pſalm import ſuch a deſolating judgment, as thoſe of the former do. Or, 2. Upon occaſion of the captivity of the ten Tribes, as ſome others think. But why then is Benjamin named, which is none of that number, nor went into captivity with them, but was joyned with Judah? Or, 3. Upon occaſion of ſome other calamity, or calamities which befel the Tribes of Iſrael after their diviſion into two Kingdoms, and before the captivity and deſtruction of either of them. In which time all the evils mentioned in this Pſalm did befal them, ſometimes in one Tribe or part, and ſometimes in another, as is manifeſt from their Hiſtory.

a It ſeems to be the name of a Muſical Inſtrument: though many ſeparate the latter part of the word from the former, and expound Eduth, a teſtimony, or witneſs between God and his people, of his relation to them, and of their dependance upon him.

1. GIve ear, O ſhepherd of Iſrael b, thou that leadeſt c Joſeph d like a flock, thou that dwelleſt between the cherubims e, ſhine forth f.

b Thou who haſt undertaken to feed and govern thy people of Iſrael, as a ſhepherd doth his flock, now perform thine Office, and reſcue thy flock from thoſe grievous Wolves which devour and deſtroy them. c Or, didſt lead formerly, though now thou haſt forſaken them. d (i. e.) The Children of Joſeph, or of Iſrael, as he now ſaid, this Clauſe being but a repetition of the former in other words. Compare Pſal. 77. 15. And the name of Joſeph, the moſt eminent of the Patriarchs both for his Dignity and Piety, and the right of primogeniture transferred upon him from Reuben, 1 Chron. 5. 1. is elſewhere put for all the ten Tribes, as Ezek. 37. 16, 19. Amos 5. 6. 15. and 6. 6. Zech. 10. 6. And for all the Tribes, as Pſal. 81. 5. Obad. v. 18. e Which were the Mercy-ſeat above the Ark. By which title he prudently and plouſly minds the ten Tribes of their revolt from God, and of the vanity of their ſuperſtitious Addreſſes to their Calves at Dan and Bethel, and of the neceſſity of their returning to the true worſhip of God before the Ark at Jeruſalem, if they deſired or expected any relief from him. And by this title it ſeems more than probable that this Pſalm was not made upon occaſion of the Babyloniſh Captivity, in and after which time there was no Ark nor Cherubims, nor do I remember that Daniel or any Prophets did then apply themſelves to God by that Title. See Dan. 9. f Out of the clouds wherein thou ſeemeſt to hide thy ſelf. Shew forth thy power and goodneſs to and for thy poor oppreſſed people in the face of thine and their Enemies.

2. Before Ephraim, and Benjamin, and Manaſſeh g, ſtir up thy ſtrength r, and † come and ſave us.

g (i. e.) Before all the Tribes of Iſrael; for whom he mentions only theſe three Tribes, either, 1. Becauſe of their ſpecial relation to Joſeph here named, Verſe 1. Ephraim and Manaſſeh being his Sons, and Benjamin his Brother, both by his Father and Mother: Or, 2. Becauſe theſe were eminent Tribes, Ephraim the Head of the Kingdom of the ten Tribes; Manaſſeh was planted and powerful on both ſides of Jordan; and Benjamin, becauſe the greateſt part of Jeruſalem and the Temple was in its lot. Or, 3. With reſpect and alluſion to the ancient ſituation of the Tabernacle in the wilderneſs, where theſe Tribes were placed on the Weſt-ſide of the Tabernacle, Numb. 2. 18, &c. in which the Ark was, which conſequently was before them. So the ſence is, O thou who didſt of old go forth before theſe Tribes, &c. do ſo again at this time. Or, 4. Becauſe theſe Tribes had a greater ſhare of the Calamities here deſigned than others; which might be very true, though it be not expreſſed in the ſacred Hiſtory, in which we have only the ſubſtance of things, and ſuch circumſtances are commonly omitted. r Which ſeems now to be aſleep, or idle and uſeleſs.

3. Turn us again, ſ O God, and * cauſe thy face to ſhine; and we ſhall be ſaved.

* Pſal. 4. 6.

ſ Either, 1. To our former quiet and flouriſhing eſtate: Or, 2. To thy ſelf; from whom Ephraim and Manaſſeh with the reſt of the ten Tribes have apoſtatized. See the like prayer of Elijah for them, 1 Kings 18. 37.

4. O LORD God of hoſts, how long † wilt thou be angry || againſt the prayer of thy people t?

t Thou art ſo far from anſwering our prayers whereby we ſeek to appeaſe thee, that by thy continuance and increaſe of our miſeries thou ſeemeſt to be the more incenſed againſt us by them.

5. Thou feedeſt them with the bread of tears, u and giveſt them * tears to drink in great meaſure.

* Pſal. 102. 9.

u Either with tears inſtead of bread, which I either want, or cannot eat becauſe my grief hath taken away my appetite: or with tears as frequent and conſtant as my eating is. See the like phraſe, Pſal. 42. 3.

6. * Thou makeſt us a ſtrife x unto our neighbours y, and our enemies laugh among themſelves z.

They are perpetually quarrelling with us, and ſeeking occaſions againſt us. y Who uſed and ought to live peaceably and kindly with us. z Inſult over us, and take pleaſure in our miſeries.

7. Turn us again, O God of hoſts, and cauſe thy face to ſhine, and we ſhall be ſaved.

8. Thou haſt brought a vine a out of Egypt b: * thou haſt caſt out the heathen c, and planted it.

a To which the Iſrael or Church of God is oft compared as Iſa. 5. 2. Jer. 2. 21. Ezek. 17. 6. Mat. 21. 33. b He alludes to the cuſtom of tranſplanting trees for their more advantageous growth. c The Nations of Canaan.

9. Thou preparedſt room d before it, and didſt cauſe it to take deep root e, and it filled the land.

d Or, didſt purge or cleanſe the Soil, taking out ſtones or sticks, or other roots or plants which might hinder its growth or fruitfulness. Thou didst root out those idolatrous and wicked Nations which might either corrupt or destroy them. e Thou gavest them a firm settlement in that Land.

10. The hills were covered with the shadow of it f: and the boughs thereof were like † the goodly cedars g.

f They grew so numerous, that they filled not only the fruitful valleys, but even the barren Mountains. g Far differing from ordinary Vines whose Boughs are weak and small, and creep upon the walls or ground.

11. She sent out her boughs unto the sea, and her branches unto the river h.

h They possessed or subdued the whole Land from the Mid-land Sea to the River Euphrates; which were the bounds allotted to them by God, Gen. 15. 18.

* Psal. 89. 40. Isa. 5. 5. 12. Why hast thou then * broken down her hedges i, so that all they which pass by the way do pluck her k?

13. The boar out of the wood l doth waste it, and the wild beast of the field doth devour it.

l Where Boars use to lodge, as it is noted by many Authors. By which he understands their fierce and furious enemies.

14. Return, we beseech thee, O God of hosts: look down from heaven, and behold and visit this vine;

15. And the vineyard m which thy right hand hath planted n, and the † branch o that thou madest strong p for thy self q.

m Or, the root, or stock, or plant, as others render it. n Which thou hast planted or fixed with thy might and power; whereof the right hand is both a sign or symbol and an instrument. o Heb. the son (i. e.) either, 1. The son of man, as it is more fully expressed, vers. 17. Or rather, 2. The branch; for as yet he continues the metaphor, which is called the son, to wit, of the root or stock mentioned in the former clause, as the Branches are called Daughters in the Hebrew Text, Gen. 49. 22. p Either, 1. By supporting it with stakes or walls upon which the vine groweth up: Or rather, 2. By causing it to grow in bulk and thickness, and consequently in strength. q For thy own especial delight and service and honour.

16. It ‖ is burnt with fire, it is cut down: they r perish at the rebuke of thy countenance s.

‖ To wit, thy vineyard or branch. r Thy people of Israel signified by the vine. So now he passeth from the Metaphor to the thing designed by it. s Through the effects of thine anger, without which their Enemies could do them no hurt.

* Psal. 89. 21. 17. * Let thy hand be upon t the man of thy right hand u, upon the son of man x whom thou madest strong for thy self.

t To protect and strengthen him. u Whom thy right hand planted, vers. 15. whom thou hast loved and respected even as thy right hand, which is very dear to us, Mat. 5. 30. and 18. 8. comp. 13. 7. thy Benjamin whom he mentioned, verse 2. to whose name he seems to allude, which signifies the son of the right hand (i. e.) a dearly beloved son, as Benjamin was to Jacob. x By man and son of man he understands either, 1. The Messias, oft called in Scripture the son of man, let him come, and let his Kingdom be established, and so thine Israel shall be saved and delivered out of all its troubles. Or, 2. The Royal Family, the house of David, in whose safety and welfare the happiness of the whole Nation was wrapt up. Or rather, 3. The people of Israel, who are oft spoken of as one Person, as God's son and first-born, Exod. 4. 22. and here as one vine. And seeing all the foregoing complaints have been concerning the calamities of the people of Israel, it seems most reasonable to understand this prayer to be made for them; the rather because the following clause here applyed to the man and son of man, whom thou madest strong for thy self, is used of the root or branch of the vine, vers. 15.

18. So will not we go back from thee y: quicken us z, and we will call upon thy name.

y This glorious favour of thine shall oblige us to love and serve thee, and trust in thee so long as we have a being, and no more to revolt from thee to Idolatry or wickedness, as we have too oft done. z Revive and restore us to our former tranquillity and happiness.

19 Turn us again, O LORD God of hosts, cause thy face to shine, and we shall be saved.

PSAL. LXXXI.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm seems to have been made for the use of the Church in solemn Feasts, particularly either upon every first day of the Month, or upon the first day of the seventh month which was celebrated with a more solemn blast of Trumpets, Levit. 23. 24. Numb. 29. 1. Because that month was more sacred than others by reason of the concurrence of divers Religious Solemnities in it.

To the chief musician upon Gittith a, a Psalm ‖ of Asaph.

a Of which Title see the Note on Psal. 8. 1.

1. SIng aloud unto God our strength b: make a joyful noise unto the God of Jacob.

b Who is all our refuge and safeguard against all our Enemies.

2. Take a psalm, and bring hither the timbrel, the pleasant harp with the psaltery c.

c All which Instruments were then prescribed and used in their solemn meetings.

3. Blow up the trumpet in the new moon d, in the time appointed, on our solemn Feast-day e.

d Which was a sacred and festival time, as appears from Numb. 10. 10. and 28. 11, 14. 2 Kings 4. 23. Isa. 66. 23. But this may be understood, either, 1. Generally of every New Moon. Or rather, 2. Specially of that New Moon, as the word may be rendred, which begun the seventh month; as may be gathered both from the following words, and by comparing this place with Levit. 23. 24. and Numb. 29. 1. Where this very day is called a day of blowing of Trumpets. e Or, for the day, or time of our solemn festivity; whereby may be understood either, 1. The day of the New Moon, on which the Trumpets were blown for the celebration of that solemn time. Or, 2. The seventh Month, which that New Moon did introduce or begin, and in which, besides other Solemnities; they kept the Feast of Tabernacles, which the Hebrew Doctors call the Feast by way of eminency, and Josephus affirms to have been the most sacred and the chief of all the Jewish Feasts.

4. For * this was a statute for Israel, and a law of the God of Jacob f.

* Lev. 23. 24. Numb. 10. 10.

f For this is no humane device but an appointment and command of the great God and your Lord.

5. This g he ordained in Joseph h for a testimony i, when he k went out l ‖ through the land of Egypt m: where I n heard a language that I † understood not o.

g To wit, the blowing of Trumpets. h Among the posterity of Joseph, to wit, the people of Israel, as is evident both from the foregoing Verse where they are called Israel, and from the following words in this Verse, where they are described by their coming out of Egypt, which was common to all the Tribes of Israel, who are sometimes called by the name of Joseph; of which see on Psal. 80. 1. i Either, 1. For a Law, which is oft called a testimony. Or rather, 2. For a witness and memorial of that glorious deliverance mentioned in the following words. For 1. That this was a statute and law he had expressed, vers. 4. which it is not likely that he would here repeat, especially in a more dark and doubtful phrase. 2. He seems to declare the end of that Law, which was to be a testimony. k To wit, God, he who ordained, as was now said. l As a Captain in the head, or on the behalf of his people. m To execute his judgments upon that Land or People. Or, against, &c. to destroy it. Or, out of it, as both ancient and other Interpreters render this Particle al, which is elsewhere put for meal, and meal is put for min, from or out of, as is manifest by comparing 2 Kings 21. 8. with 2 Chron. 33. 8. So this Text notes the time when this and the other Feasts were instituted; which was at, or presently after their coming out of Egypt, even at Sinai. n (i. e.) My progenitors, for all the successive Generations of Israel make one body, and are sometimes spoken of as one person. o Either, 1. The Language of God himself speaking from Heaven at Sinai, which was strange and terrible to me. Or rather, 2. The Egyptian Language, which at first was very ungrateful and unknown to the Israelites, Gen. 42. 23. and probably continued so for some considerable time, because they were much separated both in place and conversation from the Egyptians through Joseph's pious and prudent design. This

For the Phraſe ſee on Pſal. 18. 44. f i.e. Iſrael's time; the Relative belonging to the remoter Antecedent; as it is in many other places of Scripture, whereof I have formerly given Inſtances. PSAL. LXXXII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm contains an Admonition; Either, 1. To the chief Rulers of Iſrael, whether Judges or Kings, or their great Council called the Sanhedrim. Or rather, 2. To all the Rulers of the ſeveral Nations of the World, to whom this word might come? as may be gathered partly from the expreſſions here uſed, which are general and not peculiar to the Governors of Iſrael, and therefore not raſhly and unneceſſarily to be reſtrained; and partly from the laſt Verſe, where he mentions the whole earth and all nations, as concerned in the Contents of this Pſalm.

A Pſalm ‖ of Aſaph.

1. GOd ſtandeth a in the congregation of † the mighty b: he judgeth c among the gods d.

a As a Judge diligently to obſerve all that is ſaid or done there, and to give ſentence accordingly. The Judge ſits when he heareth Cauſes, but ſtandeth up when he giveth ſentence. Or ſtanding doth not note the poſture, but only the being or preſence of a perſon, as Iſa. 11. 10. Dan. 11. 20. Joh. 3. 29. Whence this Hebrew word is by ſome Learned Interpreters rendred is preſent, and by others, preſideth, as this word is uſed, 1 Sam. 19. 20. and 22. 9. b Or, of the gods, as it is explained and expreſſed in the next Clauſe; the Singular number being here, as it is frequently elſewhere, put for the Plural. By Gods, or the mighty, he underſtands Kings, or other chief Rulers, who are ſo called, becauſe they have their power and commiſſion from God, and act as his Deputies in his name and ſtead, and muſt give an account to him of all their actions. And by their Congregation he underſtands not a convention or aſſembly of ſuch perſons as ſeldom meet together, but either, 1. All Congregations or Aſſemblies of People in which Magiſtrates ſit to execute Juſtice. Or, 2. All perſons whatſoever of this high and ſacred Order or Number: for the Hebrew word here rendred Congregation, doth not always ſignifie an Aſſembly of perſons met together in one place, but ſometimes notes all the particular perſons of or belonging to ſuch a ſort and body of men, though diſperſed in divers places, as Pſal. 26. 5. I have hated the congregation of evil doers (i.e.) all evil doers. Prov. 21. 16. he ſhall remain in the congregation of the dead, (i.e.) ſhall be one of that number and ſtate. See alſo Joſ. 22. 20. Pſal. 74. 19. Some render it as it is in the Hebrew, in the congregation of God, in his own Congregation, the Noun being put for the Pronoun, as is uſual in the Hebrew Text, (i.e.) in the Conventions or Tribunals of Princes or Rulers, which he rightly calls his, becauſe their Authority is wholly derived from him. But the former Expoſition ſeems more agreeable both to the following words, and to the ſcope and whole body of the Pſalm. c Accurately obſerveth all their carriages, and paſſeth ſentence upon them accordingly. d (i.e.) Judges and Magiſtrates, who are called Gods below, vers. 6. and Exod. 12. 12. and 22. 28. compared with Acts 23. 5. Pſal. 138. 1. and of whom this is expounded, Joh. 10. 34, 35.

* Deut. 1. 17. 2 Chron. 19. 7.

2. How long will ye judge unjuſtly e, and * accept the perſons f of the wicked? Selah.

e The Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh to them in God's Name, and reproves them for their continued and reſolved unrighteouſneſs in their publick Adminiſtrations. f By over-looking the merits of the cauſe, and giving ſentence according to your reſpect or affection to the perſon.

† Heb. Judge.

3. † Defend the poor and fatherleſs g: do juſtice to h the afflicted and needy.

g So far as juſtly you may; as this Clauſe muſt be limited by comparing this with Lev. 19. 15. h Heb. Juſtifie, to wit, when his cauſe is juſt, and he is oppreſſed by a potent Adverſary.

* Prov. 24. 11.

4. * Deliver the poor and needy i: rid them out of the hand of the wicked.

i Theſe he recommends to the ſpecial care and protection of Magiſtrates, becauſe ſuch are commonly neglected and cruſhed by men in higher place and power, and they are unable to right themſelves.

5. They k know not l, neither will they understand m; they walk on n in darkneſs o: all the

k The Magiſtrates of whom this Pſalm treats. l To wit, the truth and right of the cauſe, nor the duty of their place. Men are oft ſaid in Scripture not to know what they do not love and practiſe. m This their ignorance is wilful and affected: they will not ſearch out the truth, and they ſhut their eyes leſt they ſhould ſee what they would not. n They perſiſt and proceed: it is not one raſh and tranſient action, but their conſtant courſe. o Either, 1. In ignorance: Or, 2. In their ſinful and unrighteous courſes, as darkneſs is taken Eph. 4. 17, 18. and 5. 8. 1 Joh. 1. 6. Being blinded by their corrupt affections and intereſts, Exod. 23. 8. p This corruption of the ſupreme Rulers doth flow from them to their inferior Officers and Members, and manifeſtly tends to the diſſolution of all civil Societies; partly by ſubverting that order and honeſty by which they are ſupported; and partly by provoking God the Governour of the World to deſtroy them for their wickedneſs.

* Joh. 10. 34. 6. * I have ſaid, Ye are gods q, and all of you r are children of the moſt High s.

q I have given you my name and power to rule your people in my ſtead. r Not only the Rulers of Iſrael, but of all other Nations; for all powers are ordained by God, Rom. 13. 1. s Repreſenting my perſon, and bearing both my Name and lively Characters of my Majeſty and Authority, as children bear the name and image of their Parents.

7. But ye ſhall die t like men u, and fall like one of the princes x.

t But let not this make you inſolent and ſecure; for though you are gods by name and office, yet ſtill you are mortal men, you muſt die and give up your account to me your ſuperiour Lord and Governour; and you ſhall die and fall by the hands of my Juſtice, if you perſiſt in your unjuſt and ungodly courſes. u Or, like ordinary men, as the Hebrew word, Adam, ſometimes ſignifies, as it doth Pſal. 49. 2. If it be objected, that there Adam is oppoſed to Iſh, which notes perſons of an higher rank; in like manner it is here oppoſed to the ſame ſort of men, who are here called gods. x So the ſence is, You (who are eſteemed by your ſelves and others, gods upon earth) ſhall fall, (or die, as he ſaid in the former branch: falling being oft put for dying, with this addition that it notes not an ordinary, but a violent and judicial death, as Exod. 19. 21. Jer. 39. 18. Hoſ. 5. 5.) like one (or, like other, or others, as this very word is rendred, Judg. 16. 7, 11. which alſo is expounded there, v. 17. like every or any) of the princes, (i. e.) as other unrighteous or tyrannical Rulers have done in all foregoing Ages, and ſtill do, your eyes ſeeing it; even in like manner ſhall you, to whom now I ſpeak, fall and periſh, if you do not learn by their Examples. But theſe words are by ſome late Learned Interpreters tranſlated otherwiſe, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew words and accents, And you, O ye princes (or, you that are princes, before called gods) ſhall fall like one, or like every, or any of them, (i. e.) of the ordinary men laſt mentioned. So there is only an Ellipſis of the Pronoun, which is frequent in the Hebrew Language. Or, ſhall fall together, as this word is tranſlated, Ezra 2. 64. and 3. 9. or alike, as it is rendred, Eccleſ. 11. 6. in like manner, to wit, as ordinary men do. Your god-head ſhall be taken away from you, and your death ſhall ſhew you to be but mortal men as others are.

8. Ariſe, O God, judge the earth y: for thou ſhalt inherit all nations z.

y Seeing the ſtate of the world is ſo univerſally corrupt and deſperate, and thy Vicegerents betray their truſt, and oppreſs and ruine the Nations of the earth, whom they were appointed to preſerve, do thou therefore, O God, take the ſword of Juſtice into thine own hand, and maintain the cauſe and rights of the oppreſſed againſt their potent Oppreſſors, and let truth and juſtice be eſtabliſhed in all the parts of the earth. For as thou waſt the Creator, ſo thou ſtill art the ſupreme and unqueſtionable Lord and Poſſeſſor and Ruler of all Nations, and therefore do thou protect and reſcue them from all thoſe who invade thine and their rights. And although at preſent thou ſeemeſt in ſome ſort to confine thy care to Iſrael, and to neglect other Nations, yet there is a time coming when thou wilt bring all Nations to the knowledge of thy ſelf, and the obedience of thy Laws, and govern them by thy Son and Spirit which thou wilt ſend into the world for that purpoſe. Do thou therefore preſerve them in the mean time till that bleſſed day cometh, and haſten the coming of it.

PSAL. LXXXIII.

The ARGUMENT.

The occaſion of the Pſalm is manifeſt from the body of it; and it ſeems to have been a dangerous attempt, and conſpiracy of divers neighbouring Nations againſt Iſrael or Judah. Probably it was that which is mentioned 2 Chron. 20. Wherein all the people here mentioned might be ingaged, though all of them be not there expreſſed; this being uſual in the ſacred Hiſtorians for the latter to record ſome paſſages which the former omitted. Or it may belong to ſome other Hiſtory. Or it may have a more general reſpect unto the ſeveral Enterprizes and Combinations of all theſe people againſt them, ſome at one time, and ſome at another.

a Plead for us, not by words, but by thine actions. b Or, be not deaf to our prayers, and to the blaſphemies of thine and our Enemies. c (i. e.) Unactive and unconcerned for us.

2. For lo, thine enemies d make a tumult e, and they that hate thee, have liſt up the head f:

d They are not only enemies to us thy people, but alſo to thy Will, and Name, and Glory. e Or, make a tumultuous noiſe, both with their tongues reproaching thee, and threatning us, and with their arms. f Are grown potent, and inſolent, and ſcornful.

3. They have taken crafty counſel againſt thy people, and conſulted againſt thy hidden ones g.

12. Who ſaid, let us take to our ſelves the houſes of God ſ in poſſeſſion:

ſ The Houſes and Lands of the Iſraelites, which their God, as they pretend, gave them in Canaan, to which they have no rightful rightful Title. For that we ſee was formerly objected by the Ammonites, Judg. 11. 13. who were a chief Party in this War. So they ſeem to call them houſes of God, by way of Irony and Deriſion.

13. O my God, make them like a wheel t: as the Stubble before the wind.

t Whereas they promiſe to themſelves a ſure and firm poſſeſſion in our Land, let them be like a wheel, or a round ball, which being once tumbled down from the top of an hill, runs down with great force and ſwiftneſs, and ſtays not till it comes to the bottom, and there alſo is very unſtable, and ſoon removed.

17. Let them be confounded and troubled for ever: yea, let them be put to ſhame, and periſh y:

y But thoſe of them that will not humble themſelves before thee, let them be utterly deſtroyed.

18. That men may know z, that thou whoſe name alone is JEHOVAH, art the moſt high over all the earth ‖.

z Or, that they may know, to wit, by coſtly experience, even by their own ruin, what they would not know by information for their own good. ‖ The moſt high God, and the God not only of his People Iſrael, as the Heathen fanſied, and as their Gods were confined to their particular and ſeveral Territories, but the God and Governour of all the Nations and Parts of the Earth.

PSAL. LXXXIV.

The ARGUMENT.

The Author of this Pſalm ſeems to have been David, partly becauſe it is aſcribed to no other, and partly becauſe it is moſt agreeable to his ſtyle and condition, and the occaſion of it, his baniſhment or abſence from the place of God's Worſhip: either, 1. In Saul's time, which ſuits not with Verſe 7. for then the Tabernacle was not in Zion. Or rather, 2. During Abſalom's Rebellion.

To the chief Muſician upon Gittith, a Pſalm ‖ for the ſons of Korah.

1. HOw amiable are thy tabernacles a, O LORD of hoſts!

a Thy tabernacle, called tabernacles: Either, 1. Becauſe it conſiſted of ſeveral parts: Or, 2. To note its excellency; as Behemoth or Beaſts is put for one eminent beaſt, Job 40. 15. and wiſdoms for excellent wiſdom, Prov. 1. 20.

*Pſal. 42. 1, 2. and 63. 1.

2. * My ſoul longeth, yea, even fainteth b for the courts c of the LORD: my heart and my fleſh crieth out d for the living God.

b Or, is conſumed, with grief, for want of them, and with vehement deſire to enjoy them, and with the deferring and diſappointment of his hopes. See Prov. 13. 12. c To enter into the outward Court with the people, and to ſee what is done by the Prieſts in the inner Court, and to joyn with them in their religious Exerciſes. d With a doleful cry, of which this word is uſed alſo, Lament. 2. 19. which elſewhere and commonly ſignifies a joyful ſhout. The ſence is, my ſoul and body are pained; or the paſſion of my heart maketh my tongue cry out.

3. Yea, the ſparrow hath found an houſe e, and the ſwallow a neſt for her ſelf, where ſhe may lay her young, even thine altar f, O LORD of hoſts, my king, and my God.

e (i. e.) An Habitation, to wit, a Neſt, as it here followeth. f Or nigh (as this Hebrew Particle eth is elſewhere uſed, and as it is rendred by the Septuagint and the Chaldee, Judg. 4. 11.) thine Altar, Heb. Altars, that of Burnt-offerings, and the other of Incenſe. At, or near which, theſe Birds might well and truly be ſaid to have their Neſts, becauſe they were either in ſome part of the Tabernacle or Temple in which the Altars were; or in ſome Buildings belonging, or near at leaſt to it.

4. Bleſſed are they that dwell in thy houſe g: they will be ſtill praiſing thee h. Selah.

g That conſtantly or frequently reſort to, and abide in thy Houſe; either the Prieſts and Levites, who kept continual watch there; or other devout Jews who were there perpetually, as Anna, Luk. 2. 37. h For they are continually employed in that bleſſed and glorious work of praiſing and ſerving thee, in the Place which thou haſt appointed for that end.

5. Bleſſed is the man whoſe ſtrength is in thee i: in whoſe heart are the ways of them k, i Who truſteth in thee as his only ſtrength and refuge and portion. Or, who hath ſtrength in (or rather for, as the Hebrew prefix Beth is frequently uſed, as hath been noted again and again) thee (i. e.) who hath (or, who uſeth: for having is ſometimes put for uſing; of which ſee Mat. 13. 12. 1 Cor. 7. 2.) ability of body and mind for thee and for thy ſervice; or for that Journey, which here he ſeems to inſinuate, and in the following words and verſes he particularly deſcribes. For it muſt be conſidered that all the Males of Iſrael were obliged to come to the Tabernacle or Temple thrice in a year, Exod. 34. 23, 24. and that ſome of them lived at a great diſtance, and conſequently were to take a long and troubleſome Journey, which alſo might at ſome Times and Places be accompanied with hazards and other inconveniencies; and therefore ſuch as wanted either courage or bodily ſtrength, might be diſcouraged or hindred from undertaking it, and from the enjoyment of God in his ſolemn and publick Worſhip. Which though in ſome caſes it might not be their ſin, yet ſurely it was a great affliction and infelicity; and conſequently it was a bleſſed thing to be freed from thoſe impediments, as the Pſalmiſt here obſerves. k (i.e.) Of thoſe men; for though man be the ſingular number, it is underſtood collectively of all that ſort or company of men. But theſe words of them, are not in the Hebrew, and, as ſome learned Men have obſerved, ſeem to diſturb or darken the ſence. Others therefore ſeem to render the words better and more agreeably to the Hebrew Text, in whoſe heart are thy (which Pronoun is oft underſtood) ways, to wit, thoſe ways which lead to thy houſe; or, the ways, ſo called emphatically, or by way of eminency, the ways of (or to) Zion, as they are called Lam. 1. 4. as is evident from the ſeventh Verſe of this Pſalm. So the meaning is, Bleſſed are they whoſe thoughts and affections are much and ſtrongly fixed upon the high-ways, and their journeys to Zion, who have both ſtrength of body, as is ſaid in the former branch, and readineſs of heart, as is here added, to go to Zion; which are the two qualifications requiſite for that journey. Bleſſed are they whoſe hearts are ſet upon Zion, and their journeys thither; that are continually, or from time to time ſtirring up, and beſpeaking themſelves and others as they did, Jer. 31. 6. Ariſe ye, let us go up to Zion unto the Lord our God. As when a man's heart is knit in true friendſhip to one that lives at ſome diſtance from him, he is oft thinking with great deſire and delight of the Place where he dwelleth, and of the way leading to it.

6. Who paſſing l through the valley ‖ of Baca m, make it a well n: the rain alſo † filleth the pools o.

l Or, being uſed to paſs: for he ſeems not to ſpeak of one particular act, but of a common courſe or cuſtom. m A Place ſo called, which ſome Jewiſh and other Writers affirm to have been a very dry place, and therefore incommodious for Travellers in thoſe hot Countries, and in hot ſeaſons. Which Place may be here mentioned not excluſively to other ways and paſſages, for this high-way being but one, and on one ſide of Jeruſalem, could not be a general way for all the Iſraelites thither, but ſynecdochically for all Places of like nature, which made their journey to Jeruſalem unpleaſant, or inconvenient. But their zeal for God's ſervice did eaſily overcome this and other difficulties. Or, the valley of tears, as this valley might be called, for the trouble or vexation which Travellers found there, by reaſon of drought, or otherwiſe. n Or, wells, (i.e.) they dig divers little pits or wells in it for their relief. This trouble they willingly undertook, rather than to neglect the opportunity of going up to Jeruſalem at their ſolemn times. And poſſibly they did this, not only for themſelves, but for the benefit of other Travellers who came after them; whereby they ſhewed both their piety and charity. o God recompenſeth their diligence in making Pits, or little Pools, or Ciſterns, with his Bleſſing, ſending rain, wherewith they may be filled, and the thirſty Travellers refreſhed. Poſſibly the words may be thus rendred, which is more agreeable to the order of the Hebrew Text, yea, or alſo, (and ſo the Hebrew Particle Gam,) hath that emphaſis, which, as ſome learned Interpreters obſerve, is not given to it in other Tranſlations. They do not only make little Pits or Wells (as it was now ſaid) but alſo Pools or Ciſterns, for this Hebrew word is by the Learned rendred both ways) which, ſo the Relative Particle ticle is to be understood, as it is very frequently in many Texts of Scripture) the rain filleth, or may fill, (i.e.) which may receive and keep the rain which God sendeth for the refreshment of these Travellers, whose great numbers made the provision of water more necessary. But it is not necessary to understand this and the foregoing Clause, of what these Passengers did for their own use, as they travelled through this or such like Places, but it may be meant of what pious persons did before that time, who, having their hearts set upon God's House, and the pathways leading to it, as was said Verse 5. and being desirous to advance the Worship of God, and to encourage the people to come to Jerusalem, endeavoured to make those ways (some parts whereof were very incommodious) easie and convenient; and particularly, because those Eastern Countries were hot and dry, and springs of water were scarce there; as we may learn from *Gen.*26.15. and *Judg.*1.15. and many other passages of sacred Scripture, and other Authors, which was a great annoyance to Travellers; they made these Pits, and Pools, or Cisterns, in such Places where they were most necessary, and through which great numbers of people passed in their journey to the House of God.

† Heb. the God of gods shall be in Zion. So Gr.

7. They go ‖ from strength to strength p, † every one of them in Zion appeareth before God q.

p The further they travel onward in that way, instead of being faint and weary, as Travellers in such cases use to be, they grow stronger and stronger, being greatly refreshed with the comfortable end of their journey expressed in the following words. Or, they go from company to company. For they used to travel in Troops or Companies for many Reasons, and some Companies were before others, accordingly as they were nearer to the Place of Worship, or more diligent or expeditious in their Travel. And such as were most zealous, would use their utmost endeavours to out-strip others, and to overtake one company of Travellers after another, that so they might come with the first unto God in Zion. q This is here added as the blessed design and fruit of their long and tedious Journey, as that which put life into them, and made them bear all inconveniences with great chearfulness, they are all graciously admitted into the presence of God in Zion. But the words are and may be otherwise rendred, until every one of them appear before the God of gods in Zion. Or, the God of gods shall be seen (or useth to appear, or manifest himself: for the future Tense oft notes the continuance of the action) in Zion. Which is mentioned in the Close as the reason of that affection and industry which is described in the foregoing passages.

8. O LORD God of hosts r, hear my prayer s: give ear, O God of Jacob, Selah.

r Who canst easily remove and subdue those Enemies of mine who banish and keep me from the place of thy worship. s In restoring me to thy house and service; which is my chief desire, vers. 2, 3.

9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face t of thine anointed u.

t Do not turn away thine eyes from him as men do from those whom they hate or despise, but cast a favourable eye towards him. By face he means either his person, the word face being oft redundant, as it is Gen. 43. 3. or his state and condition. u Either, 1. Of Christ, whose proper name is the Messiah, or the anointed. So the meaning may be, Lord, I deserve not one good look from thee, because by my great wickedness I have procured thy just displeasure, and this banishment; but look upon thy Christ, whose coming and meritorious passion, though future to us, is present to thee, and for his sake look upon me. Or, 2. Of me, who, though a vile sinner, am thine anointed King. 2 Sam. 12. 7. and 23. 1.

10. For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand x: † I had rather be a door-keeper y in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness z.

x Understand elsewhere; which is necessary to compleat the sence: or, in the tents of wickedness; which may be supplied out of the next clause. Such Ellipses are usual in Scripture, as Psal. 91. 7. at thy side (i. e.) left side, Prov. 9. 1, &c. y Which was generally held a mean and contemptible Office, and belonged to the common Levites, 1 Chron. 9. 19. and 26.1. and therefore might seem very dishonourable for David. z Than to live in the greatest glory and plenty and pleasure; which is ordinarily the lot of wicked men, as David observed before, Psal. 17.14. and 73.6, 7. and elsewhere.

* Gen. 15. 1. Psal. 119. 114. * Psal. 34. 9, 10.

11. For the LORD God is a sun a and * shield b: the LORD will give grace c and glory d: * no good thing e will he withhold from them that walk uprightly f.

a To enlighten and quicken and direct and comfort all his people; whereas they that live without God in the world walk in darkness, and know not whither they go, as is said, Joh. 12. 35. b To save his people from all their Enemies, and from those dreadful and deadly miseries which attend all other men. c His favour and friendship, which is better than life, Psal. 63. 3. and all the blessed fruits of it. d Not the vain-glory and splendour of this World, of which David would not have spoken so magnificently, because upon all occasions he expresseth a great contempt of those things, but the honour which comes from God here, and that eternal and ineffable Glory laid up for God's people in the future world. e Nothing that is truly good in it self, and which is good for them: for sometimes afflictions, which are evil in themselves, are good and necessary, and highly advantageous to good men: and the good things of this world would do them much hurt; which is verified by frequent experiments. f That worship God sincerely, and order their conversations aright. Which clause David seems to me, to add designedly to prevent or remove an objection against what he had now said, which might be taken from his own case, whereby it appeared that God was no such sun or shield to him, but exposed him to great and sore calamities. Which being certain and evident, David here assigns the true reason of it, which was not from any defect in God's goodness and sufficiency, but only from his own gross miscarriages whereby he had clouded this sun, and cast away this shield, and forfeited these priviledges by departing from his integrity.

12. O LORD of hosts, * blessed is the man that trusteth in thee g. * Psal. 2. 12.

g Who, though he be deprived of the opportunity of paying that outward Worship to thee, which is appropriated to thy House, yet giveth thee that inward worship which is more valuable in thy account, and placeth his chief trust and hope and happiness in thee alone.

PSAL. LXXXV.

The ARGUMENT.

This Psalm is thought to have been made after the Peoples return from the Babylonish Captivity: wherein he partly gives God thanks for that glorious deliverance; and partly implores God's mercy in compleating that work, and rescuing his People from the Relicks of their Bondage, and from the vexation which they had by their Neighbours after they were returned to Canaan.

To the chief musician. A Psalm ‖ for the sons of Korah. ‖ Or, of.

1. LORD, thou hast been ‖ favourable unto thy land a: thou hast brought back the captivity b of Jacob.

a (i. e.) unto thy people, in removing the sad effects of thy displeasure. b The Captives, as that word is used, Psal. 14. 7. and 68. 18. and elsewhere.

* Psal. 32. 1.

2. * Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people, thou hast covered all their sin, Selah c.

c So as not to impute it to them, or to continue the punishment which thou didst inflict upon them for it.

‖ Or, thou hast turned thine anger from waxing hot.

3. Thou hast taken away all thy wrath d: ‖ thou hast turned thy self from the fierceness of thine anger.

d Those Calamities which were the effects of thy just wrath conceived against us.

4. Turn us e, O God of our salvation, and cause thine anger towards us to cease f.

e Either, 1. Convert us. As thou hast brought back our bodies to thy Land, so bring back our hearts to thy self, from whom many of them to this day are alienated. Or rather, 2. Restore us to our former tranquillity, and free us from the troubles which we yet groan under from our malicious Neighbours and Enemies. For this best suits with the following Clause of the Verse, which commonly explains the former. f He prudently indeavours to take away the root and cause of their continued miseries, to wit, God's anger procured by their sins.

5. Wilt thou be angry with us for ever? wilt thou draw out thine anger to all generations?

6. Wilt thou not revive us again g: that thy people may rejoice in thee?

g Thou hast once revived us in bringing us out of Captivity, give us a second reviving in bringing home the rest of our Brethren, and in rebuking and restraining the Remainder of our Enemies wrath.

7. Shew us h thy mercy, O LORD, and grant us thy salvation.

h (i.e.) Grant it to us, as the next words explain it, and as ſhewing ſignifies, Pſal. 4. 6. So alſo Pſal. 60. 3. and 71. 20. Or, manifeſt thy ſecret purpoſe of mercy to us by thy providential Diſpenſations.

8. I will hear i what God the LORD will
* Zech. 9. 10. ſpeak k: for * he will ſpeak peace l unto his people, and to his ſaints m: but let them not turn again to folly n.

i (i.e.) Diligently obſerve. And the Pſalmiſt by declaring what he would do, teacheth all the Iſraelites what they ought to do. Or, he ſpeaks in the name of all the people of God. k Either by his Prophets or Meſſengers: or by the works of his providence; for that alſo hath a voice. What Anſwer God will give to theſe my prayers. l For I am aſſured from God's gracious nature and declared will and promiſe, that he will give an anſwer of peace. m Which clauſe ſeems to be added by way of explication and reſtriction, to ſhew that this glorious priviledge did not belong to all that were called God's people, but only to thoſe that were truly and really ſuch, even to his Saints or holy ones. n (i.e.) To ſin, which in Scripture is commonly called folly. This is added as a neceſſary caution, but when God ſhall ſpeak peace to his people, let them not grow wanton and ſecure, nor return to their former wicked courſes; which if they do, they will provoke God to repent of his kindneſs to them, and to inflict further and ſorer judgments upon them. Others render the place, And they will not, or That they may not return to folly. But the particle al being prohibitive, our Tranſlation ſeems to be better.

9. Surely his ſalvation o is nigh them that fear
* Zech. 2. 8. him p: that * glory may dwell in our land q.

o That compleat ſalvation and deliverance for which all the Iſrael of God do pray and wait; even the Redemption of Iſrael by the Meſſiah; of which not only Chriſtian, but even Jewiſh Writers underſtand this place; and to which the following paſſages do moſt properly and perfectly belong. And the Pſalmiſt might well ſay of this Salvation that it was nigh, becauſe the ſeventy weeks determined by Daniel for this work, chap. 9. 24. were now begun, this Pſalm being written after Daniel's time. p The true Iſrael of God, even all thoſe that love and fear him. By which words he both excludes all hypocritical Iſraelites from this ſalvation, and tacitly aſſigns it to all that fear God, whether Jews or Gentiles. q And when that Salvation ſhall come we ſhall be freed from all that ſcorn and contempt under which we now groan, and ſhall recover our ancient glory; and the glorious preſence of God, the moſt eminent tokens whereof we have now utterly loſt; and the God of Glory himſelf, even Chriſt, who is called the brightneſs of his Father's glory, Heb. 1. 3, comp. Joh. 1. 14. and the glory of Iſrael, Luk. 2. 32. ſhall come and viſibly dwell in this now deſpiſed Land.

10. Mercy and truth are met together: righteouſneſs and peace r have kiſſed each other ſ.

r This is to be underſtood, either 1. Of theſe Graces or Vertues in men. So the ſence is when that bleſſed time ſhall come, thoſe Virtues which now ſeem to be baniſhed from humane ſocieties ſhall be reſtored, and there ſhall be an happy conjunction of mercy or benignity: truth or veracity; righteouſneſs or faithfulneſs; and peace or peaceableneſs and concord. Or rather, 2. Of the Bleſſings of God, of which the whole context ſpeaks. And the ſence is, That great Work of Redemption by Chriſt ſhall clearly manifeſt and demonſtrate God's mercy in redeeming his People of Iſrael, and in the calling and converſion of the Gentiles; his truth in fulfilling that great promiſe of the ſending of his Son, which is the Foundation of all the reſt; his righteouſneſs in puniſhing ſin, or unrighteouſneſs in his Son, and in conferring righteouſneſs upon guilty and loſt creatures; and his peace or reconciliation to ſinners, and that peace of conſcience which attends upon it. ſ As friends uſe to do when they meet. See Exod. 4. 27. and 18. 7. So this is another expreſſion of the ſame thing.

11. Truth ſhall ſpring out of the earth t: and righteouſneſs ſhall look down from heaven u.

t Either, 1. Truth among men, which ſhall be ſo common amongſt all men, as if it grew out of the earth. Or rather, 2. The truth or faithfulneſs of God; which is moſt truly and fitly ſaid to ſpring out of the earth, partly becauſe it had long been hid and buried like a root in a dry ground, without any hopes of a reviving; from whence yet God made it to grow, as is noted, Iſa. 53. 2. and partly becauſe Chriſt, who is the truth, Joh. 14. 6. and a miniſter of the circumciſion (i.e. of the circumciſed, or of the Jews) for the truth of God to confirm the promiſes made unto the fathers, was born upon the earth of a Virgin's Womb. u Even God's Juſtice, which was offended with men, ſhall then be ſatisfied, and ſhall through Chriſt look down upon ſinful men with a reconciled and ſmiling countenance.

12. Yea, the LORD ſhall give that which is
* Pſal. 67. 6. good x: and * our land ſhall yield her increaſe.

x (i.e.) All that is good in it ſelf and for us, all ſpiritual and temporal Bleſſings.

13. * Righteouſneſs ſhall go before him y: * Pſal. 89. 14.
and ſhall ſet † us in the way of his ſteps z. † Heb. her ſteps in the way, or, his ſteps in the way. So Gr.

y As his Harbenger or Attendant. He ſhall work and fulfill all righteouſneſs, he ſhall glorifie and ſatisfie the righteouſneſs of God, and ſhall advance the practice of righteouſneſs and holineſs among men. z (i.e.) ſhall cauſe us to walk in thoſe righteous ways wherein he walketh, and which he hath preſcribed to us. But this us is not in the Hebrew, and may ſeem too liberal a ſupplement. And the words may be, and are by almoſt all other Interpreters, rendred otherwiſe, He (i.e. God) ſhall ſet (which may note his ſtability and conſtancy in ſo doing) it (to wit, righteouſneſs laſt mentioned) in the way of his ſteps, (i.e.) in the way wherein he walketh. So the ſence of this laſt clauſe is the ſame for ſubſtance with the former, as is very uſual in this Book; righteouſneſs in that clauſe goes before him, and in this it goes along with him.

2. Preſerve my ſoul, for I am ‖ holy c: O thou my God d, ſave thy ſervant that truſteth in thee e. ‖ Or, one whom thou favoureſt.

c Sanctified in ſome meaſure by thy Grace, and ſincerely devoted to thy ſervice. This David ſpeaks, not in a way of vain oſtentation, but partly as a powerful argument to move God to hear his prayers, becauſe he was one of that ſort of men to whom God had engaged himſelf by his Promiſe and Covenant; and partly by way of juſt and neceſſary vindication of himſelf from the cenſures of his Enemies who repreſented him to the world, as a groſs diſſembler, and ſecretly a very wicked man; concerning which he here makes a ſolemn appeal to God, deſiring audience and help from God upon no other terms, than upon this ſuppoſition, that he was an holy man. Which, by the way, favoureth of no more arrogancy than when he elſewhere profeſſeth his great love to and longing after God, his ſincere obedience to all God's commands, and his hatred of every falſe way, and the like. d By thy Covenant, and my own choice. e Whereby thou ſeemeſt obliged in honour, and by promiſe to help me.

3. Be merciful unto me, O Lord: for I cry unto thee ‖ daily. ‖ Or, all the day.

4. Rejoice the ſoul of thy ſervant: for unto thee, O LORD, do I lift up my ſoul f.

f The expreſſion notes fervent deſire joined with hope or expectation, as appears by comparing Deut. 24. 15. Jer. 22. 27.

5. * For thou, LORD, art good and ready * Verſ. 15. Joel 2. 13.
to forgive g: and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee h.

g Herewith he relieveth himſelf under the ſence of his guilt, whereby he had brought his preſent calamities upon himſelf. h To wit, in truth, as it is explained, Pſal. 145. 18. or with an upright heart: for if a man regard iniquity in his heart, God will not hear him, Pſal. 66. 18.

6. Give ear, O LORD, unto my prayer: and attend to the voice of my ſupplications i.

i He repeats and multiplies his requeſts both to eaſe his own troubled mind, and to prevail with God who is well pleaſed with his peoples importunity in prayer. See Luk. 18. 1, &c.

thee: for thou wilt anſwer me k.

k Whereof I have aſſurance both from the benignity of thy Nature, and from the truth and certainty of thy promiſes, and from my own and others experiences in former times.

8. Among the gods there is none like unto thee l, O LORD, * neither are there any works like unto thy works. * Exod. 15. 11. Deut. 3. 24. Pſal. 89. 6.

l Either for power or readineſs to hear and anſwer prayers. I am not now calling upon a deaf and impotent Idol, for then I might

I might cry my heart out, and all in vain, as they did, 1 Kings 18. 26, &c. but upon the Almighty and moſt gracious God,

9. All nations whom thou haſt made, ſhall come and worſhip before thee, O LORD; and ſhall glorifie thy name m.

m So true is that which I have now ſaid of thee, v. 8. that the time is coming when all the Nations of the Earth ſhall acknowledge it, and, forſaking their impotent Idols, ſhall worſhip thee alone. Which being a work of thy Power and Grace, clearly proves that no God is like to thee, and no works like thine. And thoſe words, whom thou haſt made, are added to prevent, or remove Objections concerning the inſuperable difficulty and incredibility of this work. The God, ſaith he, that made them can eaſily convince and convert them to himſelf.

10. For thou art great, and * doſt wondrous things n: * thou art God alone o.

n This is added as a reaſon either why the Nations ſhould own the true God, becauſe they ſhould ſee his wonderful Works; or why that great Work, v. 9. was not incredible, but ſhould certainly be accompliſhed. o And all the Idols of the Heathen are no gods, but vanities; as the Gentiles themſelves ſhall ſee and acknowledge.

* Pſal. 25. 4. and 119. 33. and 143. 8.

11. * Teach me thy way p, O LORD, I will walk in thy truth q: unite my heart r to fear thy name.

p Wherein thou wouldſt have me to walk. As thou haſt taught me by thy word, ſo alſo by thy Spirit enlighten my mind that I may clearly diſcern thy will and my duty in all conditions and circumſtances. q In the way of thy Precepts which are true and right in all things, as he ſaith Pſal. 119. 128. and the only true Rule of thy Worſhip, and the only true way to man's happineſs. r Ingage and knit my whole heart to thy ſelf and ſervice, and deliver me from inconſtancy and wavering, that I may not at any time, nor in the leaſt degree be withdrawn from thee either to any corrupt Worſhip, or to the love and purſuit of the luſts or vainities of this preſent evil world.

12. I will praiſe thee, O Lord my God, with all my heart: and I will glorifie thy name for evermore s.

PSAL. LXXXVII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm was doubtleſs compoſed after the Building of the Temple; and, as Learned Men think, and it ſeems probable, when the People were newly returned out of Babylon, and laboured under many diſcouragements about the return of moſt of their Brethren, and the difficulties which they met with in the rebuilding of their Temple and City.

A Pſalm or Song || for the ſons of Korah. || Or, of.

1. HIs foundation a is * in the holy mountains b.

a Whoſe foundation? Either, 1. The foundation, (i.e.) the argument or matter of this Pſalm or Song. So theſe words are thought to be a part of the Title, the words lying thus in the Hebrew Text, For the ſons of Korah a Pſalm or Song whoſe foundation is in the holy mountains. But, 1. The Hebrew word rendred Foundation is no where uſed in that ſence. 2. There is no example of any ſuch like Title in the Book of the Pſalms. Or rather, 2. Of the City or Temple of God, of which he ſpeaks in the following Verſes. And whereas the beginning is ſomewhat abrupt, which ſeems to be the only ground of the foregoing Expoſition, that is no unuſual thing in Scripture, and the Pronoun Relative, ſuch as this is, is oft put without any foregoing Antecedent, and the Antecedent is to be fetched out of the following words or Verſes: As Numb. 24. 17. I ſhall ſee him, or it, to wit, the ſtar, which follows afterward, Pſal. 103. 19. his word (i.e.) the Lords. Prov. 7, 8. to her houſe, (i.e.) the harlot's, mentioned v. 10. And eſpecially Cant. 1. 2. let him kiſs, to wit, my beloved, who is there underſtood, but not expreſſed, till v. 14. And the ground of that abrupt and imperfect ſpeech there ſeems to be the ſame with this here: for as the Church was there in deep meditation, and a great paſſion about her beloved, which cauſed that abruptneſs of ſpeech, which is uſual in ſuch caſes, ſo the Pſalmiſt's thoughts were ſtrongly fixed upon the Temple and City of God; and therefore this Relative his had a certain Antecedent in his thoughts, though not in his words. The word foundations may poſſibly be emphatical, becauſe this Pſalm might probably be compoſed when the foundations of the ſecond Temple were newly laid, and the old men, who had ſeen the Glory of the former Houſe, were dejected at the ſight of this, of which ſee Ezra 3. 11, 12. And ſo the meaning of this paſſage may be this, Be not diſcouraged, O ye Jews, that your Temple is not yet erected and built, but only the foundations of it laid, and thoſe too are mean and obſcure in compariſon of the Magnificence of your former Temple, but take comfort in this, that your Temple hath its foundations laid, and thoſe ſure and firm, ſure in themſelves, becauſe they are not laid in the ſand, nor in boggy or fenny grounds, but in the mountains; and ſure by divine eſtabliſhment, becauſe thoſe mountains are holy, conſecrated to God, and therefore maintained and eſtabliſhed by him. Or, he may uſe this word foundations in oppoſition to the Tabernacle, which was moveable, and without foundations, to note the ſtability and perpetuity of this Building. b Or, among, or within the holy mountains, to wit, in Jeruſalem, which was encompaſſed with mountains, Pſal. 125. 2. and in which were two famous mountains, to wit, Zion and Moriah. Or the Plural number is here put for the Singular, whereof we have ſeen examples formerly, and mountains are put for the mountain; either for the Mount Moriah, upon which the Temple ſtood: or for Mount Zion, which is mentioned in the next Verſe; which is often taken in a large and comprehenſive ſence, ſo as to include Moriah; in which ſence the Temple is ſaid to be in Zion, Pſal. 74. 2. and 76. 2. Iſa. 8. 18.

2. The LORD loveth the gates c of Zion d, more than all the dwellings of Jacob e.

c (i.e.) The City-gates being oft put for Cities, as Deut. 15. 7. and 16. 5. Pſal. 9. 14. d Largely ſo called, as was now ſaid, to wit, of Jeruſalem, which was built upon and near Mount Zion. He ſaith Zion rather than Jeruſalem, to intimate that he loved Jeruſalem for Zion's ſake, or for the Temple which is oft ſaid to be in Zion; which place he loved and choſe for his peculiar dwelling-place. e More than all other places of the Land of Canaan in which the Iſraelites dwelt. For although the Tabernacle was for a ſeaſon in ſome other parts of the Land, yet the Temple, the place of God's fixed reſidence, was no where but in this City.

3. Glorious things are ſpoken of thee, O city of God f, Selah.

f O Jeruſalem, though thou and thy Temple are yet in ſome ſort in your ruines, and deſolate and contemptible not only to thine enemies, but alſo in the eyes of thine own people, yet comfort thy ſelf with theſe great and glorious things foretold concerconcerning thee in the Holy Prophets, as Iſa. 62. 1, 7. and 65. 18, &c. and 66. 10, &c. Zech. 1. 14, &c. and 2. 4, 12. and 8. 3, &c. and 12. 2, &c. Among other things, it was foretold that the glory of the latter houſe ſhould be greater than of the former, Hagg. 2. 9. All which Prophecies are to be underſtood, as this place alſo is, of a Spiritual and Evangelical Glory accruing to the Jeruſalem, as by the birth and preſence of Chriſt in it, ſo alſo by the acceſſion of all People and Nations to it, of which he ſpeaks in the next Verſe.

4. I will make mention g of * Rahab h, and Babylon i, to them k that know me l: behold m, Philiſtia, and Tyre, with Ethiopia n: this man was born there o.

* Pſal. 89. 10. Iſa. 51. 9.

g (i.e.) I will reckon or account them in the number of my Children and Subjects. h (i.e.) Egypt, ſo called Pſal. 89. 10. Iſa. 51. 9. but whether from its pride or natural ſtrength, or figure, or ſhape, is not material. i Under theſe two and Philiſtia, the old and conſtant enemies of Iſrael, he ſeems to underſtand all the keeneſt enemies of the Iſrael or Church of God, who ſhall now be not only reconciled, but united to them; which alſo was foretold under the ſimilitude of the wolfs dwelling with the lamb, &c. Iſa. 11. 6. k Or, with or among them, as the prefix Lamed is frequently uſed. l To wit, truly, clearly, affectionately and practically, ſo as to love, ſerve and obey me, as this Phraſe is very frequently uſed in Scripture. And upon this account, not only Heathens, but wicked Iſraelites are ſaid not to know God, as 1 Sam. 2. 12. and oft elſewhere. m The notice of it as a thing new and ſtrange and comfortable. n The Nations on every ſide of them, for Tyrus was on the North, Ethiopia, or Arabia (for that ſeems rather to be meant by Cuſh, as hath been before obſerved) on the South, thoſe neareſt to them, and thoſe more remote from them, that lived in the uttermoſt parts of the earth, as this very Land is called, Mat. 12. 42. o Or, ſaying this man, &c. for this cohereth with the firſt words, thus, I will make mention of Rahab, &c. ſaying, this man (i. e.) theſe men or people now mentioned, the Singular number put collectively for the Plural; and the Scripture oft ſpeaks of a Nation as of one man, as Pſal. 25. 22. and 130. 8. was born there, or, in her, as it is expreſſed v. 5. to wit, in Zion, born by Adoption and Regeneration. See Joh. 1. 12. and 3. 3, 7. Gal. 3. 26. and 4. 26. 1 Pet. 1. 23. The Gentiles ſhall be ingraffed into the Jewiſh Church, and into all their Priviledges.

5. And of Zion p it ſhall be ſaid q, This and that man r was born in her: and the Higheſt himſelf ſhall eſtabliſh her s.

p (i.e.) Of Jeruſalem, or the Church of God. q It ſhall be mentioned by God, as was ſaid v. 4. and it ſhall be obſerved and acknowledged by men as a great and wonderful work of God. r (i.e.) Men of this and that Nation, (i.e.) of every Nation, indifferently, Jews or Gentiles, according to that prediction that Egypt and Aſſyria and Iſrael ſhould be all joyned together, and bleſſed and owned by God for his people, Iſa. 19. 24, 25. Heb. Man and man, (i.e.) every man or all ſorts of men without difference of Nations; as this very Phraſe, man and man, Lev. 17. 10, 13. is rendred every, or what-man; and as by day and day is meant every day, or from day to day, Eſth. 3. 4. Pſal. 61. 8. s And this ſhall not be a ſudden and tranſient, but a laſting work; Zion ſhall continue in its ſtrength and fertility, becauſe the Almighty God is her Founder and Protector, and will finiſh the work which he hath begun.

6. The LORD ſhall count when he writeth up the people t, that this man was born there, Selah.

t Or, his people. So it is only a defect of the Pronoun his, which is very frequent and eaſily underſtood out of the foregoing word, the Lord. The ſence is, when God, the Maker and Governour of this City, ſhall take a ſurvey of all his Citizens and Subjects. It is an alluſion to Princes or Governours of Cities that uſe to write and keep a Regiſter of all their people. Hence holy Men and true Iſraelites are ſaid to be written among the living in Jeruſalem, Iſa. 4. 3. Or, in the writing of the houſe of Iſrael, Ezek. 13. 9.

7. As well the ſingers as the players on inſtruments u ſhall be there: all my ſprings are in thee x.

u There ſhall be great rejoycing and praiſing God both with vocal and inſtrumental muſick for this glorious and ſtupendious work of the Converſion of the Gentiles. He deſcribes Evangelical Worſhip by Legal Phraſes and Cuſtoms, as the Prophets frequently do. x (i.e.) In Zion or the Church. Theſe words may be here added as the burden or matter of the Song, which theſe Singers are ſuppoſed to have ſung, and that either, 1. In their own names, and in the name of all the Zionites or people of God. So the ſence is, all our deſires and delights are in thee, all the ſprings of Mercy, Grace and Glory flow to us only in and thorow thee: for ſprings or fountains are oft put for all precious or deſirable things, as Pſal. 36. 9. Iſa. 12. 3. Hoſ. 13. 15. Or, 2. In God's name, whoſe words were frequently ſung by the Singers in the Old Teſtament. 2. So the ſence is, all the Springs or Fountains of good things, or of my Bleſſings are in Zion, or in the Church, out of which no true Bleſſings are to be expected or found. And this ſeems beſt to ſuit with the Phraſe, my Springs; partly, becauſe it ſeems more proper to call them God's Springs, who is the Author and Giver of them, than mens Springs who are only the receivers of them; and partly, becauſe this is more agreeable to the Phraſe and Uſage of Scripture which every where aſcribes and appropriates them to God.

PSAL. LXXXVIII.

The ARGUMENT.

This Pſalm was compoſed upon a particular occaſion, to wit, Heman's deep diſtreſs and dejection of mind almoſt to deſpair. But though this was the occaſion of it, it is of more general uſe for the inſtruction and conſolation of all good men when they come into ſuch deſpondencies, and therefore was by the direction of God's Spirit made publick, and committed to the Sons of Korah.

A Song or Pſalm ‖ for the ſons of Korah, to the chief muſician upon Mahulach a, Leannoth b, ‖ Maſchil of * Heman c the Ezrahite.

‖ Or, of.

a Which ſeems to be the name of the tune or inſtrument, as Pſal. 53. b This may be either the latter part of the proper name of the tune or inſtrument: or an appellative name, and ſo divers take it and render it, to ſing, or to be ſung, to wit, alternately or by turns. c Probably the ſame perſon who was famous in David's time both for his skill in Muſick, and for general wiſdom: of whom ſee 1 Kings 4. 31. 1 Chron. 6. 33. d As Ethan alſo is called 1 Kings 4. 31.

* 1 Chron. 2. 6.

1. O LORD God of my ſalvation e, I have cried day and night before thee.

e Who haſt ſo often ſaved me from former diſtreſſes, and, I hope, wilt do ſo at this time.

2. Let my prayer come before thee, incline thine ear unto my cry.

3. For my ſoul f is † full of troubles: and my life draweth nigh unto the grave.

f Properly ſo called; for that he was under great troubles of mind from a ſence of God's wrath and departure from him is evident from Verſe 14. 13, 16.

4. I am counted with them that go down into the pit g: I am as a man that hath no ſtrength.

g I am given up by my Friends and Acquaintance for a loſt man.

5. Free among the dead h, like the ſlain that lie in the grave, whom thou remembreſt no more i: and they are cut off ‖ from thy hand k.

h Well-nigh diſcharged from the warfare of the preſent life, and entred as a member into the ſociety of the dead; as Iſraelitiſh ſervants when they were made free, were thereby made Denizens of the Commonwealth of Iſrael. I expect no other freedom from my miſeries but that which death gives, as Job obſerves, Job 3. 17, 18. i Whom thou ſeemeſt wholly to neglect and to bury in oblivion: for he ſpeaks of theſe matters not as they are in truth, for he knew very well that forgetfulneſs was not incident to God, and that God did remember all the dead, and would call them to an account, but only as to ſence and appearance and the opinion of the World, and the ſtate and things of this life. k From the care and conduct of thy Providence. Which is to be underſtood as the former clauſe. Or, by thy hand. But our Tranſlation ſeems better to agree both with the foregoing branch which it explains and improves, and with the order of the words; for it ſeems improper after he had repreſented the perſons as dead, and in their graves, to add that they are cut off, to wit, by death.

6. Thou haſt laid me in † the loweſt pit, * in darkneſs, in the deeps l.

l Either firſt in the grave; the ſame thing being expreſſed in divers words, or ſecondly in hopeleſs and remedileſs calamities.

7. Thy wrath m lieth hard upon me, and * thou haſt afflicted me with all thy waves n, Selah.

* Pſal. 42. 7.

m Either firſt the ſence of thy wrath, or rather ſecondly the effects of it; as the next clauſe explains this. n With thy judgments, breaking in furiouſly upon me like the waves of the Sea.

8. * Thou haſt put away mine acquaintance far from me, thou haſt made e an abomination unto them o: I am ſhut up p, and I cannot come forth.

* Job 19. 13. Pſal. 142. 4.

o I am so sad a spectacle of thy vengeance, that my friends avoid and detest me, lest by conversing with me, they should either be filled with terrors, which men naturally abhor; or be made partakers of my guilt or plagues. p Either in the pit or deep mentioned, v.6. or in my own House or Chamber, being afraid or ashamed to go abroad.

9. Mine eye mourneth by reason of affliction, LORD, I have called daily upon thee, I have stretched out my hands unto thee q.

q Understand, without effect: for thou dost not hear nor answer me.

*Psal.6.5. 10. * Wilt thou shew wonders to the dead r? shall the dead arise and praise thee s! Selah.

r To wit, in raising them to live again in this World, as it is in the next clause. I know that thou wilt not. And therefore now hear and help me, or it will be too late. s To wit, amongst mortal men in this World.

11. Shall thy loving kindness be declared in the grave? or thy faithfulness in destruction t?

t I am not without hopes that thou hast a true kindness for me, and wilt faithfully perform thy gracious promises made to me, and to all that love thee and call upon thee in truth. But then this must be done speedily, or I shall be utterly uncapable of such a mercy.

12. Shall thy wonders be known in the dark u? and thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness x?

u In the grave, which is called the land of darkness, Job 10. 21,22. x In the grave, so called: Either, first, actively, because there men forget and neglect all the concerns of this life, being indeed but dead carcasses, without any sense or remembrance. Or rather, secondly, passively, because there men are forgotten, not only by men, as is noted, Job 24.20. *Psal.*31.12. but by God himself, as he complained, v. 5.

*Psal.89. 14. Heb. and Psal. 95.2. 13. But unto thee have I cried, O LORD, and in the morning shall my prayer * prevent thee y.

y (i. e.) Early come to thee before the ordinary time of Morning Prayer, or before the dawning of the Day, or the rising of the Sun. The sence is, Though I have hitherto got no answer to my Prayers, yet I will not give over praying nor hoping for an answer.

14. LORD, why castest thou off my soul? why hidest thou thy face from me z?

z This proceeding seems not to agree with the benignity of thy nature, nor with the manner of thy dealing with thy people.

* Job 6.4. 15. I am afflicted and ready to die, from my youth up a: while * I suffer thy terrors b, I am distracted.

a My whole life hath been filled with a succession of deadly calamities. O Lord, take some pity upon me, and let me have a little breathing space before I die. b Upon my mind and conscience, which do accompany and aggravate my outward miseries.

16. Thy fierce wrath goeth over me, thy terrors have || cut me off.

17. They came round about me || daily, like water c, they compassed me about together.

c As the Waters of the Sea encompass him which is in the midst and bottom of it.

18. Lover and friend hast thou put far from me d, and mine acquaintance into darkness.

PSAL. LXXXIX.

|| Or, a Psalm for Ethan the Ezrahite to give instruction.

* 1 Chron. 2.6.

a Either, first, He who is mentioned, 1 Kings 4.31. And then the Psalm is prophetical of things to come; which yet, after the manner of the Prophets, he represents as present. And this Prophetical Psalm might be left upon record, as a cordial for David's Family in their future distresses, which Ethan by the spirit of Prophecy foresaw. Or, secondly, some other Person of the same Name, and inspired by the same Spirit, who had lived in the Times of which the Psalmist speaketh.

This Psalm manifestly treats of the declining and calamitous time and state of the House and Kingdom of David, either, first, in Rehoboam's Reign, as a late judicious Interpreter conceives. To which those expressions, v.40,41,42. do not agree; or rather, secondly, in or about the time of the Babylonish Captivity.

1. I Will sing of the mercies of the LORD for ever b: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness c, † to all generations.

b Intending to discourse of the doleful estate of David's Family, and of the Kingdom, he prefaceth this: partly lest the following complaints of present miseries should argue ingratitude for former mercies: and partly to move God to pity, from the remembrance of his former mercies. c Whatsoever hath befallen or shall befal David's House, or any other, it proceedeth not from thy unfaithfulness, but from some other Causes.

2. For I have said d, Mercy shall be built up for ever e: * thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens f.

* Psal.119.90.

d Within my self. I have been assured in my own mind. e As thou hast laid a sure foundation of mercy to David's Family, by that everlasting Covenant which thou hast made and established with it; so I concluded, That thou wouldst carry on the same project of mercy towards it, that thou wouldst build it up and not destroy it. f So the sence may be this, Thou sittest in the Heavens, and there thou didst make this everlasting and unchangeable Decree and Covenant concerning David and his House, and from thence thou beholdest and ordereſt all the affairs of this lower World, and therefore, I doubt not, thou wilt so order these matters, as to accomplish thine own counsel and word. But the Hebrew words are by some others, and may very well be translated thus, with (as the Hebrew prefix Beth is oft rendred) the very heavens, (i.e.) as firmly and durably as the Heavens themselves, as with the sun in the Hebrew Text, *Psal.*72.5. is by most Interpreters rendred, as long as the sun endureth, as our Translation hath it. And so this phrase in this last branch of this Verse answers to for ever in the former; as it is also in the foregoing Verse, and so in v. 4. in both which Verses for ever in the first clause is explained thus in the latter, to all generations.

3. I have made a covenant with my chosen g, I have * sworn unto David my servant.

* 2 Sam.7. 11, &c.

g With David; whom I have chosen to the Kingdom.

4. Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne † to all generations h, Selah.

h I will perpetuate the Kingdom to thy Posterity; which was promised upon condition, and was literally and fully accomplished in Christ who was of the seed of David.

5. And * the heavens i shall praise thy wonders, O LORD: thy faithfulness also k, in the congregation of the saints l.

i (i.e.) The Inhabitants of Heaven, the holy Angels, as Job 15.15. who clearly discern and constantly adore thy mercy and faithfulness; when men upon earth are filled with doubts and perplexities about it. k Understand, shall be praised, out of the foregoing clause; which supplements are most usual in Scripture, as hath been already shewed by divers instances. l Either, first, of thy Saints upon Earth in their publick Assemblies; who always acknowledge and celebrate thy truth, although they cannot always discern the footsteps of it. Or rather, secondly, of the Angels of Heaven, of whom he speaks in the foregoing Clause; who are oft called Saints or holy ones, as *Deut.*33.2. Job 15.15. *Dan.*4.13,17. and 8.13.

6. For * who in the heaven can be compared unto the LORD? who among the sons † of the mighty m, can be likened unto the LORD?

* Psal.86. 8.
† Heb. of God. So Gr. Psal.29. 2.

m Either, first, among the Potentates of the Earth: or rather, secondly, among the highest Angels; who well may and needs must admire and adore thee, because thou art incomparably and infinitely more excellent than they.

7. God is greatly to be feared n in the assembly of the saints o: and || to be had in reverence of all them that are about him p.

|| Or, terrible above all that are about him. So Gr.

n With a fear of reverence: for dread and terror have no place in those blessed Mansions and holy Spirits. o To the whole Society of Angels, called Saints, as v. 5. p The Angels which are always in his presence, and encompass his Throne.

8. O LORD God of hosts, † who is a strong LORD like unto thee q? or to thy faithfulness round about thee r?

† Heb. who is strong like unto thee, O LORD, Psal.130. 5. Ezr.9. 6.

q Who is equal to thee in Power, or, as it follows, in Faithfulness. r Heb. and thy faithfulness is round about thee, like a girdle adorning and encompassing thee. It appeareth in all thy paths and actions, in thy words and works.

9. * Thou rulest the raging of the sea s: when the waves thereof arise, thou stillest them.

* Psal.65.7.

s Giving commands and setting bounds to its waves when they are most impetuous and unruly.

10. * Thou hast broken || Rahab t in pieces, as one

one that is ſlain u; thou haſt ſcattered thine enemies † with thy ſtrong arm.

t Egypt, as *Pſal.*87.4. u Thou didſt wound them not ſlightly but unto death. See *Exod.*14.15.

* Gen. 1. 1. Pſal.24.1. & 50.12.

11. * The heavens are thine, the earth alſo is thine: as for the world, and the fulneſs thereof x, thou haſt founded them y.

x All the Creatures wherewith it is repleniſhed, as *Pſal.*24.1. and 50.12. y They are all thy Creatures, and therefore wholly ſubject to thy power and pleaſure: and therefore all the Monarchs and Kingdoms of the Earth cannot hinder thee from making good thy promiſe to the Houſe and Kingdom of David.

12. The north and † the ſouth z thou haſt created them: Tabor and Hermon a ſhall rejoyce b in thy name c.

z The northern and ſouthern Parts of the World, yea even the remoteſt ends thereof, though not yet known to us, were made, and are ruled by thee. Or poſſibly he may underſtand the northern and ſouthern Empires and People of the World, who have from time to time annoyed and diſturbed the Kingdom of David and of Iſrael, of which this Pſalm principally treats, ſuch as Syria, Chaldea, and Aſſyria; which in Scripture-phraſe are called the north, in reference to that Kingdom; and Egypt, and Ethiopia, and Arabia, which are ſouthward from it. Theſe, ſaith he, are all thy Creatures, and none of them can withſtand thee, if thou wilt undertake to deliver thy People. But this I only propoſe with ſubmiſſion. a Two eminent Mountains in the Land of Canaan, Tabor in the Weſt and within Jordan, Hermon on the Eaſt and without Jordan. By which he may underſtand either firſt the Weſtern and Eaſtern Parts of the World: and ſo all the four Parts of the World are contained in this Verſe. But this may ſeem an uncouth and incongruous deſcription of the Eaſt and Weſt, partly becauſe the North and the South here mentioned, are not thoſe Parts of the Land of Canaan, but of the World, with reſpect to it; and therefore the Eaſt and Weſt ſhould in reaſon have been ſo too; and partly becauſe theſe Places were not ſo ſituated in Canaan; for Tabor was not in the Weſt part of Canaan, but rather in the middle ſpace between the Sea and Jordan; and Hermon was not ſo much on the Eaſt as on the North, being indeed the northern Border of the Land without Jordan. Or, ſecondly, the ſeveral Parts of the Land of Canaan, both within Jordan, where Mount Tabor is, and without it, where Hermon lies. And the Mountains may be named rather than the Valleys, becauſe when their fertility is expreſſed, the fertility of the Valleys is more ſtrongly ſuppoſed. b (i.e.) Shall be fruitful and proſperous, and ſo give their Inhabitants cauſe to rejoyce. Joy and ſinging are oft aſcribed to Mountains and Fields, &c. in a Poetical ſtrain. c In or by thy favour, and the fruits thereof.

13. Thou haſt † a mighty arm: ſtrong is thy hand d, and high is e thy right hand.

d Either thy left hand, becauſe the right hand ſeems to be oppoſed to it: or thy right hand, as it is limited and explained in the next Clauſe. e Or, is or ſhall be exalted, or lifted up. That ſtrength of thine hand hath been, or ſhall be, put forth for thy People, as occaſion requireth.

‖ Or, eſtabliſhment, or, place. * Pſal.85.13.

14. Juſtice and judgement f are the ‖ habitation g of thy throne: * mercy and truth ſhall go before thy face h.

f (i.e.) Juſt judgment, or juſtice in judging, as Jer. 9. 24. and 22.3. A common figure called Hendiaduo. g Or, the baſis or foundation, as this word is uſed, Ezra 2.68. and 3.3. *Pſal.*97. 2. and 104.5. the ground-work of all his proceedings, and the ſtability of his Throne and Government. For God could not be the Judge and Ruler of the World if he did not right, Gen. 18. 25. comp. *Prov.*16.12. The ſence and ſcope of this Verſe may be this, Though thy preſent diſpenſations in breaking thy Covenant with David, and in ſuffering his Poſterity and thine own People to be devoured by ſuch as are much more wicked than they, be a great and deep ſecret, yet I reſt ſatisfied that they are juſt. In like manner the Prophet fortifies himſelf under the like thoughts, *Jer.*12. 1. h As thy Harbengers and Companions whereſoever thou goeſt. Thou art neither unmerciful nor unfaithful in any of thy dealings.

* Numb.10. 6. Pſal.33. 10. Pſal.27.6.

15. Bleſſed is the people i that know the * joyful ſound k: they ſhall walk, O LORD, in the light of thy countenance l.

i The Pſalmiſt intending to deſcribe the doleful eſtate of the Royal Family and Kingdom of Iſrael, aggravates it by the conſideration of their former felicity. k (i.e.) Who enjoy the preſence of God and his Ordinances, and the tokens of his grace and mercy to them, to which they were called and invited by the ſound of Trumpets, which upon that only reaſon was very pleaſant and grateful to the Iſraelites. See *Numb.*10.9,10. So the ſign is put for the thing ſignified, as is manifeſt both from the following clauſe of the Verſe, and becauſe otherwiſe the hearing of the outward ſound of Trumpets could never make them bleſſed. l They ſhall live under the comfortable influences of thy grace and favour; whereof at preſent we are bereaved.

16. In thy name m ſhall they rejoyce all the day: and in thy righteouſneſs n ſhall they be exalted.

m In the knowledge and remembrance of thy name, (i.e.) of thy infinite power and goodneſs, revealed and imparted to them. n Whereby thou art both inclined and in ſome ſort ingaged to hear the Prayers of thy People, and to ſave them from all their Enemies.

17. For thou art the glory of their ſtrength o: and in thy favour our horn ſhall be exalted p.

o All that ſtrength in which they do or may glory is not their own, but is a meer vouchſafement of thy grace, and to thee alone belongs the glory of all their valiant atchievments. p (i.e.) Our power and honour, which now lies in the duſt, ſhall be raiſed and recovered.

18. For q ‖ the LORD is our defence: and the holy one of Iſrael is our king r.

19. Then s thou ſpakeſt in viſion t to thy holy one u, and ſaidſt, I have laid help x upon one that is mighty y, I have exalted one choſen out of the people z.

s (i. e.) Of old: for this Particle is ſometimes put indefinitely. Or then, when thou didſt ſet David in the Throne. t Which then was the uſual way by which God ſpake to the Prophets, Numb. 12. 6. u To thy holy Prophets; the ſingular number being put for the plural; eſpecially to Samuel and Nathan; for part of the following meſſage was delivered to the former, and part to the latter. x I have provided help and relief for my people which I have put into ſafe hands. y Upon a perſon of ſingular courage and wiſdom, and every way fit for ſo great a charge. z One whom I have pickt and choſen out of all the people, as the fitteſt for the Kingly Office, one enriched with eminent gifts and graces, &c.

* 1 Sam. 16. 12.

20. * I have found a David my ſervant: with my holy oyl b have I anointed him.

a This is ſpoken of God figuratively, after the manner of men, to imply the great ſcarcity of ſuch perſons, and the difficulty of finding them out. b Both with material oyl, 1 Sam. 16. 13. 2 Sam. 5. 3. and with the gifts and graces of my holy Spirit, which are oft ſignified by oyl or unction, as *Pſal.*45.8. compared with *Heb.*1.9. *Iſai.*61.3. 1 *Joh.*2.20,27.

* Pſal.80.17.

21. * With whom my hand ſhall be eſtabliſhed c: mine arm alſo ſhall ſtrengthen him.

c (i.e.) Conſtantly abide to protect and aſſiſt him.

* 2 Sam.7.10.

22. * The enemy ſhall not exact upon him d: nor the ſon of wickedneſs afflict him e.

d Not conquer him, or make him tributary. Or, ſhall not deceive or circumvent him, as this word is uſed, Gen. 3. 13. 2 Kings 18.29. e To wit, ſo as to overthrow or deſtroy him.

23. And I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague them that hate him.

* Pſal.61.7.

24. But my * faithfulneſs and my mercy ſhall be with him f: and in my name g ſhall his horn be exalted.

f Faithfulneſs in making good all my promiſes to him; and mercy either in doing more for him than I have promiſed, or in pardoning his ſins, for which I might juſtly make him to know my breach of promiſe. g By my favour and help.

25. I will ſet his hand h alſo in the ſea i, and his right hand in the rivers k.

h (i. e.) Eſtabliſh his power and dominion. i The midland Sea. k To wit, Euphrates, called Rivers in the Plural Number, as Nilus alſo is, *Iſai.*18.1. *Ezek.*29. 3,4. in regard of divers branches of it, and rivers which flow into it. So here is a deſcription of the utmoſt bounds of the promiſed Land, Exod. 23. 31. Numb. 34. 3. to which the Iſraelitiſh power was extended by David and Solomon.

26. He ſhall cry unto me, Thou art my father l, my God, and the rock of my ſalvation.

l He ſhall find me to be a true and a kind father to him, and ſhall familiarly and confidently make his addreſſes to me as ſuch, for all neceſſary ſupplies and aſſiſtances, which Parents willingly afford to their children, as need requires.

27. Alſo I will make him my firſt-born m, higher than the kings of the earth n.

m As he calls me father, v. 26. ſo I will make him my ſon, yea my firſt-born; who had divers priviledges above other ſons. This and the following paſſage in ſome ſort agree to David, who may well be called God's firſt-born, as all the people of Iſrael are, Exod. 4. 22. and ſo is Ephraim, Jer. 31. 9. Nor can I ſee fit wholly to exclude David here, of whom all the foregoing and following Verſes may, and ſome of them muſt be, underſtood. But this is more fully and properly accompliſhed in Chriſt, and ſeems to be aſcribed to David here as a type of Chriſt, and that our minds might be led through David to him, whom David repreſented, even to the Meſſias, to whom alone this doth ſtrictly and literally belong. n This alſo was in ſome ſort accompliſhed in David, partly becauſe he had a greater power and dominion than any of the Neighbouring Kings, yea than any other Kings of his age, and in thoſe parts of the world, except the Aſſyrian Monarch; nor is the expreſſion here univerſal but indefinite, and if it had been ſaid, higher than all the Kings, yet even ſuch univerſal expreſſions admit of ſome limitation or exception, as is manifeſt and confeſſed: and partly becauſe David had many priviledges wherein he did excel all other Kings of the Earth of his Age without exception; which probably he did in the honour and renown which he got by his military atchievements; and by that wiſdom and juſtice wherewith he managed all his Dominions; but certainly he did in this, that he was a King choſen and advanced by the immediate order and appointment of God himſelf; that he was ſet over Gods own peculiar and beloved people; that he was intruſted with the care and Patronage of the true Religion and the Worſhip of God in the World; and eſpecially that he was not only an eminent type, but alſo the Progenitor, of the Meſſias, who is King of kings, and Lord of lords, and God bleſſed for ever.

* Iſa. 55. 3. 28. * My mercy o will I keep with him for evermore, and my covenant p ſhall ſtand faſt with him.

o Declared and promiſed to him and his Seed, as it here follows, p Of which ſee 2 Sam. 7. 12, 13, &c.

29. His ſeed alſo will I make to endure for ever q and his throne as the days of heaven r.

q (i. e.) To ſit upon the Throne for ever, as the next words explain it. This was accompliſhed only in Chriſt, the eternal King of the Church, and of the World, who was of David's Seed according to the fleſh. r (i. e.) For ever, as he now ſaid, as long as the World ſhall have a being. It ſhall be as unchangeable and durable as the Heavens themſelves, which are of an incorruptible nature. See the like expreſſion Deut. 11. 21. Jer. 31. 35, 36.

* 2 Sam. 7. 14. 32. Then * will I viſit their tranſgreſſion with the rod, and their iniquity with ſtripes.

* Heb. I will not make void from him. † Heb. to lie. 33. Nevertheleſs my loving kindneſs u * will I not utterly take from him, nor ſuffer my faithfulneſs † to fail.

u My mercy promiſed to David.

34. My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips.

† Heb. if I lye. 35. Once have I ſworn by my holineſs x, † that I will not lye unto David.

x Here he gives ſome reaſons why he would not break his Covenant with David, though he ſhould have juſt cauſe to do ſo, and though he had upon ſuch juſt cauſe broke his Covenant made with others; firſt becauſe this Covenant was confirmed by his Oath, which adds not only more ſolemnity, but more ſtability and certainty to it, as is evident from Heb. 6. 17. wherein he ſheweth that God added an Oath to his Promiſe or Covenant to make and prove it to be immutable, and from Heb. 7. 20, &c. where he proveth the Prieſthood of Melchiſedech to be unchangeable, becauſe it was confirmed by an Oath. And though judgments ſimply threatned have not always been executed, but ſometimes were prevented, yet thoſe comminations which were confirmed by Oath were thereby rendred and declared to be irrevocable, as we ſee Numb. 14. 28, 29, 30. Jer. 44. 26. Secondly, becauſe this is ſaid to be ſworn once, which word and phraſe ſometimes implies the compleatneſs, certainty and irrevocableneſs of the thing ſaid or done, as Prov. 28. 18. ſhall fall at once. Thus Chriſt is ſaid to have died or ſuffered once, Rom. 6. 10. Heb 9. 26, 28. Thirdly, becauſe God ſware by his holineſs; in or by which God is but ſeldom read to ſpeak or ſwear, and when he is, it conſtantly adds more weight and confirmation to the ſpeech, as Pſal. 60. 6. and 108. 7. Amos 4. 2.

36. * His ſeed ſhall endure for ever, and his throne * as the ſun y before me.

* 2 Sam. 7. 16. Luk. 1. 33. Joh. 12. 34. * Pſal. 72. 5, 17.

y In reſpect of perpetual duration, as appears both from the foregoing words, and from the following Verſe.

37. It ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witneſs in heaven z, Selah.

z Whereby he underſtands either firſt the moon laſt mentioned, to which this clauſe may be added rather than to the Sun, to imply that as the Moon, though ſubject to Eclipſes and frequent and manifold changes, yet doth conſtantly and perpetually remain in Heaven; as a witneſs of my covenant of the night, as it is called, Jer. 33. 20. ſo ſhall the houſe and Kingdom of David continue for ever notwithſtanding all the changes and calamities which it may undergo. Or ſecondly, the Rainbow; which though in it ſelf it be unſtable and tranſient, and doth but ſeldom appear, which learned men object againſt this opinion, yet in Scripture is mentioned as God's faithful and perpetual witneſs, being called a token of God's everlaſting covenant between God and every living creature for perpetual generations, Gen. 9. 12, 16, And although it do not always appear to us, neither do the Sun or Moon do ſo, yet its appearances are doubtleſs very frequent in one or other part of the World, and will be repeated from time to time to the end of the World. Add to this that the word here rendred Heaven, may as well be rendred the Cloud or Clouds, as it is uſed Deut. 33. 26. Job 35. 5. and 36. 28. Pſal. 18. 12. and 77. 17. and 78. 23. Prov. 3. 20. Iſa. 45. 8. And ſo the place being thus tranſlated, and as the faithful witneſs in the Cloud, or Clouds, doth plainly point us to the Rainbow.

38. But a thou haſt caſt off and abhorred, thou haſt been wroth with thine anointed b.

45. The days of his youth haſt thou ſhortned l: thou haſt covered him with ſhame, Selah.

l The youthful and flouriſhing eſtate of David's Kingdom was very ſhort, and reached not beyond his next ſucceſſor, and it hath been languiſhing by degrees till this time when it ſeems to be dead and buried.

46. * How long, LORD, wilt thou hide thy ſelf, for ever? ſhall thy wrath burn like fire? * Pſal. 79. 5.

47. Remember how ſhort my time m is: wherefore haſt thou made all men in vain n!

m (i. e.) Our time, the time of our king and kingdom, in whoſe name the Pſalmiſt puts up this Petition, and about whom he was much more ſolicitous than about himſelf, as is evident both from the following verſes, and from the whole body of the Pſalm. The ſence ſeems to be this, Our king and all his people, and I among the reſt, are ſhort-lived and periſhing creatures, that of themſelves and according to the courſe of nature muſt ſhortly die. And therefore there is no need that thou ſhouldeſt add further afflictions to ſweep them away before their time. n Wherefore haſt thou made us and our King (and conſequently all other men whoſe condition is in nothing better than ours, and in reſpect of thy grace and mercy is much worſe than ours) in vain or to ſo little purpoſe? Didſt thou raiſe us and him, eſtabliſh us for thy people, ſettle the crown upon David and his ſeed for ever by a ſolemn and unchangeable Covenant, erect a magnificent and glorious Temple, and vouchſafe ſo many and great promiſes and priviledges, and all this but for a few years, that our Crown and Glory ſhould be taken from us within a little time after it was put upon our heads, that our Kingdom ſhould be broken almoſt as ſoon as it was firmly eſtabliſhed, that thy worſhip ſhould be ſo ſoon corrupted, and thy Temple quickly robbed, and not long after frequently abuſed, and polluted and waſted, and now at laſt utterly demoliſhed? It is not ſtrange that ſuch conſiderations as theſe did fill the Pſalmiſts mind with amuſement, and ſad and perplexing thoughts. Nor doth the Pſalmiſt accuſe or upbraid God herewith, but only uſeth it as an argument to move God to repair and reſtore their decayed ſtate, that they might live to praiſe and ſerve and glorifie him, and not be ſuch uſeleſs and inſignificant Creatures as now they were in this forlorn eſtate of things, and as they ſhould be if they ſhould go into the place and ſtate of the dead before the reſtitution of their broken State and Kingdom.

* Pſal. 49. 9. 48. * What man is he that liveth, and ſhall not ſee death o? ſhall he deliver his ſoul from the hand of † the grave! Selah.

o All men at their beſt eſtate are mortal and miſerable: Kings and People muſt unavoidably die by the condition of their natures; and therefore, Lord, do not increaſe our affliction which of it ſelf is more than enough; neither proceed in theſe violent courſes upon us, who, without ſuch ſeverity, muſt periſh of and from our ſelves.

* Numb. 11. 12. 50. Remember, LORD, the reproach of thy ſervants; how I q * do bear in my boſom r the reproach of all the mighty people s.

q (i. e.) We thy ſervants, as he now ſaid; our King and his people; of whom he ſpeaks as of one perſon, as is very uſual in holy Scripture. Or, the Pſalmiſt ſheweth how particularly and paſſionately he reſented thoſe reproaches which were caſt upon their King and Kingdom, as if they were caſt upon himſelf. r This phraſe may denote either firſt the multitude of theſe reproaches, things being ſaid to be given or received into a mans boſom, which are given or received in great plenty, as Iſa. 65. 6. Luk. 6. 38. Or ſecondly, their grievouſneſs, that they pierced him to the very heart, which is ſometimes called the boſom, as Eccl. 7. 9. s Of the great Potentates and Princes of the World who now reproached the houſe of David with their vain and confident boaſting of the everlaſtingneſs of their Kingdom, which was now in a deſperate and loſt condition. Or, all the reproaches of many people.

51. Wherewith thine enemies have reproached, O LORD, wherewith they have reproached the footſteps of thine anointed t.

t Or, of thy Meſſiah. By whom he ſeems to underſtand either firſt the Kings of Judah, the ſingular number being put for the plural; and by their footſteps may be meant either their ways or actions, and the ſad conſequences thereof; or the traces or memorials of their antient ſplendor and dominion, wherewith they now upbraid them; Or rather ſecondly the Meſſiah moſt properly and eminently ſo called; of whom not only many Chriſtians, but the Chaldee Paraphraſt and the Hebrew Doctors, underſtand this place. And this ſuits very well both with the ſingular number here uſed which points at one particular and eminent perſon anointed by God to be the King of his people, and with the matter and occaſion of this Pſalm. For it was univerſally believed by the Jews, that the Meſſiah ſhould come of the Seed of David, and that by him the antient glory and power of David's Houſe ſhould be revived and vaſtly increaſed. And this coming of the Meſſiah the Jews did continually expect for a long time together before he did come, and ſupported themſelves therewith under all their Calamities. All which being well known to many of the Heathens, they reproached the Jews with the vanity of this belief and expectation. And by the footſteps of the Meſſiah he may underſtand his coming, as by the feet or footſteps of Miniſters, Iſa. 52. 7. their coming and bringing the Goſpel with them is underſtood.

52. Bleſſed be the LORD u for evermore. Amen and Amen.

u Let thine Enemies reproach thee and thy promiſes concerning the ſending of the Meſſiah and the deliverance of thy people by his hand, I do and will heartily bleſs and praiſe thee for them, and encourage my ſelf with them, not doubting but thou wilt conſider and take away all our reproaches, and in thine own due time (which is the beſt) ſend him who is the conſolation and expectation of Iſrael, and the deſire of all Nations.

PSAL. XC.

‖ A Prayer of Moſes the man of God a.

‖ Or, a Prayer being a Pſalm of Moſes.

a Who conſidering that terrible but righteous ſentence of God concerning the cutting off all that ſinful Generation in the Wilderneſs, of which ſee Numb. 14. takes that occaſion to publiſh theſe Meditations concerning mans mortality and miſery in this life, which might be uſeful both to that and to all ſucceeding Generations.

1. LORD, thou haſt been our dwelling-place † in all generations b.

b Although we and our Fathers for ſome Generations have had no certain and fixed Habitation, but have been ſtrangers in a land that was not ours, and afflicted for four hundred years, according to thy prediction, Gen. 15. 13. and although we now are and have been for ſome time, and ſtill are like to continue in a vaſt howling Wilderneſs, having no Houſes but dwelling in Tents, and wandring from place to place we know not whither; yet thou, O Lord, haſt fully ſupplyed this want, and haſt been inſtead of, and better than, a dwelling place to us, by thy watchful and gracious Providence over us in all places and exigencies. And this is a very proper preface to this Pſalm to intimate that all the following miſeries were not to be imputed to God but unto themſelves who by their own ſins had brought theſe miſchiefs upon themſelves.

2. Before the mountains c were brought forth, or ever thou hadſt formed the earth, and the world d: even from everlaſting to everlaſting, thou art God e.

c Which he mentions as the moſt fixed and ſtable part of the Earth, d (i. e.) From Eternity; which is frequently deſcribed in this manner, as Prov. 8. 25, 26. Joh. 17. 24. Eph. 1. 4. becauſe there was nothing before the Creation of the World but Eternity. And thus the words here following do explain it. And this Eternity of God is here mentioned partly that men by the contemplation thereof might be wrought to a deeper ſence of their own frailty and nothingneſs, which is the foundation of humility and of all true piety; and to a greater reverence and admiration of the Divine Majeſty; and partly for the comfort of God's people, who notwithſtanding all their preſent miſeries have a ſure and everlaſting refuge and portion. e Or, thou art the ſtrong God. Thou haſt thy power and all thy perfections, not by degrees, as men have theirs, but from all Eternity. Or, thou art or waſt, O God.

3. Thou turneſt man to deſtruction f, and ſayeſt g, Return ye children of men.

f But as for man, his caſe is far otherwiſe, his time is ſhort, and though he was made by thee an happy Creature, and ſhould have been immortal, yet upon and for his ſin thou didſt make him mortal and miſerable. g Or, didſt ſay, (i. e.) pronounce that ſad ſentence here following, Return O men, to the duſt out of which you were taken, Gen, 3. 19. Pſal. 146. 4. Eccleſ. 12. 7.

4. * For a thouſand years h in thy ſight i are but as yeſterday ‖ when it is paſt k, and as a watch l in the night m.

* 2 Pet. 3. 8.

h If we ſhould now live ſo long as ſome of our Progenitors well-nigh did. As he compared mans duration with Gods in reſpect of its beginning, v. 2. ſo here he compareth them in reſpect of the end, or continuance. i In thy account, and therefore in truth; which is oppoſed to the partial and falſe judgment of men who think time long becauſe they do not underſtand Eternity: Or, in compariſon of thy endleſs duration. k Which is emphatically added; becauſe time ſeems long when it is to come, but when it is paſt and men look backward upon it, it ſeems very ſhort and contemptible, and men value one hour to come more than a thouſand years which are paſt. l Which laſted but for three or four hours; for the night was anciently divided into three or four Watches. See Judg. 7. 19. Mark. 6. 48. and 13. 35. Luk. 12. 38.

m Which alſo hath its weight: for the ſilence and ſlumbers of the night makes time ſeem ſhorter than it doth in the day.

5. Thou carrieſt them n away as with a floud o, * they are as aſleep p: in the morning * they are like graſs which ‖ groweth up q.

* Pſal. 73. 20.
* Pſal. 103. 15.

n i.e. Mankind, of whom he ſpake v. 3. o Unexpectedly, violently and irreſiſtibly, univerſally, without exception or diſtinction. p Short and vain, as ſleep is, and not minded till it be paſt. Or, like a Dream when a man ſleepeth, wherein there may be ſome real pleaſure, but never any ſatisfaction, or ſome real trouble, but very inconſiderable, and ſeldom or never pernicious. Even ſuch an idle and inſignificant thing is humane life conſidered in it ſelf without reſpect to a future ſtate, in which there is but a meer ſhadow or dream of felicity, only the calamities attending upon it are more real and weighty. q Heb. which is changed, either firſt for the worſe, which paſſeth away, as ſome render the word. Which having generally affirmed here, he may ſeem more particularly to explain in the next Verſe. Or rather ſecondly for the better, as this word is ſometimes uſed, as Job 14. 7. Iſa. 40. 31. which ſprouteth out of the Earth, and groweth more apparent and green and flouriſhing. And this interpretation is confirmed from the next Verſe, where this ſame word is uſed in this ſence, where alſo the morning is again mentioned, and that as the time not of its decay, but of its flouriſhing.

6. In the morning it flouriſheth, and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down and withereth r.

r The whole ſpace of mans life is compared to one day, and his proſperity is confined to a part of that day, and ended in the cloſe of it.

7. For we s are conſumed t by thine anger u, and by thy wrath are we troubled.

s Either, 1. we men: or rather, 2. we Iſraelites in this Wilderneſs. t Either naturally by the frame of our bodies, or violently by extraordinary judgments. Thou doſt not ſuffer us to live ſo long as we might by the courſe of nature. u Cauſed by our ſinful ſtate and lives.

8. Thou haſt ſet our iniquities before thee x, our ſecret ſins y † in the light of thy countenance.

x Thou doſt not now cover or blot out or paſs by our ſins, as thou haſt uſually done to thy people; but thou doſt diligently ſearch them out, and accurately obſerve them, as a ſevere, but righteous Judge, and art now calling us to an account for them. y Thou doſt not only puniſh us for our notorious and ſcandalous ſins, which thine honour may ſeem to oblige thee to do, but even for our ſecret luſts, the murmuring and unbelief and Apoſtaſie and Idolatry of our hearts; which though hid from the eyes of men, thou haſt ſet before thine eyes, and brought them to light by thy judgments.

9. For all our days are † paſſed away z in thy wrath: we ſpend our years ‖ as a tale that is told a.

z Or, turn away themſelves or their face from us. They do not continue with us, but quickly turn their backs upon us and leave us. a Which may a little affect us for the preſent, but is quickly ended and gone out of mind. Or, as a word, as Job 37. 2. which in an inſtant is gone, and that irrevocably. Or, as a thought, or a ſigh, or a breath. All which come to one ſence.

10. † The days of our years b are threeſcore years and ten c; and if by reaſon of ſtrength d they be fourſcore years, yet is their ſtrength e labour and ſorrow f: for it g is ſoon cut off h, and we flee away i.

b Either, 1. of the Iſraelites in the Deſart, who being twenty years old, and ſome thirty, ſome forty, ſome fifty years old when they came out of Egypt, and dying in the Wilderneſs, as all of that age did, Numb. 14. 29. a great number of them doubtleſs died in their ſeventieth or eightieth year, as is here implied. Or rather, 2. of the generality of mankind, and the Iſraelites no leſs than others, in that and all following Ages, ſome few perſons excepted, amongſt whom were Moſes and Caleb and Joſhua, who lived an hundred and twenty years; which is therefore noted of them as a thing ſingular and extraordinary. This ſence ſuits beſt with the following words, and with the ſcope of Moſes; which was to repreſent the vain and tranſitory condition of men in this life, and how much mankind was now ſunk below their Anceſtors, who commonly lived many hundreds of years, and that the Iſraelites, though God's peculiar people, and endowed with many priviledges, yet in this were no better than other men. All which may be conſidered either as an argument to move God to pity and ſpare them, or as a motive to awaken and quicken the Iſraelites to ſerious preparations for death, by comparing this with v. 12. c Which time the ancient Heathen Writers alſo fixed as the uſual ſpace of mens lives. d (i.e.) By the ſtrength of their natural conſtitution; which is the true and common cauſe of longer life. e Their ſtrongeſt and moſt vigorous old Age. Or, their excellency, or pride; that old Age which is their glory, and in which men do commonly glory. f Filled with troubles and griefs from the infirmities of age, the approach of death, and the contingences of humane life. g Either our age, or our ſtrength. h It doth not now decline by many degrees and ſlow ſteps, as it doth in our young and flouriſhing age, but decayeth apace and ſuddenly fleeth away. i We do not now go to death, as we do from our very birth, nor run, but flee ſwiftly away like a bird, as this word ſignifies.

11. Who knoweth k the power of thine anger l? even according to thy fear m, ſo is thy wrath n.

k Few or none ſufficiently apprehend it or ſtedfaſtly believe it, or duly conſider it, or are rightly affected with it. For all theſe things are comprehended under this word knoweth. l The greatneſs and force and dreadful effects of thine anger conceived againſt the Sons of men, and in particular againſt thine own people for their miſcarriages. m (i.e.) According to the fear of thee, as my fear is put for the fear of me, Mal. 1. 6. and his knowledge for the knowledge of him, Iſa. 53. 11. According to that fear or dread which ſinful men have of a juſt and holy God. Theſe fears of the Deity are not vain Bugbears, and the effects of ignorance and folly or ſuperſtition, as Heathens and Atheiſts have ſometimes ſaid, but are juſt and built upon ſolid grounds, and juſtified by the terrible effects of thy wrath upon mankind. n It bears full proportion to it, nay indeed doth far exceed it. It cannot be ſaid of God's wrath which is ſaid of Death, that the fear of it is worſe than the thing it ſelf. But this Verſe is by many, both ancient and later Interpreters, rendred otherwiſe, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew Text, Who knoweth the power of thine anger, and thy wrath according to thy fear? i.e. either, 1. according to the fear of thee, or ſo as thou art to be feared, or anſwerably to thy terrible diſpleaſure againſt ſin and ſinners. Or, 2. ſo as to fear and dread thee in ſuch manner and meaſure as ſinful Creatures ought to fear the infinite and offended Majeſty of God their Creator and Judge and Sovereign, and thereby to be moved to humble himſelf before thee, and fervently to ſeek thy face and favour; which is the only true wiſdom, for which he prayeth in the next Verſe.

12. * So teach us o to number our days p, that we may † apply our hearts unto wiſdom q.

o By thy Spirit and Grace as thou haſt already taught us by thy Word. Or, Teach us rightly (as this word is uſed Numb. 27. 7. and 2 Kings 7. 9.) to number, &c. as it follows. p To conſider the ſhorteneſs and miſeries of this life, and the certainty and ſpeedineſs of death, and the cauſes and conſequences thereof. q That we may heartily devote your ſelves to the ſtudy and practice of true wiſdom, which is nothing elſe but piety or the fear of God. And why ſo? Not that the Iſraelites might thereby procure a revocation of that peremptory ſentence of death paſſed upon all that Generation; nor that other men might hereby prevent their death, both which he very well knew to be impoſſible, but that men might arm and prepare themſelves for death, and for their great account after death, and might make ſure of the happineſs of the future life. Of which this Text is a plain and pregnant proof.

13. Return, O LORD r, how long s, and let it repent thee concerning thy ſervants t.

r To us in mercy; for thou ſeemeſt to have forſaken us and caſt us off. s Underſtand, wilt thou be angry: or, will it be ere thou return to us. t (i.e.) Of thy ſevere proceedings againſt us, and change thy courſe and carriage to us.

14. O ſatisfie us early u with thy mercy; that we may rejoyce, and be glad all our days.

u Speedily, or ſeaſonably before we be utterly conſumed.

15. Make us glad according to the days wherein thou haſt afflicted us, and the years wherein we have ſeen evil x.

x Our afflictions have been ſharp and long, let not our proſperity be ſmall and ſhort.

16. Let thy work appear unto thy ſervants, and thy glory unto their children y.

y Let that great and glorious work of giving thy people a compleat deliverance, which thou haſt long ſince deſigned and promiſed, be at laſt accompliſhed and manifeſted unto us, and in the ſight of the World.

17. And let the beauty of the LORD z our God be upon us, and eſtabliſh thou the work of our hands upon us a, yea the work of our hands eſtabliſh thou it.

z i.e. His favourable countenance and gracious influence and glorious preſence. a Or, in us. Do not only work for us but in us. And becauſe the glorious work of thy hands is hindered by the evil works of our hands, be thou pleaſed by thy holy Spirit to direct or eſtabliſh (for this Hebrew word ſignifies both) the works of our hands, that we may ceaſe to do evil, and learn to to do well, and turn and conſtantly cleave unto thee, and not revolt and draw back from thee, as we have frequently done to our own undoing.

The Penman of this Pſalm is uncertain. The occaſion of it ſeems to have been that great Peſtilence recorded, 2 Sam. 24.

5. * Thou ſhalt not be afraid for the terror by night g, nor for the arrow h that fleeth by day i:

The ſence of the Verſe is, He ſhall be kept from ſecret and open miſchiefs at all times.

6. Nor for the peſtilence k that walketh l in darkneſs m: nor for the deſtruction that waſteth at noon-day n.

k This Verſe explains the former, and ſheweth what that terror and arrow ſignifies. l That ſpreadeth or maketh progreſs. m Either inviſibly, ſo as we can neither foreſee nor prevent it. Or rather, by night, as v. 5. n That like a bold Enemy aſſaults us openly, and though diſcovered, cannot be reſiſted.

7. A thouſand ſhall fall at thy ſide o, and ten thouſand at thy right hand: but it ſhall not come nigh thee p.

o At thy left ſide, becauſe this is oppoſed to the right ſide here following. See the like Ellipſis, Numb. 9. 16. Pſal. 84. 11. p This and ſuch like promiſes are not to be underſtood abſolutely and univerſally, as if no truly good man could be cut off by the Plague or other common Calamities, which is confuted both by other plain Texts of Scripture and by unqueſtionable Experience, but with due limitations and conditions, either on mans part, as if there be a defect in his Faith or Obedience; or on God's part, when God ſees that death is more for his good than life, as it apparently is when righteous men are taken away from the evil to come, as is ſaid Iſa. 57. 1. In which caſe, though God doth not give the thing promiſed, yet he giveth a far greater mercy in ſtead of it, and ſo fulfils his promiſe in the beſt ſence and with moſt advantage. As if one man ſhould ſolemnly promiſe to another to give him his daily food every day, he not only might but ought, notwithſtanding this promiſe, to deny and withdraw this food when his body is ſo diſtempered, that in the judgment of the wiſeſt Phyſicians the taking of his food would evidently endanger his life.

* Pſal. 37. 34.

8. Only * with thine eyes ſhalt thou behold q, and ſee the reward of the wicked r.

q Without any terror or danger to thy ſelf, and with a delightful and thankful reflection upon God's goodneſs to thee. r The juſt recompence of their ſins, or the vengeance of God upon them.

9. Becauſe thou haſt made the LORD which is my refuge, even the moſt High thy habitation s.

s Or, as the words lie in the Hebrew and others render them, Becauſe thou, O Lord, art my refuge, thou, O my Soul, (which is eaſily underſtood out of the foregoing words, and to which David oft ſuddenly turneth his ſpeech) haſt made the moſt High thy habitation. Which is the only ground and reaſon of that ſafety laſt mentioned. As for the variation of perſons, that he ſometimes ſpeaketh to and of others, and ſometimes to and of himſelf, nothing is more frequent in this Book; nor doth it make any alteration in the ſence.

10. There ſhall no evil befal thee, neither ſhall any plague come nigh thy dwelling t.

t To wit, ſo as to deſtroy thee, as the next Verſe limits and expounds it. For ſurely this promiſe is not made to all that dwell nigh to his Children and Servants, who may poſſibly be wicked men, and ſo ſtrangers from God's Covenant and Promiſes, How far this ſecures his own perſon, ſee on v. 7.

PSAL. XCII.

A pſalm or ſong for the ſabbath-day a.

a To be ſung upon the Weekly Sabbath. To which the matter of this Pſalm very well agrees. For it celebrates the works of God, both that firſt and great work of Creation, and that ſucceeding and no leſs wonderful work of his Providence by which he upholds and governs all his Creatures, and eſpecially that by which he ruleth all ſorts of men, both good and bad, and that by which he perſerveth and manageth his Church and People.

* Pſal. 147. 1.

1. IT is a * good thing b to give thanks unto the LORD, and to ſing praiſes unto thy name, O moſt High.

b It is a good work and a juſt debt to God.

2. To ſhew forth thy loving kindneſs in the morning, and thy faithfulneſs † every night c.

c To adore and celebrate thy goodneſs and truth continually, and eſpecially at thoſe two ſolemn times of Morning and Evening, which on every day, and eſpecially upon the Sabbath day, were devoted to the worſhip and ſervice of God.

3. Upon

‖ Or, upon the ſolemn ſound with the harp. † Heb. Higgaion.

3. Upon an inſtrument of ten ſtrings, and upon the pſaltery ; ‖ upon the harp † with a ſolemn ſound.

4. For thou, LORD, haſt made me glad through thy work : I will triumph in the works of thy hands d.

d Which thou didſt create by thine Almighty power, and doſt ſtill govern with infinite wiſdom ; one inſtance whereof we have in the following Verſes.

* Pſal.40.5. * Rom.11.34.

5. * O LORD, how great are thy works! and * thy thoughts e are very deep.

e Thy counſels and methods in the government of the World and of thy Church.

* Pſal.94.8.

6. * A brutiſh man f knoweth not : neither doth a fool underſtand this g.

f Who cannot or doth not ſeriouſly conſider things, whoſe mind is corrupted by his ſenſual and brutiſh appetites, who is led by ſenſe, and not by reaſon and faith. g The depth of God's Counſels and Works mentioned, v. 5. or that particular work of God deſcribed, v. 7.

* Job 12.6. Jer.12.1,2. Mal.3.15. † Heb. herbs. Pſal.104.14.

7. * When the wicked ſpring as † the graſs, and when all the workers of iniquity do flouriſh: it is that they ſhall be deſtroyed for ever h.

h Their preſent worldly proſperity is a preſage and occaſion of their utter and eternal ruin.

8. But thou, LORD, art moſt High for evermore i.

i So this Verſe is added by way of oppoſition to the former, They ſhall periſh, but thou ſhalt endure, as is ſaid in a like compariſon, *Pſal.*102.26. they flouriſh for a ſeaſon, but thou ruleſt for ever to judge and puniſh them. Or, For (as this Hebrew Particle is not ſeldom uſed, whereof inſtances have been formerly given) thou, Lord, art, &c. So this Verſe gives a reaſon of the former, as well as the firſt branch of it, why God ſuffers the wicked to flouriſh ſo long, becauſe he is not like man, of ſhort and uncertain continuance here, to whom a little time is long and tedious, who therefore impatiently expects the time of vengeance, and fears leſt the offender ſhould eſcape it ; whereas God is unchangeable and everlaſting, and therefore long-ſuffering without any inconvenience, and the longeſt time of the proſperity of the wicked is but ſhort and inconſiderable in his eyes, a thouſand years being in his ſight but as yeſterday when it is paſt, *Pſal.*90. 4. and they can never eſcape out of his hands : as alſo of the latter branch of the Verſe, why the wicked ſhall be deſtroyed for ever, becauſe God lives and reigns for ever to execute that juſt ſentence of everlaſting puniſhment, which he hath pronounced againſt them.

9. For lo k, thine enemies, O LORD, for lo, thine enemies ſhall periſh : all the workers of iniquity ſhall be ſcattered.

k He repreſents their deſtruction as preſent, and as certain, which the repetition of the words implies.

10. But my horn ſhalt thou exalt l, like the horn of an unicorn m : I ſhall be anointed n with freſh oyl o.

l But as for me, and other righteous perſons (of whom he ſaith the ſame thing, *v.*12.) we ſhall be advanced to the height of honour, and true and laſting felicity. m Of which ſee on *Deut.*33.17. n I ſhall have great cauſe of rejoycing and teſtifying my joy, by anointing my ſelf, as the manner was in Feaſts and all joyful Solemnities. o Sweet and uncorrupted.

11. Mine eye alſo ſhall ſee my deſire p on mine enemies : and mine ears ſhall hear q my deſire of the wicked that riſe up againſt me.

p To wit, in the ruin of thine and mine incorrigible Enemies. q What I do not ſee my ſelf, I ſhall underſtand by the certain reports of others.

* Hoſ.14.5.

12. * The righteous ſhall flouriſh like the palm-tree r : he ſhall grow like a cedar s in Lebanon.

r Which is conſtantly green and flouriſhing, and fruitful, *Cant.*7.8. and growing even when it is preſſed down ; and ſo is a fit Emblem of a juſt mans perſon and condition. See Revel. 7.9. s Which ſpreads it ſelf wide, and grows very high and ſtrong, and is very durable, and in ſome ſort incorruptible.

13. Thoſe that be planted t in the houſe of the LORD u, ſhall flouriſh in the courts x of our God.

t Whom God by his gracious providence and holy ſpirit hath planted or fixed there. u (i. e.) In its Courts, which are a part of the Houſe, and oft come under that name in Scripture. And by this Houſe he means the Church of God, whereof all juſt perſons are real and living members. x Which he mentions rather than the Houſe, becauſe he ſpeaks not here of the Prieſts, but of all juſt men, who were permitted to come no further than into the Courts.

14. They ſhall ſtill bring forth fruit in old age y : they ſhall be fat, and † flouriſhing : † Heb. green.

y When their natural ſtrength decayeth, it ſhall be renewed ; their laſt days ſhall be their beſt days, wherein as they ſhall grow in grace, ſo they ſhall increaſe in comfort and bleſſedneſs.

15. To ſhew that the LORD is upright z : he is my rock, and there is no unrighteouſneſs in him.

z This glorious work of God, in compenſating the ſhort proſperity of the wicked with everlaſting puniſhments, and of exchanging the momentany afflictions of the juſt with eternal glory and happineſs, doth clearly demonſtrate that God is juſt and blameleſs in all the diſpenſations of his Providence in the World.

PSAL. XCIII.

This Pſalm contains an aſſertion or declaration of God's ſoveraign and univerſal dominion in and over the whole World. Which is here ſet forth, partly for the comfort of God's Church and People, againſt all the aſſaults of their numerous and potent Adverſaries ; and partly to give an intimation and aſſurance of the accompliſhment of that great Promiſe of the Kingdom of the Meſſias, which was not to be confined to the Iſraelites, but to be extended to all the Nations of the Earth : which, though wonderful in our eyes, the Supream and Almighty Ruler of the World could eaſily effect. This and the ſix following Pſalms, according to the opinion of the Hebrew Doctors, belong to the times of the Meſſias.

1. * THE LORD reigneth a, * he is cloathed with majeſty, the LORD is cloathed with ſtrength b, wherewith he hath girded himſelf: the world alſo is eſtabliſhed, that it cannot be moved c. * Pſal.96.10. & 97.1. & 99. 1. * Pſal.104.

a He is the King and Governour not only of Iſrael but of the whole World, as the laſt clauſe of the Verſe expounds it : and accordingly he will in his due time ſet up his Empire over all Nations in the hands of his Son the Meſſias. b That Majeſty and ſtrength which he always had in himſelf, he now hath and will ſhortly much more ſhew it forth in the eyes of all people. c The effect of God's Government of the World ſhall be this, that he will order and over-rule all the Confuſions, and Diviſions, and Hoſtilities in the World, ſo as they ſhall end in an orderly, peaceable, and happy ſettlement, and in the erection of that Kingdom of the Meſſias which can never be moved.

2. * Thy throne is eſtabliſhed † of old : thou art from everlaſting d. * Pſal.45.6. † Heb. from then.

d And this Kingdom of thine is no new or up-ſtart Kingdom, as it may ſeem to the ignorant World, but the moſt ancient of all Kingdoms, being from Everlaſting to Everlaſting, although it was not always equally manifeſted in the World.

3. The floods e have lifted up, O LORD, the floods have lifted up their voice : the floods lift up their waves f.

e The Enemies of thy Kingdom, who are oft compared to Floods for their numbers, force, rage, &c. See *Iſa.*8.7,8. and 17.12,13. *Jer.*46.7,8. f Have both by their words and actions made oppoſition againſt it.

4. The LORD on high is mightier than the noiſe of many waters, yea, than the mighty waves of the ſea g.

g The King of Heaven is too ſtrong for all earthly Potentates, and will ſubdue them under his feet.

5. Thy teſtimonies h are very ſure : holineſs becometh thine houſe i, O LORD, † for ever. † Heb. to length of days.

h (i. e.) Thy words : Either, 1. thy Precepts, which are commonly called God's Teſtimonies. And ſo having ſpoken of God's Kingdom, he now ſheweth that the Laws of that Kingdom are juſt, and true, and holy ; which is a ſingular commendation of it. Or, 2. thy Promiſes, as may be gathered from the following words, are ſure, or true, or faithful ; which Attribute properly belongs, and every where in Scripture is aſcribed to Promiſes rather than to Precepts. And the Promiſes no leſs than the Precepts are God's Teſtimonies, or the Witneſſes or Declarations of his Mind and Will to Mankind. And he ſeems here to ſpeak of thoſe great and precious Promiſes, concerning the erection and eſtabliſhment of his Kingdom in the World by the Meſſias. Which, ſaith he, are infallibly true, and ſhall certainly be accompliſhed in thy time. i This is to be underſtood, either, 1. of God's Church or People, who are ſometimes called God's Houſe, House, and whose business and delight is in God's House and Service there performed. So the sence is, It becometh thy people to be holy in all their approaches to thee, and worshippings of thee. Or rather, 2. of God himself, who dwelt in his House, from whence he gave forth his Oracles, and where all his Testimonies were kept upon record. This seems better to suit with the Context, the business of this Psalm being rather to describe the Dominion of God, than the duty of his people. And so the sence seems to be this, Holiness is the constant ornament and glory of thy House. Or, It becometh thee who dwellest in thy House to be holy in all thy words and actions; and therefore thy testimonies are very sure, and thou wilt undoubtedly fulfil all thy Promises. For holiness seems to be here taken for God's faithfulness, as it is, Psal. 60. 6. and 89. 35. or, which comes to the same thing, for his justice or righteousness, whereby he is obliged to make good all his promises, as that word is very commonly used.

PSAL. XCIV.

The matter of this Psalm plainly declares the occasion of it to be the oppressions and persecutions of God's people by wicked and cruel Tyrants and Enemies, against whom he prays for the divine aid.

1. O LORD † God to whom vengeance belongeth a: O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, † shew thy self.

a As thou art the supreme Judge of the World, the Patron and Protector of the righteous, and the declared Enemy of all wickedness and wicked men.

*Psal. 7. 6. *Gen. 18. 25.

2. * Lift up thy self b, thou * judge of the earth: render a reward to the proud.

b Either, 1. ascend thy tribunal to pronounce the sentence. Or, 2. arise from thy seat and bestir thy self, to punish thy proud Enemies, as it here follows.

3. LORD, how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph?

4. How long shall they utter c, and speak hard things d? and all the workers of iniquity boast themselves e?

c Or, pour forth freely, constantly, abundantly, as a Fountain doth Waters, as this Hebrew word signifies. d Grievous and insolent and intolerable words against thee and thy people, blasphemous, malicious, contemptuous and minatory words. e Boast of their invincible power and prosperous success in their wicked designs.

5. They break in pieces thy people, O LORD, and afflict thine heritage f.

f Those righteous persons whom thou hast chosen for thy portion or inheritance.

6. They slay the widow and the stranger, and murther the fatherless g.

g Whom common humanity obliged them to spare, and pity and relieve.

*Psal. 10. 11, 12, & 59. 7.

7. * Yet they say, The LORD shall not see h: neither shall the God of Jacob i regard it.

h Their impunity and prosperity in their impious and barbarous practices makes them ready to doubt of, or to deny the Providence of God in the government of his Church and of the World. i So they call him sarcastically, He who taketh that name to himself, but hath no regard to his people, but gives up his Jacob to the spoil, and to the rage of their Enemies.

8. * Understand, ye brutish among the people k: and ye fools, when will ye be wise?

k You, who though you think your selves the wisest of men, yet in truth are the most brutish of all people; for the Hebrews oft express their superlatives in this manner, as Prov. 30. 30. Cant. 1. 8, &c. You that have only the shape, but not the understanding of a man in you.

*Exod. 4. 11. Prov. 20. 12.

9. * He that planted l the ear, shall he not hear m? he that formed n the eye, shall he not see?

l The word is very emphatical signifying the excellent structure of the ear, or the several Organs or Instruments belonging to the sence of Hearing, and the exact position and firm settlement of all those parts in their proper places; which is justly admired by all that understand it. m He must necessarily hear. The truth of the inference depends upon that evident and undeniable principle in reason, that nothing can give to another that which it hath not either formally or more eminently in it self, and that no effect can exceed the vertue of its cause. n By which word he seems to intimate the accurate and most curious workmanship of the Eye, which is observed by all that write upon that subject.

10. He that chastiseth the heathen, shall not he correct m? he that teacheth man knowledge n, shall not he know o?

m He, who, when he pleaseth, can and doth punish the Gentiles or Nations of the world, is he not able to punish you for your wicked speeches and actions? Or, he that instructeth, or teacheth (as this word signifies, Prov. 9. 7. Isa. 8. 11, &c.) the nations (not only the Jews, but all other people, all mankind, as this clause is explained by the next, he that teacheth man knowledge) shall not he correct or reprove? and therefore must not he discern and know all your hard speeches and wicked actions? Thus the consequent seems to be put for the antecedent, as is frequent in Scripture, and that not without emphasis, to imply that God does not know these sins with a simple or speculative knowledge, but so as to proceed upon that knowledge to judge and punish them. n By giving him understanding and the knowledge of many excellent things by the light of nature. o To wit, mens thoughts, of which see v. 11. and their works and actions, of which he spoke, v. 6, 7. These words are not in the Hebrew Text, but are easily understood out of the foregoing clause. And the like defects we find elsewhere, as 2 Sam. 5. 8. comp. with 1 Chron. 11. 6. especially in vehement commotions of the mind, when a mans passion stops his speech, as it is here and Psal. 6. 3. and in other Authors.

11. * The LORD knoweth the thoughts of man p, that they are vanity. * 1 Cor. 3. 20.

p This is an answer to the foregoing Question, shall not he know? Yes, he knoweth all things, yea even the most secret things, as the thoughts of men; and in particular your atheistical thoughts, and much more doth he know your wicked practices, which you said he did not see, v. 6, 7. And he knows that they are generally vain and foolish, and that whilst you mock God and applaud your selves in such thoughts, you do not relieve, but only delude your selves with them.

12. * Blessed is the man whom thou chasteneſt, O LORD, and teacheſt him out of thy law. * Heb. 12. 11.

q And whereas these ungodly persons esteem themselves the only happy men, and conclude thy people to be of all men the most miserable, because of the manifold persecutions and afflictions which they commonly suffer, and upon this account dispute against thy providence, so far is their opinion from the truth, that the contrary is most certain, that as their prosperity is a real mischief to them, so those afflictions of good men which are accompanied with divine instructions are great and true blessings to them, themselves being judges.

13. That thou maist give him rest from the days of adversity, until the pit be digged for the wicked r.

r For their present and short troubles prepare them for and lead them to true rest and blessedness, whilest the seeming felicities of the wicked make way for those tremendous judgments which God hath prepared for them.

14. * For the LORD will not cast off his people s, neither will he forsake his inheritance. * 1 Sam. 12. 22. Rom. 11. 1, 2.

s Though God may for a time correct his people, yet he will not utterly destroy them, as he will their Enemies, but will in his time put an end to all their Calamities.

15. But judgment shall return unto righteousness t: and all the upright in heart † shall follow it u. † Heb. shall be after it.

t But although the World is now full of unrighteous judgments, and even God himself seems not to judge and administer things justly, because he suffers his people to be oppressed and the wicked to triumph over them, yet the state of things shall be otherwise ordered, God will declare himself to be a righteous Judge, and will advance and establish justice in earth, and especially among his people. u To wit, just judgment restored, they will all approve of it and imitate this justice of God in all their actions, whereas the wicked will still do wickedly, as is said Dan. 12. 10, and in a land and state of uprightness will deal unjustly, and will not behold the majesty of the Lord, as it is Isa. 26. 10. Or, shall follow him, to wit, the Lord expressed, v. 14. whose act it is to bring judgment to justice. Whilest the wicked forsake God, these will cleave to him, as being confident that, howsoever he may suffer them to be oppressed for a season, yet he will in due time plead their cause and bring forth their righteousness.

16. Who will rise up for me x against the evildoers? or who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity?

x To defend and help me. I looked hither and thither and called to my friends for their help, ſaying, who will, &c. But none of them appeared, but God alone helped me, as he ſaith in the next Verſe.

17. Unleſs the LORD had been my help, my ſoul had ‖ almoſt dwelt * in ſilence y.

‖ Or, quickly.
* Pſal. 115. 17.

y In the place of ſilence, to wit, the grave. Compare Job 3. 17, 18. Pſal. 88. 13. and 115. 17.

18. When I ſaid, My foot ſlippeth z: thy mercy, O LORD, held me up.

z I am now upon the point of falling into miſchief and utter deſtruction.

19 In the multitude of my thoughts a within me, thy comforts b delight my ſoul.

a Whilſt my heart was filled with various and perplexing thoughts, as this Hebrew word ſignifies, and tormented with cares and fears about my future ſtate. b Thy promiſes contained in thy word and ſet home by thy ſpirit upon my ſoul, and the remembrance of my former experiences of thy care and kindneſs to me. Comp. Pſal. 119. 50, 76.

20. Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowſhip with thee c, which * frameth miſchief d by a law e!

c Wilt thou take part with the unrighteous powers of the World who oppreſs thy people? It is true they partake of thy name, being called gods, Pſal. 82. 1. but I know, thou wilt not afford them thy protection and patronage, but wilt manifeſt thy juſtice and diſpleaſure againſt them. This ſeems to have been one of thoſe comfortable thoughts wherewith the Pſalmiſt delighted his ſoul, as he now ſaid. d Who deviſe wicked devices, and lay heavy burdens upon men that are more righteous than themſelves. e Either by virtue of thoſe unrighteous decrees which they have made in form of Laws: Or, by falſe pretences of law. Or, againſt law, againſt all right and the laws both of God and men.

21. They gather themſelves together againſt the ſoul f of the righteous, and condemn the innocent blood g.

f Againſt the life, as the ſoul commonly ſignifies, and as the next clauſe explains it. They are not ſatisfied with the ſpoil of their eſtates, but do alſo thirſt after their lives. g They ſhed the blood of thoſe innocent perſons whom they have wickedly condemned. Innocent blood is here put for the blood or life of an innocent perſon, as it is alſo 1 Sam. 19. 5. Mat. 27. 4.

22. But the LORD is my defence: and my God is the rock of my refuge.

23. And * he ſhall bring upon them their own iniquity h, and ſhall cut them off in their own wickedneſs i: yea, the LORD our God k ſhall cut them off.

* Pſal. 7. 16.

h (i.e.) The fruit and puniſhment of their ſins. i Either in the midſt of their ſins: Or, by their own wicked devices, the miſchief whereof he will cauſe to fall upon their own heads. k The God of Jacob, of whom they ſaid that he did not ſee nor regard them, but now they find the contrary proved to their coſt.

PSAL. XCV.

The Author of this Pſalm was David, as is affirmed Heb. 4. 7. and although the Pſalm be delivered in general terms as an invitation to mankind to yield unto the true God that praiſe, and worſhip, and obedience, which he requireth and deſerveth, yet it hath a ſpecial reference to the days of the Meſſiah; of which Chriſtians have no great reaſon to doubt, ſeeing it is ſo underſtood by the Hebrew Doctors themſelves, as alſo by the Apoſtle, Heb. 3. 7, &c. and eſpecially Heb. 4. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. where he not only expounds it of thoſe times, but proves that it cannot be meant of the former times and ſtate of the Church.

1. O Come, let us a ſing unto the LORD; let us make a joyful noiſe to the rock of our ſalvation.

a He ſpeaks to the Iſraelites, whoſe backwardneſs to this work in the times of the Goſpel was foreſeen by the Spirit of God which dictated this Pſalm.

2. Let us † come before his preſence b with thankſgiving, and make a joyful noiſe unto him with pſalms.

Iſa. 37. 33.

b Which he will then afford us in a ſingular manner in his Son the Meſſiah, in and by whom he will be viſibly preſent with the Sons of men.

3. For * the LORD is a great God, and a great King above all * gods c.

* Pſal. 95. 4 & 135. 5.
* Pſal. 86. 8.

c Above all that are accounted and called Gods, Angels, and Earthly Potentates, and eſpecially the falſe gods of the Heathens, which upon Chriſt's coming into the World were ſtruck dumb, and could no more deliver their Oracles, as Plutarch and other Heathens obſerved with admiration, nor deceive the World, but were forced to give place to the true God, and to the knowledge and worſhip of him alone, which was propagated among all Nations by the Goſpel.

4. † In his hand d are the deep places e of the earth: ‖ the ſtrength of the hills f is his alſo.

d Under his Government. e Thoſe parts which are far out of mens ſight and reach, and much more thoſe that are at mens diſpoſal. f The ſtrongeſt or higheſt Mountains are under his feet and at his diſpoſal. The ſence of the Verſe is, All the parts of the Earth, whether high or low, are ſubject to his power and providence, and therefore it is not ſtrange if all the Nations of the Earth be brought to the acknowledgment of him, and if the Gentiles receive his Goſpel.

5. † The ſea is his, and he made it: and his hands formed the dry lands.

6. O come let us worſhip, and bow down: let us kneel g before the LORD our maker.

g By which expreſſions he teacheth that even in Goſpel-times God is to be glorified and worſhipped as well with the members of our bodies as with the faculties of our Souls.

7. For he is our God h, and * we are the people of his paſture i, and the ſheep of his hand k: * to day l if ye will hear his voice m,

* Pſal. 79. 13. & 80. 1. & 100. 3.
* Heb. 3. 7. & 4. 7.

h In a peculiar manner; and therefore it will be moſt unreaſonable and abominable for us to forſake him when the Gentiles ſubmit to his Law. i Whom he feedeth and keepeth in his own proper Paſture, or in the land which he hath appropriated to himſelf. k Which are under his ſpecial care and conduct or government, which is oft expreſſed by the hand, as Numb. 4. 28. and 31. 49. Judg. 9. 29. l Heb. Forthwith or preſently, as this word is uſed Deut. 4. 4, 8. and 27. 9. Joſ. 22. 16, 18, &c. Or, this day, in this ſolemn day of Grace or of the Goſpel, which the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks of as preſent according to the manner of the Prophets. And this word, though belonging to the following clauſe, as appears from Heb. 3. 7. may ſeem to be thus placed, to ſhew that it had ſome reſpect to the foregoing words alſo. For the ſence of the place may be this. We (Jews) are or ſhall be the people of his paſture, and the ſheep of his hand, God will ſtill own us for his people this day, i. e. in the days of the Meſſiah, if this day or in that time we ſhall hear his voice. Otherwiſe God will reject us and receive the Gentiles in our ſtead. m If you will hearken to his call and obey his further commands. Which may be added as a neceſſary caution and admonition to the Iſraelites, that they might underſtand and conſider that God's preſence and favour was not abſolutely, neceſſarily, and everlaſtingly fixed to them, as they were very apt to believe, but was ſuſpended upon the condition of their continued obedience, which if they violated they ſhould be rejected, and the Gentiles performing it ſhould be received to his mercy. And this clauſe may be connected either, 1. with the former words, as the condition of their intereſt in God as their God, as was now ſaid. Or, 2. with the following Verſe, If you are willing to hearken to God's call delivered by his Son, take the following counſel.

8. Harden not your hearts n, * as in the † provocation o, and as in the day of temptation p in the wilderneſs:

* Exod. 17. 2, 7. Numb. 14. 22. & 20. 13. Deut. 6. 16.

n By wilful diſobedience and obſtinate unbelief rebelling againſt the light, and reſiſting the Holy Ghoſt and his clear diſcoveries of the truth of the Goſpel. o As you did in that bold and wicked conteſt with God in the Wilderneſs. Or, As in Meribah, which was the proper name of the place where that happened, and which was alſo called Maſſah, as is evident from Exod. 17. 7. and Deut 33. 8. p In the day in which you tempted me. Or, as in the day of Maſſah, i.e. when you were at Maſſah.

9. When q your fathers tempted me, proved me, and ſaw r my works s.

q Or, In which place. Which may belong either to Meribah and Maſſah; or to the Wilderneſs laſt mentioned. Or, Surely, as this word is oft uſed in Scripture, as hath been obſerved once and again. r Or, Although or After that they ſaw or had ſeen. Which is added as a juſt and great aggravation of their unbelief after ſuch a ſenſible and evident experience of God's power and goodneſs to them. s Both my works of mercy which gave them abundant cauſe to truſt me; and my works of juſtice, for which they had reaſon to fear and pleaſe me. Heb. my work, to wit, that great and ſtupendous work of bringing my people out of Egypt with a ſtrong hand, and of conducting them ſafely through the Red Sea into the Wilderneſs, and of deſtroying the Egyptians. For not many more of God's great works were done before they came to Meribah.

10. Forty

10. Forty years long was I grieved with this generation s, and ſaid, It is a people that do err in their hearts t: and they have not known u my ways x.

s Or rather, with that generation which then lived, who were your Anceſtors. t They do not only ſin through infirmity and the violence and ſurprizal of temptations, but their hearts are unſincere and inconſtant, and given to backſliding, and therefore there is no hopes of their amendment. Compare Pſal. 78. 8. u Or, they do not know, to wit, with a practical and uſeful knowledge, as that word commonly notes in Scripture. They did not rightly underſtand, nor duly conſider, nor ſeriouſly lay to heart. They remain ignorant after all my teachings and diſcoveries of my ſelf to them. x Either, 1. my laws or ſtatutes, which are frequently called God's ways. Or rather, 2. my works, as it is expreſſed, v. 9. which alſo are commonly ſo called. They did not know, nor conſider and remember, thoſe great things which I had wrought for them and among them.

11. Unto whom I ſware in my wrath y, † that they ſhould not enter into my reſt z.

y Being full of juſt wrath againſt them, I paſſed an irreverſible ſentence, and confirmed it by an Oath; of which we read, Numb. 14. z Into the promiſed Land, which is called the reſt, *Deut.*12.9. See alſo 1 *Chron.*23.25. *Pſal.*132.14. And this Hiſtory the Pſalmiſt propounds to the men of his Age, not as a matter of meer ſpeculation, but as an inſtruction for all after-Ages, and particularly for thoſe Iſraelites who ſhould live in the times of the Meſſias, that they ſhould take heed of falling after the ſame example of unbelief, as the Apoſtle infers from this place, Heb. 4. 11.

PSAL. XCVI.

This Pſalm was compoſed by David, upon occaſion, or at the time of the bringing of the Ark of God into the Tabernacle, which David had prepared for it in Zion, as may be gathered by comparing it with 1 *Chron.*16.7.23,24, &c. where almoſt the whole Pſalm is to be found. But as the Ark was an evident type of the Meſſiah, which David very well knew, as hath been oft noted before; ſo David's thoughts, or at leaſt the deſign of God's Spirit, which indited this Pſalm, was extended beyond and above it, even to the times of the Meſſiah, and to his glorious and univerſal Kingdom, in which not the Jews only but the Heathen Nations alſo ſhould worſhip the true God, and kiſs his Son the Meſſiah.

* 1 Chron. 16. 23. Pſal.33.3.

1. O * ſing unto the LORD a new ſong a: ſing unto the LORD all the earth b.

a Upon this new and great occaſion; not the removal of the Ark, wherein there was nothing new but an inconſiderable circumſtance of Place, and that not yet fixed, but the coming of the Meſſiah, and the confirming of the new Covenant by his blood, and the calling of the Gentiles. b All the Nations of the Earth, who ſhall then partake of thoſe great bleſſings and priviledges which are now peculiar to Iſrael.

2. Sing unto the LORD, bleſs his name: ſhew forth his ſalvation c from day to day.

c That great work of the redemption and ſalvation of the World by the Meſſias.

3. Declare his glory among the heathen, his wonders among all people d.

d You who ſhall be called out of all the Heathen Nations, to the knowledge of God and Chriſt, publiſh this glorious and wonderful work amongſt all the Heathen Nations, to whom you belong or may come.

* Pſal.95.3. 4. For the LORD is great, and greatly to be praiſed: * he is to be feared above all gods e.

e The gods of the Nations, as the next Verſe expounds it.

5. For all the gods of the nations are idols f; but the LORD made the heavens.

f Or, nothings, as they are called, 1 *Cor.*8.4. and 10.19. or vain things, as the word ſignifies, and is tranſlated by others. The ſence is, Though they have uſurped the Name and Place of the divine Majeſty, yet they have nothing of his Nature or Power in them.

6. Honour and majeſty are before him g: ſtrength and beauty are in his ſanctuary h.

g i.e. In his preſence, like beams ſhot out from his face, who is the Son of righteouſneſs. There is an inconceivable glory and majeſty in his countenance and in the place of his preſence. h Or, in his holy place, where he records his name and affords his preſence. There are the manifeſtations of God's power and grace, or goodneſs, and all his perfections.

7. Give unto the LORD, O ye kindreds of the people i: give unto the LORD k glory and ſtrength.

i Or, O ye families of the people of the World. And the word families may be underſtood, either, 1. ſtrictly and properly; and ſo it may be intimated, that this great bleſſing of ſalvation by Chriſt ſhould not be imparted to whole Nations, but only to ſome perſons taken out of every people and nation, as it is expreſſed, *Revel.*5.9. or, 2. more largely for nations, as it is taken, Gen. 12.3. *Jer.*25.9. *Zech.*14.18. and ſo it may be implied, that not only ſome few of the Heathen people ſhould be brought to the acknowledgment and worſhip of the true God, as was uſual in the times of the Old Teſtament, but that whole Nations ſhould come in to the Church of God together. k Aſcribe to him, or acknowledge to be in him.

* Pſal.29. 1,2. † Heb. of his name. 8. * Give unto the LORD the glory † due unto his name: bring an offering and come into his courts l.

l Into the Courts of his Houſe. But under this one part of worſhip he comprehends the whole worſhip of God; and he ſpeaks of the worſhip of the New Teſtament under the expreſſions of legal worſhip, as the Prophets elſewhere do, as *Mal.*1.11. and elſewhere.

* Pſal.110.3. ‖ Or, in the glorious ſanctuary. 9. O worſhip the LORD * ‖ in the beauty of holineſs m: fear before him all the earth.

m Either in the holy Place which he ſhall appoint to that end: or, cloathed with all thoſe holy Ornaments, thoſe gifts and graces, which are neceſſary and required in God's worſhip.

* Pſal.93.1. & 97.1. 10. Say among the heathen n, that * the LORD reigneth o: the world alſo ſhall be eſtabliſhed that it ſhall not be moved p: he ſhall judge the people righteouſly q.

n You converted Gentiles declare this to thoſe who yet remain in the darkneſs of Heatheniſm. o That God hath now ſet up his Throne and Kingdom in the World. p And as that Kingdom ſhall never be deſtroyed, but ſhall ſtand for ever, as is ſaid, *Dan.*2.44. ſo the Nations of the World ſhall by the means of it enjoy an eſtabliſhed and laſting peace; which is every where mentioned as one of the bleſſings which the Meſſiah ſhall give to the World, as *Pſal.*72. 3,7. *Iſa.*9.6,7. and 66. 12. *Mic.*5.5. *Zech.*9.10. q He ſhall not abuſe his invincible power and eſtabliſhed dominion to the oppreſſion of his people, as other Princes frequently do, but ſhall govern them by the Rules of juſtice and equity, which is the only foundation of a true and ſolid peace. See *Iſa.*32.17.

* Pſal.98.7. 11. Let the heavens rejoyce, and let the earth be glad r, * let the ſea roar, and the fulneſs thereof.

* Rev.19.11. 13. Before the LORD s; for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth t: * he ſhall judge the world with righteouſneſs, and the people with his truth u.

s At the preſence and approach of their Lord and Maker. t To take to himſelf that power and authority which belongs to him, to ſet up his Throne and Dominion among all the Nations of the Earth. u Or, in his faithfulneſs, (i.e.) ſo as he hath promiſed to do. He will certainly and abundantly fulfil all God's promiſes made to his people.

PSAL. XCVII.

This Pſalm ſeems to have both the ſame Author and the ſame ſcope with the former. And although the Pſalmiſt might take occaſion to pen it, from thoſe ſignal manifeſtations of God's power and righteouſneſs on his behalf, and againſt his enemies, yet he had a further aim in it, even at the coming of the Meſſias, which he here deſcribes. And whereas there are two comings of Chriſt plainly diſtinguiſhed in the New Teſtament, theſe are but confuſedly mentioned in the Old Teſtament: and the Prophets ſometimes ſpeak of his firſt coming in words and phraſes, which ſeem more properly to agree to the ſecond, as *Mal.*3.1,2. and 4.1,2. But whatſoever the Pſalmiſt deſigned or underſtood, this is certain, that the Holy Ghoſt meant the laſt clauſe of v. 7. of Chriſt, as is affirmed, *Heb.*1.6. and therefore it is more than probable that all the reſt of the Pſalm is to be underſtood of him, and of his coming and kingdom.

1. THE LORD reigneth a, let the earth rejoyce: let the † multitude of Iſles b be glad thereof.

† Heb. many, or great Iſles. a See a See on Pſal. 96. 10. b The Gentile Nations, as this word being uſed Iſai. 42. 4, is expounded Matth. 12. 21. even thoſe which are moſt remote from Judæa, (then the only ſeat of God's people and worſhip) from which they were divided by the Sea, or to which they uſually went by Sea: ſuch places being commonly called Iles in Scripture, as Gen. 10. 5. Iſa. 11. 11, & 66. 19. Which being mentioned, becauſe there might be ſome doubt about them, it is ſufficiently implyed that thoſe Countries which were nearer to them ſhould unqueſtionably partake of the ſame priviledge.

2. Clouds and darkneſs are round about him c: * righteouſneſs and judgment d are the || habitation e of his throne.

* Pſal. 80. 14.

c A dark cloud doth encompaſs him. Wherein he ſeems to allude to that dark Cloud in which God did antiently ſo often manifeſt his preſence for the comfort of his Saints, and for the terror and puniſhment of evil-doers. The deſign of theſe words is to deſcribe either, 1. The depth and unſearchableneſs of God's judgments. Or, 2. The obſcurity of Chriſt's coming, that the Divine Majeſty did veil himſelf with fleſh, and came not with that outward ſplendour which the Jews expected. Or rather, 3. The terror of his preſence and coming to his Enemies, of which he manifeſtly ſpeaks in the following Verſes; and of which the Prophets frequently ſpeak when they make mention of his coming, as Joel 2. 31, 32. Mal. 4. 1. d (i.e.) Righteous judgment, or righteouſneſs in judgment. e Or, the foundation, or eſtabliſhment, for the Throne is eſtabliſhed (and the Hebrew Verb there is the ſame from whence this word here comes) by righteouſneſs, Prov. 16. 12. All his Decrees and Adminiſtrations are grounded upon and managed with righteouſneſs.

3. A fire goeth before him, and burneth up his enemies round about f.

f This Fire, and Lightning, and Earthquake, and the ſad effects of them mentioned here, and v. 4, 5. ſignify thoſe dreadful judgments of God which ſhould be inflicted upon the Jews and others for their refuſal and contempt of the Meſſias; which was foretold in the Old Teſtament, and accompliſhed in the New Teſtament.

* Pſal. 77. 18.

4. * His lightnings enlightned the world g: the earth ſaw and trembled.

g This phraſe ſignifies not ſo much illumination as terrour and judgments, as appears both from the following words, and from the conſtant uſe of the phraſe in that ſence, as Pſal. 18. 14. and 144. 6, &c.

* Micah 1. 4. Nah. 1. 5.

5. * The hills h melted like wax at the preſence of the LORD: at the preſence of the LORD of the whole earth i.

* Pſal. 19. 1. & 50. 6.

6. * The heavens k declare his righteouſneſs: and all the people ſee his glory l.

7 * Confounded be m all they that ſerve graven images, that boaſt themſelves of idols: * worſhip him all ye gods n.

m Let them be aſhamed of their former folly herein, and be thereby brought to deteſt and forſake them, and thoſe who will obſtinately perſiſt in their impiety and Idolatry, let them be brought to confuſion. Or, They ſhall be confounded: for this may be a prediction and not an imprecation. n All you whom the Gentiles have made the objects of their worſhip, and who are capable of giving him worſhip; which two qualifications agree principally, if not ſolely to the Angels of God, whom the Heathens manifeſtly worſhipped in their Images as an inferiour ſort of Gods, of whom therefore this Text is expounded, Heb. 1. 6.

8. Zion o heard p, and was glad, and the daughters of Judah q rejoyced becauſe of thy judgments r, O LORD.

o Thy people dwelling in Zion, or Jeruſalem and Judah, to whom Chriſt came, and among whom the Goſpel was firſt preached. Or, thy Church and People who both in the Prophetical writings are oft called Zion. p The fame of thy judgments, as the following words declare, the ruine of Idolatry and the ſetting up the Kingdom of the Meſſias in the World. q Particular Churches or rather perſons members of Zion. r Not that they took pleaſure in the ruine of others, but becauſe that made way for the advancement of God's glory and Chriſt's Kingdom in the World.

9. For thou, LORD, art high above all the earth: thou art exalted far above all gods s.

s As thou always wert ſo in truth, ſo thou haſt now proved and declared thy ſelf to be ſuch in the Eyes of the whole World, by ſubduing them under thy feet.

* Pſal. 34. 14. Amos 5. 15. Rom. 12. 9.

t O all you who love and worſhip the true God and his anointed, and rejoice in the eſtabliſhment of his Kingdom. u Shew your love to him by your abhorrency of all Idolatry, which is ſometimes called evil or ſin by way of eminency, and of all other wickedneſs. x And although you that love the Lord Chriſt and his Kingdom will meet with many troubles and perſecutions, yet be not diſcouraged, for he will preſerve you in troubles, and in his time deliver you out of them all.

PSAL. XCVIII.

A Pſalm.

The matter and ſcope of this Pſalm is the ſame with the former, and is an evident prediction of the coming of the Meſſias, and of the bleſſed effects thereof.

* Pſal. 33. 3 & 96. 1. * 1 Sam. 2. 1. 26. Heb.

1. O * Sing unto the LORD a new ſong, for he hath done marvellous things: his right hand and his holy arm * hath gotten him the victory a.

a God by his own only power hath overcome all difficulties and Enemies, and hath in ſpight of all ſet Chriſt upon his Throne, and propagated his Kingdom in the World.

* Iſai. 52. 10. || Or, revealed.

2. * The LORD hath made known his ſalvation b: his righteouſneſs c hath he || openly ſhewed in the ſight of the heathen.

b The redemption or ſalvation of the World by the Meſſias: which was hitherto reſerved as a ſecret among the Jews, yea was not thoroughly known and believed by the moſt of the Jews themſelves. c Either his faithfulneſs in accompliſhing this great promiſe of ſending the Meſſias: or his goodneſs and mercy oft called by this Hebrew word: or the righteouſneſs of God or of Chriſt revealed in the Goſpel.

3. He hath remembred his mercy and his truth c toward the houſe of Iſrael: all the ends of the earth d have ſeen e the ſalvation of our God.

c He hath now actually given that mercy which he had promiſed to the Iſraelites. d All the Inhabitants of the Earth from one end to another. e (i.e.) Enjoyed it, as this word is oft uſed, as hath been proved again and again.

4. Make a joyful noiſe unto the LORD all the earth f: make a loud noiſe, and rejoice, and ſing praiſe.

f Becauſe you all do now partake of the ſame priviledges with the Jews, join with them in worſhipping and praiſing of God.

5. Sing unto the LORD with the harp; with the harp, and the voice of a pſalm g.

g The worſhip of the New Teſtament is here deſcribed in phraſes taken from the rites of the old, as Pſal. 92. 3. and oft elſewhere.

6. With trumpets, and ſound of cornet: make a joyful noiſe before the LORD, the king.

7. Let

7. Let the ſea roar, and the fulneſs thereof h: the world, and they that dwell therein.

h All thoſe Creatures wherewith it is repleniſhed, which by a poetical ſtrain are invited to praiſe God. See of this and the next Verſes the notes on Pſal. 96. 11, 12, 13.

8. Let the floods clap their hands: let the hills be joyful, together,

* Pſal. 96. 13. 9. Before the LORD; * for he cometh to judge the earth: with righteouſneſs ſhall he judge the world, and the people with equity.

PSAL. XCIX.

This Pſalm is ſuppoſed to be David's, and the matter of it ſeems to ſuit to his time and the ſtate of affairs which then was: although as David was a Type of Chriſt, ſo this Pſalm may look beyond David unto the Meſſias. But it doth not ſpeak ſo fully nor clearly of the Meſſias as the foregoing Pſalms do.

* Pſal. 93. 1. * Pſal. 80. 1. 1. * THE LORD reigneth, let the people a tremble: * he ſitteth between the cherubims b, let the earth c † be moved d.

a To wit, ſuch as are Enemies to God and to his people. b Upon the Ark. See 1 Sam. 4. 4. He is preſent with his people to protect them and to puniſh their Enemies. c The people of the Earth, by comparing this clauſe with the former. d To wit, with fear and trembling, as in the former clauſe.

2. The LORD is great in Zion e, and he is high above all people f.

e In the Hebrew Text the words lie in this order, The Lord in Zion (i. e. which dwelleth in Zion, as is ſaid Pſal. 9. 11. Iſa. 8. 18. Joel 3. 21.) is great. f Above all the people of the Earth, of whom he ſpake, v. 1. who ſhall exalt themſelves againſt him.

3. Let them g praiſe thy great and terrible name: for it is holy h.

g To wit, all people laſt mentioned. h For it is not only great but holy, and therefore moſt praiſe-worthy.

* Pſal. 98. 6. 4. * The kings ſtrength alſo loveth judgment n: thou doſt eſtabliſh equity o, thou executeſt judgment and righteouſneſs in Jacob p.

n Though his Dominion be abſolute and uncontroulable and his power irreſiſtible, yet he doth abuſe it to Tyranny and Oppreſſion, as the Princes of the World commonly do, but tempers and manageth it with righteouſneſs, and not only doth judge juſtly, but, which is more, loves to do ſo. The Kings ſtrength is by a known Hebraiſm put for the ſtrong, or powerful King. o To wit, in all thy proceedings. Equity is thy conſtant and ſtable courſe. p Amongſt thine own people; whom, when they do amiſs, he puniſheth no leſs than other people, as he notes below v. 8. whereby he ſheweth that he is no reſpector of perſons, but a righteous and impartial Judge to all ſorts of men.

5. Exalt ye the LORD our God, and worſhip at his foot-ſtool q: for ‖ he is holy r.

q Before the Ark; which is ſo called, 1 Chron. 28. 2. Pſal. 132. 7. r Or rather, for it (to wit the Ark) is holy: it is conſecrated to be a pledge of God's preſence and the only place of God's publick worſhip.

6. Moſes and Aaron among his prieſts, and Samuel s among them that call upon his name t: they called upon the LORD, and he anſwered them u.

s He preſſeth them to perform the duty of praiſing and worſhipping God by the examples of three eminent perſons who practiſed this duty, and that with happy ſucceſs. He reckoneth Moſes among the Prieſts not without cauſe, partly becauſe before the inſtitution of the Prieſthood he executed that office, Exod. 24. 6. Numb. 7. and partly becauſe he oft interceded to God for the people; which was a very conſiderable part of the Prieſts work. See Numb. 6. 23, &c. Joel 2. 17. t Who uſed frequently and ſolemnly to intercede with God on the behalf of the people. So the general expreſſion is here uſed ſynecdochically for this particular kind of prayer: ſuch Synecdoche's being very frequent in Scripture. u Moſes, Exod. 32. and elſewhere; Aaron, Numb. 16. Samuel, 1 Sam. 7. 9. and 12. 19. Compare Jer. 15. 1.

7. He ſpake unto them x in the cloudy pillar: they kept his teſtimonies, and the ordinance that he gave them y.

x i. e. To ſome of them; for the expreſſion is only indefinite, and therefore doth not neceſſarily reach to all of them: to Moſes frequently; to Aaron, Exod. 19. 24. and 33. 9, 10, 11. Numb. 12. 5. And for Samuel, he anſwered him, if not by words, yet really and by his actions, thundering againſt the Philiſtins, 1 Sam. 7. 9, &c. which ſuppoſeth a Cloud, if not a Cloudy Pillar. y This is added not only for their commendation, but for the inſtruction of the Iſraelites, to teach them that God will not hear the Prayers of them who do not keep his Commandments.

8. Thou anſweredſt them z, O LORD our God: thou waſt a God that forgaveſt them a, though thou tookeſt vengeance of their inventions b.

z The interceſſors before mentioned. a Either, 1. Moſes and Aaron, who did ſin, and whoſe ſins God did pardon, yet ſo as that he did puniſh them with excluſion from the Land of Canaan; of which ſee Numb. 20. 12. Deut. 32. 50, 51. Or rather, 2. the people for whom they prayed; which, though not expreſſed, may be eaſily underſtood from the following words, and from the Hiſtories to which theſe words relate. For this forgiving was evidently the effect of God's anſwering the Prayers of the perſons above mentioned. And therefore as their Prayers recorded in Scripture were not for the pardon of their own ſins, but for the pardon of the peoples ſins, ſo this forgiveneſs granted was for the ſins of the people. And whereas the people are not here mentioned; it muſt be remembred that in Scripture the relative is frequently put without the antecedent, as it is Numb. 7. 89. and 114. 2. Prov. 14. 26. b This clauſe limits and explains the former. Thou didſt forgive the ſins of the people not abſolutely and univerſally, for thou didſt puniſh them ſeverely, but ſo far as not to inflict that total and final deſtruction upon them which they deſerved, and thou hadſt threatned. See Exod. 32. 10, 14, 34.

9. Exalt the LORD our God, and worſhip at his holy hill c: for the LORD our God is holy.

c Either in Zion: or in his Church typified by it, and oft called Zion.

A Pſalm of ‖ praiſe.

This Pſalm ſeems to have been compoſed for the uſe of the Iſraelites in their thank-offerings, or upon other ſolemn occaſions of praiſing God, as the Title ſpeaks; but withal it hath a further proſpect even to the days of the Meſſiah, as ſome of the Hebrew Doctors acknowledge, and to the calling of the Gentiles whom he invites to join with them in the praiſes of God their Lord and Maker.

1. MAke a joyful noiſe a unto the LORD † all ye lands b.

a Partly with Voices and Songs of rejoicing and thankſgiving; and partly with muſical inſtruments as the manner then was. b All the Inhabitants of the Earth. Or, all the land, (i. e.) all the people of Iſrael dwelling in this land. Although his invitation ſeems to be more general, extending alſo to the Gentiles, of whom many even in thoſe days joined themſelves to the Church of God.

2. Serve the LORD with gladneſs, come before his preſence with ſinging.

3. Know ye that the LORD he is God, it is he that hath made us c, ‖ and not we our ſelves d, * we are his people, and the ſheep of his paſture.

c Both by Creation, and by Adoption and Regeneration, whereby he made us his people, which is alſo called a creation or making, as Deut. 32. 6. Iſa. 29. 23. and 43. 7. Eph. 2. 10. Therefore we owe him homage and ſervice, and him only, and not other Gods who made us not.

4. Enter into his gates d with thankſgiving, and into his courts with praiſe: be thankful unto him, and bleſs his name.

PSAL. CI.

A Pſalm of David.

This Pſalm was compoſed by David between times of God's promiſing the Kingdom to him and his actual and plenary poſſeſſion of it, as appears both from v. 2. and from the contexture of the Pſalm, wherein he ſpeaks not of his preſent practice, but of his purpoſe for the future, and ſolemnly declares his reſolution, and obligeth himſelf to theſe things when he ſhall be in a capacity to put them in Execution.

1. I Will ſing of mercy and judgment a: unto thee, O LORD, will I ſing.

a Either, 1. of God towards me; of God's mercy towards me, and of his juſt judgments upon mine Enemies. Or, 2. of mine towards my people, I will in my Song declare my obligation and full purpoſe to execute mercy and judgment in my Dominion; which are the two Pillars of Government: of which he ſpeaks in the following Verſes. Interpreters are much divided which to chuſe. Poſſibly both may be joyned together, and the ſence may be this, I will praiſe thee, O Lord, as for all thy other excellencies, ſo particularly for thoſe two Royal perfections of mercy and juſtice or judgment, which thou haſt ſo eminently diſcovered in the Government of the World, and of thy people Iſrael; and I will make it my care and buſineſs to imitate and follow thee as in other things, ſo eſpecially in thoſe vertues which are ſo neceſſary for the diſcharge of my truſt and the good government of thy and my people.

2. I will behave my ſelf wiſely in a perfect way b; O when wilt thou come unto me c! I will walk within my houſe d with a perfect heart e.

b I will manage all my affairs with wiſdom and integrity; which are the two chief qualifications requiſite for all men, Mat. 10. 16. and moſt neceſſary in Princes. c O when wilt thou give me the Kingdom which thou haſt promiſed me, that ſo I may be capable of executing theſe good purpoſes both for my own comfort and for the benefit of thy people? Or, without an interrogation, as this Particle is uſed, Exod. 20. 24. when thou ſhalt come to me, to wit, in the performance of that promiſe to me. He ſpeaks not excluſively, as if he would not walk wiſely and righteouſly in the mean time, but emphatically, that he would continue to do ſo when he was advanced to the Kingdom, and that he would not ſuffer himſelf to be corrupted by his Royal Power and Dignity, as the Princes of the World commonly were. Withal he may intimate, that now he could not do as he deſired, and that by the neceſſity of his affairs he was forced to make uſe of ſuch men as he did not like, and to wink at thoſe miſcarriages, which it was not now in his power to reform. God is oft ſaid in Scripture to come to men when he fulfils a promiſe to them, or confers a favour or bleſſing upon them, as Gen. 18. 10. Exod. 20. 24. Pſal. 80. 2. Iſa. 35. 4, &c. d In my own Court and Family, as well as in my publick adminiſtrations; knowing how great an influence the example of my private converſation will have upon my people either to reform or corrupt them. e This Clauſe adds weight to the former, I will not only walk in a perfect or right way (which a man may do for politick reaſons or with evil deſign, but I will do ſo) with an upright and honeſt heart, which is moſt acceptable to God.

3. I will ſet no † wicked thing before mine eyes f: I hate the work of them that turn aſide g, it h ſhall not cleave to me.

f To wit, to look upon it with deliberation and deſign, or with deſire and delight, as this phraſe here and elſewhere implies. If any ungodly or unjuſt thing ſhall be ſuggeſted to me, whatſoever ſpecious pretences it may be covered with, as reaſon of ſtate or worldly advantage, I will caſt it out of my mind and thoughts with abhorrency, ſo far will I be from putting it in execution. g From God and from his Laws. h To wit, ſuch work: Or, the Contagion of ſuch Examples. I will neither imitate nor endure ſuch works, nor ſuch workers.

4. A froward heart i ſhall depart from me k: I will not know l a wicked perſon.

i A man of a corrupt mind and wicked life, ſuch as other Princes chuſe and prefer as being ſuitable to themſelves, and to their wicked deſigns. k Shall be turned out of my Court, leſt they ſhould tempt me or infect the reſt of my Family, or be injurious or ſcandalous to my people. l i.e. Not own nor countenance.

5. Whoſo privily ſlandereth his neighbour m, him will I cut off: him that hath an high look, and a proud heart n, will not I ſuffer.

m Such as by ſecret and falſe informations and accuſations of others ſeek to gain my favour and to advance themſelves by the ruine of others; which are the common peſts of Courts and Kingdoms. n Theſe he mentions, becauſe Pride is the common Plague of Courts, and the Fountain of many enormities in Courtiers; it makes them imperious and inſolent towards the poor oppreſſed Subjects that reſort to them for relief; it inclines them to thoſe counſels and courſes not which are beſt for the publick good, but which are moſt for their own honour and advantage; it makes them oppreſſive and injurious to others that they may have wherewith to ſatisfie their own luſts.

6. Mine eyes ſhall be upon o the faithful p of the land, that they may dwell with me q: he that walketh ‖ in a perfect way r, he ſhall ſerve me s.

o Either, 1. to find them out. So, 2. to favour and encourage them, as this phraſe is oft uſed, as Pſal. 34. 15. Jer. 39. 12. and 40. 4. p Men of truth, juſtice and integrity, who will be faithful firſt to God and then to me and to my people. q Or, to ſit, or abide, or converſe with me, in mine Houſe and Counſels and publick Adminiſtrations. r In the way of God's precepts which are pure and perfect. s In domeſtick and publick employments.

7. He that worketh deceit t, ſhall not dwell within my houſe: he that telleth lies u, ſhall † not tarry in my ſight w.

t He who ſhall uſe any frauds, or cheats, or ſubtil artifices to abuſe or wrong any of my people. Which David's Courtiers were more likely to endeavour, becauſe he would not permit any open violence. u He that ſhall abuſe me with lies, as Courtiers uſually do their Princes, either to defend and excuſe the guilty, or to betray the innocent. x I will certainly and immediately baniſh him from my preſence.

8. I will * early y deſtroy all the wicked of the land: that I may cut off all wicked doers from the city of the LORD z.

* Jer. 21. 12.

y Speedily and without delay, as ſoon as I ariſe in the morning, or, as ſoon as I am ſeated in the Throne, that ſo I may both prevent all that miſchief which otherwiſe they might do; and hinder the infection of others by their evil example; and diſcourage and deter all my Subjects from the like practices. Heb. In the morning, i.e. every morning, as the ſame phraſe is uſed alſo, Job 7. 18. Pſal. 73. 14. Iſa. 33. 2. The morning was the time allotted for the exerciſe of judgment. See Jer. 21. 12. z Either, 1. from Jeruſalem, which, though now in the hands of the Jebuſites, he looks upon by an eye of faith, as if he had it in poſſeſſion; which he deſigned for the chief and Royal City of his Kingdom, and for the ſeat of the Ark and Worſhip of God. And therefore this place above all others was to be purged and preſerved from wickedneſs and wicked men. Or, 2. from the whole Nation or Commonwealth of Iſrael: for David did intend and was obliged to reform not only that one City, but his whole Kingdom, which alſo may come under the name of a City, as being combined and united under one Government: for which reaſon the name of City is given both to the whole Church of Chriſt, as Iſa. 26. 1. Heb. 12. 22. Revel. 20. 9. and to the great Anti-Church, the Kingdom of myſtical Babylon, Revel. 11. 8, 13. and 17. 18, &c.

PSAL. CII.

A Prayer ‖ of the afflicted when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his complaint before the LORD a.

a This Pſalm contains a form of Prayer and Expoſtulation with God, compoſed for the uſe of all true Iſraelites, in the name and behalf of their Mother the Church of Iſrael. It ſeems to have been compoſed in the time of their Captivity and near the end of it, v. 13, 14. But as the literal Jeruſalem was a type of the ſpiritual or of the Church of God and of Chriſt, and the rebuilding of the former a type of the reviving and edification of the latter, ſo the Pſalmiſt looks through that mercy of the rebuilding of the City of Jeruſalem and the Temple to the further progreſs and to the end and perfection of that work, which was in the coming of the Meſſiah, by whom it was to be compleated, and by whom the Gentiles were to be brought to the knowledge and worſhip of the true God.

1. HEar my prayer, O LORD, and let my cry come unto thee.

2. Hide not thy face from me in the day when I am in trouble, incline thine ear unto me: in the day when I call, anſwer me ſpeedily.

3. For my days are conſumed ‖ like ſmoak b: and my bones c are burnt as an hearth d.

‖ Or, (as ſome read) into ſmoak. Pſal. 37. 20.

b Which paſſeth away in obſcurity and ſwiftly and irrecoverably. Or, into ſmoak, as wood or any combuſtible matter put into the fire waſteth away into ſmoak and aſhes. c The moſt ſtrong and ſolid parts of my body which ſeemed ſafeſt from the fire. d Either as an hearth is heated or burnt up by the coals which are laid upon it: or as the hearth being ſo heated, burns up that which is put upon it.

4. My

4. My heart is ſmitten, and withered like graſs e; ſo that I forget to eat my bread f.

e Which is ſmitten and withered by the heat of the Sun, either whilſt it ſtands, or after it is cut down. f Becauſe my mind is wholly ſwallowed up with the contemplation of my own miſeries.

* Job 19. 20. Lam. 4. 8. ‖ Or, fleſh.

5. By reaſon of the voice of my groaning, * my bones cleave to my ‖ skin g.

g My fleſh being quite conſumed with exceſſive ſorrows.

* Job 30. 29.

6. * I am like a pelican h in the wilderneſs: I am like an owl of the deſart.

h Or, bittern, as the ſame word is tranſlated, Iſa. 34. 11. Zeph. 2. 14. It is a ſolitary and mournful bird, as alſo the Owl here following is.

7. I watch, and am as a ſparrow i alone upon the houſe-top.

i Which hath loſt its mate, and then is very ſad and ſolitary, as ſome report; although that be uncertain and improbable. But this Hebrew word doth not only ſignifie a Sparrow, but in general any bird, as Levit. 14. 4. Deut. 14. 11. Dan. 4. 9, 11, 30. And ſo it may here deſign any one or more ſort of birds, which uſed to ſit alone watching and mourning upon houſe-tops.

8. Mine enemies reproach me all the day: and they that are mad againſt me, are ſworn againſt me k.

k Or, and being mad or enraged at or againſt me they ſwear againſt me; they ſwear they will do me yet more miſchief: or, they ſwear by me, they make uſe of my name and miſery in their forms of ſwearing and imprecation; as when they would expreſs their malicious and miſchievous intentions againſt another, they ſwear that they will uſe him or make him as miſerable as a Jew. See the like expreſſions Numb. 5. 21. Iſa. 61. 15. Jer. 29. 22.

* Pſal. 42. 3. & 80. 5.

9 For l I have eaten aſhes like bread m, and * mingled my drink with weeping n.

l So this Verſe gives a reaſon either of his great ſadneſs expreſſed v. 6, 7. or why they ſwore by him in the ſence laſt given. Or, Surely, as this Particle is oft uſed. Or, Therefore, becauſe of thoſe bitter reproaches laſt mentioned. m The ſence is, Duſt and aſhes are as conſtant and familiar to me as the eating of my bread, I cover my head with them, I ſit, yea lie down and roll my ſelf in them, as Mourners oft did, 2 Sam. 13: 19. Job 2. 8, 12. and 16. 15. Iſa. 47. 1. Mich. 1. 10. by which means the aſhes might eaſily be mingled with their meat, as tears were with their drink in the next Clauſe. n He alludes to the cuſtom of mingling their Wine with Water.

10. Becauſe of thine indignation and thy wrath o: for thou haſt lifted me up, and caſt me down p.

o Becauſe I do not only conflict with men, but with the Almighty God, and with his anger. p As a man lifts up a perſon or thing as high as he can, that he may caſt it down to the ground with greater force. Or he aggravates his preſent reproach and miſery by the conſideration of that great honour and happineſs to which God had formerly advanced him, as Job did, ch. 29. & 30. and the Church, Lam. 1. 7.

* Pſal. 109. 23. & 144. 4. Eccl. 6. 12. * Iſa. 40. 6. Jam. 1. 10. Pſal. 109. 13.

11. * My days q are like a ſhadow that declineth r: and I am * withered like graſs.

q Our hopes and comforts and happineſs; days being oft put for happy days or an happy ſtate, as Pſal. 37. 18. Lam. 5. 21. as elſewhere they are put more generally for the events which happen in thoſe days: in both which caſes it is a Metonymy of the Adjunct. r Or, that is extended or ſtretched out to its utmoſt length, as it is when the Sun is ſetting, when it ſpeedily and totally vaniſheth. And juſt ſo the hopes of our reſtitution, which ſometimes we have, are quickly cut off and diſappointed.

* Lam. 5. 19. * Pſal. 135. 13.

12. But * thou, O LORD, ſhalt endure for ever s, and * thy remembrance t unto all generations.

s But this is my comfort, although we die and our hopes vaniſh, yet our God is everlaſting and unchangeable, and therefore invincible by all his and our enemies, conſtant in his counſels and purpoſes of mercy to his Church, ſtedfaſt and faithful in the performance of all his promiſes; and therefore he both can and will deliver his people. t Either, 1. the fame and memory of thy wondrous works. Or rather, 2. thy name, Jehovah, mentioned in the former clauſe, which is called by this very word, God's remembrance or memorial, and that unto all generations, Exod. 3. 15. Thus this clauſe exactly anſwers to the former; and both of them deſcribe the Eternity of God's exiſtence, whereby the Pſalmiſt relieves and ſupports himſelf under the conſideration of his own and his people's frailty and vanity.

13. Thou ſhalt ariſe, and have mercy upon Zion u: for the time to favour her, yea the ſet time x is come.

u Upon Jeruſalem, or thy Church and People. x The end of thoſe ſeventy years which thou haſt fixed: of which ſee Jer. 25. 12. and 29. 10. Dan. 9. 2.

14. For thy ſervants take pleaſure in her ſtones, and favour the duſt thereof y.

y Thy people value the duſt and rubbiſh of the holy City more than all the Palaces of the Earth, and paſſionately deſire that it may be rebuilt.

15. So the heathen ſhall fear the name of the LORD: and all the kings of the earth thy glory z.

z Which was in ſome ſort fulfilled when the rebuilding of the Temple and City of God was carried on and finiſhed through ſo many and great difficulties and oppoſitions, to the admiration, envy and terrour of their Enemies, as we read Nehem. 6. 16. Compare Pſal. 126. 2. but much more truly and fully in building of the ſpiritual Jeruſalem by Chriſt, unto whom the Gentiles were gathered, and the Princes of the World paid their acknowledgments.

16. When the LORD ſhall build up Zion, he ſhall appear in his glory a.

a His glorious Power and Wiſdom and Goodneſs ſhall be manifeſted to all the World.

17. He will regard the prayer of the deſtitute b, and not deſpiſe c their prayer.

b i. e. Of his poor forſaken deſpiſed people in Babylon. c i. e. Will accept and anſwer.

* Pſal. 22. 31.

18. This ſhall be written d for the generation to come e: and * the people which ſhall be created f ſhall praiſe the LORD.

d This wonderful deliverance ſhall not be loſt nor forgotten, but carefully recorded by thy people. e For the inſtruction and incouragement of all ſucceeding Generations. The Singular number put for the Plural, as is ordinary. f Which may be underſtood either, 1. of the Jews which ſhould be reſtored, who were in a manner dead and buried in the grave, and meer dry bones, Iſa. 26. 19. Ezek. 37. and therefore their reſtauration might well be called a Creation, or, as it is elſewhere, a Reſurrection. Or, 2. of the Gentiles who ſhould be converted, whoſe converſion is frequently and might very juſtly be called a ſecond Creation. See Iſa. 27. 11. and 43. 1, 7, 15. and 65. 18. Eph. 2. 10, 15.

19. For he hath looked down g from the height of his ſanctuary h: from heaven did the LORD behold the earth.

g To wit, upon us not like an idle Spectator, but with an eye of pity and relief, as the next Verſe declares. h From his higher or upper Sanctuary, to wit, Heaven, as the next Clauſe explains it, which is called God's high and holy place, Iſa. 57. 15.

* Pſal. 22. 31. † Heb. the children of death.

20. * To hear the groaning of the priſoner, to looſe † thoſe that are appointed to death i.

i To releaſe his poor Captives out of Babylon, and, which is more, from the Chains and Fetters of Sin and Satan, and from eternal deſtruction.

21. To declare the name of the LORD in Zion, and his praiſe in Jeruſalem k, k That they being delivered might publiſh and celebrate the name and praiſes of God in his Church.

22. When the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms to praiſe the LORD l.

l When the Gentiles ſhall gather themſelves to the Jews, and join with them in the praiſe and worſhip of the true God, and of the Meſſias. This Verſe ſeems to be added to intimate that although the Pſalmiſt in this Pſalm reſpects the deliverance of the Jews out of Babylon, yet he had a further deſign and a principal reſpect unto that greater and more general deliverance of his Church and People by the Meſſias.

23. He m † weakned my ſtrength in the way, he ſhortned my days n.

where; the life of man being oft compared to a journeying, or travelling, and death to his journeys end. And the Pſalmiſt here ſpeaks (as other ſacred Writers do elſewhere, and as all ſorts of Writers frequently do) of the whole Commonwealth, as of one man, and of its continuance, as of the life of one man. And ſo this ſeems to be the matter of his complaint and humble expoſtulation with God, O Lord, thou didſt chuſe us out of all the World to be thy peculiar people, and didſt plant us in Canaan, and cauſe a glorious Temple to be built to thy Name, to be the only place of thy publick and ſolemn Worſhip in the World, and didſt make great and glorious Promiſes, that thine eyes and heart ſhould be upon it perpetually, 1 Kings 9.3. and that thy people ſhould be planted in thy Land, ſo as not to be moved any more, or afflicted, as they had been in the days of the Judges, & *Sam.*7.10,11. From whence we promiſed to our ſelves a long and ſetled proſperity. But alas, how ſoon were our hopes blaſted, not long after the beginning of our ſettlement, in Rehoboam's time, and ſo ſucceſſively in the courſe of our affairs under the following Kings, till at laſt thou didſt give us up to ruine and deſolation, as at this day. And this he doth not alledge to accuſe God, or excuſe himſelf, or his people, but only that he might move the divine Majeſty to ſhew them ſome pity, conſidering the ſhortneſs of their days, and his own Eternity, as he purſues the Argument in the following Verſes. n The days of my life, or of my proſperous ſtate, as above, v. 11. for adverſity is a kind of death, and is frequently ſo called.

* Job 36.20. Heb.

24. I ſaid, O my God; * take me not away o in the midſt of my days p: thy years are throughout all generations q.

o Do not wholly cut off and deſtroy thy people of Iſrael. p Before they come to a full age and ſtature, and to the plenary poſſeſſion of thy promiſes, and eſpecially of that great and fundamental promiſe of the Meſſiah, in and by whom alone their happineſs is to be compleated, and until whoſe coming thy Church is in its nonage; of which ſee *Gal.*4.1,2,3,4. Poſſibly the Pſalmiſt (whom ſome learned Interpreters ſuppoſe to be Daniel) may have reſpect to that Prophecy, *Dan.*9.24,25. which probably was publiſhed before this time: for this time was almoſt preciſely the midſt of the days between the building of the material Temple by Solomon, and the building of the ſpiritual Temple or the Church by the Meſſias; there being about a thouſand years diſtance between thoſe two periods, whereof ſeventy Prophetical Weeks, or four hundred and ninety Years, were yet to come. And ſo he prays that God would not root them out in this Babyloniſh Captivity, but would graciouſly reſtore them to their own Land, and preſerve them as a Church and Nation there, until the coming of the Meſſias. q Though we ſucceſſively die and periſh, yet thou art the everlaſting and unchangeable God, and therefore art and wilt ever be able to deliver thy people, and faithful in performing all thy promiſes; and therefore we beſeech thee to pity our frail and languiſhing ſtate, and give us a more ſetled and laſting felicity than yet we have enjoyed; and therefore we truſt that thy people ſhall continue and be eſtabliſhed before thee, as he ſaith, v. 28. becauſe as thou art the everlaſting God, ſo thou haſt made an everlaſting Covenant with them, *Pſal.*105.10. *Iſa.*55.3. *Jer.*32.40. to be their God for ever; and therefore thou will not now forſake or reject us.

* Heb.1.10.

25. * Of old haſt thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands r.

r The Eternity of God looks both backward and forward, it is both without beginning and without end. The former is affirmed and illuſtrated, v. 24,26,27. the latter is clearly implied in this Verſe: Thou hadſt a being before the Creation of the World, when there was nothing but Eternity, but the Earth and Heavens had a beginning given them by thy Almighty Power.

* Iſai.15.6. † Heb. ſtand.

26. * They ſhall periſh s, but thou ſhalt † endure: yea, all of them ſhall wax old t like a garment u; as a veſture ſhalt thou change them, and they ſhall be changed.

s Either, 1. as to the ſubſtance of them, which ſhall be annihilated. Or, 2. as to their preſent nature and uſe. See *Iſa.*65.17. and 66.22. 2 *Pet.*3.7,10,11. The Heavens and the Earth, although they be the moſt permanent of all viſible beings, and their continuance is oft mentioned to ſignifie the ſtability and immutability of things, yet if compared with thee, are as nothing, they had a beginning and ſhall have an end. t (i.e.) Decay and periſh. u Which is worn out and laid aſide, and exchanged for another. And ſo ſhall this preſent frame of Heaven and Earth be.

27. But thou art the ſame, and thy years ſhall have no end.

28. The children of thy ſervants ſhall continue x, and their ſeed ſhall be eſtabliſhed before thee y.

x Though the Heavens and the Earth periſh, and though we thy ſervants pine away in our iniquities, according to thy righteous ſentence and threatning, *Levit.*26.39. and die in Captivity, yet by vertue of thy eternal and unchangeable Nature and Covenant, we reſt aſſured that our Children and their Children after them ſhall enjoy the promiſed mercies, an happy reſtitution to, and ſettlement in, their own Land, and the preſence of our and their Meſſias, whom, being not to come till after 490 years, we ſhall not live to ſee. The expreſſion here uſed is general, not without deſign, partly to ſhew that this promiſed bleſſing belongs to the Jews, not upon the account of any carnal relation to Abraham, but as they are and continue to be God's ſervants, from whom if they revolt, they loſe this and all their other privileges; and partly to imply that it belongs to all God's faithful Servants and to their Children, whether they be Jews, or Gentiles, of whoſe Converſion he ſpoke, v. 22. y In the place of thy gracious preſence, either here in thy Church, or hereafter in Heaven, from which we are now baniſhed. And this phraſe further intimates, that their happineſs did not conſiſt in the enjoyment of the outward bleſſings of the Land of Canaan, but in the preſence and fruition of God there, which he mentions as the top and upſhot of all his deſires and their felicities.

PSAL. CIII.

A Pſalm of David.

This Pſalm contains a thankful Commemoration and Celebration of God's mercies to the Pſalmiſt himſelf, and to the people of Iſrael, and to all good men.

1. * BLeſs the LORD, O my ſoul: and all that is within me bleſs his holy name a.

* Pſal.104.1. & 146.1.

a Let all my thoughts and affections be engaged, and united, and ſtirred up to the higheſt pitch, in and for this work.

2. Bleſs the LORD, O my ſoul, and forget not all his benefits.

3. * Who forgiveth all thine iniquities: who healeth all thy diſeaſes b.

* Matth.9.2,6. Mark 2.11. Luke 7.47.

b Either, 1. ſpiritual diſeaſes, luſts or corruptions, which he ſubdues and purgeth out by his grace; as this phraſe is uſed, *Pſal.*41.5. *Iſa.*6.10. and 53.5. Or, 2. corporal diſeaſes or miſeries, of which this word is uſed, 2 *Chron.*21.18,19. *Jer.*14.18. and 16.4.

4. Who redeemeth thy life from deſtruction c, who crowneth thee d with loving kindneſs and tender mercies.

c Both temporal and eternal, from deadly dangers and miſeries. d (i.e.) Encompaſſeth and adorneth thee, as a Crown doth.

5. Who ſatisfieth thy mouth with good things e: ſo that * thy youth is renewed like the eagles f.

* Iſai.40.31.

e Who ſatisfieth all thy juſt deſires and neceſſities. f Either, 1. as the Eagle renewеth her youth, by caſting all her old Feathers and getting new ones, whereby it ſeems to grow young again. But this being common to all Birds, would not have been appropriated to the Eagle. Or rather, 2. like the youth of an Eagle. As the Eagle lives long in great ſtrength and vigour, ſo that the old age of an Eagle is uſed proverbially for a lively and vigorous old age. So this is a promiſe of a long and comfortable life.

6. The LORD * executeth righteouſneſs and judgment for all that are oppreſſed g.

* Pſal.146.7.

g Which being a ſingular perfection, and that wherein moſt of the Princes of the World were and are defective, is juſtly celebrated in God.

7. He made known his ways h unto Moſes, his acts i unto the children of Iſrael.

h Either, 1. his laws, which are oft called God's ways. Or, 2. the manner and methods of his dealings with men, and eſpecially with his people, called in the next clauſe his acts; his merciful and gracious nature and providence, which is particularly called God's way, *Exod.*33.13. compared with v. 18,19. and with Exod. 34.6,7. and which is here deſcribed in the following Verſes. i His marvellous and gracious works.

8. * The LORD is merciful and gracious, ſlow to anger k, and † plenteous in mercy.

* Exod.34.6,7. Numb.14.18. Deut. 5.10. Neh.9.17. Pſal.86.15. Jer. 32.18. † Heb. great of mercy. * Iſai.57.16. Mic.7.18.

k Not ſpeedily puniſhing ſinners, but patiently waiting for their repentance.

9. * He will not always chide l: neither will he keep his anger m for ever.

l Or, contend, by his judgments with Sinners, but is ready to be reconciled to them, to wit, upon their true repentance, as is manifeſt from innumerable Texts, and from the whole ſcope and deſign of Scripture. m Which word is underſtood here, as alſo *Levit.*19.18. *Jer.*3.5. *Nah.*1.2. as is evident from the thing thing it ſelf, and from the former clauſe. The Hebrew is a conciſe language, and there are many ſuch Ellipſes in it, as 2 Sam. 6.6. compared with Exod. 9. 9. and 1 Chron. 18. 6. compared with 2 Sam. 8. 6. Pſal. 3. 7. Eccleſ. 7. 15.

10. He hath not dealt with us after our ſins n: nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

n He hath puniſhed us leſs than our iniquities have deſerved, as was confeſſed, Ezra 9. 13.

11. For † as the heaven is high above the earth: ſo great o is his mercy towards them that fear him p.

o So much above their deſerts and expectations, and above the mercy which one man ſheweth to another. p Which clauſe he adds here, as alſo v. 17, 18. to prevent mens miſtakes and abuſes of God's mercy, and to daſh the vain hopes of impenitent ſinners in God's mercy.

12. As far as the eaſt is from the weſt: ſo far hath he removed our tranſgreſſions from us q.

q The guilt of our ſins from our perſons and conſciences. The ſence is, He hath fully pardoned them, ſo as never to remember them more, as he promiſeth, Jer. 31.34. Heb. 10.17.

13. Like as a father pitieth his children: ſo the LORD pitieth them that fear him.

* Pſal. 78. 39.

14. For he knoweth our frame r: * he remembreth that we are duſt.

* Job 14. 1, 2.
Jam. 1. 10, 11.

15. As for man *, his days are as graſs: * as a flower of the field s, ſo he flouriſheth.

s Which is more expoſed to Winds and other Violences, than the Flowers of the Garden, which are ſecured by the art and care of the Gardiner.

* Iſa. 40. 7.
† Heb. it is not.
* Job 7. 10.
& 20. 9.

16. For * the wind paſſeth over it t, and † it is gone: and the * place thereof ſhall know it no more u.

t A blaſting or ſtormy wind bloweth upon it. u There is no more any appearance nor remembrance of it in the place where it ſtood and flouriſhed.

17. But the mercy of the LORD is from everlaſting to everlaſting x upon them that fear him y: and his righteouſneſs z unto childrens children.

x But though we quickly decay and periſh, yet God's mercy to us doth not die with us, but as it was from Eternity exerciſed in gracious purpoſes, ſo it will be continued unto Eternity in that future and endleſs life. y See before on v. 11. z Either his faithfulneſs: or (that this branch may anſwer to the former) his mercy or benignity: this word being frequently uſed in both theſe ſences, as hath been proved before. But it is here called righteouſneſs, to intimate, that God's kindneſs to the poſterity of his people, is not only an act of his goodneſs, but alſo a diſcharge of his obligation, under which he put himſelf to them, as elſewhere, ſo Exod. 20.6. to which this place ſeems to relate. Hence it is called mercy to Abraham, and truth to Jacob, Mic. 7. 20.

* Deut. 7. 9.

18. * To ſuch as keep his covenant a, and to thoſe that remember his commandments to do them b.

a To them that perform the conditions of God's Covenant; that ſincerely love and obey him. Such reſtrictions are oft added as in the general to overthrow the preſumptuous hopes of ungodly men, ſo particularly to admoniſh the Iſraelites not to reſt too much upon the priviledges of their Parents or the Covenant made with them, nor to expect any benefit by it, but upon condition of their continuance in God's Covenant. b That have them much in their thoughts and practiſe them in the courſe of their lives.

19. The LORD hath prepared c his throne in the heavens d: and his kingdom ruleth over all e.

c Or rather, eſtabliſhed. Having celebrated God's mercy to his people, he now praiſeth him for his excellent Majeſty and univerſal Dominion. d Which notes the eminency, glory, power, ſtability and unchangeableneſs of God's Kingdom. e Over all Creatures both in Heaven and in Earth.

20. Bleſs the LORD, ye his angels f, † that excel in ſtrength g, that do his commandments h, hearkning unto the voice of his word i.

f Which, though glorious Creatures, are but his Miniſters and Meſſengers, as the word ſignifies. And by inviting the Angels to bleſs God he quickens men to the ſame duty as having more dependance upon God and obligation to him. g Of which ſee one evidence 2 Kings 19. 35. You are freed from the impotencies and infirmities of mankind. h That live in an univerſal, conſtant and perfect obedience to all God's commands, which the beſt of men, through the infirmity of the fleſh, do frequently violate. i That diligently wait for God's commands or errands, and execute them with all chearfulneſs and readineſs.

21. Bleſs ye the LORD, ‖ all ye his hoſts k, ye miniſters l of his that do his pleaſure m.

k Ye Angels; to whom he ſtill continues his addreſs, and whom he more particularly deſcribes by the name of hoſts, a title oft given to the Angels, as Gen. 32. 2. 1 Kings 22. 19. 2 Chron. 18. 18. Luk. 2. 13. Revel. 19. 14. in regard of their vaſt numbers, mighty power, unanimous concurrence, and exquiſite order. In the former Verſe the expreſſion was indefinite and general, ye his angels, here it is univerſal and yet particular, all ye his hoſts. He ſeems to apply himſelf to the ſeveral Orders of Angels, of whom ſee Eph. 3. 10. Coloſſ. 1. 16. and to each individual Angel. l This Hebrew word is commonly uſed of the higheſt and moſt honourable ſort of Servants. m Whoſe conſtant buſineſs and delight it is to execute the Will and Commands of God.

22. Bleſs the LORD all his works in all places of his dominion n: bleſs the LORD, O my ſoul o.

n All Creatures both in Heaven and Earth, according to your ſeveral capacities. o Which thou haſt ſpecial and abundant reaſon to do. Thus he ends the Pſalm with the ſame words wherewith he began it.

PSAL. CIV.

As the immediate foregoing Pſalm treats of the ſpecial favours of God to his Church and People, ſo this declares and celebrates the wonderful and gracious works of God to all Mankind in the Creation of this viſible World, and in the wiſe and powerful diſpoſition of all things therein to mans uſe and comfort.

1. BLeſs the LORD, O my ſoul: O LORD my God, thou art very great a: * thou art cloathed b with honour and majeſty c.

* Pſal. 93. 1.

a As in thy own nature and perfections, ſo alſo in the glory of thy works. b Surrounded and adorned. c With honourable Majeſty.

2. Who covereſt d thy ſelf with light e, as with a garment: who ſtretcheſt out the heavens like a curtain f.

d Or adorneſt or cloatheſt. e Either 1. with that light which no man can approach unto, as it is called 1 Tim. 6. 16. wherewith therefore he may well be ſaid to be covered or hid from the eyes of mortal men. Or rather, 2. With that firſt-created light, Gen. 1. 3. which the Pſalmiſt fitly puts in the firſt place, as being the firſt of God's viſible works. f The uſe whereof it hath partly in reference to that glorious Manſion of the bleſſed God and his holy Angels, which theſe viſible Heavens (far above which it is, Eph. 4. 10.) do veil and cover; and partly in reference to the Earth, which they encloſe and protect.

3. * Who layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters g; who maketh the clouds his chariots, * who walketh upon the wings of the wind h.

* Amos 9. 6.
* Pſal. 18. 10.

g In the waters above the heavens, as they are called Gen. 1. 7. Or, in the Clouds, as it is explained in the next clauſe. In which he many times reſides and rides, and manifeſts his preſence. h Who manageth and employeth the clouds and winds in his ſervice.

4. * Who maketh his angels ſpirits i: his miniſters a flaming fire k.

* Heb. 1. 7.

i (i. e.) Of a ſpiritual or incorporeal nature, that they might be fitter for their employments. Or, who maketh his angels winds, as this laſt word moſt commonly ſignifies, (i. e.) Who made them like the Winds, powerful and active and nimble in executing God's pleaſure. Or, who uſeth and governeth thoſe glorious Creatures at his pleaſure, even as he commands the ſenceleſs Winds. k Or, like a flaming fire, the note of ſimilitude being here underſtood, as it is Gen. 49. 9. Deut. 32. 22. Pſal. 11. 1. and oft elſewhere: to which he compares the Angels for their irreſiſtible force, and great agility and fervency in the execution of God's commands. Or the ſence is, who ſometimes cloatheth his Angels with ſubtil bodies of wind or air, or of fire, as he ſees fit. And the Angels may not unfitly be mentioned in this place amongſt and in the cloſe of thoſe works of God which were done in the heavens, of which he hath hitherto ſpoken, v. 2, 3. becauſe they were made at the ſame time when the heavens were made, and for the ſame uſes and purpoſes, and becauſe they are commonly employed by God in managing the Clouds and Winds and Meteors to accompliſh God's deſigns by them. But this Verſe is otherwiſe rendred both by Jewiſh and ſome Chriſtian Interpreters, and that very agreeable to the Hebrew Text, He maketh the winds his angels, and the flame or flames of fire. (i.e. the lightning and thunder, and other fiery meteors in the air) his miniſters. He maketh uſe of them no leſs than of the holy Angels; and oft-times for the ſame purpoſes, and they do as certainly and readily obey all his commands as the bleſſed Angels themſelves do. This interpretation may ſeem moſt agreeable to the ſcope of the Pſalm, and to the context, wherein he is ſpeaking of the viſible works of God. The only difficulty is, that this ſeems to invalidate the allegation and argument of the Apoſtle, who expounds it of the Angels, Heb. 1. 7. But indeed it doth not: for (to ſay nothing of other ſolutions given by other men) when the Pſalmiſt ſaith that God maketh or uſeth the winds as his Angels, &c. he plainly ſignifies that the Angels are God's Miniſters or Servants, no leſs than the Winds. And that is ſufficient to juſtify the Apoſtles argument, and to prove the preeminency of Chriſt above the Angels; which is the Apoſtles deſign in that place.

5 † * Who laid the foundation of the earth l, that it ſhould not be removed m for ever n.

l He hath founded or eſtabliſhed the earth upon its own baſes or foundations, (i.e.) upon it ſelf or its own weight, whereby it ſtands as faſt and unmoveable, as if it were built upon the ſtrongeſt foundations imaginable. Which is a ſtupendous work of divine power and wiſdom. m Out of its proper place, which is the loweſt part of the World. n As long as the World continues.

6. Thou coveredſt it with the deep o as with a garment: the waters ſtood above the mountains p.

o Either, 1. In the general Deluge. Or rather, 2. in the firſt creation, as we read Gen. 1. 2, 9. of which the Pſalmiſt is here ſpeaking. p The Mountains were not made by the Deluge, as ſome have thought, who for that reaſon underſtand this verſe of the ſaid Deluge, for it is apparent they were before it, Gen. 7. 19. and moſt probably were in the firſt Creation, becauſe this variety of Mountains and Valleys is both ornamental and uſeful to the World.

* Gen. 8. 1.

7. * At thy rebuke q they fled r: at the voice of thy thunder s they haſted away.

q Upon thy ſevere command; Gen. 1. 9. which he calls a rebuke, to imply that there was ſomething in that ſtate of things which might ſeem to need reproof and correction, even that confuſion of Earth and Water together, which therefore God amended in his ſecond days work. r They immediately went to the place which God had allotted to them. s Of thy Soveraign Command, which as they could not but hear, ſo they durſt not diſobey. He aſcribes ſence and reaſon to inanimate Creatures by a Figure called Proſopopœia.

8. ‖ They go up by the mountains: they go down by the valleys t unto the place which thou haſt founded for them u.

t In that firſt diviſion of the Waters from the Earth, ſome part of them by God's command contrary to their own nature went upwards and became Springs in the Mountains, and the greateſt part went downwards to the Chanels made for them. Others, both antient and later Interpreters, read the words thus, The Mountains aſcend, the Valleys deſcend, when the Waters were ſeparated, part of the Earth went upward and made the Mountains, and part went downward and made the Valleys or low Grounds. But our Tranſlation ſeems the beſt, as being moſt agreeable to the Context, becauſe he ſpeaks of the Waters both in the foregoing and following Verſes u Unto their proper Chanels and Receptacles which God provided for them.

* Pſal. 33. 7. * Gen. 9. 11, 15.

9. * Thou haſt ſet a bound x, * that they may not paſs over: that they turn not again to cover the earth y.

x Even the ſand of the Sea-ſhore, as it is expreſſed, Jer. 5. 22. which though in it ſelf contemptible, and a very poor defence to the Earth againſt that ſwelling and raging Element, yet by God's Almighty Power and gracious Providence is made ſufficient for that purpoſe. Which is noted as a wonderful work of God Job 38. 8, &c. y To wit, the whole Earth, as it did in the beginning of the Creation. This was God's appointment, and the courſe of nature ſetled by him. But when men tranſgreſſed their bounds, all the laws of God and men, it is not ſtrange if the waters alſo tranſgreſſed their bounds, and once again overwhelmed the Earth in the general Deluge.

10. † He ſendeth the ſprings z into the valleys, which + run among the hills a.

z And the Rivers which come from them. a Wherewith God hath ſhut in the Rivers where he ſaw fit, that they might not overflow the Land.

11. They give drink to every beaſt of the field: the wild aſſes b + quench their thirſt.

b Which he mentions partly becauſe they are dry and thirſty Creatures; and partly becauſe they live in dry and deſolate Wilderneſſes, and are neither ruled nor regarded by men, and are moſt ſtupid Creatures, and yet are plentifully provided for by the care and bounty of Divine Providence.

12. By them c ſhall the fowls of the heaven have their habitation, which † ſing among the branches d.

c Either upon the Waters, where many Fowls have their common abode; or in the ground nigh unto them; or in the Trees, which commonly grow by the Banks of Rivers. d Which being delighted and refreſhed by the Waters, ſend forth their pleaſant notes.

13. * He watereth the hills d from his chambers e; * the earth is ſatisfied f with the fruit of thy works g.

* Pſal. 147. 8. * Pſal. 65. 9.

d Which moſt need moiſture and have leaſt of it in them. e From the Clouds, as above v. 3. f By this means all the parts of the Earth, the Mountains as well as the Valleys, are made fruitful. g With the effects of thoſe ſweet ſhowers, which he calls God's works, becauſe he alone can and doth give them, as is noted Jer. 10. 13. and 14. 22.

14. * He cauſeth the graſs to grow for the cattel, and herb for the ſervice of man h: that he may bring forth food out of the earth i.

* Gen. 1. 29, 30. & 3. 18.

h Both for delight, and for neceſſity either as food or phyſick. i And this God doth, he watereth the Earth, that thereby it may be prepared or diſpoſed for the production of neceſſary proviſions for Beaſts and for men, that ſo he (to wit, God) may bring forth food out of the Earth, which without this bleſſing of God the Earth would never yield.

15. And * wine k, that maketh glad the heart of man, and + oyl to make his face to ſhine l, and bread m, which ſtrengthneth mans heart n.

* Judg. 9. 13. † Heb. to make his face ſhine with oil; or, more than oil.

k He alſo bringeth out of the Earth the Vines which yield Wine. l He alludes to the cuſtom of thoſe times and places which was upon ſolemn and feſtival occaſions to anoint their Faces with Oyl. See Pſal. 23. 5. But theſe words with the former are by divers Learned Interpreters rendred otherwiſe, which ſeems more agreeable to the order and contexture of the Hebrew Text, And (he giveth) wine that maketh glad the heart of man, to make, (or, that he may make, (i. e.) that thereby he may alſo make) his face to ſhine more than oyl, i. e. more than it ſhineth when it is anointed with Oyl: or, as with oyl. So he ſpeaks only of the Wine which he commends from two qualities, that it makes the heart chearful, and the countenance pleaſant. m (i.e.) Bread Corn, by a Metonymy. n Which hath a ſingular faculty to preſerve or renew our ſtrength and vigour; whence it is called the ſtaff of life.

16. The trees of the LORD o are + full of ſap p: the cedars of Lebanon q * which he hath planted.

† Heb. ſhall be ſatisfied. So Gr. * Numb. 24. 6.

o (i.e.) Which the Lord hath planted, as the next clauſe expounds this; which came up and grew and thrive not by mans art and induſtry, but merely by the care of God's Providence. p Heb. Are or ſhall be ſatisfied, to wit, with the rain, of whoſe good effects he is yet ſpeaking. q Yea even the talleſt and largeſt Cedars, ſuch as theſe were, are ſupported and nouriſhed by it.

17. Where the birds make their neſts: as for the ſtork r, the fir-trees s are her houſe.

r Which make their Neſts not only in the tops of houſes, but alſo in the Field and in high Trees, as Varro and others have noted. s Which alſo are Trees of great height and bigneſs; and which being here ſaid to afford the Storks an Houſe, are thereby ſuppoſed to be preſerved and nouriſhed by the rain water.

18. The high hills are a refuge for wild-goats, and the rocks for the conies t.

t So he paſſeth from the rain to other works of God's Providence, as that God hath made ſuitable and ſufficient proviſion for the ſecurity of theſe Creatures againſt their Perſecutors. Although this Verſe alſo may have a reference to the former work, and the barren and rocky Hills may be mentioned tioned as receiving benefit by the rain, and it may be thus rendred, And the high hills (underſtand, are ſatisfied, which is expreſſed, v. 18. and may very well be carried hither) which (that particle being frequently underſtood) are a refuge for wild goats, and the rocks (underſtand out of the former branch, according to the uſual manner, which are a refuge) for the conies, or, as others tranſlate this word, for the mountain-mice.

19. He appointeth the moon for ſeaſons u; the ſun knoweth his going down x.

u To meaſure and diſtinguiſh the times, both Months, and, amongſt many Nations, Years alſo, as alſo the Seaſons of divers natural events, as of the ebbing and flowing of the Waters, and of the humours in mans Body; and other Seaſons for ſacred and civil affairs, which were commonly regulated by the Moon, not only amongſt the Jews, but among Heathens alſo. See on Gen. 1. 14. x To wit, The time, and place in which he is to ſet every day of the Year, which, though varied from day to day, yet he ſo regularly and exactly obſerves, as if he had the underſtanding of a Man or Angel to guide him in obeying the Laws of his Creator. See Job 38. 12. What is here expreſſed concerning his ſetting is neceſſarily ſuppoſed concerning his riſing alſo; but he mentions only his ſetting, as moſt agreeable to the context, becauſe that did uſher in the riſing of the Moon, of which he now ſpake, and the entrance of the night, of which he ſpeaks in the next words.

20. Thou makeſt darkneſs y, and it is night: wherein † all the beaſts of the foreſt do creep forth z.

y Which ſucceeds the light by virtue of thy Decree and eſtabliſhed Order. z To look out for prey, which in the day time they dare not do for fear of men. So by this viciſſitude of day and night God hath wiſely and mercifully provided both for men, that they may follow their day-labours without danger from Wild-Beaſts, and for the Beaſts that they may procure a ſubſiſtence.

21. * The young lions a roar after their prey b, and ſeek their meat from God c.

a Which can no more ſubſiſt without Divine Providence than thoſe which are moſt old and decrepit. b They roar when they come within ſight and reach of their prey, as Naturaliſts obſerve: whereby this place may be reconciled with Amos 3. 4. c This is a figurative and Poetical expreſſion: their roaring is a kind of natural Prayer to God for relief, as the cries of Infants are a kind of Prayers to their Mothers for the Breaſt. And this is juſtly noted as an act of God's ſpecial Providence becauſe the Lions are very ravenous and need much prey, and alſo are dull in their ſcent, and ſo difficultly find it, and ſlow in their motion, and unable to reach it: and therefore God hath provided another Creature, of quicker ſence and motion, which is uſually confederate with them, and procures prey for them, partaking of it with or after them.

22. The ſun ariſeth, they gather themſelves together d, and lay them down in their dens.

d Or rather, they retire or betake themſelves: for the Lions do not commonly go in Companies to one place, but ſeverally, each to his own Den.

23. Man goeth forth e to his work, and to his labour until the evening.

e With ſecurity and confidence, knowing the nature and cuſtom of Wild Beaſts, that they hide themſelves by day.

24. O LORD, how manifold are thy works! in wiſdom haſt thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches f.

f Of excellent and comfortable things, which are the effects of thy bounty and power.

† Heb. wide of hands, or ſpaces. ‖ Or, living Creatures. So Gr.

25. So is this great † and wide ſea, wherein are things creeping g innumerable, both ſmall and great ‖ beaſts.

g This word is common to all Creatures that move without feet, touching with their Belly the Element in which they move, whether they creep upon the Earth or ſwim in the Sea.

26. There go the ſhips; there is that Leviathan h, whom thou haſt † made to play therein i.

h Either the Whale: or, the Crocodile. Of which ſee the notes on Job 40. and 41. i Who being of ſuch vaſt ſtrength and abſolute Dominion in the Sea, tumbles in it with great ſecurity and ſports himſelf with other Creatures which he taketh and devoureth at his pleaſure.

* Pſal. 136. 25. & 145. 15, 19.

27. * Theſe all k wait upon thee l: that thou mayeſt give them their meat in due ſeaſon m.

k Both Beaſts and Fiſhes. l Expect ſupplies only from thy Providence. Which is ſaid of them figuratively, and with an alluſion to the manner of tame Beaſts and Fowls which commonly look after and wait upon thoſe perſons who bring their food to them. m When it is neceſſary or convenient for them. By which expreſſion he intimates the moderation of the Beaſts in their deſires of food, and tacitly reproves the intemperance of men who feed themſelves in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon.

28. That thou giveſt them, they gather n: thou openeſt thine hand o, they are filled with good.

n Whatſoever they receive is from thy bounty and gift. o Thou provideſt plentifully for them; as this phraſe implies, Deut. 15. 11. Comp. Prov. 31. 20.

29. Thou hideſt thy face p, they are troubled q; * thou takeſt away r their breath, they die, and return to their duſt s.

* Pſal. 145. 4. Eccleſ. 12. 7.

p When thou withdraweſt or ſuſpendeſt the favour and care of thy Providence. q Dejected and diſtreſſed. r So this word is uſed Hoſ. 4. 3. Zeph. 1. 2. and elſewhere. s To the Earth from whence they had their firſt original.

30. Thou ſendeſt forth thy ſpirit t, they are created u: and thou reneweſt the face of the earth x.

t Either, 1. That ſpirit by which they live, which is called the ſpirit of a beaſt, Eccleſ. 3. 21. which is called their breath or ſpirit (for the word is the ſame there and here) v. 29. and here may be called God's ſpirit, becauſe it was given and preſerved by him. Or rather, 2. thy quickning ſpirit: for here ſeems to be an oppoſition between their ſpirit, v. 29. and thy ſpirit here, and this latter is mentioned as the creating or productive cauſe of the former. And this may be underſtood either, 1. of the Holy Ghoſt; to whom, no leſs than to the Father and the Son, the work of Creation is aſcribed, Job 33. 4. Pſal. 33. 6. or rather, 2. that quickning power of God by which he produceth life in the Creatures from time to time. For he ſpeaks not here of the firſt Creation, but of the continued and repeated production of living Creatures. u Either, 1. the ſame living Creatures which were languiſhing and dying are ſtrangely revived and reſtored; which may not unfitly be called a creation, as that word is ſometimes uſed, becauſe it is in a manner the giving of a new life and being to a Creature. Or, 2. Other living Creatures are produced or generated; the word created being taken in its largeſt ſence for the production of things out of indiſpoſed matter by ſecond cauſes, as it is uſed, Iſa. 41. 20. and 54. 16, &c. x And thus by thy wiſe and wonderful Providence thou preſerveſt the ſucceſſion of living Creatures upon the Earth, which otherwiſe would be deſolate or without Inhabitants.

31. The glory of the LORD † ſhall endure for ever: the LORD ſhall rejoyce in his works y.

y So the Sence is, Thus God doth and will advance the glory of his wiſdom and power, and goodneſs in upholding and continuing the works of his hands from generation to generation, and he doth and will take pleaſure both in the preſervation and bleſſing of his works, as alſo in his reflection upon theſe works of his Providence, as he did reſt and delight himſelf in the contemplation of his works of Creation, as is noted, Gen. 1. 31. & 2. 2, 3. But the words are by divers, and as it may ſeem, more agreeable to the Hebrew Text, rendred thus, Let (for the firſt word is of the Imperative Mood) the glory of the Lord endure for ever, and let the Lord have joy (Or, then ſhall the Lord rejoyce) in his works. So this is added as a convenient Doxology, or Thankſgiving after the Commemoration of his great and gracious works: and the ſence may be this, Seeing therefore God hath enriched the Earth and us with ſo many fruits of his bounty let it be our conſtant deſire and endeavour, that God may be perpetually ſerved and glorified in and by them, and that God may be no more grieved at the remembrance of his kindneſs to us, as he was, Gen. 6. 5, 6. and thereby be again provoked to deſtroy us, but may take pleaſure in beholding and cheriſhing of his own workmanſhip.

32. He looketh on the earth, and it trembleth; * he toucheth the hills, and they ſmoak z.

* Pſal. 144. 5.

z This is a further illuſtration of God's powerful Providence over all the Creatures, and their dependance upon him: As when he affords his favour to Creatures, they live and thrive, ſo on the contrary one angry look or touch of his upon the Hills or Earth, makes them tremble and ſmoak, as once Sinai did when God appeared in it. And this conſideration he may poſſibly ſuggeſt to inforce the foregoing exhortation of glorifying God, becauſe if we do not give him the glory due to his name, he can quickly right himſelf and deſtroy us and all his works.

33. * I will ſing unto the LORD a as long as I live; I will ſing praiſe unto my God, while I have my being.

* Pſal. 146. 2.

a But whatſoever others do, I will not fail to give God his glory and due praiſes.

34. My meditation b of him c ſhall be ſweet d: I will be glad in the LORD e.

Or, my ſpeech or diſcourſe, my praiſing of God mentioned v. 33. c Concerning the glory of his works. d Either, 1. to God: he will graciouſly accept it; praiſe being his moſt acceptable Sacrifice, as is affirmed Pſal. 69. 30, 31. Or rather, 2. to my ſelf, as may be gathered from the next Clauſe. He implies that he ſhall not only do this work, which a man may do unwillingly or by conſtraint, but that he will do it chearfully and with delight; which is moſt pleaſing to God. e I will rejoice in the contemplation of God's works, and in praiſing him for them.

35. Let the ſinners be conſumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more f: bleſs thou the LORD, O my ſoul g: Praiſe ye the LORD.

f But as for thoſe ungodly Creatures who do not regard the works of the Lord, which is noted as a moſt grievous ſin, and puniſhed with a grievous imprecation like this Pſal. 28. 4, 5. nor give him the glory due to his name, but diſhonour God and abuſe his Creatures, and thereby provoke God to deſtroy the Earth, and the men and things which are upon it, it is my Prayer for thine honour and for the ſafeguard of all mankind, that thoſe Sinners who obſtinately and reſolutely continue in this practice of diſhonouring and diſobeying their Creator, may be taken out of this World, that they may no longer infect it, nor procure its total deſtruction. Or, it may be a prediction delivered in the form of an imprecation, as hath been noted before in like caſes. g But thou, O my Soul, come not into this wretched ſociety, but employ thy ſelf in this great work of bleſſing and praiſing God; and it is my deſire and hope that others will follow my Example.

PSAL. CV.

The Penman of this Pſalm was David, as is manifeſt from 1 Chron. 16. 8, &c. It is a thankſgiving to God for his mercies to his people of Iſrael.

* 1 Chron. 16. 8. Iſa. 12. 4.

1. O * Give thanks unto the LORD, call upon his name a; make known his deeds among his people b.

a Or, proclaim his name, i. e. the fame and glory of his works, as it follows. b Each of you amongſt his and your people, or even among the Heathens, as you have opportunity.

2. Sing unto him, ſing pſalms unto him: talk ye of all his wondrous works.

3. Glory ye in his holy name b: let the heart of them rejoyce that ſeek the LORD c.

b Glory in the God whom you ſerve, as the only true God, and one of infinite power and goodneſs. c That ſeek his face or preſence, as it follows, his acquaintance and favour, above all the World.

4. Seek the LORD, and his ſtrength d: ſeek his face e evermore.

d i. e. by a figure called Hendiadys, the Lord in his ſtrength, to wit, in his Sanctuary, or before the Ark, which is called God's ſtrength, Pſal. 63. 3. and 78. 61. and the ark of his ſtrength, Pſal. 132. 8. e i. e. His gracious preſence in his Sanctuary and the bleſſed fruits of it. See on Pſal. 27. 8.

5. Remember his marvellous works that he hath done, his wonders and the judgments of his mouth f.

f Either, 1. the Laws delivered from his mouth. Or rather, 2. the plagues or puniſhments (as this word is uſed here v. 7. and every where) which he brought upon Egypt by his meer word or command, as is oft noted in the Hiſtory of them in Exodus.

6. O ye ſeed of Abraham his ſervants, ye children of Jacob g his † choſen.

g To whom he reſtrains the former more general expreſſion, becauſe theſe were the only branch of Abraham's Seed to whom the following Covenant and Bleſſings belong.

7. He is the LORD our God, his judgments are in all the earth h.

h Either, 1. the fame of his judgments upon the Egyptians is ſpread over the face of the earth. Or, 2. God executes his Judgments upon all Nations and People. Which may be here noted as a foil to magnifie God's Grace to them who were the Monuments of his mercy, when all the World beſides them fell under his juſt ſeverity.

8. He hath remembred i his covenant for ever, the word k which he commanded l to a thouſand generations m.

i Practically, ſo as to perform it; as that word is frequently uſed in Scripture. k The word of promiſe or the Covenant, as is explained both in the foregoing and following words. And ſo the word is taken, Judg. 13. 12. Luke 1. 38. l i. e. Eſtabliſhed or ordained or appointed, as this word is oft taken, as Pſal. 68. 28. & 71. 3. & 133. 3. Iſa. 13. 3. & 23. 11. m To all generations; a certain number being put for an uncertain. He ſeems to allude to that paſſage, Exod. 20. 6.

* Gen. 17. 2. & 22. 16, &c. & 26. 3. & 28. 13. & 35. 11. Luke 1. 73. Heb. 6. 17. † Heb. a ſtatute.

9. * Which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath n unto Iſaac.

n Wherewith he ratified the Covenant with Iſaac, Gen. 26. 3.

10. And confirmed the ſame unto Jacob for † a law o, and to Iſrael for an everlaſting covenant, o Either that it might be as firm and irrevocable as a Law; or, that it might have the uſe and force of a Law towards God, becauſe God did hereby put himſelf under an obligation of making it good in regard of his own truth and righteouſneſs.

* Gen. 13. 15. & 15. 18. † Heb. the cord.

11. Saying, * Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, † the lot p of your inheritance:

p The portion aſſigned to you by lot and the deſignation of Divine Providence. See Deut. 32. 9. Pſal. 16. 6.

* Gen. 34. 30. Deut. 26. 5. † Heb. men of number.

12. * When they were † but a few men in number q: yea, very few, and ſtrangers in it.

q Heb. Men of number, i. e. few, who could eaſily be numbred, very few, as the next words explain it.

13 When they went from one nation to another r, from one kingdom to another people.

r Both in Canaan, where there were ſeven Nations, Deut. 7. 1. and in Egypt, &c.

14. He ſuffered no man to do them wrong: yea, he reproved s kings for their ſakes, s Both verbally, and really, by his judgments. See Gen. 12. 17. and 20. 3.

15. Saying, Touch not t mine anointed u, and do my prophets no harm.

t Hurt not, as this word is uſed of theſe very perſons, Gen. 26. 11, 29. and elſewhere. u My Prophets, as the next words explain it, to wit, Abraham and Iſaac and Jacob, as is evident; who are called God's anointed, becauſe they were eminently bleſſed of God, and conſecrated to be his peculiar people and to be Kings and Prieſts in their Families, and repleniſhed with the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghoſt, in reſpect whereof many perſons are ſaid to be anointed in Scripture, who never had any material Oyl applied to them, as Pſal. 45. 8. Iſa. 61. 1. 2 Cor. 1. 21. And they are called Prophets, becauſe God did familiarly converſe with them, and revealed his mind and will to them, and by them to others; and becauſe they were inſtructers or teachers of others in the true Religion. See Gen. 18. 19. and 20. 7.

* Gen. 41. 54. ‖ Iſa. 3. 1.

16. Moreover, * he called for x a famine upon the land: he brake the whole ‖ ſtaff of bread y.

x (i. e.) He effectually procured, as this word is uſed, 2 Kings 8. 1. Iſa. 47. 1, 5. & 56. 7. Rom. 4. 17. y (i. e.) Bread which is the ſtaff or ſupport of our animal lives. See Levit. 26. 26. Pſal. 104. 15. Ezek. 4. 16.

* Gen. 45. 5. & 50. 20. † Gen. 37. 28.

17. * He ſent z a man before them, † even Joſeph who was ſold for a ſervant.

z By the direction of his ſecret Providence.

18. ‖ Whoſe feet they hurt with fetters: † he was laid in iron a.

a Heb. his ſoul came into iron, Which ſeems to be added emphatically to aggravate his impriſonment, and to ſhew how grievous it was to his very ſoul, which muſt needs ſympathize with his body, and moreover was greatly vexed to conſider both the great injury which was done to him, and yet the ſoul and publick ſcandal which lay upon him.

19. Until the time b that his word c came: the word of the Lord tried him d.

b Till which time, his eminent Prudence, and Innocency, and Piety gave him no relief. c Either, 1. Joſeph's word, or his Prophecy concerning the chief Butler and Baker; which is ſaid to come when it was fulfilled, as that word is uſed Judg. 13. 12, 17. Ezek. 24. 24. and elſewhere. But the event confutes this; for Joſeph was not delivered at that time, but two years after it, Gen. 41. 1. Or rather, 2. the word of the Lord, as it follows; the Pronoun Relative being here put before the Subſtantive to which it belongs, as it is alſo Exod. 2. 6. Job 33. 20. Prov. 5. 22. & 14. 13. He ſeems to ſpeak of that word or revelation which came firſt to Pharaoh in a Dream, Gen. 41. 1, 2, &c. and then to Joſeph concerning the interpretation of it v. 15. 16. For the word of the Lord is ſaid to come, not only when it comes to paſs, but alſo and moſt commonly when it is firſt revealed, as Jer. 7. 1, & 11. 1. & 18. 1. and God is ſaid to come when he doth reveal it, as Gen. 20. 3. & 31. 24. d Either, 1. tried his ſincerity and conſtancy. But that was not done by God's word, but by his rod. Or rather, 2. diſcovered him, to wit, unto Pharaoh and and his Courtiers, how innocent, and holy, and knowing a perſon he was; or purged him from thoſe calumnies which were caſt upon him, and ſo prepared the way for his releaſe, which here follows v. 20. This Verſe may well be rendred thus, Until the time that his word came, even the word of the Lord, which tried him: ſuch Ellipſes being moſt uſual in the Hebrew Text.

‖Gen. 41. 40. 21. ‖ He made him lord of his houſe, and ruler †Heb. poſſeſſion. of all his † ſubſtance d.

d Heb. of all his poſſeſſion (i.e.) of his whole Kingdom.

22. To bind his princes e at his pleaſure, and teach his ſenators f wiſdom.

e By his commands, and, if they were refractory, to puniſh them. f His wiſeſt Counſellors, whom he commanded to receive inſtructions from Joſeph upon all occaſions.

‖Gen. 46. 6. 23. * Iſrael g alſo came into Egypt: and Jacob ſojourned in the land of Ham h.

g Jacob in his perſon, and with his Children. h (i.e.) Egypt, ſo called here alſo, Pſal. 78. 51. & 106. 22. from that curſed Ham, Gen. 9. 22. who was the Father of Mizraim, or the Egyptians, Gen. 10. 6. And the Pſalmiſt ſeems to call it by this name, to intimate that they were the people of God's curſe, and thereby to caution the Iſraelites againſt returning to that land, which they were particularly forbidden to do, Deut. 17. 16.

†Exod. 1. 7. 24. And † he increaſed his people greatly: and made them ſtronger i than their enemies.

i Not really, but according to their Enemies apprehenſions and expreſſions, Exod. 1. 9. Or, more numerous, as this word is elſewhere uſed. So this latter branch anſwers to the former. And this was true; for though they were not ſimply more in number than the Egyptians, yet they multiplied much faſter.

‖Exod. 1. 8. 25. ‖ He turned their heart to hate his people k, to deal ſubtilly with his ſervants l.

k Not by putting this wicked hatred into them, which is not conſiſtent either with the holineſs of God's nature, or with the truth of his word, and which was altogether unneceſſary, becauſe they had that and all other wickedneſs in them by nature; but partly by withdrawing the common gifts and operations of his Spirit, and all other reſtraints and hinderances to it, and wholly leaving them to their own miſtakes and paſſions, and corrupt affections, which of their own accord were ready to take that courſe; partly by ordering the affairs of his people in ſuch manner, as might give them occaſion of hatred; and partly by directing and governing that hatred, which was wholly in and from themſelves, ſo as it ſhould fall upon the Iſraelites rather than upon other people. l To deſtroy them by crafty devices: of which ſee Exod. 1. 11, &c.

m To be the companion and interpreter of Moſes in this expedition, of which ſee Exod. 3. 10. & 4. 12, &c. This clauſe he adds, to ſhew that Aaron was no leſs called and choſen by God to this work than Moſes, which otherwiſe was not ſo evident from the Hiſtory: Or, this clauſe may belong to both Moſes and Aaron.

‖Exod. 7. 9. †Heb. words of his ſigns. 27. ‖ They ſhewed † his ſigns n among them, and wonders in the land of Ham.

n Heb. the words of his ſigns, an emphatical expreſſion. Firſt, they boldly declared the Word and Will of God concerning the ſeveral Plagues, and then they actually inflicted them.

†Exod. 10. 22. 28. * He ſent darkneſs, and made it dark: and they rebelled not againſt his word o.

o Either, 1. the darkneſs and other plagues; which obeyed God's word, and inſtantly came at God's call. So this may be a reflexion upon the Egyptians, that thoſe bruiſh or unreaſonable Creatures were more obedient to the will and command of God than they were. Thus diſeaſes are ſaid to come or go at God's command, Mat. 8. 8. Or rather, 2. Moſes and Aaron, mentioned v. 26. and called they, v. 27. whoſe obedience in denouncing and inflicting theſe plagues, and eſpecially that plague of darkneſs, is noted and commended here as an act of great faith and fortitude, becauſe they inflicted that plague after Pharaoh had threatned them, Exod. 10. 10. as the obedience of their Parents is commended as a great act of faith, becauſe they preſerved and hid their Son contrary to the expreſs command of the King of Egypt.

‖Exod. 8. 6. 30. ‖ Their land p brought forth frogs in abundance, in the chambers q of their kings r.

p Their Country: for otherwiſe they were produced by their Rivers, Exod. 8. 3. q Which entred into the Chambers. r Of Pharaoh and his Sons, and his chief Nobles and Governors of Provinces under him; for ſuch perſons are oft called Kings in Scripture, Judg. 1. 7. 1 Kings 20. 1, 12. Iſa. 19. 2.

31. * He ſpake, and there came divers ſorts of flies, and lice in all their coaſts s. *Exod. 8. 17, 24.

s Or, Borders, (i.e.) in all their Land, even to the utmoſt Ends or Borders of it.

32. ‖ † He gave them hail for rain: and flaming fire in their land. ‖Exod. 9. 22. †Heb. he gave their rain hail.

33. He ſmote their vines alſo and their figtrees: and brake the trees of their coaſts.

34. * He ſpake, and the locuſts came: and caterpillars, and that without number: *Exod. 10. 4, 13.

35. And did eat up all the herbs in their land: and devoured the fruit of their ground.

36. † He ſmote alſo all the firſt-born in their land: the chief of all their ſtrength t. †Exod. 12. 29.

t To wit, their firſt-born, as it is in the firſt clauſe, who are ſo called, Gen. 49. 3. Pſal. 78. 51. and the beginning of their ſtrength, Deut. 21. 17.

37. ‖ He brought them forth alſo with ſilver and gold: and there was not one feeble perſon u among their tribes. ‖Exod. 12. 35.

u Diſeaſed or unable for his journey: which in ſo vaſt a Body, and in a time of ſuch Mortality as it had been in Egypt, and in a people which had been ſo long and ſo dreadfully oppreſſed as the Iſraelites were, was wonderful; but they all journied on foot, Exod. 12. 37.

38. * Egypt was glad when they departed: for the fear of them x fell upon them. *Exod. 12. 33.

x (i.e.) Of the Iſraelites, leſt God for their ſakes ſhould deſtroy them.

39. † He ſpread a cloud for a covering y, and fire to give light in the night. †Exod. 13. 21.

y To protect them from the heat of the Sun, which in that hot and open Country had otherwiſe been intolerable to them, eſpecially in ſo long a journey.

40. * The people asked, and he brought quails z: and † ſatisfied them with the bread of heaven a. * Exod. 16. 12, &c. † Pſal. 78. 24, 25.

z He ſpeaks of the firſt giving of Quails, Exod. 16. 13. which God gave them as a refreſhment, notwithſtanding their ſin in deſiring them, which he graciouſly pardoned; and not of that ſecond giving of Quails, which God gave them in judgment, Numb. 11. and therefore would not have been numbered here amongſt God's favours vouchſafed to them. a With Manna which came out of the Air, which is commonly called Heaven.

41. * He opened the rock, and the waters guſhed out: they ran in the dry places like a river b. * Exod. 17. 6. Num. 20. 11. 1 Cor. 10. 4.

b They flowed in Chanels which God provided for them, and followed the Iſraelites in their March, as is noted 1 Cor. 10. 4. Hence they complained no more of want of Water till they came to Kadeſh, Numb. 20. which was many years after this time.

42. For he remembred * his holy promiſe, and Abraham c his ſervant. * Gen. 15. 14.

c Or rather, with (as this Particle is oft uſed) Abraham, made with or to Abraham.

43. And he brought forth his people with joy, and his choſen with † gladneſs. †Heb. ſingin;

44. * And gave them the land of the heathen: and they inherited the labour of the people d: * Deut. 6. 10, 11. Joſh. 3. 17.

d The Fruits of their labour, their Cities, Vineyards, Olive-yards, &c.

45. ‖ That they might obſerve his ſtatutes, and keep his laws. Praiſe ye the Lord. ‖Deut. 4. 1. 40. & 6. 24, 25.

PSAL. CVI.

This Pſalm was unqueſtionably compoſed in the time of the Iſraelites Captivity and Diſperſion, as is manifeſt from v. 47. but whether it was that of Babylon, or ſome other of a later date, is neither eaſie nor neceſſary to determine.

1. † PRaiſe ye the Lord; O * give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever a. †Heb. Hallelujah. * 1 Chr. 16. 34. Pſal. 107. 1. & 118. 1. & 136. 1.

a He deſerves our praiſes, notwithſtanding all our ſufferings which are not to be imputed to him, for he is gracious and merciful but only to our own ſins.

2. Who can utter the mighty acts of the Lord? who can ſhew forth all his praiſe b?

b (i.e.)

b (i.e.) His praiſe-worthy Actions, by an uſual Metonymy.

3. Bleſſed are they that keep judgment c, and he that doth righteouſneſs at all times d.

c That obſerve and practiſe what is juſt and right towards God and Men; which in the next clauſe he calls doing righteouſneſs. d In Adverſity as well as in Proſperity. And this clauſe may belong either, 1. to the laſt foregoing words, that doth righteouſneſs at all times, conſtantly and perpetually: Or rather, 2. to the firſt words, they are bleſſed at all times, even in the day of their calamity, which therefore ought not to hinder us from this great and juſt duty of praiſing God. And ſo this Verſe coheres with the former.

4. Remember me e, O Lord, with the favour † that thou beareſt unto thy people f: O viſit me with thy ſalvation g.

e Or, us: for he ſpeaks here in the name, and on the behalf of the whole Nation, as is evident from v. 6, 7, 47. of which he oft ſpeaks as of one Perſon. f With thoſe Favours and Bleſſings which thou doſt uſually and peculiarly give to thy People; ſuch as the pardon of all our Sins, by which we have procured our preſent miſeries, and a compleat deliverance, and that improved to thy praiſe and glory, as well as to our own comfort, as is clearly implied, v. 47. g Give me that ſalvation or deliverance which thou haſt promiſed, and which none but thou canſt give.

5. That I may ſee h the good of thy choſen i, that I may rejoyce in the gladneſs of thy nation k: that I may glory l with thine inheritance m.

h (i.e.) Enjoy, as the next clauſe explains it, and as this word is frequently uſed. i Of thy choſen People; which thou uſeſt to give to thine Elect, or to ſuch as are Iſraelites indeed. k With ſuch joy as thou haſt formerly afforded unto thy beloved Nation or People. l That we may have occaſion to glory in God's Goodneſs towards us. m Either in the Congregation of thy People: that we thy People may jointly and ſolemnly praiſe thy Name: Or, as thy People, whoare commonly called God's inheritance, in former ages have frequently done: for the Particle, with, is ſometimes uſed as a Note of compariſon, as it is in the very next Verſe, and Job 9.26. *Eccleſ.*2.16. & 7.11.

* Dan. 9. 5.

6. * We have ſinned with our fathers n: we have committed iniquity, we have done wickedly.

n As our Fathers did, and have not been made wiſer or better by their examples, as we ſhould have been.

7. Our fathers underſtood not o thy wonders in Egypt, they remembred not the multitude of thy mercies, † but provoked him at the ſea, even at the red ſea p.

† Exod. 14. 11, 12.

o Or, conſidered not, to wit, ſo as to be rightly affected with them, to give thee that Love, and Praiſe, and Truſt, and Obedience, which they deſerved and required. p When thoſe wonders of thy Power and Goodneſs in Egypt were but newly done, and freſh in memory.

8. Nevertheleſs; he ſaved them for his names-ſake q; ‖ that he might make his mighty power to be known.

‖ Exod. 9. 16.

q That he might glorifie his Name, and vindicate it from the blaſphemous Reproaches, which the Egyptians and others would have caſt upon it, if they had been deſtroyed. This Argument was urged by Moſes, Numb. 14. 13, &c.

r As ſecurely as if they had walked upon the dry Land.

10. And he ſaved them from the hand of him that hated them s, and redeemed them from the hand of the enemy.

s Of Pharaoh, who purſued them with cruel Rage and Hatred.

11. * And the waters covered their enemies: there was not one of them left.

y Either, into their Perſons: Or rather, their Bodies, which are oft underſtood by this word; of which ſee the Notes upon Pſal. 16. 10. So their inordinate deſire of pleaſing and pampering their Bodies, was the occaſion of deſtroying them; whileſt God denied his Bleſſing, which alone makes food able to nouriſh us, and inflicted his curſe, which made their food as deſtructive as Poyſon to them.

* Num. 16. 1, &c.

16. * They envied Moſes alſo in the camp, and Aaron the Saint of the Lord z.

z So called here, not ſo much from his inherent Holineſs, whereof Moſes had a greater ſhare, but becauſe he was conſecrated or ſet apart by God for that ſacred office of the Prieſthood, in which reſpect all the Prieſts are ſaid to be holy, Levit. 21. 6, 7, 8. Hereby he intimates, that their Envy and Rebellion was not only againſt Aaron, but againſt God himſelf.

18. ‖ And a fire was kindled in their company b, the flame burnt up the wicked.

b In their Aſſociates or Confederates, thoſe wicked men, as he calls them in the next clauſe, to wit, Korah and his company, who were conſumed by a Fire from the Lord, Numb. 16. 35. compared with v. 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19.

* Exod. 32. 4.

19. * They made a calf in Horeb c, and worſhipped the molten image.

c When they were but very lately brought out of Egypt, by ſuch wonderful Power and Goodneſs of God, and had ſeen the dreadful Plagues of God upon the Egyptian Idolaters, and upon their Idols too, as is noted Numb. 33. 4. and when the Law of God was but newly delivered to them in ſuch a ſolemn and tremendous manner, and the moſt High God was yet preſent, and delivering further Precepts to Moſes for their benefit upon the top of that very Mount. This greatly aggravated their Sin.

* Jer. 2. 11. Rom. 1. 23.

20. Thus * they changed d their glory e into the ſimilitude of an f ox that eateth graſs g.

d As far as in them lay, and in reſpect of their Worſhip. e Their God, who was indeed their glory; for they had this juſt occaſion of triumphing and glorying over all the Nations of the World; that whereas all other Nations worſhipped ſtocks and ſtones, or the heavenly Bodies, or dead Men, they only worſhipped the living and true God, who was preſent and in Covenant with them, and with them only. f Into the golden Image of an Ox or Calf. g Which is ſo far from feeding his People, as the true God did the Iſraelites, that he muſt be fed by them. And yet the Image of ſuch a creature was preferred by them, before the all-ſufficient and ever-bleſſed God, which was an evidence of their horrid contempt of God, as alſo of their prodigious folly and ſtupidity.

21. They forgat God their Saviour, which had done great things in Egypt.

22. Wondrous works in the land of Ham, and terrible things by the Red-ſea.

† Exod. 32. 10, 11, 32.

23. † Therefore he ſaid h that he would deſtroy them, had not Moſes his choſen ſtood before him in the breach i: to turn away his wrath, leſt he ſhould deſtroy them.

h He declared his intention in expreſs words, as Exod. 32. 10. and elſewhere. i God had made an Hedge or Wall about them; but they had made a gap or breach in it by their Sins, at which the Lord, who was now juſtly become their Enemy, might enter to deſtroy them; which he had certainly done, if Moſes by his prevailing interceſſion had not hindered him. See Deut. 9. 12. & 10. 10. It is a Metaphor from a Beſieged City, where the Enemy endeavours to make a breach in the Walls, and thereby to enter into the City; which he will do, unleſs ſome valiant Champion ſtand in the gap to oppoſe him.

24. Yea, they deſpiſed k ‖ the pleaſant land l: they believed not his word m:

k Preferring Egypt and their former Bondage before it, Numb. 14. 3, 4. and not thinking it worthy of a little hazard and difficulty in taking the poſſeſſion of it. l Canaan, which was ſo not only in truth, Deut. 11. 11, 12. Jer. 3. 19. Ezek. 20. 6. but even by the relation of thoſe Spies, who diſcouraged them from entring into it. m (i.e.) His promiſe of giving them the Land, and ſubduing all their Enemies before them; which they knew by late and manifold experience, that God was both able and willing to do.

* Num. 14. 2.

25. * But murmured in their tents, and harkned not unto the voice of the Lord n.

n To God's command, which was that they ſhould boldly and confidently enter into it.

† Num.14.29. 26. † Therefore he lifted up his hand o againſt them, to overthrow them in the wilderneſs:

o He ſware, as this phraſe is commonly uſed, as *Gen.*14.22. *Deut.*32.40. *Nehem.*9.15. *Revel.*10.5,6. of this dreadful and irrevocable Sentence and Oath of God. See Numb. 14.

‖ Heb. to make them fall. * Pſal.44.11. Ezek.20.23. 27. ‖ * To overthrow their ſeed p alſo among the nations, and to ſcatter them in the lands.

p He ſware alſo (though not at the ſame time) that he would puniſh their Sins, not only in their Perſons, but alſo in their Poſterity. See *Exod.*20.5. & 32.34. *Levit.*26.33. others refer this to the ſame Oath and Hiſtory, *Numb.*14. becauſe God intended at firſt to deſtroy both Parents and Children, even the whole Nation, v. 12, 15. though afterwards upon Moſes his interceſſion he limited the judgment to that Generation. But that Deſtruction threatned was by the Peſtilence, *v.*12. not, as here, by Captivity and Baniſhment. Beſides, God ſaid that, v. 11. but he did not ſwear it, but the Oath came afterward, v. 21.

* Num.25.2, 3. & 31.16. Rev.2.14. 28. * They joyned themſelves q alſo unto Baal-peor, and ate the ſacrifices of the dead r.

q To wit, in Worſhip, whereby they had an union and communion with him, as God's People have with God in acts of his Worſhip. And this phraſe ſeems alſo to note their carnal Copulation with the Daughters of Moab in the Temple, or to the Honour of Baal-peor. r Which were offered to Idols, which he calls dead, in oppoſition to the true and living God, and by way of contempt, and to note the ſottiſhneſs of Idolaters, who worſhipped liteleſs things, as ſtocks, and ſtones, or dead Men. And ſome learned men conceive that this is ſpoken with particular regard to Baal-peor, or the Lord of Peor, a Place ſo called, who had been a Perſon of great eminency in thoſe Parts, and therefore was worſhipped according to the cuſtom of the Heathens, after his Death, by Sacrifices and Feaſts appointed for his Honour and Memory.

29. Thus they provoked him to anger with their inventions: and the plague brake in upon them.

† Num.25.7. 30. † Then ſtood up Phineas and executed judgment, and ſo the plague was ſtayed.

31. And that was counted unto him for righteouſneſs s, unto all generations for evermore.

s And although that action of his might ſeem harſh, and raſh, and irregular, as being done by a private Perſon and a Prieſt, and as allowing the Delinquents no ſpace for Repentance, it was accepted and rewarded by God as an act of Juſtice and Piety agreeable to his mind, and proceeding from a ſincere zeal for God's Honour, and for the good of God's People; and God gave him a publick Teſtimony of his approbation to be recorded to all Generations, and the Prieſthood to be continued to him and his in all ſucceeding Generations, of all which ſee Numb. 25.

* Num.20.3, 12,13. 32. * They angred him alſo at the waters of ſtrife, ſo that it went ill with Moſes for their ſakes t.

t Or, becauſe of them, upon occaſion of their unbelief and murmuring, whereby he was provoked to ſpeak unadviſedly, as it here follows.

33. Becauſe they provoked his ſpirit, ſo that he ſpake unadviſedly u with his lips.

u So this word is thought to ſignifie, *Levit.*5.4. *Prov.*12.18. Or, he ſpake, as the word commonly ſignifies. Not that it was in it ſelf a Sin to ſpeak, but becauſe he ſpake when he ſhould have been ſilent; or, he ſpake to the People, when God commanded him only to ſpeak to the Rock, Numb. 20.8,9,10. or, he ſpake, to wit, the provocation of his ſpirit, or ſuch words as were agreeable to it, and might be expected from it. He mentions not here what Moſes ſpake, becauſe that was fully known from the Hiſtory, and becauſe he would throw a veil over Moſes his infirmity, and rather imply than expreſs his fault.

x (i. e.) Concerning whoſe deſtruction: Or rather, which thing, to wit, to deſtroy thoſe Canaanitiſh Nations: for in the Hebrew there is nothing but aſher, which ſignifies only, either whom or which.

* Judg.1.21. & 2.2. & 3.5, 6. 35. * But were mingled y among the heathen, and learned their works.

y In their Habitations and Negotiations, as alſo in Marriages.

36. And they ſerved their idols which were a ſnare unto them z.

z Which Idols were an occaſion of their falling both into further and greater ſins, as it follows, v. 37, 38. and into utter ruine, as this phraſe alſo notes, *Exod.*23.33. *Judg.*2.12, &c.

† 2 King.16.3. Iſai.57.5. Ezek.16.20. & 20.26. 37. Yea, † they ſacrificed their ſons and their daughters a unto devils b:

a Of which Heatheniſh practice ſee the notes on Levit. 18.21. b By which expreſſion he informeth them that they did not worſhip God, as they pretended and ſometimes deſigned, but Devils in their Idols; and that thoſe ſpirits, which were ſuppoſed by the Heathen Idolaters to inhabit in their Images, and which they worſhipped in them, were not God's or good Spirits, as they imagined, but evil Spirits or Devils. See Levit. 17.7. Deut. 32.17. 1 Cor. 10.20. Revel 9.20.

‖ Numb.35.33. 38. And ſhed innocent blood c, even the blood of their ſons and of their daughters, whom they ſacrificed unto the Idols of Canaan: and ‖ the land was polluted with blood.

c The blood of their Children, who, though Sinners before God, yet were innocent as to them, from any crime deſerving ſuch barbarous uſage from them.

39. Thus were they defiled with their own works, and went a whoring with their own inventions d.

d Committed ſpiritual Whoredom by worſhipping thoſe Idols which were but humane inventions, and that in ſuch an unnatural and bloody manner, as they had deviſed.

40. Therefore was the wrath of the LORD kindled againſt his people, inſomuch that he abhorred his own inheritance.

41. And he gave them into the hand of the heathen, and they that hated them, ruled over them.

42. Their enemies alſo oppreſſed them, and they were brought into ſubjection under their hand.

47. Save us, O LORD our God i, and gather us from among the heathen, to give thanks unto thy holy name, and to triumph in thy praiſe k.

i O thou who haſt ſo often pardoned and ſaved us, notwithſtanding our former and manifold provocations, be thou pleaſed once more to deliver us. k In thy praiſe-worthy work wrought for us; Praiſe being put for actions worthy of Praiſe, as it is here above v. 2. 1 Chron. 16.35. Pſal. 9.14. Phil. 4.8. and oft elſewhere.

PSAL. CVII.

The moſt of the Pſalms have a peculiar reſpect unto the Church or People of God, or to ſome eminent members thereof; but there are ſome few Pſalms which have a more general reſpect to all Nations, of which number this is one. Wherein the Pſalmiſt diſcourſeth of the merciful Providence of God towards all mankind, and of his readineſs to help them in all their diſtreſſes, ſome few particular inſtances whereof he mentioneth, and leaveth the reſt to be underſtood, there being the ſame reaſon of all. But withal he takes notice alſo of God's Judgments upon wicked Perſons and People. And by this repreſentation of God's Mercies and Judgments, he invites all Nations to an acknowledgment of the true God, to praiſe him for his Favours, and to tremble at his Judgments, which is their juſt duty and reaſonable ſervice.

* Pſal. 106. 1. & 118. 1. and 136. 1.

1. O * Give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever a.

a This whole verſe occurs alſo, Pſal. 106. 1. Only there the addreſs is made to the Iſraelites, and here to all mankind.

2. Let the redeemed of the LORD b ſay ſo c, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy d.

b All they whom God hath redeemed, as it is expreſſed in the next clauſe, or delivered from all the following calamities. c To wit, that the Lord is good, &c. as it is v. 1. d Of ſuch as had taken them Captives, either in Battle, or in their Travels, to which they were led by their own inclinations, or by their neceſſary occaſions.

3. And gathered them out of the lands, from the eaſt, and from the weſt, from the north e, and † from the ſouth f.

e Bringing them into their own Land, out of the ſeveral quarters of the World into which they had been carried, f Heb. from the Sea. Which in Scripture commonly notes the Weſt, becauſe the great Midland Sea was on the Weſt of Canaan; but here as it appears from the oppoſition of this to the North, it notes the South, ſo called from the Red-ſea, which was on the South, and which is ſometimes called the Sea, ſimply and without addition, as Pſal. 72. 8. & 114. 3.

4. They wandered in the wilderneſs g in a ſolitary way, they found no city to dwell in h.

g Miſtaking their way, which they might eaſily do in the vaſt and ſandy deſarts of Arabia. h Or rather, no City or Town inhabited, where they might refreſh themſelves, as Travellers uſed to do; for they did not go into the Wilderneſs to ſeek for a City or Habitation there, but only intended to paſs through it, as appears by the context, and by the nature of the thing.

5. Hungry and thirſty, their Soul fainted in them i.

i Partly for want of neceſſary Proviſions, and partly through anguiſh of Spirit.

6. Then they cryed unto the LORD k in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their diſtreſſes l.

k Heb. Unto Jehovah, to the true God. For the Heathens of whom he ſpeaks had many of them ſome knowledge of the true God, and did in their manner worſhip him with and in their Idols; and eſpecially in their diſtreſſes, when they diſcovered the impotency of their Idols, they did direct their Prayers immediately to the true God, of which there are many inſtances of Heathen Writers. l In anſwer to their Prayers, which he did not becauſe their Prayers were acceptable to him, but partly out of the benignity and compaſſionateneſs of his nature to all his Creatures, partly to encourage and preſerve the uſe of Prayer and Religion among the Gentiles, and to oblige them to a more diligent ſearch after the knowledge of the true God, and of his Worſhip; and partly to give his own people aſſurance of his great readineſs to hear and anſwer all thoſe Prayers, which with upright hearts they offered to him according to his word.

7. And he led them forth m by the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation n.

m Out of the Wilderneſs where they had loſt their way, v. 4. n See before on v. 4.

† Heb. let them confeſs to the LORD his goodneſs. So Gr.

8. † Oh that men would praiſe o the LORD for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to the children of men p!

o Heb. Let them praiſe. Or, They ſhall praiſe, (i.e.) They are highly obliged to praiſe. p Not only to his peculiar people, but to all mankind, to whom he is very kind and bountiful.

9. For he ſatisfieth the longing q ſoul, and filleth the hungry ſoul with gladneſs r.

q Either the thirſty, oppoſed to the hungry here following: or the hungry, as this general phraſe is limited and expounded in the next clauſe. r With the fruits of his goodneſs, with good things, Pſal. 103. 5. with food and gladneſs, Act. 14. 17. with that good which they wanted and deſired.

10. Such as ſit in darkneſs and in the ſhadow of death f, being bound in affliction and iron t.

f In a diſconſolate and forlorn condition, in dark priſons or dungeons. t With afflicting or grievous irons. Or, in the cords of affliction, as they are called Job 36. 8. and particularly in iron fetters.

11. Becauſe they rebelled againſt the words of God u, and contemned the counſel of the moſt High.

u Againſt God's commands made known either, 1. By his written word delivered to the Jews, of which the Gentiles were not ignorant, which therefore they ſhould have diligently inquired after and ſearched into, as the Queen of Sheba came from the ends of the Earth to hear the wiſdom of Solomon, and as divers of the Heathens travelled into very remote parts to gain a more perfect knowledge of the Arts and Sciences; which will juſtly be laid to their charge, and condemn them for their neglect of that Divine Wiſdom, which was treaſured up in the Holy Scriptures. Or, 2. By the Prophets who ſometimes were ſent to the Gentiles. Or, 3. By the Law and Light of Nature, and by its Interpreters, their wiſe and learned Philoſophers, who delivered many excellent rules and precepts of piety and vertue which were ſufficient, though not for their ſalvation without Chriſt, yet for the conduct of their lives in a great meaſure, and to leave them without excuſe for their groſs diſobedience thereunto.

12. Therefore he brought down their heart x with labour y, they fell down, and there was none to help z.

x The pride and rebellion and obſtinacy of their hearts. y Or, with trouble or troubles. z They fell into their Enemies hands, and into hopeleſs and remedileſs miſeries.

13. Then they cryed unto the LORD in their trouble, and he ſaved them out of their diſtreſſes.

14. * He brought them out of darkneſs, and the ſhadow of death, and brake their bands in ſunder.

* Pſal. 68. 6. & 146. 7.

15. Oh that men would praiſe the LORD for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

16. For he hath broken the gates of braſs, and cut the bars of iron in ſunder a.

a He reſtored them to liberty in ſpight of all impediments and oppoſitions.

17. ‖ Fools b, † becauſe of their tranſgreſſion c, and becauſe of their iniquities, are afflicted d.

b (i.e.) Wicked men, whom he calls fools becauſe of the miſchiefs which through their own folly they bring upon themſelves. c Heb. becauſe of the way of their tranſgreſſion. (i. e.) their cuſtom and courſe of ſinning, as the word, way, is uſed Pſal. 1. 1. Prov. 2. 12. They did not fall into ſin once or twice as good men may do, but it was their uſual practice, and therefore they are juſtly puniſhed. d With waſting ſickneſs, as appears from v. 18. 20. Compare Job 33. 19, &c. Pſal. 39. 12, &c.

18. * Their ſoul e abhorreth all manner of meat f, and they draw ‖ near unto the gates of death g.

* Job 33. 20. ‖ Pſal. 9. 13. & 88. 3.

e Either themſelves with all their ſoul: or their appetite, as the ſoul is taken, Job 33. 20. Iſa. 29. 8. f Which is an uſual effect of great ſickneſs. g They are ſick well-nigh unto death.

19. Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, he ſaveth them out of their diſtreſſes.

20. He ſent his word h, and healed them, and delivered them from their deſtructions.

h His command, or his bleſſing, which came with power.

21. Oh that men would praiſe the LORD for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

22. And * let them ſacrifice the ſacrifices of thankſgiving i, and declare his works with † rejoycing.

* Lev. 7. 12. Pſal. 50. 14. † Heb. ſinging.

i Either properly ſo called; or praiſes and thankſgivings to God, which in Scripture are called Sacrifices, becauſe they are no leſs acceptable to God than coſtly Sacrifices.

23. They that go down to the ſea k in ſhips, that do buſineſs l in great waters:

k He ſaith, go down, either becauſe the Sea or the ſhore of it is commonly lower than their habitations from whence they come, or than the natural or artificial banks which are raiſed to prevent the inundation of the Waters, or becauſe the Sea is lower than the Earth: as may be gathered from the Rivers which run down into it. l Whoſe occupation lies there, either as Merchants, or as Mariners.

24. Theſe ſee the works of the LORD, and his wonders m in the deep.

m His wonderful works, either, 1. of Creation, fiſhes of various kinds and ſhapes, and ſome of prodigious greatneſs which are unknown to other men. Or, 2. of Providence, in raiſing and laying ſtorms, of which he ſpeaks in the following verſes.

25. For he commandeth, and † raiſeth the ſtormy wind n, which liſteth up the waves thereof.

n The winds and ſtorms come not by chance, but by the diſpoſition of Divine providence.

26. They mount up to the heaven, they go down again to the depths o, their ſoul is melted, beeauſe of trouble p.

o Towards the bottom of the Sea. p Through the perplexity of their minds, and fear of ſudden and violent death.

27. They reel to and fro, and ſtagger like a drunken man q, and † are at their wits end.

q Not ſo much from the giddineſs of their heads, which is not uſual in perſons accuſtomed to the Sea, as through the violent and various motions of the Sea and ſhip.

28. Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their diſtreſſes.

29. He maketh the ſtorm a calm, ſo that the waves thereof are ſtill.

30. Then are they glad becauſe they be quiet; ſo he bringeth them unto their deſired haven.

31. Oh that men would praiſe the LORD for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to the children of men.

32. Let them exalt him alſo in the congregation of the people r, and praiſe him in the aſſembly of the elders s.

r Not only in their own hearts and families, but even in publick aſſemblies, and before all perſons, as they have opportunity. s The Magiſtrates or Rulers; who are here oppoſed to the people. The ſence is, let them not be aſhamed nor afraid to ſpeak of God's wonderful works and praiſes before the greateſt of men, as mean perſons commonly are. Compare Pſal. 119. 46. Or he mentions the Elders particularly, becauſe they were moſt apt to neglect and forget God, and to exalt themſelves above and againſt him; and therefore it was meet and neceſſary that they ſhould be acquainted with the Almighty power and univerſal providence and dominion of God, that they themſelves might learn ſubjection and reverence to God, and might promote it among their people.

33. He turneth rivers t into a wilderneſs u, and the water-ſprings into dry ground:

t Either, 1. properly ſo called; which he can divert or dry up when he pleaſeth, as ſometimes he hath done. Or rather, 2. thoſe grounds which are well watered, and therefore very fruitful, as the next verſe explains this. And ſo the waterſprings here and v. 35. and the ſtanding water, v. 35. are taken. u Into a dry ground, as it follows, which is like a parched and barren wilderneſs.

34. A fruitful land into † barreneſs x, for the wickedneſs of them that dwell therein y.

x Heb. Into ſaltneſs, which procures barrenneſs. See Deut. 29. 23. Judg. 9. 45. y He doth not inflict theſe judgments by choice or without cauſe, but for the puniſhment of ſin in ſome, and the prevention of it in others.

35. * He turneth the wilderneſs into a ſtanding water z, and dry ground into water-ſprings.

* Iſa. 41. 18.

z Into a well-watered and fruitful land.

36. And there he maketh the hungry a to dwell; that they may prepare a city for habitation;

a Poor people who could not provide for themſelves, or were baniſhed from their own land by potent oppreſſors, and were driven into wilderneſſes, like them, Job 30. 3. which God in pity to them made fruitful.

37. And ſow the fields, and plant vineyards, which may yield b fruits of increaſe c.

b Heb. and they ſhall make or procure from their fields and vineyards. c Such fruits as they uſe to produce.

38. He bleſſeth them alſo, ſo that they are multiplyed greatly, and ſuffereth not their cattel to decreaſe d.

d Preſerves them from abortion and deadly diſeaſes, and on the contrary cauſeth them to increaſe, as he ſaid in the former branch, which is here repeated in other words after the ſame manner.

39. Again they e are miniſhed and brought low f, through oppreſſion, affliction and ſorrow g.

e Theſe poor men, who when they are exalted and bleſſed by God, kick at him, and grow inſolent and ſecure, as the manner of men is. f Are by God's juſt judgment diminiſhed in their numbers and in their bleſſings. g Or, through wicked oppreſſion (by the tyranny of others, whom God ſends to ſpoil them of their abuſed riches) and by other griefs or grievous calamities which God inflicts.

40. * He poureth contempt upon princes h, and cauſeth them to wander in the ‖ wilderneſs where there is no way i.

* Job 12. 21, 24.

h Thoſe who were honourable and adored like Gods by their people, and terrible to all their enemies, he renders them deſpicable to their own Subjects, and to other Nations; and this he doth ſuddenly, abundantly and unavoidably, as this phraſe of pouring it out upon them ſeems to imply. i Either, 1. he giveth them up to fooliſh and pernicious counſels, by which they are expoſed to contempt, and brought to their wits end, not knowing what courſe to take. Or, 2. he baniſheth them from their own Courts and Kingdoms, and forceth them to flee into deſolate wilderneſſes for ſhelter and ſubſiſtence.

41 * Yet ſetteth he the poor on high k ‖ from affliction, and maketh him families like a flock l.

* 1 Sam. 2. 8. Pſal. 113. 7, 8.

k And whilſt he bringeth down great potentates, at the ſame time he advanceth thoſe who were obſcure and contemptible. l Which increaſe very much in a little time.

42. † The righteous ſhall ſee it m, and rejoyce n, and all * iniquity o ſhall ſtop her mouth p.

They ſhall diligently obſerve theſe wonderful works of God's mercy and juſtice. n Not only in the mercies of God vouchſafed to them and to other perſons in want and miſery, but alſo in God's judgments upon his implacable enemies, which afford matter of rejoycing to good men, as hath been once and again declared in this book, both for the Honour which God hath by them, and for the ſins and calamities of others, which by this means are prevented. o (i. e.) Unrighteous or ungodly men, the abſtract being put for the concrete, as faithfulneſſes for the faithful, Pſal. 12. 1. and pride for the proud, Pſal. 36. 11. p Shall be put to ſilence. So this or the like phraſe is uſed, Judg. 18. 10. Job 5. 16. & 21. 5. & 29. 9. They who uſed to ſpeak loftily and wickedly, and to ſet their mouth againſt the heavens, as they did Pſal. 73. 8, 9. to reproach God and his providence as either negligent or unrighteous in the management of the World, ſhall now be forced to acknowledge his power and juſtice in thoſe judgments which he hath brought upon them.

43. * Whoſo is wiſe, and will obſerve thoſe things q, even they r ſhall underſtand the lovingkindneſs of the LORD s.

* Hoſ. 14. 9.

Or, who (for the Hebrew particle, mi, is interrogative) is wiſe? for (as this conjunctive particle is frequently uſed) he will obſerve theſe things. All who are truly wiſe will conſider all theſe events, and lay them to heart, as being very uſeful for their own inſtruction. r Or, each of them, all ſuch wiſe and conſidering perſons. s Will ſee and acknowledge that God is kind or good to all, and that his tender mercies are over all his works, as it is ſaid, Pſal. 145. 9. and ſingularly kind and gracious to all wiſe and godly men.

PSAL. CVIII.

A Song, or Pſalm of David.

This Pſalm is almoſt word for word taken out of two foregoing Pſalms, the firſt five verſes out of Pſal. 57. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. and the reſt out of Pſal. 60. 5, &c. to which the Reader muſt reſort for the explication of it. This only is obſervable, That the Pſalmiſt deſigning to take the body of this Pſalm out of 60. doth induſtriouſly lay aſide that mournful Preface, v. 1, 2, 3, 4. and borrows one more pleaſant out of Pſal. 57. The reaſon of which change is ſuppoſed to be this, that Pſal. 60. was compoſed in the time of his danger and diſtreſs, and the latter after his deliverance.

1. O God, my heart * is fixed, I will ſing and give praiſe even with my glory a.

* Pſal. 57. 7, 8, &c.

a Either, 1. with my heart or ſoul, which is fixed for that work, as he ſaid in the former branch. Or rather, 2. with my tongue, which is called a man's glory, Pſal. 16. 9. comp. with Act. 2. 26. So the firſt branch deſcribes the fixedneſs of his heart, to which this adds the expreſſions of his mouth.

2. Awake pſaltery and harp: I my ſelf will awake early.

3. I will praise thee, O LORD, among the people: and I will sing praises unto thee among the nations.

4. For thy mercy is great above the heavens: and thy truth reacheth unto the || clouds.

|| Or, Skies.

5. Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: and thy glory above all the earth;

6. * That thy beloved may be delivered: save with thy right hand and answer me.

* Psal. 60. 5, &c.

7. God hath spoken in his holiness, I will rejoyce: I will divide Shechem, and mete out the valley of Succoth.

8. Gilead is mine, Manasseh is mine, Ephraim also is the strength of mine head, Judah is my lawgiver,

9. Moab is my wash-pot, over Edom will I cast out my shooe: over Philistia will I triumph.

10. Who will bring me into the strong city? who will lead me into Edom b?

b This he repeats in this place, either because, though the Enemies were defeated and subdued, yet there was some strong city or cities which were not yet taken; or in way of thankful commemoration of God's goodness in answering his former requests, as if he had said, I remember this day to thy glory and my own comfort, my former straits and dangers, which made me cry out, Who will bring me, &c.

11. Wilt not thou, O God, who hast cast us off? and wilt not thou, O God, go forth with our hosts?

12. Give us help from trouble: for vain is the help of man.

13. Through God we shall do valiantly: for he it is that shall tread down our enemies.

PSAL. CIX.

To the chief musician, A Psalm of David.

It is sufficiently evident from the body of this Psalm, that it was composed by David when he was in a state of persecution, either by Saul, or by Absalom; and that amongst and above all the rest of his enemies he takes very particular notice of, and breaks forth into vehement expressions of anger against one particular person, which whether it were Doeg or Ahitophel is not certain, nor at all necessary to know. But as David was, and very well knew himself to be a Type of Christ, and consequently his Enemies did typifie or represent the Enemies of Christ, and this particular adversary of his did represent some singular and eminent enemy of Christ, which though David might not, yet the Spirit of God which indited this Psalm, did know to be Judas, and accordingly directed all these bitter invectives and imprecations against him, who deserved and received far worse punishments for his monstrous wickedness, than all which are here mentioned. And that he was the person principally aimed at in this Psalm will seem very probable to him who considers David's mild and merciful temper even towards his Enemies, which he both professed in words in this very Book, as Psal. 35. 12, 13, 14. and practised in deeds, as 2 Sam. 16. 10, 11. & 19. 22, 23. and withal the severity of these imprecations, reaching not only to the persons of his enemies, but to their children, who yet by the Law of God were not to suffer for their parents sins, Deut. 24. 16.

1. HOld not thy peace a, O God, of my praise b.

a Do not neglect me, but take notice of my extreme danger and misery, and deliver me, which thou canst do by the speaking of one word. b The Author and matter off all my praises; who hast given me continual occasion to praise thee, whom I have used to praise, and will praise whilst I live, do not therefore now give me occasion to turn my praises into lamentations.

2. For the mouth of the wicked, and the † mouth of the deceitful c + are opened d against me: they have spoken against me e with a lying tongue f.

c Of those who add hypocrisie and perfidiousness to their malice. d They speak freely, boldly and publickly, without any fear or shame, e Or, to or with me, as this particle commonly signifies. f Either, 1. with calumnies of false and malicious reports. Or, 2. with deep dissimulation and professions of friendship and kindness.

3. They compassed me about also with words of hatred g: and fought against me * without a cause h.

* Psal. 69. 4.

g Which though covered with specious pretences, proceeded from deep malice and hatred, and were designed to work my destruction. h Without any just provocation given them by me.

4. For my love, they are my adversaries i: but I give myself unto prayer k.

i They requite my love and good will with enmity and mischief, as it is explained v. 5. k Heb. but I prayer, (i. e.) I am a man of prayer, or, I betake my self to prayer. Thus I peace is put for I am for peace, as we render it Psal. 120. 7. and thy bread for the men of thy bread, or, that eat thy bread, Obad. v. 7. The sence is, whilst they reproach and curse me, I pray either, 1. for them, as he did Psal. 35. 13. or, 2. for my self: I did not render unto them evil for evil, but quietly committed my self and my cause to God by prayer, desiring him to plead my cause against them; and I had no other refuge.

5. And * they have rewarded me evil for good, and hatred for my love.

* Psal. 35. 12, & 38. 20.

6. Set thou a wicked man l over him m, and let * || Satan stand at his right hand n.

* Zach. 3. 1.

l Heb. the wicked. Which may be understood either 1. Of some wicked Tyrant, which may rule him with rigour and cruelty. Or, 2. of Satan who is mentioned in the next clause. Let him be delivered over to Satan, to be acted and ruled by him at his pleasure. m. Either, 1. All mine Enemies: for the singular number is sometimes used in like manner. Or rather, 2. One particular Enemy, who was worse than any of the rest, more implacable and inexcusable, whom he thought not fit to express by name, nor was it in the least necessary to do so, because he was speaking to God, who knew his thoughts, and whom he meant. n Either, 1. To molest and vex him, and hinder him in all his affairs; for the right hand is the great instrument of action. Or rather, 2. To accuse him; for this was the place and posture of Accusers in the Jewish Courts. And as for his condemnation, which is the consequence of this accusation, that follows in the next verse.

7 When he shall be judged o, let him + be condemned, and * let his prayer become sin p.

+ Heb. go out guilty, or wicked.

* Prov. 28. 9.

o When he shall be called to an account, and his cause examined before thy Tribunal. p (i. e.) Be turned into sin, or be imputed to him as his sin, or be as unavailable with God for his relief as his sins. When he makes supplication to his Judge, as Job speaks Job 9. 15. for pity and pardon, let him be the more provoked and enraged by it.

8. Let his days q be few, and * let another take his || office r.

* Act. 1. 20.

q The days of his Life. Let him die an untimely death. r Made void by his death. He also implies that his enemy was a man of power and reputation.

9. Let his children be fatherless s, and his wife a widow t.

s Whilest they are but children, and so unable to provide for themselves. t Either made a Widow by his death: or constantly a widow; all persons abhorring her who was related to so vile a miscreant.

10. Let his children be continually vagabonds u, and beg x: let them seek their bread also out of their desolate places y.

u Having no certain place of abode. Which is a grievous curse in it self, Gen. 4. 12, 14. Isa. 16. 2. x This increaseth their misery. y Into which they are fled for fear and shame, as not daring to shew their faces amongst men.

11. Let the extortioner z catch a all that he hath: and let the stranger b spoil his labour c.

z Or, Usurer, or Creditor. a Heb. Ensnare, which is an emphatical expression, (i. e.) take away not only by oppression and violence, but also by cheats and cunning artifices, whereby such persons entangle, and so ruine their Debtors. b Who hath no right to his goods, and will use no pity nor measure in spoiling him. c All the fruits of his labours.

12. Let there be none to * extend mercy unto him: neither let there be any to favour his fatherless children d.

* Psal. 34. 10.

d Let him and his be unpitied and hated as the publick Enemies of Mankind.

13. * Let his posterity be cut off, and in the generation following e let their name be blotted out.

* Job 18. 19.

e Heb. in another generation, either in the third generation: or in the second, or that which next followed the generation of his Fathers. So in this clause he limits the time of that destruction which he imprecates or foretels in the former.

14. Let the iniquity of his fathers be remembred f with the LORD, and let not the sin of his mother be blotted out.

f Against him, or punished in him, as God hath threatned to deal with great delinquents, Exod. 20. 5.

15. Let them g be before the LORD h continually, that he may * cut off the memory of them from the earth.

* Job 18. 17. Psal. 34. 16.

g The sins of his parents last mentioned. h In God's sight and memory to provoke God to punish him: let them not be covered or pardoned.

16. Because that he remembred not i to shew mercy, but persecuted the poor and needy man k, that he might even slay the broken in heart l.

i His duty to God, and his obligation to me for my former kindness expressed v. 4, 5. k My self, who was desolate and miserable, whose condition required pity, and not additions of cruelty. l Whose spirit was grieved, and even broken with the burden of his calamities.

* Ezek. 35. 6. 17. * As he loved cursing m, so let it come unto him: as he delighted not in blessing n, so let it be far from him.

m Either, 1. Cursed or sinful courses. Or rather, 2. To curse others, as appears from the blessing here opposed to it, and from the next verse; to wish and to procure mischief to others, and especially to me. n In desiring and promoting the welfare of others, which indeed was an eye-sore and torment to him.

18. As he cloathed himself with cursing like as with a garment o: so let it come † into his bowels like water p, and like oyl q into his bones.

o Which a man wears constantly, and that as an ornament. p Which when a man drinks, goes into his bowels, and searcheth all the inwards of his belly. q Which is more piercing than water, and being applied to outward parts, reacheth even to the bones and marrow.

19. Let it be unto him as the garment which covereth him, and for a girdle r wherewith he is girded continually.

r Which cleaves closer and faster to a man than a garment, especially than the Eastern garments did, which were large and loose.

† Heb. work. Isa. 40. 10. 20. Let this be the † reward of mine adversaries s from the LORD, and of them that speak evil against my soul t.

s Of those who were confederate with that arch enemy in his wicked enterprise. t With design to take away my life.

21. But do thou for me u, O GOD the LORD, for thy names sake x: because thy mercy is good y, deliver thou me.

u To wit, what I desire, which he expresseth in the next clause. Or, do thou act for me: be not silent or still, but stir up thy self to work on my behalf. x For the glory of thy faithfulness, which is highly concerned in giving me the deliverance which thou hast promised to me. y (i. e.) Gracious and ready to do good to all, but especially to those that love and fear thee. As sin is said to be sinful, Rom. 7. 13. so God's mercy may be said to be merciful, to wit, in an eminent degree, and above the mercy of all the Creatures.

22. For I am poor and needy z, and my heart is wounded within me a.

z And therefore a very proper object for thy pity and help. a I am wounded not slightly, but even to the very heart with soul-piercing sorrows.

* Psal. 102. 11. 23. I am gone b * like the shadow, when it declineth c: I am tossed up and down as the locust d.

b Heb. I am made to go, either, 1. from place to place; which was David's case when he was persecuted by Saul and by Absalom; and Christ's case upon earth, where he had no certain place where to lay his head, Mat. 8. 20. Or, 2. into the grave as this phrase is used 1 Chron. 17. 11. Psal. 58. 9. and oft elsewhere. c Towards the evening, when, the Sun setting, it vanisheth instantly, and irrecoverably until the Sun rise again, which it will never do to me in this world, when once I am gone out of it. d Which of it self is unstable, continually skipping from place to place, and is easily driven away with every wind. So am I exposed to perpetual and successive changes within my self, and to a thousand violences and mischiefs from other persons and things.

24. My knees are weak through fasting e: and my flesh faileth of fatness f.

e Either with voluntary fasts, to which the frequency and long continuance of my calamities obliged me: or with forced fasts sometimes through want of necessary provisions, but most commonly from that loathing of meat which was occasioned by his excessive sorrows and terrors. See on Psal. 107. 18. f Or, for want of fatness. See the like Hebrew phrases, Gen. 18. 26. Jer. 48. 45. Lam. 4. 9.

25. I became also a reproach unto them g: when they looked upon me, they shaked their heads h.

g Instead of that pity which either Religion or Humanity should have taught them to a man in extreme misery, they loaded me with reproaches and scorns. h A gesture of contempt and derision: of which see Job 16. 4. Psal. 22. 8.

26. Help me, O LORD my God: O save me according to thy mercy:

27. That they may know i that this is thy hand: that thou, LORD, hast done it.

i Being convinced of the eminency and singularity and strangeness of the work.

28. Let them curse k, but bless thou: when they arise l let them be ashamed, but let thy servant rejoyce.

k I can patiently bear their curses, as being causeless and fully compensated by thy blessing. Or, they do and will curse, I expect nothing else from them. l (i. e.) Bestir themselves against me. Both God and men are oft said to arise when they enter upon any undertaking, as Jos. 24. 9. Judg. 8. 21. 2 Chron. 13. 6. and 21. 4, &c.

29. Let mine adversaries be cloathed with shame m: and let them cover themselves with their own confusion, as with a mantle.

m For the disappointment of their wicked hopes and designs, and for that unexpected destruction which they have brought upon themselves.

30. I will greatly praise the LORD n with my mouth: yea, I will praise him among the multitude o.

n For that deliverance which I confidently expect. o Or, among the mighty or great men, as this word sometimes signifies. Comp. Psal. 119. 46.

31. For he shall stand at the right hand of the poor p, to save him † from those that condemn his soul q.

p To defend him from his adversary, who stood in that place to accuse him, and to procure his condemnation and destruction. See above on v. 6. q That pass a sentence of death upon him.

PSAL. CX.

A Psalm of David a.

a Written by David, as is manifest both from this Title, which being given to this, as well as to many other Psalms, whereof David is confessed to be the Author, either proves this to be David's, or proves none of them to be so, and from Mat. 22. 43, 44. and Mark 12. 36. where also David is said to have spoken this Psalm in or by the Spirit of God, or by Divine inspiration.

That the Pen-man of this Psalm was not Eliezer, Abraham's servant, who writ it upon the occasion of Abraham's victory over those Kings, Gen. 14. (as some of the later Jews have devised out of opposition to Christianity) nor any other person but David, is manifest from the Title of this Psalm, which is a part of the sacred Text. That this Psalm belongs to the Messiah, is abundantly evident both from the express testimony of the New Testament, Act. 2. 34. 1 Cor. 15. 25. Heb. 1. 13. & 10. 13. and from the consent of the ancient Hebrew Doctors manifested implicitly in Mat. 22. 44. and expressly from their own mouths. Of which see my Latine Synopsis upon this place; and from the matter of the Psalm, which can by no means or arts be made to agree to David, who was not David's Lord, nor a Priest, much less a Priest for ever, or after the order of Melchisedek, the Priesthood of Aaron being in David's time in use and force, and in the hands of another Person and Family. And whereas divers other Psalms, though principally directed to, and to be understood of the Messiah, yet in some sort may be underſtood concerning David alſo, or at leaſt took their riſe and occaſion from David, or from ſomething relating to him, this Pſalm is directly and immediately and ſolely to be underſtood concerning the Meſſiah; the Spirit of God wiſely ſo ordering this matter, that it might be a moſt expreſs and convincing teſtimony againſt the unbelieving Jews concerning the true Meſſiah, and concerning the nature and quality of his Kingdom.

* Mat. 22. 44. Mark 12. 36. Luke 20. 42. Acts 2. 34. 1 Cor. 15. 25. Heb. 1. 13.

1. THe *LORD b ſaid c unto my LORD d, Sit thou at my right hand e, until f I make g thine enemies h thy footſtool i.

b God the Father, the firſt Perſon in the Trinity, to whom accordingly the Original of all things, and eſpecially of the work of mans Redemption by Chriſt is aſcribed. c Decreed or appointed it from Eternity, and in due time publiſhed this Decree, as is noted Pſal. 2. 7. and actually executed it; which he did when he raiſed up Chriſt from the dead, and brought him into his heavenly manſion. d Unto his Son the Meſſias, whom David deſignedly calls his Lord, to admoniſh the Jews and the whole Church, that although he was his Son according to the fleſh or his humane nature, Acts 2. 30. Rom. 1. 3. yet he had an higher Nature and Original, and was alſo his Lord, as being by Nature God bleſſed for ever, and conſequently Lord of all things, as he is called Acts 10. 36. and by Office as he was God-man, the Lord and King of the whole Church, and of all the World for the Church's ſake. And this was a neceſſary proviſion to prevent that ſcandal which the Holy Ghoſt foreſaw the Jews and others would be apt to take at the meanneſs of Chriſt's appearance in the fleſh. The Hebrew word Adon is one of God's Titles, ſignifying his Power and Authority or Lordſhip over all things, and therefore is moſt fitly given to the Meſſias, to whom God hath delegated all his Power in the World, Mat. 28. 18. e Thou who haſt for many years been veiled with infirm and mortal fleſh, deſpiſed and rejected and trampled upon by men, and perſecuted unto the death, do thou now take to thy ſelf thy great and juſt power; thou haſt done thy work upon earth, now take thy reſt and the poſſeſſion of that Soveraign Kingdom and Glory, which by right belongeth to thee; do thou rule with me with equal Power and Majeſty as thou art God, and with an Authority and Honour far above all creatures, ſuch as is next to mine, as thou art man; as this phraſe is expounded in other places. See Mark 16. 19. Luke 22. 69. 1 Cor. 15. 25. Heb. 1. 3, 13. & 8. 1. & 10. 12, 13. Eph. 1. 20, &c. It is a Metaphor from the cuſtom of earthly Princes, who place thoſe perſons whom they honour moſt at their right hand: of which ſee 1 Kings 2. 19. Pſal. 45. 10. Mat. 20. 21. Sitting is put for reigning, 1 Kings 3. 6. comp. with 2 Chron. 1. 8. and withal notes the continuance of the Reign, 1 Cor. 15. 25. f Which word doth not neceſſarily note the end or expiration of his Kingdom at that time; for in other places it notes only the continuance of things till ſuch time, without excluding the time following, as is evident from Gen. 28. 15. Pſal. 112. 8. Mat. 1. ult. So here it may ſignifie that his Kingdom ſhould continue ſo long, even in the midſt of his enemies, and in ſpight of all their power and malice, which was the only thing which was liable to any doubt; for that he ſhould continue to reign after the conqueſt and utter ruine of all his enemies, was out of all queſtion. And yet this is a word of limitation, in regard of the mediatorial Kingdom of Chriſt, in reſpect of which Chriſt rules with a delegated power, as his Father's Vice-roy, and with the uſe of outward means and inſtruments and ordinances, &c. for that manner of Adminiſtration ſhall ceaſe: which alſo ſeems to be intimated by this word, as it is expounded 1 Cor. 15. 25. g By my Almighty power communicated to thee as God by eternal generation, and vouchſafed to thee as Mediator, to enable thee to the full diſcharge of thine Office. h Which alſo are the enemies of thy Church, all perſecutors and ungodly men, who will not have Chriſt to rule over them, Luke 19. 14. ſin and death and the Devil, 1 Cor. 15. 26. i Thy ſlaves and vaſſals to be put to the meaneſt and baſeſt ſervices, as this phraſe implies, 1 Kings 5. 3. Pſal. 18. 39. & 91. 13. being taken from the manner of Eaſtern Princes, who uſed to tread upon the necks of their conquered enemies, as we read Joſ. 10. 24. Judg. 1. 7. And long after thoſe times Sapores the Perſian Emperor trod upon Valerian Emperor of the Romans, and Tamerlan uſed to tread upon Bajazet the Turkiſh Emperor, whom he kept in an iron cage for that purpoſe.

2. The LORD ſhall ſend k the rod of thy ſtrength l out of Zion l: rule thou m in the midſt of thine enemies n.

k Or, ſend forth, into the World. l Thy ſtrong or powerful rod, by an uſual Hebraiſm. And the Rod is put for his Scepter, or Kingly power, as it is Iſa. 10. 24. Jer. 48. 17. Ezek. 7. 10, 11. & 19. 11, 12. But as the Kingdom of Chriſt is not carnal or of this World, Joh. 18. 36. but ſpiritual, ſo this Rod or Scepter is nothing elſe but his Word publiſhed by himſelf, or by his Apoſtles and Miniſters, and accompanied with his Spirit, by which the Meſſias did his great exploits, and ſet up and eſtabliſhed his Kingdom, converting ſome of his enemies, and confounding and deſtroying of others of them by that ſame inſtrument, as is manifeſt by comparing Iſa. 2. 3. & 11. 4. Mich. 4. 2. 2 Cor. 10. 4. 2 Theſſ. 2. 8. Hence this word is called the word of the kingdom, Mat. 13. 19. and the power of God, Rom. 1. 16. David having ſpoken of the Meſſias v. 1. now turneth his ſpeech to him. l From Jeruſalem, which is frequently underſtood by the name of Zion, which was an eminent and venerable part of it, as Pſal. 48. 13. & 87. 2. & 102. 14, 17, &c. Where the Scepter of the Meſſias was firſt to be eſtabliſhed according to the predictions of the Prophets, Pſal. 2. 6, 8. & 48. 3. Iſa. 2. 3, &c. to which the event exactly anſwered, Luke 24. 47. Acts 1. 4. & 2. 1, 2, &c. and from whence it was to be ſent forth into all the parts and Kingdoms of the World, to bring in the Gentiles, which alſo the Prophets had toretold, as Iſa. 2. 3. and in divers of the foregoing Pſalms, as hath been already frequently obſerved and proved. m Thou ſhalt rule, the Imperative being here put for the Future, as it is Gen. 12. 12. Pſal. 37. 27. and oft elſewhere. For this is not a command, but a prediction or a promiſe that he ſhall rule. Which he doth partly by his Grace, converting ſome, and ſo ruling their hearts by his Word and Spirit, and ſubduing their luſts in them and their external enemies for them; and partly by his powerful Providence, whereby he defends his Church and people, and ſubdues and puniſheth all their adverſaries. n Who ſhall ſee it, and do what they can to oppoſe thy Dominion, but ſhall never be able to hinder it, but ſhall ſplit themſelves againſt it.

3. Thy people o ‖ ſhall be willing p in the day of thy power q, in the beauties of holineſs r * from the womb of the morning: thou haſt the dew of thy youth s.

‖ Or, give free-will-offerings.
* Or, more than the womb of the morning: thou ſhalt have, &c.

o Thy ſubjects. p Heb. willingneſſes, i.e. moſt willing, as ſuch plural words are frequently uſed, as Pſal. 5. 10. & 21. 7. Or, freewill-offerings, as the word properly ſignifies. Whereby he may intimate the difference between the Worſhip of the Old Teſtament and that of the New. They ſhall offer and preſent unto thee, as their King and Lord, not oxen or ſheep or goats, as they did under the Law, but themſelves, their ſouls and bodies, as living ſacrifices, as they are called Rom. 12. 1. and as free-will-offerings, giving up themſelves to the Lord, 2 Cor. 8. 5. to live to him, and to die and be offered for him. The ſence is, Thou ſhalt have friends and ſubjects as well as enemies, and thy ſubjects ſhall not yield thee a forced and feigned obedience, as thoſe who are ſubject to, or conquered by, earthly Princes frequently do, of which ſee on Pſal. 18. 44, 45. but ſhall moſt willingly and readily and chearfully obey all thy commands without any diſpute or delay or reſervation, and they ſhall not need to be preſſed to thy ſervice, but ſhall voluntarily liſt themſelves and fight under thy Banner againſt all thy enemies. q When thou ſhalt take into thy hands the rod of thy ſtrength, as it is called v. 2. and ſet up thy Kingdom in the World, and put forth thy mighty Power in the preaching of thy Word, and winning Souls to thy ſelf by it. Or, in the day of thine army, or forces, when thou ſhalt raiſe thine Army, conſiſting of Apoſtles, and other Preachers and Profeſſors of the Goſpel, and ſhalt ſend them forth to conquer the World unto thy ſelf. r Adorned with the beautiful and glorious robes of Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs, wherewith all new men or true Chriſtians are cloathed, Eph. 4. 24. compare Revel. 19. 8, 14. with various gifts and graces of God's Spirit, which are beautiful in the eyes of God and of all good men. The laſt clauſe noted the inward diſpoſition, the willingneſs of Chriſt's Subjects, and this notes their outward habit and deportment. Wherein there ſeems to be an alluſion either, 1. to the beautiful and glorious garments of the Levitical Prieſts, all Chriſtians being Prieſts unto God, Revel. 1. 6. 1 Pet. 2. 5, 9. Or, 2. to the military robes wherewith Souldiers are furniſhed and adorned, all Chriſtians being Souldiers in the Chriſtian warfare. But the words are and may well be rendred thus, in the beauties or glories of the Sanctuary, i.e. by an uſual Hebraiſm, in the beautiful and glorious Sanctuary, which is called the Holy and beautiful houſe, Iſa. 64. 11. either in the Temple at Jeruſalem, which was honoured with Chriſt's preſence, whereby it excelled the glory of the firſt houſe, according to Hagg. 2. 9. in which both Chriſt and the Apoſtles preached, and by their preaching made many of theſe willing people: or in Jeruſalem, which is oft called the Holy place or City, by the ſame word which is here rendred Sanctuary: or in the Church of God and of Chriſt, which was the Antitype of the old Sanctuary or Temple, as is evident from 1 Cor. 3. 16, 17. 2 Cor. 6. 16. Heb. 3. 6. 1 Pet. 2. 5. And this place may be mentioned as the place either where Chriſt's people are made willing and ſhew their willingneſs, or where Chriſt exerciſeth and manifeſteth that power laſt mentioned. s This place is judged the moſt difficult and obſcure of any in this whole Book. The words are diverſly rendred and underſtood. They are to be underſtood either, 1. of Chriſt himſelf, and that in reſpect either, 1. of his Divine and eternal generation, which may be called the dew of his youth or birth, and which he may be ſaid to have had from the womb of the morning, before the firſt morning or light was created or brought out of its womb, that is, before the World was, which is a common deſcription of Eternity in Scripture. Or, 2. of his humane Nature and Birth, and ſo the words may be thus rendred, From the womb of the morning. Or, as it is rendred by divers others, From the womb, from the morning, morning, (i.e. from thy very first birth) thou hast or hadst the dew of thy youth, i.e. those eminent blessings and graces wherewith thou wast enriched; or thy youth or childhood was like the dew, precious and acceptable. Or rather, 2. of Christ's subjects or people, of whom he evidently spoke in the former part of the verse, wherewith these words are joined. And it seems not probable, that the Psalmist after he had discoursed of Christ's advancement to his Kingdom, and his Administration of it, and success in it, both as to his enemies and friends, would run back to his birth, either Divine or humane, both which were evidently and necessarily supposed in what he had already said of him. But then these words may be read either, 1. separately, as two distinct clauses, as they seem to be taken by our English Translators, and by the Colon which they placed in the middle. And so the first clause belongs to the foregoing words, as noting the time when the people should be willing, which having declared more generally in those words, in the day of thy power, he now describes more particularly and exactly, that they should be so even from the morning, or, in a Poetical strain, which is very suitable to this Book, from the womb of the morning, to wit, of that day of his power, i.e. from the very beginning of Christ's entrance upon his Kingdom, which was after his Resurrection and Ascension into Heaven, and from the very first preaching of the Gospel after that time, when multitudes were made Christ's willing people by the preaching of the Apostles, as we read Acts 2. & 3. & 4. & 5, &c. And for the second clause, it is to be understood thus, thou hast, or, as it is in the Hebrew, to thee is, the dew of thy youth, or, of thy childhood; for the word jeled, from which this is derived, signifies sometimes a young man, and sometimes a child or infant. By youth or childhood he here seems to understand those young men or children which shall be born to the Messias, who are called his children, Heb. 2. 13. and his seed, Isa. 53. 10. wherein possibly there might be an allusion to this dew. Thus the abstract is here put for the concrete, which is very frequent in the Hebrew Tongue, as Circumcision and Uncircumcision are put for the circumcised and the uncircumcised, &c. And even in the Latin Tongue this very word youth is oft used for a young man, or for a company of young men. By the dew of youth he means youth, or young men like dew, the note of similitude being oft understood. And this progeny of Christ is compared to the dew, partly because of their great multitude, being like drops of dew, innumerable, and covering the whole face of the earth; see 2 Sam. 17. 12. and partly because of the strange manner of their generation, which like that of the dew, is done suddenly and secretly, and not perceived till it be accomplished, and to the admiration of those that behold it; of which see Isa. 49. 21. Or, 2. jointly, as one entire sentence, The dew of thy youth (i.e. Thy posterity, which is like the dew, as was noted and explained before) is as the dew (which may very well be understood out of the foregoing clause, as the word feet is understood in like manner, Psal. 18. 33. He maketh my feet like hinds feet) of or from the womb of the morning; it is like the morning dew, as it is called both in Scripture, as Hos. 6. 4. and in other Authors. Nor is it strange that a womb is ascribed to the morning, seeing we read of the womb of the Sea, and of the womb of the ice and frost, Job 38. 8, 28, 29.

4. The LORD hath sworn t, and will not repent, * Thou art u a priest x for ever y after the order of Melchizedek z.

* Heb. 5. 6. & 7. 17, 21.

t Which he did not in the Aaronical Priesthood, Heb. 7. 21. but did it here, partly because the thing was new and strange, and might seem incredible, because God had already erected another, and that an everlasting Priesthood, Numb. 25. 13. and given it to Aaron and his posterity for ever, and therefore this needed all possible assurance: and partly that this Priesthood might be established upon better promises, as is said Heb. 8. 6. and made sure and irrevocable, and such that God neither could nor would repent of it, as it follows. u To wit, by my order and constitution: thou shalt be so, and I do hereby make thee so. x As well as a King. Those Offices which were divided before between two families, are both united and invested in thee, both being absolutely necessary for the discharge of thine Office, and for the establishment of thy Kingdom, which is of another kind than the Kingdoms of the World, spiritual and heavenly, and therefore needs such a King as is also a Minister of holy things. This word plainly discovers that this Psalm cannot be understood of David, as some of the Jews would have it, but only of the Messias. And although this word Cohen be sometimes used of a Prince or great Person in the State, as the Jews object, yet it cannot be so understood here, partly because it signifies a Priest in Gen. 14. 18. from whence this expression is borrowed; partly because that word is never used of a Soveraign Prince or King (such as the Jews confess the Messias to be) but only of inferiour Princes or Ministers of State, as Gen. 41. 45. 2 Sam. 8. ult. partly because such an inconsiderable assertion would never have been ushered in by so solemn an oath, especially after far greater things had been said of him in the same kind, v. 1, 2, 3. and partly because the Messias is called a Priest, Zach. 6. 13. compare Jer. 20. 21. & 35. 15, 18. y Not to be interrupted or translated to another person, as the Priesthood of Aaron was upon the death of the Priest, but to be continued to thee for ever. z Or, after the manner, &c. so as he was a Priest and also a King, and both without any successor and without end, in the sence intended, Heb. 7. 3.

5. The Lord a at thy right hand shall strike thorow kings b in the day of his wrath c.

a Either, 1. God the Father, whose words and oath he last mentioned, v. 4. So this is an Apostrophe of the Psalmist to Christ, Thy God and Father is at thy right hand, to wit, to defend and assist thee, as that phrase is used Psal. 16. 8. & 109. 31. and elsewhere. See the Notes on v. 1. And he, to wit, God the Father, shall strike, &c. as it follows. Although this latter clause may belong to the Messias; and as in the former he spake to him, so in this he speaketh of him; such changes of persons being very frequent in this Book. Or, 2. God the Son, or the Lord, who is at thy right hand, as was said before v. 1. shall strike, &c. So this is an Apostrophe to God the Father concerning his Son. This seems best to agree with the following verses; for it is evident that it is the same person who strikes thorow Kings, and judgeth among the heathen, and filleth, &c. And so this whole verse, and those which follow, speak of one person, which seems most probable. b Shall mortally wound and destroy all those Kings and Potentates who are obstinate enemies to him and to his Church. c In the day of battel, when he shall contend with them, and pour forth the floods of his wrath upon them.

6. He shall judge d among the heathen, he shall fill the places d with the dead bodies e: he shall wound the heads f over || many countries.

d Either, 1. conquer and govern them: or rather, 2. condemn and punish them, as it is explained in the following clauses, and as this word is used Gen. 15. 14. Rom. 2. 1, 2. 1 Pet. 4. 6. and elsewhere. d Or, the place of battel, which is necessarily supposed in the fight, and therefore may very well be understood. e Of his enemies slain by his hand, and lying in the field in great numbers and heaps, and that unburied to their greater infamy. f Heb. the head. Which may be understood either, 1. of some one person and eminent adversary of Christ and of his Kingdom; either the Devil, by comparing this with Gen. 3. 15. Heb. 2. 14. who was indeed the Head or Ruler of many Countries, and indeed of all nations, except that of Israel; or the Roman Empire, which was the great enemy and obstructer of Christ's Kingdom, and therefore was to be destroyed by him, as is declared Dan. 2. 44, 45. & 7. 7, &c. or the great Antichrist, or the Beast after which the whole World wondered, Revel. 13. 3. which Christ will destroy, as we read 2 Thess. 2. 8. and in divers places of S. John's Revelation. Or, 2. of all those Heads or Princes which oppose him, the Singular number Head, being here put collectively for Heads, as is very usual in the Hebrew Tongue and Text. And so the meaning is, that none of Christ's enemies, though never so many or great, and their Empire be never so large and potent, shall be able to withstand his force, or escape out of his hand; and that he shall not only destroy the common Souldiers, but also their greatest Commanders and Princes, who in such cases do frequently make their escape. But this and the other like passages both here and in the Prophets, are not to be understood grosly and carnally, but spiritually, according to the nature of Christ's Kingdom, the weapons of Christ's warfare, by which he accomplisheth his great works, being spiritual; and therefore such must be his battels and judgments, as is evident from many other Scriptures, although these also were followed many times with temporal plagues.

7. He shall drink of the brook in the way g: therefore h shall he lift up the head i.

g This may be understood either, 1. properly, to express the great fervency and diligence of the Messias in the prosecution of his business; who having routed and destroyed the main body of his enemies forces, pursues those that fled with such eagerness, that he will not lose any time in refreshing himself, as might seem necessary after such hot and hard service, but will content himself with drinking a little water out of the brook which he finds in his way, that being a little refreshed therewith, he may proceed with more vigour and efficacy in his work. And so this place alludes to the History of Gideon's 300 men, who only lapped a little of the water; of whom see Judg. 7. Or, 2. Metaphorically, to express the humiliation and Passion of the Messias, and thereby to prevent a great mistake which might arise in mens minds concerning him, from the great successes and victories here ascribed to him, which might induce them to think that the Messias should be exempted from all sufferings, and be crowned with constant and perpetual Triumphs. To confute this conceit, he intimates here, that the Messias, before he should obtain that power and glory mentioned in the foregoing verses, should have a large portion of afflictions in the way to it, or whilst he was in the way or course of his life, before he came to his end or rest, and to that honour of sitting at his Father's right hand. Waters in Scripture do very frequently signifie afflictions or sufferings, as Psal. 42. 7, &c. To drink of them signifies to feel or bear them, as Isa. 51. 17. Jer. 25. 15. & 49. 12. Mat. 20. 22. and in this case it may note Christ's willing submission to them. A brook or river of water water is oft uſed in Scripture to expreſs a great abundance either of comforts, as *Pſal.*36.8. or of tribulations, as *Pſal.*18.4. & 124. 4. and therefore may be more fitly uſed in this place than a cup, by which the afflictions of other men are commonly expreſſed, to intimate that the ſufferings of the Meſſiah were unſpeakably more and heavier than the ſufferings of other men, and that he ſhould drink up not a ſmall cup, but the whole River or Sea of his Father's wrath due to our ſins. h Which word may note either the effect, or the conſequent of his ſufferings. i (i.e.) Shall be delivered from all his ſorrows and ſufferings, and exalted to great glory, and joy, and felicity, as this phraſe uſually ſignifies, as Pſal. 3. 4. & 27. 6. *Jer.*52.31. and oft elſewhere; as on the contrary, to hang down the head is a ſignification of great grief and ſhame, as Lament. 2. 10.

PSAL. CXI.

The excellency of this Pſalm appears, as from other things, ſo from the Pſalmiſt's care to digeſt the ſeveral parcels of it into an exact order, according to the order of the Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet, that it might be better fixed in the memories of thoſe who read it. It is a ſhort yet full commemoration of God's Works.

* Heb. Hallelujah.

1. * PRaiſe ye the LORD, I will praiſe the LORD with my whole heart, in the aſſembly of the upright a, and in the congregation.

2. The works of the LORD b are great c, ſought out d of all them that have pleaſure therein e.

b Either, 1. the works of Creation: or rather, 2. the works of his Providence in the World, and eſpecially in and for his Church and People; of which he ſpeaks in the reſt of the Pſalm. c For the infinite power, and wiſdom, and goodneſs, manifeſted in them. d Highly valued and regarded, as this very word and phraſe is uſed, *Deut.*11.12. *Iſa.*62.12. or frequently called to mind, and diligently meditated upon, when others either never regard them, or inſtantly forget them: or, found out, as this word is taken, *Iſa.*65.1. the antecedent being put for the conſequent, which is frequent in Scripture, as Rom. 12. 2. where proving or trying (for ſo the Greek word there ſignifies) is put for approving, which follows after it. And, found out, (i.e.) truly and throughly underſtood, both as to the nature of them, and God's counſels and ends in them; whereas the works of God are oft-times not apprehended or minded, or are miſtaken and miſconſtrued, by ungodly men. e Of all them who take delight in obſerving and conſidering the works of God.

* Heb. honour and glory.

3. His work f is * honourable and glorious g: and his righteouſneſs h endureth for ever i.

f Either all his works, of which ſee the Note on v. 2. or that eminent branch of thoſe works, his providence towards his people, as it is expreſſed afterwards. g Becoming the divine Majeſty, and bringing glory to him from all that obſerve and conſider it. h His juſtice or faithfulneſs in performing his word. i Hath always been and will ſtill be evident to his people in all generations and in all conditions, even when he afflicts them, and ſeems to deal moſt ſeverely, and to break his promiſe with them.

4. He hath made his wonderful works to be remembred k: the LORD is gracious and full of compaſſion l.

k Either, 1. by thoſe memorials which he hath left of them in his Word: or rather, 2. by their own wonderful nature, and the laſting effects and benefits flowing from them, which are ſuch as cannot eaſily be forgotten. l Towards his people, as appears from his works and carriage towards us, in ſparing, and pardoning, and reſtoring, and preſerving us, when we have deſerved to be utterly deſtroyed.

5. He hath given * meat m unto them that fear him n: he will ever be n mindful of his covenant o.

m Which includes all neceſſary proviſions for their being and well-being. The word ſignifies ſpoil, and ſo may relate to the ſpoil of the Egyptians, granted by God to the Iſraelites; but it is ſometimes uſed for food, as *Prov.*31.15. *Mal.*3.10. n To the Iſraelites, the only people in the World which feared and worſhipped the true God according to his will; and eſpecially to thoſe among them that truly feared God, and, for their ſakes, to the body of that Nation, as well in the Wilderneſs, as in their following ſtraits and miſeries. n Or, he hath ever been; for both in the firſt branch of this verſe, and in the foregoing and following verſes, he is ſpeaking of the former works of God. So the Future tenſe is put for the paſt, as it is frequently, and as on the contrary the paſt tenſe is oft put for the Future. o Which he made with Abraham and with his ſeed for ever; whereby he obliged himſelf to be their God, and to provide all neceſſaries for them.

6. He hath ſhewed p his people the power of his works q, that he may give them the heritage of the heathen r.

p Not only by words, but by his actions. q His mighty power in his works, and eſpecially in that which here follows. r The Land of Canaan, which had been poſſeſſed and inherited by the heathens.

7. The works of his hands s are verity and judgment t; * all his commandments u are ſure x. * Pſal.19.7.

s All that he doth either on the behalf of his people, or againſt his or their enemies; of both which ſorts of works he ſpoke in the foregoing verſe. t Are exactly agreeable to his word or promiſes, and to the rules of juſtice. u Either, 1. his Laws given to the Iſraelites, eſpecially the Moral Law, conſidered with its ſanction, the promiſes made to the obſervers of it, and the threatnings denounced againſt tranſgreſſors. Or, 2. his works, as it is in the firſt clauſe, called his Commands, becauſe they are done by virtue of his decree, and by his power and authority; as in like manner God is ſaid to command thoſe bleſſings which he purpoſeth to give, and doth effectually procure, as *Deut.*28. 8. *Pſal.*42. 9. & 68. 28. & 133.3. and to command thoſe creatures which he moveth and acteth as he pleaſeth, as 1 Kings 17.4. *Mat.*8. 27. x Or faithful or certain, conſtant and unchangeable, as his Laws are, being grounded upon the immutable rules of juſtice or equity; infallible and irreſiſtible, as his counſels and ways are.

8. * They † ſtand faſt y for ever and ever, and are done z in truth and uprightneſs.

* Iſa.40.8. Mat. 5. 18.

y Heb. They are eſtabliſhed upon the ſure foundations of truth and uprightneſs, as it follows. z Conſtituted or ordered.

9. He ſent redemption a unto his people, he hath commanded b his covenant for ever c: holy and reverend d is his name.

a That deliverance out of Egypt, which was a type and pledge of that greater and higher redemption by Chriſt. b (i.e.) Appointed or eſtabliſhed firmly by his power and authority. And ſo this word is oft uſed, as *Pſal.*33.9. & 42.9. & 105.31.34. See alſo before on *v.*7. the ground of which ſignification may be taken from hence, that the command of a ſufficient authority concerning any thing, doth commonly eſtabliſh and effect it. c Through all ſucceſſive generations of his people to the end of the world; for the Covenant is the ſame for ſubſtance in all, and differeth only in circumſtances. d Terrible to his enemies, and venerable in his peoples eyes, and holy in all his dealings with all men.

10. * The fear of the LORD e is the beginning of wiſdom f: ‖ a good underſtanding have all they † that do his commandments g: his praiſe endureth for ever.

e Piety or true Religion, which conſiſts in the fear, or worſhip, and ſervice of God. f Is the only foundation of, and introduction to, all true wiſdom. Or, is the chief part of wiſdom, thoſe things which are moſt excellent in their kinds being oft ſaid to be firſt, to wit, in dignity, as *Numb.*24.20. *Deut.*18.4.&c. and in other Authors. And the firſt command, Mark 12. 28. is called the greateſt command, Mat. 22. 36. g Heb. that do them, to wit, God's commands, or the things which the fear of God requireth.

PSAL. CXII.

This Pſalm containeth a deſcription of a good mans gracious diſpoſition and carriage, as alſo of his bleſſed condition, even in this life as well as in the next.

* Heb. Hallelujah.

1. * PRaiſe ye the LORD. Bleſſed is the man that feareth the LORD a, that delighteth greatly b in his commandments c.

a The fear of God, as it is mans only wiſdom, Pſal. 111. 10. ſo it is his only way to true happineſs. b Who makes it his chief delight, care and buſineſs, to ſtudy and obey God's commandments. c He intimates, that zeal and fervency in God's ſervice, is eſſential to true piety.

2. His

2. His ſeed ſhall be mighty upon earth: the generation d of the upright ſhall be bleſſed.

d (i. e.) The poſterity, as this word is oft uſed, as Levit. 23.43. *Numb.*9.10, &c. called his ſeed in the former branch.

3. Wealth and riches ſhall be in his houſe e: and his righteouſneſs f endureth for ever.

e Poſſeſſed by him whilſt he lives, and continued in his family after his death. f (i.e.) The fruit or reward of his righteouſneſs, which is God's bleſſing upon his eſtate: for the work is oft put for the reward of it, as in the Hebrew, *Levit.*19. 13. Job 7.2. *Pſal.*109.20. And righteouſneſs may be here taken for his bounty or charity, as it is below, v. 9. and as this Hebrew word is frequently taken.

* Pſal.97.11. 4. Unto the upright there ariſeth * light in the darkneſs g: he h is gracious, and full of compaſſion, and righteous.

g And although he is ſubject to the troubles and calamities of this life, as others are, yet God will give him ſupport and comfort in them, and an happy iſſue out of them, whereas the wicked ſink under their burdens, and their preſent miſeries uſher in their eternal deſtruction. h Either, 1. God. And ſo this is added as a reaſon why God cauſeth light to ſhine to the upright out of darkneſs, becauſe the Lord is gracious, &c. Or rather, 2. the good or upright man, of whom he ſpeaks both in the foregoing and following words. So this is either, 1. a reaſon why God dealeth thus with good men; it is not from a partial and fond affection to them, but becauſe they are ſuch perſons to whom God hath engaged himſelf by promiſe and Covenant to bleſs them, they are gracious, &c. Or, 2. as an effect of their affliction and deliverance out of it; thereby they learn to be more merciful, and compaſſionate, and juſt, or bountiful, to others in want and miſery.

* Heb. words. † Heb. judgment. 5. A good man ſheweth favour and lendeth i; he will guide his * affairs k with † diſcretion l.

i Giveth freely to ſome, and kindly lendeth to others, according to the variety of their conditions. k Maintain and manage his eſtate or domeſtick affairs. l Heb. with judgment, ſo as is fit and meet, and as God requires, not getting his eſtate unjuſtly, nor caſting it away prodigally or wickedly, nor yet withholding it uncharitably from ſuch as need it.

6. Surely he ſhall not be moved for ever m: the righteous ſhall be in everlaſting remembrance n.

m Though he may for a ſeaſon be afflicted, yet he ſhall not be utterly and eternally deſtroyed, as wicked men ſhall. n Though whilſt he lives he may be expoſed to the cenſures, and ſlanders, and contradictions of ſinners, yet after death his memory will be precious and honourable both with God and with all men, his very enemies not excepted.

7. He ſhall not be afraid of evil tidings o: his heart is fixed, truſting in the LORD p.

o At the report of approaching calamities and judgments of God, at which the wicked are ſo diſmayed and affrighted. p Caſting all his care upon God, and ſecurely relying upon his providence and promiſe.

* Prov.1.33. 8. His heart is eſtabliſhed, * he ſhall not be afraid, until he ſee his deſire upon his enemies q.

q And although his enemies be many, and mighty, and terrible, yet he ſhall confidently and chearfully wait upon God, until he ſee their ruin, and his own deliverance and ſafety.

* 2 Cor.9. 9. † Pſal.75.10. 9. * He hath diſperſed r, he hath given to the poor; his righteouſneſs s endureth for ever t; † his horn ſhall be exalted with honour u.

r To wit, his goods, and that freely and liberally, to ſeveral perſons, as occaſion is offered, as this word implies. s (i.e.) His liberality, as this word is uſed, *Prov.*10.2. & 11.4. *Dan.*4.27. 2 *Cor.*9.9,10, &c. or the reward of it, as before, *v.*3. t Either, 1. his charity is not a tranſient or occaſional act, but his conſtant courſe, of which he is not weary, but perſeveres in it to the end of his life. Or, 2. what he gives is not loſt nor caſt away, as covetous or ungodly men judge of alms, but indeed is the only part of his eſtate, which will abide with him unto all eternity. u Though he may be reproached by ungodly men, yet his innocency ſhall be cleared, and his name and honour gloriouſly exalted.

10. The wicked ſhall ſee it, and be grieved x, he ſhall gnaſh with his teeth, and melt away; the deſire y of the wicked ſhall periſh.

x At the felicity of good men: partly from envy at the happineſs of others: partly from his peculiar hatred of all godly men: and partly becauſe it is a plain teſtimony of God's juſtice and providence, and therefore a certain preſage of his own ruin. y His deſire either of the miſery of good men; or of his own conſtant proſperity and happineſs in the World.

PSAL. CXIII.

This Pſalm is a declaration of God's powerful and univerſal Providence towards all men, and eſpecially towards his afflicted people.

1. * PRaiſe ye the LORD. Praiſe, O ye ſervants of the LORD a: praiſe the Name of the LORD. * Heb. Hallelujah.

a Ye Levites, who are particularly devoted to this ſolemn work, who ſometimes are called God's ſervants in a ſpecial ſence, and all you faithful ſouls.

2. * Bleſſed be the Name of the LORD, from this time forth and for evermore. * Dan.2.20.

3. * From the riſing of the ſun unto the going down of the ſame b, the LORD's Name is to be praiſed c. * Mal.1.11.

b From one end of the World to the other; from Eaſt to Weſt, which he mentions rather than from North to South, becauſe thoſe Parts of the World were at this time much un-inhabited and unknown. c For his glorious works of Creation and Providence, the benefit of which all Nations enjoy; and for his gracious purpoſe and promiſe of bringing in all Nations to the knowledge of his truth by the Meſſias.

4. The LORD is high above all nations d, and * his glory above the heavens e. * Pſal 8.1.

d Superior to all Princes and Bodies of People in the World. e Whereas the glory of earthly Monarchs is confined to this lower World, and to ſmall pittances of it, the glory of God doth not only fill the Earth, but Heaven too, where it is celebrated by thouſands and myriads of bleſſed Angels, yea it is far higher than Heaven, being infinite and incomprehenſible.

5. Who is like unto the LORD our God, who * dwelleth on high f, * Heb. exalteth himſelf to dwell.

f To wit, far above all Heavens, as was now ſaid, being exalted as in place, ſo in power and dignity, above all perſons and things viſible and inviſible.

6. ‖ * Who humbleth himſelf to behold the things that are in heaven, and in the earth g? ‖ Or, beholdeth the things below. So Gr. * Pſal.138.6. Iſai.57.15.

g Who is ſo high, that it is a wonderful vouchſafement and condeſcenſion in him to take any notice or care of his holy and heavenly hoſt, and much more of ſinful and miſerable men upon earth, which yet he is pleaſed to do.

7. * He raiſeth up the poor h out of the duſt i, and liſteth the needy out of the dunghil: * 1 Sam.2.8. Pſal.107. 41.

h Yea he ſtoops ſo low as to regard and advance thoſe, whom all men, and even their own brethren, ſlight and deſpiſe. i From a moſt contemptible and miſerable condition. Beggars and mourners uſed to lie in the duſt, or, as it follows, upon the dunghil, 1 *Sam.*2.8. *Lament.*4.5.

8. That he may * ſet him with princes k, even with the princes of his people l. * Job 36. 7.

k In equal honour and power with them, as he did Joſeph, David, and others. l Which in God's account and in truth are far more honourable and happy than the Princes of heathen and barbarous Nations, becauſe their Subjects are more noble, and they have God's ſpecial preſence and providence among them.

9. * He maketh the barren woman † to keep houſe m, and to be a joyful mother of children. Praiſe ye the LORD. * 1 Sam.2. 5. † Heb. to dwell in an houſe. Pſal.68. 6.

m Heb. to dwell in an houſe, or family, or amongſt children, to wit, coming out of her own womb, as is clearly implied by the oppoſition of this to her barrenneſs. And the word houſe is oft put for children, as Exod. 1. 21. Ruth 4. 11. *Pſal.*115. 10, 12. And ſo it is explained in the next clauſe.

PSAL. CXIV.

This Pſalm is a ſolemn commemoration of Iſraels deliverance out of Egypt; and probably it was to be ſung, amongſt others, at the celebration of the Paſſover.

1. WHen * Iſrael went out of Egypt, the houſe of Jacob from a people of ſtrange language a; * Exod.13. 3.

a Which was a great aggravation of their captivity and miſery. Compare Jer. 5. 15.

2. Judah b was his c ſanctuary d, and Iſrael his dominion e.

b Or, Iſrael, as it is explained in the next clauſe; one Tribe being put for all; which is a common Synecdoche. Judah he mentions as the chief of all the Tribes, not only in number and power, but alſo in dignity, in which the Kingdom was to be ſeated, Gen. 49. 10, &c. as at this time it actually was, and from which the Meſſias was to ſpring. c (i.e.) God's, which is eaſily underſtood from the whole context, and from the nature of the thing. d Or, holineſs, the people of God's holineſs, as they are called, Iſa. 63. 18. or, his holy people, as Deut. 26. 29. Dan. 8. 24. ſanctified or ſet apart from all the Nations of the World to be his peculiar people and poſſeſſion. e In a peculiar manner to be governed by his Laws, and honoured with his ſpecial preſence and favour.

* Exod. 14. 21. Pſal. 77. 16. † Joſh. 3. 13, 16.

3. * The ſea ſaw it f, and fled, † Jordan was driven back.

f To wit, this glorious work of God, in bringing his people out of Egypt.

4. The mountains g skipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs.

g Horeb and Sinai, two tops of one mountain, and other neighbouring hills or mountains. Compare Exod. 19. 18. Pſal. 68. 9. Habak. 3. 6, 10.

Hab. 3. 8.

5. * What ailed thee, O thou ſea, that thou fleddeſt h? thou Jordan, that thou waſt driven back?

h What was the cauſe of this unuſual motion? Such Speeches directed to ſenceleſs Creatures, are very frequent both in Scripture and in other Authors, and eſpecially in Poetical writings, ſuch as this is.

6. Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams; and ye little hills like lambs?

7. Tremble thou earth at the preſence of the LORD i, at the preſence of the God of Jacob.

i But why do I ask theſe queſtions? Ye Mountains did no more than what was juſt and fit at the approach and appearance of the great God; yea the whole earth hath reaſon to tremble and quake upon ſuch occaſions.

* Exod. 17. 6. Numb. 20. 11.

8. * Which turned the rock into a ſtanding water, the flint into a fountain of waters.

PSAL. CXV.

The occaſion of this Pſalm was to manifeſt ſome eminent danger or diſtreſs of the people of Iſrael from ſome Idolatrous Nations: But whether it was that mentioned 2 Chron. 20. or what other, is but matter of conjecture, and not worth our inquiry.

1. NOt unto us, O LORD, not unto us, but unto thy Name give glory a, for thy mercy, and for thy truths ſake.

a As we intreat thy favour and aid, and that thou wouldſt work gloriouſly on our behalf to bring us out of our preſent ſtraits and extremities, ſo we do not deſire this out of a vainglorious humour, as uſually men do in ſuch caſes, that we may get renown by the conqueſt of our proud and mighty enemies, but that thy honour may be vindicated from all their contempts and blaſphemies; and if thou wilt deliver us, we will not arrogate the praiſe and glory of it to our own worth or valour, but only to thy mercy and truth, as it follows.

* Pſal. 123. 10. & 79. 10. Joel 2. 17.

2. Wherefore ſhould the heathen b, * Where is now c their God d?

b Why doſt thou ſuffer them, or give them any colour or occaſion to ſay or think ſo, by conniving at their wickedneſs, and by giving thy people into their hands? c He is no where, he is loſt or at a loſs, either unable or unwilling or not at leiſure to ſave them. d Who hath undertaken to be their God and Saviour, and whom they only worſhip, and of whom they uſe to boaſt and inſult over us and over our Gods.

* Pſal. 135. 6.

3. * But our God e is in the heavens f, he hath done whatſoever he pleaſed g.

e Whom, notwithſtanding your reproaches, we are not aſhamed to own for our God. f Although he have no viſible ſhape nor bodily preſence with us here upon earth, as your Idols have, which is a certain proof of their baſeneſs and weakneſs, yet he hath a certain and a glorious place where he reſideth, even the higheſt Heavens, where he is cloathed with infinite Power and Majeſty, and from whence he beholdeth and governeth this lower world, and all that is in it. g Or, he doth, &c. By his only will and pleaſure all things were at firſt made, and are ſtill diſpoſed and without this nothing cometh to paſs. And therefore all your inſolencies and injuries and ſucceſſes againſt us do not come from an invincible power in you or in your Idols, nor from any defect of ſtrength or goodneſs in our God, but only from hence, that it pleaſed him for many wiſe and holy reaſons to afflict us, and to give you proſperity for a time.

4. * Their idols are ſilver and gold h, the work of mens hands i.

* Deut. 4. 28. Pſal. 135. 15. Jer. 10. 3, &c.

h Thus glorious and powerful is our God, O ye heathens, of whom you ſo boldly ask, who and where he is: but as for your Gods or Idols, they have no power nor worth in them, but what is taken from their materials. i As their matter is wholly from the earth, ſo their form or figure they have from the art of man; and therefore they ſhould rather, if it were poſſible, worſhip man, as their Creator and Lord than be worſhipped by him.

5. They have mouths, but they ſpeak not k; eyes have they, but they ſee not.

k For although the blind Heathen are by their Idolatrous Prieſts made to believe otherwiſe concerning their Idols, in regard of the Spirits which they pretend to dwell in them, yet this is the truth of the matter, and confirmed by long and conſtant experience, that they are but vain and ſenceleſs things, they can neither ſpeak in anſwer to your prayers or inquiries, nor ſee what you do or what you want; nor hear your petitions; nor ſmell your incenſes and ſacrifices; nor handle or uſe their hands either to take any thing from you, or to give any thing to you; nor ſo much as mutter, or give the leaſt ſignification of their apprehenſion of your condition and concerns.

6. They have ears, but they hear not; noſes have they, but they ſmell not.

7. They have hands, but they handle not; feet have they, but they walk not; neither ſpeak l they through their throat.

l Or, mutter, or make a noiſe, as this word ſignifies Iſa. 13. 14. They are ſo far from ſpeaking with their throat and other inſtruments of ſpeech, as men do, that they cannot make ſuch an inarticulate and ſenceleſs ſound with them, as the beaſts do.

8. They that make them m * are like unto them n; ſo is every one that truſteth in them.

* Heb. let them be like unto them, So Gr.

m Or, they that obſerve or worſhip them. For the Pſalmiſts quarrel was not ſo much with thoſe few Artiſts who formed the Images, as with all the adorers of them. And the word here rendred make doth ſometimes ſignifie to worſhip, as ſome underſtand it, not without probability, Exod. 32, 35. becauſe they made (i.e. worſhipped) the calf which Aaron made, and as in other Languages words anſwering to this do ſignifie, as hath been oft obſerved by learned men; and it oft ſignifies to obſerve; as when men are ſaid to make (as it is in the Hebrew) the Sabbath, Deut. 5. 15. and the releaſe, and the Paſſover, and the feaſt of weeks, as Deut. 15. 1. and 16. 1. 10. n This is a ſharp reflection, either, 1. upon the Idols, whoſe higheſt preferment it is to be made like unto man, a mortal, weak and miſerable Creature, infinitely inferiour to the true God. Or, 2. To the makers or worſhippers of them, who by this abſurd and fooliſh action, ſhew that they are as ignorant and ſtupid and void of all ſence and reaſon as their Images.

9. O Iſrael o, truſt thou in the LORD: he is their help o and their ſhield.

o Do not thou follow the example of theſe brutiſh Idolaters, but ſerve the Lord only. o Who truſt in God, as he now required. Or, their is put for your by a change of perſons, which is moſt frequent in Scripture, and eſpecially in theſe Books.

10. O houſe of Aaron p, truſt in the LORD: he is their help and their ſhield.

p You Prieſts and Levites proceeding from Aaron, or related to him, who have ſpecial reaſon and many obligations to do it, who have a more diſtinct knowledge of God, which is the foundation of truſt, Pſal. 9. 10. and who are to be both inſtructers of and examples to the people in this as well as in other duties.

11. Ye that fear the LORD q, truſt in the LORD, he is their help and their ſhield.

q All and every one of you who worſhip the true God, not only Aaronites and Iſraelites, but even Gentile-proſelytes, who are ſaid to come to truſt under the wings of the God of Iſrael, Ruth. 2. 12. And ſuch there were many at this time in the Church of Iſrael, whom therefore he fitly invites to truſt God, becauſe he is no leſs theirs, than the Iſraelites, help and ſhield, as it follows.

12. The LORD hath been mindful of us r, he will bleſs us, he will bleſs the houſe of Iſrael, he will bleſs the houſe of Aaron.

r In our former ſtraits and calamities, and therefore we truſt he will ſtill bleſs us, &c. as it follows. Or, is or will be mindful mindful of us. Though he hath chaſtned us ſore, yet he hath not yet caſt us out of the care of his providence.

13. He will bleſs them that fear the LORD, †Heb. with. both ſmall || and great s.

s Either in age or condition, of whatſoever quality, high and low, rich and poor; for he is no reſpecter of perſons.

14. The LORD ſhall increaſe you t more and more, you and your children.

t In number, notwithſtanding all the attempts of your enemies to diminiſh and deſtroy you. Or, ſhall add to you, to wit, further and greater bleſſings.

15. Ye are bleſſed of the LORD, which made heaven and earth u.

u Who therefore can bleſs you indeed in ſpight of all your enemies curſes and oppoſitions; and not of an impotent Idol that can do you neither good nor hurt.

16. The heaven, even the heavens are the LORD's x: but the earth hath he given to the children of men y.

x To wit, in a peculiar manner, where he dwelleth in that light and glory to which no man can approach, and whence he beholdeth and diſpoſeth all perſons and things upon earth. y For their habitation, poſſeſſion and uſe. But theſe words may be, and are thus rendred by others, and the earth which (which particle is very oft underſtood) he hath given, &c. And then as the foregoing verſe declared that God was the Creator of Heaven and Earth, v. 15. ſo this aſſerts that he is alſo their Lord and Governour to diſpoſe of all men and things as he pleaſeth.

‡Pſal. 88. 10, 11, 12. Iſa. 38. 18. †Pſal. 94. 17. 17. * The dead z praiſe not the LORD, neither any that go down into †ſilence a.

z Such as we ſhall ſuddenly be, if thou doſt not ſuccour us. a Into the place of ſilence, the Grave.

‡Dan. 2. 20. 18. * But we will bleſs the LORD b; from this time forth and for evermore. Praiſe the LORD.

b But we hope for better things, that notwithſtanding our preſent and urgent danger, yet thou wilt deliver us, and ſo give us occaſion to bleſs thy Name; whereby thou wilt have the praiſe and glory of our deliverance.

PSAL. CXVI.

This Pſalm contains a ſolemn thankſgiving to God for a glorious deliverance from grievous and dangerous calamities, as alſo from great perplexities and terrors of mind ariſing from the ſence of God's diſpleaſure.

1. I Love the LORD, becauſe he hath heard my voice, and my ſupplications.

2. Becauſe he hath inclined his ear unto me, ||Heb. in my days. therefore will I call upon him || as long as I live a.

a Heb. in my days, as long as I have a day to live, as this phraſe is uſed 2 Kings 20. 19. Iſa. 39. 8. Comp. Job 27. 6.

‡Pſal. 18. 36. ||Heb. found me. 3. * The ſorrows of death b compaſſed me, and the pains of hell c || gat hold upon me d: I found trouble and ſorrow.

b Dangerous and deadly calamities, as bitter as death. Or, the cords of death. c Or, of the grave, or, of death, either killing pains: or, ſuch agonies and horrors as dying perſons uſe to feel within themſelves. d Heb. found me, (i. e.) ſurprized me. Having been long purſuing me, at laſt they overtook me and ſeized upon me, and I gave up my ſelf for loſt.

4. Then called I upon the Name of the LORD: O LORD, I beſeech thee, deliver my ſoul.

5. Gracious is the LORD e, and righteous f: yea, our God is merciful.

e This he mentions either, 1. as that which he found by experience in anſwer to his prayers: or, 2. as the argument by which he encouraged himſelf to pray. f Therefore he will maintain me and my juſt cauſe againſt my unrighteous oppreſſors, and perform his promiſes, and ſave thoſe who faithfully ſerve him and put their truſt in him.

6. The LORD preſerveth the ſimple g: I was brought low, and he helped me.

g Sincere and plain-hearted perſons, who dare not uſe thoſe frauds and craftſy and wicked artifices in ſaving themſelves or deſtroying their Enemies, but wait upon God with honeſt hearts in his way and for his time of deliverance. Which was the caſe of David, who, though he had the proſpect and promiſe of the Kingdom, yet would not make haſte to it by indirect courſes, as by cutting off Saul, when he had great provocation and fair opportunity to do it: of which ſee 1 Sam. 24. & 26. Such perſons he calls ſimple or fooliſh, as this word is commonly rendred, not becauſe they are really ſo, but becauſe the world eſteems them ſo.

7. Return unto thy reſt b, O my ſoul, for * the LORD hath dealt bountifully with thee. * Pſal. 13. 6.

b Unto that tranquillity of mind and chearful confidence in God's promiſes and providence, which thou didſt once enjoy.

8. * For thou haſt delivered my ſoul i from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling k. * Pſal. 56. 13.

i My ſelf. k To wit, into miſchief, and the pit of deſtruction.

9. I will walk before the LORD l in the land of the living m.

l Or, I ſhall walk, &c. This is either, 1. The Pſalmiſt's promiſe to God in requital of the favour laſt mentioned, I will therefore pleaſe God, as this phraſe is uſed Gen. 5. 24. comp. with Heb. 11. 5. Gen. 17. 1. I will devote my ſelf to the worſhip and ſervice of God. Or, 2. his thankful acknowledgment of God's further favour. Though I be now baniſhed from the place of thy preſence and worſhip, yet I aſſure my ſelf that I ſhall be reſtored to it, and ſhall ſpend my days in thy houſe and ſervice, which is the one thing that I deſired above all other things, Pſal. 27. 4. m Amongſt living men in this World. See on Pſal. 27. 13.

10. * I believed n, therefore have I ſpoken o: * 2 Cor. 4. 13. I was greatly afflicted p.

n To wit, God's promiſe of deliverance, and of the Kingdom, made to me by Samuel, which I was confident he would perform, in ſpight of diſcouragements and difficulties. o So theſe words are tranſlated, as by others, ſo by the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 4. 13. I have ſpoken, either, 1. what I have now ſaid, v. 9. or 2. what I have uttered to others concerning God's promiſes made to me. Which I was not aſhamed nor afraid to publiſh when I had occaſion, becauſe I was fully perſwaded that God would make them good. p Or, when I was, &c. or, although I was, &c. ſuch particles being very frequently underſtood. The ſence is, And this I did even in the midſt of many and ſore afflictions.

11. I ſaid q in my haſte r, * All men are liars ſ. * Rom. 3. 4.

q Yet once, I confeſs, I ſpake very unadviſedly. r Through haſtineſs and precipitation of my mind, for want of due conſideration, as the ſame phraſe is uſed, Pſal. 31. 22. Or, in my terror or amazement, when I was diſcompoſed and diſtracted with the greatneſs of my troubles. ſ The ſence is, either, 1. All men, yea even my former friends and companions, prove deceitful and perfidious; all humane help faileth me; ſo that my caſe is deſperate, if God do not help me. Or, 2. All men, God's own prophets not excepted, are liable to miſtakes by the condition of their nature, as they are men, and therefore may eaſily deceive others; and this might be the caſe of Samuel in his promiſe of the Kingdom to me. Thus he queſtions the truth of God's promiſes, yet ſo as he doth not ſtrike directly at God, but only reflects upon the inſtrument.

12. What ſhall I render unto the LORD, for all his benefits towards me?

t Yet notwithſtanding all my dangers and my diſtruſt of God too, God hath conferred ſo many and great bleſſings upon me, that I can never make ſufficient returns to him for them.

13. I will take the cup of ſalvation u, and call upon the name of the Lord x.

u I will offer the ſacrifice of thankſgiving to God, as this phraſe ſeems to be explained below, v. 17. where the latter clauſe of the verſe is the ſame with that which here follows. The phraſe is taken from the common practice of the Jews in their Thank-offerings, in which a Feaſt was made of the remainders of the Sacrifices, and the Offerers, together with the Prieſts, did eat and drink before the Lord, and amongſt other Rites, the Maſter of the Feaſt took a cup of wine into his hand, and ſolemnly bleſſed God for it, and for the mercy which was then acknowledged, and then gave it to all the Gueſts, who drunk ſucceſſively of it. See 1 Chron. 16. 2, 3. To which cuſtom it is ſuppoſed that our bleſſed Saviour alludes in the inſtitution of the Cup, which alſo is called the Cup of bleſſing, 1 Cor. 10. 16. which is in effect the ſame with the Cup of ſalvation. This Metaphor of a Cup is uſed both of afflictions, as Pſal. 11. 6. & 75. 9. and of comforts, as Pſal. 23. 5. Jer. 16. 8. x Or, publiſh, or preach in, or of the name of the Lord, (i. e.) his gracious nature, and the great things which he hath done for me. For he ſpeaks of praiſe rather than of prayer, as appears both from the former clauſe, and by comparing v. 17.

14. I will pay my vows y unto the LORD, now in the preſence of all his people z.

y The praiſes and ſacrifices which I vowed to God in the time of my diſtreſs. z That they who heard my vows, or underſtood them by the report of others, might be witneſſes of my payment of them, and not be ſcandalized by my unfaithfulneſs in that matter.

15. Precious in the ſight of the LORD, is the death a of his ſaints.

a He ſets an high price upon it, he will not readily grant it to thoſe that greedily ſeek it; and if any ſon of violence procure it, he will make him pay very dearly for it; and when the Saints ſuffer it for God's ſake, as they frequently do, it is a moſt acceptable Sacrifice to God, and highly eſteemed by him. Thus, the blood of God's people is ſaid to be precious in his ſight, Pſal. 72.14. And, in the ſame ſence, the life of a man is ſaid to be precious in his eyes who ſpareth and preſerveth it, as 1 *Sam.*26.21. 2 Kings 1. 13. God's people are precious in his eyes, both living and dying, for whether they live, they live unto the Lord, or whether they die, they die unto the Lord, Rom. 14. 8.

16. O LORD, truly I am thy ſervant b, I am
* Pſal.86.16. thy ſervant, and * the ſon of thy handmaid c: thou haſt looſed my bonds d.

b This is either, 1. an argument uſed in prayer, It becometh thee to protect and ſave thy own ſervants, as every good maſter doth: or rather, 2. a thankful acknowledgment of his great obligations to God, whereby he was in duty bound, to be the Lord's faithful and perpetual ſervant. For this ſuits beſt with the context. c Either, 1. the ſon of a mother who was devoted and did devote me to thy ſervice. Or, 2. like one born in thy houſe of one of thy ſervants, and ſo thine by a moſt ſtrict and double obligation. d Thou haſt reſcued me from mine enemies, whoſe captive and vaſſal I was, and therefore haſt a juſt right and title to me and to my ſervice.

* Lev.7.12. 17. I will offer to thee * the ſacrifice of thankſgiving, and will call upon the Name of the LORD.

18. I will pay my vows unto the LORD, now in the preſence of all his people e.

e And as I ſaid before, ſo I now repeat my promiſe, for the greater aſſurance, and to lay the ſtricter obligation upon my ſelf.

19. In the courts of the LORD's houſe, in the midſt of thee, O Jeruſalem. Praiſe ye the LORD.

PSAL. CXVII.

This Pſalm contains a Prophecy of the Calling of the Gentiles, as appears both from the matter of it, and from Rom. 15. 11. where it is quoted to that purpoſe.

* Rom.15.11. 1. O * Praiſe the LORD a, all ye nations: praiſe him, all ye people.

a Acknowledge the true God, and ſerve him only, and caſt away all your Idols.

2. For his merciful kindneſs is great towards us b: and the truth of the LORD endureth for ever. Praiſe ye the LORD.

b Either, 1. towards us Jews, to whom he hath given thoſe peculiar priviledges which he hath denied to all other Nations. But this may ſeem an improper argument to move the Gentiles to praiſe God for his mercies to others, from which they were excluded. Or, 2. towards all of us, all the children of Abraham, whether carnal or ſpiritual, who were to be incorporated together, and made one body and one fold by and under the Meſſias, *Joh.*10.16. *Eph.*2.14. which myſtery ſeems to be inſinuated by this manner of expreſſion.

PSAL. CXVIII.

This Pſalm moſt probably was compoſed by David, when the Civil Wars between the Houſes of Saul and David were ended, and David was newly ſetled in the Kingdom of all Iſrael, and had newly brought up the Ark of God to his Royal City. But though this was the occaſion, yet David, or at leaſt the Spirit of God, which indited this Pſalm, had a further reach and higher deſign in it, and eſpecially in the latter part of it, which was to carry the Reader's thoughts beyond the Type to the Antitype, the Meſſias and his Kingdom, who was chiefly intended in it. Which is apparent both from the teſtimonies produced of it to that purpoſe in the New Teſtament, as *Mat.*21.9,42. Mark 12.10,11. Acts 4.11,&c. and from the conſent of the Hebrew Doctors both ancient and modern; one evidence whereof is that in their prayers for their Meſſiah, they uſe ſome part of this Pſalm: and from the matter it ſelf, as we ſhall ſhew hereafter. The form of this Pſalm may ſeem to be dramatical, and ſeveral parts of it are ſpoken in the name of ſeveral perſons; yet ſo, that the diſtinction of the perſons and their ſeveral paſſages is not expreſſed, but left to the obſervation of the intelligent and diligent Reader, as it is in the Book of the Song of Solomon, and in ſome part of Eccleſiaſtes; and in many profane Writers. David ſpeaks in his own name from the beginning to v. 22. and from thence to v. 25. in the name of the people: and thence to v. 28. in the name of the Prieſts; and then concludes in his own name.

1. O * Give thanks a unto the LORD, for he
* 1 Chro.16.8, Pſal.106.1. & 107.1. & 136. 1. is good: becauſe his mercy endureth for ever.

a All ſorts of perſons, which are particularly expreſſed in the three next verſes, as they are mentioned in like manner and order, Pſal. 115. 9, 10, 11. where ſee the Notes.

2. Let Iſrael b now ſay, that his mercy endureth for ever.

b After the fleſh, all the Tribes and people of Iſrael, except the Levites.

3. Let the houſe of Aaron c now ſay, that his mercy endureth for ever.

c The Prieſts and Levites, who were greatly diſcouraged and oppreſſed in Saul's time, and ſhall receive great benefits by my government.

4. Let them now that fear the LORD d ſay, that his mercy endureth for ever.

d The Gentile-Proſelytes, whereof there were in David's time, and were likely to be greater numbers than formerly had been.

5. I called upon the LORD † in diſtreſs: the † Heb. out of diſtreſs.
LORD anſwered me, and * ſet me e || in a large * Pſal.18.19. || Or, with enlargement.
place.

e Which Verb is tacitly included in the former, and is eaſily underſtood out of *Pſal.*31.9. where the full phraſe is expreſſed, and from the following word. See the like examples in the Hebrew Text, *Gen.*12. 15. Pſal. 22. 21, &c.

6. * The LORD is || on my ſide, I will not * Pſal.56.4,11. Heb.13.6.
fear: what can man f do unto me? || Heb. for me.

f A frail and impotent creature in himſelf, and much more when he is oppoſed to the Almighty God.

7. * The LORD taketh my part with them * Pſal.54.4.
that help me g: therefore ſhall I ſee my deſire upon them that hate me.

g He is one of the number of my helpers, and enables them to defend me.

8. * It is better to truſt in the LORD, than * Pſal.40.4. & 62.8,9.
to put confidence in man h. Jer.17.5,7.

h As mine adverſaries do in their own numbers, and in their great confederates.

9. * It is better to truſt in the LORD, than * Pſal.146.3.
to put confidence in princes i.

i The neighbouring and heathen Nations, Philiſtins, Syrians, Ammonites, Moabites, &c. who were ſtirred up partly by the overthrows which David had given ſome of them; partly by their jealouſie at David's growing greatneſs and fear for themſelves; and partly by their hatred againſt the true Religion.

10. All nations compaſſed me about: but in the Name of the LORD † will I deſtroy them. † Gr. I did deſtroy them.

11. They compaſſed me about, yea, they compaſſed me about k: but in the Name of the LORD
I will † deſtroy them. † Heb. cut them off.

k The repetition implies their frequency and fervency in this action, and their confidence of ſucceſs.

12. They compaſſed me about * like bees l, they are quenched m as the fire of thorns n: for * Deut.1.44.
o in the Name of the LORD I will † deſtroy † Heb. cut down.

l In great numbers, and with great but potent fury, and to their own ruine, as bees do when they fly about a man, and leave their ſtings in him. m So this word is uſed Job 6. 17. & 18. 5,6. & 21. 17. Or, as the LXX. and Chaldee render it, they burnt or flamed, i. e. raged againſt me like fire, as it follows. And this is ſuppoſed to be one of thoſe Hebrew Verbs, which have not only divers, but contrary ſignifications. n Which flameth out terribly, and makes a crackling noiſe, and burneth fiercely, but quickly ſpends it ſelf without any conſiderable or laſting effect. o Or, but, as this very Particle is frequently uſed, and here twice in this very phraſe, *v.*10,11. So as the former part of the verſe notes their hoſtile attempt, this notes their ill ſucceſs and utter ruin. Here is an inverſion of words in this laſt clauſe, which is not unuſual in the Hebrew Text. Although theſe theſe words may be, and are by a learned man of our own, rendred as they lie in the Hebrew, I truſt (which word may eaſily be underſtood out of v. 8. & 9.) in the name of the Lord, therefore (for ſo the Hebrew chi is oft rendred, and is ſo taken by the Chaldee in this place) I ſhall deſtroy them, or cut them off.

13. Thou p haſt thruſt ſore at me that I might fall: but the LORD helped me.

p O mine enemy and the head of all mine enemies. Poſſibly he underſtandeth Saul; whom for honours ſake he forbears to name: or ſome other chief Commander of his enemies. Or the ſingular word is here put collectively for all his enemies.

14. * The LORD is my ſtrength and ſong q, and is become my ſalvation r.

q The Author of my ſtrength, and therefore the juſt object of my ſong and praiſe. r i.e. my Saviour.

15. The voice of rejoycing and ſalvation s is in the tabernacles of the righteous t: the right hand of the LORD doth valiantly u.

s Of rejoycing and thankſgiving for the ſalvation and deliverance which God hath wrought for me. t Partly becauſe they clearly ſaw God's hand in the work, and therefore took pleaſure in it: and partly becauſe all good men ſuffered great inconveniences under Saul's government, as David complains in divers of the foregoing Pſalms, and expected and received ſingular benefits by David's advancement both in their Civil and Religious concernments. u Theſe are the words of that ſong of joy and praiſe now mentioned.

16. The right hand of the LORD is exalted x: the right hand of the LORD doth valiantly.

x Hath appeared evidently, and wrought powerfully and gloriouſly on my behalf.

17. I ſhall not die y, but live, and declare the works of the LORD z.

y To wit, ſo ſoon as mine enemies deſire, nor by their ſword, as they hope and endeavour. z One branch whereof is the total deſtruction of mine enemies. He implies that he did not deſire life, nor ſhould employ it, as his enemies did theirs, but for the ſervice and glory of God.

18. The LORD hath chaſtened me ſore a: but he hath not given me over unto death.

a By the hands of mine enemies, whom God uſed to that very purpoſe for my greater good, and their own greater and ſurer ruine and confuſion.

19. Open to me b the gates of righteouſneſs c: I will go in to them, and I will praiſe the LORD.

b O ye porters, appointed by God for this work. Or it is a figurative and poetical manner of expreſſion, whereby he ſpeaks to the gates themſelves, as if they had ſence and underſtanding. Or by ſaying, open, he implies that they had been long ſhut againſt him in Saul's time. c To wit, the gates of the Lord's Tabernacle; the proper and uſual place for the ſolemn performance of the duty here following, which he calleth the gates of righteouſneſs; partly in oppoſition to the gates of death, of which he ſpeaks implicitly, v. 18. and expreſly, Pſal. 9. 14. & 107. 18. which may be called the gates of ſin or unrighteouſneſs, becauſe death is the wages of ſin: partly becauſe there the rule of righteouſneſs was kept and taught, and the ſacrifices of righteouſneſs (as they are called Pſal. 4. 5.) were offered, and divers other exerciſes of righteouſneſs or of God's ſervice were performed: and partly becauſe thoſe gates were to be opened to all righteous perſons (ſuch as David had oft profeſſed and proved himſelf to be, upon which account he claims this as his juſt priviledge) and only to ſuch, for the unclean and unrighteous were to be ſhut and kept out by the porters, 2 Chron. 23. 19. Compare Iſa. 26. 2.

20. This is the gate of the LORD, into which the righteous ſhall enter d.

d Theſe may be the words either, 1. of the Levites, the porters returning this anſwer to the foregoing queſtion, This is the gate of the Lord which thou ſeekeſt, and which ſhall be opened to thee according to thy deſire, and thy juſt priviledge; for thou art one of thoſe righteous ones to whom this of right belongs: or, 2. of David himſelf, who ſtands as it were pauſing and contemplating, before he makes his entrance, This is that holy and bleſſed age, which I ſo long and earneſtly thirſted for in my baniſhment, and which is now very beautiful in my ſight, into which I will enter, and all other righteous perſons by my example and encouragement. But as David was a Type of Chriſt and the Temple of Heaven, ſo this place hath a further proſpect than David, and relates to Chriſt's aſcending into Heaven, and opening the gates of that bleſſed Temple both for himſelf and for all righteous men or believers.

21. I will praiſe thee, for thou haſt heard me, and art become my ſalvation.

22. * The ſtone which the builders refuſed e, is become the head-ſtone of the corner f.

* Mat. 21. 42. Mark 12. 10. Luke 20. 17. Acts 4. 11. 1 Pet. 2. 4, 7.

e The Commonwealth of Iſrael and the Church of God are here and elſewhere in Scripture compared to a building, wherein as the people are the ſtones and the matter, ſo the Princes and Rulers are the builders, whoſe office it was to erect and ſupport and improve the building, and to uſe their wiſdom and power in chuſing fit materials for the ſeveral parts and purpoſes of the building, and in the rejection of what was unprofitable and inconvenient. And theſe Maſter-builders rejected David as an obſcure and treacherous and rebellious perſon, fit to be not only laid aſide and thrown away, but alſo to be cruſhed to pieces. And ſo their ſucceſſors rejected Chriſt, as an enemy to Moſes, a friend to ſinners, and a blaſphemer againſt God, and therefore deſerving death and damnation. f The chief ſtone in the whole building, by which the ſeveral parts of the building are upheld and firmly united and kept together. Thus David united all the Tribes and Families of Iſrael, who had been miſerably diſtracted and divided by the Civil Wars between the Houſes of Saul and David. And thus Chriſt united Jews and Gentiles together, as is obſerved, Eph. 2. 14. &c. And although David alludeth to himſelf and his own condition, yet it is not to be doubted but that having the Prophetical ſpirit, by which he foreſaw the coming of Chriſt, and his ill uſage from the Jews, of which he ſpeaks very particularly Pſal. 22. and elſewhere; and having his thoughts much taken up with Chriſt and the events of his Kingdom, of which he ſpeaks in divers of his Pſalms, he had his eye principally fixed upon him in theſe and the following expreſſions. And therefore this place is juſtly expounded of Chriſt in the New Teſtament, as Mark 12. 10. Acts 4. 11. Rom. 9. 32. Eph. 2. 20. 1 Pet. 4. 6. compared with Iſa. 28. 16. And to him indeed the words agree much more properly and fully than to David.

23. † This g is the LORD's doing h, it is marvellous in our eyes.

g This ſtrange event: the Feminine gender being put for the Neuter, as it is in other places of Scripture. h Peculiarly, an effect of his Omnipotent wiſdom, done not only without the help of man, but againſt all the artifices of forces and men.

24. This is the day which the LORD hath made i, we will rejoyce and be glad in it.

i. Either created: or, exalted and glorified, as this word is uſed 1 Sam. 12. 6. or ſanctified by his glorious preſence and work and by his appointment, as a time or ſeaſon never to be forgotten, but to be obſerved with great thankfulneſs and rejoycing, as it follows.

25. Save now, I beſeech thee k, O LORD: O LORD, I beſeech thee, ſend now proſperity.

k Or, we beſeech thee: for the Hebrew words may be rendred either way. Theſe ſeem to be the words of the Levites, to whom he ſpake v. 19. or of the people, uſing theſe joyful acclamations or prayers to God for the preſervation of their King and Kingdom. This alſo is interpreted of and was applied to Chriſt, even by the Jews themſelves, Mark 11. 9. Joh. 12. 13.

26. * Bleſſed be he l that cometh m in the Name of the LORD n: we have bleſſed you out of the houſe of the LORD o.

* Mat. 21. 9. & 23. 39. Mark 11. 9. Luke 19. 38. See Zech. 4. 7.

l We earneſtly pray that God would bleſs his perſon and government and all his enterpriſes. m To wit, Unto us, from whom he was long baniſhed: or, unto the Throne: or from his Father into the World: the Meſſias, who is known by the name of him that cometh or was to come, as Mat. 11. 3. & 21. 9. Luke 7. 20. & 13. 35. Joh. 12. 13. and of whom this very word is uſed, Gen. 49. 10. Iſa. 35. 4. He who is about to come or will certainly come. n By command and commiſſion from him, and for his ſervice and glory. o We who are the Lord's Miniſters attending upon him in his houſe, and appointed to bleſs in his Name, Numb. 6. 23. Deut. 10. 8. do pray for, and in God's Name pronounce his bleſſing upon thee. So theſe are the words of the Prieſts.

27. † God is the LORD p, which hath ſhewed us light q; bind the ſacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar r.

p God hath proved himſelf to be the Lord Jehovah by the accompliſhment of his promiſes. See the Notes on Exod. 6. 3. Or, as it is in the margent, the Lord or Jehovah is God, as it was ſaid upon another ſolemn occaſion and appearance of God, 1 Kings 18. 39. or, is the mighty God, as this Name of God ſignifies, and as he ſhewed himſelf to be by this his mighty and wonderful work. q Who hath cauſed light to ſhine out of darkneſs, who hath ſcattered our thick and dark clouds, and put us into a ſtate of peace and comfort and ſafety and happineſs; all which are frequently ſignified by light in the holy Scripture. Or, who hath diſcovered and will in due time ſend the Meſſias, who is called the light of the Gentiles, or of the world, or of men, Iſa. 42. 6. Joh. 1. 4. & 8. 12. & 12. 35, 46. and by whom he will more clearly and fully reveal his whole mind and will to us, and tell us all things, as the Jews expected, Joh. 4. 25. who alſo will enlighten lighten our dark minds by his Spirit. r These words, as well as those which go before them in this verse, and those which follow after them, v. 28. may be the words of David unto the Priests, who had now blessed him in God's Name, v. 26. And this blessing of God which you wish me, God hath already given me; and therefore in way of gratitude I will offer Sacrifices to him, which do you, O ye Priests, according to your Office bind to the horns of the Altar: of which see Exod. 27. 2. Which horns are supposed by divers learned men to be made for this very use, that the beasts should be bound and killed there. And this may seem probable from Exod. 29. 11, 12. and Levit. 4. 7, &c. where we read that the beasts were to be killed by the door of the Tabernacle, which was very near the Altar of Burnt-offerings, and then immediately part of their blood was to be put upon the horns of the Altar, and the rest poured out at the bottom of it. Although these words may be thus rendred, Bind and bring (one pregnant word being put for two, as above v. 5. and in many other places of Scripture) the sacrifice with cords unto the horns of the Altar, that it may be killed beside it, and its blood put upon the horns after the manner. So they may be David's words to his servants to go and bring one of his beasts to be offered to God in his Name.

28. Thou art my God, and I will praise thee; thou art my God, and I will exalt thee.

29. O give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSAL. CXIX.

The Author of this Psalm was David; which I know none that deny; and of which there is no just reason to doubt. The scope and design of it is manifest, to commend the serious and diligent study and the stedfast belief and the constant practice of God's Word, as incomparably the best counsellor and comforter in the world, and as the only way to true blessedness. And this he confirmeth by his own example, which he proposeth to them for their imitation; and he declareth the great and frequent experience which he had of its admirable sweetness and manifold benefits in all conditions, and especially in the times of his distresses. And because it was an hard thing rightly to understand this Word in all its parts, and harder to put it in practice, he therefore intermixeth many prayers to God for his help therein, thereby directing and encouraging others to take the same course. And because this Psalm was very large, and the matter of it of greatest importance, the Psalmist thought fit to divide it into two and twenty several parts, according to the number of the Hebrew Letters, that so he might both prevent tediousness, and fix it in the memory. It is further observable, that the Word of God is here diversly called by the names of Law, Statutes, Precepts or Commandments, Judgments, Ordinances, Righteousness, Testimonies, Way and Word. By which variety he designed to express the nature and the great perfection and manifold parts and uses of God's Word. Which is called his Word, as proceeding from his mouth, and revealed by him to us; his Way, as prescribed by him for us to walk in; his Law, as binding us to obedience; his Statutes, as declaring his Authority and Power of giving us Laws; his Precepts, as declaring and directing our duty; his Ordinances, as ordained and appointed by him; his Righteousness, as exactly agreeable to God's righteous Nature and Will; his Judgments, as proceeding from the great Judge of the World, and being his Judicial Sentence to which all men must submit; and his Testimonies, as it contains the witnesses of God's mind and will, and of mans duty. And there are very few of these 176 verses contained in this Psalm, in which one or other of these Titles is not found.

ALEPH.

‖ Or, perfect, or, sincere.

1. BLessed are the ‖ undefiled a in the way b, who walk in the law of the LORD c.

a Or, the perfect or sincere, as this word properly and most frequently signifies; such whose hearts and course of life agrees with their profession. b Either, 1. in their way or course of life, which in Scripture is oft called a mans way: or, 2. in the way of the Lord, as it seems to be explained by the next clause. c Who order their lives according to the rule of God's Law or Word.

† Heb. they will seek him. So Gr.

2. Blessed are they that keep d his testimonies e, and that † seek him f with the whole heart g.

d In mind and heart, that carefully and diligently observe. e His precepts. For the reason of this and the other Titles of God's Word, see the Argument or Preface to this Psalm. f To wit, the Lord, expressed v. 1. that seek his presence and favour and acquaintance. g Sincerely, industriously and fervently, above all other things. This is opposed to hypocrisie and sloth and lukewarmness in Religion.

3. They also do no iniquity r; they walk s in his ways t.

r Or, are not workers of Iniquity, i.e. do not knowingly and resolvedly and industriously and customarily continue in sinful courses. So this phrase is understood Job 31. 3. & 34. 8. Psal. 5. 5. & 6. 8. & 125. 5. Prov. 10. 29. Luke 13. 27. otherwise there is not a just man upon earth that sinneth not, Eccles. 7. 20. s This is their constant practice, and the general course of their lives, which is commonly signified by walking, as Psal. 1. 1. and every where. t In the paths which God hath prescribed to them.

4. Thou hast commanded us to keep thy precepts diligently u.

u Nor is it strange that thy people do so exactly and diligently observe and practise thy precepts, because they are commanded so to do by thee their Soveraign Lord.

5. O that x my ways were directed y to keep thy statutes!

x My desires answer thy commands. y Or, established, to wit, by thy Grace and holy Spirit; for the direction of God's word he had already.

6. Then shall I not be * ashamed z, when I have respect a unto all thy commandments b. * Ver. 80.

z Either of my actions; or of my profession of Religion, or of my hope and confidence in thy favour. When sinners shall be ashamed both here, Rom. 6. 21. and hereafter, Dan. 12. 2. I having the conscience of mine own integrity shall lift up my head with courage and boldness both before men, when they either accuse or persecute me; and before God in the day of judgment, as it is said 1 Joh. 4. 17. a A due and true respect, which implies high valuation, hearty affection, diligent study, and common practice. b So as not to be partial in my obedience, nor to allow my self in the practice of any known sin, or in the neglect of any known duty.

7. I will * praise thee c with uprightness of heart d, when I shall have learned † thy righteous judgments e. * Ver. 171. † Heb. judgments of thy righteousness.

c i.e. Worship thee, one eminent duty of God's worship being put for all, as is frequent in Scripture. d Or, with a right mind or heart, in a right manner, so as may be acceptable to thee, and beneficial to my self. e When by thy good Spirit I shall be more fully instructed in the meaning of thy Word, which is the only rule of thy Worship; for want of a sound knowledge whereof many persons run into superstitious or erroneous practices.

8. I will keep thy statutes f: O forsake me not utterly g.

f It is my full purpose to do so, whatsoever it cost me. g Not totally and finally; for then I shall fall into the foulest sins and greatest mischief. Not that he was contented to be forsaken in the least degree, but this he more especially deprecates, as he had reason to do.

BETH.

9. Wherewithal shall a young man h cleanse his way i? by taking heed thereto according to thy word k.

h Or, any man. But he names the young man, because such are commonly void of wisdom and experience, heady and wilful and impatient of admonition, full of violent passions and strong lusts, and exposed to many and great temptations. i Reform his life, or purge himself from all filthiness of flesh and spirit. k By a diligent and circumspect watch over himself, and the examination and regulation of all his actions by the rules of thy word.

10. With my whole heart have I sought thee l: O let me not wander m from thy commandments.

l Deny me not thy grace and assistance, which I have so sincerely and earnestly desired, and laboured to obtain. m Heb. do not make me to wander, to wit, by leading me into temptation, by withdrawing thy grace, which is necessary to keep me from wandring.

11. * Thy word have I hid in mine heart n, that I might not sin against thee o. * Psal. 37. 31.

n I have not contented my self with bare hearing or reading thy Word, but have received it in the love of it, have diligently pondered it, and laid it up in my mind and memory like a choice treasure, to be ready upon all occasions to counsel or comfort or quicken or caution me, as need requires. o That by a diligent and affectionate consideration of thy precepts and promises and threatnings, I might be kept from sinful courses, against which these are the best Antidote.

12. Blessed art thou p O LORD: * teach me thy statutes q. * Ver. 26, 33, 64, 68, 108, 124, 135.

p Thou art infinitely blessed, and most worthy of all blessing and praise, and therefore do thou bless me in teaching me, as it follows. Or, Blessed be thou. I bless and praise thee for that that great bleſſing of thy Word, v. 11. q Both to know and to practiſe them better.

13. With my lips have I declared r all the judgments of thy mouth.

r If thou wilt teach me, I will teach others, as I have already done; and ſo thou ſhalt have glory, and others benefit by it.

14. I have rejoiced in the way of thy teſtimonies s, as much as * in all riches.

* Ver. 72. & 126.

s In the ſtudy and practice of them.

15. I will * meditate in thy precepts t, and have reſpect unto u thy ways.

* Ver. 23.

t I will diligently and ſeriouſly conſider the nature, and deſign, and extent of thy precepts, and eſpecially ſo far as they concern my own duty. u Or, look unto them, as workmen conſtantly and carefully look to their rule to guide themſelves by it.

16. I will delight my ſelf in thy ſtatutes: I will not forget thy word.

GIMEL.

17. Deal bountifully y with thy ſervant, that I may live z, and keep thy word a.

y I plead no merit, but only thy free grace and rich mercy. z Safely and comfortably, in ſpight of all the attempts of mine enemies to take away my life. a I do not deſire life that I may ſatisfie my own luſts, but that I may ſpend it in thy ſervice.

18. † Open thou mine eyes b, that I may behold * wondrous things out of thy law c.

b Enlighten my mind by the light of thy holy Spirit, and diſpel all ignorance and error. c Thoſe great and marvellous depths of divine wiſdom and goodneſs, and thoſe profound Myſteries of Chriſt and of God's grace to mankind, and of that future and everlaſting ſtate, which are contained in God's Law, and which were not to be known but by divine illumination, Mat. 16. 17. 1 Cor. 2. 11, 14. 2 Cor. 3. 14. & 4. 4, 6. Eph. 1. 17. eſpecially in the Times of the Old Teſtament.

19. * I am a ſtranger d in the earth, hide not thy commandments e from me.

* Gen. 47. 9. 1 Chr. 29. 15. Pſal. 39. 12. 2 Cor. 5. 6. Heb. 11. 13.

d Or, ſojourner. I am not here as in my home, but as a pilgrim travelling homeward in a ſtrange land: which calls for thy pity and help. That Law of Nature, which thou haſt planted in all mens minds, teacheth them to ſhew humanity to ſtrangers, and to direct travellers. Much more may this be expected from thee. e Which are my chief ſupport and guide in my pilgrimage.

20. * My ſoul breaketh f for the longing that it hath unto thy judgments g at all times.

* Ver. 40, & 131.

f Fainteth, as it frequently doth, when a thing vehemently deſired is denied or delayed. Compare Prov. 13. 12. g To a more ſound knowledge and ſerious practice of them.

21. Thou haſt rebuked h the proud i that are || curſed k, which do erre l from thy commandments.

|| Or, curſed are they that do err. So. Gr.

h Or, doſt rebuke, i.e. ſeverely puniſh and deſtroy. And therefore I juſtly long for thy judgments, as for the love which I have to them, ſo for fear of thoſe terrible judgments which thou ſendeſt upon the deſpiſers of them. i Obſtinate and preſumptuous ſinners, who ſin with an high hand, and with contempt of God and of his Laws, and of his Judgments; all which is the effect of pride. k That have the curſe of God upon them, and upon all which they have or do: which is the depth of miſery. l Or, wander, knowingly and wilfully and maliciouſly, as proud ſinners uſe to do.

22. Remove from me reproach m and contempt, for I have kept thy teſtimonies n.

m Which I ſuffer unjuſtly and for thy ſake; as he elſewhere complains. n And therefore I am innocent from thoſe crimes for which they cenſure and reproach me. Or, And therefore thou wilt maintain mine honour and intereſt according to thy promiſe made to ſuch as keep thy teſtimonies, and I beg with ſome confidence that thou wilt do it.

23. Princes alſo did ſit and ſpeak o againſt me: but thy ſervant did meditate in thy ſtatutes p.

o Did ſpeak againſt me continually (for ſitting notes continuance) and when they ſate upon their ſeats of Judicature, and when they ſate together in companies, entertaining one another with diſcourſes. p All their contumelies and reproaches did not diſcourage nor divert me from the ſtudy, belief and practice of thy Word.

24. Thy teſtimonies alſo are my delight q, and † my counſellors r.

q My chief comfort under all their cenſures and perſecutions. r To teach me how to carry my ſelf under them.

DALETH.

25. My ſoul cleaveth unto the duſt s: * quicken thou me t according to thy word u.

* Pſal. 71. 20.

s I am in evident danger of preſent death, through the rage and power of mine enemies: I am like one laid in the grave without all hopes of recovery. So this phraſe is uſed Pſal. 22. 15. t Preſerve my life, or revive me and raiſe me out of the duſt by thy Almighty power. u According to thy promiſe.

26. I have declared my ways x, and thou heardeſt me: * teach me thy ſtatutes.

* Pſal. 25. 4. & 27. 11. & 86. 11.

x My ſins, in way of confeſſion; and all my cares and fears and troubles and concerns, in way of humble petition to thee, as appears from God's anſwer.

27. Make me to underſtand y the way of thy precepts z: ſo ſhall I talk of thy wondrous works a.

y More thorowly and more practically. Either, 1. the full mind and meaning of thy precepts, which are exceeding broad, as he ſaith afterwards: or 2. the way wherein I may walk according to thy precepts. z How to demean my ſelf in all the varieties of my condition, and in all my affairs and actions, ſo as is moſt agreeable to thy precepts. a Even the wonders of the Law mentioned before, v. 18.

28. My ſoul † melteth b for heavineſs c: ſtrengthen thou me d according unto thy word.

b Like wax before the fire, it hath no ſtrength nor conſiſtency left in it, but conſumeth or pineth away. c Through grief, partly for my extreme danger and miſery: and principally for my ſins, and thy wrath and terrors following upon them. d That ſo I may bear my burdens patiently and cheerfully, and vanquiſh all my temptations.

29. Remove from me the way of lying e; and grant me thy law graciouſly f.

e Or, of falſhood: either, 1. the practice of lying and diſſembling and cheating, which is ſo rife in Saul's Court, and in the Courts of moſt Princes; but, Lord, let it not be ſo in my Court: or rather, 2. every falſe way of doctrine or worſhip; for to this way he oppoſeth God's Law in the next clauſe. And he juſtly prayeth to God to keep him from Apoſtaſie, Hereſie, Idolatry and Superſtition, becauſe his own corrupt nature of its ſelf, and without God's grace, was prone to theſe errours, and not only Heathens, but many Iſraelites did frequently fall into them. f Vouchſafe unto me an accurate knowledge and firm belief of thy Word, and that I may conſtantly attend and adhere to it, and govern my ſelf by it in all things.

30. I have choſen the way of truth g: thy judgments have I laid before me h.

g To wit, thy word or Law, for my portion and the rule of my worſhip and whole life. h Or, ſet before me, as the Phraſe is fully expreſſed, Pſal. 16. 8. as a delightful object; or as a mark to aim at; or as a rule to direct me.

31. I have ſtuck unto thy teſtimonies i: O LORD, put me not to ſhame k.

i I have reſolutely perſiſted in the practice of thy precepts in ſpight of all temptations, reproaches, perſecutions and diſcouragements, to which I was expoſed in and for ſo doing. k Either, 1. by giving me over to Apoſtaſie or tranſgreſſion, which will bring ſhame. Or rather, 2. by the diſappointment of my hopes, and confidence in thoſe promiſes of the bleſſings of this Life, as well as of the next, which thou haſt made to the obedient, of which I have made my boaſt.

32. I will run the way of thy commandments l, when thou ſhalt enlarge my heart m.

l I will obey thy precepts with all readineſs, fervency and diligence. m Either, 1. when thou ſhalt bring me out of my preſent ſtraits or diſtreſſes. This indeed is called enlarging, as Pſal. 4. 2. & 18. 36. but never to my remembrance, the enlarging of the heart. Or rather, 2. when thou ſhalt repleniſh my heart with more wiſdom, and love to, and delight in thee and thy law; for this enlargement of heart in Scripture is aſcribed to wiſdom, 1 Kings 4. 29. and love, 2 Cor. 6. 11. and joy, Iſa. 60. 5. When thou ſhalt knock off theſe fetters of remaining corruption, and give me a more noble and generous diſpoſition towards thee, and ſtabliſh me with thy free Spirit, as it is expreſſed Pſal. 51. 12. Thus David both owns his duty, and aſſerts the abſolute neceſſity of God's grace to the performance of it.

HE.

33. Teach me, O LORD, the way of thy ſtatutes, and I ſhall keep it unto the end n.

n Or, that I may keep it, &c. That I may perſevere: for Apoſtaſie proceeds from the want of a good underſtanding.

34. Give me underſtanding, and I ſhall keep thy thy law, yea I ſhall obſerve it with my whole heart.

35. Make me to go o in the path of thy commandments; for therein do I delight p.

o By directing my mind into the right way, by inclining my will, and ſtrengthning my reſolution. p Forſake not him who delighteth in thee, and in thy ſervice: and as thou haſt wrought in me to will, work in me alſo to do.

* Pſal. 141. 4. 36. * Incline my heart unto thy teſtimonies q, and not to covetouſneſs r.

q To the love and practice of them. r Not to the inordinate love and deſire of riches. Which particular luſt he mentions, partly becauſe this luſt is moſt ſpreading and univerſal, and there is ſcarce any man who doth not deſire riches either for the love of riches, or upon pretence of neceſſity, or for the ſervice of pride or luxury, or ſome other luſt: partly becauſe this luſt is moſt oppoſite to God's teſtimonies, and doth moſt commonly hinder men from receiving God's word, and from profiting by it. See Matt. 13. 22. Luk. 16. 14. and partly becauſe this luſt is moſt pernicious, as being the root of all evil, 1 Tim. 6. 20. and is moſt miſchievous in Princes and Governours, ſuch as David was, and therefore in a ſpecial manner forbidden to them, Exod. 18. 21.

† Heb. make to paſs. * Ver. 27. 37. † Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity s: and quicken thou me in thy * way t.

s The vain things and luſts of this preſent evil world, ſuch as riches, honours, pleaſures, from beholding them, to wit, with admiration and inordinate affection: for ſuch a ſight of the eyes doth uſually affect the heart, and ſtir up mens luſts and paſſions. Of which ſee Numb. 15. 39. Job 31. 1. Prov. 4. 25. & 23. 5, 6. Mat. 5. 28. t As I deſire that I may be dull and dead in affections to worldly vanities, ſo, Lord, make me lively and vigorous and fervent in thy work and ſervice.

38. Stabliſh thy word u unto thy ſervant, who is devoted to thy fear.

u Confirm and perform thy promiſes as concerning the Kingdom, ſo alſo for the giving of gracious aſſiſtances, directions, and comforts to thoſe that fear thee, of which number I am one.

39. Turn away my reproach x which I fear: for thy judgments are good y.

x Either, 1. for the ſhameful diſappointment of my hopes and confident boaſtings concerning the truth and certainty of thy promiſes: or 2. for my manifold failings, and particularly for that ſhameful matter about Uriah and Bathſheba: or, 3. for my inſtability in or Apoſtaſie from thy ways; which in reſpect of my own weakneſs and folly, I have great cauſe to fear. y This may be a reaſon either, 1. why he prayed and hoped that God would turn away reproach from him becauſe God's word and ſtatutes were good, and therefore it was not fit for any to ſuffer reproach in and for his diligent obſervation of them, or, 2. why he feared reproach, becauſe he had, and feared he might hereafter, tranſgreſs thoſe judgments or ſtatutes of God which were, and he very well knew to be good, (i.e.) juſt and holy and excellent, and therefore it was a ſhameful thing to violate them.

40. Behold, I have longed after thy precepts z: quicken me p in thy righteouſneſs q.

z After a more ſolid knowledge and conſtant performance of thy precepts. p Do thou preſerve and maintain both my natural and ſpiritual life. q According to thy juſtice or faithfulneſs, which obligeth thee to make good thy promiſes.

VAU.

41. Let thy mercies come alſo unto me r, O LORD; even thy ſalvation according to thy * word. * Ver. 49.

r Let promiſed mercies be performed to me.

‖ Or, ſo ſhall I anſwer him that reproveth me in a thing. 42. ‖ So ſhall I have wherewithal to anſwer him that reproacheth me s: for I truſt in thy word t.

s That chargeth me with folly for my piety and truſt in thy promiſes. t Or, becauſe I truſt, &c. This was the matter of their reproach.

43. And take not the word of truth utterly out of my mouth ‖ u; for I have hoped in thy judgments u.

‖ Do not deal ſo with me, that I ſhall be altogether aſhamed to mention thy word, which I have ſo often affirmed to be a word of truth and infallible certainty, of which I have often made my boaſt. u Either in thy word and promiſes, or in thy judicial adminiſtrations and government of the world, which as it is matter of terrour to the wicked, ſo it is matter of comfort and hope to me.

44. So ſhall I keep thy law continually x, for ever and ever.

x So ſhall I be obliged and encouraged to the conſtant and perpetual ſtudy and obſervation of thy Laws.

† Heb. at large. 45. And I will walk † at liberty y: for I ſeek thy precepts.

y Or, I ſhall walk at large, as it is in the margent; I ſhall be delivered from all my preſent ſtraits both of the outward and inward man, and enjoy great freedom and comfort in thy ways.

46. I will ſpeak of thy teſtimonies alſo before kings z, and will not be aſhamed.

z Who commonly entertain all godly diſcourſes with ſcorn and contempt.

47. And I will delight my ſelf in thy commandments a which I have loved.

a Whereas other Princes place their delight in the glories and vanities of this world, and the ſtudy and practice of Religion is generally irkſom and loathſom to them, thy Law ſhall be my chief delight and recreation.

* Gen. 14. 22, 23. Exod. 6. 8. 48. * My hands alſo will I lift up b unto thy commandments which I have loved: and I will meditate in thy ſtatutes c.

b To lay hold upon them, to receive and embrace thy precepts and promiſes by faith and love, and chearfully and vigorouſly to put them in practice: for as the hanging down of the hands is a geſture of ſloth and liſtleſneſs, as 2 Chron. 15. 7. and elſewhere; ſo the lifting up of the hands is the poſture of a man entring upon action, as Gen. 41. 44. 2 Sam. 20. 21. c My deepeſt thoughts, as well as my hands, ſhall be exerciſed in them.

ZAIN.

49. Remember the word d unto thy ſervant, upon which thou haſt cauſed me to hope e.

d Thy promiſes. e By thy command requiring it of me, and by thy grace working it in me.

50. This f is my comfort in my affliction: for thy word hath quickned me g.

f To wit, thy word, as is evident both from the foregoing and following words. g Hath preſerved my life in manifold dangers, and hath revived and cheared my ſpirit.

51. The proud have had me greatly in deriſion h: yet have I not declined from thy law.

h For my godlineſs and truſt in thy word, as the following words imply.

52. I remembred thy judgments of old i, O LORD, and have comforted my ſelf.

i Thy former and ancient diſpenſations to the children of men in puniſhing the ungodly, and protecting and delivering thy faithful ſervants, whoſe experience is my encouragement.

53. Horrour k hath taken hold upon me, becauſe of the wicked that forſake thy law l.

k A mixed paſſion made up of indignation at their perſons as ſinful, and abhorrency of their ſins, and dread and ſorrow at the conſideration of the judgments of God coming upon them. l For the diſhonour which they bring to God, the ſcandal and miſchief to others, and their own certain ruine.

54. Thy ſtatutes have been my ſongs m in the houſe of my pilgrimage n.

m The matter of my ſongs, my delight and recreation. n Either, 1. in this preſent world, which I do not own for my home, wherein I am a ſtranger and pilgrim, as all my fathers were, Pſal. 39. 13. Comp. Gen. 47. 9. Or, 2. in mine exile, and in the wilderneſſes and other places where I have been oft forced to wander, when I was baniſhed from all my friends, and from the place of thy Worſhip, and had no other ſupport or comfort but the remembrance of thy ſtatutes.

55. I have remembred thy name o, O LORD, in the night p, and have kept thy law q.

o Thy holy Nature and Attributes, thy bleſſed Word, and thy wonderful Works: all which come under the Title of Gods Name. p When darkneſs cauſeth fear in others, I took pleaſure in remembring thee: and when others abandon all buſineſs, and wholly give themſelves up to reſt and ſleep, my thoughts and affections were working towards thee. q This was the fruit of my ſerious remembrance of thee.

56. This r I had, becauſe I kept thy precepts s.

r This comfortable and profitable remembrance and contemplation of thy Name and Statutes, of which he ſpoke, v. 54, 55. s Which if I had wilfully and wickedly broken, the remembrance membrance of these things would have been sad and frightful to me, as now it is comfortable, because I kept them.

CHETH.

* Psal. 142. 5. 57. * Thou art my portion t, O LORD, I have said u, that I would keep thy words.

t Whereas other men place their portion and happiness in worldly things, I have chosen thee for my portion and chief treasure, as he said Psal. 16. 5. & 73. 26. and thou hast an all-sufficient and an excellent portion for me. u I have not only purposed it in mine own heart, but have professed and own it before others, and I do not repent of it.

† Heb. face. 58. I intreated thy † favour x with my whole heart: be merciful unto me according to thy word.

x Thy gracious presence and merciful assistance, as it follows.

59. I thought on my ways y, and turned my feet unto thy testimonies z.

y I seriously considered both my former counsels and courses, that I might be humbled for my past errours, and might now amend them, and my duty in all my future actions. z And finding that my feet had too often swerved from thy rule, I turned them to it. And although the ways of sinful pleasure and advantage were presented to my mind, yet I rejected them, and turned my self wholly to thy ways.

60. I made haste, and delayed not a to keep thy commandments.

a Being fully convinced of the necessity and excellency of obedience, I presently resolved upon it, and immediately put it in execution.

‖ Or, companies. 61. The ‖ bands of the wicked have robbed me b: but I have not forgotten thy law.

b Or, made a ‖ prey of me: done me many injuries, for my respect to thy Law.

* Ver. 164. 62. At midnight I will rise c to give * thanks unto thee: because of thy righteous judgments d.

c Out of my bed to praise thee in a solemn manner; not being contented with those short ejaculations which he might have used lying in his bed. d (i. e.) Laws which are so useful to direct and comfort me.

* Ver. 79. 63. I am * a companion of all them that fear thee e, and of them that keep thy precepts.

e Not excepting the poorest and meanest, whose society other Princes disdain.

64. The earth, O LORD, is full of thy mercy f: teach me thy statutes g.

f Thou dost satisfie the just desires and necessities of all men and all creatures with the fruits of thy goodness. g The generality of other men chiefly desire the blessings of this life; but, Lord, give me thy spiritual blessings, the saving-knowledge, love and practice of thy Law.

TETH.

65. Thou hast dealt well with thy servant, O LORD, according unto thy word.

h Whereby I may rightly discern between truth and falshood, good or evil, between the mind of God, and my own or others inventions; that so I may be kept from those mistakes and errours in which many are involved, that I may truly judge what thy Law requires or permits, and what it forbids. Heb. the goodness of taste, an experimental sence and relish of Divine things. Comp. Psal. 34. 9. i A spiritual and experimental knowledge. And judgment or taste and knowledge may, by an useful figure called Hendiadys, be put for judicious or solid or practical knowledge. k I have believed the Divine authority of them, and the truth and certainty of those promises and threatnings which thou hast annexed to them.

* Ver. 71. and 75. 67. * Before I was afflicted I went astray l: but now I have kept thy word.

l As men generally do in their prosperity. See Deut. 32. 15. Psal. 73. 4, 5, 6, &c. Prov. 1. 32. Jer. 22. 21.

68. Thou art good m, and dost good n: teach me thy statutes o.

m Gracious and bountiful in thy nature. n To all men, both good and bad, Mat. 5. 45. and in all things, yea even when thou afflictest. o Which is the good that I desire above all things.

† Heb. sewed a lye upon me. 69. The proud have † forged a lie p against me: but I will keep thy precepts q with my whole heart.

p A slander, charging me with hypocrisie towards God, and rebellion against my Prince. q My practice shall confute their calumnies.

70. Their heart is as fat as grease r: but I delight in thy law s.

r The sence is, either, 1. they are stupid and insensible and past feeling, not affected either with the terrours or comforts of God's word. So the like phrase is used Isa. 6. 10. comp. with Joh. 12. 40. or, 2. they prosper exceedingly, and are even glutted with the wealth and comforts of this life. s But I do not envy them their jollity, and I have as much delight in God's Law, as they have in worldly things.

71. It is good t for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy statutes t.

t Necessary and greatly beneficial. t He repeats what in effect he said before, v. 67. partly to intimate the certainty and importance of this truth, and partly because it is a great Paradox to worldly men, who generally esteem afflictions to be evil, yea the worst of evils.

* Psal. 19. 10. Prov. 8. 11. 72. * The law of thy mouth is better unto me u, than thousands of gold and silver.

u Not only thy promises, but even thy precepts, which are so unpleasant and hard to ungodly men, to me they are more desirable and more needful and profitable, because they do not only give me abundant satisfaction and comfort in this life, but also they conduct me with safety and delight unto that eternal and most blessed life; where gold and silver bear no price.

JOD.

* Job 10. 8. 73. * Thy hands have made me and fashioned me: give me understanding that I may learn thy commandments x.

x I am thy creature, and therefore obliged to serve and obey thee with all my might; which that I may do aright I beg thy instruction or assistance. Or, thou hast made me once, make me a second time, and renew thy decayed image in me, that I may know and serve thee better, and that as I was made by thee, so I may be guided by thy grace to serve and glorifie my Creator.

* Ver. 79. 74. * They that fear thee, will be glad y when they see me z: because I have hoped in thy word a.

y Partly for my sake, of whose innocency and piety they are convinced, and therefore sympathize with me: and partly for their own sakes, both for the encouragement they have by my example to trust in God, and for the manifold benefits both spiritual and temporal, which they expect from my government. z To wit, alive and in safety, notwithstanding all the force and malice of mine enemies, and advanced to the Kingdom. a In thy promise, and have not been disappointed of my hope, which is a great confirmation of their faith and hope in God, that they shall obtain all the good things which God hath promised them.

† Heb. righteousness. Ps. 19. 8. 75. I know b, O LORD, that thy judgments c are † right, and that thou in faithfulness d hast afflicted me.

b By the convictions of my own Conscience, and by experience. c (i. e.) Thy correction, as the next clause explains this. d In pursuance of thy promises, and in order to my good, that by my afflictions thou mightest purge me from those sins which might provoke thy wrath against me, and prepare me for a better administration, and more lasting and comfortable enjoyment of my Kingdom.

† Heb. to comfort me. 76. Let, I pray thee, thy merciful kindness be † for my comfort, according to thy word e unto thy servant.

e Yet in judgment remember mercy, and give me that comfort and assistance in, and that deliverance out of my troubles, which thou hast promised me.

77. Let thy tender mercies come unto me, that I may live f: for thy law is my delight g.

f That I may be preserved from that violent and untimely death which mine enemies design to bring upon me. g I humbly beg and expect thy protection, because I am thy faithful servant.

78. Let the proud be ashamed, for they dealt perversly with me h without a cause, but I will meditate in thy precepts i.

h Heb. they have perverted me, either by their calumnies, whereby they have put false and perverse constructions upon

all

all my words and actions: or by endeavouring to overthrow and deſtroy me, or to turn me out of the way of thy precepts. i All their wicked attempts againſt me ſhall never drive me from the ſtudy, and love, and practice of thy precepts.

79. Let thoſe that fear thee, turn unto me k, and thoſe that have known l thy teſtimonies.

k Either, 1. turn their eyes to me as a ſpectacle of God's wonderful mercy: or rather, 2. turn their hearts and affections to me, which have been alienated from me, either by the artifices and calumnies of my adverſaries, or by my ſore and long diſtreſſes, which made them prone to think that either I had deceived them with falſe pretences, or that God for my ſins had utterly forſaken me. Which doubtleſs was a very grievous burden to David, who had a far greater eſteem and affection for ſuch perſons, than for all other men, and deſired above all things to ſtand right in their opinions. l (i. e.) Loved and practiſed them, as words of knowledge are oft uſed.

m Heb. perfect or entire, that I may love and obey them ſincerely, conſtantly and univerſally. n To wit, for my ſins, which are the only juſt cauſes of ſhame, and for the diſappointment of my hopes following upon them.

* Pſal. 89. 2. * Ver. 152. & 160. 89. * For ever, O LORD, * thy word is ſetled in heaven z.

z Although many things happen upon earth which ſeem contrary to thy word, and at which men take occaſion to queſtion the truth of thy word, yet in Heaven it is ſure and certainly true. In heaven, either, 1. with thee in thy heavenly habitation, or in thy breaſt: as thy nature is unchangeable, ſo thy word is infallible. Or rather, 2. in the heavenly bodies, which are not ſubject to thoſe changes and decays which are in this lower world, but conſtantly continue the ſame in their ſubſtance, and order, and courſes, and this by virtue of that Word of God by which they were made and eſtabliſhed in this manner; and therefore God's Word delivered to his people upon earth, which is of the ſame nature, muſt needs be of equal certainty and ſtability. This ſence beſt ſuits with the following verſes, and with other Scriptures, wherein the certainty of God's Word is ſet forth, by comparing it with the ſtability of the Heaven and the Earth, as Mat. 5. 18. and elſewhere.

† Heb. to generation and generation. 90. Thy faithfulneſs is † unto all generations a: thou haſt eſtabliſhed the earth, and it ‖ abideth b. ‖ Heb. ſtandeth.

a Every age gives freſh proofs of the truth of thy Word. b In that place and ſtate in which thou didſt eſtabliſh it. See Eccleſ. 1. 4.

† Heb. ſtand. 91. They c † continue this day according to thine ordinances d: for all are thy ſervants e.

c The Heaven and the Earth laſt mentioned. d As thou haſt appointed, and by virtue of thine appointment. e All things are ſubject to thy power and pleaſure, and none can reſiſt thy will, or word.

92. Unleſs thy law had been my delights, I ſhould then f have periſhed in mine affliction.

f At the very inſtant; I could not have outlived one ſtroke of thine afflicting hand.

93. I will never forget thy precepts: for with them thou haſt quickned me g.

g Revived and cheared me, when my heart was ready to ſink and die within me.

94. I am thine h, ſave me: for I have ſought thy precepts.

h By Creation and Redemption, and manifold obligations, as alſo by my own choice and deſignation, I have devoted my ſelf to thy ſervice, and committed my ſelf to thy care.

95. The wicked have waited for me to deſtroy me: but I will conſider thy teſtimonies i.

i As my beſt comforters, and counſellers, and defenders, againſt all the aſſaults and deſigns of mine enemies.

96. I have ſeen an end of all perfection k; but thy commandment l is exceeding broad m.

k I have obſerved by my experience, that the greateſt and moſt perfect accompliſhments and enjoyments in this world, the greateſt glory, and riches, and power, and wiſdom, are too narrow and ſhort-lived to make men happy. l Thy word, one part of it being Synecdochically put for the whole. m Or, large, both for extent, and for continuance: it is uſeful to all perſons, in all times and conditions, and for all purpoſes, to inform, direct, quicken, comfort, ſanctifie and ſave men: it is of everlaſting truth and efficacy, it will never deceive nor forſake thoſe who truſt to it, as all worldly things will, but will make men happy both here and for ever.

97. O how love I thy law n! it is my meditation all the day.

n O Lord, thou knoweſt it, and to thee I appeal herein againſt all the cenſures and calumnies of mine Enemies to the contrary.

† Heb. it is mine for ever. So Gr. 98. Thou, through thy commandments, haſt made me wiſer than mine enemies o: for † they are ever with me p.

o Becauſe by that means I have thy wiſdom to guide me and thy power engaged to protect and ſave me; which is a more certain and effectual way to obtain my deſires and ends, than all the policy and craft of mine Enemies is to hinder them, as I have found by experience. p They are continually before mine eyes, as a rule by which to govern all my actions, whereby I am kept from ſplitting upon thoſe rocks whereby others are ruined.

99. I have more underſtanding q than all my teachers r: for thy teſtimonies are my meditation s.

q He ſpeaks not here of notional, but of ſpiritual and practical and experimental knowledge. r Than all or moſt (for that general word is oft ſo underſtood) of thoſe who taught me formerly, or of the publick teachers in Saul's time; which probably were for the generality of them, neither ſo knowing, nor ſo good, as they ſhould have been. s The matter of my conſtant and moſt diligent ſtudy.

100. I underſtand more than the ancients: becauſe I keep thy precepts t.

t By which reaſon he intimates, that the practice of Religion is the beſt way to underſtand it, and that mens vicious hearts and lives are the greateſt hindrances of all true and ſolid knowledge of it.

101. I have reſtrained my feet from every evil way u: that I might keep thy word x.

u Or, way of evil, which either is evil, or leads to it, ſin and the temptations or occaſions of ſin. x I did this not for any carnal reaſons, as ſome men abſtain from divers ſins for their credit or advantage, but out of pure reſpect to thy Word.

102. I have not departed from thy judgments: for thou * haſt taught me y.

* Job 26. 2.

y To wit, by thy bleſſed Spirit, illuminating my mind, and working upon my heart, which other teachers cannot do.

* Pſal. 19. 10. Prov. 8. 11. † Heb. palate.

103. * How ſweet are thy words unto my † taſte! yea, ſweeter than honey to my mouth z.

z The ſtudy and obedience of thy word yields me more ſatisfaction and delight than any worldly men find in their ſenſual pleaſures.

104. Through thy precepts I get underſtanding a: therefore b * I hate every falſe way c.

* Ver. 128.

a True and uſeful and powerful knowledge. b Becauſe that diſcovers to me, as the wickedneſs, ſo the folly and miſchief of ſuch practices. c Every thing which is contrary to that of truth and right, all falſe doctrine and worſhip, and all ſinful or vicious courſes.

105. Thy word is a ‖ lamp unto my feet d, and a light unto my path.

d To direct me in all my doubts and difficulties, to preſerve me from ſin and miſery, both which oft come under the name of darkneſs, and to comfort me in all my fears and diſtreſſes.

106. I have ſworn e, and I will perform it f, that I will keep * thy righteous judgments.

* Ver. 144.

e Obliged my ſelf by ſerious purpoſe and ſolemn vow, or by a formal oath, which was not unuſual amongſt God's people, as 2 Chron. 15. 15. Nehem. 10. 29. f I do not repent of it, but by God's grace I will fulfil it.

107. I am afflicted very much: quicken me, O LORD, according unto thy word.

108. Accept, I beſeech thee, the free-will offerings of my mouth g, O LORD, and teach me thy judgments.

g Either, 1. thoſe which I have promiſed with my mouth, though I am not now in a capacity of performing my promiſes, as being baniſhed from thy houſe. Or rather, 2. the ſacrifices of prayer and praiſes, which I do freely and frequently offer unto thee; which are called Sacrifices, as Pſal. 50. 15. and calves of our lips, Hoſ. 14. 2.

109. My ſoul is continually in my hand h: yet do I not forget thy law.

h Expoſed to perpetual and extreme danger, as any precious and frail thing is which a man carrieth openly in his hand, whence it may eaſily fall or be ſnatched away by a violent hand. See the ſame or like phraſe Judg. 12. 3. 1 Sam. 19. 5. Job 13. 14.

110. The wicked have laid a ſnare for me: yet I erred not from thy precepts.

* Deut. 33. 4.

111. Thy teſtimonies have I taken as an * heritage for ever i: for they are the rejoicing of my heart.

i I have choſen them for my chief portion, from which I will never part.

† Heb. to do. ‖ Gr. for the recompence of reward.

112. I have inclined my heart k † to perform thy ſtatutes alaw, even ‖ unto the end.

k As I prayed to thee to incline mine heart to them, above v. 36. ſo I did not neglect my duty, but chearfully complied with the motions of thy Spirit, and yielded up my mind and heart to the ſtudy and practice of them.

S A M E C H.

113. I hate vain thoughts l: but thy law do I love.

l This word ſignifies thoughts, Job 4. 13. & 20. 2. or opinions, 1 Kings 18. 21. Which being indifferent to good and evil, is here taken in an evil ſence, for vain thoughts, as we render it, or for thoughts or opinions or devices of men differing from or oppoſite to God's Law, as may be gathered from the next clauſe, where God's Law is oppoſed to theſe, and as ſome both Jewiſh and Chriſtian Expoſitors underſtand it. Nor is it unuſual in the Hebrew Text for one and the ſame word to be taken both in a good and an ill ſence in ſeveral places: whereof we have one inſtance in a word of the ſame ſignification with this, mezimmah, which ſignifies a thought, and is ſometimes taken in a good ſence, as Prov. 1. 4. & 3. 8. & 8. 12. & 13. 16. Jer. 51. 11. but elſewhere in a bad ſence, as Job 21. 27. Pſal. 10. 2, 4. Prov. 12. 2. & 14. 17. The like hath been obſerved concerning another Hebrew word of the ſame or near ſignification, hormah, which is taken in a good ſence, Prov. 1. 4. & 13. 16, &c. and in an ill ſence, as Exod. 21. 14. Joſ. 9. 4. Job 5. 13. And the like may be ſaid concerning this word alſo. But the ancient Interpreters underſtand this word not of things, but of perſons, and ſo it may be underſtood of men that think evil, that deviſe wicked devices, or that have falſe and evil opinions, oppoſite to God's Law, or tending to ſeduce men from it.

* Pſal. 91. 9.

114. * Thou art my hiding place, and my ſhield: I hope in thy word.

* Mat. 7. 23.

115. * Depart from me, ye evil doers; for I will keep the commandments of my God m.

m And therefore will avoid your ſociety and converſation, leſt I ſhould be hindred from that which is good, and drawn to ſin by your evil counſel or example.

116. Uphold me according unto thy word, that I may live: and let me not be aſhamed of my hope n.

n Or, becauſe of my hope, or confidence in thy promiſes, of the certainty whereof I have oft made my boaſt before others.

117. Hold thou me up, and I ſhall be ſafe: and I will have reſpect unto thy ſtatutes continually o.

o And being freed from thoſe diſtractions and diverſions which my preſſing dangers occaſion, I will wholly devote my ſelf to the ſtudy and practice of thy bleſſed word.

118. Thou haſt trodden down all them that err from thy ſtatutes: for their deceit is falſhood p.

p All their crafty and deceitful devices, by which they deſign to enſnare and ruine me and other good men, ſhall deceive them and their own expectations, and bring that deſtruction upon themſelves which they deſign for others.

119. Thou † putteſt away q all the wicked of the earth like droſs r, therefore I love thy teſtimonies s.

q Thou removeſt them from thy preſence and from the ſociety of thy people and from the land of the living. r Which, though for a ſeaſon it be mixed with gold or ſilver, is not only ſeparated from it as an uſeleſs and contemptible thing, but alſo is utterly conſumed by fire. s Becauſe they are the beſt preſervatives againſt wickedneſs, and againſt thoſe dreadful puniſhments attending upon it, of which he profeſſeth his fear in the next verſe.

120. My fleſh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgments t.

t The obſervation of thy terrible judgments againſt ungodly men, and the conſcience of my own infirmity and manifold ſins, makes me fear leſt thou ſhouldſt puniſh me alſo, as thou mighteſt juſtly do, if thou ſhouldſt be ſtrict to mark what is amiſs in me, or leſt I ſhould partake with them in their ſins, and conſequently in their plagues.

A I N.

121. I have done judgment and juſtice u: leave me not to mine oppreſſors.

u i. e. Juſt judgment, as Eccleſ. 5. 7. to wit, towards mine oppreſſors, whom I have no way injured.

122. Be ſurety for thy ſervant x for good y: let not the proud oppreſs me.

x Do thou undertake and plead my cauſe againſt all mine enemies, as a ſurety reſcues the poor perſecuted debtor from the hands of a ſevere creditor. y For my ſafety and comfort.

* Ver. 81. Pſal. 123. 1, 2.

123. * Mine eyes fail for thy ſalvation, and for the word of thy righteouſneſs z.

z For the performance of thy righteous or faithful or merciful word or promiſe.

124. Deal with thy ſervant according unto thy mercy a, and teach me thy ſtatutes.

a Not according to ſtrict juſtice, nor according to my ſins.

125. I am thy ſervant, give me underſtanding, that I may know thy teſtimonies.

126. It is time b for thee, LORD, to work b: for they c have made void thy law d.

b It is high time or a fit ſeaſon. b To put forth thy power for the vindication of thy own name and cauſe, and for the reſtraint and puniſhment of evil-doers. c To wit, mine oppreſſors, or the wicked; whom it was needleſs to expreſs, both becauſe they had been lately and frequently mentioned before, and partly becauſe it was evident from the following words. d Or, abrogated thy law, have profeſſedly and openly caſt off its authority, reſolvedly preferring their own wills and luſts before it, trampled upon thy plain commands, and deſpiſed both thy promiſes and threatnings. They have not only ſinned through ignorance rance and infirmity, but preſumptuouſly and maliciouſly.

* Pſal.19.10. ver. 72. Prov.8.11.

127. * Therefore I love thy commandments e above gold, yea, above fine gold.

e Partly becauſe it is one evidence of their excellency that they are diſliked by the vileſt of men; partly out of a juſt indignation and oppoſition againſt thy ſworn enemies; and partly becauſe the great and general Apoſtacy of others makes this duty more neceſſary to prevent their own and other mens relapſes.

128. Therefore f I eſteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right g; and I hate every falſe way.

f For the reaſons now mentioned. g I do not make void all thy precepts, as they did, v. 126. nor yet am I partial in my approbation of them, as others are, who reject all ſuch as are oppoſite to their luſts and intereſts; but I approve all of them without any exception, and that not only in my judgment, but in my heart and life, as appears by that hatred of ſin which is oppoſed to it in the next clauſe.

* Ver. 18.

129. Thy teſtimonies are * wonderful h: therefore doth my ſoul keep them.

h In regard of the deep and wonderful myſteries, and moſt excellent counſels and directions, far exceeding all the rules of the greateſt Philoſophers, and the exceeding great and precious promiſes of God contained in them. This is the reaſon of his high eſtimation of them expreſſed in the laſt verſe.

* Pſal.19.7.

130. The entrance of thy words i giveth light: * it giveth underſtanding unto the ſimple k.

i The very beginnings and rudiments of it, the firſt diſcoveries of thoſe ſacred Myſteries; and much more the depths of them, in which their chief excellency conſiſts. Or, as other both ancient and later Interpreters render the place, the opening of thy words, by which may be underſtood either, 1. the opening of mens minds by the Word of God; but that ſeems to be the ſame thing with giving light, which here follows: or, 2. the opening or declaration of God's mind made in and by his Word. k To the moſt ignorant and unlearned perſons, who are but willing to learn.

131. I opened my mouth, and panted l: for I longed for thy commandments.

134. Deliver me from the oppreſſion of man r: ſo will I keep thy precepts.

r As he prayed againſt the inward impediment of his obedience, v. 133. ſo here he prayeth againſt an external impediment of it, and a common temptation to ſin.

135. Make thy face to ſhine upon thy ſervant s: and teach me thy ſtatutes.

138. Thy teſtimonies that thou haſt commanded are † righteous, and very || faithful y.

y But this verſe is otherwiſe rendred by all the ancient Interpreters and by divers others, and that more agreeably to the order of the words in the Hebrew Text, Thou haſt commanded righteouſneſs even thy teſtimonies (or, the righteouſneſs of thy teſtimonies, or, thy righteous teſtimonies. by a common Hebraiſm, or rather, righteouſneſs in or by thy teſtimonies, nothing being more frequent than the Elliptis of the prefix beth which ſignifies in or by:) and truth (or, and true, thy righteous and true teſtimonies: although the other ſeems to be the better tranſlation) earneſtly. So the ſence is, Thou haſt ſtrictly and ſeverely, under the higheſt obligations and penalties, commanded in thy Word that men ſhould be juſt and true in all their actions. And this agrees very well with the next foregoing verſe, wherein he affirmed that God is righteous, and doth righteous things; and then here he adds, that he requires righteouſneſs and truth from all men.

Whereas this and all his former profeſſions of his piety were charged by his Enemies with deep hypocriſie, and might ſeem to favour of pride and vain-glory; here in the cloſe of them he makes a ſolemn appeal to that God, who knew his heart and all his ways, and whether theſe things were not true and real; which if they were not, he tacitly imprecates God's judgment upon himſelf.

A ſong * of degrees a.

This Pſalm ſeems to have been compoſed, either, 1. by David in the time of his perſecution by Saul, when he was expoſed both to the ſwords and to the calumnies of his enemies; of which two evils he complains in this Pſalm: or, 2. by ſome other holy Prophet in a time of the Churches perſecution.

a Or, of aſcents, as others render it, and as the word properly ſignifies. This Title is given to this and to the fourteen following Pſalms; concerning the reaſon whereof there are divers conjectures, the chief of which are theſe; either, 1. becauſe of the excellent matter of them, as eminent perſons are called men of high degree, 1 Chron. 17. 17. For in them are contained, as learned men have obſerved, many doctrines or inſtructions of great uſe and importance, and thoſe delivered with extraordinary brevity and elegancy: or, 2. becauſe they were ſung upon the fifteen degrees or ſtairs of the Temple, which the Jewiſh Writers mention, or, at leaſt, upon ſome high place: or, 3. becauſe they were ſung with a very loud voice: or, 4. becauſe they were ſung by the Jews when they returned from Babylon, and went up to Jeruſalem. Which ſome judge the more probable, becauſe it ſuits with the order of theſe Pſalms; whereof the firſt was to be uſed by them when they were preparing for their departure, and ſuffered delays in it from the calumnies of their enemies; the ſecond, in their journey; the third, upon their arrival at Jeruſalem; the fourth, after the building of the City and Temple, &c. And although one of theſe Pſalms is aſcribed to David, and another to Solomon, yet they alſo, as well as the reſt, might be applied to this uſe; and ſo might this Pſalm alſo, though David firſt compoſed it upon another occaſion: or, 5. from ſomething which was peculiar in them either in the Poetry or in the manner of ſinging them. But theſe things being now loſt and unknown, not only to Chriſtians, but even to the Jews themſelves, we muſt be contentedly ignorant of this as well as of moſt other Titles of the Pſalms; and the rather, becauſe they do not at all concern the matter, nor are they neceſſary to the underſtanding of them.

1. IN * my diſtreſs I cried unto the LORD, and he heard me.

2. Deliver my ſoul, O LORD, from lying lips b, and from a deceitful tongue c.

b From the unjuſt cenſures and malicious ſlanders of mine enemies, who traduce me as an egregious hypocrite, as a rebel and traitor. c Which covereth miſchievous deſigns with pretences of kindneſs.

‖ Or, What ſhall the deceitful tongue give unto thee? or, what ſhall it profit thee? † Heb. added.

3. ‖ What ſhall be given unto thee d? or what † be done unto thee, thou falſe tongue?

d Whoſoever thou art who art guilty of theſe practices. He applies himſelf ſeverally to the conſciences of every one of them. Or, he deſigns Doeg or ſome other perſon in Saul's Court eminent for this wickedneſs. The ſence may be this, It is true, thou doſt me ſome miſchief. But what benefit doſt thou get by it, if all thy accounts be caſt up? For although thou mayſt thereby obtain ſome favour and advantage from Saul, yet thou wilt aſſuredly bring upon thy ſelf the curſe and vengeance of God; and then thou wilt be no gainer by the bargain. And to do miſchief to another without benefit to thy ſelf, is an inhumane and diabolical wickedneſs.

4. ‖ Sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals of juniper e.

e So this verſe contains an anſwer to the queſtion v. 3. and declares the ſlanderers recompence: which is the wrath and vengeance of the mighty God, which in Scripture, and particularly in this Book, is oft compared to arrows, as Pſal. 7. 13, 14, &c. and here to arrows of the mighty, i. e. ſhot by the hands of a ſtrong man; and to coals, Pſal. 140. 11. and here to coals of juniper, which being kindled burn very fiercely, and retain their heat for a long time. And the Pſalmiſt may poſſibly expreſs it in theſe words, to ſhew the ſuitableneſs of the puniſhment to the ſin, as thy tongue ſhoots arrows, (for ſo calumnies are called Pſal. 57. 4. & 64. 3.) and kindles coals, ſo thou ſhalt bring God's arrows and coals kindled by the fire of his wrath upon thy ſelf. But according to the other Tranſlation, which is in the margent, this is a further declaration of the ſin of calumny. Though, all things conſidered, it doth thee no good, yet it doth others much hurt, to whom it is like ſharp arrows, &c.

5. Wo is me, that I ſojourn in Meſech, that I dwell in the tents of Kedar f.

f Meſech and Kedar are two ſorts of people oft mentioned in Scripture, and reckoned amongſt the heathen and barbarous Nations. But their names are not here to be underſtood properly, (for we do not read that either David, or the Iſraelites in the Babyloniſh Captivity dwelt in their lands) but only Metaphorically, as the ungodly Iſraelites are called Sodom and Gomorrha, Iſa. 1. 10. and Amorites and Hittites, Ezek. 16. 3, 45. and as in common ſpeech among us, men of an evil character are called Turks or Jews. And ſo he explains himſelf in the next verſe by this deſcription of them, him or them that hated peace, although David ſought peace with them, v. 7. And ſo he ſpeaks either, 1. of the Philiſtins, among whom he ſojourned for a time. But he did not ſpeak peace with them, but ſought their ruine, as the event ſhewed; nor did they wage war againſt him, whilſt he lived peaceably among them. Or rather, 2. the Courtiers and Souldiers of Saul, and the generality of the Iſraelites, who to curry favour with Saul, ſought David's ruine, and that many times by treachery and pretences of friendſhip; of which he oft complains in this Book; whom as he elſewhere calls Heathen, as Pſal. 9. 5. & 59. 5. it is not ſtrange if he compare them here to the ſavage Arabians. And among ſuch perſons David was oft forced to ſojourn in Saul's time; and with them he ſought peace by all ways poſſible, but they hated peace, and the more he purſued peace, the more eagerly did they proſecute the war, as it here follows.

† Heb. Mandri Gr.

6. My ſoul hath long dwelt with him that hateth peace.

7. I am ‖ for peace: but when I ſpeak, they are for war.

A Song of degrees of David.

This Pſalm ſeems to have been written by David for the uſe of the people when they came up to Jeruſalem to the ſolemn Feaſts.

1. I Was glad when they ſaid unto me, Let us go a into the houſe of the LORD.

a Exhorting one another to it, as Deut. 33. 19. Or, we will go. The ſence is, it delighted me much to hear that the people who had ſo long lived in the neglect or contempt of God's worſhip, were now ready and forward in it.

PSAL. CXXIII.

A ſong of degrees.

This Pſalm contains a deſcription of the great agony and diſtreſs of God's people, and of their carriage under it.

1. UNto thee a lift I up mine eyes, O thou * that dwelleſt in the heavens.

* Pſal. 115. 3.

a Unto thee only, becauſe all other perſons either cannot, or will not, help me.

2. Behold, as the eyes of ſervants look unto the hand of their maſters b, and as the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her miſtreſs: ſo our eyes wait upon the LORD our God, until that he have mercy upon us c.

b Either, 1. for ſupply of their wants, which comes from their maſters hand: or, 2. for pity, the hand being the inſtrument whereby maſters commonly correct their ſervants, and looking to the hand may expreſs the poſture of one ſupplicating for mercy: or rather, 3. for help and defence againſt their oppreſſors. For ſervants were unable to defend themſelves, and were not allowed to wear defenſive weapons, but expected and had protection from their maſters in caſe of injury. For this phraſe of having ones eyes towards another, both in this and other ſacred Books, conſtantly notes expectation and deſire of help from them, as Pſal. 25. 15. & 69. 3. Iſa. 17. 7. Ezek. 23. 27. and oft elſewhere. And the phraſe of God's having mercy upon another, doth moſt commonly ſignifie that act or effect of his mercy in helping and delivering him. c Until he graciouſly help and ſave us.

3. Have mercy upon us, O LORD, have mercy upon us: for we are exceedingly filled with contempt d.

4. Our ſoul is exceedingly filled with the ſcorning of ‖ thoſe that are at eaſe, and with the contempt of the proud e.

A ſong of degrees of David.

This Pſalm was compoſed by David, in the name and for the uſe of all the Church and people of Iſrael, as a thankſgiving for their deliverance from ſome eminent danger or dangers from proud and potent enemies. Many ſuch they had in David's time: but which of them is here intended, is hard to determine, and not worth the enquiry.

1. IF it had not been the LORD who was on our ſide, * now may Iſrael ſay:

* Pſal. 129. 1.

2. If it had not been the LORD who was on our ſide, when men roſe up againſt us;

3. Then they had ſwallowed us up quick a, when their wrath was kindled againſt us.

a They had ſpeedily and utterly deſtroyed us, as Korah, &c. were, Numb. 16.

4. Then the waters had overwhelmed us, the ſtream had gone over our ſoul.

5. Then the proud waters b had gone over our ſoul.

b Our enemies compared to proud waters, for their great multitude, and ſwelling rage, and mighty force.

6. Bleſſed be the LORD, who hath not given us as a prey to their teeth c.

A song of degrees.

This Psalm was designed for the consolation and encouragement of God's Church and people in all ages, against all the plots and malice of their enemies.

1. THey that trust in the LORD shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed a, but abideth for ever.

a Or, overthrown by any winds or storms; partly because of its own greatness and strength; and partly because of the divine protection afforded to it.

2. As the mountains are round about Jerusalem b, so the LORD is round about his people, from henceforth even for ever.

b By which it was defended both from stormy winds, and from the assaults of its enemies.

† Heb. wickedness. 3. For the rod of † the wicked c shall not rest d upon the lot of the righteous e: lest the righteous put forth their hands unto iniquity f.

c The power and authority of cruel Tyrants. d Not continue for ever nor too long. e Upon the habitations and persons of good men. f Lest through humane frailty, and the great weight or long continuance of their troubles, they should be driven to impatience, or to despair, or to use indirect and sinful courses to relieve themselves.

4. Do good, O LORD, unto those that be good g, and to them that are upright in their hearts.

g As thou hast promised to keep thy people from evil, v. 3. be pleased also to vouchsafe unto them those blessings which are good for them. Or thus, Having declared God's tender care of his people, and his promise made to them, he now prayeth for the execution of the said promises.

* Psal. 128. 6. Gal. 6. 16. 5. As for such as turn aside unto their crooked ways h, the LORD shall lead them forth i with the workers of iniquity k: but * peace shall be upon Israel l.

h But those hypocrites, who either through fear of the rod mentioned, v. 3. or for other considerations, shall turn aside from the ways of God, which for a time they professed and seemed to own, unto sinful courses, whom he opposeth to the upright, v. 4. i To wit, unto punishment, as malefactors are commonly led to the place of execution. k With the most obstinate and profligate sinners, of whose plagues they shall certainly partake as they did of their sins. l Upon the true Israel of God.

PSAL. CXXVI.

A song of degrees.

This Psalm was composed by Ezra, or some other man of God, at the return of Israel from Babylon.

† Heb. returns the returning of Zion. 1. WHen the LORD † turned again the captivity of Zion a, we were like them that dream b.

a (i. e.) Brought the captive Israelites out of Babylon into their own Land. b We were so surprized and astonished with the report of such a favour, that we could not believe our own eyes and ears, but thought it to be but a dream or delusion of our own fancies: as is usual in matters of great joy, as Gen. 45. 26. Luke 24. 11. Acts 12. 9.

* Job 8. 21. 2. Then * was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing: then said they among the heathen, The LORD † hath done great things for them c.

† Heb. hath magnified to do with them. Psal. 33. 3. & 113. 5. c They did and well might wonder at it, that an heathen Emperor should of his own meer motion shew so much kindness to so hateful and despicable a people as the Jews were.

3. The LORD hath done great things for us: whereof we are glad.

4. Turn again our captivity d, O LORD, as the streams of the south e.

d As thou hast brought us home, bring home also the rest of our brethren, who are dispersed and yet remain captives in Babylon, or in any other parts of the world. e As thou art pleased sometimes to send floods of water into dry and barren grounds, such as the Southern parts of Canaan and the parts adjacent were; which is an act of thy great power and goodness; and no less will this reduction of thy people be, and no less shall we rejoyce in it, and bless God for it.

* See Jer. 31. 9, &c. 5. * They that sow in tears, shall reap in ‖ joy f.

‖ Or, singing. f This is an argument wherewith he presseth the foregoing prayer, v. 4. taken from the common course of God's providence towards men of all Nations, to whom he affords vicissitudes of sorrow and comfort, and particularly towards husbandmen, who though oft-times they sow their seed-corn with care, and fear, and sorrow, yet afterwards for the most part meet with a joyful harvest. And therefore we hope thou wilt not deny this favour to thine own people. And as thou hast in some good measure granted it to us, so we pray thee grant it to our brethren, who are yet exercised with hard labours and griefs, that they and we together may at last obtain that blessed and full harvest which we still pray and hope for.

‖ Or, seed-basket. 6. He that goeth forth g and weepeth h, bearing ‖ precious seed i, shall doubtless come k again with rejoycing, bringing his sheaves with him.

g The husbandman that goeth out into his field, and walketh hither and thither to scatter his seed, as the manner is. h For fear of the loss of his seed, and of a bad harvest. i Seed-corn when it is scarce and dear. Or, the basket of seed, as it is rendred in our margent, as also by the Chaldee Paraphrast, and some others. k Heb. coming shall come. Which manner of expression may note either the certainty of the thing, or the frequency and customarinesse of it. This verse is only an amplification of the former.

PSAL. CXXVII.

A song of degrees ‖ for Solomon a.

a Or rather, of Solomon, as this Particle is generally used in this Book. Nor is there any thing in this Psalm which gives us just ground to question whether Solomon was the Author of it or no.

† Heb. that are builders of it. 1. EXcept the LORD build the house b, they labour in vain † that build it c: except the the LORD keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain.

b (i. e.) Assist and bless those that build the house, either an artificial house, the Temple, or the Royal Palace, or any of those numerous structures which Solomon raised; or a natural or civil house, a Family or a State or Kingdom. c They will never bring it to perfection, nor have any comfort in it.

d He directs his speech to the persons forementioned, the builders, or watchmen, of both which sorts there are many that use the following course. e To use constant and unwearied diligence from the very dawning of the day unto the dark night, that so you may accomplish your designs. f To eat the bread which you get by excessive and grievous pains. g To wit, by his blessing, which, though not expressed, is sufficiently understood out of the former verse, where it is twice expressed. As therefore he saith it is in vain for them to build or watch, if God do not give his blessing and assistance, v. 1. so here he adds that it is in vain to be diligent in their labours and callings, understand, without God's blessing; for so (i. e.) not singly by their industry, but by his blessing upon their labours. But the Hebrew word rendred so may be and is by others rendred when or whereas or since; by others, rightly, or well, when it is convenient and needful for them; by others, as it is in our margent, certainly, the sleep which they have is undoubtedly from God's blessing, without which all possible endeavours would never procure it. h The Lord, expressed in the former and in the following verses. i To wit, freely, without that immoderate toiling and drudgery wherewith others pursue it. k His people, who though hated and maligned by men, are beloved of God, over whom his providence watcheth in a special manner. In this expression he seems to allude to the name of Jedidiah, which was given to Solomon, and signifies the beloved of the Lord, 2 Sam. 12. 25. l A quiet rest both of body and mind, which many of those greedy worldlings cannot enjoy, as is observed Eccles. 5. 11.

* Deut. 28. 4 3. Lo, children m are an heritage of the LORD n: and * the fruit of the womb is his reward o.

m Which he mentions here partly because they are the chief of all these blessings; and partly because all the forementioned mentioned toil and labour is in a great meaſure and moſt commonly undertaken for their ſakes. n They come not from the power of nature and from a mans converſation with his wife, or with a multitude of wives or concubines, which Solomon had, but only from God's bleſſing, even as an inheritance is not the fruit of a mans own labour, but the gift of his Father, or rather the gift of God both enabling and inclining his father to give it to him. o Not a reward of debt merited by good men, but a reward of grace, of which we read Rom. 4. 4. which God gives them graciouſly, as Jacob acknowledgeth of his children, Gen. 33. 5. And although God give children and other outward comforts to ungodly men in the way of common providence, yet he gives them only to his people as favours and in the way of promiſe and covenant.

4. As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man p; ſo are children of the youth q.

p When they are ſhot out of a bow by a man of great ſtrength againſt his Enemy, which are of great uſe and power both to offend the Enemy, and to defend himſelf. q Children begotten in youth, as an husband or wife married in their youth are called an husband or wife of youth, Prov. 5. 18. Iſa. 54. 6. Joel 1. 8. and as a ſon begotten in old age is called a ſon of old age, Gen. 37. 3. And theſe he prefers before other children in this point, partly becauſe ſuch are commonly more ſtrong and vigorous than others; and partly becauſe they live longeſt with their parents, and to their comfort and ſupport, whereas children born in old age ſeldom come to any maturity of years before their Parents death.

5. Happy is the man that † hath his quiver full of them r: they ſhall not be aſhamed s, but they ‖ ſhall ſpeak with the enemies in the gate t.

r Who hath a numerous iſſue; which as it is a great bleſſing in it ſelf, ſo Solomon's want of it made it more valuable in his eyes. s Such parents fear not the reproach of barrenneſs, which was grievous, eſpecially among the Jews; of which ſee Luk. 1. 25. nor any other ſhame from their Enemies. t They ſhall courageouſly plead their cauſe in Courts of Judicature, which were in the gates, Deut. 21. 19. & 25. 7. not fearing to be cruſhed by the might of their adverſaries, as weak and helpleſs perſons frequently are.

PSAL. CXXVIII.

A ſong of degrees.

This Pſalm contains a deſcription of the bleſſedneſs of good men.

1. BLeſſed is every one that feareth the LORD: that walketh in his ways.

2. * For thou ſhalt eat the labour of thine hands a: happy ſhalt thou be, and it ſhall be well with thee b.

* Iſa. 3. 10.

a Thy labour ſhall not be vain and fruitleſs, and the fruit of thy labours ſhall not be taken away from thee and poſſeſſed by others, as God threatned to the diſobedient, Deut. 28. but enjoyed by thy ſelf with comfort and ſatisfaction. b Both in this world and in the world to come, as even the Chaldee Paraphraſt explains theſe words.

3. Thy wife ſhall be as a fruitful vine c by the ſides of thine houſe d: thy children like olive-plants e round about thy table f.

c Like the vine for fruitfulneſs: or, like that ſort of vines known by this name for its eminent fruitfulneſs, as ſome trees amongſt us are for the ſame reaſon called the great bearers. d Where the Vines are commonly planted for ſupport and other advantages. Which being applied to the wife, may ſignifie either, 1. the wife's duty to abide at home, Tit. 2. 5. as the harlot is decyphered by her gadding abroad, Prov. 7. 11, 12. or rather, 2. the legitimateneſs of the children, which are begotten at home by the husband, and not abroad by ſtrangers. e Numerous, growing and flouriſhing, good both for ornament and manifold uſes, as Olive-trees are. f Where they ſhall ſit at meat with thee, for thy comfort and ſafety.

4. Behold, that thus ſhall the man be bleſſed, that feareth the LORD.

5. The LORD ſhall bleſs thee out of Zion g: and thou ſhalt ſee the good of Jeruſalem h, all the days of thy life.

g From the Ark in Zion, and with thoſe ſpiritual and everlaſting bleſſings which are to be had no where but in Zion and from the God who dwelleth in Zion, and with all other mercies which thou ſhalt aſk of God in Zion. h The proſperity of that City to which thou belongeſt, and which is the only ſeat of God's ſpecial Preſence and of his Worſhip, whoſe felicity therefore is very delightful to every good man, and upon whoſe peace the peace and ſafety of every member of it depends, as every ſeaman is concerned in the ſafety of the ſhip, in which he is.

6. Yea, thou ſhalt ſee thy childrens children, and * peace upon Iſrael i.

* Pſal. 125. 5.

i Not only upon Jeruſalem and the parts adjacent, but upon all the Tribes and people of Iſrael.

PSAL. CXXIX.

A ſong of degrees.

This Pſalm contains a joyful and thankful remembrance of the Churches former and manifold calamities from barbarous Enemies, and of God's wonderful mercy in delivering them out of their hands.

1. ‖ MAny a time have they a. afflicted me from my youth b, may * Iſrael now ſay.

a Mine enemies or oppreſſors; which is eaſily underſtood both from the nature of the thing, and from v. 3. where they are expreſſed under the name of ploughers. b From the time that I was a people, when I was in Egypt and came out of it, which is called the time of Iſrael's youth, Jer. 2. 2. Ezek. 23. 3.

2. Many a time have they afflicted me from my youth: yet they have not prevailed againſt me.

3. The ploughers plowed upon my back c: they made long their furrows d.

c They have not only thrown me down and trod me under foot, but have cruelly tormented me, wounded and mangled me, and had no more pity upon me than the plough-man hath upon the earth which he cuts up at his pleaſure. He ſaith, upon my back, either becauſe they did literally ſcourge the Captives upon their backs with ſuch cords as are mentioned, v. 4. although we do not read that the Iſraelitiſh Captives were thus uſed by any of their Enemies; or by way of alluſion to that uſage, which made a ſort of furrows in their backs upon which they uſed to lay on their ſtrokes. d They oft repeated their injuries and prolonged my torments.

4. The LORD is righteous e: he hath cut aſunder the * cords f of the wicked.

* Pſal. 140. 5.

e Faithful or merciful, as that word is frequently uſed. f Wherewith the plough was drawn; by which means they were ſtopped in their courſe. So he perſiſts in the ſame Metaphor of a plough. By theſe cords he underſtands all their plots and endeavours.

5. Let them all be confounded and turned back g that hate Zion.

g Forced to retreat with ſhame and diſappointment.

6. Let them be as the graſs upon the houſe-tops h, which withereth afore it groweth up i.

h Which there were flat, and therefore more capable of graſs or green corn growing between the ſtones, than ours are. i Which having no deep root, never comes to maturity. And ſo all their deſigns ſhall be abortive and never come to perfection.

7. Wherewith the mower filleth not his hand; nor he that bindeth ſheaves, his boſom.

8. Neither do they which go by, ſay, The bleſſing of the LORD be upon you k: we bleſs you in the name of the LORD.

k Which was an uſual ſalutation given by paſſengers to reapers, as Ruth 2. 4. So the meaning is, It never continues till the harveſt comes.

A ſong of degrees.

4. But there is forgiveneſs with thee d: that thou mayeſt be feared e.

d Thou art able and ready to forgive repenting ſinners. e Not with a ſlaviſh, but with a child-like fear and reverence. This grace and mercy of thine is the foundation of all Religion and Worſhip of thee in the world, without which men would deſperately proceed in their impious courſes without any thought of repentance.

6. My ſoul waiteth for the LORD, more than they that watch for the morning h: ‖ I ſay more than they that watch for the morning.

h Whether Souldiers that keep the night-watches in an Army or City, or the Prieſts or Levites who did ſo in the Temple; who being wearied with hard ſervice and want of convenient reſt, diligently look for and fervently deſire the morning when they may be diſcharged. Compare Pſal. 119. 148.

7. Let Iſrael i hope in the LORD: for with the LORD there is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption k.

8. And he ſhall redeem l Iſrael m from all his iniquities n.

l The Lord, either God the Father by his Son, or God the Son by his own blood. m All true Iſraelites, whether of the carnal or ſpiritual ſeed. n From the guilt and puniſhment of all their ſins.

A ſong of degrees of David.

This Pſalm ſeems to have been compoſed by David during Saul's perſecution. When he was charged with boundleſs ambition, and a greedy affectation of the Royal Throne, and that he ſought it by wicked practices againſt Saul's life and dignity. And for his own juſt vindication he is forced to publiſh his own integrity; and to declare that as the right of the Kingdom was not ſought or coveted by him, but freely conferred upon him by the unexpected and undeſired favour of God, ſo that he had no thought or deſign to invade the Throne before his time, but was willing to ſtay God's leiſure for it, and in the mean time was reſolved to behave himſelf towards Saul as became a faithful Subject, ſeeking nothing but to preſerve his own life from the rage of unrighteous and bloody men.

3. Let Iſrael hope in the LORD f, † from henceforth and for ever.

f Let all Iſraelites learn by my example to commit themſelves to God in well-doing, and to fix all their hope and truſt upon him alone.

PSAL. CXXXII.

A ſong of degrees.

The Penman of this Pſalm was either, 1. David, when God had graciouſly declared his acceptance of David's deſire to build an houſe for God, and his purpoſe of eſtabliſhing the Kingdom to David and his ſeed for ever: or, 2. Solomon, as may be gathered from the whole matter of the Pſalm, which ſeems better to agree to him than to David, and particularly from v. 8, 9, 10. compared with 2 Chron. 6. 41, 42. where we have the ſame words with no great alteration.

1. LORD, remember David a, and all his afflictions b.

a Either, 1. thy Covenant made with David: or rather, 2. David's eminent piety and zeal for thy ſervice, amplified by the following clauſe. b All his ſufferings for thy ſake, all the ſolicitude of his mind, all his hard and weariſom labours for thy ſervice and glory, and for proviſions towards the building of thy Temple, and for the eſtabliſhment of thy people in peace and tranquillity, that ſo way might be made for that great work.

2. How he ſware unto the LORD, and vowed c unto the mighty God of Jacob d.

c He made a ſolemn vow, and confirmed it with an oath. Which he undoubtedly did, although no mention be made of it 2 Sam. 7. Thus many hiſtorical paſſages which were omitted, in their proper places, are afterwards recorded upon other occaſions; of which examples have been formerly noted. d Of Iſrael. Jacob and Iſrael are frequently put for their poſterity, as hath been frequently obſerved.

3. Surely I will not come into the tabernacle of my houſe, nor go up to my bed e.

e This and the following clauſes are not to be underſtood ſtrictly and properly, as if he would never come into his houſe or bed till this was done, which is confuted by the hiſtory, 2 Sam. 11. 2. but figuratively, as an hyperbolical expreſſion, ſuch as are uſual both in Scripture and in all other Authors, to ſignifie his paſſionate deſire of doing this work, which was ſo earneſt, that neither his houſe nor bed nor ſleep could give him any content till this work was done or in ſome forwardneſs.

4. I will not give ſleep to mine eyes, or ſlumber to mine eye-lids:

5. Until I find out a place for the LORD f, † an habitation for the mighty God of Jacob.

f Either, 1. until I can underſtand from God what place he hath choſen for his houſe to be built in. Or rather, 2. until I have fitted or raiſed an houſe in which the Ark may be put, an habitation, as this is explained both in the next clauſe, and in v. 7. and Acts 7. 46. For this and not the former was the matter both of David's deſire, and of God's anſwer delivered by Nathan, 2 Sam. 7.

6. Lo, we have heard of it g at Ephratah h: we found it i in the fields of the wood k.

g Of the place or habitation for the Lord laſt mentioned. h Either, 1. in Bethlehem, which is called Ephratah, Gen. 35. 19. & 48. 7. Mich. 5. 2. So the ſence is either this, We heard a rumour at Bethlehem among David's relations, that the Ark ſhould be removed to a new place, and that David had pitched upon it; or this, We heard that Bethlehem would be the place for it, becauſe it was the City of David. Or rather, 2. in the Tribe of Ephraim, which was called alſo Ephratah or Ephrathah, as is manifeſt, becauſe the men of Ephraim were called Ephrathites, as Judg. 12. 5. in the Hebrew Text, though in the Engliſh it be Ephraimite. So Jeroboam is called an Ephrathite, 1 Kings 11. 26. So the ſence is, We heard it from our fathers, that the ancient place of it was Shiloh, which was in the land of Ephraim. Whereby he covertly intimates that God rejected and forſook that place, and choſe not the tribe of Ephraim, as it is ſaid Pſal. 78. 67. that ſo he might make way for Zion, which was the place choſen by God for it, as it follows here v. 13. i Afterwards we found it elſewhere. k i. e. In a field or in one of the fields of the wood, for that little ſpot of ground in which the Tabernacle or Temple was built, was not likely to be in ſeveral fields. Thus Jephthah was buried in the cities of Gilead, Judg. 12. 7. i.e. in one of them. This is meant either, 1. of the Mount Moriah, which might poſſibly be called the field of the wood, as being anciently a place full of wood, Gen. 22. 13. or of the threſhing-floor of Araunah, of which ſee 2 Sam. 24. 28. which before the building building of the Temple is said to have been a woody place. Or rather, 2. of Kiriath-jearim, which signifies a city of woods, in the field or territory whereof the Ark was seated for twenty years, as we read, 1 *Sam.*7.1,2. And from this place it was removed to Zion, 2 Sam. 6. 1, &c.

† Psal.99.5. 7. We will go l into his tabernacles m: * we will worship at his footstool n.

l Seeing the Ark is now fixed in a certain place, we will go to it more generally and constantly than formerly we did. m Into his Tabernacle or Temple, the Plural number put for the Singular, as *Psal.*43.3. & 46.4, &c. n Either the Temple: or rather the Ark, so called, 1 *Chron.*28.2. *Lament.*2.1. because God is oft said to sit between the Cherubims, which were above the Ark.

* Num.10. 35. 2 Chr.6.41,42. 8. * Arise o, O LORD, into thy rest p: thou, and the ark of thy strength q.

o (i.e.) Arise and come. One word put for two, as Gen. 43. 33. marvelled (i.e. marvelled looking) one at another; and *v.*34. he took messes, i. e. he took and sent messes, as our Translation renders it. And this word is very proper in this place, because it was to be used by God's appointment, when the Ark was to be removed from one place to another, *Numb.*10.35. as now it was from the Tabernacle in Zion to the Temple in Moriah, upon which occasion this and the two following verses were used by Solomon, 2 *Chron.*6.41,42. p Into thy resting place, the Temple so called, *Isa.*66.1. where thou hast now a fixed habitation. q The seat of thy powerful and glorious presence, from whence thou dost put forth and manifest thy strength on the behalf of thy people when they desire and need it.

* Ver.16. 9. Let thy priests be cloathed with * righteousness r: and let thy saints shout for joy s.

r Not only with those outward Sacerdotal garments of glory and beauty which thou hast appointed for them, but especially with those inward ornaments of righteousness and true holiness, that so their persons and services may be accepted by thee both for themselves and for all thy people, and they may be cloathed with salvation, as it is expressed here below, v. 16. and 2 Chron. 6.41. which is the effect or consequent of the former cloathing. s Let all thy people have cause of rejoycing in the tokens of thy goodness: which they eminently had at the dedication of the Temple, as is noted, 1 Kings 8. 66.

10. For thy servant Davids sake t, turn not away the face u of thine anointed x.

t In regard of thy singular kindness and promises vouchsafed to David, as this is explained in the following verses. And this verse makes it more than probable, that David was not the Penman of this Psalm, who never used to beg mercies from God for his own sake, but constantly for his names sake, and for the sake of his truth, mercy, goodness or righteousness, as will be evident to any one that reads this Book. u Cast me not out of thy presence, do not reject or deny my request, as this phrase is expounded, 1 Kings 2. 16. x Of me whom thou hast anointed to be King over thy people. He speaks of himself in the third person, as is usual.

† Psal.89. 3,4. 33, &c. * 2 Sam. 7. 12. 1 Kings 8.25. 2 Chr.6.16. Luke 1.69. Acts 2. 30. † Heb. thy belly. 11. * The LORD hath sworn in truth y unto David, he will not turn from it, * Of the fruit of † thy body z will I set upon thy throne.

y Not falsly or deceitfully, as men sometimes do, but sincerely and faithfully, what he will inviolably observe and fulfil, as the next clause expounds this. z Some of thy posterity.

12. If thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony that I shall teach them; their children also shall sit upon my throne for evermore.

13. For the LORD hath chosen Zion a: he hath desired it for his habitation.

a Not strictly, but largely taken, either for the whole mountain, whereof Zion and Moriah were two parts or tops, or for Jerusalem, which was in a great part built upon Mount Zion, whence it is oft called Zion, as hath been noted again and again. For he speaks here of that place which he chose to be his rest for ever, as it follows, v. 14. which unquestionably was the Temple: whence also it appears that this Psalm was not written by David, nor before the building of the Temple.

* Psal.68.16. 14. * This is my rest for ever: here will I dwell b, for I have desired it.

b I will no more wander to several places as I have done, but here I have fixed my abode.

* Psal.147.14. ‖ Or, surely. * 2 Chr.6. 41. 15. * I will ‖ abundantly bless her provision c: I will satisfie her poor with bread.

c I will plentifully provide for Jerusalem, and all that live in her or resort to her for Worship: nor shall they seek my face in vain.

16. * I will also cloath her priests with salvation d: and her saints shall shout aloud for joy.

d With my saving graces and blessings, with righteousness, as thou didst desire, v. 9. and moreover with that protection and benediction which by my promise belongs to righteous persons.

* Ezek.29.21. Luke 1.69. ‖ Or, candle. See 1 King.11. 36. 17. * There e will I make the horn of David to bud f: I have ordained a ‖ lamp g for mine anointed.

e In Jerusalem, the seat of the Kingdom, and, which is no small advantage to that family, the only place of my presence and worship in the world. f His power and glory to flourish and increase, and to be propagated to his posterity. g A successor or succession to continue for ever in his family, as this phrase is expounded, 1 Kings 11.36. & 15.4. and particularly one eminent and glorious light, to wit, the Messias, who shall come out of his loyns, and revive and vastly enlarge his Kingdom.

18. His enemies will I cloath with shame h: but upon himself i shall his crown flourish.

h For the shameful and unexpected disappointment of all their vain hopes and wicked designs. i Upon him and his posterity, which are nothing else but a mans self multiplied.

PSAL. CXXXIII.

A song of degrees of David.

This Psalm was composed by David, upon the happy occasion of the ending of the Civil Wars between the two Houses of Saul and David. In which having felt the sad effects of discord and division, both the King and People were more sensible of the great blessing of reconciliation and unity.

1. BEhold, how good and how pleasant it is a, for brethren b to dwell † together in unity.

a You have been harassed by a Civil War, take notice of this blessed change with thankfulness to God for it. b For us who are brethren not only by nature and blood, but also by combination in one and the same Commonwealth, and by the profession of the same Religion.

* Exod. 30. 25,30. ‖ Or, collar. 2. It is like the * precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aarons beard c, that went down to the ‖ skirts d of his garments.

c It is no less grateful and refreshing than that oyl which was plentifully poured forth upon Aaron's head, at the time of his Consecration to the Priestly Office, which was exceeding pleasant, not only for the extraordinary fragrancy of it, but because by this, together with the other Rites prescribed, he was initiated into that sacred Office, which was so acceptable to God, and so comfortable and beneficial to the people, as being the happy instrument of making atonement to God for them, and of procuring and maintaining their peace with God, upon which all their happiness of this life and of the next depends. d Or, skirt, for the Hebrew word is of the Singular number. Not to the lower skirt or bottom of his Sacerdotal garment, for that the sacred Oyl was poured forth in so great plenty is not probable, nor was it necessary or convenient; but to the upper skirt of it, or the mouth of it, as this Hebrew word properly signifies, or to the collar of his upper Priestly garment, which the oyntment falling upon his beard, might easily reach.

* Deut. 4.48. ‖ Or, descendeth. * Lev.25.21. Deut. 28. 8. 3. As the dew of * Hermon e, and as the dew that ‖ descended upon the mountains of Zion f; for g * there h the LORD commandeth blessing i, even life k for evermore.

e It is no less grateful than the dew is which falls upon that great and goodly hill of Hermon, whereby it is both refreshed and made fruitful. f And as the dew which falleth upon the mountains of Sion, (i.e.) either upon the several parts and ridges or tops of that mountain, whereof one was peculiarly called Sion, and another Moriah; or upon the mountains which are round about Jerusalem, Psal. 125. 2. which is oft called Zion, as Psal. 132. 13. And these may be opposed to Hermon, which was remote and beyond Jordan. But peradventure (which yet I propose with all submission) this dew is not to be taken literally, for the falling of the dew availed very little to the refreshment or improvement of the hills of Sion and Moriah, especially as now they were filled with buildings, but Allegorically, for the favour or blessing of God, which is frequently called and compared to the dew, as *Prov.*19.12. *Isa.*18.4. Hos. 14. 5. *Mich.*5. 7. And thus it may seem to be explained in the following clause: and so the sence of the place is this, It is as desirable as the natural dew which falls upon mount Hermon, nay which is more, as that blessed and heavenly dew of God's ordinances and graces, which he hath commanded to fall upon the mountains of Sion, i. e. either upon mount Sion, the Plural number being put for the Singular, as it is Psal. 132. 7. and oft elsewhere, as I have observed in several places; or upon the mountains of Zion and Moriah, and others which are round about Jeruſalem, as was now ſaid. And if it ſeem ſtrange, that the dew ſhould be taken literally in the firſt clauſe, and myſtically in the next, we have a like inſtance, Mat. 8. 22. Let the dead (ſpiritually) bury the dead (naturally.) g He now gives the reaſon either why this unity is ſo good a thing; or why the dew deſcending upon Zion, to which that is compared, is ſo deſirable. And ſo upon this occaſion he ſlides into the commendation of Zion's felicity, as the ſacred Writers frequently do upon other like occaſions. h Either, 1. where brethren live in peace and unity: or rather, 2. in Zion laſt mentioned. i Ordained, promiſed, conferred and eſtabliſhed his bleſſing, to wit, all manner of bleſſedneſs for his people that ſincerely worſhip him in that place. k To wit, an happy and pleaſant life; for to live in miſery is accounted and oft called death both in Scripture and in other Authors.

PSAL. CXXXIV.

A ſong of degrees.

The form of this Pſalm ſeems to be dramatical. In the two firſt Verſes the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks in the name of ſome eminent perſon, either the King, or Chief Prieſt, exhorting and requiring all the Prieſts and Levites to perform the duties of their place and calling; and in the laſt verſe in the name of the Prieſts and Levites returning him thanks for his good advice.

1. BEhold, bleſs ye the LORD a all ye ſervants of the LORD b, * which by night c ſtand d in the houſe e of the LORD.

* 1 Chr. 9. 33.

a Do not ſtand there like ſtatues, dumb and idle, but employ your hearts and tongues in ſinging forth the praiſes of the Lord. b Peculiarly ſo called, Prieſts and Levites, who are ſet apart to the ſervice of God and of the Sanctuary, as the next clauſe reſtrains this general expreſſion. c Not only by day, but alſo and eſpecially by night, when their watch was more neceſſary. See Exod. 27. 21. Levit. 8. 35. 1 Sam. 3. 3. As you watch by night when others ſleep, ſo do you utter the praiſes of God when others are ſilent. d (i.e.) Serve or miniſter, as this word is uſed, Deut. 10. 8. & 18. 7. and oft elſewhere. e Which word includes both the Temple and Courts belonging to it, as hath been noted before.

2. Lift up your hands f || in the ſanctuary g: and bleſs the LORD.

f Unto God in prayer and praiſes, thus expreſſing and exciting your inward devotion. g In that holy houſe of God where you ſtand, v. 1. Or, in or with holineſs: Lift up your hands, as it is preſcribed, 1 Tim. 2. 8. Do not content your ſelves with lifting up your hands, but ſee that this be done with pure and holy hearts.

3. The LORD that made heaven and earth bleſs thee h out of Zion i.

h Either, 1. thee whoſoever thou art who doſt faithfully perform the duty here commanded. Or, 2. thee, O King, or Prieſt, who doſt engage and encourage us in this bleſſed work. i Where God dwells, and from whence he heareth the prayers of his people, and giveth them the bleſſings which they deſire and need.

PSAL. CXXXV.

This Pſalm contains an exhortation to all the Iſraelites, and eſpecially to the Prieſts and Levites, to praiſe God for his great and wonderful works; ſome particulars whereof are here recorded.

1. PRaiſe ye the LORD, praiſe ye the name of the LORD, praiſe him, O ye ſervants of the LORD a.

a Ye Prieſts and Levites, as Pſal. 134. 1.

2. Ye that ſtand in the houſe of the LORD, in the courts b of the houſe of our God.

b Either in the Temple or the inner Court, which were appropriated to the Prieſts and Levites; or in the outward Court, which was for the people. See 2 Chron. 4. 9.

3. Praiſe ye the LORD, for the LORD is good c: ſing praiſes unto his name, for it is pleaſant d.

c Bountiful and gracious, eſpecially to you, and therefore he juſtly expects and deſerves your praiſes. d The work it ſelf of ſinging praiſes to God is pleaſant, as it is more fully expreſſed, Pſal. 147. 1.

4. For * the LORD hath choſen Jacob unto himſelf, and Iſrael for his peculiar treaſure.

* Exod. 19. 5. Deut. 7. 6.

5. For I know that * the LORD is great, and that our LORD is above all gods e.

* Pſal. 95. 3.

e Above all that are called Gods, or worſhipped as God's by the heathen people. And therefore ſeeing they commonly praiſe and extol their Idols, it becometh you not to be ſilent as ſo the praiſes of your God.

6. * Whatſoever the LORD pleaſed f, that did he in heaven and in earth g, in the ſeas, and all † deep places h.

* Pſal. 115. 3.

f Either in the creation or government of them. g His power and juriſdiction is univerſal, and not like that of the heathen Gods, which is confined to their ſeveral Countries. h In the viſible Seas, and in thoſe inviſible depths both of earth and of the waters which are contained in the bowels of the earth.

7. * He cauſeth the † vapours i to aſcend from the ends of the earth k, * he maketh lightnings for the rain l: he bringeth the wind out of his treaſuries m.

* Jer. 10. 13. & 51. 16. † Gr. clouds. So Prov. 25. 14. * Job 38. 24, &c. Zech. 10. 1.

i Which are the matter of clouds and rain. k Either, 1. from the Sea, the common ſource of vapours, 1 Kings 18. 44. Amos 5. 8. wherewith both the earth in general, and ſeveral particular countries, are terminated or bounded: or rather, 2. from all parts of the earth from one end to another, as the borders of a land are commonly put for the whole land from one border to another, as Pſal. 105. 31, 33. and 147. 14. and oft elſewhere. For in this ſence this phraſe is generally uſed in Scripture, as Job 28. 24. & 38. 13. Pſal. 19. 4, 6. & 48. 10. and every where. l He bringeth water even out of the fire: he maketh thick clouds, which being broken produce lightnings, and ſo are diſſolved into ſhowers of or rain. So the lightnings are both a ſign and in ſome ſort the cauſe of rain. Or, he maketh lightnings with (as this Particle is uſed, Gen. 46. 26. Pſal. 89. 4. & 119. 56, 98.) rain, (i.e.) he cauſeth both of them to come out of the ſame cloud. m Out of thoſe ſecret places where he reſerves them, and whence he bringeth them, as he ſees fit. Thus we read of treaſures of ſnow and hail, Job 38. 32. not that they are formally laid up in any certain places, but to ſignifie that God hath them as much at his diſpoſal as any man hath that which he hath laid up in his ſtores.

8. * Who ſmote the firſt-born n of Egypt, † both of man and beaſt.

* Exod. 12. 12, 29. † Heb. from man unto beaſt.

n From the general works of Nature he comes to God's ſpecial works of Providence towards his people.

9. Who ſent tokens and wonders into the midſt of thee, O Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and upon all his ſervants.

10. * Who ſmote great nations, and ſlew mighty kings o.

* Numb. 21. 24, 25, 26, 34, 35.

11. Sihon king of the Amorites, and Og king of Baſhan, and * all the kingdoms of Canaan.

* Joſh. 12. 7.

12. * And gave their land for an heritage, an heritage unto Iſrael his people.

* Joſh. 12. 7. Pſal. 78. 55. * Pſal. 102. 12.

13. Thy * name, O LORD, endureth for ever, and thy memorial, O LORD, † throughout all generations o.

† Heb. to generation and generation.

o Theſe wonderful works of thine ſhall never be forgotten. The Land which thou gaveſt us, v. 12. and which we yet enjoy, is an everlaſting Monument of thy power and goodneſs, and an obligation and encouragement to truſt in thee in all our preſent or future difficulties.

14. For the LORD will judge his people p, and he will repent himſelf concerning his ſervants q.

p Will in due time plead the cauſe of his people, or give judgment for them, as this phraſe is uſed Deut. 32. 36. Jer. 5. 28. & 22. 16. q He will recal that ſevere ſentence which for their ſins he had paſſed upon them, and be reconciled to them.

15. * The idols of the heathen are ſilver and gold r, the work of mens hands.

* Pſal. 115. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11.

r Of this and the following verſes ſee the Notes on Pſal. 115. 4, 5, &c.

16. They have mouths, but they ſpeak not: eyes have they, but they ſee not.

17. They have ears, but they hear not: neither is there any breath in their mouths.

18. They that make them † are like unto them: ſo is every one that truſteth in them.

† Heb. let them be. So Gr.

19. Bleſs the LORD, O houſe of Iſrael: bleſs the LORD, O houſe of Aaron.

20. Bleſs

20. Bleſs the LORD, O houſe of Levi: ye that fear the LORD, bleſs the LORD.

21. Bleſſed be the LORD out of Zion s, which dwelleth at Jeruſalem t. Praiſe ye the LORD.

s By the aſſemblies of his people in Zion or Jeruſalem.
t This clauſe may be added either to diſtinguiſh the true God from the gods which were worſhipped in other places and countries; or as a reaſon why they ſhould bleſs God, becauſe he had bleſſed and honoured that place with his gracious and glorious preſence.

PSAL. CXXXVI.

The matter of this Pſalm is the ſame with the former, only it is a little more fitted to the uſe and ſervice of the Temple, by the continued repetition of that ſolemn clauſe, for thy mercy endures for ever, which was much uſed by the ſacred Singers. See 2 Chron. 7. 3. & 20. 21.

1. O * Give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: * for his mercy endureth for ever.

26. O give thanks unto the God of heaven: for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSAL. CXXXVII.

The Penman of this Pſalm is uncertain, the occaſion of it was unqueſtionably the conſideration of the Babyloniſh Captivity: and it ſeems to have been compoſed either during the time of that Captivity, or preſently after their deliverance out of it.

1. BY the rivers of Babylon a, there we ſat down b, yea, we wept when we remembred Zion c.

a Either, 1. of the City of Babylon, and then the river is Euphrates here called rivers for its greatneſs, and by a common Enallage of the Plural for the Singular, as Tigris alſo is, Nah. 2. 6. yea and Jordan, Pſal. 74. 15. Or, 2. of the Territory of Babylon, in which there were many rivers, as Euphrates, which alſo was divided into ſeveral ſtreams or rivulets, and Tigris and others. Here they were either by the appointment of their Lords for the making or repairing of the works beſide the river; or by choice, retiring themſelves thither from the noiſe and obſervation of their enemies, as they had opportunity, that they might diſburden their oppreſſed minds before the Lord. b The uſual poſture of mourners, Ezra 9. 4, &c. Job 2. 12. Iſa. 47. 1, 5. c Either, 1. our former enjoyments in Zion, which greatly aggravated their preſent miſery, Lam. 1. 7. Or, 2. Zion's preſent deſolations and pollutions.

2. We hanged our harps d upon the willows e, in the midſt thereof.

d Theſe are not without great probability ſuppoſed to be the words of ſome holy Levites, who had been accuſtomed to muſick, both vocal and inſtrumental, in the ſervice of the Temple. Harps are here put by a Synecdoche for all inſtruments of muſick. It is further to be obſerved, That although the harp was uſed by the Grecians in mourning, yet it was uſed by the Hebrews in rejoycing, as is manifeſt from Gen. 31. 27. 2 Chron. 20. 27, 28. Pſal. 43. 4, &c. This paſſage is to be underſtood either, 1. figuratively, ſignifying only that they abandoned all ſigns and means of comfort: or rather, 2. properly, as the following ſongs are, which the Babylonians required them to ſing to their harps. And theſe harps they might either, 1. bring from Jeruſalem, which they might deſire to do to preſerve thoſe ſacred utenſils, and their enemies might either permit or command them to do for their own delight: or, 2. procure in Babylon, that they might ſometimes ſolace themſelves with the practice of ſome of the Temple-muſick, which they deſired and intended to do; but when they came to the tryal, they were not able to do it, and therefore laid them by. e Which commonly grow upon the banks of rivers, as they did by Euphrates in ſuch plenty, that from thence it is called the brook of willows, Iſa. 15. 7.

3. For there they that carried us away captive, required of us † a ſong; and they that † * waſted us, required of us mirth, ſaying, Sing us one of the ſongs of Zion f.
† Heb. the word of a ſong. † Heb. laid us on heaps. * Pſal. 79. 1.

f Such ſongs as you uſed to ſing in the Temple at Sion Which they required either out of curioſity, or to delight their ears, or rather by way of ſcoffing and inſultation over them and their Temple and Religion.

4. How ſhall we ſing the LORD's ſong g in a † ſtrange land h?

g Thoſe ſongs which were appointed by God, and to be ſung only to his honour and in his ſervice. h When we are baniſhed from our own Temple and Land, and amongſt thoſe who are ſtrangers and enemies to God and to his Worſhip? So we ſhould proſtitute and profane God's Ordinances. And this anſwer they either expreſſed to their enemies, or kept in their own breaſts when they refuſed to comply with their deſire.

5. If I forget thee i, O Jeruſalem, let my right hand k forget her cunning l.

i If I do not retain a deep and ſorrowful ſence of thy ruine and miſery, or if I indulge my ſelf in mirth and jollity, as if I had forgotten thee. k The chief inſtrument of playing upon muſical inſtruments and of other actions. l i.e. Loſe its skill of playing. In the Hebrew it is only, forget, without expreſſing what, to intimate the extent and generality of this wiſh, Let it forget or be diſenabled not only for playing, but for every action in which it was formerly uſed.

6. If I do not remember thee m, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth n; if I prefer not Jeruſalem above † my chief joy o.

m With affection and ſympathy, ſo as to damp my joys. n Be made uncapable of ſinging or ſpeaking or moving, as it is in ſome diſeaſes. Compare Job 29. 10. Pſal. 22. 16. o If I do not value and deſire Jeruſalem's proſperity more than all other delights, and conſequently if Jeruſalem's miſery doth not ſo deeply affect me as to hinder my delight in all other things.

* Jer. 49. 7. Ezek. 25. 12. Obad. 10, &c. † Heb. mark bare.

7. Remember, O LORD, p * the children of Edom q, in the day r of Jeruſalem; who ſaid s, † Raſe it, raſe it, even to the foundation thereof.

p So as to puniſh them. q Our conſtant and inveterate enemies, who had no regard either to conſanguinity or humanity. r In the time of its calamity or deſtruction, which is oft called a day, as Job 18. 20. Pſal. 37. 13. Ezek. 30. 9. Hoſ. 11. 11. Obad. v. 12. s To the Babylonians, whom they aſſiſted and provoked againſt Jeruſalem: of which ſee Lam. 4. 11. Ezek. 25. 12. Obad. v. 11, 12, 13, 14.

† Heb. waſted. ‖ Heb. that recompenſeth unto thee thy deed which thou didſt to us. * Jer. 50. 15, 29. Rev. 18. 6.

8. O daughter of Babylon t, who art to be † deſtroyed u: happy ſhall he be x ‖ that * rewardeth thee, as thou haſt ſerved us y.

t By which he underſtands the City and Empire of Babylon and the people thereof. u Who art by God's righteous and irrevocable Sentence devoted to certain deſtruction. x As being God's inſtrument to vindicate his honour, and execute his juſt judgments, and fulfil his counſel and word: which Cyrus was to his own great glory and advantage, as appears both from ſacred and profane Hiſtory. y That ſhall uſe thee with equal cruelty.

* Iſa. 13. 16. † Heb. the rock.

9. Happy ſhall he be that taketh and * daſheth thy little ones againſt † the ſtones z.

z As thou didſt uſe our little ones. So this was but a juſt retaliation foretold here, as alſo Iſa. 13. 16.

PSAL. CXXXVIII.

A Pſalm of David.

This is a Pſalm of thankſgiving to God for thoſe great deliverances which he had granted to David from Saul and other enemies. By the remembrance whereof David encourageth himſelf to truſt in God in all his future difficulties.

* Pſal. 119. 46. Gr. before Angels.

1. I Will praiſe thee with my whole heart, * before the gods a will I ſing unto thee.

2. I will worſhip towards thy holy temple b, and praiſe thy Name, for thy loving kindneſs and for thy truth: for thou haſt magnified thy word above all thy Name c.

b Where the Ark was. He ſaith towards it, becauſe he was not permitted to enter into it. c For thou haſt glorified thy word or promiſe or thy faithfulneſs in fulfilling thy promiſes to me more than any other of thy glorious perfections by which thou art known. Not that one of God's Attributes is really and in it ſelf more great or glorious than another, or can be made ſo, but becauſe one may be more celebrated and admired by men than another, as here God's gracious promiſe made to David, and the wonderful accompliſhment thereof in ſpight of all thoſe difficulties which ſtood in the way, and which ſeemed to men to be inſuperable, was at this time more obſerved and admired than any other of his Attributes or actions. But here we muſt remember, that amongſt the reſt of the promiſes made to David, one was that the Meſſias ſhould come out of his loins, and that thoſe parts of the promiſed mercies which David had actually received, were pledges to aſſure him that he ſhould receive the reſt in due time, and eſpecially that great and eminent word of promiſe concerning the Meſſias, which might well be ſaid to be magnified above all God's name.

3. In the day when I cried, thou anſweredſt me; and ſtrengthnedſt me with ſtrength in my ſoul d.

d This laſt clauſe limits and explains the former, how God anſwered him ſo ſpeedily, not by giving him the thing which he deſired in that very inſtant, but by giving him inward ſupport and patience to wait God's time, and to bear all his troubles chearfully in the mean time, which was a ſingular mercy, and indeed greater than the actual donation of any temporal bleſſing.

4. All the kings of the earth e ſhall praiſe thee, O LORD, when they hear the words of thy mouth f.

e Either, 1. all neighbouring Kings: or, 2. the generality of Kings and Princes upon earth. And ſo this is a Prophecy of the calling of the Gentiles. Which ſeems to be confirmed by the next verſe, which expreſſeth their extraordinary joy and an eminent advancement of God's glory, which agrees much better to this great occaſion, than to that of David's exaltation to the Throne, wherein the other Kings of the earth were not much concerned. f Either, 1. thy promiſes declared unto them by me: or, 2. the Goſpel preached among them.

5. Yea, they ſhall ſing in the ways of the LORD g, for great is h the glory of the LORD.

g Or, of, or, for, or becauſe of the ways of the Lord, i.e. his wonderful counſel and gracious providences towards themſelves and others. h Or, great ſhall be. At that time the worſhip and glory of God ſhall not be confined to one ſmall land as now it is, but ſhall be extended to all the parts of the world.

* Pſal. 113. 5, 6. Iſa. 57. 15. † Heb. he ſeeth. * Jam. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 5. ‖ Or, and.

6. * Though the LORD be high, yet † hath he * reſpect unto the lowly i, ‖ but the proud he knoweth afar off k.

i Unto ſuch as are mean and obſcure in the world, to me a poor contemptible ſhepherd, whom he hath preferred before great Princes, and to ſuch as are little in their own eyes. k But as for the great men of the world, who are lifted up in pride, he looks upon them as they do upon others, with ſcorn and contempt, and at a great diſtance, as diſdaining to admit them into his preſence. But the words may be, and by divers Interpreters are rendred otherwiſe, And he who is high or the loſty one from afar (i.e. from his high and holy place, even the higheſt Heavens where he dwells, nothwithſtanding that diſtance) doth know them, or will own them. So this is the repetition of the former ſentence, as is very uſual in this Book. And this ſeems beſt to ſuit as with the foregoing, ſo alſo with the following words, and thus all will be underſtood of one and the ſame ſort of perſons.

7. Though I walk in the midſt of trouble l, thou wilt revive me m: thou ſhalt ſtretch forth thine hand n againſt the wrath of mine enemies o, and thy right hand ſhall ſave me.

l i.e. Be encompaſſed with dangers. m Thou wilt chear my ſpirit and preſerve my life. n Put forth thy Almighty power. o To oppoſe and reſtrain their rage, and to ſave me from them, as it follows.

* Pſal. 57. 2. Phil. 1. 6. ‖ Or, for me.

8. * The LORD will perfect that which ‖ concerneth me p: thy mercy, O LORD, endureth for ever q: forſake not r the works of thine own hands s.

p Will finiſh that great work of my deliverance and advancement, which he hath undertaken and carried on hitherto. q It is not inconſtant and changeable, as mens affections are, but everlaſting. And this may be either a proof of the foregoing aſſertion, the Lord will perfect, &c. or an argument to enforce the following petition, therefore forſake not, &c. r Or, leave not, or, do not deſiſt from or give over. s The work of my ſalvation which is thus far advanced, not by any humane help, but by thine own extraordinary power and providence, and therefore it is not for thine honour to deſert it at laſt. This he calls works in regard of the many and various parts and actions which concurred to this work.

PSAL. CXXXIX.

To the chief Muſician, A Pſalm of David.

This Pſalm is eſteemed by the Hebrews the moſt excellent in the whole Book. The matter of it is noble and ſublime, and ſo is the ſtile. The occaſion of it ſeems to have been thoſe heavy heavy cenſures and reproaches wherewith David was loaded by his enemies, who branded him for a notorious hypocrite and impoſtor that pretended Religion only for the covering and promoting his own ambitious and wicked deſigns againſt his lawful King, whoſe life and Crown he ſought to take away. Againſt theſe he comforteth himſelf with the conſideration of God's Omniſcience, to whom he appeals as the only proper Judge of the integrity of his heart.

1. O LORD, thou haſt ſearched me, and known me a.

a (i. e.) Known me exactly, as men do thoſe things which they diligently ſearch out.

2. Thou knoweſt my down-ſitting, and mine up-riſing b, thou underſtandeſt my thought c afar off d.

b All my poſtures and motions, my actions, and my ceſſations from action. c All my ſecret counſels and deſigns. d Before they are perfectly formed in my mind. Thou knoweſt what my thoughts will be in ſuch and ſuch circumſtances, long before I know it, yea from all eternity.

‖ Or, winnoweſt. 3. Thou ‖ compaſſeſt my path e, and my lying down f, and art acquainted with all my ways.

e Thou watcheſt me on every ſide, and therefore diſcerneſt every ſtep which I take. It is a Metaphor either from huntſmen watching all the motions and lurking places of wild beaſts, that they may catch them; or from Souldiers beſieging their enemies in a City, and ſetting watches round about them. f Me when I lie down in my bed, where men oft contrive what they execute in the day time.

4. For there is not a word in my tongue, but lo, O LORD, thou knoweſt it altogether g.

g Thou knoweſt what I ſpeak, and with what deſign and diſpoſition of mind. Or rather, as others render it, and which is more admirable, When there is not a word, &c. Thou knoweſt what I intend to ſpeak either in prayer to thee, or in converſation with men, when I have not yet uttered one word of it.

5. Thou haſt beſet me behind and before h, and laid thine hand upon me i.

h With thine all-ſeeing and all-diſpoſing Providence. i Thou keepeſt me, as it were with a ſtrong hand, in thy ſight and under thy power.

† Pſal. 131. 1. 6. * Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it k.

k I am ſo far from equalling thy knowledge, that I cannot apprehend it, in what manner thou doſt ſo perfectly know all things, even ſuch as are moſt ſecret and have yet no being, and ſeem to depend upon many caſualties and uncertainties.

* Jer. 23. 24. † Heb. thy face. & Gr. 7. * Whither ſhall I go from thy ſpirit l? or whither ſhall I flee from † thy preſence m.

l Either, 1. from the Holy Ghoſt, the third Perſon in the Trinity: or, 2. from thee who art a Spirit, and therefore canſt penetrate into the moſt ſecret parts: or, 3. from thy mind or underſtanding, of which he is here ſpeaking, as this word ſeems to be taken, Iſa. 40. 13. compared with Rom. 11. 34. for what there is called the Spirit of the Lord, is here called the mind of the Lord. And as the Spirit of God is oft uſed in Scripture for its gifts and graces, ſo the Spirit of God in this place may be put for that knowledge which is an Attribute or action of God. m A man can go to no place which is out of thy ſight.

* Am. 9. 2, 3, 4. * Prov. 15. 11. 8. * If I aſcend up into heaven, thou art there: if * I make my bed in hell n, behold, thou art there.

n If I ſhould or could repoſe and hide my ſelf in the grave, or in the loweſt parts of the earth, which are at the fartheſt diſtance from Heaven.

9. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermoſt parts of the ſea o:

o If I ſhould flee as ſwiftly from thy preſence as the morning light doth, which in an inſtant ſcattereth it ſelf from Eaſt to Weſt; for the Sea being the Weſtern border of Canaan, is oft put for the Weſt in Scripture. And wings are Poetically aſcribed to the morning or morning light here, as they are elſewhere to the Sun, as Mal. 4. 2. and to the winds, as Pſal. 18. 11. & 104. 3. and to other things of eminent ſwiftneſs.

10. Even there ſhall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand ſhall hold me p.

p I could neither go thither without thy conduct, nor ſubſiſt there without thy powerful ſupport, and much leſs could I go out of thy ſight; for a man may ſee many things which are out of his power.

11. If I ſay, Surely the darkneſs ſhall cover me; even the night ſhall be light q about me.

q Shall be as clear and manifeſt to God as the light it ſelf.

* Job 26. 6. & 34. 22. Heb. 4. 13. † Heb. darkneth not. † Heb. as is the darkneſs, ſo is the light. 12. Yea, * the darkneſs † hideth not from thee; but the night ſhineth r as the day: † the darkneſs and the light are both alike to thee s.

r Or, enlightneth, as this word is uſed, Pſal. 19. 9. Prov. 29. 13, &c. diſcovereth me and all mine actions. s This is repeated ſo oft, to reprove and confute the ridiculous conceits of many ungodly men, who flatter themſelves with hopes of ſecrecy and impunity for thoſe ſins which they commit in the dark. See Iſa. 29. 15.

13. For thou haſt poſſeſſed t my reins u: thou haſt covered me x in my mothers womb.

t Or, thou doſt poſſeſs, thou dwelleſt in them, thou art the Owner and Governor of them, and therefore muſt needs know them. Or, thou haſt formed, as ſome of the Ancients and others render it. u The moſt inward and hidden part of the body, ſuppoſed alſo to be the ſeat of mens luſts and paſſions. x Either, 1. with that covering called the after-birth, wherein the infant is wrapped and preſerved in the womb by the wonderful care of divine providence. Or, 2. with skin and fleſh, as it is expreſſed, Job 10. 11.

† Heb. by dreadful things I am become wonderful. † Heb. greatly. 14. I will praiſe thee, for † I am fearfully and wonderfully made y; marvellous are thy works z, and that my ſoul knoweth † right well a.

y Thy infinite wiſdom and power manifeſted in the rare and curious ſtructure of mans body, doth fill me with wonder and aſtoniſhment, and with the dread of thy Majeſty. z Both in the leſſer world, man, and in the greater. a I am well aſſured both by thy word, and by the contemplation and ſtudy of thy works, to which I have much addicted my ſelf, that they are wonderful; although I do not ſo accurately underſtand all the particulars of them as I would do.

* Job. 10. 8, 10. Eccl. 11. 5. ‖ Or, ſtrength, or, body. 15. * My ‖ ſubſtance b was not hid from thee, when I was made in ſecret c; and curiouſly wrought d in the loweſt parts of the earth e.

b Or, My bone, as the LXX and others render the word. And bone may be here taken collectively for bones, as is uſual in ſuch words, or for the whole fabrick of the bones. And the bones may be very fitly mentioned here, becauſe they are inward and inviſible, as being covered with skin, and fleſh, and ſinews. Or, the bones may be put Synecdochically for the whole body, as being the moſt ſubſtantial part of it, as they are, Pſal. 35. 10. c In the dark vault of my mothers womb. d Heb. embroidered, exquiſitely compoſed of bones, and muſcles, and ſinews, and veins, and arteries, and other parts, all framed with ſuch wonderful skill, that even Heathens upon the contemplation of all the parts of mans body, and how excellently they were framed both for beauty and uſe, have broken forth into pangs of admiration and adoration of the Creator of man, as Galen particularly did. e Or, as it were in the loweſt parts of the earth. So there is only an Elliptis of the note of ſimilitude, which is very frequent in Scripture, as hath been often ſaid and proved. In a place as ſecret and remote from humane eyes, as the loweſt parts of the earth are, to wit, in my mothers womb. And ſo what was ſaid in the former clauſe is repeated in this in other words.

† Heb. all of them. ‖ Or, what days they ſhould be faſhioned. 16. Thine eyes did ſee my ſubſtance yet being unperfect f, and in thy book g † all my members h were written, ‖ which in continuance were faſhioned i, when as yet there was none of them k.

f When I was a meer Embryo, a rude and ſhapeleſs lump, when I was firſt conceived. g In thy counſel and providence, by which thou didſt contrive and effect this great work, and all the parts of it, according to that model which thou hadſt appointed. This is a Metaphor taken from workmen, who when they are to make ſome curious ſtructure, they firſt draw a rude draught or delineation of it, by which they govern themſelves in the building of it. h All the ſeveral parts of my ſubſtance. i Which in due time and by degrees were formed into bones, fleſhy ſinews, &c. Or, as it is in the margent, what days (and the days in which) they were or ſhould be faſhioned, by what ſteps, in what order and time each part of the body ſhould receive its proper form. This alſo was written or appointed by God. k Heb. and not one of them, underſtand either yet was, as it is in our Tranſlation; or, was lacking, to wit, in thy book. All my parts without exception were written by thee. But then theſe words are not to be joyned with thoſe immediately foregoing, but with the former, and the words are to be read thus, in thy book all my members were written (which in continuance were faſhioned) when as yet, &c.

* Pſal. 40. 5. 17. * How precious alſo are thy thoughts l unto me, O God! how great is the ſumm of them m!

l Thy is taken either, 1. paſſively, my thoughts of thee: or rather, 2. actively, thy thoughts, counſels or contrivances on my behalf, which are admirable and amiable in mine eyes. Thou didſt not only form me at firſt, but ever ſince my conception and birth thy thoughts have been employed for me, in preſerving and and providing for me, and bleſſing of me. m Thy gracious deſigns and providences towards me are numberleſs, as it follows.

18. If I ſhould count them, they are more in number than the ſand: when I awake, I am ſtill with thee n.

n To wit, by my thoughts and meditations. Thy wonderful counſels and works on my behalf come conſtantly into my mind, not only in the day time, but even in the night ſeaſon, which is commonly devoted to reſt and ſleep, whenſoever I awake either in the night or in the morning: Theſe are my laſt thoughts when I lie down, and my firſt when I riſe.

19. Surely thou wilt ſlay the wicked o, O God: depart from me therefore p, ye bloody men q.

o And as thou haſt precious and gracious thoughts towards me and all that love and fear thee, ſo thou haſt other kinds of thoughts and purpoſes towards wicked men, ſuch as thou knoweſt mine enemies to be, even to deſtroy them utterly. p I renounce your friendſhip and ſociety. I will not partake with you in your ſins, leſt I ſhould alſo partake of your plagues. q Heb. ye men of blood, either, 1. paſſively, deſerving death, or guilty of blood or of death, as the phraſe is, Numb. 35. 27, 31. Mat. 26. 66. Or rather, 2. actively, blood-thirſty, or ſhedders of blood, as this phraſe is generally taken, as 2 Sam. 16. 8. Pſal. 26. 9. & 55. 24. & 59. 3. Having called them wicked men in general, he now gives a particular account of their wickedneſs, they were unjuſt and cruel towards men, and withal profane and impious towards God, as he tells us in the next verſe.

20. For they † ſpeak againſt thee wickedly r, and thine enemies take thy Name in vain s.

r By profane ſcoffs, and a profeſſed denial or contempt of thine Omniſcience and Providence. Or, they ſpeak of thee in or unto wickedneſs, they make uſe of Religion to cover or further their wicked deſigns. But our Tranſlation is more favoured by the Context, which ſpeaks of God's open and profeſſed enemies. s Or, according to the order of the Hebrew words, and take thy Name in vain, and are thine enemies, or haters of thee, as it follows v. 20. Theſe words, thy Name, are underſtood here, as alſo Iſa. 3. 7. out of Exod. 20. 7. where they are expreſſed. They abuſe thy bleſſed Name with helliſh oaths and perjures and blaſphemies.

21. Do not I hate them, O LORD, that hate thee t? and am I not grieved with thoſe that riſe up againſt thee u?

t I appeal to thee the omnipreſent and omniſcient God, whether I do not perfectly hate them ſo far as they are enemies to God and goodneſs. u In open hoſtility and rebellion againſt thine Authority.

22. I hate them with perfect hatred: I count them mine enemies x.

x I am no leſs grieved with their enmity againſt thee than if they directed it againſt my ſelf.

* Job 31. 6. Pſal. 26. 2.

23. * Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts y.

y And whether I do not ſpeak this from my very heart, do thou judge who art the ſearcher of hearts, and deal with me accordingly.

‖ Heb. way of pain, or, grief. * Pſal. 5. 8. & 143. 10.

24. And ſee if there be any ‖ wicked way in me z, and * lead me in the way everlaſting a.

z Heb. Way of trouble or grief, any courſe of life which is grievous, either, 1. to my ſelf, as all ſin is to the ſinner ſooner or later; or, 2. to others; as I am accuſed of cauſing much trouble and deſigning miſchief to the King and Kingdom. a In the right and good way, which is laſting and leads to everlaſting life, whereas the way of wickedneſs, to which this is oppoſed, will periſh, as is ſaid Pſal. 1. 6. and bring men into utter deſtruction. Or, as others render it, in the old way, which is the good way, as it is called Jer. 6. 16. in the way of righteouſneſs and holineſs, which may well be called the old way, becauſe it was from the beginning of the world written in mans heart, whereas wickedneſs is of a later date. Poſſibly it may be rendred, in thy way (the Ellipſis of the Pronoun being frequent, as hath been noted and proved before: or, in the way, to wit, the way of God, which is oft called emphatically the way, as Pſal. 25. 8. & 119. 1. Prov. 23. 19. & 29. 27. and which is ſufficiently underſtood from its oppoſition to the wicked way in the former clauſe) for ever, or, as long as I live, as this Hebrew word Olam without any prefix to it is uſed, 2 Sam. 27. 12. Job 41. 4. Pſal. 21. 4. & 45. 7. and elſewhere. But this with ſubmiſſion.

PSAL. CXL.

To the chief Muſician, A Pſalm of David.

This Pſalm was compoſed by David upon occaſion of thoſe ſlanderous and reproachful ſpeeches and treacherous dealings which David had from his enemies, in Saul's time, of which we have an account in the hiſtory.

1. DEliver me, O LORD, from the evil man a: preſerve me from the † violent man. † Heb. man of violences.

a Either Saul or Doeg or ſome other malicious enemy, or rather enemies: the word man being taken collectively for men, as appears from the next verſe, where he ſpeaks of this man in the Plural number.

2. Which imagine miſchiefs in their heart: continually are they gathered together for war b.

b To execute thoſe bloody enterpriſes which they had deviſed in the firſt clauſe of this verſe.

3. They have ſharpned their tongues c like a ſerpent d; * adders poiſon is under their lips. * Pſal. 58. 4. Rom. 3. 13.

c Their malicious hearts ſtirred up their tongues to utter vile ſlanders againſt me. d Either whetting their tongues as ſerpents are ſaid to whet theirs when they are about to bite: or rather, uſing words as ſharp and piercing, as the ſling of a ſerpent.

4. Keep me, O LORD, from the hands of the wicked, preſerve me from the violent man, who have purpoſed e to overthrow my goings f.

e Whoſe deſign and full reſolution it is, if thou doſt not prevent it. f Or, my feet or footſteps, i.e. to throw me down to the ground, to defeat all my hopes and counſels, and bring me to ruine.

5. * The proud g have hid a ſnare for me, and cords, they have ſpread a net by the way † ſide h: they have ſet grins for me. Selah. * Pſal. 35. 7. & 57. 6. & 141. 9. Jer. 18. 22. † Heb. hand.

g My inſolent enemies who deſpiſe me for my meanneſs, and exalt themſelves againſt me. h In which I uſed to walk.

6. I ſaid unto the LORD, Thou art my God: hear the voice of my ſupplications, O LORD.

7. O GOD the Lord, the ſtrength of my ſalvation; thou haſt covered my head i in the day of battel.

i With thy powerful protection as with an helmet or ſhield.

8. Grant not, O LORD, the deſires of the wicked, further not his wicked device k, ‖ * leſt they exalt themſelves l. Selah. ‖ Or, let him not be exalted. * Deut. 32. 27.

k Which is to deſtroy me. l Not only againſt me, but againſt thee alſo, as if by their power and policy they had fruſtrated thy deſign and promiſe made to me.

9. As for the head m of thoſe that compaſs me about, * let the miſchief of their own lips cover them n. * Pſal. 7. 16. & 94. 23. Prov. 12. 13. & 18. 7.

m Or, heads, the Singular number put for the Plural, as is frequent. By which he underſtands either, 1. their politick heads, their chiefs or ring-leaders, who are moſt malicious, and by whom all the reſt were ſupported and ſtirred up: or, 2. their proper and natural heads, as this word is uſed v. 7. and this covering of their heads here is oppoſed to that covering of David's head there. n Let the miſchief which by their calumnies they deſign againſt me, fall upon themſelves.

10. * Let burning coals o fall upon them, let them be caſt into the fire: into deep pits, that they riſe not up again p. * Pſal. 11. 6.

o Divine vengeance, which is compared to coals of fire, as Pſal. 18. 12. and elſewhere. p Either to my danger, or to their own comfort.

11. Let not † ‖ an evil ſpeaker q be eſtabliſhed in the earth: evil r ſhall hunt the violent man to overthrow him. † Heb. a man of tongue. ‖ Or, an evil ſpeaker, a wicked man of violence be eſtabliſhed in the earth: let him be hunted to his overthrow.

q Such as ſlander me and other innocent perſons, to exaſperate Princes againſt us. r Either the evil of puniſhment, or, which comes to the ſame thing, the evil of ſin, their own wickedneſs, which ſhall recoil upon themſelves.

12. I know s that the LORD will maintain the cauſe of the afflicted, and the right of the poor.

s Both by God's word which hath promiſed it, and by my own experience of it in the courſe of God's providence.

13. Surely the righteous ſhall give thanks unto thy Name t, the upright ſhall dwell in thy preſence u.

t Shall have occaſion to praiſe thee for their deliverance. u Shall conſtantly enjoy thy gracious and powerful preſence and aſſiſtance.

PSAL. CXLI.

A Pſalm of David.

This Pſalm alſo must be referred to the time of David's perſecution by Saul. It is an humble prayer that God would deliver him from the rage and malice of his enemies, and from thoſe ſins to which he might be inclined or provoked upon that occaſion.

1. LORD, I cry unto thee, make haſte unto me, give ear unto my voice, when I cry unto thee.

†Heb. directed. 2. Let my prayer be † ſet forth before thee a as incenſe b; and the lifting up of my hands c as the evening ſacrifice d.

a Heb. Be directed to thy face. Let it not be loſt, but let it come unto thee and find audience. b Owned and accepted by thee, no leſs than the incenſe, which by thy command, *Exod.*30. 7, &c. is offered upon thine Altar, from which I am now baniſhed, and ſo diſenabled to offer it there, and therefore I truſt thou wilt accept my prayer inſtead of it. c My prayer made with hands lifted up, which was the uſual geſture. See Job 11. 13. *Pſal.*63.5. & 88.10, &c. d Which was offered every evening, *Exod.*29.39, &c. Which he mentions either, 1. by way of oppoſition to the incenſe which was offered in the morning: or, 2. Synecdochically, ſo as to include the morning-ſacrifice, and all the ſacrifices of the day, of which this was the cloſe; ſuch Synecdoches being moſt frequent, as hath been already obſerved: or, 3. becauſe the evening-ſacrifice was more ſolemn than the morning, and was attended with more company and more prayers, whence the ninth hour, which was the time of this ſacrifice, is called the hour of prayer, Acts 3. 1.

3. Set a watch, O LORD, before my mouth e; keep the door of my lips f.

e That I may not through mine own infirmity and the great provocations of mine enemies, break forth into any unadviſed ſpeeches, or any expreſſions of impatience, or diſtruſt, or envy, or malice, &c. f My lips which are the door of my mouth, whence words come forth.

4. Incline not g my heart h to any evil thing, to practiſe wicked works with men that work iniquity i: and let me not eat of their dainties k.

g Suffer it not to be inclined or led aſide, either by my own errors or luſts, or by the temptations of the world or of the Devil. Thus God is frequently ſaid to harden mens hearts, not poſitively, for he can do no evil, nor tempt any man to it, Jam. 1.13. but privatively, by denying ſoftning grace. h Keep me not only from wicked ſpeeches, v. 3. but from all evil motions of my heart, which otherwiſe will draw me to many evil ſpeeches and actions. i Either, 1. to joyn with them in their ſinful courſes: or, 2. to do wickedly as they do. k Let me never enjoy or deſire worldly comforts upon ſuch terms as they do, to wit, with God's wrath and curſe, as inſtruments of wickedneſs, and of my own eternal deſtruction. My afflictions are more deſirable than ſuch proſperity. Let none of their ſweet morſels, the pleaſures or advantages, which they gain by their wickedneſs, tempt me to approve of or imitate their ways.

* Prov.9.8. ‖ Or, let the righteous ſmite me kindly, and reprove me; let not their precious oil break my head, &c.

5. * ‖ Let the righteous ſmite me l, it ſhall be a kindneſs m; and let him reprove me, it ſhall be an excellent oyl n, which ſhall not break my head o: for yet my prayer alſo ſhall be in their calamities p.

l To wit, with his tongue by reproofs, as the next clauſe explains it, which are called wounds, *Prov.*27.6. As I pray unto thee that thou wouldſt keep me from ſinful practices, ſo I beg it of all juſt men, that if I do tranſgreſs, or if, by the arts and ſlanders of mine enemies, any of them are made to believe that I am guilty of evil deſigns againſt Saul, or of any other wickedneſs, that they would freely admoniſh and reprove me for it. And their reproofs ſhall pleaſe me better than the dainties of the wicked laſt mentioned, v. 4. m I ſhall be ſo far from being offended with it, as an act of enmity or ill-will, as they may ſuſpect, that I ſhall eſteem it an act and ſign of true friendſhip. n Or, it ſhall be as the oyl of the head, as it is in the Hebrew, i. e. which is poured upon the head, as the manner was in great feaſts and ſolemnities. o Not hurt or diſturb it, but on the contrary, ſhall heal and greatly refreſh and delight it. Which is here underſtood by a known figure called Meioſis, whereby more is intended than is expreſſed, as *Prov.*17.21. and oft elſewhere. p Either, 1. in the calamities of thoſe righteous perſons who reproved and cenſured him. So this is an evidence of what he laſt ſaid, that he ſhould take their reproofs for a kindneſs, becauſe when they came into ſuch calamities as thoſe wherein he was involved, as all righteous men muſt expect ſufferings at one time or other, he would not inſult over them nor cenſure them, but pity them and pray for them: or, 2. in the calamities of his enemies, of which he ſpeaks in the next words. And ſo this may be added as a reaſon why he did ſo freely offer himſelf to the righteous to be reproved by them, if he or his cauſe were ſo bad as his enemies made them, becauſe he was well aſſured that he was ſincere, and his cauſe good, and that God would bring him out of all his calamities, and bring his enemies into ſuch calamities, that they ſhould need and deſire his prayers, which alſo he would willingly grant to them; and then all good men would be fully ſatisfied of the juſtice of his perſon and cauſe.

6. When their judges q are overthrown r in ſtony places s, they ſhall hear my words, for they are ſweet t.

q The chief of mine enemies, their Governors Civil and Military. r Or, ſhall be overthrown, or caſt down headlong by thine exemplary vengeance. Or, as others, were left free, unhurt by me, when it was in my power to deſtroy them: of which ſee 1 *Sam.*24. & 26. to which hiſtories this place is by divers learned Interpreters thought to allude. And then by their Judges he means Saul, although he thought not fit diſtinctly to mention him, but only to intimate him in an obſcure and general way. s Heb. in the hands or by the ſides of the rock. Which may relate either, 1. to the rocky nature of thoſe places in which Saul fell into David's hands. See 1 *Sam.*24.2. or, 2. to the ancient manner of puniſhing malefactors, which was by throwing them down from the tops of rocks: of which ſee 2 *Chron.*25. 12. or, 3. to aggravate their overthrow: for falls in ſtony places are as moſt eaſie and frequent, ſo alſo moſt miſchievous. t Then they, either the Judges, who will be wiſe too late; or the people ſpared by my favour, when others were overthrown and warned by that fearful example, will hear my words, i. e. hearken to my counſels and offers which now they deſpiſe, and then they, my words, will be ſweet and acceptable to them, which now they reject. Others thus, then they did hear my words that they were ſweet, then they acknowledged that my words and carriage towards Saul were full of meekneſs and gentleneſs, and that I was not ſo falſe and malicious, as they had repreſented me to be.

7. Our bones u are ſcattered at the graves mouth x, as when one cutteth and cleaveth wood upon the earth y.

u My bones, and the bones of my friends and followers. Our skin and fleſh is in a manner conſumed, and there is nothing left of us but a company of dead and dry bones. Whereby he intimates that their condition was deſperate. Comp. Ezek. 37. 11. x Either, 1. literally and properly. So barbarouſly cruel were our enemies, that they not only killed us, but left our carkaſſes unburied, by which means our fleſh and ſinews, &c. were conſumed or torn in pieces by wild beaſts, and our bones diſperſed upon the face of the earth, our common grave: or, if any of my followers were dead and buried, they pulled their bones out of the grave, and ſcattered them about: or rather, 2. Metaphorically. So the ſence is, Our caſe is almoſt as hopeleſs as of thoſe who are dead, and whoſe bones are ſcattered in ſeveral places. y As much neglected and deſpiſed by them as the chips which a Carpenter makes when he is cutting wood, which he will not ſtoop to take up. Or rather, as the LXX. and Chaldee, and Syriack underſtand it, and as it is in the Hebrew, as when one (to wit, the husbandman) cutteth and cleaveth the earth or in the earth; which he teareth without any mercy.

8. But mine eyes are unto thee, O GOD the Lord: in thee is my truſt, † leave not my ſoul deſtitute z.

† Heb. make not my ſoul bare, or, naked. 2 Cor.5. 2,3.

z Or, naked, as this word ſignifies, *Pſal.*137.7. and as Aaron is ſaid to have made the people naked, *Exod.*32.25. i. e. deprived of thy favour and protection. Or, do not pour out my ſoul, to wit, unto death, as this word is uſed, Iſa. 53. 12.

9. Keep me from * the ſnare which they have laid for me, and the grins of the workers of iniquity.

* Pſal.140. 5. & 142.3.

10. Let the wicked fall into their own nets a, whilſt that I withal b † eſcape.

a Heb. Into his nets, either into God's nets, the Relative being put without the Antecedent, as is uſual in ſuch caſes, where it is eaſily underſtood. Or, each into his own nets, to wit, the miſchiefs which he deſigns againſt me. b Or, together, to wit, with my followers: or, in like manner, as I have done formerly. But this word may ſeem to be more fitly joyned to the foregoing clauſe, to which it is next placed in the Hebrew, and the verſe may be and is by divers both ancient and later Tranſlators, thus rendred, Let the wicked fall. (Or, The wicked ſhall fall) into their own nets together, (altogether, or alike, one as well as another, Saul himſelf not excepted, whom though I dare not deſtroy, God will judge) whilſt that I eſcape, am preſerved from that common calamity in which mine enemies ſhall periſh. Which was verified by the event. For David was ſtrangely kept out of harms way, when Saul and others of David's enemies were cut off by the Philiſtins, 1 Sam. 31.

‖ Maſchil of David; a prayer when he was in the cave a.

a Either that of Adullam, 1 Sam. 22. or that of Engedi, 1 Sam. 24. There he meditated this Pſalm, which afterward he more accurately compoſed and committed to writing.

1. I Cried unto the LORD with my voice b: with my voice unto the LORD did I make my ſupplication.

b Either, 1. with the voice of my ſoul. But ſo this addition would be ſuperfluous, and much more the repetition of it, becauſe that is neceſſarily implied in the former word, I cried, and in the following, I make my ſupplication. Or rather, 2. with my corporeal voice, which the fervor of my ſoul forced me to uſe, when I could not do it without ſome danger, the enemy being at the mouth of the cave. And ſo this addition is emphatical, and therefore is repeated. But it is probable that David ſpoke with a loud voice, and that he might do ſo without very great danger, is manifeſt from that diſcourſe which paſſed between David and his men, even when Saul was entred into the cave, 1 Sam. 24. 4, 5, 6, 7.

* Pſal. 102. tit. 2. I * poured out c my complaint before him: I ſhewed before him my trouble.

c I did it fully and frequently and confidently.

* Pſal. 140. 5. 3. When my ſpirit was overwhelmed within me, then thou kneweſt d my path e: * in the way wherein I walked f have they privily laid a ſnare for me.

d To wit, practically, ſo as to direct me to it. e What paths I ſhould chuſe whereby I might eſcape Saul, when I fled hither and thither in deſarts and mountains and woods; and which way I ſhould get out of his hands when he and all his men were at the cave's mouth, which paſſed my skill. f Wherein I uſed to walk, or they ſuppoſed that I would walk.

‖ Or, look on the right hand and ſee. * Pſal. 88. 8. † Heb. periſhed from me. ‖ Heb. no man ſought after my ſoul. 4. ‖ I looked on my right hand g, and beheld, but * there was no man h that would know me i; refuge † failed me: ‖ no man cared for my ſoul k.

g The place where the Patron or Aſſiſtant uſed to ſtand. See Pſal. 16. 8. & 109. 31. & 121. 5. h To wit, in Saul's Court or Camp: none of my former acquaintance and friends and relations. i Own me, or ſhew any reſpect or kindneſs to me. k Or, for my life, to wit, to preſerve it; but they all conſpired to take it away; which is here implied.

* Pſal. 16. 5. & 73. 26. 5. I cried unto thee, O LORD, I ſaid, Thou art my refuge, and * my portion l in the land of the living m.

l Thou only art both my refuge to defend me from all evil, and my portion to ſupply me with all the good which I need and deſire. m Even in this life, wherein I doubt not to ſee God's goodneſs, as is ſaid Pſal. 27. 13.

6. Attend unto my cry, for I am brought very low: deliver me from my perſecutors, for they are ſtronger than I.

7. Bring my ſoul out of priſon n, that I may praiſe thy Name: the righteous ſhall compaſs me about o: for thou ſhalt deal bountifully with me.

n Bring me ſafe out of this cave wherein I am impriſoned, and ſet me at perfect liberty. o Shall flock to me from all parts, partly out of curioſity to ſee ſuch a ſpectacle and miracle of God's power and mercy; and partly to rejoyce and bleſs God with me and for me and for all the benefits which they expect from my government.

PSAL. CXLIII.

A Pſalm of David.

This Pſalm is much of the ſame nature with the former, and ſeems to have been compoſed much about the ſame time and upon the like occaſion. This is the laſt of thoſe which are called Penitential Pſalms, the former being Pſal. 6. & 32. & 38. & 51. & 102. & 130.

1. HEar my prayer, O LORD, give ear to my ſupplications: in thy faithfulneſs anſwer me: and in thy righteouſneſs a.

a Whereby thou art inclined and engaged to favour righteous perſons and juſt cauſes.

‖ Or, but. 2. ‖ And enter not into judgment with thy ſervant b: for * in thy ſight ſhall no man living be juſtified c.

* Exod. 34. 7. Job 4. 17. Rom. 3. 20. Gal. 2. 16.

b But when I appeal to thy righteouſneſs, I do it only with reſpect to mine enemies, whoſe cauſe as well as their perſons is worſe than mine, but not in reference to thee, as if I could abſolutely juſtifie my ſelf upon a ſevere tryal at the Tribunal of thy Juſtice; for if thou ſhouldeſt rigorouſly examine all the paſſages of mine heart and life, I dread the thoughts and conſequences of it. c To wit, upon terms of ſtrict juſtice, without thy indulgence and infinite mercy.

3. For d the enemy hath perſecuted my ſoul e, he hath ſmitten my life down to the ground f: he hath made me to dwell in darkneſs g, as thoſe that have been long dead h.

d This is not a reaſon of what he laſt ſaid, v. 2. but an argument to enforce his petition delivered v. 1. and repeated v. 7, &c. For though I am not faultleſs, if thou ſhouldeſt make an exact ſearch into me, yet mine enemies are more culpable and highly unjuſt, and therefore I hope for thy help againſt them from thy juſtice as well as mercy. e i.e. My life; for nothing leſs will ſatisfie him. f He hath beaten me down to the ground where I lie ſtruggling for life. g He hath forced me to have mine abode in dark vaults and caves. h Where I am out of ſight and memory, and in as forlorn and hopeleſs a condition in the eye of man, as thoſe that have lain long rotting in the grave.

4. Therefore is my ſpirit overwhelmed within me i: my heart within me is deſolate k.

i See on Pſal. 61. 2. & 142. 3. k Deprived of all hope and comfort. Or, is aſtoniſhed.

* Pſal. 77. 5, 11. 5. I * remember the days of old l, I meditate on all thy works: I muſe on the works of thy hands.

l i.e. What thou haſt done for thy ſervants in former times. Which he mentions either, 1. as matter of terror, to conſider how unlike God now was to himſelf and to his former dealings: or, 2. as matter of ſupport from former experience, becauſe God was ſtill the ſame. Either way it drive him to his prayers, which here follow.

* Pſal. 63. 1. 6. I ſtretch forth my hands unto thee m: * my ſoul thirſteth after thee n, as a thirſty land o. Selah.

m I pray to thee fervently. See on Pſal. 141. 2. n After thy favour and help. o To wit, thirſteth for rain.

* Pſal. 28. 1. ‖ Or, for I am become like, &c. 7. Hear me ſpeedily, O LORD, my ſpirit faileth: hide not thy face from me *, ‖ leſt I be like unto them that go down into the pit p.

p That are dead and buried, of whom there is no hope.

8. Cauſe me to hear thy loving kindneſs in the morning q, for in thee do I truſt: cauſe me to know the way wherein I ſhould walk r, for * I lift up my ſoul unto thee.

* Pſal. 25. 1.

q i.e. Early, as this phraſe is taken, Pſal. 90. 14. and elſewhere, ſeaſonably and ſpeedily. r So as to pleaſe thee, and to ſecure my ſelf.

† Heb. hide me with thee. 9. Deliver me, O LORD, from mine enemies: I † flee unto thee to hide me s.

s Without whoſe care theſe caves and rocks can give me no protection.

* Pſal. 25. 4, 5. & 139. 24. 10. * Teach me to do thy will t, for thou art my God: thy ſpirit is good, lead me u into the land of uprightneſs x.

t To continue in faithful obedience to thee, notwithſtanding all temptations to the contrary, u Or rather, as it is exactly in the Hebrew, and as many both ancient and modern Tranſlators render it, Let thy good Spirit lead me. Leave me not to my own blind and vain mind or corrupt affections, neither give me up to the evil Spirit, as thou didſt Saul, but conduct me in all my ways by thy good, i. e. gracious and holy Spirit. x Or, in plain or even land or ground, in a ſtraight and ſmooth path, that I may not ſtumble nor fall either into ſin or miſchief. This is oppoſed to the crooked and rugged ways in which ſinners are ſaid to walk. See Pſal. 125. 5. Prov. 2. 15. Iſa. 40. 4.

11. Quicken me, O LORD, for thy Names ſake: for thy righteouſneſs ſake bring my ſoul out of trouble.

12. And of thy mercy y cut off mine enemies, and deſtroy all them that afflict my ſoul: for * I am thy ſervant.

* Pſal. 116. 16.

y Out of thy mercy to me, whoſe life they ſeek.

PSAL. CXLIV.

A Pſalm of David.

The matter of this Pſalm is partly gratulatory for mercies received, and partly petitionary for further bleſſings. It ſeems to have been compoſed after Saul's death, and in the beginning of David's reign, when he was expoſed to many perils both from his own rebellious Subjects, and from the Philiſtins and other foreign enemies, yet ſo that he had a good proſpect and aſſurance of a more compleat and eſtabliſhed felicity.

† Heb. my rock. * 2 Sam. 22. 35. † Heb. to the war, &c.

1. BLeſſed be the LORD † my ſtrength, * which teacheth my hands † to war, and my fingers to fight a.

a Who haſt given me that skill in military conduct, and that dexterity in the management of my weapons, which was wholly unſuitable to and much above my education and former courſe of life.

* 2 Sam. 22. 2, 3, 40, 48. ‖ Or, my mercy.

2. * ‖ My goodneſs b and my fortreſs, my high tower and my deliverer, my ſhield, and he in whom I truſt: who ſubdueth my people under me c.

b Or, my mercy: or the God of my mercy, as God is called Pſal. 59. 10, 17. the Name of God being eaſily underſtood from the foregoing verſe. Or, he who is exceeding good or merciful to me, as good as goodneſs it ſelf: the abſtract being put for the concrete, as it is frequently in ſpeeches of God, who is called Wiſdom, Truth, Goodneſs, &c. and ſometimes of men, as Pſal. 12. 2. Prov. 10. 29. where faithfulneſs and uprightneſs are put for faithful and upright men. c Who haſt diſpoſed me peoples hearts to receive and obey me as their King.

* Job. 7. 17. Pſal. 8. 4. Heb. 2. 6.

3. * LORD, what is man d, that thou takeſt knowledge of him e? or the ſon of man, that thou makeſt account of him f?

d He aggravates God's goodneſs to him expreſſed v. 2. by the conſideration of his own meanneſs. Though I am King over my people, yet alas I am but a man, a baſe, ſinful mortal and miſerable creature, if compared with thee, leſs than nothing and vanity. e (i.e.) Haſt any care and kindneſs for him, as words of knowledge commonly imply in Scripture. f The ſame thing repeated in other words.

* Job. 14. 2. Pſal. 39. 5. & 62. 9.

4. * Man is like g to vanity h: his days are as a ſhadow that paſſeth away i.

g In his nature and continuance in the world. h Or, to a vapour on a breath, as Iſa. 57. 13. which is gone in an inſtant. i Or, that declineth, as Pſal. 102. 11. & 109. 23. that groweth leſs and leſs till it be quite out of ſight and loſt.

* Pſal. 18. 9. * Pſal. 104. 32.

5. * Bow thy heavens, O LORD, and come down k: * touch the mountains, and they ſhall ſmoak l.

k To help me, before it be too late, remembring what a frail and periſhing creature I am. l Or, that they may ſmoak, or, and let them ſmoak, as Sinai did at thy glorious appearance, Exod. 19. 18. This is a figurative and Poetical deſcription of God's coming to take vengeance upon his enemies, which is continued in the next verſe.

* Pſal. 18. 13, 14.

6. * Caſt forth lightning, and ſcatter them: ſhoot out thine arrows m, and deſtroy them.

m Thy thunderbolts which oft accompany the lightnings and thunder.

* Pſal. 18. 16. † Heb. hands.

7. * Send thine † hand from above, rid me, and deliver me out of great waters: from the hand of ſtrange children n.

n Either of the Heathen Nations which envy and hate me: or of the rebellious Iſraelites, who though they profeſs themſelves to be the Lord's people, yet in truth and for their carriage to me are like the barbarous Heathens.

8. Whoſe mouth ſpeaketh vanity o: and their right hand p is a right hand of falſhood q.

o Either, 1. vain brags and threatnings which ſhall come to nothing: or 2. vain and deceitful promiſes or profeſſions of friendſhip. p Here mentioned either, 1. as it is uſed in ſwearing, to note their perjury: or rather, 2. as an inſtrument of action. q Deceiving either, 1. themſelves by being unable to do what they deſigned: Or, 2. Others, by not giving them that help which they promiſed to them.

* Pſal. 33. 2, 3.

9. I will * ſing a new ſong unto thee r, O God: upon a pſaltery, and an inſtrument of ten ſtrings will I ſing praiſes unto thee.

r When thou haſt granted this requeſt of mine, v. 7, 8. which I know aſſuredly thou wilt do.

10. It is he that giveth ‖ ſalvation unto kings s: who delivereth David his ſervant from the hurtful ſword.

s Who are not preſerved by their own power or prudence, but by God's ſpecial providence, which for the publick good of the world watcheth over them.

11. Rid me and deliver me from the hand of ſtrange children t; whoſe mouth ſpeaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falſhood.

t And upon theſe accounts grant me the mercy which I deſired before, and now again do repeat.

12. That our ſons may be as plants grown up in their youth u; that our daughters x may be as corner-ſtones † poliſhed after the ſimilitude of a palace y.

u This mercy I beg not only for my own ſake, but for the ſake of thy people, that thine and our enemies being ſubdued, and peace eſtabliſhed in the land, thy people may enjoy thoſe bleſſings which thou haſt promiſed to them; and particularly, that our ſons, which are the ſtrength and ſafety and hopes of a nation, may be like plants, flouriſhing and thriving, and growing in height and ſtrength, as plants do in their youth, and then only; for when they grow old, they wither and decay. x Upon whom the hope of poſterity depends. y Strong and beautiful, and adorned with all the ornaments belonging to their ſex.

13. That our garners may be full, affording † all manner of ſtore: that our ſheep may bring forth thouſands, and ten thouſands in our ſtreets z.

z So as they may fill our ſtreets, being brought in thither for food to the Towns and Cities. Or, in our folds or ſtables, as the Chaldee and others render it; or, as the LXX. and others, in their (or rather, in our, as it is in the Hebrew) outlets or outgoings, (i.e.) in the fields where they abide.

14. That our oxen may be † ſtrong to labour a: that there be no breaking in b, nor going out c: that there be no complaining d in our ſtreets.

a Heb. laden, either with fleſh and fat, as many underſtand it: or, as others, with young: but then the foregoing word is not to be rendred oxen, but cows, as the ſame word and in the ſame maſculine gender is uſed Deut. 7. 13. And ſo this agrees beſt with the former prayer for the ſheep, v. 13. and he wiſheth the ſame bleſſing of fruitfulneſs both for greater and ſmaller cattel. b To wit, of enemies invading the Land, or aſſaulting our Cities, and making breaches in their walls. c To wit, of our people, either out of the Towns and Cities to fight with an invading enemy: or out of the Land into Captivity. d Or, no outcry, or howling for any ſad tidings, or publick grievances or calamities.

* Pſal. 33. 12. & 65. 4.

15. * Happy is that people that is in ſuch a caſe: yea, happy is that people whoſe God is the LORD e.

e This is a correction of the laſt ſentence. This is a very deſirable eſtate, but the true and chief happineſs of our Iſrael doth not conſiſt in theſe things, which are common to others with us, but in this peculiar priviledge that the true and bleſſed God is our God by covenant and ſpecial relation.

PSAL. CXLV.

David's Pſalm of praiſe.

This Pſalm, and the reſt which follow to the end are wholly laudatory, ſetting forth the praiſes of God. The excellency of this Pſalm appears not only from the opinion of the Hebrew Writers, but alſo from the care which the Pſalmiſt took to digeſt it into ſuch accurate and Alphabetical order, that it might be more eaſily fixed in the mind and memory of the Reader.

‖ Or, the king. Compare Jer. 38. 9.

1. I Will extol thee my God ‖ O King a, and I will bleſs thy name for ever and ever.

a Or, the King, by way of eminency, the King of kings, the God by whom Kings reign, and to whom I and all other Kings owe ſubjection and obedience.

2. Every day will I bleſs thee, and I will praiſe thy Name for ever and ever.

† Heb. and of his greatneſs, there is no ſearch. * Job 5. 9. & 9. 10.

3. Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praiſed; † and * his greatneſs b is unſearchable.

b In his Being, Majesty and Glory, and all Perfections.

4. One generation shall praise thy works to another c, and shall declare thy mighty acts.

c The people that live in one age shall relate them to their posterity, and so successively in all ages.

† Heb. things, or, words.

5. I will speak of the glorious honour of thy majesty d, and of thy wondrous † works.

d Here are divers words heaped together, to intimate that no words were sufficient to express it.

† Heb. declare it.

6. And men shall speak of the might of thy terrible acts: and I will † declare thy greatness.

7. They shall ‖ abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodness e, and shall sing of thy righteousness.

e The memorials of thy kindness to thy people, thy never to be forgotten blessings.

* Exod.34.6, 7. Numb.14.18. Psal.86.5,15. & 103.8.

8. * The LORD is gracious and full of compassion; slow to anger, and † of great mercy.

9. The LORD is good to all f: and his tender mercies are over all his works.

f Not to Israel only, but to all mankind, whose hearts he fills with food and gladness, as it is said, Acts 14. 17. yea to all his creatures, as it is in the next clause, to beasts, as well as men. See Psal. 147. 9.

10. All thy works shall praise thee g, O LORD, and thy saints shall bless thee.

g Objectively, they give men and Angels just occasion to praise thee.

11. They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power.

12. To make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom.

13. Thy kingdom is † an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations.

* Psal.146.8.

14. The LORD upholdeth all h that fall, and * raiseth up all those that be bowed down.

h Either, 1. all that look up to him for help: or, 2. all that are upheld: whose support is not from themselves, nor from other men, but only from Gods powerful and good providence.

‖ Or, look unto thee. * Psal.136.25.

15. The eyes of all i ‖ wait upon thee k: and * thou givest them their meat in due season l.

i Of all living creatures. k Expect and receive their supplies wholly from thy bounty. Expectation is here figuratively ascribed to brute creatures, as *Psal.*104.27. *Rom.*8.22. l When they need it.

16. Thou openest thine hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing m.

m Or, as divers render it, and which is more agreeable to the order of the words in the Hebrew Text, thou satisfiest every living thing with thy favour or good-will, i. e. with the fruits of thy bounty: the Pronoun thy being easily and fitly understood out of the foregoing clause.

‖ Or, merciful, or, bountiful.

17. The LORD is righteous in all his ways, and ‖ holy n in all his works.

n Or rather merciful, as this word most commonly signifies. There is a mixture of mercy in the most severe and terrible works of God in this life, judgment without mercy being reserved for the next life, Jam. 2. 13. Revel. 14. 10.

* Deut.4.7.

18. * The LORD is nigh unto all them o that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth p.

o To answer their prayers for relief. p Sincerely or with an upright heart, trusting to him, and waiting upon him in his way.

19. He will fulfil the desire q of them that fear him: he also will hear their cry, and will save them.

q So far as it is agreeable to his own will, and convenient for their good; not inordinate desires, which God commonly denies to his people in mercy, and granteth to his enemies in anger.

20. The LORD preserveth all them that love him: but all the wicked will he destroy r.

r Frequently in this world, but infallibly in the next.

21. My mouth shall speak the praise of the LORD: and let all flesh bless his holy Name for ever and ever.

PSAL. CXLVI.

The design of this Psalm is to persuade men to trust in God, and in him alone.

† Heb. Hallelujah.

1. † PRaise ye the LORD. Praise the LORD, O my soul.

* Psal.104.33.

2. * While I live will I praise the LORD: I will sing praises unto my God, while I have any being.

*Psal.118.8,9. ‖ Or, salvation.

3. * Put not your trust in princes a, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no ‖ help b.

a In men of greatest wealth and power, in whose favour men are very prone to trust. b Who are utterly unable frequently to give you that help which they promise, and you expect.

* Psal.104.29. Eccl.12.7. † Heb. spirit, So Gr.

4. * His † breath goeth forth, he returneth c to his earth d: in that very day e his thoughts f perish.

c In his body, *Eccles.*12.7. d To that earth from which all mankind, Princes not excepted, had their original. e As soon as ever he is dead. f All his designs and endeavours either for himself or for others.

5. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help; whose hope is in the LORD his God:

* Gen. 1. 1.

6. * Which made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that therein is: which keepeth truth for ever g:

g Both because he liveth for ever to fulfil his promises, and because he is eternally and unchangeably faithful.

* Psal.103.6. * Psal.68.5.

7. * Which executeth judgment for the oppressed, which giveth food to the hungry: * the LORD looseth the prisoners.

* Mat.9.30. Joh.9.7,32. * Psal.145.14. Luke 13.13.

8. * The LORD openeth the eyes of the blind h, * the LORD raiseth them that are bowed down, the LORD loveth the righteous i.

h Either, 1. the eyes of their mind, which he enlightens and directs in doubtful and difficult cases: or, 2. their bodily eyes; which he did abundantly by his Son Jesus Christ. i Even when he doth afflict them, which also he doth out of love, *Heb.*12.6.

* Deut.10.18. Psal.68.5.

9. * The LORD preserveth the strangers; he relieveth the fatherless and widow: but the way of the wicked he turneth upside down k.

k He overthroweth their goings, as the phrase is, Psal. 140. 4. He maketh them to lose their way; he not only frustrateth their plots and enterprises, but turneth them against themselves. This and all the foregoing sentences are so many arguments to encourage all good men to trust in God in all their straits and afflictions.

* Exod.15.18. Psal.10.16. & 145.13.

10. * The LORD shall reign for ever, even thy God, O Zion, unto all generations. Praise ye the LORD.

PSAL. CXLVII.

This Psalm may seem from v. 2. & 13. to have been composed by some holy Prophet, after the return of Israel from the Babylonish Captivity. It containeth an ample celebration of Gods praises both for common mercies, and for special favours.

* Psal.92.1. * Psal.33.1.

1. PRaise ye the LORD: for it * is good a to sing praises unto our God; for it is pleasant, and * praise is comely.

a It is acceptable to God, and greatly comfortable and beneficial to our selves.

* Deut.30.3.

2. The LORD doth build up Jerusalem b: * he gathereth together the out-casts c of Israel.

b It is the Lords own doing, and not mans. c Or, the banished, who were carried captives out of their own land, and dispersed in divers strange countries.

3. He healeth the broken in heart d, and bindeth up their † wounds.

d Either with the sense of their sins: or with their sorrows and grievous calamities. He seems to speak peculiarly of the captive Israelites now returned.

4. * He

* Iſa. 40. 26.

4. * He telleth the number of the ſtars e: he calleth them all by their names f.

e Which no man can do, Gen. 22. 17. For thoſe thouſand and twenty five which Aſtronomers number, are only ſuch as are moſt diſtinctly viſible to the eye, and moſt conſiderable for their influences. f This ſignifies, 1. that he exactly knows them as we do thoſe whom we can call by name; he is able to give diſtinct names to each of them, becauſe he accurately underſtands their ſeveral natures and operations: 2. That he hath a Soveraign power over them, as men have over their children or ſervants or ſouldiers whom they can call by name, that he appointeth and governeth all their motions and influences to the fulfilling of his own pleaſure and purpoſes.

5. Great is our LORD, and of great power: † his underſtanding is infinite.

* Pſal. 146. 9.

6. * The LORD lifteth up the meek: he caſteth the wicked down to the ground.

7. Sing unto the LORD with thankſgiving: ſing praiſe upon the harp unto our God.

* Pſal. 104. 13, 14.

8. * Who covereth the heaven with clouds, who prepareth rain for the earth, who maketh graſs to grow upon the mountains.

* Pſal. 104. 27, 28. & 136. 25. & 145. 15. || Or, even.

9. * He giveth to the beaſt his food, || and to the * young ravens g which cry.

* Job 38. 41.

g Which he mentions partly becauſe they were moſt contemptible, eſpecially to the Jews, to whom they were unclean and forbidden for food: partly becauſe they are greedy and voracious: and partly becauſe they are not only neglected by men, but alſo forſaken by their dams as ſoon as ever they can flie, and ſo are wholly left to the care and keeping of Divine providence.

* Pſal. 33. 16. Hoſ. 1. 7.

10. * He delighteth not in the ſtrength of the horſe: he taketh not pleaſure in the legs of a man h.

h As if he needed either the one or the other for the accompliſhment of his deſigns.

11. The LORD taketh pleaſure in them that fear him, in thoſe that hope in his mercy i.

i That believingly and patiently expect and ſeek relief and happineſs from God alone, and from his meer grace and mercy, and not from any creature, nor from their own merits.

12. Praiſe the LORD, O Jeruſalem: praiſe thy God, O Zion.

13. For he hath ſtrengthned the bars of thy gates k: he hath bleſſed thy children within thee.

k Thy ſtrength conſiſts not in thy walls and gates and bars, but in his protection.

14. * † He maketh peace in thy borders l, and * filleth thee with the † fineſt of the wheat.

l In all thy land, even to its utmoſt borders, which are moſt liable to the incurſion of enemies.

Pſal. 81. 16.

15. He ſendeth forth his commandment m upon earth: his word runneth very ſwiftly n.

m Which is ſufficient without any inſtruments to execute whatſoever pleaſeth him, either in works of nature or of providence. n The thing is done without delay or difficulty.

16. He giveth ſnow like wool o: he ſcattereth the hoar froſt like aſhes p.

o Not only in colour and ſhape and ſoftneſs, but alſo in uſe, keeping the fruits of the earth warm. p In colour and ſmalneſs of parts, as alſo in its burning quality.

17. He caſteth forth his ice q like morſels: who can ſtand before his cold r?

q Either, 1. pieces of ice, which God may be ſaid to caſt forth or to caſt down, becauſe he ſendeth it, and oft-times ſuddenly: or, 2. great hail-ſtones, which are of an icy nature and ſubſtance, and which are very properly caſt forth or caſt down out of the clouds, and that like morſels or fragments, the particles being congealed in them. r The cold which he ſometimes ſends into the air is ſo ſharp, that it would be intolerable, if men did not defend themſelves from it by houſes, cloaths, fire, &c.

18. He ſendeth out his word, and melteth them: he cauſeth his † wind s to blow, and the waters flow t.

s The Southern or ſome other warm wind ſent with commiſſion to diſſolve the ice. t The rivers return to their courſe which before were bound up by, or turned into, ice.

19. He ſheweth † his word u unto Jacob x, his ſtatutes and his judgments unto Iſrael.

u He fully declared his mind and will by revelation and in his word. x To the children of Jacob or Iſrael, and to them alone, as it follows.

* See Rom. 3. 1, 2.

20. * He hath not dealt ſo with any nation y: and as for his judgments, they have not known them. Praiſe ye the LORD.

y He left all others to their own native darkneſs and blindneſs, and to thoſe dim diſcoveries of God and of themſelves which they had from the light of Nature.

PSAL. CXLVIII.

The nature of this Pſalm is for ſubſtance the ſame with the former, containing an invitation to all the creatures to praiſe God for his manifold bleſſings.

1. † PRaiſe ye the LORD. Praiſe ye the LORD from the heavens a; praiſe him in the heights b.

a All the hoſt of Heaven, which he particularly expreſſeth in the following verſes. b In thoſe high and heavenly places.

* Pſal. 103. 20, 21.

2. * Praiſe ye him all his Angels c: praiſe ye him all his hoſts d.

c He inviteth the Angels here, and the ſenſeleſs creatures afterward, to praiſe God, not as if the former needed, or the latter were capable of, his exhortation, but only by a Poetical rapture, the deſign whereof is, that men by this means might be more provoked to this duty. d The Angels, called hoſts here, and 1 Kings 22. 19. for their vaſt numbers, exquiſite order, and perfect ſubjection to their General, the Lord of hoſts.

3. Praiſe ye him ſun and moon e: praiſe him all ye ſtars of light.

e You which are adored by the blind Heathens for gods, you are but his creatures, and therefore were obliged, if you were capable, to worſhip and praiſe him for your glorious light and powerful influences.

4. Praiſe him ye heavens of heavens f, and ye waters that be above the heavens g.

f Ye higheſt and moſt glorious Heavens, the place of God's Throne and glorious preſence, as this phraſe is uſed, Deut. 10. 14. 1 Kings 8. 27. Neh. 9. 6. Pſal. 115. 16. Or ye ſtarry Heavens, which alſo may well be ſo called, becauſe they are above the air, which is oft called Heaven in Scripture. g Ye clouds which are above a part of the Heavens. Of which ſee on Gen. 1. 7.

* Gen. 1. 1, 6. Pſal. 33. 9.

5. Let them praiſe the Name of the LORD: for * he commanded, and they were created h.

h They owe their being wholly to God's good will.

* Pſal. 89. 37. & 119. 90, 91. Jer. 31. 35, 36.

6. * He hath alſo eſtabliſhed them for ever and ever i; he hath made a decree k which ſhall not paſs l.

i Either abſolutely as to the ſubſtance of them, or at leaſt to the end of the world. He hath made them conſtant and incorruptible, not changeable and periſhing, as the things of the lower world are. k Either concerning their ſeveral courſes and influences: or rather for their continuance for ever; which beſt agrees with the foregoing and following words. l Which decree ſhall never be made void.

7. Praiſe the LORD from the earth, ye dragons m and all deeps.

m Either, 1. dragons and ſerpents, which abide in the deep caverns and holes of the earth: or, 2. Whales or other Sea-monſters, which dwell in the depths of the Sea, which are oft called by this name, as Job 7. 12. Ezek. 29. 3. and elſewhere, as the word here rendred deeps is moſt commonly uſed concerning the Sea.

8. Fire n and hail, ſnow and vapor o, ſtormy wind fulfilling his word p.

n Lightnings and other fire-works of the air. o Or, fumes, hot exhalations, as the word properly ſignifies, as cold exhalations are comprehended under the title of ſnow. And both of them ariſing from the earth, are here fitly mentioned as belonging to it. p Executing his commands either for the comfort and refreſhment, or for the puniſhment of the inhabitants of the earth.

9. Mountains and all hills, fruitful trees and all cedars q.

q Admirable for your height and ſtrength and uſe, though not for your fruit.

10. Beaſts and all cattle, creeping things, and † flying fowl.

11. Kings of the earth r, and all people: princes, and all judges of the earth.

† Who, though you are called gods and adored like gods by your Subjects, yet are but men, and the creatures and Subjects of this Soveraign Lord, to whom you owe both your being, and all your power and dignity.

12. Both young men and maidens, old men and children.

13. Let them praise the Name of the LORD: for * his Name alone is † excellent, his glory is above the earth and heaven s.

* Psal. 8. 1. Isai. 12. 4.

s Not so much in place as in excellency, above all the glories which are in Earth and in Heaven.

14. He also exalteth the horn of his people t, the praise u of all his saints, even of the children of Israel, a people near unto him x. Praise ye the LORD.

t To wit, above the horns of all the people in the World in respect of their spiritual and eternal priviledges, as it here follows. The horn in Scripture doth commonly note strength, victory, glory, and felicity, as Deut. 33. 17. and every where. u Either, 1. He is the praise, as God is called Deut. 10. 21. to wit, the God of their praise, as Psal. 109. 1. the chiefest object and matter of it: or, 2. which is the praise. Which work of God in exalting their horn is their glory, and maketh them praise-worthy, or obligeth and provoketh them in a singular manner to perform this great duty of praising God, which is so generally neglected by others. x By special relation and friendship and covenant, and by familiar intercourses, God manifesting his face and favour to them, and they frequently and solemnly approaching into his presence, and worshipping him at his foot-stool.

PSAL. CXLIX.

The scope and design of this Psalm is to stir up and encourage God's people to praise him, either, 1. for their deliverance out of Babylon, and the promises which God had given them of the perfection of that work and of the enlargement of their power and dominion in the world: or, rather, 2. for the establishment of the Kingdom of Israel in David's hands, and for that safety and glory and victory over their enemies which they expected by that means. But withal, the Psalmist, or the Spirit of God which dictated this Psalm to him, had a further prospect even to the Messiah, of whom David was a Type, and who was to succeed David in the Throne, and to bring that Kingdom to its highest perfection. And so divers of the Jewish Doctors understand this Psalm.

* Psal. 33. 3.

1 † PRaise ye the LORD. * Sing unto the LORD a new song a: and his praise in the congregation of saints.

a For these new mercies conferred upon us, denied to former times.

* Psal. 100. 2.

2. Let Israel rejoyce in * him that made him b: let the children of Zion be joyful in their king c.

b That made them not only his Creatures, but, which is unspeakably greater, his people: or, that advanced and adorned them with singular priviledges, as this word is used, 1 Sam. 12. 6. and elsewhere. c David and his posterity, and especially the chief of all of them, the Messiah. Let them rejoyce and bless God that they have so potent, so wise, and so just a King.

* Psal. 81. 2.
‖ Or, with the pipe.

3. * Let them praise his Name ‖ in the dance: let them sing praises unto him with the timbrel and harp d.

d According to the usage of that time and dispensation.

4. For the LORD taketh pleasure in his people e: he will beautifie f the meek g with salvation h.

e He loveth them above all people, and rejoyceth over them to do them good. f Heb. adorn or glorifie, make them amiable and honourable in the eyes of the world, who now hate and despise them. g Or, humble, to wit, his people, as he now said, who are oft in Scripture described by that character, because all true Israelites are such, and all Israelites profess and ought to be such. Or, the afflicted, as that word is oft used in Scripture, which hath been observed before, his poor afflicted and oppressed people, to whom the following salvation is most needful and acceptable. h Both temporal, in delivering them from, and setting them above, all their Enemies, and afterwards, with everlasting salvation and glory.

5. Let the saints be joyful in glory i: let them sing aloud upon their beds k, i For the honour which God putteth upon them. k Either, 1. for their safe and sweet repose and peace, which is signified by resting in beds, Isa. 57. 2. or, 2. by night as well as by day, even in the time devoted to rest and sleep, which they shall borrow to praise God for his eminent and extraordinary blessings, as David frequently did upon such occasions.

6. Let † the high praises of God be ‖ in their mouth l, and a * two-edged sword in their hand m;

* Heb. 4. 12. Rev. 1. 16.

l Heb. in their throat. Which signifies vocal praise, and that with a loud voice. m Not only to defend themselves from their Enemies, but, as it follows, to revenge themselves upon them.

7. To execute vengeance upon the heathen n, and punishments upon the people;

n For all their cruelties and injuries towards God's people. This was literally accomplished by David upon the Philistines, Ammonites, Syrians, and other neighbouring Nations and Princes, which were bitter enemies to God's people. And the same thing was done afterward in the Christian world, when God raised up Christian Princes, who did by the help of the Christians fighting with and under them, severely revenge the blood of the martyred Christians upon their cruel Persecutors and Tyrants in divers ages. It may also be understood of the spiritual plagues which Christ by the hand or ministry of his Apostles and Ministers did inflict upon the hearts and consciences of his incorrigible enemies, who by God's word and ordinances were either tormented or hardned to their destruction. Yea it may have a respect unto the last day of judgment, in which the Saints shall judge the world, 1 Cor. 6. 2. which will be a most dreadful execution of this vengeance, &c.

8. To bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron o; o Of which see the Note on the foregoing verse.

9. * To execute upon them the judgment written p: this honour have all his saints q. Praise ye the LORD.

* Deut. 7. 1, 2.

p Appointed and declared in the holy Scripture, as Deut. 12. 32. & 29. 19. & 32. 41, 42, 43. and elsewhere. This is added to shew that they do not this work to satisfie their own malicious or revengeful inclinations, but in obedience to God's commands, and only in such manner as God hath allowed in his word. q The honour of these actions belongs to all the Saints, for whose sakes God appointed this in his word, and afterwards executed it by his providence.

PSAL. CL.

This Psalm agrees much with the former; and is an invitation to all men to praise God, and especially to the Levites, or those of them who were appointed to this work, as may be gathered both from the place in which they are to praise him, which is, according to our Translation, in his Sanctuary, v. 1. and from that great variety of instruments here mentioned, all which were frequently used in their Temple-service, and seldom elsewhere.

1 † PRaise ye the LORD. Praise God in his sanctuary a: praise him in the firmament of his power b.

a In his Temple, where this work was to be performed constantly and solemnly. Or, who dwelleth in his Sanctuary, So it describeth and limiteth the object of their praises. Or, for (as this particle is used in the next verse) his Sanctuary, for this great favour of placing his Sanctuary and dwelling place amongst men. b In his heavenly mansion, there let the blessed Angels praise him. Or, who dwelleth in the firmament, or spreading forth of his power, to wit, in the Heavens which were stretched out by his great power, and in which are the most glorious testimonies of his infinite power. Or, for the firmament, &c. for that glorious and astonishing piece of his workmanship.

2. * Praise him for his mighty acts: praise him according to his excellent greatness c.

* Psal. 145. 5, 6.

c As his infinite Majesty deserves to be praised.

3. Praise him with the sound of the ‖ trumpet: * praise him with the psaltery and harp.

* Psal. 81. 2. & 149. 3.

4. Praise him with the timbrel and ‖ dance: praise him with stringed instruments and organs.

‖ Or, pipe.

5. Praise him upon the loud cymbals: praise him upon the high sounding cymbals.

6. Let every thing that hath breath d, praise the LORD. Praise ye the LORD.

d Every living Creature in heaven and in earth, Rev. 5. 13. according to their several capacities, some objectively, others actively, as was noted before.

PROVERBS.

PROVERBS.

THE Pen-man of this Book is expressed in the Title, Solomon, who was famous for his Proverbs, of which he spake Three Thousand, as it is recorded, 1 King. 4. 32. the most eminent and useful of them being doubtless collected in this Book. And that the greatest part of this Book was composed by Solomon doth sufficiently appear, because that part of it which was collected and composed by other hands, is so plainly distinguished from the foregoing part, Chap. 25. 1. The Nine first Chapters contain a Preface or Introduction to the Book, or an Exhortation to true Wisdom; and all the following Chapters contain the Precepts of Wisdom called Proverbs. Wherein we are not to expect that order and coherence which is in many other Books of Scripture.

CHAP. I.

* 1 King. 4. 32. Chap. 10. 1. & 25. 1.

1. THE * proverbs a of Solomon b, the son of David, king of Israel; a Proverbs are ancient, and wise, and short Sayings, in common use: whereof some are plain and easie, others are intricate and obscure. b Proceeding from Solomon, and most of them digested by him into this Book. See the Preface.

2. To know c wisdom d and instruction e, to perceive the words of understanding f;

c Written to help men to know throughly and practically. d Both humane Wisdom to conduct our Affairs in this Life, which divers of the following Proverbs do, and especially divine Wisdom, which Solomon chiefly designed, or to make men wise to know their duty, and to save their Souls. e The Counsels and Instructions delivered either by God, or by Men, in order to the attainment of Wisdom. f Either, 1. Which are the effects of a good Understanding: Or, 2. Which teach a man true Understanding, whereby to discern between Truth and Error, between Good and Evil, to chuse the former, and to refuse the latter.

3. To receive the instruction g of † wisdom h, justice, and judgment, and † equity i;

g Willingly to receive the Counsels of others, which is a good step to Wisdom, and a part of it. h Such as is Wise, and tends to make men wise and prudent. This is opposed to the Instruction of Fools and folly, of which Prov. 16. 22. & 19. 27. For folly or wickedness hath its School, and multitudes of Scholars, that are very apt to learn its Lessons. i Which teach men just judgment or equity, to wit, their whole Duty, both to God and to others, and to themselves. These three words seem to signifie the same thing, and are heaped together, to note either the necessity of the Precept, or the exactness and diligence which is required in the practice of it.

4. To give subtilty k to the simple l, to the young man m knowledge and ‖ discretion.

k Or rather, Prudence, as this word is used, Prov. 3. 21. & 5. 2. & 8. 5, 12. which elsewhere is taken in an evil sence for craft or subtilty. l Such as want wisdom, and are easily deceived by others, and therefore most need this blessing. m Which wants both Experience and Self-government.

* Chap. 9. 9.

5. * A wise man will hear n, and will increase learning o: and a man of understanding shall attain unto wise counsels p:

n Is not self-conceited, as Fools are, but willing to learn from others; and therefore will attend to the following Instructions. o And thereby will gain this great benefit, to grow in knowledge and wisdom. This he adds, to shew that this Book is useful and necessary, not only to the simple, but also to the most wise and knowing Persons. p Not to deep speculations, but practical consideration, to the art of governing himself or others well and prudently.

6. To understand a proverb and ‖ the interpretation q; the words of the wise, and their dark sayings r.

q (i.e.) The Interpretation of a Proverb, by a Figure called Hendiadys, or the meaning and use of the wise sayings of God, or of men; to know this practically, and for his direction and benefit; for practice is the great design of this Book. r Such as are hard to be understood by inconsiderate and ungodly men, but to be found out by diligent and humble enquiry.

* Job 28. 28. Psal. 111. 10. Chap. 9. 10. Eccl. 12. 13. ‖ Or, the principal part.

7. * The fear of the LORD s is ‖ the beginning t of knowledge: but fools u despise wisdom and instruction x.

s Reverence and obedience to God, or his Worship and Service, as this word is commonly used. t Either the Foundation, or the Top, and Perfection, or chief Point, without which all other knowledge is vain and useless. u Wicked men, called Fools through this whole Book, such as do not fear God. x Are so far from attaining true Wisdom, that they despise it, and all the means of getting it. Which fully proves what he now said, that the Fear of the Lord is the beginning of Wisdom.

* Chap. 6. 20.

8. My son y, * hear the instruction of thy father z, and forsake not the law of thy mother a:

y He speaks to his Scholars with paternal Authority and Affection, to make them more attentive and obedient. Teachers among the Hebrews and others, were commonly called Fathers, and their Scholars their Sons. z His good and wholsom Counsels, but not such as are contrary to God's Law, Prov. 19. 27. a Those pious instructions which thy Mother instilled into thee in thy tender years. See Prov. 31. 1. 2 Tim. 1. 5. & 3. 14, 15. This he adds, because Children when grown up, are very prone to sleight their Mothers advice, because of the infirmity of their Sex, and because they have not that dependance upon, and expectation from their Mothers, which they have from their Fathers.

9. For they shall be † an ornament of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck b.

b This will make thee amiable and honourable in the sight of God and of men, whereas the forsaking of those good Counsels will make thee contemptible.

10. My son, if sinners c entice thee, consent thou not.

c Eminently so called, as Gen. 13. 13. Psal. 1. 1. & 26. 9. such as sell themselves to work all manner of Wickedness, particularly Thieves, and Robbers, and Murtherers, as appears from the next verses, as also Oppressors and Cheaters, by comparing this with v. 19.

11. If they say, Come with us d, let us lay wait for blood e, let us lurk privily f for the innocent g without cause h:

d We are numerous, and strong, and sociable. e To shed Blood. He expresseth not their words, which would rather affright than invigle a young novice, but the true nature and consequence of the action, and what lies at the bottom of their specious pretences. f So we shall neither be prevented before, nor discovered and punished afterward. g Harmless Travellers, who are more careless and secure, and unprovided for opposition, than such Villains as themselves. h Though they have not provoked us, nor deserved this usage from us. This Solomon adds, to discover their malignity and baseness, and to deter the young Man from association with them.

12. Let us swallow them up alive as † the grave i, and whole, as those that go down into the pit k:

i Which speedily covers and consumes dead Bodies. See Psal. 55. 15. & 124. 3. We shall do our work quickly, easily, and without fear of discovery. k Into some deep Pit, into which a Traveller falls unawares, and is utterly lost and never discovered.

13. We shall find all precious substance, we shall fill our houses with spoil l:

l As our danger is little, so our profit will be great.

14. Cast in thy lot among us m, let us all have one purse n:

m (i.e.) Put in thy Money into our Stock. Or rather, thou shalt cast thy lot amongst us, i. e. thou shalt have a share with us, and that equally and by lot, although thou art but a Novice and we Veterans. This agrees best with their design, which was to allure him by the promise of advantage. n Or, we will have, &c.

One

One purſe ſhall receive all our profits, and furniſh us with all expences. So we ſhall live with great facility and true friendſhip.

* Ch. 4. 14. 15. My ſon *, walk not thou in the way with them o; refrain thy foot from their path p.

o Avoid their courſes, and their converſation, and company. p When thou haſt any thought, or inclination, or temptation to follow their counſels or examples, ſuppreſs it, and reſtrain thy ſelf as it were by force and violence, as the word implies.

* Iſa. 59. 7. Rom. 3. 15. 16. * For their feet run q to evil r, and make haſte to ſhed blood s.

q They make haſte, as it follows, without conſidering what they are doing. r To do evil to others, as was expreſſed, v. 11, 12. which alſo will bring evil upon themſelves. s To ſhed innocent blood: which is an inhumane and dangerous practice.

† Heb. in the eyes of every thing that hath a wing. 17. Surely in vain the net is ſpread † in the ſight of any bird t.

t The deſign of theſe words is to ſet forth the folly of theſe men by the ſimilitude of a Bird, which yet is very variouſly applied and underſtood by divers Interpreters. But I ſhall not confound the Reader with the rehearſal of them. This clauſe, in vain, upon the underſtanding whereof the whole depends, may be underſtood, either, 1. in reſpect of the Fowler. So the ſence is, The Fowler who ſpreads his net in the ſight of the bird loſeth his labour, becauſe the bird perceiving the danger, will not be tempted to come to the bait, but flies away from it. But, or yet, theſe (as the firſt words of the next verſe may well be, and by the Chaldee Tranſlator are rendred) are more fooliſh than the ſilly birds, and though they are not ignorant of the danger and miſchief which theſe evil courſes will bring upon themſelves, which I have here repreſented, yet they will not take warning, but madly ruſh upon their own ruine. Or, 2. in reſpect of the bird. So the ſence is, The ſilly bird, although it ſee the ſpreading of the net, yet is not at all inſtructed and cautioned by it, but through the greedineſs of the bait ruſheth upon it, and is taken by it. And theſe men are not one jot wiſer, but albeit they know and find that by theſe practices they expoſe themſelves to the juſtice of the Magiſtrate, and to the vengeance of God, the ſad effects whereof they daily ſee in the deſtruction of their brethren in iniquity, yet they will boldly and madly run themſelves into the ſame miſeries. Both ways the ſence comes to the ſame.

18. And u they lay wait for their own blood x; they lurk privily for their own lives.

u Or, But, or Yet, or So, for all theſe ways this Particle is uſed. Which is more fully expreſſed in the next verſe. The deſtruction which they deſign to others falls upon themſelves. Their blood anſwers to their feet, v. 16. and belongs to the ſame perſons.

19. So y are the ways z of every one that is greedy of gain a: which b taketh away the lives of the owners thereof c.

y As is expreſſed both in the foregoing and following words. z The actions and courſes, which are ſo in the tendency and event of them. a That ſeeks gain by unrighteous and wicked practices. b Either which greedineſs: or rather, which gain, by comparing the laſt words. c Brings ſudden and violent death upon thoſe who had made themſelves Maſters and Poſſeſſors of ſuch gain.

† Heb. Wiſdom, that is, excellent Wiſdom. * Ch. 8. 1. 20. † * Wiſdom crieth d without e, ſhe uttereth her voice in the ſtreets;

d Having expreſſed the counſels and invitations of folly and of wicked men, he now declareth the voice of Wiſdom. By the name of Wiſdom or Wiſdoms he ſeems to underſtand the wiſdom or counſel of God revealed to the Sons of men by his Word. Which he calls Wiſdoms here, as alſo Prov. 9. 1. either to note the excellency of this Wiſdom beyond all other, as the greateſt and chief of Beaſts is called Behemoth or Beaſts, Job 40. 15. or becauſe it conſiſteth of a multitude of wiſe Precepts, or becauſe it hath been delivered to mankind at ſundry times, and in divers manners, and by many perſons, Prophets and Apoſtles, and eſpecially by the Son of God, who is called the Wiſdom of God, Luke 11. 49. And this wiſdom is ſaid to cry with a loud voice, to intimate both God's earneſtneſs in inviting ſinners to repentance, and their inexcuſableneſs if they do not hear ſuch loud cries. e Or, abroad, or in the ſtreets or open places, as many others render it, and as it is in the next clauſe. Not in corners and privily, as Seducers perſwade men to errour or wickedneſs, being afraid of the light, but openly and publickly before all the World.

21. She crieth in the chief place of concourſe f, in the opening of the gates g: in the city h ſhe uttereth her words, ſaying, f Where there is probability of moſt ſucceſs. g Where Magiſtrates ſit in Judgment, and people are aſſembled. So it crieth both to the wiſe and to the unwiſe, as Paul preached, Rom. 1. 14. g Not only in the gate, but in every part of the City. Or, in the Cities, the Singular number being put for the Plural.

22. How long ye ſimple ones i will ye love ſimplicity k? and the ſcorners l delight in their ſcorning, and fools m hate knowledge?

i Ye ignorant, and eaſie, and credulous perſons, who are ſo ſoon cheated by the World and the Devil, and do not underſtand your own intereſt. k Being unwilling to part with it or to be made wiſer. l That ſcoff at all Religion, and contemn the Word and faithful Miniſters of God. m Wilful and wicked fools, as Prov. 17. 10. & 26. 4.

23. Turn ye n at my reproof o: behold, I will pour out p my * ſpirit q unto you, I will make known my words unto you r. * Iſa. 44. 3.

n From your evil courſes unto me. o Upon this admonition here given to you. p If you will do ſo, I will freely and abundantly impart unto you. q Either my mind, as Spirit is taken, Pſal. 77. 6. Prov. 29. 11. or the gifts and graces of my Spirit, which he hath promiſed to ſuch perſons, Luke 11. 13. John 4. 14. & 7. 39. r By my Spirit I will cauſe you truly and ſavingly to underſtand my word which is hid from others, 2 Cor. 4. 3.

24. * Becauſe I have called s, and ye refuſed, I have ſtretched out my hand t, and no man regarded u; * Iſa. 65. 2. 66. 4. Jer. 7. 13. Ezek. 8. 18.

s By my Miniſters, and by my Judgments upon you or others, and by the motions of my Spirit and your own Conſciences. t Offering grace and mercy to you, and earneſtly inviting you to accept of it, leſt through your deafneſs or diſtance from me you ſhould not hear. I have beckned to you with my hand, which this phraſe ſignifies, Iſa. 13. 2. & 65. 2. u Few or none complied with it.

25. But ye * have ſet at naught x all my counſel y, and would none of my reproof: * Pſal. 107. 11. Luke 7. 30.

x Or deſpiſed, or made void, reſiſted its power and authority. y Either, 1. my deſign of doing ſinners good, which you have made of none effect to your ſelves. Or, 2. my commands and counſels, which ſuits better with the next clauſe.

26. I alſo z will laugh at your calamity a: I will mock when your fear b cometh;

z As you have ſcoffed at me and my ways. a i. e. deſtroy you without pity, and take pleaſure therein. Comp. Rev. 18. 20. b The miſery which you do or ſhould fear. The act for the object, as Iſa. 8. 12. and elſewhere.

27. When your fear cometh as deſolation c, and your deſtruction cometh as a whirlwind d; when diſtreſs and anguiſh cometh upon you.

c As ſome deſolating Sword or Judgment, which quickly over-runs a whole Country. d Which inſtantly ſpreadeth it ſelf from place to place with great and irreſiſtible violence and doing much miſchief.

28. * Then ſhall they call upon me, but I will not anſwer; they ſhall ſeek me early e, but they ſhall not find me f. * Job 27. 9. Iſa. 1. 15. Jer. 11. 11. & 14. 12. Mic. 3. 4. Zech. 7. 13.

e Or, in the morning, as the word properly ſignifies, and is here rendred by others, as ſoon as their calamity comes; or rather, with great diligence and fervency, as this phraſe commonly ſignifies. f Becauſe they do not ſeek me by choice and with ſincerity, but only by conſtraint, and that they may be freed from their miſeries.

29. For that they hated knowledge f, and did not chuſe g the fear of the LORD.

f To wit, the practical knowledge of God and of their duty to him, as it is explained in the following clauſe. g Not heartily approve of it and love it, but only made ſome ſhew of it.

30. They would none of my counſel h: they deſpiſed all my reproof.

h They refuſed to be guided by my counſels or precepts.

31. Therefore ſhall they eat of the fruit of their own way i, and be filled with their own devices k.

i They ſhall receive puniſhments anſwerable to their ſins. k With the fruits or effects of their wicked devices. What was ſweet in their mouths ſhall be bitter in their bellies, and that deſtruction which they have plotted againſt others ſhall fall upon themſelves.

32. For the turning away l of the ſimple ſhall ſlay them, and the proſperity of fools ſhall deſtroy them m.

l To wit, from God and from his counſels and reproofs; ſo this is oppoſed to hearkning unto God, v. 33. Or, as it is rendred in the margent, and by divers others, the eaſe or reſt, the peace or tranquillity, as it ſeems to be explained in the next clauſe. m It commonly proves the occaſion of their ruine, by making them preſumptuous, and ſecure, and worldly, and proud, and forget-forgetful of God and of their own eternal happiness, whereby they provoke God's wrath, and bring upon themselves swift and certain destruction. Thus he meets with the common objection against the fear of God, taken from the present impunity and prosperity of ungodly men.

33. But whoso hearkneth unto me, shall dwell safely n, and shall be quiet from fear of evil o.

n Or, securely or confidently, resting himself upon the conscience of his own integrity, and upon the promises and favour of God. o From sinful and tormenting cares and fears. And as a wicked man's mind is oft full of anxiety in the midst of all his outward prosperity and glory, so the mind of a good man is filled with peace and joy even when his outward man is exposed to many troubles.

CHAP. II.

1. MY son a, if thou wilt receive my words, * and hide my commandments with thee b;

* Chap. 7. 1.

a These words are spoken by Solomon, either, 1. in the name of wisdom, as before: or rather, 2. in his own name. b Lay them up in thy mind and heart with care, as men do their choicest Treasures.

2. So that thou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding c:

c Give thy self to the study of it with affection and diligence.

3. Yea, if thou criest d after knowledge, and † liftest up thy voice for understanding:

d To wit, unto God, the only giver of it, v. 6. Heb. if thou calleſt, inviteſt it to come unto thee, earnestly desirest its conduct.

4. * If thou seekest her as Silver, and searchest for her, as for hid treasures e:

* Mat. 13. 44.

e With the same unwearied diligence and earnest desire and patient expectation under all delays, disappointments, and difficulties, which worldlings use in the purchase of Riches, or in digging in Mines of Silver.

5. Then shalt thou understand f the fear of the LORD g, and find the knowledge of God.

f More perfectly and profitably; for that very seeking and searching after it, v. 4. supposed some understanding. g Which is the beginning of this wisdom, chap. 1. 7.

6. * For the LORD † giveth h wisdom: out of his mouth i cometh knowledge and understanding.

* 1 Kin. 3. 9, 12. Jam. 1. 5.

h Heb. will give, hath promised to give it, to wit, to those that so seek it. Whereby he also teacheth them not to ascribe any Wisdom which they may obtain unto their own Wit and Industry, but only unto God's favour and blessing. i From his word or appointment and good will, as the Word of God is taken, Deut. 8. 3.

7. He layeth up sound wisdom k for the righteous: * he is a buckler to them l that walk uprightly.

k Heb. Essence or substance; either, 1. solid and true felicity, opposed to the vain enjoyments of this World, which are said to have no substance or being, Prov. 23. 5. Or, 2. true and substantial Wisdom, which is satisfactory and everlasting, opposed to worldly Wisdom, which is but an empty shadow of wisdom, and perisheth with us. l To protect and save them from that mischief and ruine which shall befal all wicked men.

8. † He keepeth * the paths of judgment m, and preserveth the way of his Saints n.

† Heb. to keep So Gr.
* Pſal. 146. 9.

m He guardeth and guideth the paths or ways, (i.e.) the counsels and actions of good men, as the next clause explains this, which are called Paths of Judgment, or, righteous Paths, Judgment being here put for Righteousness, as it is Psal. 99. 4. and oft elsewhere. And keeping of Paths may be put for keeping them in their Paths so as they shall neither swerve from, nor stumble and fall in them. n The same thing repeated in other words.

9. Then o shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity p, yea, every good path q.

o When thou hast done thy part expressed, v. 1, 2, 3, &c. and God in answer to thy desires hath given thee Wisdom, v. 6. or when it is with thee, as it follows, v. 10. p All the parts of thy duty to man, as well as the fear of God, v. 5. which contains all duties to God. These three words are used here, as also chap. 1. 3. to signifie the same thing. q The practice of all Vertues and Graces.

10. When wisdom entreth into thine heart r, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul:

r When thou dost truly love it and passionately desire it, and hide its precepts in thy Heart, according to Psal. 119. 11.

11. Discretion shall preserve thee s, understanding shall keep thee:

s From wicked courses and the mischiefs which attend upon them, as is particularly expressed in the following Verses.

12. To deliver thee from the way of the evil man t, from the man that speaketh froward things u.

t From following his counsel or example, which others for want of wisdom commonly do. u With design to corrupt thy mind and entice thee to evil Principles or Practices.

13. Who leave the paths of uprightness x, to walk in the ways of darkness y:

x The way of God's Precepts. y (i. e.) Of sin, which is oft called darkneſs, as Rom. 13. 12, &c. Eph. 5. 11. because it comes from darkness, ignorance, and errour, and loves darkness and hates light, and leads to utter darkness.

14. Who rejoyce to do evil z, and delight in the frowardness of the wicked a.

z Seeking and embracing occasions of sin with diligence and greediness, and pleasing themselves both in the practice and remembrance of sin, whereas upright men abhor and watch against all occasions of sin beforehand, and mourn bitterly for it afterwards. a Not only in their own sins, but in the sins of other wicked men, which shews a greater malignity of mind and love to sin. See Rom. 1. 32.

15. † Whose ways are crooked b, and they froward in their paths.

b Or, Who make their ways crooked, (i.e.) whose course of Life swerves from the right and straight way of God's Law.

16. To deliver thee from the strange woman c, * even from the stranger which flattereth with her words d:

* Ch. 5. 3. & 6. 24. & 7. 5.

c From the Adulteress or Whore, called strange, partly because such Persons were commonly Heathens or are supposed to be such by reason of that severe Law against these practices in Israelitish women, Deut. 23. 17. or are justly reputed Heathens, as being degenerate Israelites, which are oft called Strangers, as hath been noted in the book of the Psalms: and partly because conversation with such Persons is forbidden to men, as those Israelites which were not Levites are called Strangers, Numb. 1. 51. in respect of the Holy things which they were prohibited to touch? and forbidden Fire is called strange fire, Numb. 3. 4. d Which useth all arts and ways to allure men to unchast actions: one kind being put for all the rest.

17. Which forsaketh * the guide of her youth e, and forgetteth f the covenant of her God g.

* Jer. 3. 4.

e To wit, her Husband whom she took to be her guide and governour, and that in her youth; which circumstance is added to aggravate her sin and shame, because love is commonly most sincere and fervent between an Husband and Wife of youth, as they are for that reason emphatically called, Prov. 5. 18. Isa. 54. 6. Joel 1. 8. Mal. 2. 14, 15. f (i.e.) Violateth or breaketh, as that word is commonly used in a practical sence. g The marriage Covenant so called, partly because God is the Author and Institutor of that society and mutual Obligation: and partly because God is called to be the witness and judge of that solemn Promise and Covenant, and the avenger of the transgression of it.

18. For her house inclineth unto death h, and her paths unto the dead i.

h Conversation with her (which was most free and usual in her own House) is the ready and certain way to Death, which it brings many ways, by wasting a Man's Vital spirits and shortning his life, by exposing him to many and dangerous Diseases, which Physicians have declared and proved to be the effects of inordinate lust, as also to the fury of jealous Husbands or Friends, and sometimes to the Sword of Civil Justice, and undoubtedly, without repentance, to God's wrath and the second Death. This is here mentioned as one great priviledge and blessed fruit of Wisdom. i Or, as the Chaldee and some others render it, unto the Giants, to wit, those rebellious Giants, Gen. 6. 4. or, as others, unto the damned, or, unto Hell. See for this word Job 7. 9. Pſal. 88. 11. Prov. 9. 18. & 21. 16.

19. None k that go unto her l, return again m, neither take they hold of the paths of life n.

k Few or none. An hyperbolical expression used, Isa. 64. 7. l That go to her House, or that lie with her, as this Phrase is used, Gen. 16. 4. & 30. 4. Jos. 2. 3. m From her and from this wickedness unto God. Adulterers and Whoremongers are very rarely brought to repentance, but are generally hardned by the power and deceitfulness of that Lust, and by God's just judgment, peculiarly inflicted upon such persons, Heb. 13. 4. He alludes to the nature of corporal death, from which no man can without a Miracle return to this life. n Of those courses which lead to true and eternal Life.

20. That

20. That thou maiſt o walk in the way of good men p, and keep the path of the righteous.

o This depends upon v. 11. and is mentioned as another happy fruit of wiſdom, the former being declared from v. 12. to this Verſe. p Follow the counſels and examples of the godly. Whereby he intimates, that it is not ſufficient to abſtain from evil company and practices, but that we muſt chooſe the converſation of good men.

* Pſal.37.29. 21. * For the upright ſhall dwell in the land q, and the perfect ſhall remain in it.

q Shall have a peaceable and comfortable abode in the Land of Canaan, which alſo is a type of their everlaſting felicity. See Pſal. 37. 3, 9, 18, 29.

* Job 18.17. Pſal. 104. 35. || Or, pluckt up. 22. * But the wicked ſhall be cut off from the earth, and the tranſgreſſors ſhall be || rooted out of it.

CHAP. III.

* Deut.8.1. & 30. 16, 20. 1. MY ſon, forget not my law a; * but let thine heart keep my commandments b:

a My doctrine or counſel; or the Law of God, which might be called his Law, as the Goſpel is called Paul's Goſpel, 2 Tim. 2.8. becauſe delivered by them. b By diligent meditation and hearty affection.

* Chap.4.10, 22. † Heb. years of life. 2. For * length of days, and † long life, and peace, ſhall they add to thee c.

c God will add theſe Bleſſings which he hath promiſed to the obedient, Deut. 8. 18. & 30. 20. 1 Tim. 4. 8.

* Exod.13. 9. Deut.6.8. C...6.21.& 7.3 3. Let not mercy and truth d forſake thee: * bind them about thy neck e, write them upon the table of thine heart f.

d Either, 1. God's Mercy and Truth. So it is a promiſe, God's Mercy and Truth ſhall not forſake thee. Or rather, 2. That Mercy and Truth which is Man's duty. So it is a Precept: which ſeems moſt probable both from the form of the Hebrew Phraſe, and from the following words of this Verſe, which are plainly preceptive, and from the promiſe annex'd to the performance of this Precept in the next Verſe. Mercy and Truth are frequently joyned together, as they are in God, as Pſal. 25. 10. & 57. 3, &c. or in men, as Prov. 16. 6. & 20. 28. Hoſ. 4. 1. and here. Mercy notes all that benignity, clemency, charity, and readineſs to do good freely to others: Truth or Faithfulneſs reſpects all thoſe duties which we owe to God or Man, to which we have ſpecial Obligation from the Rules of Juſtice. e Like a Chain, wherewith Perſons adorn their Necks, as it is expreſſed, Chap. 1. 9. which is faſtned there and not eaſily loſt, which alſo is continually in ones view. f Either, 1. upon thoſe Tablets which the Jews are ſaid to have worn upon their Breaſts, which are always in ſight. So he alludes to Deut. 6.8. Or, 2. in thy mind and heart, in which all God's commands are to be received and engraven, as is oft required in this Book, and every where. So the Table of the Heart ſeems to be oppoſed to the Tables of Stone in which God's Law was written, as it is Jer. 31. 33. 2 Cor. 3. 3.

* Pſal.111.10. || Or, good ſucceſs. 4. * So ſhalt thou find favour g and || good underſtanding h in the ſight of God i and man.

g (i. e.) Obtain acceptance, or be gracious and amiable to them. h Whereby to know thy duty, and to diſcern between good and evil. The ſerious practice of Religion is an excellent mean to get a ſolid underſtanding of it: as on the contrary a vitious life doth exceedingly debaſe and darken the mind, and keep men from the knowledge of Truth, which not only Scripture but even Heathen Philoſophers have oft obſerved. Others render it good ſucceſs. Which ſeems not to ſuit well with the following words. i Grace or favour with God, and that underſtanding which is good in God's ſight, (i. e.) truly and really, as a truly good man is called good before God, in the Hebrew, Eccleſ. 7. 26.

5. Truſt in the LORD k with all thine heart, and lean not unto thine own underſtanding l.

k Wholly and ſecurely rely upon God's Promiſes and Providence for help and relief in all thine affairs and dangers. l Think not to accompliſh thy deſigns by the ſtrength of thine own Wit without God's Bleſſing. Under this one kind of carnal confidence, which is moſt frequent and moſt plauſible, he underſtands, and forbids all other confidences in bodily ſtrength, wealth, friends, &c.

† 1 Chr.28.9. 6. * In all thy ways m acknowledge him n, and he ſhall direct thy paths o.

m Deſigns and undertakings for the things of this Life or of the next. n Heb. know him, to wit, practically; or, own him, his wiſdom, in following his counſels, his power and goodneſs, in expecting ſucceſs from him, his Soveraignty, in managing all thy affairs ſo as to pleaſe and glorifie him. o Aſſiſt and bleſs all thine endeavours, and keep thee from the paths of ſin and deſtruction.

7. * Be not wiſe in thine own eyes p: fear the LORD q, and depart from evil. * Rom.12. 16.

p Be not puffed up with a vain conceit of thine own wiſdom, as if that were ſufficient for the conduct of all thine affairs, without direction or aſſiſtance from God, or without the advice of others. q This he adds, becauſe the reverence and dread of the divine Majeſty will make a man, when he compareth himſelf with God, little and vile in his own eyes. Reverence God's wiſdom, and thou wilt deſpiſe thine own.

† Heb. medicine. ‡ Heb. watering, or moiſtning. 8. It ſhall be † health to thy navel r, and † marrow s to thy bones.

r (i.e.) To thy Body, which is ſignified by the Navel, which is a noble and uſeful part of the Body, by which the Infant receives nouriſhment in the Womb, and which is the ligament or bond by which the bowels, a principal part of the Body, are united together and preſerved. s Which is the nouriſhment and ſtrength of the bones, and a great preſerver and prolonger of life, as the decay of it is a chief cauſe of the weakneſs, and drineſs, and decay of the Body. The ſence of the Verſe is, This wiſdom or fear of God is not only uſeful to the ſalvation of the Soul, but alſo to the health and welfare of the Body, both as it prevents thoſe diſeaſes and diſtempers which are oft procured by ſinful luſts and paſſions, and as it giveth us an Intereſt in all God's Promiſes, and putteth us under the care of his ſpecial Providence.

* Exod.23.19. & 34. 26. Deut.26.2, &c. Mal.3.10, &c. Luke 14.13. 9. * Honour the LORD with thy ſubſtance t, and with the firſt-fruits u of all thine increaſe.

t Or, with thy Riches. Lay out thy Eſtate not only to pleaſe and advance thy Self or Family, but alſo to glorifie God; which is done by the payment of all thoſe offerings and dues which God hath required; by giving according to thy Abilities, whatſoever is neceſſary for the ſupport and advancement of God's Worſhip and Service in the World; by free and liberal Contributions to thoſe whom God hath made his Deputies, and, as I may ſay, the Receivers of his Rents, to wit, faithful Miniſters, and good Chriſtians, and all others who need and require thy help. The performance of theſe Duties is here called an honouring of God, partly becauſe that word is ſometimes uſed for giving of gifts, as 1 Tim. 5. 17. and elſewhere; and partly becauſe it is a teſtimony of our reſpects to God, of our obedience to him as our Soveraign Lord, and that in hard and coſtly Duties, of our thankfulneſs to him, as our chief Benefactor, and the Donor of all that we have, and of our belief of his Promiſes made to the faithful practices of this duty; which if they were believed, the moſt covetous Perſons would be the moſt charitable. u Or, with the chief, or beſt, or firſt, which anſwers to the firſt-fruits under the Law.

* Deut.28.8. 10. * So ſhall thy barns be filled with plenty x, and thy preſſes ſhall burſt out y with new wine.

x This is not the way to diminiſh thy eſtate, as covetous and profane Perſons alledge, but rather to increaſe it. y Shall be ſo filled, that they would burſt out if not carefully prevented.

* Job 5.17. Pſal.94.12,13. Heb.12. 5. Rev.3.19. 11. * My ſon, deſpiſe not z the chaſtning of the LORD: neither be weary of his correction a.

z Either, 1. by making light of it, or not being duly affected with it; and ſo this is one extream oppoſed to the other in the next clauſe. Or rather, 2. by accounting it an unneceſſary, and uſeleſs, and troubleſom thing, but rather eſteem it as a priviledg and favour from God, and a benefit to thy ſelf; for ſuch Negatives do oft imply the contrary Affirmatives by a common figure called Meioſis, as Prov. 17. 21. and oft elſewhere. And this ſence ſeems to agree better both with the following clauſe, which repeats the ſame thing with ſome aggravation, after the manner; and with the reaſon uſed to enforce this and the following command, v. 12. which concerns not ſuch as are inſenſible, but rather ſuch as had too deep a ſenſe of the evil of affliction. a Neither eſteem it tedious and intolerable, but endure it with patience and chearfulneſs.

* Deut.8.5. 12. For whom the LORD loveth, he correcteth b, * even as a Father the ſon, in whom he delighteth.

b Afflictions are not infelicities, but benefits and comforts, becauſe they are Teſtimonies of God's love, which is infinitely more deſirable than any evil can be terrible. They ſhew God's purpoſe, and deſire, and care, to purge us from our ſins, and to make us fit for his Preſence and Kingdom. This and the former Verſe ſeem to be here inſerted, in the midſt of his commendations of Wiſdom, to remove an objection againſt the excellency and happineſs of wiſe or pious men, taken from thoſe many Calamities to which ſuch Perſons are frequently expoſed, the reaſon of which Providence he here giveth.

† Heb. the man that draweth out underſtanding. 13. Happy is the man c that findeth d wiſdom, and † the man that getteth e underſtanding.

c Notwithstanding all his afflictions. d Which supposeth his diligent searching for it, expressed, Chap. 2. 4. e Heb. that draweth out. Which expression implies two things, 1. that Man hath it not naturally in himself, but must have it from another, even from God and his Word. 2. that Men should labour for it, as those do that dig and draw forth Metals out of the Earth.

* Job 28. 15, &c. Psal. 19. 10. Chap. 8. 11, 19. & 16. 16. † Heb. revenue. Chap. 8. 19.

14. * For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the † gain thereof than fine gold b.

b It is more necessary and advantageous, because it is so, not only for this short life, but also to the future and everlasting life, in which Gold and Silver bear no price.

15. She is more precious than rubies: and all the things thou canst desire, are not to be compared unto her c.

c For true worth and usefulness.

16. Length of days is in her right hand: and in her left hand riches and honour d.

d Wisdom is here represented as a great and generous Princess distributing gifts to her Subjects. She giveth them long life, &c. unless when she foresees that these things would prove snares and mischiefs to them, as they very frequently do to others.

17. Her ways are ways of pleasantness e, and all her paths are peace f.

e Are exceeding delightful, to wit, to those who know them and walk in them. Whose judgment is certainly to be preferred before the contrary opinion of ungodly men who are grosly ignorant of them, and professed enemies to them. f Procure a blessed tranquillity in a man's mind and conscience, prosperity in his undertakings, and eternal rest with God in glory.

18. She is * a tree of life g to them that lay hold upon her h; and happy is every one that retaineth her i.

g She is a certain pledge and mean of everlasting life and happiness. He alludes to that Tree of Life, Gen. 2. 9. & 3. 22. which if eaten by Man in Paradise before his Fall, should have perpetually preserved him in life, and health, and vigor; and intimates, that this is the only restorer of that life which we have lost by sin. h That eagerly pursue after her, and when they overtake her, do greedily and gladly apprehend and embrace her, as the Hebrew word signifies. i That holdeth her fast, and is constantly resolved not to forsake her.

§ Psal. 136. 5. Ch. 8. 22, 27. ‖ Or, prepared.

19. * The LORD § by wisdom k hath founded the earth l, by understanding hath he ‖ established m the heavens.

k Either, 1. by Christ, the co-essential and co-eternal Wisdom of God the Father. Or, 2. by that divine perfection of Wisdom, which is the Fountain of that Wisdom that is in Man, which Solomon hath hitherto commended; and therefore the commendation of that Wisdom tends to the commendation of this, which is a stream flowing from it. l Hath fixed it in the lowest part of the World. m Or, fitted or ordered them, framed them in that exquisite order which now they have.

20. By his knowledge the depths are broken up n, and the † clouds drop down the dew o.

n That great Abyss or depth of Waters which was mixed with and contained in the bowels of the Earth, did break forth into Fountains and Rivers, for the use of men and beasts. Which is justly remembred here as an illustrious effect of God's Wisdom, by which the Earth was made habitable, and the Waters serviceable. o Under which the Rain is comprehended, as being of the same nature and use.

21. My son, let not them p depart from thine eyes q: keep sound wisdom and discretion.

p To wit, wisdom and discretion, of which he hath hitherto discoursed, and which are expressed in the end of this Verse, and may be referred hither by a Figure called a Trajection, and the words may be put into this order, Let not sound wisdom and discretion depart from thine eyes, but keep them diligently. The like Trajections are found in other Texts of Scripture. q (i.e.) From the eyes of thy mind. Constantly and seriously meditate upon them, and upon those excellent Precepts and Rules which proceed from them.

22. So shall they be * life unto thy soul r, and grace to thy neck s.

r Either, 1. to thee or thy Person. They shall prolong and perpetuate thy life, and make it life indeed, to wit, pleasant and happy; whereas a miserable life is reputed a kind of death, and is oft so called. Or, 2. to thy Soul properly so called. They shall quicken, and delight, and save thy Soul. s Like a beautiful chain or ornament about thy neck, as above, v. 3. & chap. 1. 9.

* Psal. 37. 24. & 91. 11, 12. † Heb. confidently, or, securely. So Vers. 29.

23. * Then shalt thou walk in thy way t † safely u, and thy foot shall not stumble x.

t Manage all thy employments and concerns. u Or, securely or confidently, without danger or fear; casting thy care upon God in the discharge of thy duty. x At those stumbling-blocks and temptations at which heedless Sinners commonly stumble and fall. Thou shalt thereby be kept from falling into sin, and that mischief which generally attends upon it.

* Chap. 6. 22. Psal. 3. 5. & 4. 8.

24. * When thou liest down, thou shalt not be afraid: yea, thou shalt lie down, and thy sleep shall be sweet y.

y Free from distracting cares and terrors which oft-times haunt Sinners even in their sleep, because thy mind shall be composed and serene through the sense of God's favour and providence, and the conscience of thine own integrity.

* Psal. 91. 5.

25. * Be not afraid z of sudden fear a, neither of the desolation of the wicked b when it cometh.

z (i.e.) Thou shalt not be afraid. For that it is a Promise, seems most probable from the Context: only it is for greater Emphasis delivered in the form of a Precept, I allow thee and require thee not to be afraid, which is both thy duty and privilege. a For sudden and unexpected evils are most frightful and grievous. And fear is here put for the evils feared, as Prov. 1. 26, 27. and oft elsewhere. b Either, 1. actively, which they bring upon thee. Or rather, 2. passively, which befals them, when the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity, as it is expressed, Isa. 26. 21. and thou maist be apt to fear lest thou shouldst be involved in the common calamity; but fear not, for God will then hide thee in his Chambers, as he promised, Isa. 26. 20.

26. For the LORD shall be thy confidence c, and shall keep thy foot from being taken d.

c A sufficient and sure ground of confidence to thee. d In the snares either of sin, or of mischief.

† Heb. the owners thereof.

27. With-hold not e good f from † them to whom it is due g, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it h.

e Do not deny it, but readily and chearfully impart it, which is implied in the contrary, as above, v. 11. and oft in this Book as we shall see. f Any thing which is good, either spiritually, as counsel, comfort, reproof, &c. or civilly, the good things of the present life, as good is taken, Psal. 4. 6. called this Worlds good, 1 Joh. 3. 17. g Heb. from the Lords or owners of it, from those who have any kind of right to it, either, 1. by the Law of Justice and Equity, prescribed both by the natural and written Laws of God, and by the civil Laws of men. So this place commands the payment of just debts, and the restitution of things either found or committed to our trust, or taken from others by fraud or violence. Or, 2. (which seems to be chiefly intended, by comparing this with the next Verse, though the former is not to be excluded) by that great and soveraign Law of Love or Charity, which God hath written in the hearts of men by Nature, and frequently and severely enjoyned in his Word, whereby every man is obliged according to his ability and opportunity, to pity and relieve such as are in real want or misery: who in that case are here called the Owners of our goods, not in respect of men, as if men in want might seize upon the riches of others, but in respect of God, who is the Soveraign Lord, and only true Proprietary of all mens Estates, who giveth them when and to whom he pleaseth, and who doth not give away his right, nor make men absolute Lords of them to dispose them as they will, but only allows them the use and comfort of them upon such conditions, and with such reservations and Rent-charges, as I may call them, as he hath appointed, whereof this is one, that men should readily and freely communicate them to other men who need and require their help. And such actions, though they be acts of Charity and Bounty to men, yet, as to God, they are acts of Righteousness, as they are called, Prov. 11. 18. 2 Cor. 9. 9. and in many other places. h Either, 1. to with-hold it. Or, 2. to do good. And this clause may be added, either, 1. as a limitation, to insinuate that God expects from men according to what they have, and not according to what they have not, as is said, 2 Cor. 8. 12. Or, 2. as an argument to perswade them to take the present season to perform this duty, when they are capable of so doing, because by the changes of this World, and the course of divine providence, they may be disenabled from the performance of this great and necessary duty, and then they will be without excuse.

* Lev. 19. 13. Deut. 24. 15.

28. * Say not i unto thy neighbour k, Go, and come again, and to morrow I will give l: when thou hast it by thee.

i The former Verse forbad the denial, and this forbids the delay of this duty. k Unto any Man, as the word Neighbour is commonly used in Scripture, as hath been oft proved. l To wit, what is thy due, in manner before expressed, or what thou needest: for this word is generally used concerning free or charitable gifts, and not concerning due debts.

29. ‖ Devise not evil m against thy neighbour, seeing he dwelleth securely by thee n.

m Any thing injurious or hurtful. Having commanded doing of good, v. 27, 28. he here forbids doing or designing any evil. n Relying upon thine integrity: do not therefore betray thy trust, which is hateful even to Heathens.

30. Strive not o with a man without cause p, if he have done thee no harm q.

o Either by words before the Magistrate; or otherwise by thine actions. p Without just and necessary cause. q Whereby he clearly implies, that in case of injury a man may by all lawful means defend himself.

* Pf. 37. 1. † Heb. a man of violence. 31. * Envy thou not † the oppressor r, and choose none of his ways s.

r For his impunity and success in his wicked designs, and the Wealth which he gains by his unrighteous practices. s For what men envy in others they seek to obtain for themselves.

32. For the froward t is abomination to the LORD u: * but his secret is with the righteous x. * Pf. 25. 14.

t Or, perverse, who walketh in crooked or sinful paths as the Oppressour last mentioned; opposed to the upright Man, who is called right or straight, as Deut. 32. 4. Prov. 29. 27. u God hates him, and therefore sooner or later he must needs be extreamly and eternally miserable. x They are God's Friends and Favourites, to whom he familiarly imparts, as men use to do to their Friends, his mind and counsels, or his secret favours and comforts to which other men are strangers. Compare Psal. 25. 14. Joh. 15. 15. Revel. 2. 17.

* Levit. 26. 14, &c. Mal. 2. 2. 33. * The Curse of the LORD is in the house of the wicked y: but he blesseth the habitation of the just.

y Not only upon his own Person, but also upon his Posterity and upon all his domestical concerns.

* Jam. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 5. 34. * Surely he scorneth z the scorners a: but he giveth grace b unto the lowly.

z He will expose them to scorn and contempt. a Proud and intolent Sinners, who make a mock at sin, Prov. 14. 9. and at God and Religion also, and despise all counsels and means of amendment. Comp. Psal. 1. 1. & Prov. 1. 22. b To wit, favour, both with himself and with men, as this Word and Phrase is used, Exod. 3. 21. & 11. 3. & 12. 36. Eccles. 9. 11. Luk. 2. 52, &c.

† Heb. exalteth the fools. 35. The wise shall inherit glory c, but shame † shall be the promotion of fools d.

c Shall enjoy it not only for a season, as wicked men oftimes do, but as an Inheritance constantly and to perpetuity. d Instead of that glory which they greedily seek, they shall meet with nothing but ignominy. Or, as it is in the Margent, shame exalteth or lifteth up fools, (i. e.) it makes them manifest and notorious, as this very word is used, Prov. 12. 29. Or, as the words lie in the Hebrew Text, fools take or carry away (as this word is here rendred by divers both ancient and modern Translators, and as it is used, Levit. 6. 10. 15. and oft elsewhere) shame, to wit, as his proper Portion or Inheritance; which is here very fitly opposed to the Portion or Inheritance of the Just. And although the Verb be singular, yet it agrees well enough with the Noun plural, because this is taken distributively, such constructions being very usual in the Hebrew Text.

CHAP. IV.

1. HEar, ye children, the instruction of a father a, and attend to know understanding.

a Of me your Teacher, who have paternal authority over you, and affection to you.

2. For I give you good doctrine b, forsake ye not my Law c.

b Not vain or foolish or false or pernicious counsels, but such as are true and profitable. c God's Law or Commands delivered to you by my mouth. See on Chap. 3. 1.

† Heb. a Son to my Father. * 1 Chr. 29. 1. 3. For I was † my fathers son d, * tender e and only beloved f in the sight of my mother.

d In a special manner, his best-beloved Son and designed to be his Successor in the Throne. e Young and tender in years, and capable of any impressions, and tenderly educated. f Heb. only, or the only Son: Or rather, because Bathsheba seems to have had other Sons, 1 Chro. 3. 1. as an only Son, as dearly beloved as an only Son: in which sense this Title is given to Isaac, Gen. 22. 2. 12, 16. though he had another Son, and to others. And all these circumstances are mentioned to shew the necessity and great benefit of wholesom instruction, which his Royal Parents would not neglect, no not in his tender years, and thereby to prepare and excite them by his example to receive instruction.

4. * He taught me also, and said unto me g, Let thine heart retain my words, * keep my commandments and live h. * 1 Chr. 28. 9. * Ch. 7. 2.

g The following Verses, at least as far as the Tenth Verse, are propounded as the words of David, that the Name of so great a King and Holy a Prophet might add the more Authority and Efficacy to his Counsels. h (i. e.) Thou shalt live. It is a promise in the form of a command, as Chap. 3. 25.

5. Get wisdom, get understanding: forget it not, neither decline from the words of my mouth i.

i From the belief and practice of my Word.

6. Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee: love her k, and she shall keep thee.

k He intimates, that it is not enough to do what is good, which may sometimes proceed from worldly or sinful Motives, but that we must have a sincere and fervent love to it.

7. Wisdom is the principal thing l, therefore get wisdom: and with all m thy ‖ getting get understanding. ‖ Or, substance Ch. 23. 23.

l The most excellent of all possessions. m Even with the price of all, though it cost thee the loss of all which thou hast. Or, in or among all. Whilst you labour for other things, do not neglect this.

8. Exalt her n, and she shall promote thee: she shall bring thee to honour o, when thou dost embrace her.

n Let her have thine highest esteem and affection. o Both with God and men: which Solomon knew by experience.

9. She shall give to thine head * an ornament of grace p: ‖ a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee. * Ch. 1. 9. ‖ Or, she shall compass thee with a Crown of Glory.

p (i. e.) An acceptable or beautiful ornament, such as they used to put upon their heads.

10. Hear, O my son, and receive my sayings: and the years of thy life shall be many.

11. I have taught thee in the way of wisdom q: I have led thee in right paths.

q Either, 1. Which procureth Wisdom. Or, 2. which Wisdom directeth thee to walk in.

12. When thou goest, thy steps shall not be straitned r, * and when thou runnest, thou shalt not stumble s. * Pf. 91. 11, 12. Ch. 3. 23.

r Thou shalt manage thine affairs with great facility and safety and success. It is a Metaphor from those who walk in a strait and uneven path, where they are apt to stumble and fall. s Not miscarry.

13. * Take fast hold of instruction, let her not go; keep her, for she is thy life t. * Ch. 3. 18.

t The conducter, and preserver, and comfort of thy life.

14. * Enter not into the path of the wicked u, and go not * in the way of evil men x. * Pf. 1. 1. * Ch. 1. 10, 15.

u Avoid their courses and company. x Do not proceed further. If thou hast unadvisedly entred into it, do not persist in it, but get thee speedily out of it.

15. Avoid it, pass not by it y, turn from it z, and pass away.

y Keep at a great distance from it. Compare Job 22. 23. Prov. 5. 8. z Shun all occasions of sin.

16. For they sleep not a except they have done mischief: and their sleep is taken away unless they cause some to fall b.

a They cannot compose themselves to sleep with quietness and satisfaction to their own minds. b Into their own Snares, either into sin, or into mischief.

17. For they eat the bread of wickedness c, and drink the wine of violence d.

c The sence is either, 1. Wickedness is as necessary and as pleasant to them as their Bread. Which suits well with the former Verse. Or, 2. They live wholly upon what they get by wicked courses. Which gives the reason of what he last said, why they could not sleep without prey. d (i. e.) Gotten by violence. See on the former clause.

18. But the path of the just is as the shining light e, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day f.

e The common course of their lives or actions is pure and spotless, clear and certain, safe and comfortable, as light is. f Just men do daily more and more grow in knowledge, and grace, grace, and consolation, until all be perfected and swallowed up in glory.

19. The way of the wicked is as darkness g: they know not at what they stumble h.

g Full of gross ignorance and errour, of uncertainty and confusion, of wickedness, of danger and misery: all which come under the name of darkness in Scripture use, and suit well with the context. h Heb. shall stumble. Though they are always in danger, yet they are always secure, and do not discern their danger nor the cause, or manner, or time of their ruine, till they be surprized with it.

20. My son, attend to my words: incline thine ear unto my sayings.

* Ch. 3. 3, 21. 21. * Let them not depart from thine eyes: keep them in the midst of thine heart i.

i Heartily love them, and stedfastly retain them.

22. For they are life unto those that find them, and * † health to all their flesh.

* Chap. 3. 8. † Heb. medicine.

23. Keep thy heart k † with all diligence: for out of it are the issues of life l.

k Thy mind and thoughts, and especially the will and affections, which are the more immediate and effectual cause of all mens actions. l From thence proceed all the actions, as of the natural, so of the spiritual life, which lead to eternal life and happiness, as on the contrary all evil actions tending to death spring from thence, which is here implied.

24. Put away from thee † a froward mouth m, and perverse lips put far from thee.

m All sorts of sinful words, which proceed from and discover an evil heart.

25. Let thine eyes look right on n, and let thine eye-lids look straight before thee.

n Direct all thine actions by a good intention to a right end, and keep thy mind fixed upon that way which leads to it, and neither look nor turn aside to the right hand nor to the left, as it follows v. 27.

26. Ponder the path of thy feet o, and ‖ let all thy ways be established p.

o Consider thine actions before thou doest them, and see that they agree with the rule. p Let thine actions be uniformly and constantly good in spight of all temptations to the contrary. Or, Let thy ways be d rected or disposed aright, as this Hebrew word signifies. Or, thy ways shall be established. So this is a promise to confirm the foregoing precept, If thou doest ponder them, thou mayest expect God's blessing and good success in them.

* Deut. 5. 32. & 28. 14.

27. * Turn not to the right hand, nor to the left q: remove thy foot from evil.

q Fly all extreams, and neither add to God's commands, nor take from them.

CHAP. V.

1. MY son, attend unto my wisdom, and bow thine ear to my understanding.

2. That thou mayst regard a discretion b, and that thy lips may keep knowledge c.

a Or, keep, i. e. hold fast, as it is in the next clause. b Spiritual wisdom for the conduct of thy life, as this word is used, Prov. 1. 4. and elsewhere in this Book. c That by wise and pious discourses thou mayst preserve and improve thy wisdom for thine own and others good.

* Chap. 2. 16. & 6. 24. † Heb. palate.

3. * For d the lips of a strange woman drop as an honey-comb e, and her † mouth is smoother than oil.

d It concerns thee to get, and to use discretion, that thou mayst be able to resist and repel those manifold temptations to which thou art exposed. e Her words and discourses are sweet, and charming, and prevalent.

4. But her end is bitter as wormwood f, sharp as a two-edged sword.

f Her design, and the effect of that lewdness to which she enticeth thee, is the sinners destruction.

* Chap. 7. 27.

5. * Her feet g go down to death: her steps take hold on hell.

g Her course or manner of life.

6. Lest thou shouldst ponder the path of life h, her ways are moveable i, that thou canst not know them k.

h To prevent thy serious consideration of the way and manner of rescuing thy self from this deadly course of life. i Various and changeable. She transforms her self into several shapes to accommodate her self to the humours of her Lovers, and hath a thousand arts and deceits to ensnare them, and hold them fast. k Thou canst not discover all her subtil practices, and much less deliver thy self from them.

7. Hear me now therefore, O ye children, and depart not from the words of my mouth.

8. * Remove thy way far from her, and come not nigh the door of her house l.

* Chap. 7. 7, 8, &c.

l Lest thine eyes affect thine heart, and her allurements prevail over thee.

9. Lest thou give thine honour m unto others n, and thy years o unto the cruel p.

m Thy dignity and reputation, the strength and vigour of thy body and mind, which is an honour to a man, and which are commonly wasted by adulterous practices. n Unto Whores and their husbands and children and friends. o The flower of thine age, thy youthful years. p To the Harlot, who though she pretends ardent love and kindness to thee, yet in truth is one of the most cruel creatures in the world, wasting thy estate and body without the least pity, and then casting thee off with scorn and contempt, and when her interest requires it, taking away thy very life, of which there are innumerable examples, and damning thy soul for ever.

10. Lest strangers q be filled with † thy wealth, and thy labours r be in the house of a stranger.

q Not only the strange women themselves, but Bawds, Panders, and other Adulterers, who are in league with them. r Wealth gotten by thy labours.

11. And thou mourn at the last s, when thy flesh, and thy body t are consumed u.

s Bitterly bewail thy own madness and misery when it is too late. t Thy flesh, even thy body; the Particle, and, being put expositively. u By those manifold diseases which filthy and inordinate lusts bring upon the body, of which Physicians give a very large and sad Catalogue, and the bodies of many Adulterers give full proof.

12. And say, How have I hated instruction x, and my heart despised reproof y!

x O what a mad beast have I been to hate and slight the fair warnings which were given me, and against mine own knowledge, to run head-long into this pit of destruction! Which are not the words of a true penitent mourning for, and turning from his sin, but only of a man who is grieved for the sad effects of his delightful lusts, and tormented with the horrour of his own guilty conscience. y I did with my whole heart abhor all admonitions.

13. And have not obeyed the voice of my teachers z, nor inclined mine ear to them that instructed me.

z Of my Parents and Friends, and Ministers, who faithfully and seasonably informed me of those mischiefs and miseries which now I feel.

14. I was almost in all evil a, in the midst of the congregation and assembly b.

a O what a miserable man am I! There is scarce any misery in respect of Estate, or Body, or Soul, into which I am not already plunged. The words also are and may well be rendred thus, In a moment I am come into all evil. In how little a time, and for what short and momentany pleasures am I now come into extream and remediless misery! b I who designed and expected to enjoy my lusts with secrecy, and impunity, am now made a publick example and shameful spectacle to all men, and that in the Congregation of Israel, where I was taught better things, and where such actions are most infamous and hateful.

15. Drink waters out of thine own cistern; and running waters out of thine own well c.

c This Metaphor contained here, and v. 16, 17, 18. is to be understood, either, 1. of the free and lawful use of a mans estate, both for his own comfort, and for the good of others. Or rather, 2. of the honest use of Marrimony, as the proper remedy against these filthy practices. This best suits with the whole context both foregoing and following: and thus it is explained in the end of v. 18. So the sence is, Content thy self with those delights which God alloweth thee, with the sober use of the Marriage-bed. Why shouldst thou ramble hither and thither, trespassing against God and men, to steal their waters which thou mightest freely take out of thine own Cistern or Well. The ground of the Metaphor is this, that waters were scarce and precious in those Countries, and therefore men used to make Cisterns and Wells for their own private use. And the same Metaphor of Waters, and of a Pit, or Well, is applied to things of this nature elsewhere, as Prov. 23. 27. Isa. 48. 1. & 51. 1.

16. Let thy fountains d be dispersed abroad e, and rivers of waters in the streets.

d Thy children proceeding from thy wife, called thy fountain, v. 18. and from thy self, as the Israelites are said to come from the Fountain of Israel, Deut. 33. 28. Psal. 68. 26. Compare Isa. 51. 1. And Fountains are here put for Rivers flowing from them, as it is explained in the next clause, and as it is Psal. 104. 10. by a Metonymy of the Cause for the Effect. And this title may be the more fitly given to children, because as they are rivers in respect of their parents, so when they grow up, they also become fountains to their children. e They shall be multiplied, and in due time appear abroad in the world to thy comfort and honour, and for the good of others: whereas Whores are commonly barren, and men are ashamed to own the children of whoredom.

17. Let them be only thine own, and not strangers with thee f.

f Hereby thou mayest be secured, that thou dost not father and leave thine Estate to other mens children, whereas the parents of harlots children are common or uncertain.

18. Let thy fountain g be blessed h: and rejoyce with the wife i of thy youth k.

g Thy wife, as the next clause explains it. h She shall be blessed with children, for barrenness was esteemed a curse and reproach, especially among the Israelites. Or rather, she shall be a blessing and a comfort to thee, as it follows, and not a curse and a snare, as an harlot will be. i Seek not to harlots for that delight which God alloweth thee to take with thy wife. So here he explains the foregoing Metaphor, and applies it to his present design. k Which thou didst marry in her and thine own youthful days, with whom therefore in all reason and justice thou art still to satisfie thy self, even when she is old. Or he mentions Youth, because that is the season in which men are most prone to unclean practices, against which men are commonly fortified by the infirmities of old age.

19. Let her be as the loving hind l, and pleasant roe, let her breasts m † satisfie thee at all times n, and † be thou ravisht o always with her love.

l Or, as the beloved Hind, Heb. the Hind of Loves; as amiable and delightful as the Hinds are, either, 1. to their Males, the Harts; or, 2. to Princes and great men, who used to make them tame and familiar, and to take great delight in them, as hath been noted by many Writers; of which see my Latin Synopsis. m i. e. Her loves and embraces, expressed by lying between the breasts, Cant. 1. 13. Compare Ezek. 23. 3, 8, 21. n At all convenient times: For that there may be excess in the use of the Marriage-bed is manifest, not only from many Scriptures, but from the light of Nature, and the consent of wise and sober Heathens, who have laid restraints upon men in this particular. A man may be drunk with his own wine, and intemperate with his own wife. Or, in all ages and conditions. Do not only love her when she is young and beautiful, but also when she is old and deformed. o Love her fervently. It is an Hyperbolical expression.

20. And why wilt thou, my son, be ravisht with a strange woman p, and embrace the bosom of a stranger?

p Why wilt thou destroy and damn thy self for those delights which thou mayst enjoy without sin or danger?

* 2 Chr. 16. 9. Job 31. 4. & 34. 21. Chap. 15. 3. Jer. 16. 17. & 32. 19.

21. * For the ways of man are before the eyes of the LORD q, and he pondereth all his goings r.

q God sees all thy filthy actions, though done with all possible cunning and secrecy. r He taketh an exact account of all their doings, that he may recompense them according to the kinds, degrees, numbers, and aggravations of all their unchast actions.

* Chap. 11. 3, 5, 6. † Heb. sin.

22. His own iniquities * shall take the wicked himself, and he shall be holden with the cords of his † sins s.

s In vain doth he think to disentangle himself from his lusts by repenting when he grows in years, and to escape punishments; for he is in perfect bondage to his lusts, and is neither able nor willing to set himself at liberty: and if he do escape the rage of a jealous husband, and the sentence of the Magistrate, yet he shall be infallibly over-taken by the righteous Judgment of God.

* Job 4. 21. & 36. 12.

23. * He shall die without instruction t, and in the greatness of his folly u he shall go astray x.

t Because he neglected instruction. Or, without correction or amendment. He shall die in his sins, and not repent of them, as he designed and hoped to do before his death. u Through his stupendious folly, whereby he cheated himself with hopes of repentance or impunity, and exposed himself to endless torments for the momentany pleasures of sinful lusts. x From God and from the way of life, and from eternal salvation.

CHAP. VI.

1. MY son, if thou be * surety a for thy friend, if thou hast stricken thy hand b with a stranger c:

* Ch. 22. 26.

a To wit, rashly, without considering for whom, or how far thou dost oblige thy self, or how thou shalt discharge the debt, if occasion require it. Otherwise suretiship in some cases may be not only lawful, but an act of justice, and prudence, and charity. See Gen. 42. 37. & 43. 8. Philem. v. 19. Or, to (as this prefix most commonly signifies) a friend. b Obliged thy self by giving thine hand, or joining thine hands with another mans, as the custom then was in such cases: Of which see Job 17. 3. Prov. 17. 8. & 22. 26. c With the creditor, whom he calls a Stranger, because the usurers in Israel, who lent money to others for their necessary occasions, upon condition of paying use for it, were either Heathens, or were reputed as bad as Heathens, because this practice was forbidden by God's Law, Deut. 23. 19. Or, to or for a stranger; for here is the same prefix which is rendred for in the former clause. And so he may imply, that whether a man be surety to, or for, a friend, or to, or for a stranger, the case and course to be used is much of the same kind.

2. Thou art snared d with the words of thy mouth, thou art taken with the words of thy mouth.

d Thy freedom is lost, and thou art now in bondage to another.

3. Do this now, my son, and deliver thy self, when thou art come into the hand e of thy friend f, go, humble thy self g, || and make sure thy friend h.

e Into the power. f Either, 1. of the creditor, who possibly may be also thy friend; yet take the following course with him, and much more if he be a stranger. Or, 2. of the debtor, for whom, as being thy friend, thou didst become surety; whereby thou art not only in the creditor's power, to exact payment, but also in the debtor's power, by his neglect or unfaithfulness, to expose thee to the payment of the debt. And this may seem best to agree both with v. 1. where Friend is taken in that sence, and is distinguished from the creditor who is called a Stranger, and with the words here following; for this humbling of himself was not likely to have much power with a stranger, and a griping usurer; but it might probably prevail with his friend, either to take effectual care to pay the debt, or at least to discharge him from the obligation, or to secure him against it some other way. g Heb. Offer thy self to be trodden upon, or, Throw thy self down at his feet. As thou hast made thy self his servant, bear the fruits of thine own folly, and humbly and earnestly implore his patience and clemency. h Or, and prevail with thy friend, strive to win him by thine incessant and earnest solicitations. Or, honour or magnifie thy friend, which is fitly and properly opposed to, and indeed is in some good measure done by the humbling a man's self before him.

4. Give not sleep to thine eyes, nor slumber to thine eye-lids i.

i To wit, until thou hast taken care for the discharge of this obligation. Be not secure, nor negligent, nor dilatory in this matter.

5. Deliver thy self as a roe from the hand of the hunter k, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler.

k With all possible expedition, as the Roe runs swiftly away.

6. Go to the ant l, thou sluggard, consider her ways m, and be wise:

l This is another distinct precept; and it is for the most part as needless to seek, as hard to find, coherence in the Proverbs and Counsels of this Book. m Her actions and manner of living, especially her diligence and providence, which are the things commended in her, v. 7, 8. of which Naturalists give many instances, as that the Ants watch the fittest seasons for all things, that they provide most plentifully against the time of Famine, that they never hinder, but always assist one another in their work, and unite their force together to carry away such things as are too large or heavy for one of them, that they prepare fit cells or repositories for their corn in the ground, and such as the rain cannot easily reach; and if through excessive rain their corn be wet, they bring it forth to be dried, that they bite off the ends of the grains of corn, that they may not grow, &c.

7. Which having no guide, overseer, or ruler n.

n Which might direct them in, or quicken them to the work, as the Bees have their Kings, and many other Creatures have their Leaders. This heightens their commendation.

8. Provideth her meat in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest o.

o When they come forth in great numbers, as in Winter they stir not out of their holes.

9. * How

* Ch. 24. 33. 9. * How long wilt thou ſleep p, O ſluggard? when wilt thou ariſe out of thy ſleep?

p When the Ants are watchful, and labour not only in the day-time, but even by night, when the Moon ſhineth.

10. Yet a little ſleep, a little ſlumber r, a little folding of the hands s to ſleep.

r This he ſpeaks in the perſon of the ſluggard, refuſing to ariſe, and requiring more ſleep, that ſo he might expreſs the diſpoſition and common practice of ſuch perſons. s Which is the geſture of men compoſing themſelves to ſleep.

y He vents his wickedneſs, as by his ſpeech, ſo alſo by his geſtures, whereby he ſecretly ſignifies what he is afraid or aſhamed to expreſs openly to his complices, his intentions or deſires of ſome evil towards another perſon: which having in the general declared by the motion of his eyes or feet, he points out the particular perſon by his fingers.

x Do not give way to, nor delight thy ſelf with unchaſte thoughts or affections. Compare Mat. 5. 28. y Either with her Beauty, which conſiſts much in the Eyes; or rather with her amorous and wanton glances.

* Chap. 29. 3. † Heb. the woman of a man, or a mans wife. 26. For * by means of a whoriſh woman a man is brought to a piece of bread z: and † the adultereſs will hunt for the precious life a.

27. Can a man take fire in his boſom, and his cloaths not be burnt b?

Some think that as thefts were multiplied, ſo the puniſhment of it was increaſed in Solomon's time, or, at leaſt, that it was the practice of ſome Nations to require this ſeven-fold reſtitution. 3. He ſpeaks not of that reſtitution which the Law required, but of that which either the wronged perſon being potent might force the Thief to make, or which the Thief would willingly give rather than be expoſed to publick ſhame; as appears by the following clauſe, wherein he adds to this ſeven-fold reſtitution all his ſubſtance, which no Law of God or Man required.

Which may imply, either, 1. that he hath no more sense of the shame and mischief which he is bringing upon himself than a Fool. 23. Till a dart strike through his liver m, as a bird hasteth to the snare, and knoweth not n that it is for his life.

m (i. e.) His vital parts, whereof the Liver is one. Till his life be lost, as it is explained in the next clause. n Which may be referred either to foolish and inconsiderate young Men; or to the silly Bird to which he is compared, which comes to the same thing.

24. Hearken unto me now therefore, O ye children, and attend to the words of my mouth.

25. Let not thine heart decline to her ways o, go not astray in her paths.

o Either to the paths which lead to her House: or to her manner of living.

26. For she hath cast down many wounded, yea many strong men p have been slain by her.

p Men that excel others, either 1. in bodily strength, upon which they presume, which yet is wasted and by degrees ruined by these courses. Or, 2. in wisdom and fortitude and resolution. Whereby he implies how much more necessary it is for a weak and foolish young Man to use all possible care and diligence to avoid this mischief.

* Ch. 2. 18, & 5. 5. & 9. 13.

27. * Her house is the way to hell q, going down to the chambers of death.

q Or, to the Grave; for the word is used in both senses; and this sence seems better to agree both with the foregoing and following following words. Although, without repentance, Hell will certainly be their portion, and their first death will be followed by the second.

CHAP. VIII.

* Chap. 1. 20. 1. DOth not * wisdom a cry? and understanding put forth her voice b?

a It is a great Question what this Wisdom is, of which Solomon discourseth so largely and profoundly in this Chapter. Some understand it of that attribute or perfection of the Divine nature which is called Wisdom, whereby God perfectly knoweth all things, and maketh known to men what he judgeth necessary, or expedient for them to know. Others understand it of the second Person in the Godhead, the Son of God, who is called the Wisdom of God, Luke 11. 49. And it cannot fairly be denied that some passages do best agree to the former, and others to the latter Opinion. Possibly both may be joined together, and the Chapter may be understood of Christ considered partly in his Personal capacity, and partly in regard of his Office which was to impart the mind and will of God to Mankind, which he did, 1. by revealing it to, and writing it upon the mind of man, at his first Creation; for it was Christ who then gave being, and life, and light to mankind, as is undeniably evident from Joh. 1. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. 2. By publishing it unto the holy Patriarchs and Prophets in the time of the Old Testament; for it was Christ who spake and discovered things to them from time to time, as is manifest from 1 Pet. 1. 11. & 3. 18, 19, 20. and from many other Scriptures both of the Old Testament, as I have formerly noted in their proper places, and in the New Testament, as we shall see hereafter. 3. By declaring it from his own mouth, and by his Apostles and Ministers under the Gospel. b Clearly and audibly instruct men how to avoid those fleshly lusts? He opposeth the inviting words of Wisdom to the seducing speeches of the Harlot.

2. She standeth in the top of high places c: by the way in the places of the paths d.

c Where she may be best seen and heard, not in corners and in the dark, as the Harlot did. d Where many paths meet, where there is a great concourse, and where Travellers may need direction.

3. She crieth at the gates e, at the entry of the city f, at the coming in at the doors g.

e The places of Judgment, and of the confluence of people. f To invite passengers at their first coming, and to conduct them to her house. g To wit, of her house, as the Harlot stood at her door to invite Lovers.

‖ Or, O great men. Psal. 62. 9. ‖ Or, to mean men. 4. Unto you, ‖ O men, I call, and my voice is ‖ to the sons of men h.

h To all men without exception, even to the meanest, who are thus called, Psal. 49. 2.

† Heb. subtilty. 5. O ye simple i, understand † wisdom; and ye fools k, be ye of an understanding heart.

i Who want knowledge and experience, and are easily deceived. k Wilful and obstinate sinners.

† Heb. princely things. 6. Hear, for I will speak of † excellent things l; and the opening of my lips shall be right things.

l Heb. of Princely things: worthy of Princes to learn and practise them. Or, such as excel common things as much as Princes do ordinary persons.

† Heb. the abomination of my lips. 7. For my mouth shall speak m truth, and wickedness is † an abomination to my lips n.

m Heb. shall meditate, i.e. shall speak not rashly, and hastily, but what I have well considered and digested. n I hate to speak it; therefore you may be assured that I shall not deceive you.

† Heb. wreathed. 8. All the words of my mouth o are in righteousness, there is nothing † froward or perverse in them p.

o All my Precepts, Promises, Threatnings, &c. p Not the least mixture of vanity, or errour, or folly in them, as there is in the words of the wisest Philosophers, &c.

9. They are all plain q to him that understandeth r, and right to them that find knowledge s.

q Evident and clear to their minds: or, right, just and good. r Either to him who with an honest mind applies himself to the study of them in the diligent use of all the means appointed by God to that end: or to him whose mind God hath enlightned by his Spirit, though they seem otherwise to ignorant and carnal-minded men. s That are truly wise and discerning persons and taught of God.

10. Receive my instruction, and not silver t; and knowledge rather than choice gold.

t. i.e. Rather than silver, as such negative expressions are understood, Gen. 45. 8. Exod. 16. 8. Jer. 7. 22. & 16. 14, 15. and in many other places. Though withal he seems to intimate the inconsistency of these two studies and designs, and the great hinderance which the love of riches gives to the study of wisdom.

* Job 28. 15. Psal. 19. 10. & 119. 127. Ch. 3. 14, 15. & 16. 16. ‖ Or, subtilty. 11. * For wisdom is better than rubies; and all the things that may be desired, are not to be compared to it.

12. I wisdom dwell with ‖ prudence t, and find out knowledge u of witty inventions x.

t I do not content my self with high Speculations, but my inseparable Companion is Prudence to govern all my own actions and to direct the actions of others, by good counsels. This he saith, because some persons have much wit and knowledge, and nothing of discretion. u i.e. I know them as clearly and certainly as if I had found them out by diligent searching. Or, I find out, is put for I help men to find out, as the Spirit is said to intercede, Rom. 8. 26. when it helpeth us to do so. x Of all ingenious designs and contrivances for the service and glory of God, and for the good of our selves and others. But why may it not be rendred, of wicked devices, as this very word is translated, Prov. 12. 2. & 14. 17. & 24. 8. For surely this is one great work of Prudence to discover and so avoid all evil counsels or devices, and the effects of them. But this I propose with submission, because I have not the concurrence of any Interpreter in this Exposition.

13. The fear of the LORD y is to hate evil z: pride a and arrogancy, and the evil way b, and the froward mouth c do I hate.

y Which he had before noted to be the beginning of wisdom, Ch. 1. 7. z It consists in a careful abstinence from all sin, and that not from carnal or prudential motives, but from a true dislike and hatred of it. a Which he mentions first as that which is most hateful to God, and most opposite to true wisdom and to the fear of God, which constantly produce humility. b All wicked actions, especially sinful customs and courses. c False doctrines, and bad counsels and deceits.

† Heb. strength is mine. 14. Counsel is mine, and sound wisdom d: I am understanding e, † I have strength f.

d All solid and substantial, and useful, yea essential wisdom is natural and essential to me, for the word properly signifies essence. e By my nature and essence, as was now said. Or, I am the Author of Understanding; as Joh. 17. 3. This is life eternal, (i.e.) this is the cause or means of it. f Courage and resolution to execute all my counsels, and to conquer all difficulties.

* Dan. 2. 21. Rom. 13. 1. 15. * By me kings reign g, and princes decree justice h.

g Either, 1. They get their Kingdoms by mine appointment and providence. Or rather, 2. they rule their Kingdoms wisely, and justly, and happily by my counsel and assistance. For this best suits with the next clause. h Their injustice or wickedness is from themselves, but all the just and good things which they do, they owe to my conduct.

16. By me princes rule, and nobles, even all the judges of the earth.

* Jam. 1. 5. 17. I love them that love me i, and * those that seek me early k shall find me.

i I do not despise their love, though it be but a small and inconsiderable thing to me, but I kindly accept it, and will recompense it with my love and favour. k i.e. With sincere affection, and great diligence, and above all other persons or things in the world. Which he mentions as the effect and evidence of their love: for otherwise all men pretend to love God.

* Chap. 3. 16. 18. * Riches and honour are with me; yea, durable riches and righteousness l.

l Which he mentions here, either, 1. as the best and surest way to get and to keep riches, for Estates unjustly gotten quickly vanish, as is manifest both from Scripture and from common observation. Or, 2. to signifie that this wisdom gives both worldly, and spiritual or heavenly blessings together to its followers, whereas God gives riches alone to ungodly men, and they are to expect no other portion.

* Chap. 3. 14. 19. * My fruit is better than gold, yea, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver.

‖ Or, walk. 20. I ‖ lead in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment m.

m Keeping at an equal distance from both extreams, and from the very borders of them: which is called a putting away iniquity far from us, Job 22. 23.

21. That I may cause those that love me, to inherit substance n: and I will fill their treasures.

n Substantial, and true, and satisfying happiness: which is here here oppoſed to all worldly enjoyments, which are ſaid not to be, Prov. 23. 5. which are but meer ſhadows and dreams of felicity.

22. The LORD poſſeſſed me o in the beginning p of his way q, before his works of old.

o As his Son by Eternal Generation, who was from Eternity with him, as is ſaid, Joh. 1. 1. and in him as he alſo was in me, Joh. 14. 10. p Yea and before the beginning, as it is largely expreſſed in the following verſes. q Either, 1. of his counſels or decrees. Or rather, 2. of his works of Creation, as it follows.

23. I was ſet up r from everlaſting, from the beginning s, or ever the earth t was.

r Heb. anointed, ordained or conſtituted to be the Perſon by whom the Father reſolved to do all his works, firſt to create, and then to uphold and govern and judge, and afterwards to redeem and ſave the World; all which works are particularly aſcribed to the Son of God, as is manifeſt from Joh. 1. 1, &c. Col. 1. 16, 17. Heb. 1. 2. and many other places, as we may ſee hereafter in their ſeveral places. s Before which there was nothing but a vaſt Eternity. t Which he mentions, becauſe this, together with the Heaven, was the firſt of God's viſible works.

24 When there were no depths u, I was brought forth x: when there were no fountains abounding with water.

u No abyſs or deep waters either mixed with the earth, as they were at firſt, or ſeparated from it. x Begotten of my Father's Eſſence.

† Heb. ſunk. 25. Before the mountains were † ſetled y; before the hills, was I brought forth.

y Or, fixed by their roots in the earth.

26. While as yet he had not made the earth z, nor the ‖ fields a, nor ‖ the higheſt part b of the duſt of the world c.

z i.e. The dry Land called Earth after it was ſeparated from the Waters, Gen. 1. 10. a The plain and open parts of the Earth diſtinguiſhed from the Mountains and Hills, and the Valleys incloſed between them. b Or, the firſt part, or beginning: or, the beſt part, Heb. the Head: that which exceeds other parts in riches or fruitfulneſs: which he ſeems to diſtinguiſh from the common Fields. c Of this lower part of the World which conſiſteth of duſt.

‖ Or, a circle. 27. When he prepared the heavens, I was there d: when he ſet ‖ a compaſs upon the face of the depth e:

d Not as an idle Spectator, but as a co-worker with my Father. e. i.e. Of that great and deep abyſs of Water and Earth mixed together, which is called both Earth and Water and the deep, Gen. 1. 2. When he made this lower World round, or in the form of a Globe agreeable to the form of the upper World.

† Heb. the ſkies. 28. When he eſtabliſhed f † the clouds above; when he ſtrengthned the fountains g of the deep h:

f Heb. ſtrengthned, by his Word and Decree, which alone upholds the Clouds in the Air, which of themſelves are thin and weak Bodies, and would quickly be diſſolved or diſperſed. g When he ſhut up the ſeveral Fountains in the Cavities of the Earth, and kept them there as it were by a ſtrong hand for the uſe of mankind. h Which have their Original from the deep, either from the Sea, or from the Abyſs of Waters in the Bowels of the Earth.

* Gen. 1. 9, 10. Job 38. 10, 11. Pſal. 104. 9. Jer. 5. 22. 29. * When he gave to the ſea his decree i, that the waters ſhould not paſs his commandment k: when he appointed l the foundations of the earth m.

i Or, his bound or limits, to wit, thoſe parts of the Earth which border upon it. k i.e. Not overflow the Earth. l Or, laid. m Either, 1. the Center of the Earth: Or, 2. the Earth it ſelf which is the Foundation of the World: Or rather, 3. the firm ſtanding of the Earth upon its Foundations notwithſtanding all the aſſaults which the waters of the Sea or within the Earth make againſt it: which is a ſingular work of God's Providence.

* Joh. 1. 1. ‖ Or, a foſter child. † Heb. ſporting. 30. * Then I was by him n, as ‖ one brought up with him o: and I was daily his delight, † rejoycing always before him p:

n Converſant with him, and united to him, as was ſaid before. o As one tenderly and dearly beloved by him. p He and I had conſtant and intimate and ſweet converſe together.

† Heb. ſporting. 31. † Rejoycing in the habitable part of his earth q, and my delights were with the ſons of men r.

q In contemplating the wonderful wiſdom and goodneſs of God in the making and ordering of all his Creatures, and of Man eſpecially. r To uphold them by my Power and Providence, to reveal my Self and my Fathers mind and will to them from Age to Age, to aſſume their Nature, and to redeem and ſave them, which I would not do for the fallen Angels.

32. Now therefore s hearken unto me, O ye children: for * bleſſed are they that keep my ways.

s Seeing I have ſuch a true love to you, and ſeeing I am ſo thoroughly acquainted with my Fathers mind, and ſo excellently qualified to be your Counſeller and Ruler.

* Pſ. 119. 1, 2, & 128. 1. Luke 11. 28.

33. Hear inſtruction, and be wiſe, and refuſe it not t.

t Or, do not make it void, or unprofitable to you by your own ſloth or wilfulneſs.

34. Bleſſed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, waiting at the poſts of my doors u.

u As Servants and Clients, and others wait at the doors of Princes or Perſons of eminency for place or power, or wiſdom, that they may be admitted to ſpeak or converſe with them.

35. For whoſo findeth me, findeth life, and ſhall * † obtain favour of the LORD.

* Chap. 9. 11. & 12. 2. † Heb. bring forth.

36. But he that ſinneth againſt me x, wrongeth his own ſoul y: all they that hate me z, love death a.

x By the neglect or contempt of, or rebellion againſt my commands. y Is guilty of ſelf-murder and of Soul murder. z (i. e.) Who reject and diſobey my counſels and live wickedly, which in God's account is an hating of him, as is here implyed and elſewhere, as Exod. 20. 5. Deut. 7. 10. & 32. 41. a Not directly or intentionally, but by conſequence, becauſe they love thoſe practices which they know will bring certain deſtruction upon them.

CHAP. IX.

1. WIſdom hath built her houſe a: ſhe hath hewn out her ſeven b pillars c.

a For the reception and entertainment of her Gueſts, as appears from the following paſſages. This houſe is oppoſed to the Harlots houſe mentioned, Prov. 7. 8. and it is to be underſtood, either, 1. of the heavenly Houſe, or the Palace of Glory: Or rather, 2. of the Church which Chriſt, the Wiſdom of the Father, hath erected and eſtabliſhed in the World, in which this following Feaſt is made, which is called God's Houſe, 1 Tim. 3. 15. Heb. 3, 3, 4. b (i.e.) Many Pillars; whereby is intimated both the beauty and the ſtability of the Church. c Prophets and Apoſtles, and Miniſters of holy things, which in Scripture are called Pillars, as Gal. 2. 9. and elſewhere.

2. * She hath killed † her beaſts d; ſhe hath mingled her wine e; ſhe hath alſo furniſhed her table f.

* Mat. 22. 3, &c. † Heb. her killing.

d (i. e.) Made proviſion for the Gueſts: which is meant of the Ordinances, Gifts, Graces, Comforts, and eternal Felicities, which God doth offer and give to men in and by the Church. e Either, 1. with Spices, to make it ſtrong and delightful, this mixed Wine being mentioned as the beſt, Prov. 23. 29, 30. Or, 2. with Water, as they uſed to do in thoſe hot Countries, partly for refreſhment, and partly for wholeſomneſs. Whereby alſo may be intimated, that Wiſdom teacheth us temperance in the uſe of our comforts. f With all neceſſaries, and now waits for the Gueſts.

3. She hath ſent forth her maidens g, * ſhe crieth upon † the higheſt places h of the city:

* Chap. 8. 2. † Heb. the wings of the high places.

g Her Servants to invite the Gueſts, Miniſters of the Word, whom he calls Maidens; partly for the decency of the Parable; for Wiſdom being compared to a great Princeſs, was fit to be attended upon by Maidens; and partly to ſhew that God by his Word did work ſweetly, though ſtrongly, and did allure and draw, rather than drive ſinners to repentance. h Either upon the tops of the Houſes which were flat: Or rather from ſuch high Seats as thoſe from which Judges delivered their Sentences, and Officers made Proclamations, for the conveniency of the Peoples better hearing.

4. Whoſo is ſimple i, let him turn in hither: as for him that wanteth underſtanding k, ſhe ſaith to him, i Ignorant, and weak, and ſubject to deluſion, and willing to learn: to ſhew that Wiſdom rejects thoſe Scholars who are proud and ſelf-conceited. k Heb. heart, which ſignifies underſtanding, Jer. 5. 21. Hoſ. 7. 11.

5. * Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine, which I have mingled.

* Cant. 5. 1. Iſa. 55. 1.

6. Forſake the fooliſh l, and live: and go in the way of underſtanding m.

l (i.e.) The wicked, and their courſes and ſociety: you muſt either forſake them or me, for we are irreconcileable enemies. m Which leads to it, and is preſcribed by it.

7. He that reproveth a ſcorner n, getteth to himſelf ſhame o: and he that rebuketh a wicked man, getteth himſelf a blot p.

n The connexion may be conceived thus, Having invited the ſimple, he forbids the invitation of ſcorners: Or thus, He ſheweth who he meant by the fooliſh, v.6. even ſcorners and wicked men, as they are here called, and he preſſeth his laſt advice of forſaking them, becauſe there was no good, but hurt to be got, by converſation with them. o Partly from the ſcorner, who will revile and deride him, and partly from others, becauſe he is fruſtrated in his deſign and hope, and by his imprudence hath brought an inconvenience upon himſelf: p A cenſure or reproach.

* Mat. 7. 6. 8. * Reprove not a ſcorner q, leſt he hate thee r: rebuke a wiſe man s, and he will love thee t.

q An obſtinate and incorrigible ſinner, who ſcornfully rejects and deſpiſeth the means of amendment. Thus Phyſicians deny Phyſick to perſons in deſperate condition. r Whereby thou wilt not only expoſe thy ſelf without neceſſity to his malice and rage, but alſo make thy ſelf utterly uncapable of doing him that good, which poſſibly thou mighteſt do by other more prudent and proper means. s Who is oppoſed to the Scorner, to intimate that Scorners, howſoever they are thought by themſelves or others to be witty or wiſe, yet in God's account, and in truth, are fools. t Both for that faithfulneſs and charity which he perceiveth in thee, and for that benefit which he receiveth from thee.

* Ch. 1. 5. 9. * Give inſtruction u to a wiſe man, and he will be yet wiſer, teach a juſt man x, and he will increaſe in learning.

u In the Hebrew it is only, give: for as receiving is put for learning, Prov. 1. 3. ſo giving is put for teaching, both in Scripture and in other Authors: of which ſee my Latin Synopſis. x Called a wiſe Man in the former branch; to intimate that good men are the only wiſe men.

* Job 28. 28. Pſal. 111. 10. Chap. 1. 7. 10. * The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wiſdom: and the knowledge of the holy y is underſtanding z.

y Either, 1. of holy men, whether ſuch as all Saints learn, or rather ſuch as the holy men of God, the Servants of this Wiſdom, teach from God's Word: Or rather, 2. of holy things, the Hebrew word being here taken in the Neuter Gender, as it is Numb. 5. 17. and elſewhere: for this ſeems beſt to anſwer to the fear of the Lord in the other branch. z Is the only true, and neceſſary, and uſeful knowledge.

* Ch. 10. 27. 11. * For by me thy days ſhall be multiplied: and the years of thy life ſhall be increaſed.

12. If thou be wiſe, thou ſhalt be wiſe for thy ſelf a; † but if thou ſcorneſt, thou alone ſhalt bear it b.

a Thou doſt not profit me, but thy ſelf by it: I adviſe thee for thine own good. b The blame and miſchief of it falls wholly upon thee, not upon me, or my Word, or Miniſters, who have warned thee.

* Ch. 7. 11. 13. * A fooliſh woman c is clamorous d, ſhe is ſimple and knoweth nothing e.

c By which he underſtands, either, 1. folly, which is oppoſite to that Wiſdom of which he hath been ſo long diſcourſing, and ſo it may include all wickedneſs, either in principle, as Idolatry, Hereſie, &c. or in practice. Or, 2. the Harlot: which with ſubmiſſion, ſeems moſt probable to me, partly becauſe all the following deſcription exactly agrees to her, eſpecially what is ſaid, v. 17. as alſo v. 18. which in effect was ſaid of the Harlot before, Ch. 2. 18. & 5. 5. and partly becauſe ſuch tranſitions, from diſcourſing of Wiſdom, to a diſcourſe of Harlots, are frequent in Solomon, as we have ſeen, Ch. 2. 16. & 5. 3. & 7. 5. d Speaks loudly, that ſhe may be heard, and vehemently, that perſons might be moved by her perſwaſions. e To wit, aright, nothing that is good, nothing for her good, though ſhe be ſubtil in little artifices for her own wicked ends.

14. For ſhe ſitteth at the door of her houſe f on a ſeat, in the high places of the city.

f Which notes her idleneſs, and impudence, and diligence, in watching for occaſions of ſin.

15. To call paſſengers, who go right on their ways g:

g Who were going innocently and directly about their buſineſs, without any unchaſt deſign; for others needed none of thoſe invitations or offers, but went to her of their own accord. And beſides ſuch lewd perſons take a greater pleaſure in corrupting the innocent.

16. Whoſo is ſimple h, let him turn in hither: and as for him that wanteth underſtanding, ſhe ſaith to him, h Which title is not given to them by her, for ſuch a reproach would not have allured them, but driven them away; but by Solomon, who repreſents the matter of her invitation in his own words, that he might diſcover the truth of the buſineſs, and thereby diſſwade and deter thoſe whom ſhe invited.

* Ch. 20. 17. † Heb. of ſecrecies. 17. * Stolen waters i are ſweet k, and bread † eaten in ſecret is pleaſant.

i By which he underſtandeth, either, 1. Idolatry, or other wickedneſſes, which in Solomon's time before his fall were publickly forbidden and puniſhed, but privately practiſed. Or rather, 2. Adultery. k Partly from the difficulty of obtaining them; partly from the art which men uſe in contriving ſuch ſecret ſins; and partly becauſe the very prohibition renders it more grateful to corrupt Nature.

18. But he knoweth not l that the dead are there, and that her gueſts are in the depths of hell.

l (i.e.) He doth not conſider it ſeriouſly, whereby he proveth his folly.

CHAP. X.

|| Ch. 15. 20. 1. THE proverbs of Solomon a. || A wiſe b ſon maketh a glad father c: but a fooliſh ſon is the heavineſs of his mother d.

a Properly ſo called, for the foregoing Chapters, though they had this Title in the beginning of them, yet in truth were only a Preface or preparation to them, containing a general Exhortation to the ſtudy and exerciſe of wiſdom to ſtir up the minds of men to the greater attention and regard to all its Precepts, whereof ſome here follow. Of which in general theſe things are fit to be obſerved, to help us in the underſtanding of them. 1. That theſe ſentences are generally diſtinct and independent, having no coherence one with another, as many other parts of Scripture have: 2. That ſuch ſentences being very ſhort, as their nature requires, more is underſtood in them than is expreſſed, and the Cauſes are commonly to be gathered from the Effects, and the Effects from the Cauſes, and one oppoſite from another, as we ſhall ſee. 3. That they are delivered by way of compariſon and oppoſition, which for the moſt part is between Virtue and Vice, but ſometimes is between two Virtues, or two Vices. b (i.e.) Prudent, and eſpecially virtuous and godly, as this word is commonly meant in this Book, and in many other Scriptures. c And a glad Mother too; for both Parents are to be underſtood in both branches, as is evident from the nature of the thing which affects both of them, and from parallel places, as Ch. 17. 25. & 30. 17. although one only be expreſſed in each branch, for the greater Elegancy. d The occaſion of her great ſorrow, which is decently aſcribed to the Mothers, rather than to the Fathers, becauſe their paſſions are moſt vehement, and make deepeſt impreſſion in them.

* Chap. 11. 4. 2. * Treaſures of wickedneſs e profit nothing f: but righteouſneſs g delivereth from death h.

e Either 1. All worldly Treaſures and Riches, which are called the Mammon of Unrighteouſneſs, Luke 16. 9. of which ſee the Reaſons there, to which Righteouſneſs or Holineſs, which are ſpiritual and heavenly Riches, may be fitly oppoſed. Or, 2. Such Treaſures as are got by any ſort of unjuſt or wicked practices. f They do the poſſeſſor no good, but, which is implied from the oppoſite member, much hurt; they do not only not deliver him from death, but oft expoſe him to it, either from men, who take away his Life that they may enjoy his Wealth, or from God, who ſhortens his days, and makes his death more terrible, as being attended with guilt, and with the ſecond death. g Either, 1. True Holineſs of Heart and Life. Or, 2. Juſtice and Equity in the getting of Riches, or an Eſtate honeſtly obtained, which may be fitly oppoſed to Treaſures of Wickedneſs. Or, 3. A liberal and charitable uſe of Riches, which is oft called Righteouſneſs, as Pſal. 112. 9. Dan. 4. 27. 2 Cor. 9. 10, &c. and is indeed but an act of Juſtice, of which ſee on Prov. 3. 27. which alſo is conveniently oppoſed to an unjuſt getting of Riches; and ſo this contains a great Paradox, yet a certain truth, that the charitable laying out of Mony is more profitable to men than an unjuſt and covetous laying it up. h Oft times from temporal death, becauſe men generally love, and honour, and will aſſiſt ſuch perſons in caſes of danger, and God gives them the bleſſing of a long Life; and always from eternal death, when ſuch Charity proceeds from a ſincere and honeſt mind, and a good Conſcience.

* Pſal. 33. 19. & 37. 19. 25. || Or, the wicked for their wickedneſs. 3. * The LORD will not ſuffer the ſoul of the righteous to famiſh i: but he caſteth away || the ſubſtance k of the wicked l.

i Will preſerve them from Famine, according to his Promiſes, Pſal. 34. 10. and elſewhere, which, as other temporal Promiſes, is not to be underſtood ſimply and univerſally, but with-with this limitation, except this be neceſſary for God's Glory, which in all reaſon ſhould over-rule the Creatures good, and for their own greater benefit. For to ſay nothing of eternal Felicities which follow every good mans death, it is certainly in ſome times and caſes, a leſs evil for men to be killed with Famine, than to ſurvive to ſee and feel thoſe miſeries which are coming upon them, and upon the Land where they live. k As this word is uſed, Pſal. 52. 7. or the Wickedneſs, (i. e.) the Wealth gotten by wickedneſs, as Righteouſneſs, v. 2. is by divers underſtood of an Eſtate got with Righteouſneſs. l Who by that means ſhall be expoſed to want and Famine.

* Ch. 12. 24. & 19. 15. * Chap. 13. 4. & 21. 5.

4. * He becometh poor, that dealeth with a ſlack hand m: but * the hand of the diligent maketh rich n.

m Negligently and ſlothfully, as appears from the diligence oppoſed to it in the next branch, and from the uſe of this word in this ſenſe, Prov. 12. 24, 27. & 19. 15. Jer. 48. 10. Heb. with a deceitful hand, ſo called, partly becauſe it ſeems and pretends to do ſomething, when in truth it doth nothing; and partly becauſe ſuch perſons uſually endeavour to maintain themſelves by deceit and wickedneſs, which they cannot or will not do by honeſt labour and diligence. n Not by it ſelf nor neceſſarily, as is manifeſt from Experience, and is noted, Eccleſ. 9. 11. but through God's bleſſing, which commonly is given to ſuch, by comparing this verſe with v. 22. here following.

5. He that gathereth o in ſummer p, is a wiſe ſon: but he that ſleepeth in harveſt is a ſon that cauſeth ſhame q.

o The fruits of his field. p In harveſt, as it follows, which is a part of Summer. He that watcheth for and improveth the proper ſeaſons and opportunities of doing good to himſelf, and to others. q Both to himſelf for his folly, and that Poverty and miſery cauſed by it, and to his Parents, to whoſe negligent or evil education ſuch things are oft, and ſometimes juſtly imputed.

* Ver. 11.

6. Bleſſings are upon the head of the juſt r: but * violence covereth the mouth of the wicked s.

r All ſorts of bleſſings are wiſhed to them by Men, and conferred upon them by God. He ſaith, upon their head, either to ſhew that theſe Bleſſings come from above: and that openly in the ſight of the World, ſo that he can confidently ſpeak of them to God's Praiſe, and to his own Comfort and Honour; or becauſe Bleſſings were commonly pronounced by men with this Ceremony, by laying their hands upon the Head of the party bleſſed. s Violence (either 1. Their own Violence or Injuſtice, which may be here put for the fruit or puniſhment of it, as Iniquity is oft put for the puniſhment of Iniquity. Or, 2. Violence, or the violent and injurious and miſchievous practices of others againſt them, deſerved by their own Violence committed againſt others, and inflicted upon them by the curſe and righteous judgment of God) ſhall cover the mouth of the wicked, (i. e.) ſhall fall upon them. This Phraſe of covering their Mouth, is uſed either, 1. With alluſion to the ancient cuſtom of covering the Mouths and Faces of condemned Malefactors; of which ſee Eſth. 7. 8. Job 9. 24. Or, 2. To ſignifie that the Curſe and Judgment of God upon them ſhould be ſo manifeſtly juſt, that their mouths ſhould be ſtopped, and they not be able to ſpeak a word againſt God, or for themſelves. Or, 3. to intimate that God's judgment upon them ſhould be publick and evident to all that behold them, as any covering put upon a mans mouth or face is, as for the ſame reaſon the bleſſings of the juſt were ſaid to be upon their Heads. And the Mouth may be put for the Face, or Countenance, by a Synecdoche: But this clauſe is otherwiſe rendred by divers learned Interpreters, the mouth of the wicked covereth (i. e. concealeth or ſmothereth within it ſelf, and doth not utter that) violence or injury, which he meditateth in his Heart, and deſigneth to do to others, and therefore ſhall be accurſed and miſerable. But this ſuits not ſo well with the former clauſe, wherein the Bleſſings of the juſt are not meant actively of thoſe Bleſſings which they wiſh or give to others, but paſſively of thoſe Bleſſings which others wiſh or give to them, and conſequently this violence is not underſtood of that which they do to others, but of that which is done to them by others.

* Pſal. 112. 6.

7. * The memory of the juſt is bleſſed t: but the name of the wicked ſhall rot u.

t (i. e.) Honourable and acceptable to thoſe who mention them. Compare Job 31. 20. Pſal. 62. 5. u Shall periſh, and be curſed and deteſtable amongſt men, ſhall ſtink above ground.

8. The wiſe in heart will receive commandments x: but † a prating fool y ‖ ſhall fall z.

x Is ready to hear and obey the Counſels and Precepts of God and of Men, by which means he ſhall ſtand faſt and live. y One who is ſlow to hear, and ſwift to ſpeak, who inſtead of receiving good Admonitions, cavils, and diſputes againſt them. In the Hebrew he is called a fool of Lips, either becauſe he diſcovers the folly of his Heart by his Lips, and thereby expoſeth himſelf to the miſchief here following, or becauſe he is without heart, as is ſaid of Ephraim, Hoſ. 7. 11. or, his Heart is little worth, as is ſaid here, v. 20. or becauſe he ſpeaks raſhly without any conſideration. Or, it may be rendred, a fool by his lips, (i. e.) by his fooliſh and wicked ſpeeches, contrary to the commands of God, by talking much and ill, when it is more comely and neceſſary for him to hear and receive Inſtruction from others. z To wit, into miſchief: or, be puniſhed, as the word is uſed, Hoſ. 4. 14. or, be beaten, as below v. 10.

* Pſal. 23. 4.

9. * He that walketh uprightly a, walketh ſurely b: but he that perverteth his way c ſhall be known d.

a Who is ſincere, and juſt, and faithful in his dealings with God and with men. b Or, ſecurely, or confidently, as the word properly ſignifies, and is here rendred by all the ancient Interpreters, and by moſt of the others, quietly reſting upon God's Favour, and gracious Providence for his protection, and being ſupported by the Teſtimony of a good Conſcience, and therefore not fearing nor caring who knows or obſerves his Actions, which he endeavours to approve both to God and to men. c That walks perverſly, or frowardly, or in crooked and ſinful paths, that dealeth hypocritically and deceitfully with God, or with men, uſing all poſſible crafts to conceal his wickedneſs. d His wickedneſs ſhall be publickly diſcovered, and ſo he ſhall be expoſed to all that ſhame and puniſhment which his ſins deſerve, and which he thought by his cunning practices to avoid.

* Chap. 6. 13. * Ver. 18. ‖ Or, ſhall be beaten.

10. * He that winketh with the eye e cauſeth ſorrow f: but g * a prating fool h ‖ ſhall fall.

e That ſecretly and cunningly deſigns miſchiefs againſt others, as this Phraſe is uſed, Pſal. 35. 19. Prov. 6. 13. f To others, and afterwards to himſelf. g Or, and, as it is in the Hebrew: for vice is not here oppoſed to virtue, as it is in many other Proverbs, but one vice is compared with another. h Who is ſo far from ſuch deceits, that he runs into the other extream, and uttereth all his mind, as is ſaid of the Fool, Prov. 29. 11. and thereby ſpeaks many things offenſive to others, and miſchievous to himſelf.

* Pſal. 37. 30, 31. Ch. 14. 14. * Ver. 6.

11. * The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life i: but * violence covereth the mouth of the wicked k.

i Continually ſending forth Waters of Life, or ſuch good and wholſom words, as are very refreſhing and uſeful both to themſelves and others, for the preſerving of their natural Life, and for the promoting of their ſpiritual and eternal Life. We have the ſame Phraſe, Pſal. 36. 9. k The ſame words were uſed before, v. 6. where ſee the Notes; and they may be underſtood in the ſame ſence here, and the oppoſition of this clauſe to the former, may be conceived thus: As the Mouth of a good man ſpeaketh thoſe things which are good and beneficial to himſelf and others, ſo the Mouth of the wicked uttereth violence, or injury, or things injurious to others, which at laſt fall upon himſelf. But it is no new thing for the ſame words and phraſes to be taken in different ſenſes, in the ſame Chapter, and ſometimes in the ſame verſe, as Matth. 8. 22. and elſewhere; and therefore theſe words may here be, and are, by many tranſlated and interpreted thus, the mouth of the wicked covereth (i. e. concealeth,) violence or miſchief, which he plotteth againſt others. And ſo here is a double oppoſition between the Righteous and the wicked; firſt in the contrary effects, the former cauſeth Life, the latter miſchief and death; and ſecondly in the manner of producing them, the righteous doth it by uttering his words, and the wicked doth it by concealing his mind.

* 1 Cor. 13. 4. 1 Pet. 4. 8.

12. Hatred ſtirreth up ſtrifes l: but * love covereth all ſins m.

l Upon every ſlight occaſion, by filling men with ſuſpicions and ſurmiſes, whereby they imagine faults where there are none, and aggravate every ſmall offence. m Either doth not ſeverely obſerve, or doth willingly forget and forgive the Offences or Injuries of others, and ſo preventeth contention and miſchief.

13. In the lips of him that hath underſtanding wiſdom is found n: but * a rod is for the back of him o that is void of † underſtanding p.

n His Wiſdom ſheweth it ſelf in his prudent ſpeeches, by which he eſcapeth that rod which fools meet with, and gaineth that Reputation and Advantage to himſelf which fools loſe. o He may expect Rebukes and Puniſhments from God and men. p Which he ſheweth by his fooliſh words.

* Chap. 13. 3.

14. Wiſe men lay up q knowledge r: but the * mouth of the fooliſh is near deſtruction s.

q To wit, in their minds and memories, to be brought forth thence upon fit occaſions. r Whereby they may be enabled to ſpeak both what, and when it is ſeaſonable, for their own or others good. s Fools are more forward to lay out than to lay up, and for want of knowledge ſpeak much and fooliſhly, whereby they frequently bring deſtruction upon themſelves.

* Chap. 18. 11. 15. * The rich mans wealth is his ſtrong city t: the deſtruction u of the poor is their poverty.

t Either, 1. really, as money is called a defence, Eccleſ. 7. 12. becauſe it oft-times redeems a man from dangers and calamities. Or, 2. in his own conceit, as it is explained, and fully expreſſed, Chap. 18. 11. It makes him ſecure and confident. u It is the cauſe of their ruine. Or, the contrition, or the terrour, or conſternation, as others, both ancient and modern, render it. Their poverty takes away their ſpirit and courage, and fills them with fear and deſpair.

* Chap. 11. 30. 16. * The labour of the righteous tendeth to life x: the fruit y of the wicked to ſin z.

x Either, 1. the deſign of his labour is only this, that he may have wherewith to live honeſtly, without ſinful ſhifts. Or, 2. the fruit or effect of his labour or induſtry (as this word, labour, is moſt commonly underſtood, and this beſt anſwers to the following clauſe, where fruit is put inſtead of this labour) is the preſervation, and prolongation of this life, and the obtaining of eternal life, to which an honeſt and conſciencious diligence in mens worldly callings doth in ſome manner contribute. y The fruit of all their labours and endeavours. z Tendeth to ſin, ſerves only for fuel to mens pride, and luxury, and worldlineſs, and by that means oft cauſeth temporal, and always, without repentance, eternal death.

* Chap. 6. 23. 17. He is in * the way of life a that keepeth inſtruction b: but he that refuſeth reproof, || erreth c.

a Which leadeth to Life and bleſſedneſs. b That obſerveth and obeyeth the wholeſom Counſels of God, and of good men. c To wit, from the way of Life, or into the ways of ſin, and ſo of death. Heb. leadeth into errour, or ſeduceth, to wit, himſelf, as appears by the oppoſition of this to the former clauſe; he wittingly and willingly expoſeth himſelf to temptation and wickedneſs, becauſe he rejecteth that admonition which is a proper preſervative from it.

18. He that hideth hatred with lying lips d, and he that uttereth a ſlander e, is a fool f.

d With flattering words and falſe pretences of friendſhip. e Heb. he (i.e.) both of them, one no leſs than the other. So he condemneth two oppoſite vices, ſecret Hatred, and manifeſt Slander. f Becauſe a ſinner, and becauſe the miſchief of theſe things will fall upon himſelf.

19. In the multitude of words there wanteth not ſin g: but he that refraineth his lips h is wiſe.

g Men that love and commonly uſe much talking, do frequently run into many miſcarriages, becauſe ſuch perſons, for the moſt part, want wiſdom to order their words aright, Eccleſ. 5. 3. and ſpeak haſtily without care and conſideration. h That forbeareth to utter what cometh into his mind, before he hath weighed whether it be true, and fit to be ſpoken, or not.

20. The tongue of the juſt is as choice ſilver i: the heart k of the wicked is little worth.

i Of great worth and uſe, bringing credit to himſelf, and much benefit to others. k And conſequently the tongue, which ſpeaketh out of the abundance of the heart, Mat. 12. 34.

† Heb. of heart. 21. The lips of the righteous feed many l: but fools die for want † of wiſdom m.

l By their wiſe and pious Diſcourſes, Counſels, and Comforts, which are ſo many evidences of their wiſdom. m They have not wiſdom to feed or preſerve themſelves, much leſs to feed others.

22. The bleſſing of the LORD, it maketh rich n, and he addeth no ſorrow with it o.

n Riches are not got by wiſdom or diligence, but only by God's favour and bleſſing. o (i.e.) with that bleſſing which gives riches, but gives them content and comfort in their riches, which is a ſingular gift and bleſſing of God, of which ſee Eccleſ. 2. 24, 26. & 3. 13. & 5. 17, 18. whereas the riches which wicked men get, are attended with God's curſe, with many diſcontents, with tormenting cares and fears, with horrours of conſcience, and with the juſt dread of a ſad account to God for them.

* Chap. 14. 9. & 15. 21. 23. * It is a ſport p to a fool to do miſchief q: but a man of underſtanding hath wiſdom r.

p He doth it with eaſe and delight, and without any ſhame, or remorſe, or fear. q Or, as others, to work wickedneſs, yea, great and premeditated wickedneſs, as the Hebrew word properly ſignifies. r Whereby he is kept from committing wickedneſs, and eſpecially from ſporting himſelf with it. But this clauſe is by divers learned Interpreters rendred thus, and, or ſo is Wiſdom to a man of underſtanding, it is a ſport or pleaſure to him to practiſe wiſdom or piety. Which Tranſlation makes the Oppoſition more evident.

24. The fear s of the wicked it ſhall come upon him: but the deſire of the righteous ſhall be granted t.

s The evils which he feareth, or hath cauſe to fear, as fear is oft taken. t God will not only prevent the miſchiefs which they fear, but grant them the good things which they deſire.

25. As the whirlwind paſſeth u, ſo is the wicked no more x: but * the righteous is an everlaſting foundation y.

* Chap. 12. 3, 7. Mat. 7. 24, 25. & 16. 18.

u Which is ſuddenly, though with great noiſe and violence. x His power and felicity is loſt in an inſtant. y Or, hath an everlaſting, &c. His hope and happineſs is built upon a ſure and unmoveable foundation.

26. As vinegar to the teeth z, and as ſmoak to the eyes: ſo is the ſluggard a to them that ſend him.

z Which by its cold and ſharpneſs offends. a Unſerviceable and vexatious.

b Partly becauſe it gives them a title to the Promiſe of long life, as well as to other Promiſes; partly becauſe it gladdeth the heart, which doth good like a Medicine, Prov. 17. 22. and preſerves a man from thoſe wicked practices which tend to the ſhorning of the days.

* Job 8. 13. & 11. 20. Pſal. 112. 10. 28. The hope of the righteous ſhall be gladneſs c: but the * expectation of the wicked ſhall periſh d.

c Though at preſent it be mixed with doubts, and fears, and diſappointments, yet at laſt it ſhall be accompliſhed, and turned into enjoyment. d Shall be utterly fruſtrated, and ſo end in ſorrow.

29. The way of the LORD e is ſtrength f to the upright, but deſtruction g ſhall be to the workers of iniquity.

e Either, 1. The way or courſe of God's Providence in the government of the World. Or rather, 2. The way of God's Precepts, as God's way or ways are moſt commonly underſtood in Scripture, or walking in God's ways; for this is oppoſed to working iniquity in the next clauſe. f Gives ſtrength, i.e. either courage and confidence: or ſupport and protection from that deſtruction here following. g Or, terrour or conſternation, as the word properly ſignifies, and many render it. The deſign of this verſe is to ſhew that Piety is the only true Policy.

* Pſal. 37. 22. & 125. 1. 30. * The righteous ſhall never be removed h: but the wicked ſhall not inhabit the earth i.

* Pſal. 37. 30. 31. * The mouth of the juſt bringeth forth k wiſdom l: but the froward tongue ſhall be cut out m.

10. When it goeth well with the righteous u, the city rejoiceth x: and when the wicked perish, there is shouting y.

u When such men are encouraged and advanced into places of Power and Trust. x The Citizens or Subjects of that Government rejoyce, because they confidently expect Justice, and Tranquillity, and many other benefits, by their administration of publick affairs. y A common rejoycing, partly for the just vengeance of God upon them who have been the instruments of so much mischief, and partly for their deliverance from such publick grievances and burdens of the Land.

11. By the blessing of the upright z the city is exalted: but it is overthrown by the mouth of the wicked a.

z Wherewith they bless the City, to wit, by their sincere Prayers, and wise and wholsom Counsels. a By their Curses, and Oaths, and Blasphemies, and wicked and pernicious Counsels, whereby they both provoke God, and mislead men to their own ruine.

He forbeareth all such expressions against his neighbour. Or, 2. He silently and patiently bears these Reproaches from his neighbour, and doth not render one reproach for another; wherein he sheweth true Wisdom. Or, 3. He desireth and hearkneth to the Counsels of others. Any of these ways the opposition is sufficiently evident.

k Whose condition he doth not throughly understand, and therefore knows not his own danger. l Of which see on Prov. 6. 1.

16. A gracious woman m retaineth honour n: and o strong men retain riches.

m Heb. a Woman of grace and favour, (i. e.) one who by her meekness, and modesty, and prudence, and other Vertues renders her self acceptable and amiable to God and to men. n Or, holdeth fast her honour, or good reputation, with no less care and resolution, than strong men do Riches, as it here follows. o Or, as; for so this conjunction is oft used in this Book, of which we have seen some, and may afterward see more instances.

17. The merciful man doeth good to his own soul p: but he that is cruel q, troubleth his own flesh r.

p (i. e.) To himself, because his liberality shall turn to his own infinite advantage both in this life, and in the next. q Hard-hearted and uncharitable to others. r Either, 1. His own Children or Kindred, who are commonly expressed by this very word, for whose sakes he is thus covetous and uncharitable, that he may hoard it up for them: but they, saith the wise Man, shall have nothing but trouble and vexation, and God's curse with it. Or, 2. himself denominated here from his flesh or body as in the former Branch from his Soul. But he may seem to mention his flesh rather than his Soul, to intimate that the mischiefs of his covetousness shall not only fall upon his Soul which he despiseth, but upon his flesh or outward Man, which is the only thing that he feareth.

18. The wicked worketh a deceitful work s: but to him that soweth t righteousness u, shall be a sure reward.

s A work which will deceive his expectation of that good for which he worketh. t That worketh it with constancy, and diligence, and hope of recompence, as they do who sow in Seed-time. u Good works, acts of Piety towards God, and Charity to men.

19. As righteousness tendeth to life: so he that pursueth evil x, pursueth it to his own death.

x Who are not over-taken by sin, as a good man may be, Gal. 6. 1. but studiously design it, and follow after the occasions of it earnestly, and greedily, and industriously.

20. They that are of a froward heart y, are abomination to the LORD z, but such as are upright in their way a, are his delight.

y Hypocrites, as appears from the opposition of these to the upright in the next clause: whose hearts are false to God, and contrary to their own professions. z Though by their cunning Artifices they may deceive men, and gain their good opinion and favour, yet God sees their naughty hearts, and hateth them. a In the course of their Lives and Actions. By which changing of the Phrase, from heart in the first clause, to way here, he intimates that the sincerity and hypocrisie of mens hearts are discovered, and to be judged by their conversations.

21. * Though hand joyn in hand b, the wicked shall not be unpunished c: but the seed of the righteous d shall be delivered e.

* Chap. 16. 5.

b Though they are fortified against God's judgments by a numerous Issue and Kindred, and Friends, and by mutual strong combinations or confederacies. c They shall be punished even in their own Persons, as well as in their Posterity. They shall not be able either totally to prevent God's judgment, or to delay it from coming in their days. d Not only their Persons, but their their Children. e Without any such Auxiliaries, by God's special Providence.

22. As a jewel of gold in a swines snout f, so is a fair woman which † is without discretion g.

f Which would not adorn the Swine, but only be disparaged it self. It was the custom of some of the Jews to wear Jewels upon their Noses, and some of their Neighbours wore them in their Noses. g Which disgraceth the beauty of her body by a foolish and filthy Soul.

23. The desire h of the righteous is only good: but the expectation of the wicked is wrath.

h Either, 1. properly so called. So the sence is, His desires are generally and constantly to do good to men, as wicked mens designs are to do hurt, and to execute wrath and hatred against them. Or rather, 2. the object, or event, or effect of their desire, as appears from the next clause, where expectation is clearly put for the object or event of it: And the sence of the Proverb seems to be this, The desires and expectations of the righteous shall end in their good and happiness, but the desires and expectations of wicked men shall be sadly disappointed, and end in the wrath of God, and their utter ruine.

i That giveth liberally of his Goods to the Poor: for so this Hebrew word is used, Psal. 112. 9. He hath dispersed, which is explained in the following words, he hath given to the poor. k Through God's secret blessing upon his Estate. l Heb. from what is right or just, i. e. what by the Law of God, and the Rules of general Justice, he is obliged to give: of which see Prov. 3. 27. m By God's providence secretly blasting his Estate, either in his own or his Childrens hands, as it very frequently befals covetous Wretches.

* 2 Cor. 9. 8, 9, 10. † Heb. the soul of blessing.

25. * † The liberal soul n shall be made fat o: and he that watereth shall be watered also himself p.

n Heb. the Soul of Blessing, that man who is a blessing to others, who blesseth them, i. e. doth good to them, as Blessing is oft used for a gift, as Gen. 33. 11. 1 Sam. 25. 27. 2 Cor. 9. 5. o Shall be greatly enriched both with temporal and spiritual blessings. p Possibly it is a Metaphor from a Fountain, which when it poureth forth its waters is instantly filled again, whereas if it be stopped it groweth empty, and the water seeketh another course. Others render it, he shall be a rain, i. e. he shall receive such liberal supplies from God, that he shall be able to pour forth showers of good things upon others.

26. * He that with-holdeth corn q, the people shall curse him: but blessing r shall be upon the head of him that selleth it s.

q In a time of scarcity, when others need and desire it. r The blessing of God which the people shall heartily beg for him. s Upon reasonable terms.

* Chap. 14. 22. † Pf. 7. 15, 16. & 9. 15, 16. & 10. 2. & 57. 6.

27. He that diligently t seeketh u * good, procureth favour x: * but he that seeketh mischief y, it shall come unto him z.

t Which is opposed to those who content themselves with lazy desires or cold and careless endeavours. u To do good to all men, as he hath opportunity. x With God and men. y To do any mischief or injury to others. z It shall be required either by mens malice and revenge, or by God's just judgment.

* Job 31. 24. * Pſal. 1. 3. & 92. 12, &c. Jer. 17. 8.

28. * He that trusteth in his riches a shall fall b: but * the righteous c shall flourish as a branch d.

a As his chief portion, and felicity, and ground of safety. b As a withered leaf, by comparing this clause with the latter. c Who maketh God alone, and not riches, his trust. d To wit, a green and flourishing branch.

29. He that troubleth his own house e, shall inherit the wind f: and * the fool shall be servant to the wise of heart g.

e He who bringeth trouble and misery upon himself and children, either, 1. by carelesness, slothfulness, improvidence, prodigality, or any wickedness, whereby he consumeth his Estate. So this troubling of his house may be opposed to a man's building of his house, Jer. 29. 28. Or, 2. by covetous desires and restless endeavours to heap up riches, whereby he greatly tires and troubles both himself and all his family, with excessive cares and labours, which is called coveting an evil covetousness to his house, Habak. 2. 9. f Shall be as unable to keep and enjoy what he gets as a man is to hold the wind in his fist, or to feed and satisfie himself with it: he shall be brought to poverty. g By which means such a troublesome fool shall through his extreme necessity be forced even to sell himself to such as are wiser.

30. The fruit of the righteous h is * a tree of life i, and he that † * winneth souls k, is wise l.

h (i. e.) Which he produceth, his discourses and his whole conversation. i Is like the fruit of the Tree of Life, is a great preserver of this life, and a procurer of eternal life, not only to himself, but to others also. k Heb. that catcheth Souls, as a Fowler doth Birds, that maketh it his design and business, and useth all his skill and diligence to gain Souls to God, and to pluck them out of the snare of the Devil. l Sheweth himself to be a truly wise and good man. But this clause is and may be rendred thus, and he that is wise (the same with the Righteous in the former clause) winneth Souls, or bringeth them to life. So this clause agrees very well with the former.

31. Behold the righteous shall be recompensed m in the earth n: much more o the wicked and the sinner p.

m (i. e.) Punished for his sins, as appears from the next clause, the general word being here used of this one particular, by a Synecdoche. n Whereby he intimates, that all his sufferings are confined to this World, which is an unspeakable felicity. o They shall be punished more certainly and more severely, either in this life, or in the next. p Those who make sin their great study, and daily and most delightful exercise. Compare this Verse with 1 Pet. 4. 18. which is a good Comment upon it.

CHAP. XII.

1. WHoso loveth instruction a, loveth knowledge b: * but he that hateth reproof, is brutish c.

* Chap. 13. 1.

a Admonition or reproof, as appears from the next clause, which is a singular means of getting true and sound knowledge. b Sheweth that he is a true lover of knowledge, because he is willing to purchase it upon such unwelcome terms, as reproofs are generally esteemed. c Discovereth himself to be a most foolish and stupid Creature, because he is an enemy to himself and to his own happiness.

2. A good man † obtaineth favour d of the LORD: but a man of wicked devices e will he condemn f.

d Whereby he is and shall be acquitted and justified. e Who designeth and industriously committeth wickedness. f When he standeth in judgment, howsoever he may for the present justifie himself, and deceive others into a good opinion of him.

3. A man shall not be established by wickedness g: but the * root of the righteous shall not be moved h.

* Chap. 10. 25.

g By any sinful courses by which he useth to secure or establish himself; whereby he implies that he shall be rooted up. h To wit, out of its place. He shall stand fast and flourish like a well-rooted Tree.

4. * A vertuous woman is a crown i to her husband: but she that maketh ashamed k, is as rottenness in his bones l.

* 1 Cor. 11. 7.

i A singular ornament and matter of his glorying and joy. k That by her folly or wickedness bringeth shame to her self and to her Husband. l Loathsom and vexatious, and pernicious.

5. The thoughts of the righteous are † right m: but the counsels of the wicked are * deceit n.

m His constant purpose is to deal justly and truly with God and with men. n His great care and contrivance is to wrong and deceive others by fair pretences and cunning artifices.

6. * The words of the wicked are to lie in wait for blood o: but the mouth of the upright shall deliver them p.

* Chap. 1. 11, 38. 18.

o Are designed and ordered to intrap or deceive others, and to destroy them. p To wit, from those that lie in wait for them: which it doth, either, 1. by prayer to God for their deliverance: Or, 2. by pacifying the wicked with soft and gentle answers, or by diverting them from their evil course by their good counsels and admonitions: Or, 3. by pleading their righteous cause in a judicial or other way.

7. * The wicked are overthrown, and are not q: but the house r of the righteous shall stand.

* Pſal. 37. 35. Chap. 11. 21. & 14. 11.

q Both they and their Families shall suddenly perish. r The Family or Posterity.

8. A man shall be commended s according to his wisdom t: but he that is † of a perverse heart u shall be despised x.

s To wit, by wise and good men. t More or less according to the degree of wisdom which his discourses and actions discover to be in him. u Which he sheweth by his wicked words and conversation. x By God and all wise men.

9. He

‖ Or, his servant to himself. So Gr.

9. He that is despised y, and ‖ hath a servant z, is better a than he that honoureth himself b, and lacketh bread c.

y That liveth in a mean and obscure condition in the World, for such are commonly despised by men of an higher rank. z Hath but one Servant. Or rather, as it is in the Margent, is Servant to himself, hath none to wait upon him or work for him but himself, that getteth Bread by his own labours. a Is happier. b That glorieth in his high Birth or gay attire. c Wants necessaries for his own sustenance.

* Deut. 25. 4. † Heb. knoweth. Psal. 1. 6. ‖ Or, bowels.

10. * A righteous man † regardeth the life of his beast d: but the ‖ tender mercies of the wicked are cruel e.

d Which is employed in his Service, he will not destroy it either by labours beyond its strength, or by denying to it necessary food or rest, or by any other way: and much more will he be pitiful to his own Servants, and to poor men. e There is much cruelty mixed even with their most merciful actions, when they pretend or intend to shew mercy. Heb. the Bowels of the, &c. those very Bowels which in others are the seat of pity in him are hardned and shut up, and only stir him up to cruelty. Instead of that Mercy which is natural to other men, he hath nothing but cruelty. Their Mercies are here said to be cruel, as the foolishness, and weakness of God, are said to be wise and strong, 1 Cor. 1. 25.

* Ch. 28. 19.

11. * He that tilleth his land f shall be satisfied with bread: but he that followeth vain persons g is void of understanding h.

f That employeth his time and strength in an honest calling. g That useth their society and idle course of living. h Shall through his own folly want Bread.

12 The wicked desireth ‖ the net of evil men i: but the root of the righteous yieldeth fruit k.

i He approveth and useth those cunning and deceitful arts, which wicked men use like Nets to ensnare other men, and to take their goods to themselves. Or, he desireth the Fortress of wicked men, or, of wickedness, i. e. he seeks to fortifie and establish himself by wicked practices: k That Justice and Piety, in which he is rooted, and which is the root of his actions, doth of it self, without the aid of any indirect and sinful courses, yield him sufficient fruit both for his own need, and to do good to others. But, because the word fruit is not in the Hebrew, and may seem to be too great a supplement, it is and may be rendred thus, the root of the Righteous giveth it, to wit, that Fortress or security which others seek in wickedness.

13. †* The wicked is snared l by the transgression of his lips m: but the just shall come out of trouble n.

l i. e. Brought into trouble. m By his wicked speeches against God and men. n To wit, by his wise and holy, and inoffensive speeches, whereby he pacifieth men and gaineth God's favour and protection.

* Ch. 13. 2.

14. * A man shall be satisfied with good by the fruit of his mouth o, and the recompence of a man's hands p shall be rendred unto him q.

o By his pious and profitable Discourses. p i. e. Of his works and actions, of which the hand is the great instrument. Whereby also may be implied that God will not regard nor recompence good words, unless they be accompanied with a good conversation. q To wit, by God, to whom the work of retribution belongs.

* Ch. 3. 7.

15. * The way of a fool r is right in his own eyes s: but he that hearkeneth unto counsel t is wise.

r The counsel and course which his own mind suggests to him in the ordering of his affairs. s Highly pleaseth him, so that he neglects and despiseth the opinions and advices of others. t That distrusteth his own judgment, and seeketh counsel from others.

16. A fools wrath is † presently known u: but a prudent man covereth shame x.

u By his rash words and indecent actions, whereby he exposeth himself to shame. x Either 1. the shame, or reproach, or injury done to him by others, which he concealeth and beareth with patience and passeth by, as his duty and interest obligeth him to do. Or, 2. his own shame, to which the folly of rash anger would have betrayed him.

Ch. 13. 5. 14. 5.

17. * He that speaketh truth y, sheweth forth righteousness z, but a false witness deceit a.

y Heb. He that will speak truth, i. e. he who accustometh himself to speak truth in common conversation; for the future Tense in the Hebrew Tongue oft notes a continued act or habit. z To wit, as a witness in publick judgment, he will speak nothing but what is true and just; you may depend upon his Testimony. a He who useth himself to lying in his common talk, will use falshood and deceit in judgment.

* Ps. 57. 4. & 59. 7. ‖ Or, healing. So Gr.

18. * There is that speaketh like the piercings of a sword b: but the tongue of the wise is ‖ health c.

b Hurtful and pernicious words, whereby they either corrupt mens minds and manners, or scandalize them, or injure them in their Reputation, Estate, or Life, or otherwise. c His speech both in judgment, and in common discourse, is sound and wholesom in it self, and tending to the comfort and benefit of others.

19. The lip of truth shall be established for ever d: but a lying tongue is but for a moment.

d The speaker of truth is constant, and always agreeable to himself, and his words the more and longer they are tried, the more doth the truth of them appear, whereas Liars, though they may make a fair shew for a season, yet are easily and quickly convicted of falshood.

20. Deceit e is in the heart of them that imagine evil: but to the counsellors of peace is joy.

e Either 1. towards others, whom they design to deceive, and then to destroy, whilst good Counsellers bring safety and joy to others. Or rather 2. to themselves. So the sense of the Verse is, They whose hearts devise mischief against others, shall be deceived in their hopes, and bring that trouble upon themselves which they design against others; but they who by good counsels labour to promote the Peace and Happiness of others, shall reap the comfort and benefit of it to themselves.

21. There shall no evil happen to the just f: but the wicked shall be filled with mischief.

f Either 1. of sin, or rather 2. of suffering or mischief, as the next clause explains this: No such evil shall befal them, as doth commonly befall the wicked, who are filled, or overwhelmed, and utterly destroyed by it, whereas good men are supported under their troubles, and shall be delivered out of them, and receive much benefit by them.

* Chap. 6. 17. † Heb. do truth. Joh. 3. 21.

22. * Lying lips are an abomination to the LORD, but they that † deal truly g are his delight.

g That speak and act sincerely and truly. He implies that although lying lips alone are sufficient to purchase God's hatred, yet truth in a man's speech is not sufficient to procure God's favour, unless there be also Truth and Justice in his actions.

* Chap. 13. 16. & 15. 2.

23. * A prudent man concealeth knowledge h: but the heart of Fools proclaimeth foolishness i.

h He doth not vain-gloriously and unseasonably utter what he knows, but keeps it in his breast till he hath a fit occasion to bring it forth for God's Glory and the good of others. i Whilest he makes ostentation of his knowledge, he betrays his Ignorance and Folly. Compare Eccles. 10. 3.

* Chap. 10. 4. ‖ Or, deceitful.

24. * The hand of the diligent shall bear rule k: but the ‖ slothful l shall be under tribute.

k Shall procure Wealth and Power. l Heb. The deceitful. So he calls the slothful, because Deceit and Idleness are commonly companions, and such men seek to gain by Fraud what they either cannot or will not get by honest Labour. Compare Prov. 10. 4.

* Ch. 15. 13. * Isa. 50. 4.

25. * Heaviness in the heart of man maketh it stoop, but * a good word l maketh it glad.

l A compassionate or encouraging word from a Friend or Minister.

26. The righteous is more ‖ excellent m than his neighbour n: but the way of the wicked o seduceth them p.

m Either 1. In his temper and disposition, more just, and generous, and publick spirited, and merciful, &c. Or, 2. In his condition, more happy, notwithstanding all his sufferings and the contrary opinion of the world concerning them. n Than any other man who is unrighteous. o That course of Life which they chuse and follow, and by which they design and expect to excel other men. p Heb. maketh them to err or wander, to lose that excellency or happiness which they had promised to themselves, in and by their wicked practices.

27. The slothful man q rosteth not that which he took in hunting r: but the substance of a diligent man is precious s.

q Or, The deceitful man, as v. 24. who seeks to enrich himself by fraudulent and unjust practices. r Doth not enjoy the fruit of his Labours or devices, either because he doth not labour, and so hath nothing to waste or enjoy; or because God oftimes deprives him either of such ill-gotten goods, or at least of a quiet and comfortable fruition of them. s Yields him great comfort and satisfaction, partly because it abides with him, and partly because he hath God's Favour and blessing with it.

28. In

28. In the way of righteouſneſs is life, and in the path-way thereof there is ‖ no death t.

t The practice of Juſtice and Godlineſs, though it expoſe a man to ſome dangers and inconveniences in the world, yet it will certainly lead him to Life and Happineſs, whereas the end of all wicked courſes is death and deſtruction.

CHAP. XIII.

1. A Wiſe ſon heareth a his father's inſtruction b: but a ſcorner heareth not rebuke c.

a Which word is underſtood out of the next clauſe, as is frequent in the Hebrew text. b Or, Rebuke or Reproof. c He hateth reproof either from his Father, or from any other man.

* Ch. 12. 14. 2. * A man ſhall eat good d by the fruit of his mouth e: but the ſoul f of the tranſgreſſors g ſhall eat violence h.

d Shall receive much comfort, and credit, and benefit to himſelf. e By his wiſe and profitable diſcourſes. f i.e. The perſon, as the ſoul is oft uſed. g Who tranſgreſs with their Lips, as this general Phraſe may be reſtrained from the former clauſe. h Shall have that violence and injury returned upon themſelves which they have offered to others in word or deed.

* Ch. 18. 21. & 21. 23. 3. * He that keepeth his mouth i, keepeth his life k: but he that openeth wide his lips l ſhall have deſtruction m.

i To wit, ſhut, for this is oppoſed to the opening of it: who ſpeaks ſparingly, and with due care and caution. k Prevents many ſins and miſchiefs which others run into. l That takes liberty to ſpeak every thing which pleaſeth him, or cometh into his mind. m From God or men.

* Ch. 10. 4. 4. * The ſoul of the ſluggard deſireth, and hath nothing n: but the ſoul of the diligent ſhall be made fat o.

n Becauſe he contenteth himſelf with lazy deſires without diligent endeavours. o He ſhall be enriched with the fruit of his own Labours.

5. A righteous man hateth lying p: but a wicked man q ‖ is loathſom, and cometh to ſhame r.

p Both in himſelf and in other men, whereby he getteth that good name which is like a precious Ointment. q Who accuſtometh himſelf to lying, as may be gathered from the foregoing words. r Makes himſelf contemptible and hateful to all that know him; there being ſcarce any reproach which men more impatiently endure, and ſeverely revenge, than that of being called or accounted a Lyar.

* Chap. 11. 3. 5, 6. † Heb. ſin. 6. * Righteouſneſs keepeth him s that is upright in the way: but wickedneſs overthroweth † the ſinner t.

s Either from ſin: or from that overthrow which befals ſinners in the next clauſe. t Heb. the man of ſin, who giveth up himſelf to wicked courſes.

‖ Chap. 12. 9. 7. * There is that maketh himſelf rich, yet hath nothing u, there is that maketh himſelf poor, yet hath great Riches x.

u Some men who have little or nothing, pretend to have great Riches, and carry themſelves accordingly, either out of Pride and Vanity, or with a deſign to gain Reputation with others whom they intend to defraud. x Some rich men ſeem and profeſs themſelves to be very poor that they may preſerve and increaſe their eſtates by concealing them from thoſe who would either deſire a ſhare in them, or take them away by deceit or violence.

8. The ranſom of a man's life are his Riches, but the poor heareth not rebuke y.

y This Verſe ſets forth, Either, 1. The ſeveral advantages of Riches and Poverty. Riches enable a man to redeem his life when it is in greateſt danger, and Poverty preſerves a man from thoſe Rebukes and Injuries which endanger and oft deſtroy the Rich. Or, 2. The convenience of Poverty above Riches. Riches frequently expoſe men to the peril of loſing their Lives by falſe Accuſers, or Thieves, or Tyrants, which they are forced to redeem with the loſs of their Riches; whereas Poverty commonly ſecures men not only from ſuch kinds of death, but even from Rebukes and Injuries; partly becauſe ſuch perſons are cautious, that they may not offend or provoke others; and partly becauſe their perſons and actions are neglected and ſlighted, and they are eſteemed Objects of pity.

* Job 22. 28. * Job 18. 6. & 21. 17. ‖ Or, candle. 9. * The light z of the righteous rejoiceth a, * but the ‖ lamp of the wicked ſhall be put out b.

z The Proſperity or Happineſs, which is oft called a Light or Lamp in Scripture, and other Authors. a Shineth with a pleaſant and conſtant Brightneſs and Glory; for this is oppoſed to the putting out in the next clauſe. Rejoicing is here aſcribed to the light, as it is to the Sun, Pſal. 19. 5. both Metaphorically, becauſe they would rejoice in it, if they were capable of any ſuch paſſions, and Metonymically, becauſe they refreſh and chear men's Spirits. So Mountains and Trees are ſaid to rejoice, Pſal. 65. 12. & 96. 12. b Their felicity ſhall have a ſudden and a diſmal end.

10. Only by pride cometh contention c, but with the well-adviſed d is wiſdom e.

c Which is not to be underſtood excluſively as to all other cauſes; for contentions oft ſpring from Ignorance, or Miſtake, or Covetouſneſs, or other Paſſions, but eminently, becauſe as Pride bloweth up thoſe coals of Contention which other Luſts kindle, ſo oft-times Pride alone, without any other cauſe, ſtirreth up ſtrife; which it doth by making a man ſelf-conceited in his opinions, and obſtinate in his Reſolutions, and impatient of any oppoſition, and many other ways. d Who are not governed by their own paſſions, but by prudent conſideration, and the good Counſel of others. e Which teacheth them to avoid and abhor all contention.

* Ch. 10. 2. & 20. 21. † Heb. with the hand. 11. * Wealth gotten by vanity f, ſhall be diminiſhed g, but he that gathereth † by labour h, ſhall increaſe.

f By vain, or deceitful, or wicked practices. g Becauſe the Curſe of God attends upon it. h By diligence in an honeſt Calling.

12. Hope deferred i maketh the heart ſick, but when the deſire k cometh, * it is a tree of life l. * Ver. 19.

i Delays in obtaining that good which a man paſſionately deſireth and hopeth for. k The good deſired and expected, Acts being oft put for the Objects. l It is moſt ſweet, and ſatisfactory, and reviving.

‖ Or, ſhall be in peace. 13. Whoſo deſpiſeth m the word n, ſhall be deſtroyed o, but he that feareth the commandment p, ‖ ſhall be rewarded.

m Diſobeyeth it wilfully and preſumptuouſly. n The word of God, which is called the word by way of eminency, Deut. 30. 14. Compare with Rom. 10. 18. 1 Tim. 5. 17. and elſewhere. o Except he repent, and return to his Obedience. p That hath a Reverence to its authority, and is afraid to violate it.

* Ch. 14. 27. 14. * The law q of the wiſe r is a fountain of life, to depart from the ſnares of death.

q The Doctrine, Inſtruction, or Counſel, as the word, Law, is frequently underſtood in Scripture. r Of holy men, who are commonly called wiſe, as ſinners are called Fools, in this Book.

15. Good underſtanding s giveth favour u, but the way x of tranſgreſſors is hard y.

s Diſcovering it ſelf by a man's holy and righteous practices and ways, as appears from the oppoſition of the way of tranſgreſſors to it, and as words of Underſtanding in this and other Books of Scripture commonly include practice. u Maketh a man acceptable both to God and men. x The carriage or manner of converſation. y Or, rough, as this very word is uſed, Deut. 21. 4. offenſive and hateful to God and Men, as rough ways are to a Traveller, fierce, and intractable, and incorrigible.

* Ch. 12. 23. & 15. 2. † Heb. ſpreadeth. 16. * Every prudent man dealeth z with knowledg a, but a fool † layeth open his folly b.

z Heb. Acteth, or doth, manageth all his affairs. a Conſiderately and diſcreetly. b By his heady and fooliſh Actions.

17. A wicked meſſenger c falleth into miſchief d, but a faithful ambaſſador is health e.

c Who is unfaithful in the execution of that which is committed to his charge, as appears by the oppoſite clauſe. d Shall not eſcape puniſhment from God, or from them who ſent him. e Or, wholſom, procureth ſafety and benefit, as to his Maſter, ſo alſo to himſelf.

18. Poverty and ſhame ſhall be to him that refuſeth inſtruction f, but he that regardeth reproof g ſhall be honoured h.

f Whereby he might have been kept from deſtructive and diſhonourable courſes. g That conſiders it ſeriouſly, receiveth it kindly, and reformeth himſelf by it. h And enriched, which is implied from the former branch. Not that it is ſo always, but commonly, and when God ſees it good for a man. Or, if he do not always gain Riches, he ſhall certainly have honour both from God and men.

* Ver. 12. 19. * The deſire accompliſhed is ſweet to the ſoul i, but k it is an abomination to fools, to depart from evil.

i The ſatisfaction of a man's deſires by the enjoyment of the things deſired is very acceptable to him. Which may be taken either 1. Of the deſire of Fools, which may be underſtood out of the next clauſe. So the ſenſe of the Verſe is, It is ſweet to ſinners sinners to indulge and satisfie their desires, which are wholly carnal and sinful, and for that reason they love sin, and hate the thoughts of leaving it, because their desires are wholly and fully set upon it. Or, 2. Of good desires, or of the desires of wise and good men, as the LXX, and Chaldee, and Syriack, and Arabick Interpreters understand it, by the opposition of Fools in the next clause. So the sense may be this, The desires of good men are set upon what is good, and they rejoice when they attain to it, and are grieved when they fall short of it; but the desires of the wicked are set upon sin, and it is a pleasure to them to commit it, and an abomination to them to be hindred from it. Or rather, 3. Of desires in general. Whatsoever men do earnestly desire, the enjoyment of it is very sweet and grateful to them; and therefore sinners rejoice in the pursuit and satisfaction of their sinful Lusts, and abhor all Restraint and Mortification of them: For this is certain and confessed, that many things are understood in these short proverbial Speeches which are not expressed. k Or, and, as this particle properly signifies; or, therefore, as it is frequently used.

20. He that walketh l with wise men, shall be wise m, but a companion of fools † shall be destroyed.

l i.e. Commonly converseth and associateth himself. m Shall learn Wisdom and Goodness both from their Counsels and Examples. The design of this Proverb is to shew the wonderful influence which a man's society hath upon him, either to save, or to corrupt and destroy him.

21. Evil n pursueth o sinners p, but to the righteous good q shall be repayed.

n Evil of punishment proportionable to their evil of sin, as appears from the next clause. o And sooner or later shall certainly overtake them, albeit they please themselves with hopes of impunity. p Obstinate and incorrigible sinners. q God's blessings and true happiness.

22. A good man leaveth an inheritance to his childrens children, and the * wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just r.

* Job 21. 17. & 27. 17. Chap. 28. 8. Eccl. 2. 26.

r Is by God's powerful Providence oft-times translated to good men of another Family, who will be more faithful Stewards of it.

23. * Much food is in * the tillage of the poor s, but there is that is destroyed t for want of judgment u.

* Ch. 12. 11. * Chap. 21. 4.

s Poor and mean persons by their diligent labours in tillage or other employments, and God's Blessing upon them oft-times grow rich. t Or, consumed, to wit, in his estate, brought to poverty. u Either, 1. For want of discretion and convenient care and diligence in tilling his Land, and in managing his Affairs, which he neglects himself, and leaves to the care of others, whereas poor men are forced by their necessities to look to their own concerns, and to use their utmost diligence in them. Or rather, 2. By Injustice, as this Phrase is used, Prov. 16. 8. Jer. 17. 11. & 22. 13. Ezek. 22. 29. Nor do I find it in any other Scripture. By his Frauds, Rapines, and Oppressions, and other unjust and wicked practices, whereby he seeks to enrich himself, as refusing and scorning to get an Estate by honest labours. So this agrees with what is said, v. 11.

24. * He that spareth x his rod y, hateth his son z: but he that loveth him, chasteneth him betimes. ‖

* Ch. 19. 18. & 22. 15. & 23. 13. & 29. 15, 17.

x Heb. with-holdeth it from his Son when it is due to him. y That correction which his Son's fault requires, and he as a Father is required to give him. z Not directly and properly in regard of his Affection, but consequently, and in respect of the event. His fond affection is as pernicious to him as his or another man's hatred could be. ‖ Either, 1. In his tender years, as soon as he is capable of it. Or, 2. Speedily, before he be hardened and inveterate in sin.

25. * The righteous eateth to the satisfying of his soul †, but the belly of the wicked shall want.

* Psal. 34. 10. & 37. 3.

† God's Favour and Blessing gives him a competent Estate, and an Heart to use it, and Comfort and Satisfaction in it, whereas wicked men commonly want either all these Blessings, or some of them.

CHAP. XIV.

1. EVery wise woman a buildeth her house b, but the foolish plucketh it down with her hands c.

a He speaks of the Woman not to exclude the Man, of whom this is no less true, but because the Women, especially in those times, were very industrious in managing their Husbands Estates, of which see Prov. 31. b Maintaineth and improveth her Family and Estate, as this Phrase is used, Exod. 1. 21. 2 Sam. 7. 11. Psal. 127. 1. c Either by her idleness and not using her hands, or by her foolish and sinful courses.

2. He that walketh in his uprightness d, feareth the LORD *, but he that is perverse in his ways, despiseth him e.

* Job 12. 4.

d Whose conversation is sincerely pious and righteous. The design of this Proverb and Verse is to shew, that God doth, and men may judge of mens outward professions and inward dispositions by the common course of their lives. e Plainly declares that he doth not fear God, but despise him, and his commands, and threatnings.

3. In the mouth of the foolish is a rod of pride f, but the lips of the wise shall preserve them g.

f His proud and insolent speeches as they are like a Rod, offensive and injurious to others, so they make a Rod for their own Backs, by provoking God and men against them. Which sense seems most probable both from the opposite Clause, and by comparing this place with Prov. 10. 13. & 26. 3. For this Phrase, The Rod of Pride, it may be compared with other like Phrases, as the foot of Pride, Psal. 36. 11. The scourge of the Tongue, Job 5. 21. and the Rod of the Mouth, Isa. 11. 4. g From that Rod.

4. Where no Oxen are, the crib is clean h: but much increase is by the strength of the oxe i.

h The Barn or Stable is empty of food for Cattel, and much more for Man, whose food is more scarce and dear. In the same sense cleanness of Teeth is put for Famine, Amos 4. 6. i By their labours, or by diligence in Husbandry, which then was principally managed by Oxen.

5. * A faithful witness will not lie k, but a false witness will utter lies l.

* Vers. 25. Exod. 20. 16. & 23. 1. Ch. 6. 19. & 12. 17.

k To wit, in common discourse and conversation, whereby he sheweth his love to truth, and giveth assurance that when he is called to be a Witness, he will be true and faithful. l Or, as the words lie in the Hebrew, And, or But he that will utter lies (that accustometh himself to lying) is or will be a false Witness, when occasion requires it. Having debauched his Conscience by daily lying, he is thereby prepared and disposed to false-witness-bearing. Compare Prov. 12. 17.

6. A scorner m seeketh wisdom and findeth it not n, but * knowledge is easy unto him o that understandeth p.

* Chap. 8. 9.

m A proud, self-conceited, and profane Person. n Because he doth not seek it aright, to wit, sincerely, and earnestly, and seasonably, and in a constant and diligent use of all the means which God hath appointed to that end, and with an honest intention of employing his knowledge to the service of God, and the furtherance of his practice of Religion. o Is plain and easily attained by him. p That knoweth and is deeply sensible of his own want of knowledge, and of the great worth and necessity of knowledge, which will make him use all possible means to it, and, among other ways, pray earnestly to God for it. Or, that is honest and pious: for words of knowledge are oft understood practically, especially in this Book.

7. Go from the presence of a foolish man q, when thou perceivest not in him the lips of knowledg r.

q Avoid the company and conversation of ungodly men. r When they break forth into foolish or wicked discourses, lest thou either be infected by them, or seem to approve of them.

8. The wisdom of the prudent is to understand his way s, but the folly of fools is deceit t.

s It consists not in vain Speculations, nor in a curious prying into other mens matters, nor in cunning arts of deceiving others, but in a diligent study of his own duty, and of the way to true and eternal happiness. t The wit of ungodly men, which, though they account their Wisdom, is really their folly, is employed onely in finding out ways of over-reaching and deceiving others, and themselves too.

9. * Fools u make a mock at sin x, but among the * righteous y there is favour z.

* Ch. 10. 23. * Ch. 21. 10.

u Wicked men, as appears from their opposition to the righteous in the next Clause. x Please and sport themselves with their own and other mens sins, which is an high offence and provocation to God and men. Or, as others render it, excuse or cover sin, sin against God or men, and then justifie or extenuate their sins, which is to double the injury. Possibly this Clause may be thus rendred, Sin deludes or makes a mock of Fools, or sinners, i.e. exposeth them to shame and contempt, which is fitly opposed to favour in the next Clause. And thus two Ancient and Learned Interpreters, Aquila and Theodotion, render it. And this suits exactly with the Hebrew words, whereas in the other Translation the Noun and Verb governed by it are of divers

Numbers,

Numbers, which though sometimes it be allowed, yet is not to be supposed without necessity. But this I submit to the learned and judicious. y Who are so far from making a mock of sin, or excusing it, that they do not allow themselves to commit it. z They find favour both with God and men, as this very word thus generally expressed is used. Prov. 11. 27. because they make conscience of ordering their lives so that they offend neither God nor men, or if they offend either, they heartily repent of it, so far are they from excusing it or pleasing themselves with it. Or, there is good will, as the word properly and usually is taken: they have a real love, and are ready to do all Offices of kindness one to another, and therefore neither sin against others, nor rejoice in the sins of others.

10. The heart knoweth † his own bitterness a, and a stranger b doth not intemeddle with his joy c.

a The sense of the Verse is this, The inward griefs and joys of mens Hearts, though sometimes they may be guessed at by outward signs, yet are not certainly known to any but a mans self. Compare 1 Cor. 2. 11. The scope of the Parable may be to keep men from murmuring under their own troubles or envying other mens happiness. b Any other Person without or beside a Mans self. c Doth not partake of it, nor understand it.

11. The house d of the wicked shall be overthrown, but the tabernacle e of the upright shall flourish.

d Their dwelling and family. e Which is a weak, and poor, and unstable thing, soon reared up, and soon taken down, and is here opposed to the large, and strong, and magnificent House of wicked men.

* Ch. 16. 25.

12. * There is a way which seemeth right unto a man f, but the end thereof are the ways of death g.

f There are some evil actions or courses which men may think to be lawful and good, either through gross and affected ignorance; or through partiality or self-flattery; or through want of necessary diligence in examining them by the rule of God's will or word; all which are culpable causes of the mistake, and therefore do not excuse the error. g The event sheweth that they were sinful and destructive.

13. Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful, and

* Chap. 5. 4.

* the end of that mirth is heaviness h.

h The outward signs of joy are commonly mixed with or end in real and hearty sorrow. The design of the Proverb is to declare the vanity of all worldly joys and comforts, and to teach men moderation in them, and to perswade us to seek for more solid and durable joys.

* Psa. 44. 18.

14. * The backslider in heart i shall be † filled with his own ways k, and a good man shall be satisfied from himself l.

i He who departeth from God and from the way of his Precepts with all his Heart, which implies the doing it upon deliberation, with free choice, and full purpose, and customary practice, as ungodly men commonly do, and is opposed to the slips of humane frailty; for otherwise every sin is a revolt from God. k With the fruit of his ways or doings, the punishment of his sins. l. i. e. From his ways, as appears by the opposition from the pious temper of his own Heart which cleaveth to the Lord, when the hearts of sinners forsake him, and from the holy and righteous course of his life, from which he shall receive unspeakable comfort and satisfaction, both here and hereafter to all Eternity.

15. The simple m believeth every word n, but the prudent man looketh well to his going o.

m Either the harmless Man: or rather a foolish Man, because he is opposed to the prudent. n Is easily deceived with the smooth words and fair prerences of false and deceitful men. o Either 1. to his own going, as this is generally understood, he ordereth his conversation and dealings in the World with due circumspection, not considering so much what other men say, as what he ought to do. Or, 2. to the going of the deceiver, whose the word in the former clause is suppos'd to be. So the sense is, he judgeth of mens words and professions by their conversations; which is a good rule.

* Ch. 22. 3.

16. * A wise man feareth p, and departeth from evil q, but the fool rageth r and is confident s.

p Trembleth at God's judgments when they are either inflicted or threatned. q From sin, which is the procuring cause of all calamities. r Fretteth against God, or is enraged against his Messengers who bring the threatning, or disquieteth himself in vain. Or transgresseth, as this Verb in its simple form and first conjugation commonly signifies, or, goeth on in sin constantly and resolutely, according to the Emphasis which this conjugation commonly adds to the simple Verb. And this is most fitly opposed to departing from evil, as being confident is opposed to fearing. s Secure and insensible of his danger till God's judgments overtake him.

17. He that is soon angry dealeth foolishly t, and a man of wicked devices u is hated x.

t His passion hurries him into many rash and foolish speeches and actions. u One who suppresseth his passion, but designeth and meditateth revenge, watching for the fittest methods and opportunities of executing it. x Both by God and men, as being most deeply malicious and like the Devil, and most dangerous and pernicious to humane Society, whereas men that are soon angry give a Man warning, and are quickly pacified, and therefore pitied and pardoned.

18. The simple inherit folly y, but the prudent are crowned with knowledg z.

y They possess it as their Inheritance or portion, holding it fast, improving it, delighting and glorying in it. In like manner David took God's Testimonies for his Heritage, Psal. 119. 111. where the word is the same: Withal he may imply that folly is Natural and Hereditary to them. z They place their honour and happiness in a sound and practical, and saving knowledge of God and of their own duty, and therefore earnestly pursue after it, and Heartily embrace it.

19. The evil bow before the good a, and the wicked at the gates b of the righteous.

a Giving honour to them, and supplicating their favour and help, either for supply of their wants, as being brought low for their sins, or for counsel or comfort, or for their prayers to God for them. b As Clients, and Petitioners, and Beggers use to wait at the Doors, and Houses of Great and Potent men. The sense is, Good men shall have the preeminency over the wicked, oft-times in this life, when God sees it expedient, but assuredly in the next life.

20. * The poor is hated c even of his own neighbour d, but † the rich hath many friends.

* Ch. 19. 7.
† Heb. many are the lovers of the Rich.

c i. e. Despised and abandoned, as hateful Persons and Things are. d Strictly so called, who is nearest to him, either by habitation or by relation, and therefore most obliged to love and help him.

21. He that despiseth his neighbour c, sinneth d: * but he that hath mercy e on the poor, happy is he f.

* Psa. 112. 9.

c That doth not pity and relieve the poor, as this is explained in the next Clause, the word Neighbour being here generally taken for any Man, as it is most commonly used in Scripture; which not relieving him, proceeds from a contempt of his Person. d And therefore shall be punished for his inhumanity, which is opposed to his being happy in the next Clause. e That sheweth his compassion by his bounty and relief. f He doth a worthy action, and shall be blessed in his deed.

22. Do they not err g that devise h evil i? but mercy and truth k shall be to them that devise good l.

g They do certainly err from the right way, and mistake their mark, and shall miss of that advantage and felicity which they promise to themselves by such practices. h That do not only commit it, but make it their design, and study, and business, that are Artists or Masters in it, as the word signifies. i Either 1. mischief to men. Or 2. any kind of wickedness against God or men; for the expression is general; and this seems best to agree to the following Clause. k Either 1. from men; Men shall deal truly and kindly with them, partly because such men by their carriage oblige them to do so, and partly because God inclineth their hearts to it. Or 2. from God to whom these two properties are jointly ascribed in divers places of Scripture. l That designedly and industriously apply themselves to the doing of all good offices to God and men.

23. In all labour there is profit, but the talk of the lips tendeth onely to penury m.

m Diligent labour is the ready way to riches, but idle talking, wherein too many spend most of their pretious time, will bring a Man to poverty.

24. The crown of the wise is their riches n: but the foolishness of fools is folly o.

n They are a singular advantage and ornament to them, partly as they make their Wisdom more regarded, when the poor Man's wisdom is despised, Eccles. 9. 16. and partly as they give a Man great opportunity to discover and exercise his Wisdom or Vertue by laying out his Riches to the honour and service of God, and to the great and manifold good of the World; which also highly tends to his own glory and happiness. o But as for rich fools, for to them the general word is to be restrained from the opposite Clause, their folly is not cured, but made worse and more manifest by their riches. Their Riches find them Fools, and leave them Fools; they are not a Crown, but a reproach to them, and an occasion of their greater contempt. For the Phrase, we have the like in the Hebrew Text, 1 Sam. 1. 24. The Child Samuel was a Child. It is an elegant figure called Antanaclasis used in all Authors.

* Vers. 5. 25. * A true witness delivereth souls p: but a deceitful witness speaketh lies q.

p (i. e.) Persons, to wit, such as are innocent from the mischief of false accusation, by declaring the truth, which is sufficient for their vindication. q To the injury and destruction of the innocent, which is easily understood out of the former Clause, and from the practice of false Witnesses.

26. In the fear of the LORD is strong confidence r; and his children s shall have a place of refuge.

r A sure ground of confidence, or a strong refuge, as the next Clause explains it. s Either, 1. God's Children. Or, 2. the children of them that fear God, who are sufficiently understood out of the former Clause.

* Chap. 13. 12. 27. * The fear of the LORD is a fountain of life, to depart from the snares of death t.

t To preserve men from deadly and destructive courses.

28. In the multitude of people is the kings honour u; but in the want of people is the destruction of the prince.

u Because it is an evidence of his wise and good government. Under honour he here comprehends also strength and safety, (as appears from the opposite Clause) which depend much upon a Prince's reputation. And honour may be here put for strength, as strength is put for honour or glory, Psal. 8. 2. & 29. 1. & 96. 7.

† Heb. short of spirit. 29. He that is slow to wrath is of great understanding x: but he that is † hasty of spirit, exalteth y folly.

x Sheweth great and true wisdom in conquering his sinful and shameful passions. y Heb. lifteth up, like a Banner, makes it known and visible to all men.

30. A sound heart z is the life of the flesh a; but envy the rottenness of the bones b.

z Free from envy and such like inordinate passions, which are commonly called the Diseases of the Soul, not only in Sacred, but even in Heathen Writers. Or, as others render it, An healing heart, mild, and merciful, and kind to others, which is opposed to envy. a Procureth and maintaineth the health and vigor of the whole body. b It wasteth the spirits, and consumeth even the strongest and most inward parts of the body.

* Chap. 17. 5. Mat. 25. 40, 45. 31. * He that oppresseth the poor c, reproacheth his maker d: but he that honoureth him e, hath mercy on the poor f.

c That useth him hardly, as the Syriack renders it, that with-holdeth from him that which is his due, either by the rules of strict Justice; or by the great Law of Charity, of which see Prov. 3. 27. and so it is opposed to having mercy in the next Clause. d Whose image the poor man bears, which might challenge respect; Job 31. 15. by whose counsel and providence he is made poor; 1 Sam. 2. 7. Prov. 22. 2. and who hath declared himself to be their protector and avenger. e His Image, and Works, and Laws. f Doth not only forbear, oppressing or injuring of him, but affords him his pity and help.

* Job 13. 15. & 19. 26. Psal. 23. 4. 1 Cor. 15. 19. 2 Cor. 1. 9. 32. The wicked is driven away g in his wickedness h: * but the righteous hath hope i in his death k.

g To wit, in his death, as is gathered from the opposite Clause: driven away from God's favour and presence, and from the society of the Just, and from all his hopes of happiness both in this life and in the next. This expression notes that this is done suddenly, violently, and irresistibly, as the smoak or chaff are driven away by a strong wind. h Or, for his wickedness, Heb. in his evil, which may be understood of the evil of punishment; in the day of his calamity, when he shall flee to God for help. i Of deliverance from it, or of great and everlasting advantage by it. k In his greatest dangers and distresses, yea even in death it self, which therefore he can receive with comfort and confidence.

* Chap. 12. 23. 33. * Wisdom resteth l in the heart of him that hath understanding; but that which is in the midst m of fools is made known n.

l Is laid up and hid there, and not vainly nor rashly uttered by him, but only upon necessary or fit occasions. m (i. e.) In the heart, which is expressed by this very word, Psal. 64. 6. and elsewhere. That Folly which is there instead of Wisdom: or, that small degree of Wisdom and Knowledge which they have. n They will publish it in all times and companies, without any consideration or discretion.

34. Righteousness exalteth a nation o; but sin is a reproach † to any people p.

o Maketh it honourable in the eyes of God, and of all other Nations, as it did the ancient Romans. p Brings contempt and ruine upon them by provoking both God and men against them.

35. The kings favour is toward a wise servant: but his wrath is against him * that causeth shame q.

* Chap. 17. 2.

q Both to himself, by his foolish management of the King's affairs committed to him, and to the King who made so foolish a choice of a Servant.

a Mild or gentle. b Which may imply a foregoing charge or accusation, although the word is and may be rendred, speech or discourse. c From the speaker. d Fierce and vexatious replies or speeches. e Kindle it, and cause it to flame forth.

2. The tongue of the wise useth knowlegde aright f: * but the mouth of fools † poureth out g foolishness.

4. † A wholsome tongue k is a tree of life: but perverseness therein m is a breach in the spirit n.

k Which uttereth sound, and comfortable, and useful counsels. l Is greatly useful to preserve the present life, and to promote the spiritual and eternal life, both of the speaker and hearers. m All sorts of false or corrupt speeches. n Disturbs and wounds, and oft-times corrupts and destroys the spirits or souls both of the speaker and hearers.

5. * A fool despiseth o his fathers p instruction: but he that regardeth reproof q is prudent.

* Chap. 10. 1. & 13. 18. & Ver. 21. 32.

o Doth not regard nor obey it, which is an evidence of contempt. p Who hath both love to him, and authority over him; which greatly aggravates his folly. q The reproof of any person whatsoever, and much more of a Father.

6. In the house r of the righteous is much treasure: but in the revenues of the wicked is trouble s.

r Or, Family. Whereby he implies that it is not only enjoyed by him, but also left to his posterity. s Though he may obtain great revenues, yet they are attended with much trouble and vexation, either because they are strangely blasted and taken from them, or because they are imbittered to them by their own insatiable desires, or tormenting cares and fears, or the horrours of their guilty consciences, or by divers other ways.

7. The lips of the wise disperse knowledge t: but the heart of the foolish doth not so u.

t Freely communicate to others what they know, as they have opportunity. u Either because he hath no knowledge to disperse, or because he hath not an heart to perform his duty, or to do good to others. Or, as others render it, and as the last Hebrew word is rendred, Gen. 42. 34. and elsewhere, is not right; or, the place may be rendred, the heart of the foolish (understand out of the former clause, as is very usual, disperseth by his lips) that which is not right, foolish and corrupt discourse, which is fitly opposed to knowledge.

* Chap. 21. 27. Isa. 1. 11. & 61. 8. & 66. 3. Jer. 6. 20. & 7. 22. Amos 5. 22. 8. * The sacrifice x of the wicked is an abomination to the LORD: but the prayer y of the upright is his delight.

x All the religious services, yea, the best and most costly of them; one kind being put for all the rest. y The cheapest and meanest services.

9. The way z of the wicked is an abomination unto the LORD: but he loveth him that followeth after righteousness a.

z The conversation or course of life. This verse seems to contain a reason of the foregoing. God hates wicked mens religious performances, because they are accompanied with ungodly lives, and they pull down with one hand what they build with another. a That earnestly desires, and constantly and diligently endeavours to be holy and righteous in the course of his life, although he doth not attain to that perfect righteousness which he thirsts after.

10. ‖ Cor-

10. ‖ Correction is grievous b unto him that forsaketh the way c, and he that hateth reproof shall die d.

b He hateth Reproof, because it is a reproach to him, and because it strikes at that sin which he loveth. c God's way, emphatically called the way here, as also Psal. 119. 1. & 139. 24. Prov. 2. 13. d i.e. Be destroyed, both here and for ever: which is a more grievous thing than an harsh reproof.

* Job 26. 6. * 2 Chr. 6. 30. Psal. 7. 9. & 44. 21. Joh. 2. 24, 25. & 21. 17. Acts 1. 24.

11. * Hell and destruction e are before the LORD, how much more then * the hearts f of the children of men.

e Put for the place of destruction, by an usual Metonymy, the place and state of the damned, of which men know nothing but by divine Revelation. f Whose thoughts and affections, though they lie deep, discover themselves by outward signs and actions.

12. A scorner loveth not g one that reproveth him, neither will he go unto h the wise i.

g i.e. Hateth and avoideth it; for more is here understood than is expressed, as it is Prov. 11. 21. & 12. 3. and elsewhere. h Seek their Company and Conversation, as his duty and interest obligeth him. i i.e. The godly, because he knows they who are so indeed will make Conscience of reproving him.

* Chap. 17. 22.

13. * A merry heart maketh a chearful Countenance, but by sorrow of the heart the spirit k is broken.

k Either, 1. His vital Spirits. Or rather, 2. His Courage and Vigor, the decay whereof sheweth it self in his Countenance, as is implied from the former clause.

14. The heart of him that hath understanding seeketh knowledg, but the mouth of fools feedeth on foolishness l.

l Their hearts are set upon wickedness, which is meat and drink to them.

15. All the days of the afflicted m are evil n, but he that is of a merry heart o hath a continual feast p.

m Of the troubled in mind or heart, as this general Expression may very fitly be restrained from the following clause. n Tedious and uncomfortable, he takes no content in any time or thing. o Heb. of a good heart, i.e. composed, and quiet, and contented. p Hath constant satisfaction and delight in all conditions, yea, even in affliction.

* Psal. 37. 16. Chap. 16. 8. 1 Tim. 6. 6.

16. * Better is little with the fear of the LORD q, than great treasure, and trouble r therewith.

q Which gives a man Tranquillity and Comfort in what he hath. r Tumultuous Lusts and Passions, Vexatious Cares, and Fears, Horrours of Conscience, and expectation of God's Curse and Judgment, which Riches gotten without God's Fear do commonly produce.

* Chap. 17. 1.

17. * Better is a dinner of herbs where love s is, than a stalled Ox, and hatred therewith.

s True Friendship and Kindness between those that eat together.

* Ch. 26. 21. & 29. 22.

18. A wrathful man * stirreth up strife t, but he that is slow to anger appeaseth strife.

t Because he is very apt both to give, and to take all occasions of contention.

† Heb. is raised up as a causey.

19. The way of the slothful man u is as an hedge of thorns x: but the way of the righteous y † is made plain z.

u The way in which he doth or ought to walk, any good work which he pretends or desires to undertake. x As a way hedged up with Thorns, as it is expressed, Hos. 2. 6. troublesom, and perplexed, and full of such difficulties as he despaireth, and therefore never striveth to overcome. y Who is always diligent in his Calling, which is one branch of Righteousness, and therefore is fitly opposed to the slothful, who is joined with the wicked, Matt. 25. 26. and censured as such both in Scripture and Heathen Authors, because idleness is both in it self a sin, and it leads the way to many other wickednesses. z Is easie and pleasant to him, notwithstanding all his discouragements and difficulties.

20 A wise son maketh a glad father a, but a foolish man despiseth his mother b.

a By giving him that Honour and Obedience which he oweth to him. b Whereby he maketh her sad. See the notes on Prov. 10. 1. where we have the same Proverb.

* Ch. 10. 23. † Heb. void of heart.

21 * Folly is joy c to him that is † destitute of wisdom; but a man of understanding walketh uprightly d.

c He doth not only work Wickedness, but taketh pleasure in it. d Heb. directeth, or maketh streight his going, i.e. ordereth all his actions by the rule of God's word, and delighteth in so doing, which is understood from the opposite clause.

* Ch. 11. 14. & 20. 18.

22 * Without counsel e purposes are disappointed f, but in the multitude of counsellors g they are established h.

e When men do not seek, or will not receive advice from others in weighty affairs. f Their designs are ill managed, and succeed accordingly. g i.e. Of wise and good Counsellors, for such only deserve that name. h i.e. Accomplished and brought to a good issue.

† Heb. in his season.

23 A man hath joy by the answer i of his mouth, and a word spoken † in due season k, how good is it!

i i.e. By a wise, or good and seasonable Answer or Advice, as is manifest both from the opposite clause, and from the nature of the thing, because it is manifest and undeniable, that a foolish Answer can be no credit nor comfort to the Answerer. Thus above v. 10. the way is put for God's way; and such Synecdoche's are frequent in Scripture. k Counsel or comfort given to another in fit time and manner. l It is highly acceptable and useful.

* Phil. 3. 20. Col. 3. 1, 2.

24 * The way of life is above to the wise m, that he may depart from hell beneath n.

m The way or course which a wise man taketh to preserve and obtain Life, is to place his Heart, and Treasure, and Conversation in things above, and to manage all his affairs in this world with due respect and subserviency to the happiness of a better Life. n Or, from the lowermost hell, not from the grave, as this word is elsewhere used, for no wisdom can prevent that, but from hell properly so called, as this word is elsewhere used, as hath been formerly observed.

* Chap. 12. 7. & 14. 11. * Psal. 68. 5, 6.

25 * The LORD will destroy the house of the proud o, but * he will establish the border p of the widow.

o Of the most mighty Oppressors, who conceit themselves to be unmoveably fixed. p Either, 1. The Estate, the border being oft used for the Land within the Borders, as Psal. 105. 31, 33. and elsewhere. Or, 2. The Border by which Lands were then bounded and distinguished, which those proud persons endeavoured to remove contrary to God's Law, Deut. 19. 14. & 27. 17.

* Chap. 6. 18. † Heb. words of pleasantness.

26 * The thoughts of the wicked q are an abomination to the LORD, but the words of the pure r are † pleasant s words.

q And much more their words which express their thoughts; for thoughts are said to be free, and wicked men are seldom, and but little concerned for the sins of their thoughts. r Which discover and proceed from their thoughts, Matt. 15. 19. s acceptable to God, which is opposed to abomination to him.

* Chap. 1. 19.

27 * He that is greedy of gain t troubleth his own house u, but he that hateth x gifts y shall live z.

t That seeketh wealth by unjust courses, as appears from the opposite clause. u Bringeth God's Curse and Destruction upon himself and his Family, whom he designed to enrich and establish. x Who refuseth them not with dissimulation, nor only from prudential Reasons, but from an hearty abhorrency of all Unrighteousness. y i.e. Bribes given to corrupt Judgment. See Exod. 18. 21. & 23. 8. Deut. 16. 19. z Shall preserve himself and (which is understood out of the former clause) his Family from ruine.

* Ch. 16. 23.

28 * The heart of the righteous studieth to answer a: but the mouth b of the wicked poureth out evil things c.

a He answers or speaks considerately and conscientiously, and therefore profitably, or to the use and Edification of the Hearers. b Not the Heart, for he is without Heart in Scripture account, and he rashly speaks what comes into his mouth, without the direction of his Heart or Conscience. c Foolish, and unprofitable, and hurtful Speeches.

* Psal. 34. 16. * Psal. 145. 18, 19.

29 * The LORD is far from the wicked d, but * he heareth the prayer of the righteous.

d To wit, when they pray to him, as the next clause explains, and therefore doth not hear nor regard them, as he is said to be nigh to the righteous, Psal. 34. 18. & 145. 18. But this farness or nearness respecteth not God's Essence, which is every where, but his gracious and helpful presence.

‖ Or, goodness. as Ch. 25. 25.

30 The light of the Eyes rejoiceth the heart e: and ‖ a good report f maketh the bones fat g.

e The light which we see with our Eyes, and by the help of which we see many other pleasant Objects is a great comfort and refresh-refreshment. Compare Eccles. 11. 7. Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the Sun: which is a good Comment upon this place. f Either 1. Glad tidings. Or rather 2. A Good Name, which is a more lasting thing, and makes deeper impression. g Not only cheareth a man for the present, but gives him such solid and stable comfort as doth both revive his soul, and give Health and Vigour to his body. So he compares two Senses together, Seeing and Hearing, with respect to their several Objects, and prefers the latter before the former.

* Ver. 5. & Chap. 12. 1.

31 The ear that heareth h the reproof of life i, abideth * among the wise k.

h The man that hearkeneth to it, and delights in it. i That Reproof and good Counsel which leads to Life. k Heb. shall, or will abide, &c. Either, 1. He will thereby be made wise, and be esteemed one of that number. Or rather, 2. He seeketh and delighteth in the Company and Conversation of the Wise, by whom he may be admonished, as on the contrary, Fools who hate Reproof do avoid and abhor the Society of Wise men and Reprovers, Amos 5. 10.

‖ Or, obeyeth.
† Heb. possesseth an heart.

32 He that refuseth ‖ instruction, despiseth his own soul l, but he that ‖ heareth reproof, † getteth understanding m.

l Which hereby he exposeth to the danger of utter destruction, whereby he shews his Folly. m Whereby he saveth his Soul. Heb. possesseth an heart, which the Hebrews make the seat of Wisdom.

* Chap. 18. 12.

33 The fear of the LORD is the instruction of wisdom n, and * before honour is o humility p.

n Doth instruct men in, or lead them to true Wisdom; whence it is said to be the beginning of Wisdom, Prov. 1. 7. & 9. 10. o i.e. It is the ready way to Honour both from God, and from Men. p Whereby men submit to God, and yield to Men, which gains them Love and Respect, whereas Pride procures them Hatred and Contempt from God and Men.

CHAP. XVI.

* Ver. 9. & Ch. 19. 21. & 20. 24. Jer. 10. 23. ‖ Or, disposings.

1 THe * ‖ preparations of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue is from the LORD a.

a Men can neither think nor speak wisely and well of themselves, or without divine assistance. Or, as many others, both ancient and modern Interpreters render the verse, The preparations, or dispositions, or orderings of the heart are in or from a man, (i.e. a man may consider and contrive in his own thoughts what he wills or designs to speak. Which is spoken by way of concession, yet not excluding man's dependance upon God therein, which is evident both from many plain Texts of Scripture, and from undeniable Reason.) but the answer or speech (as this word is oft used) of the tongue is from the Lord. Men cannot express their own thoughts without God's leave and help, and their tongues are oft over-ruled by God to speak what was besides and above their own thoughts, as he did Balaam, Numb. 23. and Caiaphas, Joh. 11. 49, 50, 51.

2 * All the ways of a man are clean in his own eyes b, but the LORD weigheth c the spirits d.

b Many Men can easily flatter and deceive themselves into a good opinion of themselves, and of their own actions, though they be sinful. See below, v. 25. and compare 1 Cor. 4. 4. c. i.e. Exactly knoweth, as men do the things which they weigh and examine. d The hearts of men, from which both mens actions, and the goodness and badness of them in a great measure, proceeds, their ends and intentions, their dispositions and affections, which are hid not onely from others, but oft-times from a man's self; whereby he is unfit to judge in his own cause, and easily mistaken, if he do not use great diligence and fidelity. In this last clause he intimates the reason why men deceive themselves, in judging of their state and Actions, because they do not search their own hearts.

* Psal. 37. 5. & 55. 22. Matt. 6. 25. Luke 12. 22. 1 Pet. 5. 7. † Heb. roll.

3. * † Commit thy works unto the LORD e, and thy thoughts shall be established f.

e Heb. roll, &c. as a man rolls a burden to another, which is too heavy for himself, imploring his help. Refer all thy actions and concerns to God, and to his Glory, as the end of them, and in the discharge of thy own duty depend upon God's Providence for assistance and success. f Thy honest desires and designs shall be brought to an happy issue one way or other.

* Job 21. 20. Rom. 9. 22.

4. The LORD hath made g all things h for himself i, * yea, even the wicked k for the day of evil l.

g Or, hath wrought, or doth work; for the Hebrews express the present as well as the past time by this tense: he ordereth or disposeth: for this may be understood either of the works of Creation, or of Providence. h And especially all men. i For his own service and glory, for the discovery and illustration of his own Wisdom, Power, Goodness, Truth, Justice, and his other most glorious Perfections. k Wilful and impenitent Sinners. l For the time of punishment, as this Phrase is used, Psal. 49. 5. Jer. 17. 18. and elsewhere: of which the Scripture frequently speaks, both to warn sinners of their danger, and to satisfie the minds of them which are amazed and disquieted with the consideration of the present impunity and felicity of wicked men. Men make themselves wicked, and God therefore makes them miserable.

* Chap. 6. 17. & 8. 13. † Heb. held innocent.

5. * Every one that is proud in heart m, is an abomination to the LORD, though hand joyn in hand n, he shall not be † unpunished.

m Though he dissemble it in his outward carriage and countenance, as Psal. 10. 4. In whose heart Pride rules. n Though they have many Friends and Assistants. See the same Phrase, Prov. 11. 21.

6. By mercy and truth o iniquity is † purged p, and by the fear of the LORD q men depart from evil r.

o Either, 1. By God's Mercy or Grace, and by his truth in performing his Promises made to sinners in Christ. Or, 2. By mens Mercy and Truth, as those very words are jointly used, Prov. 3. 3. & 20. 28. and elsewhere; and as, in the following clause, the fear of the Lord is a Grace or Disposition in men: by a merciful and just and faithful frame of heart and course of Life: which are here opposed to Sacrifices, as mercy is, Hos. 6. 6. by which the hypocritical Jews expected to obtain the expiation of their sins. p Not meritoriously but instrumentally, as they qualifie a man to offer up acceptable Prayers to God for the Pardon of his sins, and to receive and apply to himself that pardon which Christ by his Bloud hath purchased for all sincere Believers, who are filled with Mercy and Truth, and other Graces. q By a filial Reverence or Respect unto God, and by an holy fear of offending God, and by a dread of God's judgments. r They are kept from abusing pardoning Mercy, and from returning to Folly or Wickedness. So he sheweth that Justification and Sanctification are constant and inseparable Companions.

7. When a man's ways please the LORD, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him s.

s By disposing their hearts to kindness towards him.

* Psal. 37. 16.

8. * Better is a little with righteousness, than great revenues without right t.

t This was in effect said before, Prov. 15. 16. and is here repeated, partly because of the great importance and usefulness of this truth, and partly because men are very hardly brought to a serious belief of it.

* Ver. 1.

9. * A mans heart deviseth his way u, but the LORD directeth his steps x.

u Considers and proposeth to himself what he will do. x Over-ruleth and disposeth all their designs and actions as he pleaseth, and not as they list.

10. † A divine sentence y is z in the lips of the king a, * his mouth transgresseth not b in judgment.

y Heb. Divination, which is sometimes taken in a good sense for Prudence, as it is, Isa. 3. 2. A great sagacity and piercing judgment to discern dubious and difficult cases. z Or, should be, for the verb is wanting in the Hebrew, and this may be supplied as well as is. And he seems not so much to speak of the matter of Fact, as if it were thus in all Kings, which is notoriously and confessedly untrue, as of the duty of Kings, in whom Wisdom is a necessary qualification. For thus the two following Proverbs concerning Kings, v. 12. 13. must be understood, otherwise they are repugnant to common Experience. a Either, 1. Of wise Kings, who onely are worthy of that Name and Office; King being here put for a wise King, as a Name is put for a good Name, and a Woman for a good Woman, Eccles. 7. 28. and then this is true in fact, as it was in David, 2 Sam. 14. 17. and in Solomon, 1 King. 3. 28. Or, 2. Of Kings in general, in the sense before given: for seeing the word is generally expressed without any limitation both here and v. 12. 13. it may seem presumption to confine it to those few Kings which are, or were, wise and good. b Or, Shall, or should not transgress, or go beyond the bounds of Religion and Justice.

* Lev. 19. 36. Chap. 11. 1. † Heb. all the stones.

11. * A just weight and balance are the LORD's c, † all the weights d of the bag are his work.

c Are God's work, as it follows, made by his direction and appointment, so as no man can corrupt or alter them without violating God's Rights and Authority, and incurring his displeasure. d Heb. the stones, which they then used as weights. Seen on Prov. 11. 1.

12. It is an abomination to kings to commit wick-wickedneſs e; for * the throne is eſtabliſhed by righteouſneſs f.

*Chap.20.28. & 25.5. & 29. 14.

e They ſhould not only abſtain from all wicked practices, but abhor them both in their own perſons, and in all their ſervants and ſubjects. It is too plain, that he ſpeaks not of the common practice, but of the duty of Kings, as on v. 10. And ſuch affirmative expreſſions are oft uſed in Scripture to expreſs mens duty only, as 1 Cor. 6. 19. your body is (i.e. ſhould be) the temple, &c. and 7. 32. careth, &c. i.e. ought to care. f And (which is implied) weakned, and ſometimes overthrown by unrighteouſneſs; and therefore this is neceſſary for their own ſecurity and happineſs.

13. Righteous lips are the delight of kings g, and they love him that ſpeaketh right.

g All wiſe and good Kings do, and all Kings ſhould, delight in imploying ſuch Counſellors, Judges, and Officers under them, as are juſt and faithful in their Counſels, and Sentences, and Actions, becauſe ſuch bring great honour and advantage to them.

14. * The wrath of a king is as meſſengers of death h; but a wiſe man will pacifie it i.

h Is as terrible as if many Meſſengers were ſent to denounce the ſentence of death, and to execute it. i Will uſe all prudent and lawful means to pacific it.

15. In the light of the kings countenance is life k, and * his favour is as a cloud of the latter rain l.

*Chap.19.12.

k His favour and ſmiling countenance is moſt ſweet and refreſhing, eſpecially to him that was under a ſentence of death, v. 14. l As acceptable as thoſe clouds which bring the latter rain, whereby the fruits are filled and ripened a little before the harveſt: of which ſee Deut. 11. 14. Job 29. 23. Jam. 5. 7.

16. * How much better m is it to get wiſdom than gold n? and to get underſtanding, rather to be choſen than ſilver?

m It is inexpreſſibly and unconceivably better, as this Phraſe implies, Pſal. 31. 19. & 36. 7. & 92. 5, &c. n Becauſe it brings a man more certain, and compleat, and laſting comfort and advantage.

17. The high-way of the upright o is to depart from evil p, he that keepeth his way q, preſerveth his ſoul r.

o Their common road, in which they conſtantly purpoſe and deſire, and cuſtomarily uſe to walk, although ſometimes through frailty or temptation they ſlip into the by-paths of ſin. p From the evil of ſin, and conſequently from the evil of puniſhment. q That takes heed to walk in that high-way. r From that miſchief which befals thoſe that walk in the crooked paths of wickedneſs.

18. * Pride goeth before deſtruction s, and an haughty ſpirit before a fall.

s It is commonly a forerunner and cauſe of mens ruine, becauſe it highly provokes both God and men.

19. Better it is to be of an humble ſpirit with the lowly, than to divide the ſpoil with the proud t.

t Who will ſpoil and rob others to maintain their own Pomp and Luxury.

20. || He that handleth a matter wiſely u, ſhall find good x, and whoſo * truſteth in the LORD y happy is he z.

||Or, he that underſtandeth a matter. *Pſal. 2. 12. & 34. 8. & 125. 1. Iſa. 30. 18. Jer. 17. 7.

21. The wiſe in heart ſhall be called prudent a, and the ſweetneſs of the lips b increaſeth learning c.

a The ſenſe is either, 1. He who hath wiſdom or ſound knowledge in his heart, will ſhew it by his prudence in ordering his actions. Or rather, 2. He who is truly wiſe, or prudent, or intelligent (all which words moſt commonly ſignifie one and the ſame thing, both in this and in other Books of Scripture) ſhall be ſo called or accounted by others. b Eloquence added to wiſdom, the faculty of expreſſing a mans mind fitly, and freely, and acceptably. c Both in himſelf, for whilſt a man teacheth others, he improves himſelf; and eſpecially in others, who by this means are induced to hear and receive his good inſtructions. Wiſdom gets a man repute with others, but this faculty of right ſpeaking, makes a wiſe man more inſtrumental to do good to others.

22. * Underſtanding is a well-ſpring of life d unto him that hath it e: but the inſtruction of fools is folly f.

* Chap.13.14. & 14. 27.

d Is continually ſuggeſting wholeſom and ſaving inſtructions. e And to others alſo, as is underſtood from the following clauſe. f Their moſt grave and ſerious counſels are fooliſh.

23. The heart of the wiſe † teacheth his mouth g, and addeth learning to his lips h.

g Directeth him what, and when, and how to ſpeak, and keepeth him from ſpeaking raſhly and fooliſhly. h (i.e.) Inableth him to ſpeak learnedly and wiſely. Or, increaſeth learning (in himſelf and others) by (as this Hebrew Particle oft ſignifies, and is by ſome rendred here) his lips, i.e. by his wiſe ſpeeches; that this may agree with the latter clauſe of v. 21. where the ſame Phraſe is uſed.

24. * Pleaſant words i are as an honey-comb, ſweet to the ſoul, and health to the bones k.

25. There is a way that ſeemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death l.

l This whole Verſe was delivered before, Ch. 14. 12. and is here repeated partly for its great importance and uſefulneſs to prevent that ſelf-deceit, which is ſo common and dangerous: and partly to keep men from leaning too much to their own underſtanding, and to oblige them to ſeek and receive the good counſels of wiſe and holy men.

26. * † He that laboureth, laboureth for himſelf m, for his mouth † craveth it of him n.

* Eccleſ. 6. 7. † Heb. the Soul of him that laboureth. † Heb. boweth unto him.

m For his own uſe and benefit. The ſcope of the Proverb is to commend and preſs diligence in a mans calling, and to condemn idleneſs. n Heb. boweth to him, as a ſuppliant, beggeth him to labour, that it may have ſomething to put into it for its own comfort, and for the nouriſhment of the whole body.

27. † An ungodly man diggeth up evil o, and in his lips there is as a burning fire p.

o Inventeth or deſigneth miſchief to others, and proſecuteth his evil deſigns with great and conſtant induſtry. p As his thoughts, ſo alſo his words are very vexatious and pernicious; his tongue is ſet on fire of Hell, and ſets himſelf and others on fire by lies and ſlanders, and other provoking ſpeeches.

29. A violent man u enticeth his neighbour x, and leadeth him into the way that is not good y.

u Heb. A man of violence, i.e. devoted to violent and injurious courſes. x Into a confederacy with him in his wicked practices, as it follows. y (i.e.) That is very ſinful, as this Phraſe is uſed, Prov. 17. 26. & 18. 5. and oft elſewhere.

d Not apt to revenge, but ready to forgive, injuries. e Becauſe he is more like to God, more wiſe to foreſee and to prevent vent miſchief both to himſelf and others, which oft cometh from raſh anger, of a more gallant and generous ſpirit, and more valiant and victorious, as it follows. This is oppoſed to the perverſe judgment of the World, who eſteem ſuch perſons puſillanimous and cowardly. f That ſubdueth his paſſions; for his victory is the more glorious, becauſe he fights with the ſtronger enemy, he conquers by his own, and not by other mens hands, and he gets a greater glory and advantage to himſelf, and that without the injury and ruine of others, wherewith the Conqueſts of Cities are commonly attended.

This Proverb contains a compariſon between an evil-doer, and an evil-ſpeaker, and ſheweth their agreement in the ſame ſinful practice of being greedy to hear falſe and wicked ſpeeches.

† Heb. a lip of excellency. † Heb. a lip of lying.

7. † Excellent ſpeech n becometh not a fool o, much leſs † do lying lips a prince.

n Either, 1. diſcourſe of high and excellent things far above his capacity. Or, 2. lofty or eloquent ſpeech, which fools oft affect. Or, 3. vertuous and godly diſcourſe. o Either properly ſo called: Or, as this word is moſt commonly uſed in this book, a wicked man, whoſe actions give the lye to his expreſſions.

* Chap.18.16. † Heb. a ſtone of grace.

8. * A gift is as † a precious ſtone p in the eyes of him that hath it q, whitherſoever it turneth r, it proſpereth.

p Pleaſant and acceptable, and withal dazleth his eyes. q Heb. of the Lord, or owner of it, either, 1. of the giver: Or rather, 2. of the receiver of it, who by the giver is made Lord of it, for to his eyes it was expoſed, that he might diſcern the beauty and worth of it, and thereby be allured to do what was deſired, which accordingly he did, as it here follows. r To whomſoever it is preſented. But this, as alſo many other Proverbs, are to be underſtood of the common courſe or effect with moſt men, but not univerſally of all men.

Or rather, 2. to the tranſgreſſor, or offending friend; he maintains love among friends, as it may be explained from the oppoſite clauſe. x That publiſheth and ſpreadeth it abroad, that recals it to mind after it was paſt and forgotten. y Or, the matter laſt mentioned, to wit, the tranſgreſſion. z Either, 1. he alienateth his friend from himſelf. Or rather, 2. he raiſeth jealouſies and diſſenſions among friends. This Phraſe we had before, Ch. 16. 28.

‖ Or, a reproof aweth more a wiſe man, than to ſtrike a fool an hundred times.

10. ‖ A reproof entreth more into a wiſe man a, than an hundred ſtripes into a fool.

a Is more effectual for his reformation.

11. An evil man ſeeketh only rebellion b; therefore a cruel meſſenger c ſhall be ſent againſt him.

b It is the conſtant ſtudy and buſineſs of wicked men to rebel, either, 1. againſt men in Authority. But this is not univerſally true, for many moſt wicked perſons are not guilty of that ſin. Or rather, 2. againſt God: For, 1. thus it is true of all wicked men. 2. This word is uſed of rebellion againſt God, Deut. 31. 27. Ezek. 2. 5, 6. & 3. 9, &c. 3. This word being put alone without any addition of the object, ſeems moſt probably to be meant of the higheſt and worſt kind of rebellion, according to the common rule of interpretation in ſuch caſes. c Or, a cruel Angel, the Angel of Death, the Devil, or ſome bloody men employed by God to avenge his quarrel; or ſome dreadful puniſhment; it being very uſual in Scripture to repreſent things under the notion of perſons, as Rom. 7. and elſewhere.

12. Let * a bear robbed of her whelps d meet a man, rather than a fool in his folly e.

15. * He that juſtifieth i the wicked, and he that condemneth the juſt, even they both are abomination to the LORD.

i That acquitteth him as innocent by a judicial Sentence, or otherwiſe approveth or commendeth his evil practices. By which we may eaſily underſtand what it is to condemn the juſt.

16. Wherefore k is there a price l in the hand of a fool to get wiſdom m, ſeeing he hath no heart to it n?

k The queſtion implies that it is unworthily placed, and that it is to no purpoſe or benefit of the Poſſeſſor. l Poſſeſſions or riches, as all the ancient Tranſlators render it, of which this word is uſed, Iſa. 55. 1. and elſewhere, under which all opportunities and abilities of getting it are comprehended. m For the obtaining whereof, rich men have many and great advantages above others. n Neither common diſcretion to diſcern the worth of wiſdom, and his advantage to get it, nor any ſincere deſire to get it; for the heart is commonly uſed in Scripture both for the underſtanding, and for the will and affections.

* Chap.18.24.

17. * A friend o loveth at all times p, and a brother q is born for adverſity r.

o A ſincere and hearty friend. p Not only in proſperity, but alſo in adverſity, when falſe friends forſake us. q Who is ſo not only by name and blood, but by brotherly affection. r Was ſent into the world for this among other ends, that he might comfort and relieve his brother in adverſity. So this Proverb compareth a friend with a brother, and ſheweth that a friend doth that freely, and by choice, which a brother doth by the force and obligations of Nature. But this laſt clauſe may be, and is by divers otherwiſe rendred, and he (to wit, the friend) is born a brother (or, becomes, or is made a brother, i. e. puts on brotherly affection, as if he had received a ſecond birth, and was born his brother, ſuch expreſſions being not unuſual both in Scripture, Scripture, and in other Authors) in or against the time of adversity. So the sense is, He is a Friend at all Times, but in adversity he is more than an ordinary Friend, even a Brother.

* Ch. 6. 1. & 11. 15. † Heb. heart.

18. * A man void of † understanding striketh hands s, and becometh surety in the presence of his friend t.

s In token of his becoming Surety: of which Phrase, and of the thing it self, see on Prov. 6. 1. & 11. 15. t The Friend here is either, 1. before, and to the Creditor. Or rather, 2. before, and with, and for the Debtor, for whom, as being his Friend, he becomes Surety, as the manner of Friends is. See on Prov. 6. 3. And this Proverb is fitly placed after that v. 17. to intimate, that although the laws of Friendship oblige us to love and help our friends in trouble, as far as we are able, yet they do not oblige us to become Surety for them rashly, and above what we are able to pay, for by that means we make our selves unable to do good either to them, or to others, or to our selves.

19. He loveth transgression, that loveth strife u, and he that exalteth his † gate x, seeketh destruction y.

u Because contention is in it self a sin, and is commonly accompanied or followed with many sins, as detraction, malice, hatred, pride, &c. x Either, 1. his mouth, i.e. who speaketh loftily: for we read of the gate or door of ones Mouth in Mich. 7. 5. and elsewhere: but then the word Mouth or Tongue is added to determine the sense: but the Mouth is no where called the gate, simply or absolutely. Or, 2. the Gate of his House, that maketh it, and consequently his House, lofty and magnificent, beyond what befits his quality, which being an evidence and effect of pride and haughtiness of Spirit is here mentioned for all the rest. So the sense is, He who carries himself loftily and scornfully. y He seeks those things which will expose him to destruction, because he maketh himself odious both to God and men. Or findeth destruction; seeking being put for finding or procuring, as above v. 9.

20. † He that hath a froward heart z, findeth no good a, and he that hath a perverse tongue b, falleth into mischief.

z Whose Heart is not plain and upright, but false towards God or men. a Shall not get that advantage by his dissimulation which he intends and expects, but shall fall into mischief, as is implied from the opposite Clause. b That speaks deceitfully or wickedly. So here is a comparison between an evil Heart and an evil Tongue, and the ill effects of both of them.

† Ch. 10. 1.

21. † He that begetteth a fool c, doth it to his sorrow, and the father d of a fool hath no joy e.

c Not a Natural, but a wilful fool, or a wicked Son. d And consequently the Mother also. e Which Parents usually have in the Birth of a Child, and especially of a Son, but hath great cause of sorrow, the contrary being implied in this and such like expressions, as in Scripture, as Prov. 10. 2, &c. so also in profane Authors: whose words see in my Latin Synopsis.

* Ch. 15. 13. & 17. 22. ‖ Or, to a medicine.

22. A merry heart * f doth good g. ‖ like a medicine, but a broken h spirit drieth the bones i.

f Chearfulness of Soul, especially that which is solid, and ariseth from the witness of a good Conscience. g Even to the Body, it contributes very much to the restoration or preservation of bodily Health and Vigour, as Physicians observe, and Experience sheweth. h Sad and dejected. i Wasteth the marrow of the Bones, and the moisture and strength of the Body.

23. A wicked man k taketh a gift out of the bosom l to pervert the ways of judgment m.

k Whether Judge or Witness. l In secret, as this Phrase is expounded, Prov. 21. 14. being privily conveyed from the bosom of the giver into his own bosom. m To give or procure an unjust sentence.

* Eccles. 2. 14. & 8. 1.

24. * Wisdom is before him n that hath understanding, but the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth o.

n Or, in (as the particle peth is used, Deut. 2. 7. and is here rendred by divers Interpreters) the face or countenance. The sense is either, 1. His Wisdom appears even in his gestures and looks, which are modest, and composed, and grave. Or, 2. Wisdom is before him, or in his sight, as the mark at which he aims, or as the rule by which he constantly walketh, and ordereth all his steps, from time to time minding his present duty and business. o The sense of this clause also is either, 1. His folly appears in his light, and unsteddy, and disorderly carriage and looks. Or, 2. His mind is wavering and unsetled, he neither proposeth a right and certain end to himself, nor is he constant in the use of fit means to attain it, he neglects his present business, and true interest, and wanders hither and thither in the pursuit of earthly vanities, minding most those things which are remotest from him, and least concern him.

* Chap. 10. 1. & 15. 20. & 19. 13.

25. * A foolish son is a grief to his father, and bitterness to her that bare him p.

p This he said before, Prov. 15. 20. and elsewhere, but he here repeats it as a point of great moment and constant use, and as a powerful motive to oblige both Children to carry themselves wisely and dutifully to their Parents, as they would not be thought to be unnatural or inhumane, and Parents to educate their Children prudently and religiously, at least for their own comfort, if not for the publick good.

26. Also q † to punish the just r is not good s, nor to strike princes for equity t.

q This particle seems to have relation to the next foregoing Proverb to imply that it is a very evil thing for Children to cause grief to their Parents, as it is also to do what it here follows. r For Parents, or Princes, or Rulers, to whom alone this power belongs, to punish innocent and good men, s is highly evil and abominable, as is implied. See above, v. 20. and Prov. 16. 29. & 17. 10, &c. t Nor to smite Magistrates, either with the Hand or Tongue, for the execution of Justice, as condemned persons are apt to do. Or, as some learned Interpreters render it, Nor for Princes to strike any man for equity, or for doing his duty, or what is just. So this clause best agrees with the former. Besides it belongs to Princes or Magistrates to punish or strike.

* Jam. 1. 19. ‖ Or, a cool spirit.

27. * He that hath knowledge spareth u his words, and a man of understanding is of ‖ an excellent spirit x.

u Heb. restraineth, as at other times, so especially when he is provoked to passion, in which case fools utter all their mind. x Which he sheweth by commanding his passions, and bridling himself from hasty and unadvised speeches. Or, as others render it, is of a cool Spirit, calm and moderate, not easily provoked, humble, as the Chaldee renders it, patient or long-suffering, as the LXX and Arabick Interpreters render the words. Or, as others, sparing (Heb. precious, which is put for rare or scarce, 1 Sam. 3. 1. Prov. 25. 17. Isa. 13. 12.) of his breath, i.e. of his speech, as this very word is used, Prov. 29. 11. Isa. 11. 4. compared with 2 Thes. 2. 8.

* Job 13. 5.

28. * Even a fool when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise y: and he that shutteth his lips is esteemed a man of understanding.

y Because he is sensible of his own folly, and therefore forbears to speak lest he should discover it; which is a great point of true Wisdom.

CHAP. XVIII.

‖ Or, He that separateth himself seeketh according to his desire, and intermeddleth in every business.

1. ‖ Through desire a man having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom a.

a According to this interpretation the sense is, Through desire (of it, to wit, of Wisdom, which is easily understood out of the end of the verse; such Ellipses being frequent in Scripture) a man having separated himself (being sequestred from the company, and noise, and business of the World, betaking himself to retirement and solitude, as men do that apply themselves to any serious study) seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom, i.e. useth all diligence, that he may search and find out all solid knowledge and true Wisdom. And this earnest desire and endeavour to get true Wisdom within a man's self is fitly opposed to the fools contempt of Wisdom, or to his desire of it, not for use and benefit, but only for vain ostentation, which is expressed in the next verse. Although coherence is little regarded by Interpreters in the several Verses and Proverbs of this Book. But this verse is otherwise rendred in the margin of our English Bible, and by divers others, He that separateth himself (either, 1. From his friend. Or rather, 2. From other men, who affects singularity, is wedded to his own Opinion, and through self-conceit despiseth the opinions and conversation of others) seeketh according to his desire (seeketh to gratifie his own Inclinations and Affections, and chuseth those opinions which most comply with them) and intermeddleth (for this word is used in a bad sense, Prov. 17. 14. & 20. 3. and it is not found elsewhere, save in this place) in every business, as proud and singular persons are commonly pragmatical, delighting to find faults in others, that they may get some Reputation to themselves by it. Heb. in every thing that is, thrusting themselves into the actions and affairs of other men. Or, as this last clause is and may be rendred, and contendeth (Heb. mingleth himself; for words of that signification are commonly used for contending or fighting, as Deut. 2. 5, 9, 19. Isa. 36. 8. Dan. 11. 10.) with or against (for the Hebrew prefix, beth, oft signifies against) all Reason or Wisdom: whatsoever any man speaketh against his opinion and desire, though it be never so reasonable and evident, it rejecteth it, and obstinately maintains his own opinion.

2. A fool hath no delight in understanding b, but that his heart may discover it self c.

b In

b In getting sound and saving knowledge, either by his own study, or by the instructions of wise and good men. c Heb. but (his delight is) in the discovery of his own heart, i. e. in uttering that folly and wickedness which is in his heart: being more forward to speak than to hear, which is one badge of a fool.

3. When the wicked cometh d, then cometh also contempt e, and with ignominy reproach f.

d Into any place or company. e Either, 1. Passively; he is justly contemned and reproached by those who converse with him. Or rather, 2. Actively; he despiseth and scorneth all instruction and reproof, neither fearing God, nor reverencing man: For he seems here to note his sin, rather than his punishment. f And he doth not only contemn others in his heart, but sheweth his contempt of them by ignominious and reproachful expressions and carriages.

* Chap. 20. 5. 4. * The words of a mans g mouth are as deep waters h, and the well-spring of wisdom as a flowing brook i.

g (i. e.) A wise mans, as the next clause explains this, who is worthy of the name, and hath the understanding of a man in him. This Hebrew word oft-times notes an eminent or excellent person, and therefore is opposed to Adam, which designs any ordinary man. h Full of deep wisdom. i That wisdom which is in his heart is continually pouring forth wise and good counsels.

* Lev. 19. 15. Deut. 1. 17. & 16. 19. Ch. 24. 23. 5. * It is not good k to accept the person l of the wicked, to overthrow the righteous in judgment.

k (i. e.) It is a most wicked and hateful thing. See on Prov. 17. 15, 26. l To favour his unrighteous cause.

6. A fools lips enter into contention m, and his mouth calleth for strokes n.

m A fool by his rash and wicked speeches provoketh others to quarrel with him, and, as it follows, to strike him. n Procureth strokes to himself.

‖ Or, whisperer. ‖ Or, like as when men are wounded. ‖ Or, but. † Heb. chambers. o Who privily slandereth his Neighbour. p Deeply wound the reputation, and afterwards the heart, of the slandered person. Compare Prov. 12. 18. Or, as others render the word, are as smooth or flattering, i. e. they really are so; the Particle as, being oft used to express the truth of the thing, as hath been noted before. See also Job. 1. 14. They are softer than oil, as is said, Psal. 55. 21. For slanderers use to cover and usher in their calumnies with pretences of kindness and compassion to them whom they traduce. q They wound mortally, piercing to the very heart, which is oft meant by the belly, as Job 15. 35. & 32. 19, &c.

9. He also that is slothful in his work, is brother to him that is a great waster r.

r They are alike, though they take several paths, yet both come to one end, even to extream want and poverty.

* 2 Sam. 22. 51. Psal. 18. 2. & 27. 1. & 61. 3. & 91. 2. & 144. 2. † Heb. is set aloft. 10. * The name of the LORD s is a strong tower t, the righteous u runneth into it, and † is safe.

s (i. e.) The Lord, as he hath revealed himself in his works, and especially in his Word by his promises, and the declarations of his infinite perfections, and of his good will to his people. t Is sufficient for our protection in case of the greatest dangers. u Which limitation he adds to beat down the vain confidences of those men, who though they live in a gross neglect and contempt of God, will expect salvation from him.

* Chap. 10. 15. 11. * The rich mans wealth is his strong city, and as an high wall in his own conceit u.

u He trusts to his wealth, as that which will either enable him to resist his enemy, or at least purchase his favour.

* Chap. 11. 2. 12. * Before destruction the heart of man is haughty x, and before honour y is humility.

x Pride is a cause and presage of ruine, as is noted Prov. 16. 18. y Or, goeth. This clause we had, Prov. 15. 33.

† Heb. returneth a word. 13. He that † answereth a matter before he heareth it z, it is folly and shame a unto him.

z Before he hath fully heard and considered what another is speaking about it. a It is a shameful folly, though he seek the reputation of a wise man by it, as if he could readily and throughly understand all that another can say before he hath uttered it.

14. The spirit b of a man will sustain his infirmity c: but a wounded d spirit who can bear e?

b (i. e.) The soul, to wit, which is unwounded, as appears by the opposite branch of the verse, which is vigorous and chearful, supported by the sense of God's love, and the conscience of its own integrity, and the prospect of its present peace, and future happiness. c Will easily support him under any bodily or outward troubles, as God's people have oft found by experience. d Dejected with the sense of its own guilt and misery. e It is most grievous and intolerable without divine assistance.

15. The heart of the prudent getteth knowledge f, and the ear of the wise seeketh knowledge g.

f By employing his thoughts and studies upon it. g By a greedy and diligent attention to those from whom he may learn it.

16. * A mans gift maketh room for him h, and bringeth him before great men i. * Chap. 17. 8. & 21. 14.

h Procures him free access to great men. Heb. enlargeth him, as this very Phrase is rendred, Psal. 4. 1. and elsewhere, freeth him from straits and oppressions. i Gets him favour and free conversation with them.

17. He that is first in his own cause k seemeth just l, but his neighbour cometh m, and searcheth him n.

k He that first pleadeth his cause. l Both to himself and to the Judge or Court, by his fair pretences. m To contend with him in judgment, and to plead his cause. n Examineth the truth and weight of his Allegations, and disproveth them, and detecteth his weakness. Or, discovers him: for seeking or searching are oft put for finding, as Prov. 17. 9, 19. and elsewhere.

18. The lot causeth contentions to cease o, and parteth p between the mighty q.

o By determining the matters in difference. p Maketh a partition, giveth to every one what is right or meet, by the disposition of divine Providence. q So it doth also between mean persons; but he mentions the mighty, because they are most prone to contention, and most fierce and intractable in it, and most capable of doing great mischief to themselves and others by it, and therefore they most need this remedy.

19. A brother offended r is harder to be won s than a strong city t, and their contentions are like the bars of a castle u.

r To wit, by his brother's unkindness or injury. s Or, is stronger, which is sufficiently understood by the mention of a strong City, to which he is compared; such Ellipses being frequent in the Hebrew, as hath been noted before. t Which is hardly to be conquered. u Which are very strong, and not to be broken, and make the Castle strong, and hardly to be won. The truth of this assertion is confirmed by the testimony of Aristotle and other learned Authors, who affirm the same thing; and the reason of it is evident, because the nearness of the relation greatly heightens the provocation, and love abused frequently turns to extream hatred.

* Chap. 12. 14. & 13. 2. 20. * A mans belly shall be satisfied with the fruit of his mouth x, and with the encrease of his lips shall he be filled.

x Wise and edifying discourses tend to the comfort and satisfaction of the speaker, as well as to the good of the hearers.

21. Death and life are in the power of the tongue y, and they that love it z shall eat the fruit thereof a.

y Are brought upon men by the good or bad use of their tongues. z Either, 1. The tongue, that love and use much talking, which is oft censured as a sin, and a cause of mischief. See Prov. 10. 19. Jam. 1. 19. Or, 2. The use of their tongue in either of those ways, which are plainly supposed in the former clause of the verse: they who do not only speak well, which a wicked man may sometimes do, or speak ill, which a good man may possibly do, but do love, and therefore accustom themselves to speak well or ill. a Shall receive either good or evil according to the quality of their speeches.

* Chap. 19. 14. 22. * Whoso findeth a wife b, findeth a good thing c, and obtaineth favour of the LORD d.

b Either, 1. Simply a wife; for a wife, though she be not the best of kind, is to be esteemed a blessing, being useful both for society of life, Gen. 2. 18. and for the mitigation of a mans cares and troubles, and for the prevention of sins. Or, 2. Good wife, one that deserves the name, and performs the duty of that relation, a wise and worthy wife, as this word may seem to imply, being deduced from the Hebrew word, isch, which sometimes notes a man of Eminency. And this limitation and explication of the word may be gathered both from the following commencommendations, which would hardly be given to a bad Wife, and from the usage of Scripture in which this Ellipsis is frequent, as a path or way is put for a good path or way, Psal. 119. 1. Prov. 15. 10. an answer for a good answer, Prov. 15. 23. a King for a good King, Prov. 16. 10. & 29. 4. a name for a good name, Prov. 22. 1. Eccles. 7. 1, &c. c A singular Blessing. d Obtaineth her not by his own Wit, or Art, or Diligence, but by God's good Providence towards him, which ordereth that and all other events as it pleaseth him.

23. The poor useth intreaties e, but the rich
* Jam. 2. 3. answereth * roughly f.

e Humbly begs the favour of rich men, as his necessities and occasions require it. f Speaketh proudly and scorntully either to the poor, or to others that converse with him, being puffed up with a conceit of his Riches, and of his self-sufficiency.

24. A man that hath friends g must shew himself
* Ch. 17. 17. friendly, * and there is a friend that sticketh closer h than a brother.

g Heb. A man of friends: either, 1. Who desires the friendship of others. Or, 2. Who professeth friendship to others. h To him that desires and needs his help: who is more hearty in the performance of all friendly Offices.

CHAP. XIX.

Chap. 28. 6. 1. * BEtter is the poor that walketh in his integrity a, than he that is perverse in his lips b, and is a fool c.

a Who is upright in his words and actions. b That useth to speak wickedly, which proceeds from a wicked heart, and is usually attended with an evil Life. c Is an Hypocrite, or a wicked man, for this is opposed to the upright man in the former clause; yea, though he be rich, which is implied from the same clause.

2. Also that the soul d be without knowledge e, it is not good f: and he that hasteth with his feet g, sinneth.

d Which is the principal cause and director of all men's actions. e Without Wisdom or Prudence to discern his way, and what, and how, he ought to act in his several cases and concernments. f It is very evil and pernicious. g That rashly and headily rusheth into actions without serious consideration. So two vices are here censured, the want of Knowledge, and the neglect or disuse of Knowledge in a man's actions.

3. The foolishness of man perverteth his way h, and his heart fretteth against the LORD i.

h Either, 1. enticeth him to sin. Or rather, 2. Crosseth and blasteth his designs and enterprises, and brings losses and miseries upon him. i He ascribes his unhappiness not to his own sin and folly, which is the true cause of it, but to God and his Providence, against which he unjustly murmurs.

Ch. 14. 20. 4. * Wealth maketh many friends, but the poor is separated from his neighbour k.

k Is disowned and forsaken by those who are most obliged to help him.

* Ver. 9. Exod. 23. 1. Deut. 19. 16, 19. Ch. 6. 19. & 21. 28. † Heb. held innocent. 5. * A false witness shall not be † unpunished l, and he that speaketh lies m shall not escape.

l Though he escape the observation and punishment of men, yet he shall not avoid the judgment of God. m That accustometh himself to lying, either in judgment, or in common conversation.

† Heb. face. † Heb. a man of gifts. 6. Many will entreat the † favour of the prince n, and every man is a friend o to † him that giveth gifts.

n Or, as others, of the liberal or bountiful man: which comes to the same thing: for Kings were anciently called Benefactors, Luk. 22. 25. o Not sincerely, as daily experience shews, but in shew or profession, or in the outward expressions of it, whereby they may oblige him.

Ch. 14. 20. 7. * All the brethren p of the poor do hate him q, how much more do his friends r go far from him? he pursueth them with words s, yet they are wanting to him t.

p His neareſt and deareſt Relations, who are oft called Brethren in Scripture, by a common Synecdoche. q i.e. Despise and shun him, as men do any thing which they hate, and as the following words explain it. r His former companions, who in his prosperity professed friendship to him. s Earnestly imploring their pity. Or, he urgeth (Heb. pursueth) their words, i.e. alledgeth their former promises, and professions of Friendship. Or, without any supplement, he seeketh words, as the Preacher sought to find out acceptable words, Eccles. 12. 10. wherewith he might prevail or move them to pity. t Heb. they are not: either, 1. His Friends are not, to wit, what they pretended to be, friends to him. Or, 2. Their words are vain, and without effect, there is no reality in them.

8. He that getteth † wisdom, loveth his own † Heb. an heart. soul u, he that keepeth understanding x shall find good y.

u Or, loveth himself, because he procures great good to his Soul, or to himself, as it follows, as sinners on the contrary are said to hate their Souls, Prov. 29. 24. because they bring mischief upon them. x That observeth and carefully practiseth its precepts, as that Phrase is commonly used. y Shall have great benefit by it, both for his conduct in this Life, and for his happiness in the next.

9. A false witness shall not be unpunished, and he that speaketh lies shall perish z.

z This was said before, v. 5. and seems to be here repeated, either for its great use and weight in humane society, and to shew how much God abhors such practices; or to shew the pernicious effects of this sin, and consequently of all other sins, one eminent kind being put for all the rest, and this in opposition to the good effects of Wisdom or Piety, which he declared in the foregoing verse.

10. * Delight a is not seemly for a fool b, much * Eccl. 10. 6. less * for a servant c to have rule over princes d. * Ch. 30. 22. Eccl. 10. 7.

a To live in Pleasure, and Plenty, and outward Glory. b It doth not become him, nor suit with him, partly because Prosperity corrupts even wise men, and makes fools mad, and partly because it gives him more opportunity to discover his folly, and to do mischief both to himself and others. He implies that a rod or punishment is fitter for him than pleasure, as is noted, Prov. 10. 13. & 26. 3. c Who is of a servile condition and disposition, not much differing from a Fool, who is a servant to his Lusts, and wholly unfit to rule other men. d i.e. Over men of better quality than himself: for servants are commonly ignorant, and when they are advanced they grow insolent, and presumptuous, and intolerable.

11. * The ‖ discretion of a man deferreth his * Chap. 14. 29. anger, and it is his glory to pass over a transgression e. ‖ Or, prudence.

e This is opposed to the perverse judgment of worldly men who account it folly and stupidity, not quickly to resent a provocation, and a dishonour and reproach not to revenge it.

12. * The kings wrath is as † the roaring of a * Ch. 16. 14. 15. & 20. 2. & 28. 15. lion, but his favour is as † dew upon the grass. † Terrible as. † Acceptable and comfortable as.

13. * A foolish son is the calamity of his father, * Chap. 10. 1. & 15. 20. and the contentions of a wife are a continual & 17. 21, 25. dropping f. * Ch. 21. 9, 19. & 27. 15.

f Are like rain continually dropping upon an house which by degrees marreth the House and Houshold-stuff, and driveth the inhabitants out of it. He compareth her to a continual dropping, because of that inseparable Union and necessary cohabitation of Husband and Wife together, notwithstanding such contentions.

14. House and riches are the inheritance of fathers, and * a prudent wife is from the LORD g. * Ch. 18. 22.

g Is vouchsafed to a man by a singular providence of God, who is the only Searcher and Ruler of hearts, exactly discerning who are prudent or pious, in which even wise mens judgments are commonly mistaken, and inclining the minds and hearts of persons one towards another.

15. Slothfulness casteth into a deep sleep h; and an idle soul shall suffer * hunger. * Chap. 10. 4. & 20. 13.

h Maketh a man careless and negligent, and like one asleep in his business, whereby he cometh to want, as it follows.

16. * He that keepeth the commandment i, * Luk. 11. 28. keepeth his own soul, but he that despiseth his ways k, shall die.

i The commands of God called by way of eminency the commandment, as the Word is oft used Emphatically for the word of God, as hath been noted before. k Either, 1. His own ways, by not taking heed to his ways, so as to order his Conversation aright. Or, 2. The ways of God, who is understood in the former clause.

17. * He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth * Matt. 10. 42. & 25. 40. unto the LORD l, and ‖ that which he hath given 2 Cor. 9. 6, 7. will he pay him again. ‖ Or, his deed.

l Who takes what is done to them as done to himself, because it is done to them whom God, as to this particular, hath put in his own stead, to be his receivers, and whom God hath in a peculiar manner commended to the care and charity of all other men.

18. * Chasten thy son while there is hope m, and * Chap. 13. 24. & 23. 13. let not thy soul spare n ‖ for his crying o. ‖ Or, to his destruction, or, to cause him to die.

m Before custom in sin, and thy indulgence hath made him hard-hearted and incorrigible. n Forbear not to give him due and necessary correction. o Which oft stirs up a foolish and pernicious pity in Parents towards them. This word, with some small difference in the points, is used in this sense, Isa. 14. 11. Or, as it is in the margent, to his destruction, intimating that this is a cruel pity, and a likely way to expose him to that death threatned to stubborn Sons, Deut. 21. 18, 21. But this clause is, and may be, rendred otherwise, yet, or but do not lift up thy soul (which signifies a vehement desire, Deut. 24. 15. Psal. 25. 1. Jer. 44. 14. let not thy passion, or eager desire of chastening him, transport thee so far as) to cause him to die, i. e. use moderation in this work.

19. A man of great wrath p shall suffer punishment; for if thou deliver him q, yet thou must † do it again r.

p Or, He who is of great wrath, of strong passions. Which may be understood either, 1. More particularly, of a Son of such a temper, who is very impatient of correction, and breaks forth into violent passions upon that occasion; and then the following words contain the Parents duty, which is to take care to punish him, because if he spare him that time for his passion, he must do so again and again, the same cause returning upon him, and so must wholly forbear to chasten him. Or, 2. More generally, of any man of a fierce and furious temper and carriage, and then the next words declare only the event, by his great and repeated provocations he will bring punishment upon himself either from God or men. q If either a Parent, or another person provoked by him, forbear to punish him. He turneth his speech to the party, as is usual in Scripture, and in other Authors. r Heb. thou must add, to wit, to deliver him again and again, as oft as he shall offend: or, thou wilt add or encrease, to wit, his wrath, which thou shouldst subdue.

20. Hear counsel, and receive instruction, that thou mayest be wise in * thy latter end s.

* Psal. 55. 23.

s Before thy death come. Which he adds not exclusively, as if he ought not to be wise before, but Emphatically to shew, that how foolishly soever he had spent his former and younger years, it highly concerned him to be wise before it was too late, or before death came.

21. * There are many devices in a mans heart t, nevertheless the counsel of the LORD u that shall stand x.

* Job 23. 13. Psal. 33. 10, 11. Ch. 16. 1, 9. Isa. 46. 10. Heb. 6. 17.

t Understand out of the opposite clause, which shall not stand but be disappointed. u His eternal (and unchangeable and most wise Decree, which oft-times contradicts, and always overrules the designs and purposes of men. x (i. e.) Be certainly fulfilled, as this Phrase is used, Jer. 44. 28, 29. and elsewhere.

22. The desire of a man y is his kindness, and a poor man z is better than a liar a.

y Either, 1. of any or every man. All men desire, and it is desirable to be in a capacity of being kind and bountiful to others, whereby they gain love and honour, and many other great advantages. Or, 2. of the poor man, expressed in the next clause. The hearty will or desire of being kind or liberal to others in necessity, is all the kindness which a poor man can shew, and is accepted by God, and should be owned by men as a real kindness. Compare 2 Cor. 8. 12. Or, 3. of the rich man, as may be gathered from the opposition of this man to the poor man in the following clause; such Ellipses being very common in this Book, as hath been noted again and again. So the sense may be this, There be a sort of rich men all whose kindness and charity consists in good desires and well-wishes to persons in misery, saying to them, depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled, but not giving them those things which are needful, as it is expressed, Jam. 2. 16. And this sense seems to agree very well with the following clause. But being singular in this exposition, I submit it to the judicious Reader. z Who is not able to give what he desires to do. a Than a rich man who feeds the poor with good words and fair promises, but doth not perform what he pretends, and is able to do.

23. The fear of the LORD tendeth to life, and he that hath it shall abide satisfied b, he shall not be visited with evil c.

b Shall want nothing, and shall be fully contented with God's favour and blessing. c With any destructive affliction.

24. * A slothful man hideth his hand in his bosom d, and will not so much as bring it to his mouth again e.

* Chap. 15. 19. & 26. 13. 15.

d Either to keep it warm in cold weather: Or, to give it rest, being loth to oppress it with the labour of any action. It is a sarcastical Hyperbole. e To wit, to feed himself; he expects that the meat should drop into his mouth.

25. * Smite a scorner f, and the simple g † will beware, and reprove one that hath understanding, and he will understand knowledge h.

* Chap. 21. 11. † Heb. will be cunning.

f An obstinate and impudent transgressor, who rejects and scorns all admonitions, and therefore is to be taught with blows. g Who sin through ignorance, and imprudence, and infirmity, being possibly drawn to sin by the scorners evil counsel or example. h A verbal reproof will be more effectual for his reformation than the severest punishments will be to a scorner.

26. He that wasteth his father i, and chaseth away his mother k, is a son that causeth shame, and bringeth reproach l.

i (i. e.) His Father's estate by unjust or riotous courses. k Causeth her to avoid and abhor his presence and society, and to go from the house where he is. l Both to himself and to his Parents and Family. But this Verse may very well be rendred otherwise, the last words being made the subject of the Proposition, as is usual in Scripture, A Son that causeth shame and bringeth reproach (upon himself and his friends by wicked ways) wasteth his Father's (estate and health and comfort) and chaseth or driveth away his Mother. These are the effects of his wickedness.

27. Cease, my son, to hear the instruction that causeth to err from the words of knowledge m.

m If thou hast formerly, yet do not now any longer hearken to those false doctrines or evil counsels which tend to withdraw thee from the belief or practice of God's holy Word.

28. † An ungodly witness scorneth judgment n, and the mouth of the wicked devoureth iniquity o.

n Hath no reverence to the place of Justice, nor to the presence of God there, nor to that sacred and solemn work of executing judgment, but in spight of all gives in a false testimony. o Uttereth wickedness with as great greediness, and delight, and ease, as they swallow down delicious meats and drinks. Compare Job 15. 16.

29. Judgments are prepared p for scorners, and stripes for the back of fools.

p Either by men, or at least by God; although they be deferred for a time, yet they are treasured up for them, and shall infallibly be inflicted upon them.

CHAP. XX.

1. WIne is a mocker a, strong drink is raging b, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise c.

a Wine immoderately drunk makes men mockers or scoffers at God and men. Compare Hos. 7. 5. b Makes men full of rage and passion. c Is a fool, or a mad man, because he depriveth himself of the use of his reason.

2. * The fear of a king d is as the roaring of a lion, whoso provoketh him to anger, sinneth against his own soul e.

* Chap. 16. 14. & 19. 12.

d Passively taken, the terror which the wrath of a King causeth, by comparing this with Ch. 19. 12. e Exposeth himself to manifest danger of death.

3. * It is an honour for a man to cease from strife f: but every fool will be medling g.

* Chap. 17. 14.

f Either to prevent it, or, if it be begun, to put an end to it: which, although proud and profane persons esteem dishonourable to them, is indeed their glory, because it is an evidence of their great wisdom and power over their passions, and of their respect and obedience to their Sovereign Lord, in which their honour and happiness consists. g To wit, with matters of strife, he is always ready to begin strife, and obstinate in the continuance of it.

4. * The sluggard will not plow by reason of the ‖ cold h, therefore shall he beg in harvest, and have nothing i.

* Chap. 10. 4. ‖ Or, winter.

h Of the plowing season, which is in Autumn and towards Winter. He hates and avoids all laborious and difficult work, although his own necessity and interest oblige him to it. i And not obtain an alms, not in that time of plenty and bounty, because mens hearts are justly hardned against that man, who by his own sloth and wilfulness hath brought himself to want.

5. * Counsel k in the heart of man is like deep water l: but a man of understanding will draw it out m.

* Chap. 18. 4.

k Either, 1. Wisdom or ability to give good counsel. Or, 2. Designs or purposes of doing something of moment: for this word is frequently used in both senses, but the last seems fittest here. l Either, 1. is there in great abundance. Or, 2. is secret and hard to be discovered. m By prudent questions and discourses, and a diligent observation of his words and actions.

6. Most

6. Moſt men will proclaim every one his own ‖ goodneſs n; but a faithful man o who can find p?

* Pſ. 112. 2.

7. The juſt man walketh in his integrity q; * his children are bleſſed after him r.

q He proveth himſelf to be ſo not only by his profeſſion, of which he ſpoke in the former Verſe, but by his ſincere and unblameable converſation. r By vertue of that Covenant which God hath made with ſuch men, which is not confined to their Perſons, but entaileth Bleſſings upon their Poſterity.

* Ch. 16. 10. Verſ. 26.

8. * A king that ſitteth in the throne of judgment s, ſcattereth away all evil t with his eyes u.

s That makes it his great care and buſineſs to execute Judgment and Juſtice among his People, eſpecially if he do this in his own Perſon, as was uſual in ancient Times, and ſees things with his own Eyes. As for the Phraſe, the ſign or geſture is here put for the thing ſignified by it. t Effectually puniſheth and ſuppreſſeth all wickedneſs. u With his very looks, or by his diligent inſpection into affairs.

Or, as others render it, and as the words lie in the Hebrew Text, He that revealeth ſecrets (contrary to his promiſe or the truſt repoſed in him, you may by that token be aſſured that) he doth and will go about as a Tale-bearer. He who divulgeth ſecrets cannot or will not forbear to publiſh other things, and ſo is not fit to be truſted with any thing. x To prevent that miſchief. 21. * An inheritance may be gotten haſtily at the beginning d, but the end thereof ſhall not be bleſſed e.

d An Eſtate ſometimes is got ſuddenly in the very beginning of a Man's labours for it, in which caſe it may be preſumed that ſome undirect and unrighteous courſes were uſed, for the getting of it, becauſe Riches are very ſeldom given by God, or gotten by men, without mens diligence. But this, as well as many other Proverbs, are to be underſtood of the common courſe, although it admit of ſome exceptions. For ſometimes Merchants, or others get great Eſtates ſpeedily by one happy Voyage, or by ſome other proſperous event. This Tranſlation follows the Hebrew Marginal reading, but according to the Textual reading, it may be thus rendered and underſtood, An Inheritance gotten in the beginning (to wit, of a man's indeavours) is abominable, to wit, unto God, being ſuppoſed to be unjuſtly gotten, as was now ſaid. e At laſt it ſhall be curſed and wither by God's juſt judgment.

k All mens purpoſes and actions. l Are ordered and overruled by God's wiſe and powerful Providence to accompliſh his own counſel and good pleaſure, and not what men liſt or intend.

m Either, 1. what course he ought to take; which he cannot know without God's direction and assistance. Compare Prov. 16. 9. Jer. 10. 23. Or, 2. what the issue of his designs will be, whether they shall succeed or be disappointed, the way being taken for the end or event to which it leads, as it is in many other places. The scope of the Proverb is to shew, that all the events of humane life are neither ordered nor foreseen by man's, but only by God's Providence, and therefore men should only mind the doing of their duty, and then quietly depend upon God for a good issue to their endeavours.

25. It is a snare n to the man who devoureth that which is holy o, and after vows to make enquiry p.

n It brings guilt and God's curse and vengeance upon him. o (i.e.) Those meats or drinks which were devoted or consecrated to God. He punisheth them severely, as their offences deserve. This or such like punishments were not unusual among the Eastern Nations, as we may gather from 2 Sam. 8. 2. & 12. 31. Amos 1. 3.

27. The spirit t of man is the ‖ candle u of the LORD x, searching all the inward parts of the belly y.

t (i.e.) The reasonable Soul. u Is a clear and glorious light set up in man for his information and direction. x So called partly because it comes from God in a more immediate and peculiar manner than the body doth, Eccles. 12. 7. and partly because it is in God's stead to observe and judge all a mans actions. y Discerning not only his outward actions, which are visible to others, but his most inward and secret thoughts and affections, which no other man can see, 1 Cor. 2. 11. The Belly is here put for the heart, as it is frequently. The Soul can reflect upon and judge of its own dispositions and actions. Which plainly sheweth that the heart is not so deceitful, but that a man by diligent study of it, and the use of the means appointed by God, may arrive at a certain knowledge of its state and condition, in reference to God, and to Salvation.

* Psal. 101. 1. Ch. 29. 14.

z Clemency to offenders, and bounty to worthy, and to indigent persons. a Faithfulness in keeping his word and promises inviolably. b Because they engage God to guard him, and gain him the reverence and affections of his people, which is a King's greatest safety and happiness. c Which is again mentioned, to shew that although it be an act of Grace, and therefore in some sort free, yet Princes are obliged to it both by their duty, and by their interest, because it is a singular means of their preservation.

* Chap. 16. 31.

29. The glory of young men d is their strength; and * the beauty of old men is the gray head e.

d That wherein they glory as their priviledge above old men. e (i.e.) Their old age expressed by the outward sign of it, wherein they glory as their peculiar priviledge, as a testimony of their piety and God's blessing, and as a token of their great experience and wisdom. The design of this Proverb is to declare the several advantages of several ages, and the mutual need they have one of another, and thereby to engage them to mutual love and assistance, and to friendly converse, and to make every one contented with his own age and condition, and not to envy, nor yet despise his brother or the difference of their ages, as is very usual among men.

30. The blueness of a wound f † cleanseth away evil g; so do stripes h the inward parts of the belly i.

f Grievous wounds which make men black and blue, or severe punishments. g Are the most effectual means to reclaim a wicked man, and to purge out his corruption. h Heb. and stripes, which answer to the wounds in the former clause. i Either, 1. Which pierce even to the inward parts of the belly, and so we are to understand out of the former branch, cleanse away evil. Or, 2. They cleanse the inward parts of the belly, i.e. of the heart. So this is an addition to the former clause, and the sense of the whole is, Grievous wounds or stripes do cleanse not only the outward man by keeping it from evil actions, but even the inward man, by expelling or subduing vile affections. Which is mentioned as a great and blessed benefit of afflictions.

CHAP. XXI.

1. THe kings heart a is in the hand of the LORD, as the rivers of water b, he turneth it c whithersoever he will d.

a His very inward purposes and inclinations, which seem to be most in a mans own power, and out of the reach of all others, and much more his tongue and hand, and all his outward actions. He names Kings, not to exclude other men, but because they are more arbitrary and uncontrollable than other men. b Which Husbandmen or Gardiners can draw by little chanels into the adjacent grounds as they please, and as their occasions require. c Directeth and boweth partly by suggesting those things to their minds which have a commanding influence upon their wills, and partly by a direct and immediate motion of their wills and affections, which being God's creatures, must needs be as subject to his power and pleasure as either mens minds or bodies are, and which he moves sweetly and suitably to their own nature, though strongly and effectually. d So as they shall fulfil his counsels and designs, either of mercy or of correction to themselves, or to their people.

2. Every way of a man is right in his own eyes, but the LORD pondereth the hearts e.

h One gesture or sign of pride put for all the rest, Prov. 6. 17. i Pride lurking and reigning in the heart, though it do not discover it self to men by outward actions, but be disguised with a shew of humility, as it is frequently. k Either, 1. strictly and properly so called: even their evil or natural actions, which in themselves are lawful and good, are made sinful as they are managed by ungodly men, without any regard to the service and glory of God, which ought to be the great end of all our actions, 1 Cor. 10. 31. and with a design of serving their own wicked lusts by it. Or, 2. Metaphorically, their designs and endeavours, which are said to be sin, because they are wholly and fully set upon sin, and they make sin their trade or business, which is called Plowing wickedness, Job 4. 8. But all the ancient Interpreters, and divers others render the word the Lamp or Light, as this Hebrew word, even thus pointed, is rendred, 1 Kings 11. 36. & 15. 4. 2 Kings 8. 19. 2 Chron. 21. 7. and the Lamp of the wicked is a Phrase used in this Book, Ch. 13. 9. & 24. 20. as also, Job 21. 17. whereas the Plowing of the wicked is a Phrase not elsewhere used. [illegible] this seems best to agree with the Context, for by their [illegible] he seems to understand all their pomp and glory, that worldly greatness and prosperity, which is the fuel of their pride, and therefore is most fitly joyned with it. l It is by them turned into sin, and made the occasion of much wickedness. The whole verse may be thus rendred, An high look, and a proud heart, which is the light or glory of the wicked (i.e. wherein they glory, esteeming it magnanimity or gallantry of spirit) is sin, i.e. is a great and grievous sin. And in this manner the learned Mercer renders the Verse, save only that he translates the Hebrew word Nir, the Plowing.

27. * The sacrifice s of the wicked is abomination t: how much more when u he bringeth it † with a wicked mind x!

s All the most glorious and costly services which they offer to God. t God rejects and abhors them, because they are offered by such men, and in such manner as God justly abhors. u Or, because, as all the ancient Translators render it, the Hebrew particle, aph, being expletive: Or, even because; so the following clause gives the reason of the former Proposition. x With an hypocritical and impenitent Heart, or with a bad design, not in obedience to God's Command, and with respect to his his honour and ſervice, but either to cover, or countenance, or promote ſome wicked intention or courſe, which, notwithſtanding all his profeſſions of Religion, he is reſolved to proſecute.

* Ch. 19. 5, 9. † Heb. witneſs of lies.

28. * † A falſe witneſs y ſhall periſh z: but the man that heareth a, ſpeaketh conſtantly b.

y Heb. A witneſs of lies, one who is forward to ſwear or ſpeak falſe things, or ſuch things as he hath not heard nor learned from others, nor ſeen, but deviſed in his own heart. z Shall be ſeverely puniſhed either by God or men, and ſhall be confounded and ſilenced, becauſe none will for the future regard or credit his teſtimony. a He who hears before he ſpeaks, and witneſſeth nothing but what he hath heard or ſeen, and knows to be true. b Doth not contradict himſelf, but always affirmeth the ſame thing. Or, as moſt other Interpreters render the words, ſpeaketh (or, may ſpeak, dare ſpeak freely and boldly) for ever, when lyars are cut off, he lives, and is in a capacity of ſpeaking and bearing witneſs again and again, as occaſion requires, as long as he lives, and his teſtimony will be received.

29. A wicked man hardeneth his face c: but as for the upright, he ‖ directeth his way d.

c Continueth in evil courſes with obſtinacy and impudence, in ſpight of all the commands of God, or counſels of men. d He ordereth his ſteps aright, and if at any time he goeth away, he doth not add rebellion to his ſin, nor perſiſt in his errour, but conſidereth his ways, and turneth his feet to God's teſtimonies, as David did, Pſal. 119. 59. Or, conſidereth his way, remembring with grief and ſhame what he hath done, and taking better heed to himſelf for the future.

* Jer. 9. 23.

31. * The horſe f is prepared againſt the day of battle: but * ‖ ſafety is of the LORD g.

f Under which particular all warlike proviſions are comprehended. g The ſucceſs of the battle depends not upon any humane ſtrength or art, but meerly upon God's Providence, who gives the victory when and to whom he pleaſeth, and oftimes to thoſe that have leaſt reaſon to expect it. Compare Eccleſ. 9. 11.

CHAP. XXII.

* Eccleſ. 7. 1. ‖ Or, favour is better than, &c.

1. A * good name a is rather to be choſen than great riches b, and ‖ loving favour c rather than ſilver and gold.

a Heb. name put for good name, as Eccleſ. 7. 2. the word good being eaſily underſtood out of the next clauſe, in which it is expreſſed in the Hebrew Text. A good reputation amongſt wiſe and good men. b Partly becauſe it is a moſt ſpecial bleſſing from God, being appropriated to worthy perſons, whereas God commonly throws away riches upon the baſeſt of men: partly becauſe it gives a man that tranquillity and ſatisfaction of mind, and that content and comfort in his condition, which no riches can purchaſe: and partly becauſe as it is commonly an evidence of a mans vertue and piety, ſo it is accompanied with God's love and favour, whereas riches are oft given by God in wrath, and to the hurt of the owner. c Or, good grace or favour, a good report among men, eſpecially among good men, and that hearty love and kindneſs which attends upon it.

* Chap. 29. 13.

2. * The rich and poor meet together d: the LORD is the maker of them all e.

d Either, 1. In a way of hoſtility or oppoſition, as this word is ſometimes uſed, the rich contemning and oppreſſing the poor, and the poor envying and purloining from the rich; and ſo the following words are a reaſon why that hoſtility ſhould ceaſe. Or, 2. In the way of mutual converſe, they live together, and need one another. e Not only as they are men, but alſo as they are poor or rich, which difference comes wholly from God's Providence. They have one common Creator, and Lord, and Judge, and the one cannot deſpiſe nor grudge at the other without a reflection upon God.

* Chap. 14. 16. & 27. 12.

3. * A prudent man foreſeeth the evil f, and hideth himſelf g: but the ſimple paſs on h, and are puniſhed.

f The calamity or judgment of God threatned, and approaching. g Retireth to his ſtrong Tower, mentioned Prov. 18. 10. by prayer and repentance, putteth himſelf under the protection of the Almighty. Compare Iſa. 26. 20. h In their former road and courſe of ſin, careleſly and ſecurely, as Travellers do in a road where they apprehend no danger.

* Pſal. 112. 3. ‖ Or, the reward of humility, &c.

4. * ‖ By humility i, and the fear of the LORD k, are riches, and honour, and life l.

i Or, becauſe of humility: or, as many others render it, the reward of humility, that reward which God hath graciouſly promiſed, and will give to Humility; which is a grace of great price in God's eyes. See Iſa. 57. 15. Jam. 4. 6. k By which he diſtinguiſheth true and Chriſtian Humility from counterfeit and moral humility, becauſe that ariſeth from a deep ſenſe of God's greatneſs, and purity, and perfection, compared with our own meanneſs, and filthineſs, and manifold imperfections, whereas this is quite of another nature, and from other grounds. l The comforts of this life, and the happineſs of the next, both which are promiſed to godlineſs, 1 Tim. 4. 8.

5. Thorns and ſnares are in the way of the froward m: he that doth keep his ſoul n ſhall be far from them o.

m The wicked by their evil courſes expoſe themſelves to many dangers and occaſions both of ſin and miſchief. n That taketh heed to himſelf, and to his actions, and to the ſaving of his life and ſoul. o Either, 1. will avoid the ſociety of ſuch froward perſons. Or, 2. ſhall by that circumſpection preſerve himſelf from thoſe thorns, &c. with which the Pronoun, them, agrees in number.

‖ Or, catechiſe. † Heb. in his way.

6. ‖ Train up p a child † in the way he ſhould go q: and when he is old, he will not depart from it r.

p Or, initiate or inſtruct. q Heb. in, or according to his way, i. e. either, 1. according to his capacity. Or rather, 2. in that courſe or manner of life which thou wouldeſt have him chuſe and follow. Or, as one learned man renders it, in the beginning of his way, i.e. in his tender years, as ſoon as he is capable of inſtruction. Heb. in the mouth, &c. The mouth is oft put for the beginning or entrance of any place, as Gen. 29. 2. Joſ. 10. 18. Prov. 8. 3. Dan. 6. 17. r To wit, not eaſily and ordinarily. The impreſſions made in childiſh years will remain, as hath been obſerved by all ſorts of learned Writers. But this, as other Proverbs of like nature, are not to be underſtood as if this were univerſally and neceſſarily true, which Experience confutes, but becauſe it is ſo for the moſt part, except ſome extraordinary cauſe hinder it.

* Jam. 2. 6. † Heb. to the man that lendeth.

7. * The rich ruleth over the poor s, and the borrower is ſervant † to the lender t.

s To wit, with rigor and tyranny, taking advantage of his neceſſities. t Is at his mercy, and therefore forced to comply with his pleaſure. The deſign of the Proverb is partly to correct this miſcarriage of the rich, and partly to oblige all men to diligence, whereby they may deliver themſelves from this ſervitude.

* Job 4. 8. Hoſ. 10. 13. ‖ Or, and with the rod of his anger he ſhall be conſumed.

8. * He that ſoweth iniquity u, ſhall reap vanity x: ‖ and the rod of his anger ſhall fail y.

u Or, unrighteouſneſs, whoſe common practice it is to wrong or oppreſs others. x Or, trouble or miſery, as this word is commonly uſed, and as divers here render it. The miſchief which he hath done to others ſhall be returned to him by God's righteous ſentence. y That power which he uſed with fury and cruelty ſhall be taken away from him.

* 2 Cor. 9. 6. † Heb. good of eye.

9. * † He that hath a bountiful eye z, ſhall be bleſſed a: for he giveth of his bread to the poor.

z Heb. a good eye, He who looks upon the wants and miſeries of others with compaſſion and kindneſs, as this Phraſe is uſed, Mat. 20. 15. as an evil eye is put for one that beholds others with envy and unmercifulneſs, Deut. 15. 9. Prov. 23. 6. & 28. 22. a Both by God and men.

* Pſal. 101. 5.

10. * Caſt out b the ſcorner c, and contention ſhall go out; yea, ſtrife and reproach d ſhall ceaſe.

b Out of your ſociety, avoid converſation with him. c Who neither fears God, nor reverenceth man, but ſcorns all admonitions, and minds only the pleaſing of himſelf, and the gratifying of his own luſts, which is the chief cauſe of moſt contentions. d Wherewith he loads thoſe that either oppoſe or admoniſh him.

* Pſal. 101. 6. Chap. 16. 13. ‖ Or, and hath grace in his lips.

11. * He that loveth pureneſs of heart e, ‖ for the grace of his lips f, the king ſhall be his friend g.

e Who is plain-hearted or ſincere, and abhors diſſimulation. f From thoſe gracious ſpeeches which naturally and commonly flow from a pure heart. Or, and (underſtand, loveth, out of the former clauſe) grace of his lips. Whoſe diſcourſe is gracious and ſincere. g The greateſt men will, or ſhould, deſire, and highly prize the acquaintance and advice of ſuch perſons, rather than of diſſemblers and flatterers, wherewith they are moſt commonly peſtered.

12. The eyes of the LORD preſerve h knowledge i, and he overthroweth ‖ the words k of the tranſgreſſor.

h God by the watchful Eye of his Providence maintains and defends. i To wit, men of knowledge, the abſtract being put for the concrete, as pride is put for a proud man, Pſal. 36. 11. deceit for the deceitful, as Prov. 12. 17. So here knowledge for knowing and good men, ſuch as the laſt verſe ſpoke of, whoſe hearts are pure, and ſpeeches gracious, not only the King ſhall be be their friend, as he said there, but God also, which he adds here. k Their false and flattering speeches, whereby they designed and expected to gain the favour and friendship of great men, which are opposed to the sincere and gracious speeches of good men, implied in the first clause of this verse, and expressed in the foregoing verse. Or, as others render it, and the word is very commonly used, the matters, all his counsels, hopes, enterprizes, and concerns.

13. * The slothful man saith l, There is a lion without m: I shall be slain n in the streets o.

* Chap. 26. 13.

l Alledgeth as his excuse to them who upbraid him with idleness, or perswade him to diligence. m There are extream dangers and invincible difficulties in my way. n By that Lion, or some other way. o Which is added to shew the ridiculousness of his excuse; for Lions abide in the woods or fields, not in the streets of Towns or Cities.

14. * The mouth p of strange women is a deep pit q: he that is abhorred of the LORD r shall fall therein.

* Chap. 2. 16. & 5. 3. & 7. 5. & 23. 27.

p Her fair and flattering speeches wherewith she enticeth him to gross filthiness, as it is noted, Prov. 7. 21. q Into which it is easie to fall, but hard, if not impossible, to get out of it. It is a rare thing for any person, once entred into the course of Whoredom, sincerely to repent of it, and turn from it. See Prov. 2. 19. r To wit, in an high and singular manner, who by his former impieties, and contempt of God and of his Grace, hath provoked God to leave and loath him, and to punish one sin with another: for otherwise all sinners, as such, are abhorred by God.

15. Foolishness is bound s in the heart of a child, but * the rod of correction shall drive it far from him t.

* Chap. 13. 24. & 19. 18. & 23. 13. & 29. 15, 17.

s Is fixed and setled there, as being born with him, and rooted in his very nature, and not plucked up without great difficulty and diligence. t The smart of punishment makes him weary of his sin, and watchful against it.

16. He that oppresseth the poor to encrease his riches, and he that giveth to the rich u, shall surely come to want.

u That vainly and prodigally casts away his Estate upon those who do not need it, or gives it to them with evil design, as that they may assist him in oppressing the poor, or at least not hinder him in it.

17. Bow down thine ear, and hear the words of the wise x, and apply thine heart y unto my knowledge z.

x Of wise and holy men of God. y Thirst after it, and give up thy self to the diligent study of it. z The knowledge of God, and of thy several duties, which I am here delivering to thee.

18. For it is a pleasant thing if thou keep them a † within thee b; they shall withal be fitted c in thy lips.

† Heb. in thy belly. Job 15. 35. & 32. 18.

a The words of the wise. b Heb. in thy belly, i. e. in thine heart, which implies receiving them in love, and retaining them in mind and memory. c Be fitly expressed: or, be disposed or ordered. The sense is, When thou hast got them into thine heart, thou wilt be able and ready to discourse pertinently and profitably of them.

19. That thy trust may be in the LORD d, I have made † known to thee this day, ‖ even to thee.

† Them. ‖ Or, trust thou also.

d That knowing God, and his Word, and Promises, thou mayest chearfully and confidently trust in him, which is the only way to thy safety and happiness.

20. Have not I written to thee † excellent things e in counsels and knowledge f?

† Heb. things of command or authority.

e Or, princely things, as they are called, Prov. 8. 6. the great things of God's law, as Hos. 8. 12. f Consisting of Counsels to direct thy practice, and Knowledge to inform and enrich thy mind. Or, by that known Figure Hendiadys, in counsels of knowledge, i. e. in good counsels which proceed from sound knowledge, and make a man knowing and wise, which are opposed to the counsels of the wicked, Prov. 12. 5. which are without knowledge.

21. That I might make thee know the certainty of the words of truth g; that thou mightest answer the words of truth h ‖ to them that send unto thee i?

‖ Or, to those that send thee.

g That I may teach thee, not false, or vain, or uncertain things, as the Teachers of the Heathen Nations do, but the true and infallible Oracles of God. h That being instructed by me, thou maist be able to give true, and solid, and satisfactory answers. i To wit, for thine advice in great and difficult matters. Or, to those that send thee, i. e. that employ thee in any business of moment, whereof they expect an account from thee.

22. Rob not the poor, because he is poor k: * neither oppress the afflicted in the gate l.

* Zech. 7. 10.

k This may be mentioned, either, 1. As a motive to this robbery, because he was unable to resist him, or to revenge himself upon him: Do not take advantage of his poverty. Or, 2. As an Argument against it, because he is a fitter object for thy pity and charity, than for thy injustice or cruelty. It is base and inhumane to crush such a person. l In the place of Judgment, or under pretence of Justice, and much less in other ways where there is no colour of Justice.

23. * For the LORD will plead their cause m, and spoil the soul n of those that spoiled them.

* Chap. 23. 11.

m Which he hath in a peculiar manner undertaken to do. n Take away not only their goods but their lives too. So fully will he recompense their wickedness to them.

24. Make no friendship with an angry man, and with a furious man thou shalt not go o.

o Into his company: not converse frequently and familiarly with him, as friends use to do.

25. Lest thou learn his ways p, and get a snare q to thy soul.

p Lest thou be infected by his example, or provoked by his passion to return the like to him. q Either, 1. A mischief, which is oft the effect of unbridled rage. Or, 2. An occasion of sin, either by drawing thee to an imitation or requital of his rage; or by tempting thee to unfaithfulness in performing the great office of a friend, to wit, admonition or reproof, which, by reason of his furious temper, thou either canst not, or wilt not do.

26. * Be not thou one of them that strike hands, or of them that are sureties for debts r.

* Chap. 6. 1. & 11. 15.

r To wit, rashly, or unnecessarily.

27. If thou hast nothing to pay, why should he * take away thy bed from under thee s?

* Chap. 20. 16.

s Why wilt thou put thy self into the hands of such a man, who will exact the debt from thee without any compassion? For though God did not allow this practice, covetous Creditors would frequently do it.

28. * Remove not the ancient ‖ land-mark t which thy fathers have set.

* Deut. 19. 14. & 27. 17. Chap. 23. 10. ‖ Or, bound.

t Whereby the Lands of several Possessors were distinguished and divided. Do not enrich thy self with the injury of other men: Do not invade the rights of others.

29. Seest thou a man diligent u in his business? he shall stand before kings x, he shall not stand before † mean men.

u Or, expeditious, as the word properly signifies, one of quick dispatch, vigorous and speedy in executing what hath been well and wisely contrived. x He is fit to be employed in the affairs of the greatest Princes.

CHAP. XXIII.

1. WHen thou sittest to eat with a ruler a, consider diligently what is before thee b.

a When thou art invited to a Feast with a great man. b Either, 1. What person or persons. Or rather, 2. What things, what plenty and variety of meats and drinks, by which thou maist easily be tempted to excess, and by that means induced to use such speeches or carriages, as may be unfit for thee, or many ways hurtful to thee.

2. And put a knife to thy throat c, if thou be a man given to appetite d.

c Restrain and moderate thine appetite, as if a knife, or some other thing stuck in thy throat, and hindred thee from swallowing what thou didst desire; or, as if a man stood with a knife at thy throat ready to kill thee, if thou didst transgress; or, though it be as irksom to thee to do so, as if thou hadst a knife put to thy throat. So this is to be understood metaphorically, as that Phrase of cutting off the right hand, &c. Mat. 5. 29, 30. Or, For thou dost (or, lest thou shouldst, as the Syriack Interpreter renders it; or, otherwise thou wilt or shouldst,) put a knife to thy throat. So the sense is, When thou goest to their Feasts, thou dost expose thy self to great and manifest hazards, to thy own intemperance, and to all its dangerous consequences, and to the ill effects of other mens intemperance. d Prone to excess in eating and drinking.

3. Be

3 Be not desirous of his dainties: for they are deceitful meat e.

e Either because they do not yield thee that satisfaction which thou didst expect from them, but rather load thee with ill humors and the seeds of divers diseases; or because they are not provided for thee with sincerity and good Will, but with some evil design upon thee, either to discover and betray thee, or to enslave thee. See below v. 6, 7.

* Ch. 28. 20. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10.

4. * Labour not f to be rich: cease from thine own wisdom g.

f Heb. Do not weary thy self with immoderate cares and labors, as many covetous men do. g From that carnal Wisdom which is natural to man in his corrupt estate, which perswades men to believe that it is their interest to use all possible means to get Riches, and that the Happiness of their Lives consists in the abundance of their Possessions, directly contrary to the assertion of our blessed Lord, Luke 12. 15.

5. † Wilt thou set thine eyes upon that h which is not i? for riches certainly make themselves wings, they fly away as an eagle k towards heaven.

h i. e. Look upon it with earnestness and greedy desire; employing the Eyes of thy Mind and Body about it. i Which hath no solid and setled being, which is ours to have, but not to hold, which is always upon the wing, and oft-times gone in the twinkling of an Eye, so that the owner is frequently at a loss, and cannot tell whether he hath his Estate, or whether he hath lost it. k Swiftly, strongly, and irrevocably. We quickly lose the sight and possession of them. Their flying away from us is elegantly opposed to our Eyes, being set, or, as it is in the Hebrew, flying upon them in the beginning of the verse.

6. Eat thou not the bread of him that hath an evil eye l, neither desire thou his dainty meats.

l Of the envious or covetous man, who secretly grudgeth thee the meat which he sets before thee, as this Phrase is used, Prov. 28. 22. Matt. 20. 15. as on the contrary, a liberal man is said to have a good Eye, Prov. 22. 9.

7. For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he m: Eat and drink, saith he to thee, but his heart is not with thee n.

m You are not to judge of him by his words, for so he professeth kindness, as it follows, but by the constant temper of his mind, which he hath fully discovered to all that know him by the course of his Life. n He hath no sincere kindness to thee, but inwardly grudgeth thee that which he outwardly offers to thee.

8. The morsel which thou hast eaten, shalt thou vomit up o, and lose thy sweet words p.

o When thou perceivest his churlish disposition and carriage, his meat will be loathsom to thee, and thou wilst wish either that thou hadst never eaten it, or that thou couldst vomit it up again. p Thy pleasant discourse wherewith thou didst adorn his Table, and design both to delight and profit him, is lost, and of no effect to him, and thou wilst be ready to repent of it.

* Chap. 9. 8.

9. * Speak not in the ears of a fool q: for he will despise the wisdom of thy words r.

q Cast not away good Counsels upon obstinate and incorrigible sinners. We have the same advice given Matt. 7. 6. r He will scornfully reject thy wise and good admonitions.

u Content not thy self with outward hearing or reading of it, but affectionately receive it into thine heart, and lay it up there as choice Treasure.

a Let not the consideration of their present impunity and prosperity stir thee up, either to envy them, or to approve and imitate their evil courses. b Reverence the presence of the Divine Majesty, and dread his power and justice, and those judgments which he hath prepared for sinners, and thou wilst see no cause to envy, but rather to pity them. c Not only when thou art in trouble, but in all times and conditions.

19. Hear thou, my son, and be wise f, and guide thine heart g in the way h.

24. * The father of the righteous shall greatly rejoice, and he that begetteth a wise child, shall have joy of him.

25. Thy Father and thy mother shall be glad r, and she that bare thee s shall rejoice.

r He repeateth this again as a powerful Argument to prevail with all Children, that are not void of natural affection to labour to be wise and good, that so they may glad the hearts of their Parents to whom they have such high and indelible obligations. s With so great pain and hazard, and brought thee up with such tender care, whom thou canst not better requite.

26. My son, give me thine heart t, and let thine eyes observe u my ways x.

t Receive my Counsels with thy whole Heart. Solomon speaking in God's Name, and cause, requires the heart to be given to him. u Let thy mind seriously and practically consider. x Either, 1. The ways in which I have walked, my evil practices: take warning by my sad example. Or, 2. The ways which I prescribe to you, as the Apostles called the Gospel which they preached, their Gospel, 1 Thess. 1. 5. 2 Tim. 2. 8.

* Ch. 22. 14.

27. * For a whore is a deep ditch y; and a strange woman is a narrow pit.

y In which a man is in evident danger of perdition, and out of which it is exceeding difficult to escape.

* Chap. 7. 12. | Or, as a robber.

28. * She also lieth in wait || as for a prey z, and increaseth the transgressors among men a.

z Watching all opportunities of ensnaring young men to their destruction. a She is the cause of innumerable sins against God, and against the Marriage-Bed, against the Soul and Body too, and by her wicked Example and Arts, involveth many persons in the guilt of her sins.

* Isa. 5. 11, 22.

29. * Who hath woe b? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babling c? who hath wounds without cause d? who hath redness of eyes?

b From the sin of Lust he proceeds to that of drunkenness, which doth frequently accompany it. c The sin of much and impertinent talking: or, tumultuous noise or clamour, which is usual among Drunkards. See Prov. 20. 1. d Upon every sleight occasion, which men enflamed with Wine are very apt to take.

30. They that tarry long at the wine, they that go to seek mixt wine e.

e Either mixed with Water, or with other ingredients to make it strong and delicious. Heb. mixture, mixed drinks of several sorts suited to their Palats.

* Cant. 7. 9.

31. Look not thou upon the wine f when it is red g, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when * it moveth it self aright h.

f Earnestly, so as to inflame thine Appetite towards it, in which sense men are forbidden to look upon a Woman, Job 31. 1. Matt. 5. 28. g Which was the colour of the best Wines in that Country, which therefore are called Blood, Gen. 49. 11. Deut. 32. 14. and such were used by them in the Passover. h When it sparkleth and frisketh, and seems to smile upon a Man.

| Or, a Cockatrice.

32. At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like || an adder i.

i It hurts the Body in many respects, impairs the vigor of the Mind, wastes the Estate and Reputation, wounds the Conscience, and without Repentance, will destroy the Soul.

33. Thine eyes shall behold k strange women, and thine heart shall utter perverse things l.

k With evil intent, or lustfully, which is the effect of drinking much Wine, as is noted in Scripture, Gen. 19. 31, 35. Hos. 4. 18. and other Authors. l Thine Heart, which when thou hadst the use of thy wit, concealed, will then discover its wickedness, by filthy and perverse speeches.

† Heb. in the heart of the Sea.

34. Yea, thou shalt be as he that lieth down m † in the midst of the sea n, or as he that lieth upon the top of a mast o.

m To sleep, of which that word is frequently used. n In a Ship in the midst of the Sea. This Phrase notes the temper and condition of the Drunkard, the giddiness of his Brain, the unquietness of his Mind, and especially his extream danger joyned with great security. o The worst part of the Ship, both for its perpetual tossings, and for the hazard of him that sleeps in it.

35. They have stricken me p; shalt thou say, and I was not sick q; they have beaten me, and † I felt it not: when shall I awake? I will seek it yet again r.

p I cannot deny that I exposed my self by my Drunkenness to manifold abuses and injuries. q I was not then sensible of it, neither do I now find any great hurt by it, it was but the effect of a present frolick, at which I have no cause to be much troubled. r At present I find some inconvenience, and my condition requires sleep to settle my self; and when I am composed and refreshed, I purpose to return to my former course. But that which Solomon here expresseth, seems rather to be the Language of their Hearts or Lives, than of their Lips. Compare Prov. 1. 11.

CHAP. XXIV.

* Ps. 37. 1, &c. & 73. 3. Ch. 3. 31. & 23. 17. Verf. 19. * Ps. 10. 7.

1. BE not thou * envious against evil men, neither desire to be with them a.

a Their Company or manner of Life.

2. * For their heart studieth destruction b, and their lips talk of mischief.

b How they may oppress and destroy others, which yet at last falls upon their own heads.

3. Through wisdom is an house built, and by understanding it is established c:

c There is no need that thou should'st raise thy Self and family by ruining others, as the manner of wicked men is, which thou maist more easily and effectually do by Wisdom, and the fear of God.

4. And by knowledge d shall the chambers be filled with all precious and pleasant riches.

d Which in Scripture Phrase includes the love and practice of that which we know.

* Ch. 21. 22. Eccles. 9. 10. † Heb. is in strength. † Heb. strengtheneth might.

5. * A wise man † is strong e, yea, a man of knowledge † increaseth strength.

e Is couragious and resolute, and able by Wisdom to do greater things than others can accomplish by their own strength.

* Ch. 11. 14. & 15. 22. & 20. 18.

6. * For by wise counsel thou shalt make thy war f: and in multitude of counsellors there is safety.

f War is better managed by Wisdom than by strength. So this proves what he said in the last Verse.

7. Wisdom is too high g for a fool h, he openeth not his mouth in the gate i.

g Either, 1. really, it is above his reach or capacity. Or, 2. in his opinion; he judgeth it too hard for him, he despairs of attaining it, he pretends the impossibility of it, because he will not put himself to the charge or trouble of getting it: as on the contrary, Wisdom is said to be easie to him that understandeth, Prov. 14. 6. because he seriously giveth his mind to it, and therefore easily and certainly attains to it. h For a wilful Fool, or a wicked Man, whose lusts enfeeble and darken his Mind, and make it uncapable of Wisdom. i Either, 1. he can say nothing for himself when he is accused before the Magistrate, for which he gives frequent occasion. Or, 2. he knows not how to speak acceptably, and profitably in the publick Assembly among wise men.

8. He that deviseth to do evil, shall be called a mischievous person k.

k Heb. a Master of Mischief. The sense is, Though he cover his wicked devices with fair pretences, and would be better esteemed, yet he shall be noted and branded with that infamy which is due to him.

† Or, but.

9. The thought of foolishness is sin l † and the scorner m is an abomination to men n.

l The very inward thought or contrivance of evil, of which he spake, v. 8. even before it break forth into action, is a sin in God's sight, and it is hateful to God. Or, foolishness is put for foolish or wicked men, by comparing this with the next clause where the scorner is opposed to it. So the sence is, All the thoughts of wicked men are only evil and that continually, as is said of man in his corrupt estate, Gen. 6. 5. and therefore abominable to God. m He who not only deviseth and practiseth wickedness, but obstinately persists in it, and rejects all admonitions against it. n Is abominable not only to God, as all sinners are, but to all sober men.

10. If thou faint o in the day of adversity, thy strength is † small p.

o If thou art impatient and unable to bear sufferings, if thy resolution flag, and thou giv'st way to despondency or dejection of Mind. p Heb. is narrow, it lives in a little compass, it is as strait as thy condition is; for there is an elegant allusion in the Hebrew words. The sence is, This is a sign that thou hast but little Christian strength or courage, for that is best known by adversity.

* Psal. 82. 4.

11. * If thou forbear to deliver them q that are drawn unto death r, and those that are ready to be slain s:

q When it is in thy power to do it lawfully. r To wit, unjustly or by the violence of lawless men. s That are in present danger of Death or Destruction.

|| Or, him. * Job 34. 11. Psal. 62. 12. Jer. 32. 19. Rom. 2. 6, Rev. 22. 12.

12. If thou sayest, Behold, we knew || it not t: doth not he that pondereth the heart consider it u? and he that keepeth thy soul x, doth not he know it? and shall not he render to every man * according to his works y?

t I was ignorant either of his innocency, or of his extream danger, or of my power to relieve him. u That this is only a frivolous excuse, and that the true reason of thy neglect was thy want of true love to thy Brother, whose Life thou wast by the Law of God, and of Nature obliged to preserve, and thy sinful self-love, and a carnal fear of some mischief or trouble which might befal thee in the discharge of thy duty. x God who is the preserver of men, Job 7. 20. who daily doth, and who only can keep thee both in and from the greatest dangers. And this favour of God may be here mentioned partly as a strong Obligation upon him to preserve him who is made after God's Image, and whom God hath commanded him to love and preserve; partly as an encouragement to the performance of his duty herein from the consideration of God's special care and watchfulness over those that do their duty; and partly to intimate to them the danger of the neglect of this duty whereby they will forfeit God's protection over themselves, and expose themselves to manifold dangers and calamities. Or, as others render it, and as the Hebrew Verb is frequently used, he that observeth thy soul, that seeth all the secret Thoughts and inward motions of the Heart. Which exposition is favoured both by the following words, Doth not he know it? Which agrees better to God's observing than to his preserving a Man's Soul, and by the former clause, to which this Translation doth more exactly answer, the same thing being here repeated in other words, after the manner of these Sacred Writers. y God will certainly deal with thee as thou hast dealt with him, either rewarding thy performance of this duty, or punishing thy neglect of it.

13. My son, eat thou honey z, because it is good; and the honey-comb which is sweet † to thy taste.

z This is not a command but a concession, and is here expressed only to illustrate the following Verse. Honey in those parts was excellent, and an usual and acceptable food. See Deut. 8. 8. Judg. 14. 18. 1 Sam. 14. 25.

14. * So shall the knowledge of wisdom be unto thy soul, when thou hast found it a, * then there shall be a reward b, and thy expectation shall not be cut off.

* Psal. 19. 10. & 119. 103. * Ch. 23. 18.

a Whereby he implies that there is indeed some difficulty and trouble in the pursuit of Wisdom, but that it is abundantly compensated with the sweetness and advantage of it when a man arrives at it. b Heb. and, or also there is a reward. It is not only as good as honey, sweet for the present, but it is infinitely better, bringing a sure and everlasting reward with it.

15. Lay not wait c O wicked man, against the dwelling of the righteous d: spoil not his resting place.

c Do him no injury either by subtil and secret devices, or, as it follows by manifest violence. d Against his Person or Family or Possessions.

16. * For a just man falleth e seven times f, and riseth up again: but * the wicked shall fall into mischief g.

* Job 5. 19. Psal. 34. 19. & 37. 24. * Amos 5. 2.

e Either 1. into sin. Or, rather, 2. into calamities, of which he evidently speaks both in the foregoing Verse, and in the opposite and following branch of this Verse, and so this word is used in the next Verse, and Psal. 37. 24. Isa. 24. 20. Jer. 25. 27. Amos 8. 14. Mic. 7. 8, &c. And so this is fitly alledged as a just reason to dissuade wicked men from their unjust attempts against righteous men, because they should not succeed in them, and although they might, by God's permission, bring them into some distress for a time, yet God would deliver them out of their hands, and they should be disappointed of their hopes. f (i. e.) Frequently. g Into unavoidable and irrecoverable destruction, oft-times in this life, and infallibly in the next.

17. * Rejoyce not when thine enemy falleth h, and let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth:

* Job 31. 29. Psal. 35. 15. Ch. 17. 5.

h To wit, into mischief, as in the former Verse. Please not thy self in his destruction. Which plainly shews that the love of our Enemies is a Precept of the Old Law as well as of the Gospel. See Exod. 23. 4, 5.

18. Lest the LORD see it, * and † it displease him, and he turn away his wrath from him i.

* Isa. 58. 2. † It be evil in his eyes.

i Understand, upon thee, which is implied in the Hebrew Phrase, such defects being usual in that concise Language, Psal. 84. 11. Prov. 19. 1. and oft elsewhere. This consideration strikes at the root of that sinful and inhumane disposition, which is an expectation of safety or advantage to himself by his Enemies downfal, which, saith he, by this very mean thou shalt lose, for thine enemy shall be raised, and thy danger greatly increased by thy provoking both God and him against thee.

19. * ‖ Fret not thy self k because of evil men l, neither be thou envious at the wicked.

* Isa. 37. 1. Ch. 23. 17. Vers. 1. ‖ Or, keep not company with the wicked.

k Which Translation of the Word is confirmed by the Parallel word in the following Clause. l For their present impunity and good success.

20. For there shall be no reward to the evil man m, * the ‖ candle of the wicked shall be put out n.

* Job 18. 5, 6. & 21. 17. Ch. 13. 9. & 20. 20. ‖ Or, lamp.

m All his hopes and happiness shall quickly and eternally perish, and he shall have no share in those solid Felicities and blessed recompences of a better life which thou shalt enjoy. Therefore thou hast no reason to envy him. n All their comfort and glory shall cease.

21. My son, fear thou the LORD, and the king o: and meddle not with † them p that are given to change q.

o Honour and obey both God and the King, and all in Authority. He puts God before the King, because God is to be served in the first place, and our obedience is to be given to Kings only in subordination to God, and not in those things which are contrary to the will and command of God, as is manifest both from plain Scripture, as Acts 5. 29. and from the judgment and practice of wise and sober Heathens. p Heb. Mix not thy self with them, either in their counsels and practices, or in familiar conversation. q That love or use changes, that are unstable in their Obedience to God or to the King, and are prone to rebellion against either of them. Those men that wickedly forsake God, and break his Laws are said to change their God, Jer. 2. 11. and to change God's Judgments and Ordinances, Isa. 24. 5. Ezek. 5. 6.

22. For their calamity shall rise suddenly, and who knoweth r the ruin of them both s.

r Who can conceive how sore and sudden it will be! s Of them that fear not God, and of them that fear not the King, for they have two potent and terrible Enemies; and therefore if they will not obey them out of Conscience, as their duty binds them, yet they should do it at least for their own sakes, and for fear of those severe punishments which they will certainly inflict upon Rebels.

23. These things also t belong to the wise: u * it is not good † to have respect of persons in judgment x.

* Lev. 19. 15. Deut. 1. 17. 16. 19. Ch. 18. 5. & 28. 21. Joh. 7. 24. † Heb. to acknowledge.

t These Proverbs or Counsels here following to the end of the Chapter no less than those hitherto mentioned. u Are worthy of the consideration, and fit for the use of them who are or would be wise; for only such are capable of understanding and improving these Proverbs, as was noted, Ch. 1. 5, 6, 7. and elsewhere. x For Judges to determine Controversies partially according to the quality of the Persons, and not according to the merits of the Cause.

24. * He that saith y unto the wicked, Thou art righteous z; him shall the people curse, nations shall abhor him a.

* Ch. 17. 15. Isa. 5. 23.

y To wit, publickly and in judgment, as he now said, and as appears by the publickness of the Curse following upon it, for People or Nations do neither observe nor hate every Man who saith thus privately. z That justifie wicked men in their unrighteous courses. a Partly for the grosness and odiousness of the Crime; and partly for the great and general mischief which such practices bring to civil Societies.

25. But to them that rebuke him b shall be delight c, and † a good blessing d shall come upon them.

b That publickly and judicially rebuke and condemn the wicked. c The peace of a good Conscience, and the Comfort of a good name. d Which the people shall wish, and by their Prayers obtain from God for them; which is fitly opposed to the Peoples curse in the last Verse.

26. Every man shall kiss his lips e † that giveth a right answer f.

† Heb. that answereth right words, or, plain words, ✠ Ch. 9. 9.

e Shall highly respect and love him, of which kissing was a sign. f Who being called to speak either as a Judge, or Witness, or otherwise, in weighty matters speaks pertinently, and plainly, and truly, to the conviction and satisfaction of the hearers.

27. Prepare thy work without, and make it fit for thy self in the field; and afterwards build thine house g.

g This is a Domestical Precept requiring both Industry and Prudence in the management of a Man's concerns, that he take care in the first place to furnish himself with Cattel and the Fruits of the Field which are necessary for his subsistance, and after that he may procure such things as are for Ornament and Comfort, such as the building of a convenient House is.

28. Be not a witness against thy neighbour h without cause i: and † deceive not k with thy lips.

† Gr. be not wide in thy lips.

h Either in judgment or in private conversation. i Rashly or falsly, without just and sufficient cause. k Neither thy Neighbour, to whom thou hast made a shew of friendship, nor the Judge, nor any other hearers with false information. Or, this clause forbids flattering him to his face, as the former forbids slandering him behind his back.

29. * Say not l, I will do so to him as he hath done to me: I will render to the man according to his work m.

* Ch. 20. 22. Rom. 12. 17, 19.

l Within thy self: give not way to any such Thoughts or passions. m I will repay him all his calumnies and injuries.

30. I went

30. I went by the field of the slothful, and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding;

31. And lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and Nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall thereof was broken down.

† Set my Heart.

32. Then I saw, and † considered it well: I looked upon it, and received instruction n.

n I learned Wisdom by his folly, and by his gross idleness was provoked to greater care and diligence.

o See this, and the following Verse in Prov. 6. 10, 11.

34. So shall thy poverty come, as one that travelleth; and thy want as † an armed man.

CHAP. XXV.

1. THese a are also proverbs of Solomon, which the men of b Hezekiah king of Judah copied out c.

a Which are contain'd in this and the following Chapters. b Certain persons appointed by Hezekiah for that work, whether Prophets, as Isaiah, Hosea, or Micah, who lived in his days, or some others, it is neither evident nor material. Most of them are political Precepts, and such as in a special manner concerned Hezekiah, and other Princes, to know, for the conduct of their House and Kingdom. c Either out of other Books or Writings of Solomon, concerning natural or civil things, of which we read, 1 King. 4. 32. Or out of the historical Records which were then extant concerning Solomon's speeches and actions in the History of the Kings of Judah, which is oft mentioned in holy Scripture.

* Deut. 29. 29. Rom. 11. 33.

2. * It is the glory of God d to conceal a thing e: but the honour of kings is f to search out a matter g.

d It is agreeable to the Nature, and highly conducing to the Honour of God, because it is a Testimony of his infinite Wisdom and Knowledg, of his absolute Power and Soveraignty, and of his other incomprehensible Perfections. e To keep his counsels, and the reasons of his actions in his own Breast, that he needs not to impart them to any other for their advice and assistance, as being self-sufficient both for the contrivance and execution of whatsoever pleaseth him, and accountable to none for any of his matters. f But Kings must not affect to be like God in this respect, because they are Creatures, and therefore ignorant and insufficient, and accountable to an higher Authority. g In the conduct of their great affairs, not to lean to their own understandings, nor to be wedded to their own wills, but to communicate their counsels to others, that so they may search and find out the true and right way, and to be ready to give a satisfactory account of the Justice and reasonableness of them as occasion shall require.

3. The heaven for height, and the earth for depth h, and the heart of kings † is unsearchable i.

h As no Man upon Earth can exactly discover the height of Heaven, or the depth of Earth, or discern what is contained in them. i Though wise Kings will search out other men and things, yet their inward thoughts and purposes are hardly discoverable, partly because every Man's Heart lies out of the sight of others, and partly because it is the practice of Kings industriously to conceal their intentions.

4. Take away the dross from the silver, and there shall come forth a vessel for the finer k.

k Then, and not till then it is fit for that use.

* Ch. 20. 8.

5. * Take away the wicked from before the king l, and his throne shall be established m in righteousness n.

l From his Court and Councels. m By removing them who by their wicked counsels and practices provoked God's displeasure against the King, and blasted his Reputation, and alienated the Hearts of his People from him. n By such impartial execution of Justice.

6. † Put not forth thy self o in the presence of the king, and stand not in the place of great men p.

o Heb. Do not magnifie, or, glorifie thy self, by vaunting speech or carriage, but, which is implied, carry thy self humbly and modestly, which is most pleasing to Kings, and most becoming and safe for thee. p Do not affect nor use frequent and familiar Society with greater Persons than thy self, whereby thou maist easily involve thy self in much guilt, and expose thy self to envy or contempt, and to many other inconveniences.

* Luk. 14. 10.

7. * For better it is q that it be said unto thee r, Come up hither: than that thou shouldst be put lower in the presence of the prince whom thine eyes have seen s.

q It is more for thy credit and comfort. r By some publick Officer, or by the King himself. s Into whose presence and acquaintance thou hast so boldly intruded thy self, who as before he observed thy impudence, so now he sees and suffers this publick disgrace to be cast upon thee.

8. Go not forth hastily t to strive u, lest thou know not what to do in the end thereof, when thy neighbour hath put thee to shame x.

t Without necessary cause and due consideration. u Either judicially or otherwise. x For thy folly in undertaking what thou wast not able to accomplish, and for thy injustice in charging him wrongfully.

9. Debate thy cause with thy neighbour himself y; and ‖ discover not a secret z to another.

‖ Or, discover not the secret of another.

y If thou hast any quarrel with him, first try to compose it by private discourse with him. Compare Matt. 5. 25. & 18. 15. Luk. 12. 58. z Any secret. Let no heat of contention provoke thee to divulge any of his secret counsels committed to thy trust, or to reproach him with any of his secret faults, as is usual in Law-suits, and other contentions. Or, the secret, any secret difference between thee and him, which therefore is fittest to be ended secretly between you, and not to be imparted to any other.

10. Lest he that heareth it, put thee to shame a, and thine infamy turn not away b.

a Reproach thee for thy gross violation of the Laws of Prudence, and Justice, and Charity, and Friendship therein. b And that disgrace which thou didst design against another, fall, and be fastned upon thy self.

12. As an ear-ring of Gold, and an ornament of fine gold e, so is a wise reprover f upon an obedient ear g.

e Highly acceptable and a great Ornament, and not an offence, and dishonour, as fools esteem it. f That reproves an offender faithfully. Yet prudently in the fittest manner and season. g To a Man that hearkens to it, and is instructed and reformed by it.

17. ‖ Withdraw thy foot from thy neighbours house s, lest he be † weary of thee, and so hate thee t.

s Visit him not too frequently nor unseasonably. t As men are are apt to loath those Meats of which they surfeit, as was now observed, v. 16.

* Ps. 120. 3, 4. Chap. 12. 18. 18. * A man that beareth false witness against his neighbour, is a maul, and a sword, and a sharp arrow u.

u Is as cruel and pernicious to him as any instrument of Death. The design of the Proverb is to shew the wickedness of slander, and that a false witness is in some respect as bad as a Murderer.

19. Confidence in an unfaithful man in time of trouble, is like a broken tooth and a foot out of joynt x.

x It is not onely deceitful, but hurtful, as a broken Tooth though it make shew of helping, yet is not onely unhelpful to a Man for chewing his Meat, but also troublesome and painful; and as a Foot out of Joynt, doth not help but hinder, and pain him that attempts to walk upon it.

20. As he that taketh away a garment in cold weather y, and as vinegar upon nitre z; so is he a that singeth songs to an heavy heart b.

y When it is most seasonable and necessary. z Which dissolves the Nitre, and makes it useless and ineffectual. a He is no less absurd and impertinent. b Whose grief is not relieved but increased by it, as common experience sheweth, and divers learned Authors have observed.

* Exod. 23. 4. Matt. 5. 44. Rom. 12. 20. 21. * If thine enemy be hungry, give him Bread c to eat: and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink.

c By Bread and Water he understands all things necessary for his subsistence.

* Psal. 11. 6. & 140. 10. 22. For d thou shalt heap * coals of fire upon his head e, and the LORD shall reward thee f.

d Understand, in so doing, which words are expressed, Rom. 12. 20. where this Text is quoted. e Either, 1. in a bad sense, Thou shalt hereby aggravate his sin, and occasion a more speedy and grievous vengeance from God, which, like fire from Heaven, shall fall upon his Head and consume him. Not that he perswades him to do a kindness with an evil intent, with an expectation or desire, or design of bringing God's wrath upon him, but onely he foretels what would happen, and dissuades him from taking vengeance, and provokes him to kindness instead of it, because vengeance is God's peculiar work, which he will certainly inflict upon such Persons: which argument is used to that very purpose by St. Paul, Rom. 12, 19. Or, 2. in a good sense, Thou shalt melt him into repentance and inflame him with love and kindness to thee for so unexpected and undeserved a favour, he shall be as heartily grieved and tormented with the Thoughts of his vile and wicked carriage to thee, as a Man would be that had burning Coals of Fire heaped upon his Head. But if these Coals of Fire do not melt him, but still he hardens his Heart against thee, they will consume him. Thus either by the one or by the other way thou shalt be secured and delivered from him. The Metaphor may seem to be taken from Founders who melt the hardest Metals by heaping Coals of Fire upon them. And the Head may be here mentioned rather than any other part, because in Scripture-phrase both Blessings and Curses are said to fall upon mens Heads, i. e. upon them, heads being frequently put for Persons. f Thy charity to him shall be fully recompensed to thee, if not by him, yet by God, which is far better.

* Job 37. 22. ‖ Or, the North-wind bringeth forth rain: so doth a back-biting tongue an angry countenance. 23. * ‖ The North-wind driveth away rain: so doth an angry countenance g a back-biting tongue h.

g In the hearer, who by his countenance sheweth his dislike of such persons and practices. h Heb. a secret tongue, which privily slandereth his neighbour, as it is expressed, Psal. 101. 5. and as the manner of back-biters is. But this Verse is otherwise rendred in the Margent, and by divers others, The North-wind bringeth forth (as this Verb properly and most frequently signifies, and as it is rendred by all the ancient Interpreters, and by many others) Rain: (which it doth in Judea, because the Sea lies Northward, as well as Westward, from it, as also in Africa, as Aristotle observes, though it drive away rain in Countries of another situation) so doth a back-biting tongue (cause) an angry countenance, it causeth much anger and mischief, both to the person slandered, and to the slanderer, and to other persons who may be concerned with or for either of them, as is manifest from common experience.

* Chap. 19. 13. & 21. 9, 19. 24. * It is better to dwell in a corner of the house top, than with a brawling woman and in a wide house.

25. As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country i.

i Because it comes thither more rarely and difficultly, after it hath been long expected and earnestly desired, all which circumstances make it more acceptable.

26. A righteous man falling down k before the wicked, is as a troubled fountain, and a corrupt spring.

k Either, 1, into sin. So the sense is, When a just man is either allured or terrified into any sinful practice before wicked men, or into any base and servile compliance with their lusts, he who by his excellent counsels was like a fountain or well of life, as his mouth is called, Prov. 10. 11. sending forth refreshing streams for the benefit of many, is now corrupted and rendred unserviceable. Or rather, 2. into misery, of which kind of falling this word is constantly used, and never to my remembrance of falling into sin. And so the sense is this, When righteous men are oppressed and devoured by the wicked, the state of that Commonwealth is as deplorable, as if the publick Fountains, from whence all the people fetch their water, were corrupted, and it is a sign that the Fountains of Justice are poisoned.

27. * It is not good l to eat much honey; so for * Vers. 16. men m to search their own glory n, is not glory o.

l To wit, for the health of the body. m Which words are easily understood both out of the foregoing clause, where the Honey is supposed to be eaten by men, and out of the following words which are evidently meant of them. n Industriously to seek for honour and applause from men. o Is not only sinful, but shameful also, and a sign of a vain and mean spirit. The Negative Particle, not, is here understood out of the former part of the Verse, as it is, Psal. 1. 5. & 9. 18.

28. * He that hath no rule over his own spirit p, is like a city that is broken down and without walls q. * Chap. 16. 32.

p Over his passions, and especially his anger, which is signified by this word, Prov. 16. 2. Eccles. 10. 4. q Exposeth himself to manifold dangers and mischiefs.

CHAP. XXVI.

1. AS snow in summer, and as rain in harvest a, so honour is not seemly for a fool b.

a Unbecoming and unseasonable. b Because he neither deserves it, nor knows how to use it, but his folly is both increased and publickly manifested by it.

2. As the bird by wandring c, as the swallow by flying, so the curse causeless shall not come d.

c From place to place, by its perpetual restlesness, it secures it self from the Fowler that he cannot shoot at it, nor spread his net over it. d To wit, upon the innocent person, but he shall escape from it like a bird, &c.

3. * A whip for the horse, a bridle e for the ass, and a rod f for the fools back. * Psal. 32. 9. Ch. 10. 13.

e Which was very proper and usual for an Ass, when they rode upon it, (as the Jews most commonly did) though not to restrain him from running away, which is the principal use of it in Horses, yet that the Rider might rule and guide him, which was very necessary for that stupid Creature. Although the ancient Interpreters render it a Goad or Spur, or something of the like nature and use. f Which is most proper and necessary for him. Not words, but blows, must make him better.

4. Answer not a fool g according to his folly h, lest thou also be like unto him i.

g How can these contrary rules be reconciled, answer him not, and answer him? Answ. Easily, by considering the difference of persons, and times, and places, and other circumstances, and of the manner of answering. And such seemingly contradictory Precepts are not only used by, but are esteemed elegant in, other Authors, Answer him not, when he is incorrigible, or when he is inflamed with passion or wine, &c. or when it is not necessary, nor likely to do him good. Answer him, when he is capable of receiving good by it, or when it is necessary for the glory of God, or for the discharge of a mans duty, or for the good of others. h So as to imitate his folly, by such passionate, or reproachful, or foolish speeches as he useth to thee. i Shew thy self to be as great a fool as he.

5. Answer a fool according to his folly k, lest he be wise in † his own conceit l. † Heb. his own eyes.

k So as his folly needs and requires, convincing him strongly, reproving him sharply, exposing him to just shame, and correcting him with a rod, when he deserves it, and thou hast a just power to use it. l Lest thy silence make him arrogant and presumptuous, as if his words were unanswerable.

6. He that sendeth a message by the hand of a fool m, cutteth off the feet n, and drinketh ‖ damage o. ‖ Or, violence.

m He that employeth a Fool upon any important Errand or busines which is too hard for him. n To wit, of his Messenger, he bids one go that wants legs, he sends one who wants that discretion, which is as necessary for that employment as legs are for going. o He bringeth upon himself abundance of loss and mischief, not only spoiling that business about which he sends him, but making himself contemptible to the person to whom he sends him, and to others with him, as if he had not common prudence to chuse a fit Messenger, and giving occasion by the folly of his Messenger to further misunderstandings, and jealousies, and inconveniences. For the Phrase, we may observe that drinking in Scripture frequently notes the plentiful doing or receiving of any thing, as they who multiply sins are said to drink iniquity like water, Job 15.16. & 34.7. and they who are greatly afflicted are commonly said to drink the cup.

7. The legs of the lame † are not equal p, so is a parable in the mouth of fools q.

p Heb. As (which note of similitude is plainly understood from the Particle, so, in the following clause) the legs of the lame are lifted up, to wit, in going, or rather in dancing, which is done with great inequality and uncomelines. q No less absurd and indecent are wise and pious speeches from a foolish and ungodly man, whose actions grosly contradict them, whereby he makes them contemptible, and himself ridiculous.

‖ Or, As he that putteth a precious stone in an heap of stones.

8. ‖ As he that bindeth a stone in a sling r, so is he that giveth honour to a fool s.

r Whereby he hinders his own design of throwing the stone out of it. Or, who fastens it there only for a season, that he may speedily and violently throw it away. Or, as it is rendred in our margent, and by many others, As he that putteth a precious stone (Heb. a stone, which is oft emphatically used for a precious stone, both in Scripture, as Exod. 39.10. 1 Chron. 29. 2. and elsewhere, and also in other Authors) in an heap of stones, where it is obscured and lost. s No less absurd is he that giveth to a Fool that honour and praise which he is not capable either of receiving, or retaining, or using aright, but it is quite wasted upon him, and doth him more hurt than good.

9. As a thorn goeth up into the hand of a drunkard t, so is a parable in the mouth of fools.

t As a thorn in a Drunkard's hand, which he cannot hold and manage cautiously, but employeth to his own and others hurt. u As improper and unprofitable, and, by accident, hurtful to himself and others. See on v. 7.

‖ Or, a great man grieveth all, he hireth the fool, he hireth also transgressors.

10. ‖ The great God that formed all things, both rewardeth the fool, and rewardeth transgressors x.

x God, who is oft called great, as Psal. 86. 10. & 135. 5, &c. and is described by the name of the most high, as Psal. 9. 2. & 21. 7, &c. who created all things, and therefore observeth and governeth all men and things, will certainly give that recompence which is meet for, and deserved by Fools and Transgressors, i. e. by such as sin either through ignorance and heedlesness, or wilfully and wickedly. Or, as it is in the margent, A great man (A Prince or Potentate, who are called by this title, Esth. 1.8. Dan. 1. 3, &c.) grieveth (as this word is used, Isa. 51. 9. & 53. 5. and elsewhere) all (to wit, all that are subject to him, or all that stand in his way) he hireth (as this word most commonly signifies) the fools, he hireth also transgressors. So the sense is, It is the manner of many Princes to vex and oppress their Subjects, which because they cannot do by themselves alone, they hire others, both fools, who do not know or consider what they do, and transgressors, who are ready to execute all their commands, right or wrong, that they may be their instruments in that work.

* 2 Pet. 2. 22. † Heb. iterateth his folly.

11. * As a dog returneth to his vomit y, so a fool † returneth to his folly z.

y To lick up that which he had lately vomited, forgetting how burdensom and vexatious it was to him. z Such like is the impudence and madness of sinners, who having smarted for their sins, and been forced to forsake them for a time, do afterwards return to the commission of them.

* Ch. 29. 20.

12. * Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit a? there is more hope of a fool b than of him.

a Who, being a fool, thinks himself wise, and therefore scorneth the counsels of others. b Of doing good to one who is a fool, and sensible of his folly, and ready to receive instruction.

13. The slothful man saith b, there is a lion in the way, a lion is in the streets.

b To excuse his idleness and keeping himself at home. See on Ch. 22. 13.

14. As the door turneth upon his hinges c, so doth the slothful upon his bed.

c Moving hither and thither upon it, but not removing one jot from its place.

15. * The slothful hideth his hand in his bosom, ‖ it grieveth him to bring it again to his mouth d.

* Ch. 19. 24. ‖ Or, he is weary.

d He will not take the least pains for the most necessary things.

16. The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit e, than seven men that can render a reason f.

e Because by his idleness he avoids those troubles and dangers to which other men by their activity expose themselves, forgetting in the mean time what reproach and loss, and how much greater mischiefs, both here and hereafter, are brought upon him by his slothfulness. f To wit, a satisfactory reason of all their actions, i. e. who are truly wise men.

17. He that passeth by g, and ‖ meddleth with strife belonging not to him h, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears i.

g Who is going upon the way, and about his business: But this word is by some referred to the last clause, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears as he is passing by him, without any thought of doing him harm; which agrees very well both with the order of the words in the Hebrew Text, and with the matter of the other clause to which this similitude is referred. h In which he is not concerned, nor any way obliged to meddle. i Exposeth himself to great and needless hazards, as a man that causelesly provoketh a Mastiff dog against himself.

† Heb. one that maketh himself mad. † Heb. flames or sparks.

18. As † a mad man k who casteth † firebrands l, arrows, and death m:

k As one feigneth himself mad, that under that pretence he may do mischief with impunity. l To hurt his Neighbours person, or to consume his House or Goods. m Any instruments of death.

19. So is the man that deceiveth his neighbour, and saith, Am not I in sport n?

n That wrongs him under a false pretence of kindness and familiarity.

† Heb. without wood. * Ch. 22. 10. ‖ Or, whisperer. † Heb. is silent.

20. † Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out; so * where there is no ‖ tale-bearer o, the † strife ceaseth.

o To carry such reports from one to another, as may provoke them to mutual rage and strife.

* Ch. 15. 18. & 29. 22.

21. * As coals are to burning coals, and wood to fire, so is a contentious man p to kindle strife.

p Heb. a man of contentions, that loveth and giveth himself up to contentions.

22. The words of a tale-bearer are as wounds, and they go down into the † innermost parts of the belly q.

q This was delivered before, Ch. 18. 8. and is here repeated as being a point of great concernment to the Peace and Welfare of all societies, and fit to be oft and earnestly pressed upon the consciences of men, because of their great and general proneness to this sin.

23. Burning r lips, and a wicked heart, are like a potsherd covered with silver dross s.

r Either, 1. With Love. Words delivered with shew of true and fervent affection. Or rather, 2. With Malice or hatred. A slanderous or evil Tongue: For this word is constantly used in a bad sense, and notes the heat of Rage and Persecution. s Such a Tongue and Heart are of no real worth, although sometimes they make a shew of it, as Dross doth of Silver.

24. He that hateth ‖, dissembleth t with his lips, and layeth up deceit within him.

t Or, carrieth himself like another man, pretends Love and Kindness; which sense seems to agree best both with the next clause of this verse, and with the two following verses.

25. When he † speaketh fair, believe him not: for there are seven abominations in his heart.

26. ‖ Whose hatred is covered by deceit u, his wickedness shall be shewed before the whole congregation x.

u With false professions of Love. x Instead of that secrecy and impunity which by this art he designed and promised to himself, he shall be brought to publick shame and punishment.

* Ps. 7. 15, 16. & 9. 15. & 57. 6. Eccles. 10. 8.

27. * Whoso diggeth a pit y, shall fall therein: and he that rolleth a stone z, it will return upon him.

y That another may fall into it. It is a metaphor from Hunters who used to dig deep pits, and then to cover them sleightly with earth, that wild Beasts passing that way, might fall into them, and sometimes in the heat of pursuit fell into them themselves. z To wit, up the hill with design to do mischief to some person or thing with it.

28. A lying tongue hateth those that are afflicted by it ‖, and a flattering mouth † worketh ruine.

‖ Because by his calumnies he hath made them his enemies. † Which, though it be more smooth and plausible than a slandering mouth, yet is in truth no less pernicious, betraying others either to sin, or to danger and mischief.

CHAP. XXVII.

* Jam. 4. 13, &c. † Heb. to morrow day.

1. * BOast not thy self of † to morrow a, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth b.

a Of any good thing which thou purposest to do, or hopest to receive to morrow, or hereafter: the time being here put Metonymically for things done or had in the time, as Deut. 4. 32. Eccles. 2. 23. The same caution is given, Jam. 4. 13, &c. b What may happen in the space of one day, which may hinder thy designs or expectations. The day is said to bring forth what God by his Almighty Power and Providence doth either cause or suffer to be brought forth or done in it.

2. Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth c: a stranger, and not thine own lips.

c Except it be really necessary, either for thine own just vindication, or for the honour of God, or for the edification of others, in which cases this hath been allowed and practised by wise and vertuous men, as particularly by St. Paul, 2 Cor. 11. 12.

3. A stone is † heavy, and the sand weighty; but a fools wrath is heavier d than them both.

d More grievous and intolerable, as being without cause, without measure, and without end.

† Heb. wrath is cruelty, and anger an overflowing. ‖ Or, jealousie.

4. † Wrath is cruel, and anger is outragious, but who is able to stand before ‖ envy e?

e Envy is worse than both of them, partly because it is more unjust and unreasonable, as not caused by any provocation, as wrath and anger are, but only proceeding from a malignity of mind, whereby a man is grieved for another man's happiness, in which he should rejoice; partly because it is more deeply rooted and implacable, whereas the other passions are commonly allayed, and partly because it is more secret and undiscernable, and therefore the mischievous effects of it are hardly avoidable, whereas wrath and anger discover themselves, and so forewarn and forearm a man against the danger.

5. Open f rebuke is better g than secret h love.

f Heb. which is manifested or discovered, either 1. Publickly and before others, when it is needful, in which case, though it put a man to some shame, yet it doth him good. Or 2. Privately, and to the offenders face, a plain and down-right reproof. g More desirable and beneficial. h Which lies hid in the heart, and doth not shew it self by friendly Actions, and particularly by free and faithful Reproof, which is a principal end and benefit of friendship.

* Psal. 141. 5. ‖ Or, earnest, or frequent, or deprecable.

6. * Faithful are i the wounds k of a friend, but the kisses l of an enemy are ‖ deceitful m.

i They proceed from an upright, and truly loving, and faithful Soul, and really promote the good of the person reproved. k The sharpest reproofs which for the present wound his Spirit and Reputation. l All the fair Speeches and outward Professions of Friendship. m Or, are to be deprecated, are perfidious and pernicious, and such things as one may pray to God to be delivered from them. Or, are forced, like things which are procured with great difficulty, and many intreaties.

† Heb. treadeth under foot. * Job 6. 7.

7. The full soul n † loatheth an honey comb o, but * to the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet.

n A man whose appetite or desire (which is oft expressed in Scripture by the name of Soul) is fully satisfied. o The most delicious meats. The design of this Proverb is to shew the inconvenience that oft-times attends upon plenty, and the advantage of Poverty, that the rich might learn moderation, and the poor content.

8. As a bird that wandereth from her nest p, so is a man that wandereth from his place q.

p That flies very much abroad from place to place, whereby she is exposed to all the arts of Fowlers, and to Birds of Prey, from which she is safe whilest she keeps her nest. q That through vanity or lightness changeth the place of his abode, or, his Calling and course of Life, the ill effects whereof have been frequently observed and noted, even in vulgar Proverbs, as when we say, A rolling Stone gathers no Moss.

† Heb. from the counsel of the soul.

9. Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart r, so doth the sweetness of a mans friend † by hearty counsel s.

r By increasing and comforting the spirits. s No less grateful and pleasant is the company and conversation of a true friend, in respect of his good and faithful counsel, which comes from his very Heart and Soul, and contains his most inward and serious Thoughts, whereas deceitful persons give such counsels, not as they think to be best, but as most serve their Lusts or designs.

* Ch. 17. 17. & 18. 24.

10. Thine own friend and thy fathers friend t forsake not, neither go into thy brothers house u in the day of thy calamity; for * better is a neighbour x that is near y, than a brother far off.

t Of whose friendship thou hast had long experience. u To wit, for comfort and relief, and so as to forsake or neglect thy friend for him. x The friend mentioned in the beginning of the verse, who hath shewed himself to be a true and a good neighbour. y Either, 1. In place by cohabitation. Or rather, 2. In affection, in which respect God is oft said to be near to the righteous, and far from the wicked.

* Ch. 10. 1. & 23. 24.

11. * My son, be wise, and make my heart glad, that I may answer him that reproacheth me z.

z For being the father of a wicked son, as if I had either deserved him as a curse from God, or made him so by my example or by the neglect of his education. See Ezek. 16. 44. 1 Tim. 3. 4.

12. A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself, but the simple pass on, and are punished a.

a This was delivered Ch. 22. 3. and is here repeated to enforce the foregoing exhortation, by representing the great advantage of Wisdom.

* Ch. 20. 16.

13. * Take his garment that is surety for a stranger, and take a pledge of him for a strange woman b.

b Possibly this is here repeated as a part of the fathers counsel to his Son, begun v. 11. to avoid rash Suretyship, to which young men are most prone, and by which they are exposed in the beginning of their days to many sins and miseries, which they carry with them to their graves.

14. He that blesseth his friend c with a loud voice d, rising early in the morning e, it shall be counted a curse to him f.

c That saluteth, or praiseth, and applaudeth him to his face, as the manner of flatterers is. d That both he, and others, may be sure to take notice of it. e To perform this Office, to shew his great forwardness, and diligence, and zeal in his service, which was the custom of the Romans afterward, and possibly of some of the Jews at this time. f His friend will value this kind of blessing no more than a curse, because it plainly discovers a base design, and is an high reflection upon him, as if he either did not understand such gross and palpable flattery, or were so ridiculously vain-glorious as to be pleased with it.

* Ch. 19. 13.

15. * A continual dropping in a very rainy day, and a contentious woman are alike g.

g Are equally troublesom, the first not suffering a man to go abroad with comfort, the latter not permitting him to stay at home with quietness.

16. Whosoever hideth her h, hideth the wind i, and the ointment of his right hand k which bewrayeth it self.

h i.e. Attempts to smother or bridle her passion, that it may not break forth to her shame, and to his own discomfort and reproach. i Undertakes that which is impossible. k Which being the great instrument of action by its much stirring diffuseth the savour of it.

17. Iron sharpeneth iron l, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend m.

l Iron cutting tools are made bright, and sharp, and fit for use by rubbing them against the file, or some other Iron. m So a man, who being alone is sad, and dull, and unactive, by the company and conversation of his friend, is greatly refreshed, his very wits are sharpened, and his spirit revived, and he is both fitted for and provoked to action. The countenance is here put for the mind or spirit, whose temper or disposition is commonly visible in mens countenances.

18. Whoso keepeth the fig-tree n, shall eat the fruit thereof, so he that waiteth on his master o shall be honoured p.

n Which he mentions because they abounded in Canaan, and were more valued and regarded than other Trees. o That serves him faithfully, prudently and diligently. p Shall receive that respect and recompence which he deserves.

19. As in water face answereth to face, so the heart of man to man q.

q The sense is either, 1. As the image of a man's Face in the water answers to his natural Face who looks into it, or, as in water water one man's face is like another's, the difference of men's faces being not there visible, so one man resembles another, either in the temper of his Mind or Body, in which many men are alike one to another; or in the corruption of his Nature, in which all are alike. Or, 2. As a man may see his own face if he look into the water, which is Nature's Looking-Glass, or into any other Looking-Glass, so a man may discern his own Heart if he look into those Glasses whereby it discovers it self, if he examine his Thoughts and Inclinations, together with the general course of his Actions. Or, 3. As the Face of a man standing by the waters is visible, not only to himself, but to others, by the shadow or image of it in the waters, so the Heart of a man is in some measure discernable, not only to himself, but to others also, who observe his disposition and carriage.

* Ch. 30. 16. Hab. 2. 5. † Heb. not. * Eccl. 1. 8. & 6. 7.

20. * Hell and destruction are † never full r, so * the eyes s of man are never satisfied.

r The Grave devours all the Bodies which are put into it, and is always ready to receive and devour more and more without end. s i.e. The desires which work and discover themselves by the eyes, 1 Joh. 2. 15. and other senses; for otherwise the Eyes in themselves are neither capable of satisfaction nor of dissatisfaction.

* Ch. 17. 3.

21. * As the fining-pot for silver t, and the furnace for gold, so is a man to his praise u.

t Is appointed and used for the trial of Silver, and the detection and separation of the dross from it. u Or, according to his Praise. The sense is, so a man is known by his Praises, either, 1. By the quality of those who praise and applaud him, and as they are good or bad, so is he thought to be. Or, 2. By his carriage under praises, as he carries himself either humbly and modestly with thankfulness to God, and a due sense of his own infirmities, which is the case and temper of a good man; or ambitiously and vain-gloriously, taking to himself the honour which he should give to God, as ungodly men generally do in that case.

22. Though thou shouldst bray a fool x in a mortar, among wheat with a pestil, yet will not his foolishness depart from him.

x Not a natural, but a moral and wilful fool, who by long continuance in sin is hardned and stupified, and so incorrigible under all the means of amendment.

23. Be thou diligent to know the state of thy flocks y, and † look well z to thy herds.

y That thou maist preserve and improve what thou hast, and take care that thine expences may not exceed thine incomes. Flocks and Herds are here put for all Riches and possessions, because anciently they were the chief part of a man's Riches. z Heb. set thine heart. Trust not wholly to thy servants, as many do, that they may give up themselves wholly to ease and pleasure, but make use of thine own Eyes and reason for the conduct of thine affairs, lest thou come to ruine, as many have done by this very means.

† Heb. strength. † Heb. to generation and generation.

24. For † riches a are not for ever, and doth the crown b endure † to every generation?

a Or, Treasure. The sence is, what thou dost now possess, or hast laid up, will not last always, but will soon be spent, if thou dost not take care to preserve and improve it. b By which he understands a condition of the greatest honour and plenty. If a man had the Wealth of a Kingdom, without provident care and due diligence it would quickly be brought to nothing. Hence the greatest Kings have minded Husbandry, as Solomon, Uzziah, and others.

25. The hay appeareth, and the tender grass sheweth it self c, and herbs of the mountains d are gathered e.

c In their proper seasons. These things may be here mentioned, either, 1. As the matter of his diligence. Take care that thy Hay and Grass may be well managed, and seasonably gathered for the use of thy Cattle. Or rather, 2. As another Argument and encouragement to diligence, because God invites thee to it by the plentiful provisions wherewith he hath enriched the Earth for thy sake. Thou needest not compass Sea and Land for them, for God puts them into thy hand if thou wilt but receive them. d Even the most barren parts afford thee their help. e Or, are to be gathered, as such passive Verbs are oft used, they are ripe and ready for the gathering. So this clause suits best with the former.

26. The lambs are for thy cloathing f, and the goats are the price of the field g.

f By their wool and skins, either used to cloath thy self with, or sold to purchase all manner of cloathing for thy self and Family. g By the sale whereof thou maist either pay the rent of the field which thou hirest, or purchase Fields or Lands for thy self. Either Goats are put for all cattle, or he mentions Goats, because these might better be spared and sold than sheep, which brought a more certain and constant profit to the owner.

27. And thou shalt have goats milk enough for thy food h, for the food of thy houshold, and for † maintenance for thy maidens i.

h Or, if thou chusest rather to keep than to sell thy Goats, the milk of them will serve thee for Food to thy self, and to thy Family. In ancient times men used a plain and simple diet, and neither knew nor used that curiosity and luxury in it which after ages invented. i Who are named, because this nourishment was more proper for the weaker sex, whereas men required a stronger diet.

CHAP. XXVIII.

* Lev. 26. 17, 36.

1. THe * wicked flee when no man pursueth a: but the righteous are bold b as a lion.

a Because the Conscience of their own guilt puts them into a continual expectation and dread of God's judgments. b Are couragious and resolute, having the witness of a good Conscience, and the assurance of Divine Favour and Protection, and the supports and consolations of the Holy Ghost.

‖ Or, by men of understanding and wisdom shall they likewise be prolonged.

2. For the transgression of a land, many c are the princes thereof: but ‖ by a man of understanding and knowledge d the state thereof shall be prolonged e.

c Either, 1. Together, contending for Supremacy. Or rather, 2. Successively, as appears from the following clause. Their Princes are soon cut off, and other persons, and oft-times persons of other Families come in their stead, which is justly threatned as a curse, because such frequent changes are seldom for the better, and commonly for the worse, and are frequently attended with Blood and slaughter, with the change and subversion of Laws, with heavy Taxes and Charges, with the ruine of many Families, and with many other mischiefs. d By a wise and good man. Which may be understood either 1. Collectively for men of understanding, &c. as it is rendred in the margent; i.e. when the men or people of a Land are wise and good. Or rather, 2. Singularly, and that either 1. Of a wise and righteous Prince, who by the good government of himself, and his Family, and Kingdom, by punishing and preventing the transgressions of the People, turns away God's wrath, and saves himself and People. Or, 2. Of any other man of eminent Wisdom or Piety, who prevents this judgment, either by his good Counsels given to the Prince and People, and entertained by them, or by his Intercession to God; for God hath sometimes spared a People for the sake of one man, as he did Zoar for Lot, Gen. 19. 20, 21. and the Israelites for Moses, Psal. 106. 23. e The Land shall enjoy its former State and Tranquillity, and the Life of their good Prince shall be prolonged.

3. A poor man that oppresseth the poor f, is like a sweeping rain † which leaveth no food g.

f When a poor man being advanced into a place of Authority, abuseth it to oppress those that are poor and unable to resist him. g Is like a violent Rain or Flood, which washeth away the very seeds which are in the Earth, and spoileth the Corn and Fruits which are upon it. He is the worst of all oppressors, because as he is of a base mind, which also is made much worse by a sudden change and elevation into an high condition, so his own necessities inflame his desires, and make him greedy to take all, yea, even the small advantages of enriching himself. Which the ancients expressed by the similitude of an empty Horseleach, which sucketh much more strongly than that which is already filled; and of a dry sponge, which licks up far more water than that which was wet before.

The ſtate of that Kingdom is honourable, and comfortable, and ſafe, ſo as good men can ſhew their faces with courage and confidence. g Are advanced to Honour and Authority. h The ſtate of that Nation is ſo ſhameful and dangerous, that wiſe and good men, who only are worthy of the name of men, withdraw themſelves, or run into corners and obſcure places, partly out of grief and ſhame to behold the wickedneſs which is publickly and impudently committed, and partly to avoid the rage and injuries of wicked Oppreſſors, and the judgments of God, which commonly follow ſuch perſons and their confederates in ſin. Or, as others, both ancient and later Interpreters render it, a man is ſought out. Sober and good men who had retired themſelves, are ſearched for, and brought forth like ſheep to the ſlaughter, as being moſt ſuſpected, and hated, and feared by bloody Tyrants.

* Pſal. 32. 3, 5. 1 Joh. 1. 9, 10.

13. * He that covereth his ſins i ſhall not proſper k: but whoſo confeſſeth and forſaketh them l ſhall have mercy m.

i That doth not confeſs them (as appears by the oppoſite clauſe) to God, and to Men too, when occaſion requires it. That being convinced or admoniſhed of his ſins, either juſtifieth, or denieth, or excuſeth them. k Shall not ſucceed in his deſign of avoiding puniſhment by the concealment of his ſins, ſhall not find mercy, as is implied from the next clauſe. l By hearty diſlike and hatred of all his ſins, and by a reſolved ceſſation from a ſinful courſe of Life. This is added to ſhew that although the diſſembling or hiding ones ſins is ſufficient for his damnation, yet meer confeſſion without forſaking of ſin is not ſufficient for Salvation. m Both from God who hath promiſed, and from Men who are ready to grant pardon and favour to ſuch perſons.

14. Happy is the man n that feareth o alway p: * but he that hardeneth his heart q, ſhall fall into miſchief. * Rom. 11. 20.

n Becauſe he ſhall thereby avoid that miſchief which befals fearleſs ſinners, which is expreſſed in the next clauſe, and procure that eternal Salvation which they loſe. o To wit, the offence and judgments of God. Who having confeſſed and forſaken his ſins, as was now ſaid, is afraid to return to them again, and careful to avoid them, and all occaſions of them. p In all times, companies, and conditions, not only in the time of great trouble, when even Hypocrites will in ſome ſort be afraid of ſinning, but in times of outward Peace and Proſperity. q That goeth on obſtinately and ſecurely in ſinful courſes, caſting off due reverence to God, and juſt fear of his threatnings and judgments.

15. As a roaring lion, and a ranging bear r, ſo is a wicked ruler s over the poor people t.

16. The prince that wanteth underſtanding, is alſo a great oppreſſor u; but he that hateth covetouſneſs x, ſhall prolong his days y.

u The Tyranny or Oppreſſion of a Prince, though by ſome accounted Wiſdom, is in truth a manifeſt act and ſign of great folly, becauſe it alienateth from him the Hearts of his People, in which his Honour, and Safety, and Riches conſiſt, and oftentimes cauſeth the ſhortning of his days, either from God who cuts him off by ſome ſudden judgment, or from men who are injured by him, and exaſperated againſt him. x Which is the chief cauſe of all oppreſſions and unjuſt practices. y By God's favour, the peace and ſatisfaction of his own mind, and the hearty love of his people, which makes them careful to preſerve his Life by their fervent Prayers to God for him, by willingly hazarding their own Eſtates and Lives for him, when occaſion requires it, and by all other poſſible means.

17. A man that doeth violence to the blood of any perſon z, ſhall flee to the pit a, let no man ſtay him b.

z That ſheddeth any man's Blood, or taketh away his Life unjuſtly. a Shall ſpeedily be deſtroyed, being purſued by divine Vengeance, and the Horrours of a guilty Conſcience, and the Avengers of Blood. b So it is a prohibition that no man ſhould endeavour to ſave the Life of a wilful Murderer, either by interceſſion, or by offering ſatisfaction, or any other way. Of which ſee Gen. 9. 6. Exod. 21. 14. Numb. 35. 31. Or, as the ancient and many other Interpreters render it, no man ſhall ſtay him: None ſhall deſire or endeavour to ſave him from his deſerved puniſhment: He ſhall die without pity, being an object of publick hatred.

Or, in one, to wit, of his ways. Though he hath various ways and arts to ſecure himſelf, yet none of them ſhall ſave him, but he ſhall periſh in one or other of them, and ſhall be given up by God to the miſtake of his way, that he ſhall chuſe that courſe which will be moſt pernicious to him.

Thus an evil eye is taken, Prov. 23. 6. Mat. 20. 15. as a good eye notes the contrary diſpoſition, Prov. 22. 9. m And conſequently that he ſhall need the pity and help of others, which he cannot expect either from God or men, who hath ſo hardned himſelf againſt others in miſery.

26. He that truſteth in his own heart t, is a fool u: but whoſo walketh wiſely x, he ſhall be delivered y.

t Who truſts to his own wit, neglecting or ſlighting the advice of others, and the counſel of God himſelf. u And ſhall receive the fruit of his folly, to wit, deſtruction. x Diſtruſting his own judgment, and ſeeking the advice of others, and eſpecially of God, as all truly wiſe men do. y From thoſe dangers and miſchiefs which fools bring upon themſelves; whereby he ſheweth himſelf to be a wiſe man.

10. † The blood-thirſty hate the upright y: but the juſt ſeek his ſoul z.

y And conſequently ſeek their ruine, as is implied from the following clauſe. z Either, 1. to require his ſoul or life at the hands of those who have taken it away. Or, 2. to preserve it from those who attempt to take it away, as this Phrase is taken, Psal. 142. 4. though commonly it signifie to seek to destroy it.

* Chap. 14. 33. † Heb. all his spirit.

11. * A fool uttereth † all his mind a: but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards b.

a All at once, unnecessarily, and unseasonably, without reservation or caution. b Till he have fit occasion to express it.

12. If a ruler hearken to lies c, all his servants are wicked d.

c Delight in flatteries or calumnies, or any lying words or deceitful and wicked practices. d Partly, because he chuseth only such for his service, and partly because they are either corrupted by his example, or engaged by their place and interest to please him, and comply with his base lusts.

‖ Or, the Usurer.

13. The poor and ‖ the deceitful e man meet together f: the LORD lighteneth both their eyes g.

e Heb. the Man of deceits, or, of Usuries, i. e. who hath enriched himself by such practices. f Converse together, and one needeth the other, as Ch. 22. 2. g Either their bodily eyes with the light of the Sun, which promiscuously shines upon both; or the eyes of their minds with the light of Reason and Grace, which he indifferently gives to them; and therefore the one should not envy nor despise the other, but be ready to do good one to another, as God doth good to both.

* Chap. 20. 28.

14. * The king that faithfully judgeth the poor h, his throne shall be established for ever.

h And the rich too: but he names the poor, because these are most oppressed and injured by others, and least regarded by Princes, and yet committed to their more special care by the King of Kings.

* Vers. 17. * Chap. 10. 1. & 17. 21, 25.

15. * The rod and reproof i give wisdom: but a * child left to himself k bringeth his mother l to shame.

i Correction and instruction going together. k Suffered to follow his own will or lusts without restraint and chastening. l And Father too; but he names only the Mother, either because her indulgence oft spoils the child; or because children commonly stand in least awe of their mothers, and abuse the weakness of their Sex, and tenderness of their Natures.

‖ Or, in authority. * Psal. 37. 36. & 58. 10. & 91. 8.

16. When the wicked are ‖ multiplied m, transgression increaseth n: but * the righteous shall see their fall o.

m Or rather, are advanced, because this is opposed to their falling in the next clause; and so this Hebrew word is taken above, v. 2. n Sin and sinners abound and grow impudent by impunity, and the example and encouragement of such Rulers. o The destruction of such transgressors, in due time.

* Chap. 13. 24. & 22. 15. & 23. 13, 14.

17. * Correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest p; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul.

p Satisfaction to thy mind, and comfort in his amendment.

‖ Or, is made naked.

18. Where there is no vision q, the people ‖ perish r: but he that keepeth the law s, happy is he.

q (i. e.) No Prophecy, for the Prophets were anciently called Seers, 1 Sam. 9. 9. i. e. no publick Preaching of God's Law or Word (as appears by the opposite clause) which is called Prophecy, Rom. 12. 6. 1 Cor. 14. 1, &c. where the people are destitute of the means of instruction. r Because they want the only means of Salvation. Or, is made naked, stripped of their best ornaments, God's favour and protection, as this word is taken, Exod. 32. 25. s This he saith rather than, he that hath vision, which the Laws of Opposition might seem to require, to teach us, that although the want of God's Word be sufficient for mens destruction, yet the having and hearing or reading of it is not sufficient for their Salvation, except they also keep or obey it.

19. A servant t will not be corrected by words u: for though he understand x, he will not answer y.

t Who is so not only in condition, but also in the temper of his mind, disingenuous, perverse and stubborn. u By meer words without blows. Compare Prov. 19. 29. x Though he know thy mind, and words, and his own duty. y Either by words, expressing his readiness, or by deeds, speedily and chearfully performing thy commands, but will neglect his duty, pretending that he did not hear or understand thee.

20. Seest thou a man that is hasty ‖ in his words z? there is more hope of a fool a, than of him b.

z Or rather, in his business, who is rash and heady in the management of his affairs. a Who is sensible of his folly, and willing to hearken to the advice of others, as this word is used, Ch. 26. 12. though commonly it be meant of a wilful and wicked fool. b Because he is self-confident, and neither considers things seriously within himself, nor seeks counsel from the wise.

21. He that delicately bringeth up his servant c from a child, shall have him become his son d at the length.

c Allowing him too much freedom, and familiarity, and delicious fare. d Will find him at last grow insolent and presumptuous and forgetful of his servile condition.

* Chap. 15. 18. & 26. 21.

22. * An angry man stirreth up strife: and a furious man aboundeth in transgression e.

e Is by his passion easily transported into grievous and manifold sins, against God, and others, and himself, as swearing, and cursing, and violence, yea sometimes even to murder.

* Job 22. 29. Chap. 15. 33. & 18. 12. Mat. 23. 12. Luke 14. 11. & 18. 14. Jam. 4. 6, 10. 1 Pet. 5. 5.

23. * A mans pride shall bring him low f: but honour shall uphold the humble in spirit g.

f Because both God and man conspire against him and abhor him. g Or, as others render it, without any difference in the sense, the humble in spirit shall hold their honour, shall be honoured by God and men. Thus honour, like a shadow, flees from them that pursue it, and follows them who flee from it.

24. Whoso is partner with a thief h, hateth his own soul i: he heareth cursing k, and bewrayeth it not l.

h By receiving a share of the stoln goods upon condition of his concealment of the theft. i He carrieth himself towards it as if he hated it, he woundeth and destroyeth it. k He heareth the voice of swearing, as is said, Levit. 5. 1. the Oath given to him by a Judge adjuring him and other suspected persons to give information concerning it. l Which he is bound to do both by virtue of his Oath & for the publick good, which ought to be preferred before all private contracts or friendships.

25. The fear of man m bringeth a snare n: but whoso putteth his trust in the LORD o, † shall be safe.

m Inordinate fear or harm or mischief from men, which is fitly opposed to trust in God, because it comes from a distrust of God's Promise and Providence. n Is an occasion of many sins, and of great danger, both of injuries from men, and of sore punishments from God. o Keeping God's way, and securely relying upon God to protect him from the designs and rage of wicked men.

* Chap. 19. 6. † Heb. the face of a Ruler.

26. * Many seek † the rulers favour p: but every mans judgment q cometh from the LORD r.

p Men study to please and ingage their Rulers by their obliging carriage and humble Petitions and all other means, supposing that to be the only way to procure either right or favour from them, as they need or desire it. q The decision of his cause and the success of all his endeavours r dependeth wholly upon God who ruleth and inclineth their minds and hearts as it pleaseth him, Prov. 21. 1.

27. An unjust man is an abomination to the just s: and he that is upright in the way, is abomination to the wicked t.

s Because such men, as such, are hated of God, and haters of, and Enemies unto, God and all goodness, and publick Plagues to the Church and State in which they live, and therefore he who loves these, must needs hate them, as true Friends hate those who are Enemies to their Friends. t Of which see above on v. 10.

CHAP. XXX.

1. THe words of Agur the son of Jakeh a, even the prophecy b: the man spake unto Ithiel, even unto Ithiel and Ucal c.

a A person so called, as appears from the designation of his own and his Father's Name, who lived either in Solomon's time, or rather afterwards, and was famous in his generation for Wisdom, and Piety, and Prophecy, and therefore his Proverbs were thought fit to be added to those of Solomon, either by those men of Hezekiah, mentioned Chap. 25. 1. or by some other. But that this should be meant of Solomon may easily be supposed, but cannot be proved, nor is it probable, as being contrary both to the stile of the whole Chapter, and to the matter of some part of it, as v. 7, 8, 9. which agrees not to Solomon, and to the Laws of good Interpretation, one of which is that all words should be taken in their most natural and proper sence, when there is no evidence, nor necessity of understanding them improperly and figuratively, which is the present case. b The Prophetical instruction; for as the Prophets were publick Preachers as well as Foretellers of things to come, so their Sermons, no less than their Predictions, are commonly called their Prophecies. c Two Friends or Disciples, and contempocontemporaries of Agur, called by those Names, who having a great and just opinion of his Wisdom, desired his instructions. Others, concerning Ithiel and Ucal; which they understand of Christ called Ithiel, which signifies God with me, and answers to Immanuel, which is God with us, and Ucal, which signifies power or prevalency. But if he had meant this of Christ, why should he design him by such obscure and ambiguous Names, as if he would not be understood? Why did he not call him by the Name of Shilo or Messiah, or some other Scripture Title belonging and ascribed to him? Besides, this Interpretation agrees not with the contents of this Chapter, wherein there is onely a short and occasional mention of Christ, but the Chapter consists in a manner wholly of counsels and Sentences of a quite other kind.

‖ Or, a great Man. Ch. 8. 4. ‖ Or, a mean Man.

2. Surely I am more brutish than ‖ any man, and have not the understanding of ‖ a man d.

d You come to me with a great opinion of my Wisdom, and you expect that I should inform and instruct you in all things, yea even in the greatest Mysteries: but you are much mistaken in me; I am as ignorant and foolish as other men generally are, yea more than many others. Which he utters either 1. from a deep sense of the common corruption of humane Nature, and of the blindness of mens Minds in things concerning God and their own duty, and of the necessity of instruction from God's Word and of illumination from his Spirit, without which they can never understand these matters. Or, 2. from a modest and humble apprehension of his own ignorance, which hath extorted such like expressions even from Heathen Philosophers; whence Pythagoras rejected the Title of a wise Man when it was ascribed to him; and Socrates, though reputed the wisest Man of his Age, professed that he knew nothing but this, that he knew nothing.

3. I neither learned wisdom e, nor † have the knowledge of the holy f.

e I have not been taught in the Schools of Wisdom, as the Sons of Prophets were, but must own my self to be an unlearned Man, as the Prophet Amos was, Amos 7. 14, 15. Or, I have not learned it, neither by my own understanding and study, nor by the help of other men. f Either, 1. of the holy Angels, who are called Holy by way of eminency, as Deut. 33. 2. Job 15. 15. Dan. 4. 13, 17, 23. & 8. 13. But it was vain to deny that Angelical knowledg to be in him, which no Man imagined to be in him, and which was not in Adam in the state of Innocency. Or, 2. of the holy Prophets. So the sense is, I have not such Divine inspirations as Prophets strictly so called have received, whereby I should be enabled to know or explain those great Mysteries wherein you desire intormation from me. Or, 3. of Holy things, of the mind and will of God concerning Man's Salvation, and the way which leads to it. Not that he denieth that he had any knowledge of these things, but onely a full and comprehensive and perfect knowledge, which they falsly supposed to be in him.

* Joh. 3. 13. † Heb. and descended. * Job 38. 4, &c. Pr. 104. 3, &c. Isa. 40. 12, &c.

4. * Who g hath ascended up into heaven h, † or descended i? * who hath gathered the wind in his fists k? who hath bound the waters l in a garment? who hath established all the ends of the earth m? what is his name, and what is his sons name, if thou canst tell n?

g What meer man? None at all; and therefore I may truly say that I have not that which no Mortal Man ever yet had. h There to learn the mind of God who dwells there, and that Wisdom which is from above. i Or rather, and descended to teach men below what he had learned above. The meaning of the Place is, No man can fully know and teach us these things unless he hath been in Heaven, and sent down from thence to the Earth to that end. Whence our Saviour Christ justly applies these words to himself, Joh. 3. 13. and appropriates this work of declaring God's nature and will to men to himself upon this account, that he alone was in his Fathers bosom, Joh. 1. 18. k To hold them in, or let them out, and rule them at his pleasure? Where is there a Man that can do this? And none but he who made and governs all the Creatures, can know and teach these things. l Those above in the Clouds; and those below, the Sea which God keeps as it were within Doors, and in a Garment, and Swadling-band, as it is expressed, Job 38. 8, 9. and the Waters which he shuts up in the Bowels of the Earth. m The whole Earth from one end to another, which God upholdeth in the Air by the Word of his Power, and secureth from the rage of the Sea, by the Banks and Shores wherewith he hath begirt it for that purpose. n The sense is, Either, 1. Seeing it is apparent that no Man hath this Power, and consequently this Knowledge, but that this is the Prerogative of the Great God, declare, if thou art able, his Name, i. e. his Nature and Perfections, and the eternal Generation, and the Perfections of his Son. Or rather, 2. if thou thinkest there be any such Man who can do these things, I challenge thee to produce his Name, or, if he be long since dead and gone out of the World, the Name of any of his Posterity that can assure us that their Progenitor was such a Person. Which because thou canst not do, I must conclude that none can thoroughly understand this matter, but the blessed God and his Son Christ, and they to whom God shall reveal them by Christ.

* Psal. 12. 6. & 18. 30. & 19. 8. & 119. 140. † Heb. purified.

5. * Every word of God is † pure o: he is a shield unto them that put their trust in him p.

o And therefore you, Ithiel and Ucal, must not expect the full knowledge of Divine Mysteries from me, nor from any Man, but from the Word of God, which is a certain rule both of your belief and practice, because every part and parcel of it is Holy, and True and Good, and there is not the least mixture of falsehood and folly in it, as there is in all the words and writings of men. p Which supposes their knowledge of him by his word; Psal. 9. 10. and contains their reliance upon his Promises joined with Obedience to his Commands.

* Rev. 22. 18, 19.

6. * Add thou not unto his words q, lest he reprove thee r, and thou be found a liar.

q And as the Word of God is pure, do not thou corrupt or abuse it, by adding to it thine own or other mens inventions and opinions, and delivering or receiving of them in the Name and as the Words of God. He here forbids onely adding to it, not diminishing from it, which yet is equally forbidden, Deut. 4. 2. & 12. 32. because the Israelites then and always were, and others are more prone to add than to diminish, because it is more easy to add under colour of interpreting, and because it is more agreeable to the humour of Mankind which is much delighted with its own inventions, as the experience of all Ages sheweth. r By words or deeds, by discovering thy folly and bringing thee to deserved shame and punishment.

7. Two things have I required s of thee, † deny me them not before I die t.

s I do earnestly and especially desire. t Heb. Withhold them not from me before I die, i. e. whilst I live, as things of great and continual necessity for thy honour and service, and my own good.

* Matt. 6. 11. † Heb. of my allowance.

8. Remove far from me u vanity x and lies y: give me z neither poverty nor riches, * feed me with food † convenient for me a:

u From my Heart, and from the course of my Life. This is the first of Agur's Petitions. x Either, 1. all vain and false Opinions concerning God or the things of God, all unbelief, Idolatry, or misbelief. Or, 2. all vanity of Heart and Life, a vain conversation, an affectation of the vain things of this World, as Riches, Pleasures or Honours, the bewitching power and sad effects whereof he had observed in others, and feared in himself, as the following request implies. y All falshood and deceit in my words and carriage towards God or men. z This is his second request, which may seem to have some reference to the former, Poverty being commonly the occasion and temptation to the sin of Lying, and Riches being the great occasions and incitements to vanity. Thus as his first Petition was against the sins themselves, so this latter is against the occasions of them, a moderate and suitable both to my Natural necessities, and to that estate and condition of Life in which thou hast put me, and to that work and service which thou hast for me to do. And this mediocrity of Estate is so amiable that it hath been oft desired by wise Heathens as more eligible than a state of the greatest plenty and glory.

* Deut. 8. 12. & 32. 15. Hos. 13. 6. † Heb. belie thee.

9. * Lest I be full, and † deny thee b, and say, who is the LORD c? or lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain d.

b By trusting to Riches, which is a denial of God, Job 31. 24–28. by unthankfulness for, and abuse of his mercies, and by rebellion against him, and divers other courses and common practices of rich men, whereby God is denied in truth, and in works, even when he is owned in words, and in shew. c That I should obey or serve him. I do not need him, I can live of my own without him. Lest by degrees I should arrive at down right Atheism or infidelity, which is most incident to rich and great men, as is manifest from Experience. d Use false Oaths either to vindicate my self when I am suspected or accused of Theft, and my Oath is required according to the Law, Exod. 22, 8–11. or to gratifie others for filthy lucre, as poor men frequently do.

10. † Accuse not e a servant f unto his Master, lest he curse thee g, and thou be found guilty h.

e To wit, maliciously, rashly, or without just and sufficient cause: for otherwise in some cases this may be not only lawful, but a duty, as when a servant lives wickedly, or robs his Master, or the like. f Whose condition is in it self mean and miserable, and therefore thou shouldst not make it worse without great and apparent necessity. g Desire God to curse and punish thee, which, though it may be sinful in him, yet being deserved by thee, thou hast reason to fear and expect. h By God, who is ready to plead the Cause of the afflicted, and upon strict search shall find thee guilty, and punish thee accordingly.

11. There is a generation i that curseth their father k, and doth not bless their mother.

i A sort of men, abominable both to God and men; which is implied concerning these and the following kinds of sinners,

v. 12, 13, 14. k And mother too, as it follows; ungrateful and unnatural monsters.

12. There is a generation that are pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness l.

l Who not only pretend to others, but conceit within themselves that they are truly religious persons, when they live in a course of wickedness.

* Chap. 6. 17. 13. There is a generation, O how * lofty are their eyes! and their eye-lids are lifted up k.

k Who are proud and insolent, advancing themselves, and despising all others in comparison of themselves, and shewing the pride of their hearts in their countenances and carriages.

* Job 29. 17. Psal. 52. 2. & 57. 4. Chap. 12. 18. 14. * There is a generation whose teeth are as swords, and their jaw-teeth as knives, to devour the poor l from off the earth, and the needy from among men.

l Extortioners, and cruel oppressors, who grind the faces of the poor.

15. The horseleach m hath two daughters n, crying, Give, give o: There are three things p that are never satisfied q, yea, four things say not r, m An insatiable Creature, sucking blood till it be ready to burst. n Which are either, 1. The two forks into which her tongue is divided, and wherewith she sucks: But those who have more accurately observed and described the frame of that Creature, tell us that they have no tongue, and that they suck either by three little teeth, or several parts of the mouth gathered and compressed together. Or rather, 2. The following things, which resemble the Horseleach in its insatiableness, nothing being more ordinary than to call those persons or things the Sons or Daughters of those whose examples they imitate. And whereas it is objected, that they are not only two, but three, yea, four, as is said in the next clause, the Answer is easie, that though he begin with two, yet he proceeds from thence to three, and four, all which are said to be the Daughters of the Horseleach, if the words be rendred commodiously, and as they are in the Hebrew, as we shall presently see. o Never filled, and always craving, and ready to receive more and more. p Or, yea (which may be understood in this, as it is in our Translation of the next clause) they (to wit, the Daughters of the Horseleach) are three. q Which is added partly to explain the former clause, Give, give, and to shew the cause of that excessive desire of more, because they were not contented with what they had; and partly to give the reason why he calls them the Daughters of the Horseleach. r Or, yea, they (the Daughters forementioned) are four, which say not.

† Heb. hell. Chap. 27. 20. Hab. 2. 5. 16. † The grave, and the barren womb s, the earth t that is not filled with water, and the fire u that saith not, It is enough.

s For as the Israelitish Women did generally and vehemently desire many Children, for divers reasons elsewhere mentioned, so those who were barren amongst them, were most eager in those desires, as we see in Rachel, Gen. 30. 1. and as in all other cases, persons most prize and thirst after those good things which they want. t Which when it is dry thirsts for rain, and in a little time sucks up great quantities of water, and gapes for more. u Which continually burns as long as there is any combustible matter left for it.

u He that scorneth or derideth his Parents, though it be but with a look or gesture, and much more when he breaks out into opprobrious words and actions. x He shall die an unnatural, and untimely, and ignominious death, and after death shall lie unburied, and so be exposed to the birds and beasts of prey, and amongst others, to the Crows, or Ravens, who use to feed upon dead carkasses, and particularly to pick out their eyes, as is noted by all sorts of Writers; of which see my Latin Synopsis. He saith, the ravens of the valley, either because they most delight in valleys, or with a particular respect unto that valley near Jerusalem, which was called the valley of dead bodies, Jer. 31. 40. from the Carkasses cast out there, to which therefore the Ravens resorted in great numbers according to their manner: Or, as others render, the ravens of the brooks, because they are of an hot and dry temper, and therefore delight in places adjacent to the brooks of water. y Which also preyeth upon dead carkasses, and especially upon their eyes, as the Ravens do, the reason being the same in both, whether it be the softness of that part which makes it more easie to them to take, or from the pleasant taste of it.

18. There be three things which are too wonderful for me y, yea, four which I know not:

y The way whereof I cannot trace or find out.

19. The way z of an eagle in the air, the way of a serpent upon a rock a, the way of a ship in the † midst of the sea b, and the way of a man with a maid c.

z Either, 1. The manner of her flight, which is exceeding high, and swift, and strong. Or rather, 2. The way or part of the air through which she passeth, without leaving any print or sign in it, which though it be true of all birds, yet is here attributed to the Eagle, of whom this is more true, because she flies out of sight, where neither her body, nor any sign of it, can be discerned. a Where she leaves no impression, nor slime, nor token where she was, as she doth in softer bodies, & as birds leave their feathers there. b Which though at present it make a furrow, yet is speedily closed again. c Either, 1. The various methods and artifices which young men use to entice or perswade young Virgins, either to honest Love and Marriage, or to unlawful Lust and Uncleanness. Or rather, 2. The impure conversation of a man with one who goeth under the name of a Maid, but is not so in truth, which is managed with so much secrecy and cunning, that it can very hardly be discovered. Which exposition agrees best with the foregoing similitudes referred to it, and with the following verse.

20. Such d is the way of an adulterous woman e; she eateth f, and wipeth her mouth g, and saith, I have done no wickedness h.

d So secret and undiscernable. e Of her who, though she be called and accounted a Maid, yet in truth is an Adulteress, not a common strumpet, for of such the following words are not true, but one that secretly lives in the sin of Adultery or Fornication. f To wit, the bread of deceit in secret, by which is understood the act of filthiness, Prov. 9. 17. & 20. 17. which such persons do as greedily desire, and as delightfully feed upon, as hungry persons do upon bread. Thus chastly doth the Holy Ghost express the most filthy actions to teach us to avoid all immodest and obscene speeches as well as actions. g As a child doth when it hath eaten some forbidden food, and would not be discovered. h Denies the fact, and avoweth her innocency.

21. For three things the earth i is disquieted, and for four which it cannot bear k:

i Either, 1. The earth it self trembleth and is moved, so it is an Hyperbole. Or rather, 2. The Inhabitants of the Earth. They do by their insolence and impudence cause great and dreadful disturbances in the places where they live. k Which are intolerable in humane societies.

* Chap. 19. 10. Eccles. 10. 7. 22. * For a servant when he reigneth l, and a fool m when he is filled with meat n:

l When he is advanced to great Power and Dignity; for such an one is ignorant and unfit for his place, and therefore commits many errours, he is poor, and therefore an insatiable oppressor, according to Prov. 28. 3. he is proud and imperious, and being maligned and hated by others, he is provoked to hate them, and to be injurious and cruel to them. m A conceited and wilful fool, or an obstinately wicked man. n Either, 1. When he is glutted with meat or drink, which dulls mens reason, and heats their blood, and stirs them up to many insolencies. Or rather, 2. When he abounds in wealth, which in that case is like a sword in a mad mans hand, being an instrument and occasion of innumerable wickednesses and mischiefs, as appears from common experience.

23. For an odious o woman when she is married p, and an handmaid that is heir to her mistress q.

o Proud and perverse, and full of hateful and offensive qualities. p For then she displayeth, and exerciseth all those ill humours, which before for her own ends she concealed, then she is puffed up, and imperious, and becomes intolerable to her own Family, and to her Relations and Neighbours. q That possesseth her Estate, either by the gift of her Mistress, into whose favour she had insinuated her self by her cunning and officious carriage: or rather by the marriage of her Master, which great and sudden change transports her beside her self, and makes her insufferably proud, and scornful, and injurious to all that converse with her.

† Heb. wise, made wise. 24. There be four things which are little upon the earth, but they are † exceeding wise r.

r Comparatively to other brute Creatures. They act very wisely and providently, not from any reason which they have, but by the direction of divine Providence, which secretly guides them to do those things for their own preservation which are most agreeable to the rules of Wisdom. The design of this observation is either, 1. To commend Wisdom to us, and to teach us to imitate the Providence of these Creatures, Creatures, as we are provoked to imitate their diligence, Prov. 6. 6. Or, 2. To keep us from being proudly conceited of our own wisdom, because we are either equalled or exceeded therein by the unreasonable Creatures in the wise conduct of their affairs. Or, 3. To direct us to whom to resort for wisdom when we want and desire it, even to that God who is able to inspire wisdom even into the brute Creatures.

* Ch. 6. 6, &c.

25. * The ants are a people s not strong, yet they prepare their meat in the summer t.

s Which title is oft given to the unreasonable Creatures both in Scripture, as Joel 1. 6. & 2. 2. and in Homer and Virgil, and divers other Authors. t Of which see on Prov. 6. 6, 7, 8.

* Psal. 104. 18.

26. * The conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks u.

u In rocky ground, or in the holes of Rocks for their safety, against their too potent Enemies.

27. The locusts have no king x, yet go they forth all of them † by bands y.

x To rule and order them. y In great numbers, and in several companies, and in exact order, as is observed in Scripture, as Judg. 6. 5. & 7. 12. Joel 1. 7. & 2. 7, and by other Writers.

28. The spider taketh hold z with her hands a, and is in kings palaces b.

z Of the thread which she spins out of her own bowels. a With her legs which he calls hands, because they serve her for the same purpose, to do her work, to weave her web, and to catch Gnats or Flies, &c. b Is not only in poor Cottages, but many times in Palaces also, where she makes a shift to keep her abode, notwithstanding all the care and pains which is taken to sweep and cleanse it.

29. There be three things which go well, yea, four are comely in going c:

c That walk decently, and with great alacrity and courage; which are here commended to us to imitate in the management of our affairs.

30. A lion which is strongest among beasts, and turneth not away for any d.

d He doth not flee from his pursuers, whether men or beasts, but walketh away with a slow and majestick pace, as is observed by Aristotle, and many others.

‖ Or, Horse. † Heb. girt in the loins.

31. A ‖ † grey-hound e, an he-goat f also, and a king, against whom there is no rising up g.

e Called in Hebrew, girt in the loins, either because its loins are slender, and as it were girt up into a little compass, and tight or well trussed up: or because of its great agility and swiftness, for the girding of the loins was used for expedition in going or working. Or, as it is rendred by others, an Horse, to wit, a War-horse, having his Armour girt about him, and marching to the battle, which he doth with great Majesty and Courage, as God himself observes at large, Job 39. 19, &c. f Which marcheth in the head of the flock in grave and stately manner, conducting them with great courage and resolution, and being ready to fight for them, either with beasts or men that oppose him. Whence great Captains are oft compared to he-goats, as Isa. 14. 9. Jer. 50. 8. Dan. 8. 5, 21. Zech. 10. 3. g A mighty and victorious King, whose power none can withstand, who therefore goeth hither and thither, and proceedeth in his affairs with invincible Courage and Majesty. But this place, with the variation of one Hebrew point, reading ammo for immo, may be rendred, as a very learned man observes, a King and his People with him, a King when he hath the hearts and hands of his People going along with him in his undertakings.

* Job 21. 5. & 40. 4.

32. If thou hast done foolishly in lifting up thy self h, or if thou hast thought evil i, * lay thine hand upon thy mouth k.

h Either, 1. By Rebellion or Sedition against the King last mentioned. Or, 2. By anger or wrath, of which he speaks in the next verse. But this verse hath no necessary dependance either upon the foregoing or following verse. Or, 3. Through thy pride, which makes men carry themselves very foolishly, and scornfully, and injuriously, and is the root of contention, as was observed, Prov. 13. 10. i (i. e.) Designed any mischief or injury against thy Neighbour. k To wit, to shut it: Be silent, as this Phrase is used, Job 21. 5. & 29. 9. Restrain thy self, do not speak one word, much less do any thing tending to the accomplishment of it: Do not open thy mouth to justifie or excuse it, but silently and seriously consider the evil of it, and repent of it, and do so no more.

33. Surely the churning of milk bringeth forth butter, and the wringing of the nose bringeth forth blood: so the forcing of wrath l bringeth forth strife m.

l The stirring up wrath, either, 1. In a mans self towards others, by giving way to passion, or by fixing his thoughts upon those things which may inflame it. Or, 2. In others by reproaches, injuries, or any other provocations. m Is the cause of many quarrels, and much mischief among men.

CHAP. XXXI.

1. THe words of king Lemuel a, the prophecy b that his mother c taught him.

a (i. e.) Of Solomon, by the general consent both of Jewish and Christian Writers; to whom this name doth very fitly agree, for it signifies one of, or from God, or belonging to God, and such an one was Solomon eminently, being given by God to David and Bathsheba, as a pledge of his reconciliation to them after their repentance, of whom it is expressly said, that the Lord loved him, 2 Sam. 12. 24. and who was by God himself appointed to succeed David in the Kingdom. Possibly his Mother gave this name to mind him of his great obligations to God, and of the justice and necessity of his devoting himself unto God's service and glory. b So called, either, 1. More specially, because she did either by natural sagacity, or by divine inspiration foresee Solomon's danger, and what sins he was most likely to be either inclined or tempted to commit, and therefore thought fit to give him these precautions. Or, 2. More generally, as all godly discourses or counsels are called Prophecies, of which see on Prov. 30. 1. and elsewhere. c Bathsheba, who having truly repented of her Adultery, did not only avoid it in her self for the future, but seriously endeavoured to prevent that and such like sins in others, and especially in Solomon, whom the remembrance of her sin might possibly provoke to an imitation of her example. But when she gave him these instructions, is but matter of conjecture. Probably it was, either, 1. When she first discerned his inclinations to those sins of which she here warns him, to which she saw he was like to have many and strong provocations. Or, 2. After he was made King, and had more plainly discovered his proneness to these excesses, although he had not yet broken forth into those scandalous enormities into which he afterwards fell.

2. What d my son! and what, the son of my womb e! and what, the son of my vows f!

d A short speech, arguing her great passion for him; What dost thou do? or, What words shall I take? What counsels shall I give thee? My heart is full, I must give it vent: but where shall I begin? e My Son, not by Adoption, but whom I bare in my womb, and brought forth with great pain, and brought up with tender care; and therefore it is my duty to give thee admonitions, and thine to receive them; and what I speak is from sincere and fervent affection to thee, which I trust thou wilt not despise. f On whose behalf I have made many Prayers, and Sacrifices, and solemn Vows to God; whom I have, as far as in me lay, devoted to the Work, and Service, and Glory of God.

* Chap. 5. 9. ‖ Or, substance. * Deut. 17. 17.

3. * Give not thy ‖ strength g unto women, nor thy ways h to that * which destroyeth kings i.

g The vigour of thy mind and body, which is greatly impaired by inordinate lusts, as all Physicians agree, and frequent experience sheweth. h Thy conversation or course of life. i The same thing repeated in other words, as is very usual in these Books: To the immoderate Love of Women, which is most destructive to Kings and Kingdoms, as was well known to Solomon by the example of his Father David, and by many other sad instances left upon record in all Histories.

* Eccl. 10. 17.

4. * It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine i, nor for princes strong drink.

i To wit, to Drunkenness or excess, as the next verse explains it.

† Heb. alter. † Heb. of all the sons of affliction.

5. Lest they drink and forget the law k, and † pervert the judgment † of any of the afflicted l.

k The Laws of God, by which they are to govern themselves and their Kingdoms. l Which may easily be done by a drunken Judge, because Drunkenness deprives a man of the use of Reason, by which alone men can distinguish between right and wrong, and withal stirs up those passions which incline him both to precipitation and partiality.

* Psal. 104. 15. † Heb. bitter of soul.

6. * Give strong drink unto him m that is ready to perish n, and wine to those that be † of heavy hearts.

m Which is to be understood comparatively, to him rather than to Kings, partly because he needs a liberal draught of it, more than Kings do; and principally because if it proceed to excess, in him it is only a private inconvenience, but in Kings it is a publick mischief and grievance. n Sorely afflicted and overwhelmed with sorrow, as it is explained in the following words; for such need a cordial.

7. Let

7. Let him drink, and forget his poverty o, and remember his misery no more.

o For Wine moderately used, allayeth Mens Cares and Fears, and cheareth their Spirits, Psal. 104. 15.

8. Open thy mouth p for the dumb q in the cause † Heb. the sons of destruction. of all † such as are appointed to destruction r.

p Speak freely and impartially, as becomes a King and Judg to do. q For such as cannot speak in their own Cause, either through Ignorance and Infirmity: or because of the dread of their more potent Adversaries, or of the Majesty of the King sitting in judgment. r Who without such succour from the Judg, are like to be utterly ruined, whom therefore both Justice and Charity oblige thee to preserve.

* Lev. 19. 15. Deut. 1. 16. 9. Open thy mouth, * judg righteously, and plead the cause of the poor and needy.

* Ch. 12. 4. & 18. 22. & 19. 14. † Heb. a woman of strength, or of activity, Gen. 47. 6. & 1 King. 1. 42. 10. * Who can find † a virtuous woman s? for her price is far above rubies.

s Whom he may take to Wife. Such a person is hardly to be found. Compare Eccles. 7. 28. And here he lays down several Characters or Qualifications of an excellent Wife, which are here delivered in Alphabetical order, each verse beginning with a several and the succeeding Letter of the Hebrew Alphabet: which method is used in some, and but in a few places of Scripture, to oblige us to the more diligent consideration and careful remembrance of them, as things of more than ordinary importance. And such this matter is, partly because the good or bad Education even of private Families, which depends much upon the Mother's qualifications, hath a mighty influence upon the welfare or misery of Common-wealths; and partly because the right Education of Royal Families is in it self a very publick Blessing, and therefore it is the interest and happiness of whole Kingdoms, that their Kings should have virtuous and pious Wives.

11. The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her t, so that he shall have no need of spoil u.

t For the prudent and faithful management of all his domestick affairs, which are committed to her care. u The sense is either, 1. He shall want no necessary Provisions for his family, which are sometimes called spoil, or prey, as below, v. 15. Psal. 111. 5. Luk. 11. 22. Or, 2. He shall not need to use indirect and unlawful courses to get Wealth, by cheating or oppressing his Subjects or others, as Princes have oft done to maintain the Luxury of their Wives, and as Solomon himself afterwards did, of which see on 1 Kings 12. 4, 10, 11. because all shall be abundantly supplied to him by her Providence.

12. She will do him good and not evil x all the days of her life.

x She will improve and not waste his Estate.

13. She seeketh wool, and flax y, and worketh willingly with her hands z.

y That she may find employment for her servants, and not suffer them to spend all their time unprofitably in ease and idleness. z She encourageth them to work by her example; which was a common practice among Princesses in those first and purest ages of the world. Not that it is the duty of Kings and Queens to use manual or mechanical operations, but that it is the duty of all persons, the greatest not excepted, to improve all their Talents, and particularly their time, which is one of the noblest of them, one way or other to the service of that God to whom they must give an account, and to the good of that community to which they are related and obliged.

14. She is like the merchants ships, she bringeth her food from afar a.

a By the sale of her home-spun commodities she purchaseth the choicest goods which come from far Countries.

15. She riseth also while it is yet night b, and giveth meat c to her household, and a portion d to her maidens.

b Early in the morning, to redeem time. c Distributeth all her necessary provisions. d Either, 1. Of Work, which she allots to them. Or rather, 2. Of Provisions for them; for so this word is used, Gen. 47. 22. Ieu. 10, 13, 14. Prov. 30. 8. and no where, to my remembrance, of an allotment of work. And so this clause agrees best with the former, expressing the same thing in other words, according to the manner.

† Heb. taketh it. 16. She considereth e a field, and † buyeth it: with the fruit of her hands f she planteth a vineyard g.

e Whether it be fit for her use, and of a reasonable price, and how she may purchase it. This excludes the rashness, as her proceeding to buy it excludes the inconstancy, which is oft incident to that sex. f With the effects of her diligence. g She improveth the Land to the best advantage.

17. She girdeth her loins with strength h, and strengtheneth her arms i.

h She useth great diligence and expedition in her employment; for which end men in those times use to gird up their long and loose garments about their loins. i Putteth forth her utmost strength in her business.

18. † She perceiveth that her merchandise is good k: her candle goeth not out by night l. † Heb. she tasteth.

k She finds great comfort and good success in her labours. l Which is not to be taken strictly, but only signifies her unwearied Care and Industry, which is oft expressed by labouring day and night, or continually.

19. She layeth her hands to the spindle m, and her hands hold the distaff.

m By her own example she provoketh her servants to labour. And although in these later and more delicate and luxurious times, such mean employments are grown out of fashion among great persons, yet they were not so in former ages, neither in other Countries, nor in this Land; whence all Women, afore they are married, are to this day called in the language of our Law, Spinsters.

20. † She stretcheth out her hand to the poor n; † Heb. she spreadeth. yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy.

n To relieve their necessities. Her designs are generous and noble; for she labours not only to supply her own and her Houshold necessities, or to support her own state, much less to feed her Pride and Luxury, but that she may have wherewith to supply the wants of others who crave or need her assistance. Which also procures God's blessing upon her Husband, and Children, and whole Family, to whom by this means she brings both Honour and advantage.

21. She is not afraid of the snow o for her household: for all her household are clothed with ‖ ‖ Or, double garments. scarlet p.

o Or of any injuries of the weather. p She hath provided enough, not only for their necessity and defence against cold and other inconveniences, which is here supposed, but also for their delight and ornament; so that not only her self, and Husband, and Children, but some of the better rank of her servants wear scarlet, which was more cheap and familiar in those times and Countries than now it is with us. Or, as it is rendred in our margent, and by divers others, are cloathed with double garments, which is necessary and customary in cold seasons.

22. She maketh her self coverings of tapestry q, her cloathing is silk and purple r.

q For the furniture of her house. r Which was very agreeable to her high quality; though it doth not justifie that Luxury in attire which is now usual among persons of far lower ranks both for Wealth and Dignity.

23. Her husband is known s in the gates, when he sitteth among the Elders of the land t.

s Observed and respected, not only for his own worth, but for his Wife's sake, not only for those rich Ornaments which by her care and diligence she provides for him, which others of his Brethren, by reason of their Wives sloth or luxury, are not able to procure, but also for his Wisdom in chusing, and his Happiness in enjoying so excellent a Wife, by whose prudent care, in the management of his domestick concerns he hath perfect freedom wholly to attend upon publick affairs. t In counsel or judgment.

24. She maketh fine linnen, and selleth it, and delivereth girdles u unto the merchant.

u Curiously wrought of Linnen, and Gold, or other precious materials, Jer. 13. 1. Dan. 10. 5. which in those parts were used both by Men, 2 Sam. 20. 8. and by Women, Isa. 3. 24. Cant. 7. 1.

25. Strength x and honour y are her cloathing z, and she shall rejoice † in time to come a. † Heb. in the latter day. Gr. in the last days. 2 Tim. 3. 1.

x Not strength of Body, which is no ornament of that sex, save only as she preserves her health and strength by Sobriety and Exercise, which other Women waste by Intemperance and Idleness, but strength of Mind, Magnanimity, Courage, Resolution, Activity. y Either, 1. Her prudent, and pious, and amiable behaviour, in which true Honour principally consists. Or, 2. That good Name and honourable Esteem which she hath gained amongst all that know her by her virtuous disposition and carriage. z These, and not her rich Garments mentioned before, are her great ornament and glory. a The sense is, either, 1. In her old Age she reaps the comfort and benefit of her youthful Labours. Or rather, 2. She lives in constant tranquillity of mind, and a confident and chearful expectation of all future events, how calamitous soever; partly because she hath laid in provisions for a rainy day, and chiefly, because she hath the comfortable remembrance of a well-spent Life, and which follows lows thereupon, a just confidence in God's gracious Providence and promises made to such persons.

26. She openeth her mouth with wisdom b, and in her tongue is the law of kindness c.

b She is neither sullenly silent, nor full of vain and impertinent talk, as many Women are, but speaks discreetly and piously, as occasion offereth it self. c Her Speeches are not froward and provoking, as those of foolish Women frequently are, but most obliging and amiable, as being guided by Wisdom and Grace, and not by inordinate Lusts and Passions. And this practice is called a Law in her tongue, because it is constant and customary, and proceeds from an inward and powerful Principle of true Wisdom, which in a manner necessitates and constrains her to discourse like her self, so that in a moral sense she cannot speak otherwise, unless she offer violence to her self, or the nature of the thing require sharp and severe Expressions.

27. She looketh well to the ways of her houshold d, and eateth not the bread of idleness e.

d She diligently observeth the management and progress of her domestick business, and the whole carriage and conversation of her Children and Servants. Whereby also he intimates that she spends not her time in gadding abroad to other Houses, and idle Discourses about the concerns of other persons, as the manner of many Women is, but is wholly intent upon her own house and proper business. e That which is got by idleness, or without labour.

28. Her children f arise up g, and call her blessed h, her husband also, and he praiseth her i.

f Whose testimony is the more considerable, because they have been constant eye-witnesses of her whole carriage, and therefore must have seen her misdemeanors, if there had been any, as well as her Virtues. g Either, 1. In token of Reverence to her, which agrees not to the following clause, wherein the same Phrase is understood concerning her Husband. Or rather, 2. That they may seriously and industriously apply themselves to the work of setting forth her praises, as this Phrase is used, Gen. 37. 25. Exod. 2. 17. and oft elsewhere. For sitting being commonly the posture of idleness, men that set about any work, are said to rise in order thereunto. h Both for her own excellency, and for many happy fruits which they have gathered from her wise and godly education. i In the following words.

29. Many daughters k || have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all l.

|| Or, have gotten riches.

k Daughters of Men, i.e. Women, so called also, Gen. 34. 1. Ezek. 30. 18. l He esteems it but just that his praises should bear proportion to her real and manifold perfections.

30. Favour m is deceitful n, and beauty is vain: but a woman that feareth the LORD o, she shall be praised.

m Comeliness, or, as the next clause explains it, Beauty, which commonly gives Women favour or acceptation with those who behold them. These are the words either 1. Of her Husband continuing to praise her. Or, 2. Of Bathsheba, giving the summ of what she had said in few words. n Partly because it gives a false representation of the person, being oft-times a cover to a most deformed soul, and to many evil and hateful qualities; partly because it doth not give a man that content and satisfaction, which at first view he promised to himself from it; and partly because it is soon lost, not only by death, but by many Diseases and contingencies. o Which character is here mentioned either as the Crown of all her perfections. Or, 2. As a key to understand the foregoing passage of that Wisdom, and Fidelity, and Diligence, which proceeded from, or is accompanied with the fear of God.

31. Give her of the fruit of her hands p, and let her own works praise her q in the gates r.

p It is but just and fit that she should enjoy those benefits and praises which her excellent labours deserve. q Give her the praises which her own works may challenge. If men be silent, the lasting effects of her Prudence and diligence will loudly trumpet forth her praises. r In the most publick and solemn assemblies.

ECCLESIASTES,

ECCLESIASTES.

THree things in general are to be noted concerning this Book. 1. The Author of it, who was Solomon, as is manifeſt, both from the common conſent of Jewiſh and Chriſtian Writers, and from the expreſs words of the firſt Verſe. Nor can any thing be oppoſed to it, but bold and groundleſs conjectures. That he wrote it in his old Age, is more than probable from divers paſſages in it, as that he did it after his buildings, Ch. 2. 4. which yet took up Twenty Years of his life, 1 King. 9. 10. and after ſome conſiderable enjoyment of them, and planting of Gardens, and Orchards, and reaping the Fruit of them, Ch. 2. v. 5, 6. and after long and much conſideration and experience of all thoſe Methods in which men expected to find happineſs, and after he had been deeply plunged in impure and inordinate loves, Ch. 7. 27, &c. and from many other places, which may be obſerved by any diligent Reader. And ſo this Book was written by him as a publick Teſtimony of his Repentance and Deteſtation of all thoſe vain and wicked courſes to which he had addicted himſelf: wherein he followed the example of his Father David, who after his ſad fall penned the Fifty and Firſt Pſalm. And the truth of this Opinion may be confirmed by that expreſſion, 2 Chron. 11. 17. they walked in the way of David and Solomon, i. e. wherein they walked both before their falls, and after their Repentance. 2. The form or method of it. For whereas there are ſome paſſages in it which may ſeem offenſive and impious, for which ſome few Perſons have ſuſpected its Authority, it muſt be conſidered that it is in part dramatical, as was ſaid before of the Book of Proverbs, and that Solomon ſpeaks ſome and moſt things in his own Name, but ſome other things in the Names, and according to the opinions of thoſe worldly and ungodly men, as is undeniably manifeſt both from the ſcope and deſign of the Book, as it is expreſſed both in the beginning, and in the concluſion of it, and from his ſerious and large diſputation againſt thoſe wicked Principles and Courſes. And this way of writing is not unuſual amongſt both Sacred and Profane Writers. 3. The deſign and buſineſs of it: Which is to deſcribe Man's true happineſs, and the way leading to it. Which he doth both Negatively, aſſerting, and proving, that it is not to be found either in ſecular Wiſdom, or in ſenſual Pleaſures, or in worldly Greatneſs and Glory, or in abundance of Riches, or in a vain profeſſion of Religion; and poſitively, ſhewing that it is to be had onely by the fear of God and obedience to his Laws, which alone can give a Man a contented and chearful enjoyment of his preſent comforts, and aſſurance of his future and everlaſting happineſs.

1. THE words of the preacher a, the ſon of David, king of Jeruſalem b.

a Who was not only a King, but alſo a Teacher of God's People, which he did both by Words, upon ſome ſolemn occaſions, and by Writings. Who having ſinned grievouſly and ſcandalouſly in the Eyes of all the World, juſtly thought himſelf obliged to Preach or Publiſh his true Repentance for all his folly and wickedneſs, and to give publick warning and wholeſom counſels to all Perſons to avoid thoſe Rocks upon which he had ſplit. The Hebrew properly ſignifies either gathering or gathered, and ſo it ſignifies, either, 1. a Preacher, as it is commonly rendred, whoſe Office it is to gather in Souls unto God or his Church. Or, 2. A Penitent, or Convert, or, one gathered, or brought back by true Repentance to God, and to his Church, from which he had ſo wickedly revolted. b This is added partly as a deſcription of the Perſon or Author of this Book, Solomon, who was the only Man that was both Son of David, properly ſo called, and King in Jeruſalem: and partly as an aggravation of his ſin, becauſe he was the Son of David, a wiſe and godly Father; who had given him both excellent counſel, and, for his general courſe, a good example; and for the evil example which he gave him in the matter of Uriah, that alſo, conſidered with his hearty and effectual Repentance for it, and the dreadful puniſhments of it upon his Perſon and Family, was a fair warning and moſt powerful inſtruction to him to learn, by his Father's example, and becauſe he was a King, not by Birth, for he was not David's eldeſt Son, but by the ſpecial favour and deſignation of that God whom he had now ſo ill requited, and that in Jeruſalem, an Holy City, the place of God's ſpecial preſence, and of his worſhip, where he had daily opportunities to know, and obligations to practiſe better things, which place he had defiled by his horrid ſins, and thereby made it and all God's People, and the true Religion, and the Name of the bleſſed God, odious and contemptible amongſt all the Nations round about him.

2. * Vanity of vanities c, ſaith the preacher d, vanity of vanities; † * all e is vanity f.

* Pſal. 39. 5, 6. & 62. 9. & 144. 4. Chap. 12. 8. † Heb. this all. * Rom. 8. 20.

c Not onely vain, but vanity in the Abſtract, which notes extream vanity, eſpecially where the word is thus doubled, as a King of Kings, is the chief of Kings, and a Servant of Servants is the vileſt of Servants, and a Song of Songs, is a moſt excellent Song. d Upon deep conſideration and long experience, and by Divine inſpiration. This Verſe contains the general Propoſition, which he intends particularly to demonſtrate in the whole following Book. e All worldly things, and all mens deſigns, and ſtudies, and works about them. f Not in themſelves, for ſo they are God's Creatures, and therefore good and really uſeful in their kinds, but in reference to men, and to that happineſs, which men ſeek and confidently expect to find in them. So they are unqueſtionably vain, becauſe they are not what they ſeem to be, and perform not what they promiſe, content and ſatisfaction, but inſtead of that are commonly the cauſes or occaſions of innumerable cares, and fears, and ſorrows, and miſchiefs, and becauſe they are altogether unſuitable to the noble Mind or Soul of Man, both in nature or quality, and in duration, as being unſtable and periſhing things. And this vanity of them is here repeated again and again, partly becauſe it was moſt deeply fixed, and perpetually preſent in Solomon's Thoughts; partly to ſhew the unqueſtionable certainty and vaſt importance of this truth; and partly that he might more throughly awaken the dull and ſtupid minds of men to the conſideration of it, and might wean mens Hearts from thoſe things upon which he knew they exceſſively doted.

3. * What profit g hath a man of all his labour h which he taketh under the Sun i.

* Chap. 2. 22. & 3. 9.

g Or, as others render it, What remainder? What real and abiding benefit hath a Man by it? None at all. All is unprofitable as to the attainment of that happineſs which Solomon here is, and all men in the World are enquiring after. h Heb. his toilſom labour, both of Body and Mind in the purſuit of Riches, or Pleaſures, or other earthly things. i In all ſublunary or worldly matters, which are uſually tranſacted in the Day time, or by the light of the Sun. By this reſtriction he implies that that profit and happineſs which in vain is ſought for in this lower World is really and only to be found in Heavenly places and things.

4. One generation paſſeth away, and another generation cometh: * but the earth † abideth for ever l.

* Pſal. 104. 5. & 119. 90. † Heb. ſtandeth.

k Men continue but for one, and that a ſhort Age, and then they leave all their poſſeſſions to the ſucceeding Age, and therefore they cannot be happy here, becauſe happineſs muſt needs be unchangeable and eternal, or elſe the perpetual fear and certain knowledge knowledge of the approaching loss of all these things will rob a man of all solid contentment in them. l (i.e.) Through all successive generations of men: and therefore man in this respect is more mutable and miserable than the very Earth upon which he stands, and which, together with all the glories and comforts which he enjoyed in it, he leaveth behind him to be possessed by others.

5. The sun also ariseth, and the sun goeth down, and † hasteth to his place where he arose m.

m The Sun is in perpetual motion, sometimes arising, and sometimes setting, and then arising again, and so constantly repeating its courses in all succeeding Days, and Years, and Ages; and the like he observes concerning the Winds and Rivers, as he observes, v. 6, 7. And the design of these similitudes seems to be, either, 1. that by representing the constant changes and restless motions of these particular things, he might intimate that it is so with all other earthly things; and therefore no man can expect satisfaction from them. Or, 2. that by comparing the Sun, and Wind, and Rivers, as v. 4. he compared the Earth with Man, he might shew that Man, considered as mortal, is in a more unhappy condition than these things, because when the Earth abides, Man goes; and when the Sun sets, he riseth again, and so the Wind and Rivers return to their former place and state, but Man when once he dies, he never returns again to this life; of which comparison, see Job 14. 7, 12. Or, 3. to shew the vanity of all worldly things, and that Man's mind can never be satisfied with them, because there is nothing in the World but a constant repetition of the same things, which is so irksome a thing, that the consideration thereof hath made some persons weary of their lives, and there is no new thing under the Sun, as is added in the foot of the account, v. 9. which seems to me to be given us as a Key to understand the meaning of the foregoing passages. And this is manifest and certain from experience that the things of this World are so narrow, and the mind of Man so vast, that there must be something new to satisfie the mind, and even delightful things by too frequent repetition or long continuance are so far from yielding satisfaction, that they grow tedious and troublesom.

6. The wind goeth toward the south, and turneth about unto the north n; it whirleth about continually, and the wind returneth again according to his circuits o.

n The wind also sometimes blows from one quarter of the World, and sometimes from another; all of them being Synecdochically comprehended under these two eminent quarters. But because this word, the Wind, is not expressed in the Hebrew, but is only borrowed or understood from the latter clause of the Verse, this first clause is by other judicious Interpreters understood of the Sun, of whom he last spake; the words being thus rendred according to the Hebrew, He (the Sun) goeth towards the South (which he doth one half of the Year) and turneth about unto the North, which he doth the other half. And so here is the whole motion of the Sun towards the four quarters of the World particularly described, his daily motion from East to West, and back again, v. 5. and his Yearly motion from North to South, between the Signs of Cancer and Capricorn. o This clause is by all understood of the Wind, which is fitly mentioned immediately after the Sun, because it hath its rise from the Sun, who is therefore called the Father of Winds, and the winds do usually rise with the Sun, and are laid when he sets. But then it is rendred thus, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew, the wind goeth continually whirling or compassing about, and he returneth again to his circuits, being sometimes in one, and sometimes in another quarter, and successively returning to the same quarters in which he had formerly been.

* Job 38. 10. Psal. 104. 8, 9. † Heb. unto the place that the rivers go, thither they return to go.

7. * All the rivers run into the sea, yet the sea is not full p: † unto the place from whence the rivers come q, thither they return again.

p To wit, to the brink, or so as to overflow the Earth, which might be expected from such vast accessions to it. Whereby also he intimates the emptiness and dissatisfaction of mens minds, notwithstanding all the abundance of Creature-comforts. q Either, 1. unto the Sea, from whence they are supposed to return into their proper Chanels, and then, as it is expressed, thither (i.e. into the Sea) they return again. Or, 2. unto their Springs or Fountains, to which the waters return by secret passages of the Earth, as is manifest from the Caspian Sea, and reasonably supposed in other places. Or rather, 3. unto the Earth in general, from whence they come or flow into the Sea, and to which they return again by the reflux of the Sea. For he seems to speak of the visible and constant motion of the Waters, both to the Sea and from it, and then to it again in a perpetual reciprocation: which agrees best with the former similitudes, v. 5, 6.

8. All things r are full of labour s, man cannot utter it t: the eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing u.

r Not only the Sun, and Winds, and Rivers, which I have mentioned, but all other Creatures. s Both subjectively, as they are in continual restlesness and change, never abiding in the same state or place; and efficiently, as they cause great and sore labour to men, in getting, and keeping, and enjoying of them, yea even in the study of them, as is noted hereafter. t The labour is inexpressibly and unconceivably great. u As there are many things in the World troublesom and vexatious to mens senses and minds, so even those things which are comfortable and acceptable to them are not satisfactory, but men are constantly desiring some longer continuance or fuller enjoyment of them, or variety in them, and they never say, It is enough, I desire no more. The Eye and Ear are here Synecdochically put for all the senses, because these are most spiritual and refined, most curious and inquisitive, most capable of receiving satisfaction, because they are exercised with more ease and pleasure than the other senses, whose satisfactions are oft attended with greater weariness, and manifold dangers, and inconveniences.

9. * † The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done, is that which shall be done: and x there is no new thing y under the sun.

* Chap. 3. 15. † Heb. what is it that hath been? the same that shall be. So Gr.

x There is nothing in the World but a continued and tiresom repetition of the same things, the nature and course of the beings and affairs of the World, and the tempers of mens minds, are generally the same that they ever were and shall ever be; and therefore because no man ever yet received satisfaction from any worldly things, it is a vain and foolish thing for any person hereafter to expect it. y To wit, in the nature of things, which might give us hopes of attaining that satisfaction which things have not hitherto afforded. For otherwise this doth not restrain the God of Nature, who hath frequently done and still can do, new and miraculous works, and who can and doth discover to particular persons new inventions, when it pleaseth him.

10. Is there any thing whereof it may be said, See, this is new z? it hath been already of old time a, which was before us.

z For the proof hereof I appeal to the consciences and experiences of all men. a The same things have been said and done before, though possibly we did not know it.

11. There is no remembrance of former things b; neither shall there be any remembrance of things that are to come, with those that shall come after c.

b This seems to be added to prevent this Objection, There are many new inventions and enjoyments unknown to former Ages. To this he answers, This Objection is grounded only upon our ignorance of ancient times and things, which is very great, and which if we did exactly know or remember, we should easily find Parallels to all present occurrences in former Ages. c This clause tends both to illustrate and confirm the former. The sense is, There are many thousands of remarkable speeches and actions done in this, and the following Ages, which neither are nor ever will be put into the publick Records or Histories, and consequently they must unavoidably be forgotten and lost unto succeeding Ages; and therefore it is just and reasonable to believe the same concerning former Ages, seeing the same causes are most likely to produce the same effects.

12. ¶ I the preacher was king over Israel in Jerusalem d.

d This Verse is a Preface to the following Discourse, that by the consideration of the quality of the Speaker, they might be induced to give more attention and respect to his words. Having asserted the vanity of all things in the general, he now comes to prove his assertion in all those particulars wherein men commonly seek, and with greatest probability expect to find, true happiness. He begins with secular Wisdom. And to shew how competent a Judge he was of this matter, he lays down his Character, that he was the Preacher, which implies eminent knowledge and ability to teach others, or, the Convert, who had learnt by dear bought experience what he now taught them; and a King, who therefore had all imaginable opportunities and advantages for the attainment of happiness, and particularly for the getting of Wisdom, by consulting all sorts of Books and Men, by trying all manner of experiments, and many other ways; and no ordinary King, but King over Israel, God's own and only beloved People, a wise and an happy People, Deut. 4. 6, 7. & 33. 29. whose King he was by God's special and gracious appointment, and furnished by God with singular Wisdom for the discharge of that great trust; and whose Royal Palace, and abode was in Jerusalem, where were the House of God and the most wise and learned of the Priests attending upon it, and the Seats of Justice, and the Colledges or Assemblies of the wisest men of their Nation: of which see 2 Kings 22. 14. 1 Chron. 25. 8, &c. Psal. 122. 5. All which helps concurring together in him, which very rarely do in any other men, makes the argument drawn from his experience more convincing and undeniable.

13. And I gave my heart e to seek and search out f by wisdom g concerning all things that are done under heaven h: this sore travel i hath God given to the sons of man k, ‖ to be exercised therewith l.

e Which Phrase notes his serious and fixed purpose, his great industry and alacrity in it. f To seek diligently and accurately. g Wisely, or by the help of that Wisdom wherewith God had endowed me. h Concerning all the works of God and men in this lower World, the works of Nature, and their causes, effects, properties and operations, the works of Divine Providence, and God's counsels and ends in them, the work and depths of humane policy in the conduct of personal, and domestick, and publick Affairs. i This difficult and toilsom work of searching out these things. k God hath inflicted this as a just punishment upon man for his eating of the Tree of Knowledge, that instead of that sweet and perfect knowledge which God had freely infused into man at his first Creation, he should now grope after some small parcels or fragments of it, and those too not to be gotten without the sweat of his brows and brains. l To employ themselves in the painful study of these things, which now is both their duty and their punishment. Or, as it is rendred in the margent, and by many others, to afflict them in or by it, to chastise their former curiosity, and to give them matter of continual humiliation and vexation. And therefore knowledge is so far from making men happy, that it exposeth them to trouble and infelicity.

14. I have seen m all the works that are done under the sun, and behold n, all is vanity and vexation of spirit o.

m (i.e.) Diligently observed, and in great measure understood. n For it was a great surprise to me, and therefore may seem strange to you. o And not only unsatisfying, but also troublesom, and an affliction or breaking to a mans spirit or mind. Or, as others, both ancient and modern Translators, render it, a feeding upon wind, as these very words, save only that there is the Verb from which this Noun seems most probably deduced, are rendred, Hos. 12. 1. where also it signifies a fruitless or lost labour, and a disappointment of their hopes and desires of satisfaction. And so this is a repetition of the same thing in other words, according to the manner of these Books.

* Chap. 7. 13. † Heb. defect.

15. * That which is crooked cannot be made streight p: and † that which is wanting q cannot be numbred r.

p All our knowledge serves only to discover our diseases and miseries, but is oft it self utterly insufficient to heal or remove them; it cannot rectifie those confusions and disorders which are either in our own hearts and lives, or in the men and things of the World. q To wit, in our knowledge, and in order to mans compleat satisfaction and felicity. r We know little of what we should or might know, or did know in the state of Innocency, or shall know in the future Life.

16. I communed with mine own heart s, saying, Lo, I am come to great estate t, and have gotten u * more wisdom than all they that have been before me x in Jerusalem y: yea, my heart † had great experience z of wisdom and knowledge a.

* 1 King. 4. 30. & 10. 7, 23. † Heb. had seen much.

s I considered within my self in what condition I was, and what degrees of knowledge I had gained, and whether it was not my ignorance that made me unable to rectifie those errors, and supply those wants; and wiser men could do it, though I could not. t Heb. I am grown great, to wit, in Wisdom: Or, I have magnified, or greatly enlarged. u Heb. have added. As I had a large stock of Wisdom infused into me by God, 1 Kings 3. 12. & 4. 29. so I have greatly improved it by Conversation, and Study, and Experience. x Whether Governours, or Priests, or private Persons. Which was no vain boast, but a known and confessed truth, and profession hereof was necessary to demonstrate his assertion. y Which was then the most eminent place in the World for Wisdom and Knowledge. z Heb. had seen much; which intimates that his Knowledge was clear, and certain, and experimental, as that is which we have from our own eye-sight. a Two words signifying the same thing, as may be gathered from v. 18. and from the promiscuous use of them in this Book, and in the Proverbs, and elsewhere, and implying all manner of knowledge, divine or humane, speculative or practical, political or philosophical.

* Chap. 2. 12. & 7. 23, 25.

17. * And I gave my heart to know wisdom, and to know madness and folly b: I perceived that this also is vexation of spirit c.

b That I might throughly understand the nature and difference of Truth and Errour, of Vertue and Vice, all things being best understood by contraries, and might discern if there were any opinion or practice amongst men, which would give him full satisfaction. c Or, feeding upon wind, as v. 14.

18. For in much wisdom is much ‖ grief d: and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow e.

d Or, indignation, or displeasure within himself, and against his present condition. e Which he doth many ways, partly because he gets his knowledge with hard and wearisom labour, both of mind and body, with the consumption of his spirits, and shortning and imbitterment of his life; partly because he is oft deceived with knowledge falsly so called, and oft mistakes Errours for Truths, and is perplexed with manifold doubts, from which ignorant men are wholly free; partly because he foresees, and consequently feels the terrour of many miseries which are, or are likely to come to pass, which are unobserved by less knowing persons, and which possibly never happen; partly because he hath the clearer prospect into, and quicker sense of his own ignorance, and infirmities, and disorders, and withal how vain and ineffectual all his knowledge is for the prevention or removal of them: and partly because his knowledge is very imperfect and unsatisfying, yet increasing his thirst after more knowledge, and consequently after more dissatisfaction, because instead of that just honour, and delight, and advantage which he expects from it, he meets with nothing but envy, and opposition, and contempt, because his knowledge quickly fades and dies with him, and then leaves him in no better, and possibly in a worse condition than the meanest, and most unlearned man in the World.

CHAP. II.

1. I Said in mine heart a, Go to now, I will prove thee b with mirth c, therefore enjoy pleasure d: and behold, this also is vanity e.

a Being disappointed of my hopes from knowledge, I resolved in my own mind to try another course. b O my Soul, I will try whether I cannot make thee happy. c By allowing to my self the free enjoyment of the present and sensible delights of humane life. d Take thy fill of pleasure, and expect satisfaction thence. e Is vain, and unable to make men happy, because sensible pleasures are mean and unsuitable to the noble and heaven-born Soul of man, and if excessively used, apter to cloy and glut men, than to satisfie them, and are frequently mixed with, and most commonly end in bitterness, as being the great instruments and occasions of sin, and of all its fatal consequences.

2. I said of laughter f, It is mad g: and of mirth, What doth it h?

f Of excessive mirth, which discovers it self by immoderate laughter, and other outward gestures. g This is an act and sign of madness, more fit for fools who know nothing, than for wise men, at least in this sinful, and dangerous, and deplorable state of mankind, which calls for seriousness and sorrow from all considerate persons, in which case it is like the laughter of one in a phrenzy. And none but a Fool, or mad Man, can take satisfaction in such light and frothy pleasures, or expect happiness from them. h What good doth it? Or how can it make men happy? I challenge all the Epicures in the World to give me a solid and satisfactory Answer.

* Chap. 1. 17. † Heb. to draw my flesh with wine. † Heb. the number of the days of their life.

3. * I sought in mine heart † to give my self unto wine i, (yet acquainting mine heart with wisdom k) and to lay hold on folly l, till I might see what was that good for the sons of men, which they should do under the heaven † all the days of their life m.

i To relax and gratifie my flesh with delicious meats and drinks, Synecdochically expressed by Wine here, as also Prov. 9. 2. Cant. 2. 4, &c. as necessary food is by Bread, Amos 7. 12. compared with 8. 11. k Yet resolving to use my Wisdom, either, 1. To set bounds to my pleasures. Or rather, 2. That I might try whether I could not arrive at satisfaction, by mixing wine and wisdom together, by using wine to sweeten and allay the toils of wisdom, and wisdom to prevent that destruction which many bring upon themselves by intemperate pleasures whilst they seek for satisfaction, that so I might have the comfort, without the danger and mischief of pleasures. l To pursue and addict my self to carnal pleasures, which was my folly. m Till by trying several methods, I might find out the true way to contentment and satisfaction, during this mortal life.

4. I made me great works n, I builded me houses o, I planted me vineyards p.

n Magnificent works for my honour and delight. o Of which see 1 Kings 7. 1, &c. & 9. 15, &c. p See Cant. 8. 11.

5. I made me gardens q and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kind of fruits r.

q Heb. Paradises, or Gardens of Pleasure. r Mixing pleasure and profit together.

6. I made me pools of water s, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees t.

s Because the Rain there fell but seldom. t The nurseries of young Trees newly planted in the Orchards, which for the multitude of them were like a Wood or Forrest.

† Heb. sons of my house.

7. I got me servants and maidens, and had † servants born in my house u; also I had great possessions of great and small cattle, above all that were in Jerusalem before me.

u Of my Bond-servants, which therefore were a part of my possession, See 1 King. 10. 1. Ezra 2. 55.

* 1 King. 9. 28. & 10. 10, 14, 21, &c.
† Heb. musical instruments, or a choice woman and choice women. Gr. men and women cup-bearers.

8. * I gathered me also silver and gold, and the peculiar treasure of kings x, and of the provinces y: I gat me men-singers and women-singers z, and the delights of the sons of men a, as † musical instruments, and that of all sorts.

x Either, 1. Vast Riches, answerable to the State of a King. Or, 2. The greatest Jewels and rarities of other Kings, which they gave to me either as a Tribute, or by way of Present: of which see 1 Kings 4. 21. & 9. 11. & 10. 2, 10. y Which were imposed upon or presented by all the Provinces of my Dominions. z Whose voices were more sweet than the Mens. a Either, 1. All other delightful things. Or, 2. That in which men generally delight, to wit, musical instruments, as it follows.

9. So I was great b, and increased more than all that were before me in Jerusalem; also my wisdom remained with me c.

b In Riches, and Power, and Glory. c As yet I was not wholly besotted and seduced from God by these things, as I was afterwards. I still had the use of my Reason, whereby I was capable of searching after and finding satisfaction, if it was to be had in those things.

* Chap. 3. 22. & 5. 18. & 9. 9.

10. And whatsoever mine eyes desired d, I kept not from them e, I with-held not my heart from any joy f: for my heart rejoiced in all my labour g, and * this was my portion of all my labour h.

d Whatsoever was grateful to my Senses, or my Heart desired. He ascribes desire to the Eyes, because the sight of the Eyes is the usual and powerful incentive of Desires; of which see Jos. 7. 21. Job 31. 1. Matt. 5. 28. e I denied my self nothing, at least of lawful delights, but went to the very utmost bounds of them: which was the occasion of his falling afterward into sinful pleasures. f As my Heart was vehemently set upon Pleasure, so I did not resist or curb it therein, but made all possible provisions to gratifie it. g I had the comfort of all my Labours, and was not hindred from the free and full enjoyment of them by Sickness or War, or any other calamitous occurrent. h This present and temporary enjoyment of them, was all the benefit which I could expect or receive from all my Labours. So that I made the best of them, I had an heart to use them, which many men through Covetousness have not, and I tasted the sweetness of them, which many others cannot do; and therefore if any man could arrive at happiness by this means, I had done it.

* Ch. 1. 3, 14. ‖ Or, excellency.

11. Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do i: and behold, all was * vanity k and vexation of spirit; and there was no ‖ profit l under the sun.

i I made a serious review of my former works and labours, and considered whether I had obtained that satisfaction in them which I designed and expected. k I found my self suddenly disappointed and wholly dissatisfied in this course. l The pleasure was past and gone, and I was never the better for it, but as empty as before, and had nothing left but sorrowful reflections upon it.

* Chap. 1. 13. & 7. 25. ‖ Or, in those things which have been already done.

12. And I turned my self to behold wisdom, * and madness, and folly m: for what can the man do n that cometh after the king o? ‖ even that which hath been already done p.

m Of which see Ch. 1. 17. Being frustrated of my hopes in pleasure, I returned to a second and more serious consideration of my first choice, to see whether there was not more satisfaction to be gotten from wisdom, than what I discovered at my first view. n To find out the truth in this matter, to discover the utmost satisfaction which was possibly to be found in pleasures. So this is added as a reason why he gave over the thoughts of Pleasures, and directed them to another object, and why he so confidently asserted their vanity from his own particular Experience, because he had made the best of them, and it was a vain thing for any private man to expect that from them which could not be found by a King, and such a King, who had so much Wisdom to invent, and such vast Riches to pursue and enjoy all imaginable delights, and who had made it his design and business to search this to the bottom. o That succeeds me in this enquiry. p As by others in former times, so especially by my self. They can make no new discoveries as to this point.

13. Then I saw q † that wisdom excelleth folly r, as far as light excelleth darkness s.

q Or, Yet I saw. For this is added to prevent an Objection or mistake. r Although Wisdom is not sufficient to make men truly and perfectly happy, yet it is of a far greater use and excellency than vain Pleasures, or any other follies. s i. e. Vastly and unspeakable. Light is very pleasant and comfortable, and withal of great necessity, and singular use to discover the differences of persons and things, to prevent mistakes and dangers, and to direct all a man's paths in the right way, whereas Darkness is in it self doleful, and leads men into innumerable Confusions, and Errours, and Miseries.

* Prov. 17. 24. Chap. 8. 1.

14. * The wise mans eyes are in his head t, but the fool walketh in darkness u: and x I my self perceived also, that * one event happeneth unto them all y.

* Psal. 49. 10. Chap. 9. 2, 3.

t In their proper place, and therefore they can see, which they could not do if they were out of his head. He hath the use of his Eyes and Reason, and sees his way, and orders all his affairs with discretion, and foresees, and so avoids many dangers and mischiefs. u Manageth his affairs ignorantly, rashly, and foolishly, whereby he sheweth that his Eyes are not in his head, but in his heels, or as it is expressed, Prov. 17. 24. in the ends of the earth. x Or, Yet, notwithstanding this excellency of Wisdom above folly, for our conduct in the matters of this Life, yet at last they both come to one end. y Both are subject to the same calamities, and to death it self which utterly takes away all difference between them.

† Heb. happeneth to me, even to me.

15. Then said I in my heart, As it happeneth to the fool, so it † happeneth even to me; and why was I then more wise z? Then I said in my heart, That this also is vanity.

z What benefit have I by my Wisdom? Or, To what purpose did I desire and take so much pains for Wisdom?

16. For there is no remembrance of the wise more than of the fool for ever a; seeing that which now is, in the days to come shall all be forgotten: and how dieth the wise man? as the fool b.

a Their Name and Memory, though it may flourish for a season among some men, yet it will not last for ever, but will in a little time be worn out, as we see in most of the wise men of former ages, whose very Names, together with all their Monuments, are utterly lost, as hath been oft observed and bewailed by learned Writers in several Ages. b He must die as certainly as the fool, and after death be as little remembred and honoured.

17. Therefore I hated life c, because the work that is wrought under the sun is grievous unto me d: for all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

c My Life, though accompanied with so much Honour, and Pleasure, and Wisdom, was a burden to me, and I was apt to wish either that I had never been born, or that I might speedily die. d All humane designs and works are so far from yielding me that satisfaction which I expected, that the consideration of them encreaseth my discontent.

† Heb. labour'd. * Psal. 49. 10.

18. ¶ Yea, I hated all my labour, which I had † taken under the sun e: because * I should leave it unto the man that shall be after me f.

e All these Riches, and Buildings, and other fruits of my labour, were the matter of my Repentance, and aggravations of my Misery. f Because I must, and that everlastingly, part with them, and leave them all behind me.

19. And who knoweth whether he shall be a wise man or a fool g? yet shall he have rule over all my labour wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have shewed my self wise under the sun. This is also vanity.

g Who will undo all that I have done, and turn the effects of my Wisdom into instruments of his Folly, and occasions of ruine. Some think he had such an Opinion of Rehoboam.

20. Therefore I went about to cause my heart to despair h of all the labour which I took under the sun.

h I gave my self up to despondency, and despair of ever reaping that satisfaction which I promised to my self.

† Heb. give.

21. For there is a man whose labour is in wisdom, and in knowledg, and in equity i: yet to a man that hath not laboured therein k, shall he † leave it for his portion. This also is vanity, and a great evil l.

i Who useth great Industry, and Prudence, and Justice too in the management of his affairs, and therefore might as confidently expect God's blessing, and the comfort of his labours, as any other man. k So as I have done: who hath ſpent his days in ſloth and folly. l A great diſorder in it ſelf, and a great diſgrace to this World, and a great torment to a conſidering mind.

* Chap. 1. 3. & 3. 9.

22. * For what hath man m of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart wherein he hath laboured under the ſun?

m What comfort or benefit remains to any man after this ſhort and frail Life is once ended? Or, what advantage hath he by all his labours above him who never laboured, and yet enjoyeth all the fruits of his labours.

* Job 14. 1.

23. For all his days are * ſorrows n, and his travel grief o; yea, his heart taketh not reſt in the night p. This is alſo vanity.

n Or, Though all his days were ſorrows, i.e. full of ſorrows. For this ſeems added to aggravate the evil mentioned in the foregoing verſe. Though he took great and unwearied pains all his days, yet after death he hath no more benefit by it than another man hath. o The toils of his Body are, or were, accompanied with the vexations of his Mind. p Either becauſe his mind is diſtracted, and his ſleep broken with perplexing cares and fears.

* Ch. 3. 12, 13, 22. & 5. 18. & 8. 15. || Or, delight his ſenſes.

24. * There is nothing better for a man q, than that he ſhould eat and drink, and that he || ſhould make his ſoul enjoy good r in his labour. This alſo I ſaw that it was from the hand of God s.

q Or, Is there any thing better for a man? Which implies that there is nothing better, to wit, for man's preſent comfort and ſatisfaction; this is the chief, and indeed the only conſiderable benefit of his labours. r That he ſhould thankfully take, and freely and chearfully enjoy the comforts which God gives him. s That this alſo is a ſingular gift of God, and not to be procured by a man's own Wiſdom or Diligence.

25. For who can eat t, or who elſe can haſten hereunto u more than I?

t Who can more freely and fully enjoy the Comforts of this Life than I did? This verſe is added to confirm what he ſaid in the foregoing verſe from his own Experience, which was the more conſiderable, becauſe no man ever was a more capable Judg of theſe matters, none could either have more Creature-comforts, or more addict himſelf to the enjoyment of them, or improve them to better advantage than he did, and therefore he could beſt tell what was the greateſt good to be found in them, and whether they were able of themſelves, without God's ſpecial gift, to yield a man ſatisfaction. u To wit, to the procuring and enjoying of them. Who can purſue them with more diligence, or obtain them with more ſpeed and readineſs, or embrace them with more greedineſs and alacrity?

* Job 27. 16, 17. Prov. 28. 8.

26. For God giveth to a man that is good † in his ſight x, wiſdom and knowledge y, and joy z: but to the ſinner he giveth travel, to gather and to heap up ||, that * he may give to him that is good before God †. This alſo is vanity, and vexation of ſpirit.

x VVho not only ſeems to be good to Men, as many bad Men do, but is really and ſincerely good. Or, who pleaſeth him, as this Phraſe is rendred, Eccleſ. 7. 26. and oft elſewhere. VVhereby he ſeems to intimate the Reaſon why he found no more comfort in his Labours, becauſe his ways had been very diſpleaſing to God, and therefore God juſtly denied him that gift. y To direct him how to uſe his Comforts aright, that ſo they may be bleſſings, and not ſnares and curſes to him. z A thankful and contented Mind with his portion. || He giveth him up to inſatiable deſires, and wearieſom labours, to little or no purpoſe. † That he may have no comfort in them, but leave them to others, yea to ſuch as he leaſt expected or deſired, to good and virtuous men, into whoſe hands his Eſtate falls by the wiſe and all-diſpoſing Providence of God.

CHAP. III.

1. TO every thing there is a ſeaſon a, and a time to every purpoſe b under the heaven.

a A certain time appointed by God for its being and continuance, which no humane VVit or Providence can prevent or alter. And by vertue of this Appointment or Decree of God, all the viciſſitudes and changes which happen in the world, whether comforts or calamities, do come to paſs. VVhich is here added partly to prove what he laſt ſaid, Ch. 2. 24, 26. that both the free and comfortable enjoyment of the Creatures which ſome have, and the croſſes and vexations which others have with them, are from the hand and counſel of God: partly to prove the principal Propoſition of the Book, that all things below are vain, and Happineſs is not to be found in them, becauſe of their great uncertainty, and mutability, and tranſitorineſs, and becauſe they are ſo much out of the reach and power of Men, and wholly in the diſpoſal of another, to wit, God, who doth either give or take them away, either ſweeten or imbitter them, as it pleaſeth him; and partly to bring the minds of men into a quiet and chearful dependance upon God's Providence, and ſubmiſſion to his Will, and a ſtate of preparation for all events. b Or, will or deſire, to wit, of man. To all mens deſigns, attempts and buſineſſes. Not only natural, but even the free and voluntary actions of men, are ordered and diſpoſed by God to accompliſh his own purpoſe. But it muſt be conſidered, that he doth not here ſpeak of a time allowed by God wherein all the following things may lawfully be done, which is wholly beſides his ſcope and buſineſs, but only of a time fixed by God, in which they would or ſhould be done.

2. A time † to be born, and a time to die c: a time to plant d, and a time to pluck up that which is planted:

c A certain period unknown to Man, but fixed by God, in which a man muſt unavoidably die; of which ſee Job 14. 5. Joh. 13. 1. d Wherein God inclines a man's heart to planting.

3. A time to kill e, and a time to heal f: a time to break down g, and a time to build up:

e When a man ſhall die a violent death, either by chance, as Exod. 21. 13. or by the ſentence of the Magiſtrate, or by the hands of Murderers. f When he who ſeemed to be mortally wounded ſhall be healed and reſtored. g When houſes ſhall be demoliſhed either by the fancy of the owner, or by the rage of other men, or otherwiſe.

4. A time to weep h, and a time to laugh: a time to mourn, and a time to dance:

h VVhen Men ſhall have juſt occaſion for weeping and mourning.

5. A time to caſt away ſtones i, and a time to gather ſtones together: a time to embrace k, and a time † to refrain from embracing l:

i Which were brought together in order to the building of a Wall or Houſe, but are now caſt away, either becauſe the man who gathered them hath changed his mind, and deſiſts from his project, or by other cauſes or accidents. k When perſons ſhall enter into friendſhip, and perform all friendly offices one to another. l Either through alienation of affections, or grievous calamities. See Joel 2, 16. 1 Cor. 7. 5.

6. A time || to get, and a time to loſe m: a time to keep, and a time to caſt away n:

m When Men ſhall loſe their Eſtates, either by God's Providence, or by their own choice. n When a man ſhall caſt away his Goods voluntarily, as in a ſtorm to ſave his Life, as Jonah 1. 5. Acts 27. 18, 19. or out of Love and Obedience to God, as Matt. 10. 37, 39— Heb. 10. 34.

7. A time to rent o, and a time to ſew: a time to keep ſilence p, and a time to ſpeak:

o When men ſhall rend their Garments, as they did in great and ſudden griefs, as Gen. 37. 29. Joel 2. 13. p Wherein men will or ſhall be ſilent, either through grief, as Job 2. 12, 13. or by ſickneſs or weakneſs, or becauſe God denies a man ability to utter his mind.

8. A time to love q, and a time to hate: a time of war, and a time of peace.

q When God will ſtir up the affection of Love, or give occaſion for the exerciſe or diſcovery of it to others.

9. * What profit hath he that worketh, in that wherein he laboureth r?

* Chap. 1. 3.

r Seeing then all actions and events in the world are out of man's power, and no man can at any time do or enjoy any thing at his pleaſure, but only what and when God pleaſeth, as hath been now ſhewed in many particulars, and it is as true and certain in all others, hence it follows, that all mens labours, of themſelves, and without God's help and bleſſing, are unprofitable, and utterly inſufficient to make them happy.

10. I have ſeen s the travel t which God hath given to the ſons of men u, to be exerciſed in it x.

s I have diligently obſerved and conſidered upon this occaſion. t Or, the occupation or buſineſs, mens various employments, and the differing ſucceſſes of them. u Either, 1. Which God hath impoſed upon Men as their duty: and therefore Men muſt labour, although it brings them no profit, as was now ſaid. Or, 2. Which God hath inflicted upon Mankind as a juſt puniſhment for their ſins; to which therefore Men ought quietly to ſubmit. x That hereby they might have conſtant matter of exerciſe for their diligence, and patience, and ſubmiſſion to God's Will and Providence, and for all other Graces. Or, that they might be afflicted or humbled therewith; as the ſame Phraſe is rendred by divers, Eccl. 1. 13.

11. He hath made every thing beautiful in his time y:

time y: also he hath set the world in their heart
* Chap. 8. 17. z, so that * no man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end a.

y This seems to be added as an Apology for God's Providence, notwithstanding all the contrary events and confusions which are in the world. He (i.e. God, expressed in the last clause of the verse) hath made (or doth make or do, by his Providence in the government of the world) every thing (which he doth either immediately, or by the ministry of men, or other Creatures, for God worketh in and with all his Creatures in all their actions, as is agreed by Divines and Philosophers,) beautiful (decently and conveniently, so that, all things considered, it could not have been done better,) in his time, in the time which he had appointed, or which he saw most proper and fit for it: or, in its time or season, when it was most fit to be done. Many events seem to mens shallow and perverse judgments, at least for a time, to be very irregular and unbecoming, as when wicked men prosper in their impious and unrighteous Enterprizes, and good men are sorely oppressed and afflicted, and that for righteousness sake; but when men shall come throughly to understand God's works, and the whole frame and contexture of them, and to see the end of them, they will then say, that all things were done most wisely and most seasonably; whereof we have eminent instances in Joseph, and David, and Mordecai, and the Jews of his time. z (i.e.) In the hearts of men, as the following words shew, where Man is expressed. The sense is either, 1. Although all God's works are beautiful, yet men do not discern the beauty of them, because the World is in their hearts, their minds are so busied and distracted with the thoughts, and cares, and love, and business of this World, that they have neither leisure, nor heart seriously to study God's works. But this inordinate love of the present World comes from mans own corruption, and not from God, and therefore it seems harsh to impute it to God, and improbable that Solomon would have phrased it thus, that God hath set or put the World, i.e. Worldly Lusts in mens hearts. Or, 2. As God's works are beautiful in themselves, so men are capable of discerning the beauty of them, because God hath set the World in mens hearts, he hath exposed the world, and all his dispensations in the world, unto the view of mens minds, both because he hath wrought his works so evidently and publickly, that men might easily observe them; and because he hath given men reason whereby they may discover the wisdom and beauty of all God's works, if they diligently apply themselves to the study of them. a So this is another reason why men do not discern the beauty of God's works, because they do not see the whole frame or course of them from the beginning to the end, but only some small parcels or fragments of them, the eminent works of God being oft begun in one Age, and finished in another. Or yet so that, &c. Or except that (as this Phrase properly signifies, and is elsewhere used) no man can find out, &c. Thus it is an exception to the next foregoing clause, and the sense is, It is true God hath put the world into mens hearts, or made them capable of observing all events and dispensations of God in the world, but this is to be understood with a limitation, because there are some more mysterious works of God, which no man can fully understand, because he cannot search them out through or from the beginning to the end.

12. I know b that there is no good c in them d, but for a man to rejoyce, and to do good e in his life.

b By clear reason, and my own long and certain experience. c No other satisfaction or felicity which a man can enjoy. d In Creatures or worldly enjoyments. e Either, 1. to himself, as it is fully expressed, Psal. 49. 18. Or, 2. to others, to employ them in acts of Charity and liberality towards others. Or, 3. towards God, to use them, and to live in the fear of God, which is necessary to the happiness of this as well as of the other life.

† Heb. see, Job 7. 7. Psal. 34. 12. 13. And also that every man should eat and drink f, and † enjoy the good of all his labour, it is the gift of God g.

f (i.e.) Hath power or an heart to use what God hath given him, as it is expressed, Ch. 6. 2. g Of which see the Notes on Ch. 2. 24.

14. I know that whatsoever God doth, it shall be for ever h: nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it i: and God doth it, that men should fear before him k.

h All God's counsels or decrees are eternal and unchangeable, and his Providence works effectually, so as men cannot resist or hinder it. i Men can neither do any thing besides or against God's Counsel and Providence, nor hinder any work or act of it. k Not that men should make this an occasion of despair, or idleness, or dissoluteness, as some abuse this Doctrine, but that by the consideration of his Soveraign and irresistible power in the disposal of all persons and things as pleaseth him, men should learn to trust in him, to submit to him, to fear to offend or rebel against him, and more carefully and industriously to study to please him.

15. That which hath been, is now; and that which is to be, hath already been l, and God requireth m † that which is past n.

† Heb. that which is driven away.

l Things past, present, and to come, are all of the same nature, and all ordered in the same manner by one constant counsel, and setled course in all parts and Ages of the World. There is a continual return of the same motions and influences of the Heavenly Bodies, of the same seasons of the Year; and a constant succession of new Generations of Men and Beasts, but all of the same quality. The same thing in substance was said before, Ch. 1. 9. m (i.e.) Reneweth, as this word is used, Job 3. 4. n That time and those things which are irrecoverably gone in themselves, but are as it were recalled, because others of the same kind arise and come in their stead. Heb. that which is driven away, with a mighty force, as time present is violently thrust away by that which comes after it.

16. And moreover o, I saw p under the sun the place of judgment q, that wickedness was there r; and the place of righteousness s, that iniquity was there.

o This is mentioned, either, 1. as another vanity, to wit, the vanity of Honour and Power, which is so oft an instrument of injustice and oppression. Or rather, 2. as another argument of the vanity of worldly things, or an hinderance of that comfort which men expect in this life, because they are oppressed by their Rulers. p I perceive it by information from others, and by my own observation. q In the Thrones of Princes and Tribunals of Magistrates, where Judgment should be duly executed. r Judgment was perverted, the guilty acquitted, and the innocent condemned. s In which Righteousness should be found and should dwell, if it were banished from all other places.

17. I said in my heart t, God shall judge the righteous and the wicked u: for there is * a time x there y, for every purpose, and for every work z.

* Vers. 1.

t Mine heart was sorely grieved at this disorder, but I quieted it with this consideration. u Absolving and saving the just, and condemning the wicked. x Fixed by God's unalterable Decree. He implies that as this life is the sinners time in which he doth whatsoever seemeth good in his own eyes, so God will have his time to reckon with them, and rectifie all these disorders. y In the Presence or at the Judgment-seat of God, which is easily understood out of the foregoing words, the Relative being put for the Antecedent, as it is Numb. 7. 89. Esth. 9. 25. Job 1. 21. Psal. 14. 5. & 114. 2. Or it may be rendred, then, as this Particle is used Psal. 14. 5. Hos. 2. 15. and as it is usual in other Authors for Adverbs of place to be put for Adverbs of time. z For the examining and judging not only all mens practices or open actions, but also all their secret thoughts and purposes, all the evil which they either did, or designed, or desired, or endeavoured to do. The design of this Verse is partly to strike a terrour into oppressing Potentates, and partly to satisfie the doubts, and support the spirits of good men who are oppressed in this life.

18. I said in my heart a concerning the estate of the sons of men b, ‖ that God might manifest them c, and that they might see that they themselves are beasts d.

‖ Or, that they might clear God and see, &c.

a And further I considered with my self. b Concerning their condition and deportment in this present World. c God suffers these horrible disorders among men, expressed v. 16. that he might discover men to themselves, and by permitting these actions, shew what strange Creatures they are, and what vile hearts they have, which men would not otherwise understand or believe. See 2 Kings 8. 13, 14. d Heb. that they are beasts to themselves, either, 1. one to another, devouring and destroying one another. Or, 2. in their own judgment, or themselves being Judges; that although God made them Men or reasonable Creatures, yet they have made themselves Beasts by their brutish practices, and that men, considered only with respect unto the present life, which is the only thing valued and regarded by most men, and the vanity whereof is the principal subject of this Book, are as vain and miserable Creatures as the Beasts themselves, the great differences between Men and Beasts being such as respect the other life. For men seem here to be called Beasts in both these respects, and the latter he prosecutes more largely in the following Verses.

19. * For that which befalleth the sons of men, befalleth beasts e, even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other f, yea, they have all one † breath g, so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast h: for all is vanity.

* Ps. 49. 12, 20. Chap. 2. 16. † Heb. Spirit.

e They are subject to the same diseases, pains, and casualties. f As certainly, and no less painfully. g One breath of life, which is in their nostrils, one and the same living Soul, by which the Beasts perform the same vital and animal operations. For he speaks not here of Mans rational and immortal Spirit, nor of the future Life. h In respect of the present life and sensible things, nay the Beasts have quicker senses than men, and therefore therefore enjoy more pleasure in those things, and that with less dangers and mischief than men do.

20. All go unto one place i, * all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again k.

* Gen. 3. 19.

i To the Earth, as it is expressed, v. 21. out of which they were both taken. k Which is meant only of their Bodies, as it is explained, Eccles. 12. 7.

21. Who knoweth l the spirit † of man that † goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?

l It might be objected that the condition of men and beasts are vastly differing, because Man's Spirit goeth upward to God, Chap. 12. 7. but the spirit of a beast goeth downward together with its Body, and perisheth with it. To this he answers, Who knoweth this? Which is not to be understood as if no Man did know it, or as if the thing were utterly uncertain and unknown, for he knew it, and positively affirms it, Chap. 12. 7. but that few know it; as the same manner of expression is understood. Prov. 31. 10. Who can find? Isa. 53. 1. Who hath believed, &c? Which note the scarcity or difficulty, but not the nullity or impossibility of the thing. Besides he seems here to speak not so much of a speculative, as of a practical knowledge, as such words are most commonly used. Who considers or regards this, or layeth it to heart? True it is, there is such a difference, which also is known and believed by wise and good men: but the generality of Mankind never mind it: their Hearts are wholly set upon this life, and upon present and sensible things, and they place all their hopes and happiness in them, and take no thought nor care for the things of the future and invisible world. And as to them, with whom Solomon hath to do in this matter, the argument is strong and good, being as Logicians call it, an Argument to the Man; and there is no considerable difference between sensual men and beasts, because their affections are set upon the same Objects, and both of them are partakers of the same sensual satisfaction and subject to the same sensual pains and miseries, and their hopes and felicity perish together, to wit, at death, and therefore such men are no more happy than the beasts that perish. Others understand it thus, Who knoweth this? to wit, by sence or experience; or, meerly by his own reason, or without the help of Divine revelation. But, with the leave of so many worthy Interpreters, and with submission to better Judgments, the former seems to be the truer sence.

22. * Wherefore I perceive that there is nothing better m, than that a man should rejoyce in his own works n; for that is his portion o: for who shall bring him to see what shall be after him p?

‡ Ver. 12.

m To wit, for a Man's present satisfaction, and the happiness of this life. n That he comfortably enjoy what God hath given him, and not disquiet himself with cares about future events. He seems to speak this, not in the Person of an Epicure, but as his own judgment, which also he declareth, Ch. 2. 24. & 5. 18, 19. & 8. 15. o This is the benefit of his labours: he hath no more than he useth, for what he leaveth behind him is not his, but another Man's. p When once he is dead he shall never return into this life to see into whose hands his Estate falls, and how it is either used or abused; nor is he at all concerned in those matters.

CHAP. IV.

1. SO I returned, and considered a all the * oppressions that are done under the sun b; and behold, the tears of such as were oppressed, and they had no comforter c: and on the † side of their oppressors there was power d, but they had no comforter e.

* Ch. 5. 8, &c. † Heb. hand. Ps. 140. 4.

a I considered again more seriously. b Whether by Supreme Magistrates or Judges, of which he spake, Ch. 3. 16. or by any other potent Persons. c None afforded them either pity or succour, either out of a selfish and barbarous disposition, or for fear of exposing themselves thereby to the same injuries. d Both in themselves, and because most men were ready to joyn with the strongest and safest side. So they were utterly unable to deliver themselves, and, as it follows, none else could or would do it. e Which is repeated as an argument both of the great inhumanity of men towards others in calamity, and of the extream misery of oppressed Persons.

2. * Wherefore I praised f the dead which are already dead g, more than the living which are yet alive h.

* Job 3. 17, &c. Ch. 6. 3.

f I judged them more happy or less miserable. Which he seems to deliver not only as the judgment of the flesh, or of the sense, or of men in misery, as this is commonly understood, but as his own Judgment. For this is most true and certain, that setting aside the advantage which this life gives him for the concerns of the future life, which Solomon doth not meddle with in the present debate, and considering the uncertainty, and vanity, and manifold vexations of mind, and outward calamities of the present life, a wise Man would not account it worth his while to live, and would choose death rather than life. g Those which are quite dead; who possibly are here opposed to them that in respect of their deplorable and desperate condition are even whilst they live called dead men, Isa. 26. 19. and said to die daily, 1 Cor. 15. 31. h Which languish under their pressures, of whom we can only say, as we use to speak of dying men, They are alive, and that is all.

3. * Yea, better is he than both they, which hath not yet been i, who hath not seen k the evil work that is done under the sun.

* Job 3. 11, 16, 21.

i Who was never born. How this is true, see on the foregoing Verse. k (i. e.) Not felt: for as seeing good is put for enjoying it, Ch. 2. 24. so seeing evil is put for suffering it, as hath been more than once observed.

4. ¶ Again I considered all travel, and † every right work l, that † for this a man is envied of his neighbour m. This is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

† Heb. all the rightness of work. † Heb. this is the envy of a Man from his Neighbour.

l All the worthy designs and compleat works of wise and vertuous men. m Instead of that honour and recompence which he deserves, he meets with nothing but envy and obloquy, and many evil fruits thereof.

5. * The fool foldeth his hands together n, and eateth his own flesh o.

* Pro. 6. 10. & 24. 33.

n Is careless and idle, which is the signification of this gesture, Prov. 6. 10. & 19. 24. & 26. 13. Perceiving that diligence is attended with envy, v. 4. he, like a fool, runs into the other extream. o Wasteth his substance, and bringeth himself to poverty, whereby his very flesh pineth away for want of Bread, and he is reduced to Skin and Bone, and if he have any Flesh left, he is ready to eat it through extremity of hunger.

6. * Better is an handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travel and vexation of spirit p.

* Prov. 15. 16, 17. & 16. 8.

p These are the words, either 1. of the Sluggard making this Apology for his idleness, That his little with ease, is better than great Riches got with much trouble. Or, 2. of Solomon, who elsewhere speaks to the same purpose, as Prov. 15. 16, 17. & 17. 1. and here proposeth it as a good Antidote against the vanity of immoderate cares and labours for worldly goods, against which he industriously directs his speeches in divers places of this Book, and particularly as a seasonable precaution against the sin of covetousness, of which he speaks in the following passage.

7. ¶ Then I returned, and I saw * vanity under the sun.

* Ps. 39. 6.

8. There is one alone q, and there is not a second; yea, he hath neither child nor brother r: yet is there no end of all his labour s, neither is his eye t satisfied with riches, * neither saith he u, For whom do I labour x, and bereave my soul of good y? This is also vanity, yea, it is a sore travel z.

q Either 1. who lives by himself, as grudging that any other should partake of his Provisions. Or rather 2. who hath none but himself to care and labour for, as the next words explain it. r To whom he may leave his vast Estate. s He lives in perpetual restlesness and excessive toils. t (i. e.) His covetous mind or desire fitly expressed by the Eye, partly because that is the incentive of this sin, Jos. 7. 21. and partly because he hath no good by his Riches, saving the beholding of them with his Eyes, as it is affirmed, Eccles. 5. 11. Comp. 2. 10. 1 Joh. 2. 16. u Within himself: he considers nothing but how he may get more and more. x Having no Posterity nor Kindred to enjoy it, as was now said. Shall I take all this pains for a Stranger, possibly for an Enemy, who will reap the fruit of all my labours? y Deny my self those comforts and conveniences which God hath allowed unto me? z A dreadful judgment and misery as well as a great sin.

9. Two are better than one, because they have a good reward for their labour b.

a Who live together in any kind of Society, and joyn their powers together in any Enterprizes. Which he opposeth to that humour of the covetous Man who desired to live alone, as was now said. b Both have great benefit by such combinations and conjunctions of their counsels and abilities, whereby they do exceedingly support, and encourage, and strengthen one another, and effect many things which neither of them alone could do.

10. For if they c fall d, the one will lift up e his fellow: but wo to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up.

c One of them, the plural being put for the singular, as Jonah 1. 5. Mat. 21. 7. 1 Tim. 2. 15. Or, both of them successively. d In any kind, into any mistakes and errors, or sins, or dangers and distresses. e Hold him up if he be falling, or raise him up if he be fallen.

11. Again, if two lie together, then they have heat f, but how can one be warm alone g?

f They will be sooner warm in a cold Bed, and cold Season. g Not so soon nor so throughly.

12. And if one prevail against him h, two shall withstand him; and a threfold cord is not quickly broken i.

h Against either of them. i If a man have not only one, but two or more Friends, he is so much the safer and the happier.

† Heb. who knoweth not to be admonished.

13. ¶ Better k is a poor and a wise child l, than an old and foolish king m, † who will no more be admonished n.

k More happy. Now he proceeds to another vanity, even that of Honour, and Power, and of the highest places. l Who is doubly contemptible, both for his Age, and for his Poverty. m Venerable both for his Age and Gravity, and for his Royal Dignity. So that the comparison is made with the greatest disadvantage that may be. n Who hath neither Wisdom to govern himself, nor to receive the counsels or admonitions of wiser men, but is foolish and wilful and incorrigible.

14. For out of prison o he p cometh to reign q, whereas also he that is born in his kingdom r becometh poor s.

o Into which he was cast for his Poverty and Debt. p The poor and wise Child. q Is oft-times advanced by his wisdom to the highest Power and Dignity: which was the case of Joseph, and Mordecai, and many others. r That old King who was born of the Royal Race, and had possessed his Kingdom for a long time. s Is deprived of his Kingdom, either by the rebellion of his Subjects provoked by his folly, or by the power of some other and wiser Prince.

15. I considered all the living t which walk under the sun u, with the second child x that shall stand up y in his stead.

t The general disposition or humour of common People in all Kingdoms, that they are fickle and unconstant, weary of their old Governours, and desirous of changes. u This is a Periphrasis or Description of living and mortal men, like that, Eccles. 7. 11. that see the Sun. x These words may be joined, either, 1. with those, which walk, or, that they walk under the Sun (i.e. upon the Earth) with the second Child, i.e. follow, and favour, and worship him as the rising Sun, upon whom the eyes and hopes of most People are fixed. Or, 2. with the first words, I considered all the living which walk under the Sun, i.e. the temper of all Subjects or People, together with the condition of the second Child. Which may be understood, either, 1. in general, of a King's Child, or Son and Heir, who is called Second, in respect of his Father, whose Successor he is to be. Or, 2. that wise and poor Child mentioned, v. 13. who is said to come to Reign, v. 14. and may well be called the Second to the old and foolish King who became poor, v. 15. being deposed from his Kingdom, whom he succeeds, being put in his place either by the humour of the People, or by some higher Power. y i.e. Arise to Reign, as that Phrase signifies, Dan. 8. 22, 23. & 11. 2, 3, 7, 20, 21.

16. There is no end of all the people z, even of all that have been before them ‖; they also that come after shall not * rejoyce in him †: Surely, this also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

‡ Chap. 2. 16.

z The sense is either, 1. The People which have this humour are without end, or innumerable, as this Phrase signifies, Job 22. 5. Isa. 2. 7. & 9. 6. Or, 2. This humour of the common People hath no end, but passeth from one Generation to another, they ever were, and are, and will be unstable and restless, and given to change: Which sense the following words seem to favour. ‖ Either, 1. before the two Kings above-mentioned, the Father and the Son, or the Predecessor and Successor. All those who stood or desired to stand in their presence, and waited upon them, as this Phrase is used, 2 Sam. 16. 19. 1 Kings 10. 8. Or rather, 2. before the present Generation of Subjects who earnestly desired and promoted the change of Government here expressed: for these are evidently opposed to them that come after, which all Interpreters understand of the People, not of the Kings. And so here are three Generations of People noted, the Authors of the present change, and their Parents, and their Children, and all are observed to have the same inclinations in these matters, † They shall be as weary of the Successor, though a wise and worthy Prince, as their Parents were of his foolish Predecessor. The reason whereof is partly from that itch of novelty and curiosity which is natural and common to Mankind, and partly from their vain and foolish hopes of advantage from such changes.

CHAP. V.

The Seven first Verses of this Chapter are inserted partly as the onely effectual remedy against all the foregoing vanities, and partly as a caution to take heed of bringing vanity into the Service of God, or of worshipping God vainly and foolishly.

‖ Or, that fools to give Sacrifice. * 1 Sam. 15. 22. Psal. 50. 8. Prov. 15. 8. & 21. 27.

1. KEep thy foot a when thou goest to the house of God b, and be more ready c to hear d, ‖ * than to give the sacrifice of fools e: for they consider not that they do evil f.

a The feet of thy Soul, which are the Thoughts and Affections, by which men go to God and walk or converse with him. Make straight steps: See that your Hearts be purged from sin, and prepared and furnished with all Graces or necessary qualifications, as good intention, reverence, humility, &c. It is a Metaphor from one that walketh in a very slippery Path, in which there needs more than ordinary care to keep him from falling. b The place of God's solemn and publick worship, whether the Temple or Synagogue. c Heb. more near, more forward and inclinable. Prefer this duty before the following. d To hearken to and obey God's Word, there Read, and Preached by the Priests or Prophets; for hearing is very frequently put in Scripture for obeying. e Such as foolish and wicked men use to offer, who vainly think to please God with the multitude and costliness of their Sacrifices without true Piety or Obedience. f They are not sensible of the great sinfulness of such Thoughts and Practices, but, like Fools, think they do God good service, which is implied, as is usual in such expressions.

‖ Or, Words

2. Be not rash with thy mouth g, and let not thine heart be hasty h to utter any ‖ thing before God i: for God is in heaven k, and thou upon earth l: therefore let thy words m * be few. * Prov. 10. 19.

g Speak not without good understanding and due consideration. h Do not give way to every sudden motion of thine Heart, nor suffer it to break out of thy Lips till thou hast well weighed it. i Either, 1. in Prayers directed to him. Or, 2. in solemn Vows and Promises made in God's presence; which were very much in use in those times, and of which he speaks in the following Verses, where he presseth us to pay our Vows when we have made them, as here he seems to caution us in making them. k Is a God of infinite Majesty, not to be despised or abused; of infinite Holiness, not to be polluted or offended; of infinite Knowledge, observing all our words and carriages, not to be deceived. l Thou art a poor Earth-worm, infinitely below him, and therefore shouldst stand in awe of him and fear to offend him. m Either, 1. in Prayer. Use not vain repetitions, nor multitude of words in Prayer, as if they were necessary to inform God of thy state, or to prevail with God to grant thy requests, or as if thou shouldst certainly be heard upon that very account, as Christ also cautions us, Matt. 6. 7. For otherwise it is not unlawful, nay sometimes it is a duty, to use long Prayers, and consequently many words, and to repeat the same words in Prayer, as is manifest from Nehem. 9. 3. Dan. 9. 18, 19. Matt. 26. 44. Luke 6. 12. and many other places. Or, 2. in vowing. Be not too prodigal in making more Vows and Promises than thou art either able or willing and resolved to perform, remembring that God looks down from Heaven, and heareth all thy Vows, and expects a punctual accomplishment of them. Compare the Notes on v. 3.

3. For a dream cometh through the multitude of business n, and a * fools voice is known o by multitude of words p. * Prov. 10. 19.

n When mens Minds are distracted and oppressed with too much business in the Day, they dream of it in the Night. o It discovers the Man to be a foolish and rash, and inconsiderate Man. p Either, 1. in Prayer. Or, 2. in Vowing, i.e. by making many rash Vows, of which he speaks in v. 4, 5, 6. and then returns to the mention of multitude of dreams and many words, v. 7. which Verse may be a Comment upon this, and which makes it probable that both that and this Verse are to be understood of Vows rather than of Prayers.

4. * When thou vowest a vow q unto God, defer not to pay it r: for he hath no pleasure in fools s; * pay that which thou hast vowed. * Deut. 23. 21, 22. Psal. 50. 14. * Psal. 66. 13, 14.

q Which is a solemn Promise whereby a Man binds himself to do something which is in his power to do. r Perform it whilst the sense of thine Obligation is fresh and strong upon thee, lest either thou seem to repent of thy Promises, or lest delays end in denials and resolutions of Non-performance. See Numb. 30. 2. Deut. 23. 21. Psal. 66. 13, 14. & 76. 11. s In hypocritical and perfidious Persons who, when they are in distress, make liberal Vows, and when the danger is past, neglect and break them: whom he calls fools, partly because it is the highest folly to despise and provoke, to think to mock and deceive, the All-seeing and Almighty God, and partly in opposition to the contrary Opinion of such Persons, who think they deal wisely and cunningly ningly in serving themselves of God, by getting the advantage or deliverance which they desire by making such Vows, and yet avoiding the inconvenience and charge of payment, when once the work is done; whereas nothing is more impious or ridiculous than such an imagination.

5. Better is it that thou shouldst not vow s, than that thou should vow and not pay.

s For this was no sin; because men are free to make such Vows, or not to make them, as they think fit. See Numb. 30. 3, &c. Deut. 23. 22. Acts 5. 4. But having vowed we cannot forbear payment of them without sin.

6. Suffer not thy mouth t to cause thy flesh u to sin, neither say thou before the angel x, that it was an errour y: wherefore should God be angry z at thy voice a, and destroy the work of thine hands b?

t By uttering any rash or foolish Vow. u (i.e.) Thy self, the word Flesh being oft put for the whole Man, as Gen. 6. 12. Isa. 40. 5. Rom. 3. 20, &c. And it seems to have some Emphasis here, and to intimate, either, 1. that such Vows were made upon fleshly or carnal, and not upon spiritual and religious Motives. Or rather, 2. that the Flesh or corrupt Nature of Man, which is oft called Flesh, was exceeding prone to set it self at ease and liberty from such bonds, and to neglect the chargeable Duties of Religion. x Either, 1. the blessed Angels, the Singular Number being put for the Plural, who are present in the publick Assemblies, in which these Vows were generally paid, Psal. 66. 13. where they observe both the matter and manner of mens religious performances, as appears from 1 Cor. 11. 10. who as they rejoyce in the conversion of a sinner, Luke 15. 10. So are displeased with the sins of men, and especially such as are committed in or against the Worship of God. y Or, 2. Christ, who in the Old Testament is frequently called an Angel, as hath been oft noted before, and the Angel of the Covenant, Mal. 3. 1. because even then he acted as God's Messenger, appearing and speaking to the Patriarchs and Prophets in his Father's Name, as a presignification of his future Incarnation, and who is, and was in a special manner present in all religious Assemblies, and being Omniscient and Omnipresent, exactly knew and observed all the Vows which men made, and whether they did perform or violate them. Or rather, 3. the Priest or Minister of Holy things, who was to require of the people the payment of their Vows, to whom all Sacrifices for sins of ignorance or errours about Vows or other things were to be brought, Lev. 5. 4, 5. For such persons are oft called Angels, or, as this Hebrew word is commonly rendred, Messengers, as Job 33. 23. Mal. 2. 7. Revel. 1. 20. And this Title seems to be given to the Priest here, not without some Emphasis, because the Vow made to God was paid to the Priest as one standing and acting in God's Name and stead, and it belonged to the Priest, as God's Angel or Ambassadour, to discharge persons from their Vows when there was just occasion so to do. I did foolishly and unadvisedly in making such a Vow, and therefore I hope God will excuse me, and instead of that which I had vowed, accept of a Sacrifice for my ignorance, according to his Law for sins of ignorance, Levit. 4. 2. & 5. 15. Numb. 15. 26. z Why wilt thou provoke God to anger? a Either, 1. at the Vows which thou hast hastily uttered with thy mouth, as he said above. Or rather, 2. at these frivolous excuses, wherewith thou deludest thy own Conscience, and vainly imaginest that thou canst deceive God himself. b Blast all thy contrivances, and labours, and Estate gotten by thy labours, and particularly that work or enterprise for the success wherebf thou didst make these Vows, which being, as thou thinkest, finished, thou refusest to pay thy Vows; but know that God can quickly undo that which thou hast done, and plentifully repay thine indignities and injuries offered to him into thine own bosom.

7. For in the multitude of dreams and many words, there are also divers vanities c: but fear thou God d.

c There is a great deal of vanity and folly, as in multitude of dreams which for the most part are vain and insignificant, so also in many words, i. e. in making many Vows whereby a man is exposed to many snares and temptations. d Fear the offence and wrath of God, and therefore be sparing in making Vows, and just in performing them. Whereby he implies that this rashness in vowing, and slackness in performing Vows proceeds from the want of a just reverence and dread of the Divine Majesty, who is immediately concerned in these matters.

8. ¶ If thou seest the oppression of the poor e, and violent perverting of judgment and justice in a province, marvel not f † at the matter: for he that is higher than the highest g regardeth h, and there be higher than they i.

† Heb. at the will, or, purpose.

e Here is an account of another vanity, and a soveraign Antidote against it. f As if it were inconsistent with God's Wisdom, and Justice, and Truth, to suffer such disorders, or a just cause for any man to throw off that fear and service of God, which I have now commended to thee. g The most High God who is infinitely above the greatest of men, and therefore, if he saw meet, could crush them in an instant. h Not like an idle spectator, but like a Judge, who diligently observes and records all these miscarriages, and will so effectually punish them, that neither they shall have any cause of triumph in their former successes, nor good men to be grieved at the remembrance of them. i Either, 1. the high and holy Angels, who are employed by God in the Government of Kings and Kingdoms, as we read in the Book of Daniel, and elsewhere, and for the defence of God's people, Psal. 34. 7. & 91. 11. Heb. 1. 14. Or, 2. God: and so it is an Emphatical repetition of the same thing, which is frequent in Scripture, there is an higher than they. Or, as the words are by others fitly rendred, the most High (for Plural words are oft understood of God singularly) is above them, and therefore can controul them, and will certainly call them to an account.

9. ¶ Moreover, the profit of the earth k is for all l: the king himself is served by the field m.

k The fruits procured from the Earth by the skill and labour of the Husbandman. l Are necessary and beneficial to all men whatsoever. The Wise-man, after some interruption, returns to his former subject, to discourse of the vanity of great Riches, one argument or evidence whereof he seems to mention in this Verse, to wit, that the poor Labourer enjoyeth the fruits of the Earth as well as the greatest Monarch, and that the richest man in the World depends as much upon them as the poorest. m Is supported by the fruits of the field. Or, as many others render it, serves, or is a servant to the field, depends upon it, is obliged to see that his fields be tilled and dressed, that he may have subsistence for himself, and for his Servants and Subjects.

10. He that loveth silver, shall not be satisfied with silver n; nor he that loveth abundance o, with increase: this is also vanity.

n The greatest treasures of silver do not satisfie the covetous possessor of it, partly because his mind is insatiable, and his desires are increased by and with gains; partly because silver of it self cannot satisfie his natural desires and necessities as the fruits of the field can do, and the miserable Wretch grudgeth to part with his silver, though it be to purchase things needful and convenient for him. o Or, that loveth it (to wit, silver) in abundance, that desires and lays up great treasures.

11. When goods increase, they are increased that eat them p: and what good is there to the owners thereof q, saving the beholding of them with their eyes r.

p They require and are more commonly attended with a numerous company of Servants, and Friends, and Retinues to consume them; which is a great torment to a covetous man, of whom he here speaks. q What benefit hath he above others who feed upon his provisions, and enjoy the same comforts which he doth without his fears, and cares, and troubles about them? r Either, 1. with a reflection upon his propriety in them. Or, 2. with unlimited freedom. He can go and look upon his Bags or Chests of Silver as long and as oft as he pleaseth, whereas other men are seldom admitted to that prospect, and see only some few of the fruits or purchaces of it.

12. The sleep of a labouring man is sweet s, whether he eat little t, or much u: but the † abundance x of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.

† Heb. saturity, or, fulness.

s Because he is free from those cares and fears, wherewith the minds of rich men are oft distracted, and their sleep disturbed. t Then his weariness disposeth him to sleep. u In which case his healthful constitution and laborious course of life prevents those crudities and indigestions which oft-times break the sleep of rich men. x Heb. the fulness either, 1. of his diet, which commonly discomposeth their stomachs, and hinders their rest. Or, 2. of Wealth; which is commonly attended with many perplexing cares which disquiet men both by day and by night. The Hebrew word is used in Scripture both ways, and possibly it is thus generally expressed to include both significations.

13. There is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt y.

y Because they frequently are the instruments and occasions both of their present and eternal destruction, as they feed their pride or luxury, or other hurtful lusts which waste the body, and shorten the life, and damn the Soul; and as they are great temptations to Tyrants or Thieves, yea sometimes to Relations or Servants, or others, to take away their lives that they may get their Riches.

14. But z those riches perish a by evil travel b, and he begetteth a son, and there is nothing in his hand c.

z Or, For: or, Or: or, Moreover: For this Particle is so rendred by divers others both here and in other places of Scripture.

pture. a If they be kept, it is to the owners hurt; and if not, they are loſt to his grief. b By ſome wicked practices, either his own, or of other men; or by ſome ſecret hand of God curſing all his Enterprizes. c Either, 1. In the Fathers power to leave to his Son, for whoſe ſake he underwent all thoſe hard labours; which is a great aggravation of his grief and miſery. Or, 2. in the Sons poſſeſſion after his Fathers death.

‖ Job 1. 21. Pſ. 49. 17. 1 Tim. 6. 7.

15. * As he came forth of his mothers womb, naked ſhall he return to go d as he came, and ſhall take nothing of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand e.

d Into the womb or belly of the Earth, the common Mother of all Mankind. See the Notes on Job 1. 21. Eccleſ. 12. 7. And, return to go, is put for return and go; and going is here put for dying, as Job 16. 22. Pſal. 39. 13. e This is another vanity. If his Eſtate be neither loſt, nor kept to his hurt, but enjoyed by him with ſafety and comfort all his days, yet when he dies he muſt leave it behind him, and cannot carry one handful of it with him into another World.

16. And this alſo f is a ſore evil, that in all points as he came, ſo ſhall he go: and * what profit hath he that hath laboured for the wind g?

‖ Ch. 1. 3.

f Which I have laſt mentioned and ſhall now repeat. g For Riches, which are empty and unſatisfying, uncertain and tranſitory, fleeing away ſwiftly and ſtrongly, Prov. 23. 5. which no Man can hold or ſtay in its courſe, all which are the properties of the Wind. Compare Prov. 11. 29. Hoſ. 12. 1.

17. All his days h alſo he eateth in darkneſs i, and he hath much ſorrow, and wrath with his ſickneſs k.

h To wit, of his life. i He hath no comfort in his Eſtate, but even when he eats, when other men relax their minds, and uſe freedom and chearfulneſs, he doth it with anxiety and diſcontent, as grudging even at his own neceſſary expences, and tormenting himſelf with cares about getting, and diſpoſing, and keeping his Eſtate. k When he falls ſick, and preſageth or feareth his death, he is filled with rage, becauſe he is cut off before he hath accompliſhed his deſigns, and becauſe he muſt leave that Wealth and World in which all his hopes and happineſs lies, and muſt go to give up a doleful account to his Judge of all his actions and acquiſitions.

‖ Ch. 2. 24. ‡ 3. 12, 13, 22. ‡ 9. 7. ‡ 11. 9. 1 Tim. 6. 17. †Heb. there is a good which is comely, &c. †Heb. the number of the days.

18. ¶ Behold that which I have ſeen l: * † it is good and comely m for one to eat and to drink, and to enjoy the good of all his labour that he taketh under the ſun, † all the days of his life, which God giveth him: * for it is his portion n.

l (i.e.) Learned by ſtudy and experience. m Good or comfortable to Man's ſelf, and Comely or Amiable in the Eyes of other men, as penuriouſneſs is baſe and diſhonourable. n To wit, of worldly goods: for he hath another and a better portion in Heaven. This liberty is given to him by God, and this is the beſt advantage, as to this life, which he can make of them.

‖ Ch. 2. 10. ‡ 3. 22. ‖ Ch. 6. 2.

19. * Every man alſo to whom God hath given riches and wealth, and hath given him power o to eat thereof, and to take his portion p, and to rejoice in his labour, this is the gift of God.

o Heb. hath given him the dominion; who is the Lord and Maſter of his Eſtate, not a Slave to it. Of this and the former Verſe ſee the Notes on Eccleſ. 2. 24. & 3. 12, 13. p To his own uſe, to uſe what God hath given him.

‖ Or, though he give not much, yet he remembreth, &c.

20. ‖ For he ſhall not much remember q the days r of his life: becauſe God anſwereth him s in the joy of his heart t.

q So as to diſquiet or vex himſelf therewith. r Either 1. the troubles; days being here put for evil or ſad days, by an uſual Synecdoche, as Job 18. 20. Pſal. 137. 7. Obad. v. 12. Mic. 7. 4. Or, 2. the time in general; which is irkſom and tedious to men oppreſſed with diſcontent or miſery, who uſually reckon every Hour or Minute that paſſeth, and have their Minds and Thoughts conſtantly fixed upon the vanity and uncertainty of this life, upon the afflictions which they have already endured and may further expect; whereas to men of contented and chearful minds, the time is ſhort and ſweet, and paſſeth over them before they are aware of it, and they enjoy their preſent comforts without perplexing themſelves about former or future events. s Anſwereth, either 1. his labours with ſucceſs, as Mony is ſaid to anſwer all things, Eccleſ. 10. 19. becauſe it is equivalent to all, and able to purchaſe all things. Or, 2. his deſires. t In giving him that ſolid joy and comfort of his labours which his Heart expected and deſired.

CHAP VI.

1. THere is an evil which I have ſeen under the ſun, and it is common among men:

2. A man to whom God hath given riches, wealth a, and honour *, ſo that he wanteth nothing for his ſoul of all that he deſireth b, yet God giveth him not power to eat c thereof d, but a ſtranger eateth it: this is vanity, and it is an evil diſeaſe.

* Job 21. 10. Pſ. 17. 14. & 73. 7.

a All ſorts of Riches, as Gold and Silver, Cattle and Lands, &c. b Which he doth, or can reaſonably deſire. c Either becauſe they are ſuddenly taken away from him by the Hand and Curſe of God, and given to others: or becauſe God gives him up to a baſe and covetous mind, which is both a ſin and a plague. d (i. e.) Any conſiderable part of it, whereas the Stranger eateth not thereof, but it; (i. e.) all of it, devoureth it all in an inſtant.

3. ¶ If a man beget an hundred Children e, and live many years f, ſo that the days g of his years be many, and his ſoul be not filled with good h, and * alſo that he have no burial i, I ſay, that an * untimely birth k is better than he.

* Iſa. 14. 19, 20. Jer. 22. 19. * Job 3. 16. Pſ. 58. 8.

e (i. e.) Very many Children, to whom he intends to leave his Eſtate. f Which is the chief thing that he deſires, and which giveth him opportunity of increaſing his Eſtate vaſtly. g He ſaith days, becauſe the Years of mens life are but few. h Hath not a contented mind and comfortable enjoyment of his Eſtate whilſt he lives. i And if after his death he hath either none, or a mean and diſhonourable Burial, becauſe his ſordid and covetous carriage made him hateful and contemptible to all Perſons, his Children and Heirs not excepted, and he was by all ſorts of men thought unworthy of any teſtimonies of Honour, either in his Life or after his Death. Thus he deſcribes a man who lives miſerably, and dies ignominiouſly. k Which as it never enjoyed the comforts, ſo it never felt the calamities of this life, which are far more conſiderable than its comforts, at leaſt to a man that denied himſelf the comforts, and plunged himſelf into the toils and vexations of this life.

4. For l he m cometh in n with vanity o, and departeth in darkneſs p, and his name ſhall be covered with darkneſs q.

l Or rather, Although, as this Particle is frequently rendred. For this Verſe ſeems to contain not ſo much a reaſon of what he laſt ſaid, that an untimely Birth is better than he, as an anſwer to an exception which might be made againſt it, Although all that is here ſaid be true of the Abortive, yet it is better than he. m Either 1. the covetous man. Or rather 2. the Abortive; of whom alone, and not of the former, that paſſage is true, He hath not ſeen the Sun, v. 5. n Into the World, this word being oft put for a man's being Born, as Job 1. 21. Eccleſ. 5. 15. o Or, in vain, to no purpoſe; without any comfort or benefit by it, which alſo is in a great meaſure the caſe of the covetous wretch. p Dieth obſcurely without any obſervation or regard of men. q Shall be ſpeedily and utterly forgotten, whereas the Name of ſuch wicked men ſhall rot and be remembred to their ſhame.

5. Moreover, he hath not ſeen the ſun r, nor known any thing s: this hath more reſt t than the other.

r He never beheld the light, and therefore it is not grievous to him to want it, whereas the covetous man ſaw that light was very pleaſant, and therefore the loſs of it was irkſom to him. s Hath had no knowledge, ſence or experience of any thing, whether good or evil. t Becauſe he is perfectly free from all thoſe incumbrances and vexations to which the covetous Man is long expoſed.

6. ¶ Yea, though he live a thouſand years twice told u, yet hath he ſeen no good x: do not all y go to one place z?

u Wherein he ſeems to have a priviledge above an untimely Birth. x He hath enjoyed little or no comfort in it, and therefore long life is rather a curſe and miſchief, than a bleſſing or advantage to him. y Whether Born out of and before their time, or in due time, whether their lives be long or ſhort. z To the Grave. And ſo after a little time all are alike as to this life, of which he here ſpeaks, and as to the other life his condition is infinitely worſe than that of an untimely birth.

7. * All the labour of man is for his mouth a, and yet the † appetite is not filled b.

* Pro. 16. 26. † Heb. Soul.

a For meat to put into his mouth; that he may get food; and as Bread is oft put for all food, ſo food is put for all neceſſary proviſions for this life, as Prov. 30. 8. and elſewhere, whereof this is the chief, for which a man will ſell his Houſe and Lands, yea the very Garments upon his back. b Although all that a man can get by his labours is but neceſſary food which the meaneſt ſort of men commonly enjoy, as is obſerved in the next Verſe, yet ſuch is the vanity of this World and the folly of Mankind, that men are inſatiable in their deſires, and reſtleſs in their indeavours, after more and more, and never ſay, they have enough.

8. For what hath the wiſe more than the fool c? what hath the poor, that knoweth to walk before the living d?

c To wit, in theſe matters. Both are equally ſubject to the ſame calamities, and partakers of the ſame comforts of this Life. d To wit, before the poor that doth not know this? Which words are eaſily underſtood by comparing this clauſe with the former. And ſuch defects are uſual both in Scripture and other Authors, as hath been formerly noted, by a Figure which the Learned call Anantapodoton. And by this phraſe, that knoweth, &c. he means ſuch a poor man who is ingenious and induſtrious, who is fit for ſervice and buſineſs, and knows how to carry himſelf towards rich men, ſo as to deſerve and gain their favour, and to procure a livelihood.

9. ¶ Better is the ſight of the eyes e † than the wandring of the deſire f: This g is alſo vanity, and vexation of ſpirit h.

e (i. e.) The comfortable enjoyment of what a man hath: for ſeeing is oft put for enjoying, as Pſal. 34. 12. Eccleſ. 2. 1. & 3. 13, &c. f Reſtleſs and inſatiable Deſires of what a man hath not, wherewith covetous rich men are perpetually haunted and tormented. g This wandring of the deſire wherein moſt men indulge themſelves. h Is not the way to ſatisfaction, as they imagine, but to vexation.

10. That which hath been is named already h, and it is known that it is man i: neither may he contend with him that is mightier than he k.

h This verſe is added either as a proof of what he laſt ſaid concerning the vanity and wandring of unſatiable deſires; or as a further inſtance of the vanity of all things in this Life. That which hath been (or is, for the Hebrew verb may be rendred either way, to wit, man, conſidered with all his endowments and enjoyments, whether he be wiſe or fooliſh, rich or poor, man, who is the chief of all viſible and ſublunary Beings, for whom they were all made) is named already, to wit, by God, who preſently after his Creation, gave him the following name, to ſignifie what his nature and condition was or would be. Heb. What is that which hath been, or is, it is or hath been named already. Others underſtand it thus, All the ſeveral conditions which men have had or ſhall have in the World, Riches or Poverty, &c. are already named, (i. e.) appointed or determined by God's unchangeable Counſel, and invincible Providence: But though this be true, it ſeems not to ſuit ſo well with the following clauſe, as the other Interpretation doth. i This is certain and manifeſt, that that being, which makes all this noiſe and ſtir in the World, howſoever magnified by themſelves, and ſometimes adored by Flatterers, and howſoever differenced from, or advanced above others, by Wiſdom, or Riches, or the like, is but a Man, (i. e.) a mean, earthly mortal and miſerable Creature, as his very name ſignifies, which God gave him for this very end, that he might be always ſenſible of his vain, and baſe, and miſerable eſtate in this world, and therefore never expect ſatisfaction or happineſs in it. k (i. e.) With Almighty God, with whom men are very apt to contend upon every ſlight occaſion, and againſt whom they are ready to murmur for this Vanity, and Mortality, and Miſery of Mankind, although they brought it upon themſelves by their own ſins. So this is ſeaſonably added to prevent the abuſe of the foregoing paſſage.

11. ¶ Seeing there be many things that increaſe vanity l, what is man the better m?

l This ſeems to be added as a Concluſion of the Diſputation managed in all the foregoing Chapters, ſeeing not only Man is a vain Creature in himſelf, as hath been now ſaid, but there are alſo many other things in the world, which inſtead of removing or diminiſhing, as might be expected, do but increaſe this vanity, as Wiſdom, Pleaſure, Power, Wealth, and the like, the vanity of all which hath been fully and particularly declared. Seeing even the good things of this Life bring ſo much Toil, and Cares, and Fears, &c. with them. m To wit, by all that he can either deſire or enjoy here. Hence it is evident, that all theſe things cannot make him happy, but that he muſt ſeek for happineſs elſewhere.

12. For who knoweth what is good for man n in this life, † all the days of his vain life o which he ſpendeth as * a ſhadow p? for who can tell a man what ſhall be after him under the ſun q?

* Pſ. 102. 11. & 109. 23. & 144. 4. Ch. 8. 13. Jam. 4. 14.

n No man certainly knows what is beſt for him here, whether to be high or low, rich or poor, becauſe thoſe great things which men generally deſire and purſue, are very frequently the occaſions of mens utter ruine, as hath been noted again and again in this Book. o Life it ſelf, which is the foundation of all mens Comforts and Enjoyments here, is a vain and uncertain, and tranſitory thing, and therefore all things which depend upon it muſt needs be ſo too. p Which, whileſt it abides, hath nothing real, and ſolid, or ſubſtantial in it, and doth ſpeedily paſs away, and leaves no ſign behind it. q And as no man can be happy with theſe things whileſt he liveth and enjoyeth them, ſo he can have no content in leaving them to others, becauſe he knoweth not either who ſhall poſſeſs them, or how the future owners will uſe or abuſe them, or what miſchief they may do by them either to others, or even to themſelves.

CHAP. VII.

Having largely diſcourſed of the vanity of all worldly things, and having now ſaid in the foregoing verſe, that no man knew what was beſt for him, he now proceeds to preſcribe ſome Remedies againſt theſe Vanities, and to direct men to the right method of obtaining that felicity which is not to be expected or found in this World.

1. A * Good name a is better than precious Ointment b: and the day of death c, than the day of ones birth.

* Prov. 15. 30. & 22. 1.

a A good and well-grounded report from wiſe and worthy perſons. b Heb. A name, which is put for a good name by a Synecdoche, that only being worthy to be called a name, becauſe evil and worthleſs men quickly loſe their Name and Memory. Thus a Wife is put for a good Wife, Prov. 18. 22. and a day for a good day, Luk. 19. 41, 44. b Which was very fragrant, and acceptable, and uſeful, and of great price, eſpecially in thoſe Countries. See Deut. 33. 24. Pſal. 92. 10. & 133. 2. Iſa. 39. 2. c To wit, of a good man, or one who hath left a good Name behind him, which is eaſily underſtood both from the former clauſe, and from the nature of the thing; for to a wicked man this day is far worſe, and moſt terrible. Yet if this paſſage be delivered with reſpect only to this Life, and abſtracting from the future Life, as many other paſſages in this Book are to be underſtood, then this may be true in general of all men, and is the conſequent of all the former diſcourſe. Seeing this Life is ſo full of Vanity, and Vexation, and Miſery, it is a more deſirable thing for a man to go out of it, than to come into it. Which is the more conſiderable note, becauſe it is contrary to the Opinion and Practice of almoſt all Mankind, to celebrate their own or Childrens Birth-days with ſolemn Feaſts and rejoycings, and their deaths with all expreſſions of ſorrow.

2. ¶ It is better to go to the houſe of mourning d, than to go to the houſe of feaſting: for that e is the end of all men f, and the living will lay it to his heart g.

d Where Mourners meet together to celebrate the Funerals of a deceaſed Friend. e To wit, death, the cauſe of that mourning. f It brings men to the ſerious conſideration of their laſt end, which is their greateſt Wiſdom and Intereſt. g Will be ſeriouſly affected with it, and awakened to prepare for it; whereas feaſting is commonly attended with Mirth, and Levity, and manifold Temptations, and indiſpoſeth mens minds to Spiritual and Heavenly Thoughts. Hence it is evident that thoſe paſſages of this Book which may ſeem to favour a ſenſual and voluptuous Life, are not ſpoken by Solomon in his own Name, or as his Opinion, but in the perſon of an Epicure.

3. ‖ Sorrow h is better than laughter: for by the ſadneſs of the countenance i the heart is made better k.

‖ Or, Anger.

h Either for ſin, or any outward troubles. i Which is ſeated in the heart, but manifeſted in the Countenance. k More weaned from the Luſts and Vanities of this World, by which moſt men are enſnared and deſtroyed, and more quickned to ſeek after and embrace that true and everlaſting Happineſs which God offers to them in his Word.

4. The heart of the wiſe is in the houſe of mourning l; but the heart of fools is in the houſe of mirth m.

l Even when their bodies are abſent. They are conſtantly, or very frequently meditating upon ſad and ſerious things, ſuch as Death and Judgment, the Vanity of this Life, and the reality and eternity of the next; becauſe they know that theſe thoughts, though they be not grateful to the ſenſual part, yet they are abſolutely neceſſary, and highly profitable, and moſt comfortable in the end, which every wiſe man moſt regards. m Their minds and affections are wholly ſet upon feaſting, and jolly, becauſe like Fools and bruiſh Creatures, they regard only their preſent delight, and mind not how dearly they muſt pay for them.

5. * It is better to hear the rebuke of the wiſe n, than for a man to hear the ſong o of fools.

* Prov. 13. 18. & 15. 31, 32. See Pſ. 141. 5.

n Which though it cauſeth ſome grief, yet frequently brings great benefit, even Reformation and Salvation, both from temporal and from eternal Deſtruction, both which are the portion of impenitent ſinners. o The flatteries, or other merry diſcourſes, which are as pleaſant to corrupt Nature, as Songs or Muſick.

† Heb. a ſound.

6. For as the † crackling of thorns p under a pot, ſo q is the laughter of a fool: this alſo is vanity.

p Which for a time make a great noiſe and blaze, but preſently waſt themſelves, and go out without any conſiderable effect upon the meat in the pot. q So vaniſhing and fruitleſs.

* Deut. 16.19.

7. ¶ Surely oppreſſion r maketh a wiſe man mad, * and a gift s deſtroyeth the heart t.

r Either, 1. Active, When a wiſe Man falls into the practice of this ſin of oppreſſing others, he is beſotted by it, and by the vaſt Riches which he by his great wit gets by it. Or rather, 2. Paſſive, when a wiſe man is oppreſſed by fooliſh and wicked men, it makes him fret and rage, and ſpeak or act like a mad man; for the wiſeſt men are moſt ſenſible of indignities and injuries, whereas fools are ſtupid, and do not much lay them to heart. s A bribe given to a wiſe man. t Deprives him of the uſe of his underſtanding, which is oft called the heart, as Exod. 23. 8. Deut. 16. 19. Hoſ. 4. 18. or makes him mad, as was ſaid in the former clauſe. So this verſe diſcovers two ways whereby a wiſe man may be made mad by ſuffering oppreſſion from others, or by receiving bribes to oppreſs others. And this alſo is an Argument of the vanity of worldly Wiſdom, that it is ſo eaſily corrupted and loſt, and ſo it ſerves the main deſign of this Book.

* Prov. 24.29.

8. Better is the end of a thing, than the beginning thereof u: and * the patient in ſpirit x is better than the proud y in ſpirit.

u If this verſe relates to that next foregoing, it is an Argument to keep mens minds from being diſordered, either by oppreſſion or bribery, becauſe the end of thoſe practices will ſhew, that he who oppreſſeth another, doth himſelf moſt hurt by it, and that he who taketh Bribes is no gainer by them. But if this be independent upon the former, as divers other verſes here are, it is a general and uſeful obſervation, that the good or evil of things is better known by their end, than by their beginning; which is true both in evil Counſels and Courſes, which are pleaſant at firſt, but at laſt bring deſtruction, and in all noble Enterprizes, in the ſtudies of Learning, and in the practice of Virtue and Godlineſs, where the beginnings are difficult and troubleſom, but in the progreſs and concluſion they are moſt eaſie and comfortable, and it is not ſufficient to begin well, unleſs we perſevere to the end, which crowns all. x Who quietly waits for the end and iſſue of things, and is willing to bear hardſhips and inconveniences in the mean time. y Which he puts inſtead of haſty or impatient, which the oppoſition might ſeem to require, partly becauſe Pride is the chief cauſe of impatience, Prov. 13. 10. and makes men unable to bear any thing, either from God or from Men, whereas Humility makes Men ſenſible of their own unworthineſs, and that they deſerve, at leaſt from God, all the indignities and injuries which they ſuffer from Men by God's permiſſion, and therefore patient under them; and partly to correct the vulgar error of proud men, who think highly of themſelves, and trample all others, eſpecially ſuch as are meek and patient, under their feet.

* Prov. 14.17. & 16. 32.

9. * Be not haſty in thy ſpirit to be angry z: for anger reſteth a in the boſom b of fools.

z Be not angry with any man without due conſideration, and juſt and neceſſary cauſe; for otherwiſe anger is ſometimes lawful, and ſometimes a duty. a Hath its ſetled and quiet abode, is their conſtant companion, ever at hand upon all occaſions, whereas wiſe Men reſiſt, and mortifie, and baniſh it. b In the Heart, the proper ſeat of the paſſions.

† Heb. out of Wiſdom.

10. Say not thou c, What is the cauſe that the former days were better d than theſe? for thou doſt not enquire † wiſely concerning this e.

c To wit, by way of impatient Expoſtulation and Complaint againſt God, either for permitting ſuch diſorders in the World, or for bringing thee into the World in ſuch an evil time and ſtate of things. Otherwiſe, a man may ſay this by way of prudent and pious enquiry, that by ſearching out the cauſe, he may, as far as it is in his power, apply Remedies to make them better. d Either, 1. Leſs ſinful. Or rather, 2. More quiet and comfortable. For this, and not the former, is the cauſe of moſt Mens murmurings againſt God's Providence. And this is an Argument of a mind diſcontented and unthankful for the many Mercies, which Men commonly enjoy even in evil times, and impatient under God's hand. e This Queſtion ſheweth thy great folly in contending with thy Creator, and the Soveraign Lord and Governour of all things, in oppoſing thy ſhallow wit to his unſearchable Wiſdom, and thy Will to his Will.

‖ Or, As good as an Inheritance, yea, better too.

11. ¶ Wiſdom ‖ is good f with an inheritance: and by it there is profit g to them that ſee the ſun h.

f i.e. Very good; the Poſitive being put for the Superlative, as it is frequently in the Hebrew Text. When Wiſdom and Riches meet in one man, it is an happy conjunction; for Wiſdom without Riches is commonly contemned, Eccleſ. 9. 16. and wants opportunities and inſtruments of diſcovering it ſelf, and of doing that good in the world which it is both able and willing to do; and Riches without Wiſdom are like a Sword in a mad Man's Hand, an occaſion of much ſin and miſchief, both to himſelf and others. g By Wiſdom joined with Riches there comes great benefit. Heb. and it is an excellency, or priviledge, or advantage. h i.e. To mortal men, not only to a Man's ſelf, but to many others who live with him in this world. Whereby alſo he intimates that Riches bear no price, and have no uſe in the other world.

12. For wiſdom is a † defence i, and money is a defence: but the excellency of knowledg is, that wiſdom giveth life to them that have it k.

i Heb. is a ſhadow; which in Scripture uſe notes both Protection and Refreſhment. And thus far Wiſdom and Money agree. k But herein Knowledg or Wiſdom (which commonly ſignifie the ſame thing) excels Riches, that whereas Riches frequently expoſe Men to death or deſtruction, true Wiſdom doth oft-times preſerve a man from temporal, and always from eternal Ruine.

* Chap. 1. 15. See Job 14. 4.

‖ Or, him, ſo Gr.

13. Conſider the work l of God, for * who can make ‖ that ſtreight which he hath made crooked m?

l Not of Creation, but of Providence; his wiſe, and juſt, and powerful Government of all Events in the World, which is propoſed as the laſt and beſt Remedy againſt all murmurings and ſinful diſquietments of mind, under the ſenſe of the great and many diſorders which happen in the World, as is implied, v. 10. againſt which Wiſdom is preſcribed as one Remedy, v. 11, 12. and now here is another. m No Man can withſtand, or correct, or alter any of God's works; and therefore all ſelf-tormenting frettings and diſcontents at the injuries of men, or calamities of times, are not only ſinful, but alſo vain and fruitleſs. This reaſon implies that there is an Hand or Work of God in all mens actions, either effecting them, if they be good, or permitting them if they be bad, and ordering and over-ruling them, whether they be good or bad. And God is here ſaid to make things crooked, as he is ſaid to make the hearts of ſinners fat or hard, Iſa. 6. 10. and elſewhere, not poſitively, but privatively, becauſe he denies or withdraws from men that Wiſdom or Grace which ſhould make them ſtreight.

† Heb. made

14. In the day of proſperity be joyful n, but in the day of Adverſity conſider o: God alſo hath † ſet the one over againſt the other p, to the end that man ſhould find nothing after him q.

n Enjoy God's favours with chearfulneſs and thankfulneſs. o To wit, God's work, which is eaſily underſtood out of the foregoing verſe. Conſider that it is God's hand, and therefore ſubmit to it, humble thy ſelf under his hand, be ſenſible of it, and duly affected with it: Conſider alſo why God ſends it, for what ſins, and with what deſign. This is a proper ſeaſon for ſerious conſideration, whereas Proſperity relaxeth the mind, and calls it forth to outward things. But this clauſe may be, and is by ſome rendred thus, and look for a day of adverſity. In Proſperity rejoice with trembling, and ſo as to expect a change. p God hath wiſely ordained theſe viciſſitudes, that Proſperity and Adverſity ſhould ſucceed one another in the courſe of mens Lives. q Either, 1. After man himſelf, or, as it may be rendred, after it, i.e. after his preſent condition, whether it be proſperous or afflictive. So the ſenſe is, That no man might be able to foreſee, or find out what ſhall certainly befal him afterwards, and therefore might live in a conſtant dependance upon God, and might neither deſpair in trouble, nor be ſecure or preſumptuous in proſperity, becauſe of the frequent and ſudden changes from one to the other. Or, 2. After God, That no man might come after God, and review his works, and find any fault in them, or pretend that he could have managed things better, becauſe this mixture of Proſperity and Adverſity is moſt convenient both for the Glory of God's Wiſdom, and Juſtice, and Goodneſs, and for the benefit of Mankind, who have an abſolute need of this viciſſitude, leſt they ſhould be either corrupted and ruined by perpetual Proſperity, as many have been, or overwhelmed with uninterrupted Adverſity.

* Chap. 8. 12.

15. All things r have I ſeen in the days of my vanity s: * there is a juſt man that periſheth in his righteouſneſs t, and there is a wicked man that prolongeth his life in his wickedneſs u.

r All ſorts of events, both ſuch as have been already mentioned, and ſuch as I am about to declare. s Since I have come into this vain and tranſitory Life. t Either, 1. Notwithſtanding his Righteouſneſs, whom his Righteouſneſs doth not deliver in common calamities, Ezek. 21. 3, 4. & 33. 12. Or, 2. For his Righteouſneſs, which expoſeth him to the Envy, and Hatred, and Rage of Perſecutors or wicked men. In is ſometimes uſed for for; but it is not ſo taken in the next clauſe which anſwers to this, and therefore the former ſeems to be the truer interpretation. u Notwithſtanding all his wickedneſs, whereby he provokes and deserves the justice both of God and Men, who yet, for many wise and just reasons, is permitted to live long unpunished and secure.

16. Be not righteous overmuch x, neither make thy self over-wise y: why shouldest thou † destroy thy self z?

x This Verse and the next have a manifest reference to v. 15. being two inferences drawn from the two clauses of the observation there recorded. And this verse was delivered by Solomon, either, 1. In the name and person of an ungodly man, who taketh occasion to dissuade men from the practice of Righteousness and true Wisdom, because of the danger which attends it, and is expressed in the middle of the former, and the end of this verse. Therefore, saith he, it is not good to be more nice than wise, take heed of Strictness, Zeal, and forwardness in Religion. And then the next verse contains an Antidote to this poisonous suggestion, yea rather, saith he, be not wicked or foolish overmuch; for that will not preserve thee, as thou maist imagine, from the last clause of v. 15. but will occasion and hasten thy ruine. But seeing these words are very capable of another sense, and there is no proof or evidence of this sense in them, as there is in all other places where Solomon speaks in the person of an Epicure, this Interpretation may seem to be dangerous, and liable to misconstruction. Or, 2. In his own person. And so these words are a caution to prevent, as far as may be, that destruction which oft attends upon righteous Men, as was observed, v. 15. Be not righteous overmuch, either 1. By being too severe in observing, censuring, and punishing the faults of others beyond the rules of equity, without giving any allowance for humane infirmity, extraordinary temptations, the state of times, and other circumstances. Or, 2. By being more just than God requires, either laying those yokes and burdens upon a mans self, or others, which God hath not imposed upon him, and which are too heavy for him, of which see on Matt. 23. 4. or condemning or avoiding those things as sinful, which God hath not forbidden, which really is Superstition, but is here called Righteousness abusively, because it is so in appearance, and in the opinion of such persons. So he gives them the name, but by adding overmuch denies the thing, because Righteousness, as well as other virtues, avoids both the extreams, the excess as well as the defect. Or, 3. By an imprudent and unseasonable ostentation, or exercise of Righteousness where it is not necessary, as if a Protestant travelling in a Popish Country should publickly profess his Religion to all whom he meets with, or when a man casts the pearl of Reproof before Swine, against that caution, Matt. 7. 6. So this is a precept that men should manage their zeal with godly Wisdom, and with condescension to others, as far as may be. But this is not to be understood, either, 1. Of such prudence as keeps a man from the practice of his duty, but only of that Prudence which directs him in ordering the time, manner, and other circumstances of it: Or, 2. As if Men could be too good, or too holy, since the strictest holiness which any man in this life can arrive at, falls far short both of the rule of God's Word, and of those examples of God and Christ, and the holy Angels, which are propounded in Scripture for our imitation. y Be not wise in thine own conceit, nor above what is written, 1 Cor. 4. 6. nor above what is meet. Which he here implieth to be the cause of being righteous overmuch. z For thereby thou wiltst unnecessarily expose thy self to danger and mischief.

17. Be not overmuch wicked a, neither be thou foolish b: why shouldest thou die † before thy time c?

a Do not take occasion, either from the impunity of sinners, v. 15. or from the prohibition of excessive righteousness, to run into the contrary extream, the defect of righteousness, or to give up thy self to the practice of all manner of wickedness, as the manner of many men is, Ch. 8. 11. But this is not to be understood as if he allowed a lower degree of wickedness, no more than that prohibition of not letting the Sun go down upon a man's wrath, Eph. 4. 26. permits him to keep his wrath all the day long; and no more than the condemnation of excess of riot, and of abominable Idolatries, 1 Pet. 4. 3, 4. doth justifie any kind of rioting or Idolatry. b Which he adds to shew that such sinners, howsoever they esteem themselves wise, yet in truth are egregious fools, as the following words prove. c Either by the justice of the Magistrate, or by the vengeance of God. For though I said that sometimes a wicked man prolongeth his days, &c. v. 15. yet commonly such persons are cut off, and thou hast sufficient reason to expect and fear it.

18. It is good that thou shouldest take hold of d this e: yea also from this f withdraw not thine hand g: for he that feareth God h, shall come forth of them all i.

d Embrace and practise. e This counsel last given, v. 17. f From that foregoing advice, v. 16. It is good to avoid both those extreams. g From the practice of it. h Who ordereth his actions so as to please God, and keep his Commands, and walk by the rule of his Word. i Shall be delivered from both these, and from all other extreams, and from all the evil consequences of them. The word all is sometimes put for both, as being used of two only, as Eccles. 2. 14.

19. * Wisdom k strengtheneth l the wise, more than ten m mighty men which are in the city.

* Prov. 21. 22. & 24. 5. Ch. 9. 16, 18.

k True Wisdom which is always joined with the Fear of God, and which teacheth a man to keep close to the rule of his duty, without turning either to the right hand or to the left. l Supporteth him in, and secureth him against troubles and dangers. m (i. e.) Many, uniting the forces together.

20. * For n there is not a just man upon earth o that doeth good, and sinneth not p.

* 1 King. 8. 46. 2 Chron. 6. 36. Prov. 20. 9. 1 Joh. 1. 8.

n So this is a reason either, 1. Of the foregoing counsels, v. 16, 17, 18. the 19th verse being interposed only as a proof of the last clause of v. 18. Or, 2. To shew the necessity and advantage of that Wisdom commended v. 19. because all men are very prone to folly and sin, and therefore needs that Wisdom which is from above to direct and keep him from it. But this Particle may be, and elsewhere is commonly rendred, Yet, and so the sense is, although Wisdom doth exceedingly strengthen a man, yet it doth not so strengthen him, as if it would keep him from falling into all sin; or because, or seeing that, and so this relates to the following verse, seeing all men sin, we should be ready to pardon the offences of others against us, either by word or deed; or, surely, and so it is an intire sentence, such as there are many in this Book. o Whereby he manifestly implies, that the just in Heaven are perfect and sinless. p Who is universally and perfectly good, and free from all sin.

21. Also † take no heed q unto all words that are spoken r; lest thou hear thy servant curse thee s.

q Do not severely observe, nor strictly search into them, nor listen to hear them, as many persons out of curiosity use to do. r To wit, concerning thee, or against thee. Under this one kind of offences of the tongue, which are most frequent, he seems to understand all injuries which we suffer from others, and adviseth us that we do not too rigidly examine them, nor too deeply resent them, but rather neglect and forget them. s Which will vex and grieve thee, and may provoke thee to vengeance and cruelty against him.

22. For oftentimes also thine own heart t knoweth, that thou thy self likewise hast cursed others u.

t Mind or Conscience, as that word is frequently used. u Either upon some great provocation, and sudden passion, or possibly upon a meer mistake, or false report. In which case thou hast both needed and desired the forbearance and forgiveness of others, and therefore by the Rules of Justice, as well as of Piety and Charity, thou art obliged to deal likewise with others.

23. ¶ All this x have I proved y by wisdom z: I said, I will be wise a, but it was far from me b.

x Or, All these things; of which I have here discoursed. y I have diligently examined and found all this to be true. z By the help of that singular Wisdom which God had given me. a I determined within my self that I would by all possible means seek to attain perfection of wisdom, and I perswaded my self that I should attain to it. b I found my self greatly disappointed, and the more I knew, the more I saw mine own folly and misery.

24. * That which is far off, and exceeding deep, who can find it out c?

* Job 28. 12, 20.

c No humane Wit can attain to perfect Wisdom, or to the exact knowledge of God's Counsels and Works, and the reasons of them, because they are unsearchably deep, and far above our sight, some of them being long since past, and therefore utterly unknown to us, and others yet to come which we cannot foreknow.

25. † * I applied mine heart d to know, and to search, and to seek out e wisdom, and ‖ the reason of things f, and to know the wickedness of folly g, even of foolishness and madness.

† Heb. I and my heart compassed. * Chap. 1. 17. & 2. 12. ‖ Or, the account, so Gr.

d I was not discouraged, but provoked by the difficulty of the work to undertake it: which is an argument of a great and generous Soul. e He useth three words signifying the same thing, to intimate his vehement desire, and vigorous, and unwearied endeavour after it. f Both of God's various Providences, and of the differing and contrary counsels and courses of men. g That I might clearly and fully understand the great evil of sin, and all that wickedness, and folly, or madness which is bound up in the hearts of all men by Nature, and which discovers it self in the course of their lives.

26. * And I find h more bitter i than death, the woman k whose heart is snares and nets l, and her hands m as bands n. + Whoso pleaseth God o shall escape from her p, but the sinner q shall be taken by her r.

* Prov. 22. 14. † Heb. he that is good before God.

h By my own sad Experience. Which Solomon here records, partly as an instance of that folly and madness which he expressed in general, v. 25. and partly as a testimony of his true Repen-

Repentance, for his ſoul miſcarriages, for which he was willing to take ſhame to himſelf, not only from the preſent, but from all ſucceeding generations. i More vexatious and pernicious, as producing thoſe horrours of Conſcience, thoſe reproaches, and diſeaſes, and other plagues, both temporal and ſpiritual, from God, which are far worſe than ſimple death, and, after all theſe, everlaſting deſtruction. k The ſtrange woman, of whom he ſpeaks ſo much in the Proverbs. l Who being ſubtil of heart, Prov. 7. 10. is full of crafty devices to inſnare men. m Either by gifts, or rather by laſcivious actions. n Wherewith ſhe holds them faſt in cruel bondage, ſo that they have neither power nor will to forſake her, notwithſtanding all the dangers and miſchiefs which they know do attend upon ſuch practices. o Heb. he that is good before God, either, 1. Whom God loves and favours. Or rather, 2. Who is good ſincerely, or in the judgment of God who cannot be deceived; whereas Hypocrites are frequently good in the eyes or opinions of men. Which ſenſe ſeems to be confirmed from the oppoſition of the ſinner to him, both here, and Eccleſ. 2. 26. Hereby he intimates that neither a good temper of mind, nor great diſcretion, nor good Education and Inſtruction, nor any other thing, except God's Grace, is a ſufficient preſervative from the dominion of this Luſt. p Shall be prevented from falling into that ſin, or, if by ſurpriſal or ſtrong temptation he be drawn to it, he ſhall be recovered out of it by true Repentance. q The wilful and obſtinate ſinner, who gives himſelf up to the common practice of this or other ſins; he who is a ſinner before the Lord, as the Sodomites are called, Gen. 13. 13. who is fitly oppoſed to him that is good before God; he in whom there is not a dram of true goodneſs: for otherwiſe all men are ſinners, as was ſaid v. 20. r Shall be intangled and kept faſt in her chains, as is implied, becauſe this is oppoſed to eſcaping from her.

27. Behold s, this have I found (ſaith the preacher t) ‖ counting one by one u, to find out the account x:

‖ Or, weighing one thing after another to find out the reaſon.

s It is a ſtrange thing, and worthy of your ſerious obſervation. t Or, the penitent, who ſpeaks what he hath learned, both by deep ſtudy, and coſtly experience. u Conſidering things or perſons very exactly and diſtinctly, one after another; and not only in general and confuſedly, in which caſe a man may very eaſily be miſtaken, and comparing them together, whereby I was enabled to make the truer judgment of them. x That I might make a true and juſt eſtimate in this matter. Or, as it is in the margent, and was rendred, v. 25. the reaſon, to wit, of that which I am about to ſay. I conſidered the perſons ſeverally and critically, that from thence I might underſtand the reaſon of the thing.

28. Which yet my ſoul ſeeketh y, but I find not z: one man a among a thouſand b have I found, but a woman c among all thoſe d have I not found.

y It ſeemed ſo wonderful to me, that I ſuſpected I had not made a ſufficient inquiry, and therefore I returned to ſearch again with more earneſtneſs and accurateneſs. z That it was ſo he found out, as he now ſaid, v. 27. but the whole truth and the reaſon of the thing he could not find out. a One worthy of the name of a man, a wiſe and vertuous man. Man is put for a worthy or good man, as Name is put for a good Name above, v. 1. and Wife for a good Wife, as was noted before. b With whom I have converſed. He is ſuppoſed to mention this Number in alluſion to his Thouſand Wives and Concubines, as they are numbred by parcels, 1 Kings 11. 3. c One worthy of that Name, one who is not a diſhonour to her Kind and Sex, who is not brutiſh in her diſpoſition and converſation. d In that Thouſand whom I have taken into intimate ſociety with my ſelf. Whereby he alſo paſſeth a ſevere cenſure upon himſelf that he had aſſociated himſelf with ſuch perſons, and not with the vertuous Women, which doubtleſs there were in his time, as appears from Prov. 31. It is not Solomon's deſign to diſparage this Sex, nor to make a general compariſon between men and women in all places and Ages, but only to ſuggeſt his own experience concerning it.

‖ Gen. 1. 27.

29. Lo, this only have I found e, * that God hath made man f upright g; but they h have ſought out many inventions i.

e Though I could not find out all the ſtreams of wickedneſs and their infinite windings and turnings in the World, yet I have diſcovered the fountain of it, to wit, Original ſin, and the corruption of Nature which is both in men and women. f God made our firſt Parents, Adam and Eve. g Heb. right, without any imperfection or corruption, conformable to his Nature and Will, which is the rule of right, after his own likeneſs, underſtanding, and holy, and every way good. h Our firſt Parents, and after them their Poſterity treading in their ſteps. i Were not contented with their preſent ſtate, but aimed at higher things, and ſtudied new ways of making themſelves more wiſe and happy, than God had made them, and readily hearkened to the ſuggeſtions of the Devil to that end. And we their ſinful and wretched Children, after their example, are ſtill prone to forſake the certain rule of God's Word, and the true way to happineſs, and to ſeek new methods and inventions of attaining to it, even ſuch as Solomon hath diſcourſed of in this Book.

CHAP. VIII.

1. WHo is as the wiſe man a? and who knoweth the interpretation of a thing b? * a mans wiſdom maketh his face to ſhine c, and † the boldneſs of his face d ſhall be ‖ changed e.

* Prov. 4. 8, 9. & 17. 24. See Acts 6. 15.

a Who is to be compared with a wiſe man? He is incomparably the moſt excellent man in the world. Or rather, who is truly wiſe? The Particle, as, being here not a Note of ſimilitude, but of reality, as it is Joh. 1. 14. and in many other places, as hath been noted. There are very few or no truly wiſe men in this world. This ſeems beſt to agree with the next clauſe, which is not, Who is as he that knoweth, but who knoweth? &c. b How few are there who underſtand the reaſons of things, and can rightly expound the word and works of God, and inſtruct and ſatisfie himſelf and others in all the doubtful and difficult caſes of humane actions? c Maketh a man illuſtrious and venerable, chearful, and mild, and amiable in his carriage to others. The face is put for the mind or inward frame, becauſe the mind diſcovers it ſelf in the countenance. d The roughneſs or fierceneſs, the pride and impudence of his diſpoſition, as this Phraſe is uſed, Deut. 28. 50. Prov. 7. 13. & 21. 29. Dan. 8. 23. e Into gentleneſs and humility.

2. I counſel thee f to keep the kings commandment g, and that in regard of the oath of God h.

f Which Verb is neceſſarily underſtood to make the ſenſe full and compleat. See the like defects of ſpeech, Pſal. 120. 7. Iſa. 5. 9, &c. g Obſerve and obey all his commands. Which is not to be underſtood univerſally, as if the King ſhould have commanded them to deny or blaſpheme God, or to worſhip Idols, in which caſe every Chriſtian man, who reads and believes the Bible, muſt needs confeſs that the Iſraelites eſpecially were obliged to obey God rather than man, but only of ſuch commands as are not contrary to the will of God. h Either, 1. Becauſe of that Oath which thou haſt taken to keep all God's Laws, whereof this of Obedience to Superiours is one. Or, 2. Becauſe of that Covenant or Oath of Fealty and Allegiance whereby thou haſt engaged thy ſelf to him, of which ſee 1 Chron. 11. 3. & 29. 24. Ezek. 17. 16, 18. Though this may alſo be underſtood, and is by ſome learned Interpreters taken as a limitation of their Obedience to Kings, the words being thus rendred, as the Hebrew will very well bear, but according to the word of the Oath of God, Obey the King's commands, with this caution that they be agreeable and not contrary to the Laws of God, which thou art obliged by thy own and by thy Parents Oaths oft renewed, to obſerve in the firſt place.

3. * Be not haſty to go out of his ſight i: ſtand not in an evil thing k, for he doth whatſoever pleaſeth him l.

* Chap. 10. 4.

i Heb. to go from his face, or preſence, to wit, in diſlike or in diſcontent, withdrawing thy ſelf from thy King's ſervice or obedience, as malecontents uſe to do; for this will both provoke him, and lead thee by degrees into Sedition or Rebellion. k If thou haſt offended him, perſiſt not in it, but humbly acknowledge thine offence, and beg his pardon and favour. l His power is incontroulable in his Dominions, and therefore thou canſt neither reſiſt nor avoid his fury.

4. Where the word of a king is, there is power m: and who may ſay n unto him, What doſt thou?

m Whatſoever he commandeth he wants not power nor inſtruments to execute it, and therefore can eaſily puniſh thee as he pleaſeth. n Heb. Who ſhall ſay? Who will preſume or dare to ſay ſo? He doth not affirm that it is unlawful to ſay ſo, for Samuel ſaid ſo to Saul, 1 Sam. 15. and Nathan to David, 2 Sam. 12. and ſeveral other Prophets to the Kings of Judah and Iſrael, but only that it is difficult and dangerous.

5. Whoſo keepeth the commandment o † ſhall feel no evil thing p: and a wiſe mans heart diſcerneth both time and judgment q.

o Either, 1. of the King, of which he hath hitherto ſpoken. Or, 2. of God, for the Word, or Commandment, or Law are oft uſed emphatically for the Word, Law, or Command of God, as hath been formerly and frequently obſerved, and the Commandment is put for the Commandments, as is very uſual. And ſo Solomon paſſeth from his former to a new ſubject. p Shall be delivered from thoſe miſchiefs which befal the diſobedient. q Both when, and how far, and in what manner he may or muſt keep the commands of the King or God. For the word here rendred judgment doth oft ſignifie right, as Deut. 21. 17. as alſo a cauſe or controverſie, as Numb. 27 5. and the manner or rule of actions, as Judg. 13. 12. The ſenſe is, A wiſe man knows both what he ought to do, and what are the fitteſt ſeaſons for doing it, which he ſeeketh and embraceth.

¶ 6. Becauſe

6. ¶ Because to every purpose there is time and judgment r, therefore s the misery of man is great upon him.

r There is a fit way and season for the happy accomplishment of every business which a man designeth or undertaketh to do, which is known to God, but for the most part hidden from man, as is implied and may be gathered from the following words. See the Notes on Ch. 3. 1. s Because there are very few who have that wisdom which is necessary to discern this, as was now said, v. 5. and most men do by their ignorance and loss of opportunities deprive themselves of many advantages, and expose themselves to manifold miseries.

* Prov. 24. 22. Chap. 6. 12. ‖ Or, how it shall be.

7. For * he knoweth not that which shall be t: for who can tell him u ‖ when it shall be.

t Men are generally ignorant of all future events, and of the success of their endeavours, and therefore their minds are greatly disquieted, and their expectations frequently disappointed, and they fall into many mistakes and miscarriages, which they could and would prevent if they did foresee the issues of things. u No wise Man, no Astrologer or other Artist can discover this.

* Job 14. 5. ‖ Or, casting off weapons.

8. There is no man that hath power * over the spirit x to retain the spirit y; neither hath he power in the day z of death: and there is no ‖ discharge a in that war b, neither shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it c.

x i.e. The Soul of Man, which is oft called a Spirit, as Job 7. 7. & 10. 12. Psal. 78. 39. & 104. 29, &c. y To keep it in the Body beyond the time which God hath allotted to it. This is added as another evidence of Man's misery. z Or, against the day, i.e. to avoid or delay that day. a As there is in other Wars, when Souldiers either are dismissed from the service, or escape by flight or otherwise. b In that fatal conflict between Life and Death, between Nature and the Disease, when a Man is strugling with Death, though to no purpose, for Death shall always be Conqueror. c And although wicked men, who most fear Death, use all possible means, whether good or bad, to free themselves from this deadly blow, yet they shall not escape it.

9. All this d I have seen, and applied my heart unto every work e that is done under the sun: there is a time wherein one man ruleth over another to his own hurt e.

d All these things before-mentioned. e I have been a diligent observer of all actions and events. e There are some Kings, who use their power tyrannically and wickedly, whereby they do not only oppress their People, but hurt themselves, by bringing the vengeance of God and men upon their own heads. Which is here noted partly for the terrour of Tyrants, and partly for the caution and comfort of Subjects groaning under those heavy pressures which they are not able to remove, that they may forbear unlawful or rebellious courses, and quietly commit themselves and their cause to God, who judgeth righteously, and who both can and will call the greatest Monarchs to a sad account for all their impious and unrighteous courses.

10. And so f I saw the wicked g buried h, who had come † and gone i from the place of the holy k, and they were forgotten l in the city where they had so done m: this is also vanity n.

f In like manner, or such another vanity or disorder. g Wicked Princes or Rulers, as the next clause limits this. h Die quietly in their Beds, and afterwards be buried with state and pomp, whereas in truth they deserved an untimely end, and no other than the burial of an Ass. i Who had administred publick Justice and Government, which is frequently signified by the Phrase of coming in and going out before the People, as Numb. 27. 17. Deut. 31. 2. The LXX. Jewish Interpreters, whom some others follow, render the word, they were praised, applauded and adored, by the variation of one Letter in the Hebrew word, which also is very like that Letter which is in the Text. k By which he understands either, 1. the Holy City Jerusalem, or the Holy Land, where Israel dwelt: which may be added to aggravate the wickedness of such persons from the obligations, and counsels, and examples, which they had to do better things. Or, 2. the Seat of Majesty, and Judgment, which may well be called the place, or seat of the Holy, i. e. of God, who is called the Holy one, Habak. 3. 3. and oft elsewhere, who is in a special manner present in and president other those places, whose work and for whom, and in whose Name and stead Magistrates act, who are therefore called gods; of all which see, Exod. 22. 28. Deut. 1. 17. 1 Chron. 29. 23. Psal. 82. 1, &c. And the Throne or Tribunal seems to be so called here to aggravate their wickedness, who being Sacred Persons and advanced by God into so High and Sacred a place, betrayed so great a trust, and both practised and encouraged that wickedness which by their Office they were obliged to suppress and punish. l Whereas they designed to spread and perpetuate their Names and Memories to all succeeding Ages, Psal. 49. 11. m (i.e.) Come to and go from the place of the Holy; where they lived in great splendour, and were buried with great magnificence: which might have kept up their remembrance at least in that place. n That men should so earnestly thirst after and please themselves with worldly greatness and glory, which is so soon extinct, and the very memory of it quickly worn out of the minds of men.

11. * Because sentence against an evil work o is not executed speedily, therefore p the heart of the sons of men is fully set q in them to do evil.

* Psal. 50. 21. Isa. 26. 10.

o Or, the Decree, &c. God's determinate counsel or sentence for the punishment of Tyrants and all evil doers. p Because God's forbearance makes them presumptuous and secure, and confident of impunity. q Heb. is filled, is carried on with full sail, as the Seventy understand it, like a Ship with a strong and violent wind: or, is bold or presumptuous, as the same Phrase is understood, Esth. 7. 5. Acts 5. 3.

12. ¶ Though a sinner do evil an hundred times r, and his days s be prolonged, yet surely I know that * it shall be well with them that fear God t, which fear before him u.

* Psal. 37. 11, 18, 19. Prov. 1. 32, 33. Isa. 3. 10, 11.

r Frequently and innumerably. s The time of his Life and Prosperity. t Whereby he implies, both that good men might for a time suffer grievous things from such wicked Tyrants, and that it should be very ill with the wicked, which is manifest from the contrary course and condition of good and bad men, and which is expressed in the following words. Compare Psal. 2. 12. u Or, at his presence: who stand in awe of God, and forbear and fear to sin out of a sincere respect and reverence to God.

13. But it shall not be well x with the wicked, neither shall he prolong his days y, which are as a shadow z; because he feareth not before God a.

x i.e. It shall go very ill with him, great miseries are prepared for him: which is a Figure oft used in Scripture, as hath been formerly and frequently observed. y To wit, very long, or for ever, as he desireth. z His life, though it may be or seem to be long, yet in truth is but a meer shadow, which will quickly vanish and disappear, and be as if it never had been, and many times, like a shadow, when it is longest it is nearest its abolition. a This is the punishment of his wickedness and his casting off the fear and service of God. For although the lives of good men upon Earth are short, as well as the lives of the wicked, yet their days are not like a shadow, because they are prolonged far beyond this mortal state, even to all Eternity, and Death it self doth but open the way for them to an endless life.

14. There is a vanity which is done b upon the earth, but there be just men unto whom it * happeneth according to the work c of the wicked: again, there be wicked men to whom it happeneth according to the work of the righteous d: I said, that this also is vanity e.

* Psal. 73. 14. Chap. 7. 15.

b Either by wicked Potentates, who do commonly advance unworthy men, and oppress Persons of greatest Virtue and merit: Or, by God's Providence, who sees it fit for many weighty Reasons so to manage the affairs of the present World. c i.e. The merit of their work, the work being oft put for the recompence given or belonging to it, as Levit. 19. 13. Job 7. 2. Psal. 109. 20. The sense is, Who meets with such hard usage as the worst of men deserve. d Who, instead of those just and dreadful punishments which they deserve by the Laws of God and men, receive those encouragements and rewards which are due to virtuous and worthy men: e This is a very unreasonable and foolish thing, if it be considered without respect unto another life, as it is here, where Solomon is discoursing of the vanity of the present life, and of the impossibility of finding satisfaction and happiness in it.

15. * Then I commended mirth, because a man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry f: for that shall abide with him of his labour g, the days of his life, which God giveth him under the sun.

* Chap. 3. 22. & 5. 18. & 9. 7.

f This he speaks, either 1. in the Person of a sensual Man. Things being so, as was related, v. 14. it is best to give a Man's self up to eating and drinking, and all manner of carnal delights. Or, 2. in his own Name and Person. Upon these considerations I concluded that it was most adviseable for a man not to perplex and torment himself with the Thoughts of the seeming inequalities of Divine Providence and of the great disorders which are in the World, or with cares and fears about future events, or with infinite and insatiable desires of Worldly things, but quietly and chearfully and thankfully to enjoy the comforts which God gives him. See on Eccles. 2. 24. & 3. 12, 13. g This is the best advantage which he can make of this Worlds goods as to the present life.

16. ¶ When I applied mine heart to know wisdom h, and to see the business i that is done upon the Earth (for also there is that neither day nor night seeth sleep with his eyes k.)

b This he seems to add as the reason of that judgment which he had now passed, v. 15. because he had diligently studied wherein Man's Wisdom did consist, and had observed the restlesness of mens minds and bodies in other courses. i Either, 1. To find out the work of God, as the next Verse may seem to explain it, and all the Mysteries of God's Providence in the Government of this present and lower World. Or, 2. To observe mens various designs and employments, and their toilsom and unwearied businesses or labours about worldly things. Which sense seems best to agree, both with the use of this Hebrew word which is constantly used in this sense, in all the places of Scripture where it is, which are Eccles. 1. 13. & 2. 23, 26. & 3. 10. & 4. 8. & 5. 2, 13. & 8. 16. and never concerning the works of God: and with the foregoing and following words, as we shall see. k The sense of the words thus translated and pointed seems to be this, There is a certain Man, whom it is needless to name, (which is a modest designation of himself, like that of St. Paul, 2 Cor. 12. 2. I know a man in Christ, &c.) who studied those matters Day and Night, and therefore is very capable of passing a judgment about them. But, with submission, there seems to be no need of a Parenthesis to cut off these words from the former, with whom they have a fit connexion. For having now mentioned the business which is done, or which Man doth, upon Earth, he further adds, as an evidence of Man's eagerness in pursuing his business, for even by Day and by Night he (to wit, the busie Man, which is easily understood from the foregoing clause) seeth not sleep with his eyes, i.e. He grudgeth himself even necessary refreshments, and disquiets himself with endless cares and labours, the fruit whereof he doth but little enjoy; and therefore it is better to eat and drink, &c. as I now said, v. 15. As for the Phrase of seeing sleep, it is a figurative expression used in other Authors, and is like that of seeing death, Psal. 89. 48.

17. Then l I beheld all the work of God m, that a man * cannot find out n the work that is done under the sun: because though a man labour to seek it out, yet he shall not find it; yea further, though a wise man think to know it, yet shall he not be able to find it.

* Job 5. 9. Ch. 3. 11. & 11. 5. Rom. 11. 33.

l Heb. and; or moreover. m I considered the counsels and ways of God, and the various methods of his Providence towards good and bad men, and the reasons of them. n No Man, though never so wise, and inquisitive, and studious, as it follows, is able fully and perfectly to understand these things. And therefore it is best for man not to perplex himself with endless and fruitless enquiries about these matters, but quietly to submit to God's Will and Providence, and to live in the fear of God, and the comfortable enjoyment of his blessings.

CHAP. IX.

† Heb. I gave, or, set to my heart.

1. FOr a all this b † I considered in my heart, even to declare all this c, that the righteous, and the wise d, and their works e are in the hand of God f: no man knoweth either love, or hatred, by all that is before them g.

a Or, Therefore, as the Seventy Interpreters render it. b All that I have said concerning the Methods of Divine Providence towards good and bad men. c To make this evident first to my self and then others, as occasion required. d Whom he mentions not exclusively, as if wicked men were not in God's hand, for the next clause relates both to good and bad men, but eminently, because by the course of God's Providence towards them, they might seem to be quite neglected and forsaken by God. e Either efficiently, all their actions and employments; or objectively, all things done to them, all events which befal them. f Are subject to his power and governed by his Providence, as this Phrase is used, Prov. 21. 1. Joh. 3. 35. compared with Mat. 28. 18. And therefore although we cannot fully understand the reasons of all God's works, as he now said, Ch. 8. 17. yet because they are done by his unerring hand, we may be assured that they are done both righteously and justly, and that no man hath cause to murmur at the Prosperity of the wicked, or at the calamities of good men. g No man can judge by their present and outward conditions or dispensations of God's Providence, whether God loves or hates them, for whom he loves he chastens, and permitteth those whom he hates to prosper in the World. And this Translation and Interpretation agreeth well with the following Verse. But I must confess it differs from almost all other both ancient and modern Translations. And these words with the foregoing clause are translated otherwise, and that word for word according to the Hebrew, The righteous, and the wise, and their works are in the hand of God, also love and hatred: (understand out of the foregoing clause, are in God's hand. And this may be meant, either 1. of God's love and hatred which he disposeth when, and to whom, and in what manner he pleaseth. Or, 2. of mens love and hatred, also their love, and their hatred, the Pronoun their being repeated out of the former clause as is frequent in Scripture. And so the sence is, That not only mens works, as he now said, but even their inward passions or affections, which seem to be most in their own power, are as much in God's disposal as their outward actions. Then follows the last clause in the same order in which the words lie in the Hebrew Text.) No Man knoweth all, or, any thing which is before him. Which I thus understand, Whereas all men, and all their affections, and actions, and the events of them are perfectly known to God and disposed by him, men know nothing, no not such things as are most plain and easie and familiar to them, and can neither foresee the plainest things, nor dispose of the smallest things as they please, but all things are wholly ordered and over-ruled by God's Providence, not as men imagine or desire, but as he sees fit.

2. * All things come alike to all h, there is one event to the righteous and to the wicked; to the good and to the clean i, and to the unclean; to him that sacrificeth k, and to him that sacrificeth not; as is the good, so is the sinner l, and he that sweareth m as he that feareth an oath n.

* Ps. 73. 3, 12, 13. Mal. 3. 15.

h The good and evil things of this World do equally happen to good and bad men. i Either 1. morally clean, or holy men: Or, 2. legally who made Conscience of keeping himself pure from all legal defilements, according to the Law then in force, and consequently from all other sins upon the same ground. k That worshippeth God sincerely, though it be to his cost. l As to all outward things, to wit, customarily and unnecessarily, rashly, without due consideration and reverence, or falsly and wickedly. m For otherwise that some swearing was then allowed, and in some cases required, none do or can deny. n Who is afraid of offending God, or abusing his Name by vain, or rash, or false Oaths.

3. This is an evil o among all things that are done under the sun, that there is * one event unto all: yea, also the heart of the sons of men p is full of evil q, and madness is in their heart r while they live, and after that they go to the dead s.

* Ch. 2. 14, 15, 16.

o A great trouble and temptation to a considerate and good Man. p Of wicked men, such as the generality of Mankind are. q Either 1. of grief, upon this occasion. Or rather 2. of wickedness, as appears from the next clause, and by comparing this place with Eccles. 8. 11. r Upon this account they go on madly and desperately in evil courses without any fear of an after-reckoning. s After all their mad and wicked pranks in the whole course of their life, they die in the same manner as the best men do. So hitherto there is no difference. For Solomon here forbears the consideration of the future life. Only he seems to intimate that as the madness, so the happiness of the wicked is ended by Death, which is more fully expressed in the following words.

4. ¶ For to him that is joyned to all the living t, there is hope u: for a living dog is better x than a dead lion.

t That continueth in the Land and Society of Living men. Or, according to the reading of the Hebrew Text, That is chosen or allotted to Life, whom God hath appointed yet to live in the World, when he hath appointed that many others shall die, or who are written among the Living, as the Phrase is, Isa. 4. 3. which is borrowed from the custom of Cities, where men are first chosen, and then inrolled Citizens. u He hath not only some comfort for the present, but also hopes of further and greater happiness in this World, which men are very prone to entertain and cherish in themselves. Yea, they may have the hopes of a better life, if they improve their opportunities. But he seems to confine himself here to the present life. x (i.e.) Much happier, as to the comforts and priviledges of this World, though in other respects Death be better than Life, as was said, Eccles. 7. 1.

5. For the living know that they shall die y: but the dead know not any thing z, neither have they any more a reward a, for the memory of them is forgotten b.

y Whereby they are taught to improve Life, whilest they have it, to their greatest comfort and advantage. z To wit, of the actions and events of this World, as this is limited in the end of the next Verse. Compare Job 14. 21. Isa. 63. 16. a The reward or fruit of their labours in this World, which is utterly lost as to them, and enjoyed by others. See Eccles. 2. 21. For otherwise, that there are future rewards after death, is asserted by Solomon elsewhere, as we have seen, and shall hereafter see. b To wit, amongst living men, and even in those places where they had lived in great power and glory; as was noted, Ch. 8. 10.

6. Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy is now perished b; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun c.

b They

b They neither love, nor hate, nor envy any Person, or thing in this World, but are now altogether unconcerned in all things done under the Sun. c In any worldly thing. By which limitation he sufficiently insinuates his belief of their portion in the other World.

* Ch. 8. 15. 7. ¶ Go thy way d, * eat thy e bread f with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart g: for God now accepteth thy works h.

d Make this use of what I have said. e Thine own, the fruit of thy own labours, not what thou takest unjustly from others. f Necessary and convenient food. By which he excludes excess. g Chearfully and thankfully enjoy thy comforts, avoiding all distracting care and grief for the occurrences of this World. h Is gracious to thee, hath blessed thy labours with success, and alloweth thee a comfortable enjoyment of his blessings.

8. Let thy garments be always i white k; and let thy head lack no ointment l.

i In all convenient times and circumstances; for there are times of mourning, Eccles. 3. 4. & 7. 2. Compare Prov. 5. 19. k Decent, and splendid, as far as is suitable to thy condition. The Eastern people of the best sort used white Garments, especially in times of rejoycing, as Esth. 8. 15. Compare Revel. 3. 4, 5. & 6. 11. But by this whiteness of Garments he understands a pleasant, and chearful conversation. l Which upon joytul occasions was poured upon mens Heads, Amos 6. 6. Luk. 7. 46. Joh. 12. 3.

† Heb. see, or enjoy life. * Ch. 2. 10. 24. & 3. 13. & 5. 18. 9. † Live joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest m, all the days of the life of thy vanity n, which he hath given thee under the sun, all the days of thy vanity: * for that is thy portion o in this life p, and in thy labour which thou takest under the sun.

m So he limits him to lawful delights. Whereby it is evident that Solomon doth not speak this in the Person of an Epicure, as some understand it. n Of this vain and frail life. Which expression he industriously useth to moderate mens affections even towards lawful pleasures, and to mind them of their duty and interest in making sure of a better life, and more solid comforts. o Allowed to thee by God, and the best part of worldly enjoyments. p By which addition he is again admonishing him of seeking another portion in the future life.

† Heb. hell. So Gr. 10. Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do q, do it with all thy might r; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the † grave s whither thou goest.

q What thou hast opportunity and ability to do in the duties of thy calling, and in order to thy comfort and benefit. r With unwearied diligence, and vigour, and expedition. Whereby he again discovers that he doth not perswade men to an idle and sensual life, but only to a sober enjoyment of his comforts in God's fear, and with an industrious prosecution of his vocation. s Thou canst neither design nor act any thing there tending to thy own comfort or advantage. Therefore slip not thine only season.

11. ¶ I returned and saw t under the sun, that the race u is not to the swift, nor the battle x to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding y, nor yet favour z to men of skill a, but time and chance happeneth to them all b.

t This may have some respect to the foregoing Verse. For having pressed men to labour with all their might, he now adds by way of caution, that yet they must not be confident of their own strength, as if they were sure of success by it, but in all, and above all to look up to God for his blessing, without which all their endeavours will be vain. But it seems chiefly to be added, either 1. as another instance of the liberty and power of God's Providence in the disposal of humane affairs, of which he spake above, v. 1, 2, 3. Or, 2. as another of the vanities of this present life. u Either ability to run, or success and victory in running. x The victory in Battle. y Who yet are most likely both to get and to keep riches. z Good acceptance and love from men. a Who know how to manage themselves and all affairs, whereby they are necessary and serviceable to others, and therefore most likely to find favour in their eyes. b There are some times or seasons, unknown and casual to men, but certain and determined by God, in which alone he will give men success.

12. For man also knoweth not his time c; as the fishes that are taken in an evil net d, and as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men * snared in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them e.

* Prov. 29. 6. Luke 12. 20.

c To wit, the time of his death, or of some other sore distress which God is bringing upon him. Which is opposed to the time of success mentioned in the foregoing Verse, and man is said to be ignorant both of the one and of the other. d That whilst they are sporting and feeding themselves are suddenly and unexpectedly ensnared to their ruine. e When they are most careless and secure.

13. ¶ This wisdom have I seen f also under the sun, and it seemed great unto me g.

f I have observed this among many other instances and effects of Wisdom. Which he seems to add for the commendation of Wisdom, notwithstanding its insufficiency for Man's safety and happiness without God's blessing. g I judged it very praise-worthy, though others despised it, as it follows.

14. ¶ There was a little city h, and few men within it; and there came a great king against it, and besieged it, and built great bulwarks against it:

h It matters not whether this was a real History, or only a parable to represent the common practices of men in such cases.

15. Now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembred that same poor man i.

i He was soon neglected, and his great service so far from being recompenced according to its merit, that both it and he were quite forgotten. Which may be noted as another great vanity.

* Prov. 21. 22. & 24. 5. Ch. 7. 19. 16. * Then said I, wisdom is better than strength k: nevertheless the poor man's wisdom is despised l, and his words are not heard.

k As was manifest in the foregoing instance. l Because men are generally vain and foolish, and have a greater value for outward Ornaments than for true worth.

17. The words of wise men m are heard n in quiet o, more than the cry p of him that ruleth among fools q.

m Though poor, as may be gathered both from the foregoing relation, and because he is opposed to the ruling fool in the next clause. n To wit, by wise men: or should be heard, as such words are oft taken, as Mal. 1. 6. and elsewhere. For that they were not always actually heard he declared in the last words of the foregoing Verse. o Uttered with a modest and low voice, to which the following cry is opposed. p The clamorous and senseless discourses. q Of a rich and potent, but foolish Man, who hath some influence upon fools, like himself, but is justly neglected, and his words disregarded by wise men.

18. Wisdom is better than weapons of war r: but one sinner s destroyeth much good t.

r Than armed power. s A wicked fool. By which expression and opposition of a Sinner to a wise Man he gives us a Key to understand his meaning in divers places of his Books, that by Wisdom he means true Piety, and by Folly, wickedness: and withal sheweth that sin as it is the greatest folly, so it is more pernicious to men than meer folly properly so called. t By his wicked counsels and courses brings much damage and mischief both to himself and others.

CHAP. X.

† Heb. Flies of Death, 1. † DEad flies a cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour: so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour b.

a Falling into it and abiding and being putrified in it, especially in those Countries, where there were more filthy and venomous Flies, and where the Oyntments were more pure, and where the Air was more hot than in these parts. b Which comes to pass, partly because all the actions, and consequently the follies, of such men are most diligently observed and soonest discerned and tossed about in the mouths of men, whereas fools and all their carriages are generally disregarded; and partly because of that envious and malicious disposition of mens minds which makes them quick-sighted to discover, and glad to hear, and forward to declare the faults of such as by their greater eminency did out-shine and obscure them.

2. A wise man's heart c is at his right hand d; but a fools heart is at his left e.

c (i. e.) His understanding or wisdom. d Is always present with him and ready to direct him in all his actions. He manageth all his affairs prudently and piously. He mentions the right hand, because that is the chief and most common instrument of actions, which by most men are done with more strength and expedition and orderliness and comeliness by their right hand than by their left. e His understanding and knowledge serves him him only for idle ſpeculation and vain oſtentation, but is not at all uſeful or effectual to govern his affections and actions. He acts prepoſterouſly and fooliſhly, like one without heart, as it follows.

3. Yea alſo when he that is a fool walketh by the way f, † his wiſdom faileth him g, and he ſaith to every one that he is a fool h.

f Not only in great undertakings, but in his daily converſation with men, in his looks and geſtures and common talk. g Or, he wants an heart, as if he had ſaid, did I ſay, his heart is at his left hand, I muſt recal it, for in truth he hath no heart in him. h He publickly diſcovers his folly to all that meet him or converſe with him.

4. If the ſpirit i of a ruler riſe up againſt thee, leave not thy place i; for * yielding k pacifieth l great offences m.

* Prov. 25. 15.

i The paſſion or wrath, as is manifeſt from the following words, which is oft called Spirit, as Judg. 8. 3. 2 Chron. 21. 16. Prov. 25. 28. Eccleſ. 7. 9. i To wit, in anger or diſcontent. Withdraw not thy ſelf raſhly and haſtily from his preſence and ſervice, according to the advice, Ch. 8. 3. Continue in a diligent and faithful diſcharge of thy duty, as becomes a Subject; do not return anger for anger, but modeſtly and humbly ſubmit thy ſelf to him. k Heb. healing, a gentle and ſubmiſſive carriage, which is of an healing nature, whereas pride and paſſion do exaſperate and widen the breach already made. l Heb. maketh them to reſt or ceaſe, preventeth or removeth them. m Heb. great ſins, either, 1. ſuch ſins as the offended Ruler might commit in the proſecution of his wrath againſt thee. Or rather, 2. ſuch as poſſibly thou haſt committed againſt him for which he is incenſed againſt thee; or the greateſt offences or injuries that one man commits againſt another, and much more thoſe ſlight miſcarriages of thine towards the Ruler. Let not therefore a falſe opinion concerning his unreconcileableneſs to thee, make thee deſperate, and draw thee into Rebellion.

5. There is an evil which I have ſeen under the ſun n, as an errour which proceedeth † from the ruler o.

n I have obſerved another great vanity and miſdemeanour amongſt men. o So the ſenſe is, like thoſe errours which Rulers commonly commit. Or rather, which is indeed an errour proceeding from the Ruler. For the following miſcarriage muſt needs come from thoſe who have power of conferring honour and power, &c. So the Hebrew, Caph, is not a Note of likeneſs, but of reality, as it is, Judg. 13. 23. Neh. 7. 2. Hoſ. 4. 4. & 5. 10. and oft elſewhere.

6. Folly is ſet † in great dignity p, and the rich q ſit in low place r.

p Fooliſh and unworthy perſons are frequently advanced by the favour or humour of Princes into places of higheſt Truſt and Dignity, which is a great reproach and miſchief to the Prince, and a ſore calamity to all his people. q Wiſe and worthy men, as is evident, becauſe theſe are oppoſed to fools in the former clauſe: ſuch as are rich in endowments of mind. The ground of the expreſſion may be this, that rich men are capable of all the advantages of men or books for the attainment of Wiſdom, and therefore are ſuppoſed to be wiſe in ſome meaſure. r Neglected and deſpiſed, or removed from thoſe high places to which their merits had raiſed them.

* Prov. 19. 10. & 30. 22.

7. I have ſeen ſervants s * upon horſes t, and princes walking as ſervants upon earth u.

s Men of a ſervile condition and diſpoſition, who are altogether unfit for places of Dignity. t Riding upon Horſes, as a Badge of their Dignity, as Eſth. 6. 8, 9. Jer. 17. 25. Ezek. 23. 23. u Which was the caſe of his own Father, 2 Sam. 15. 30.

* Pſal. 7. 15. Prov. 26. 27.

8. * He that diggeth a pit x ſhall fall into it y; and whoſo breaketh an hedge z, a ſerpent a ſhall bite him.

x With this deſign that another may unawares fall into it. y Shall through God's juſt Judgment be deſtroyed by his own wicked devices. z Whereby another man's Fields, or Vineyards, or Orchards, are diſtinguiſhed and fenced, that he may either enter upon them and take away their fruits, or by that means enlarge his own adjoyning Fields. Poſſibly he may have a particular reſpect unto Magiſtrates or Rulers, whom God hath hedged or fenced in, both with his own Inſtitution of Magiſtracy, and with his Laws, ſtrictly requiring Obedience from their Subjects; and ſo he notes the danger of riſing and rebelling againſt them. a Which oft lurks in hedges, and bites thoſe who come within its reach.

9. Whoſo removeth ſtones b ſhall be hurt therewith c: and he that cleaveth wood d ſhall be endangered thereby e.

Either, 1. The ſtones which belong to others, and limit or diſtinguiſh their Grounds, of which ſee Deut. 27. 17. Or, 2. Great ſtones too heavy for them. Which raſhly attempt things too high and hard for them. Which ſeems better to agree with the following clauſe than the former Interpretation doth. c May eaſily receive hurt by the ſtones falling unexpectedly and violently upon him. d With an Iron inſtrument, as the manner is, he being unskilful in that Art. Poſſibly he deſigns a man who cauſeth diſcord and miſchief among Friends, or in a Family, or Kingdom. e May peradventure cut himſelf.

10. If the iron e be blunt, and he do not whet the edge, then muſt he put to more ſtrength f; but wiſdom is profitable to direct g.

e To wit, the Axe whereby he cut the wood in the former verſe, which by the danger there mentioned may be ſuppoſed to be ſharp, but now, ſaith he, if it happen to be blunt. f Which is neceſſary to make it cut. g Heb. and wiſdom, &c. And as Wiſdom inſtructs a man in the ſmalleſt matters, as in this very matter of cutting of Wood, where it teacheth him in this caſe to uſe his utmoſt ſtrength, ſo it is uſeful for a man's direction in all his great and weighty affairs. And ſo he inſenſibly ſlides into the commendation of Wiſdom, and the cenſure of Folly, which is the principal deſign and buſineſs of this Chapter.

11. Surely the ſerpent will bite * without inchantment h, and † a babler i is no better.

* Jer. 8. 17. † Heb. the maſter of the tongue.

h If not ſeaſonably prevented by the Art and care of the Charmer; which practice he doth not juſtifie, but only mention by way of reſemblance. See on Pſal. 58. 5. i Heb. a maſter of the tongue: which may be underſtood either, 1. Of the Detractor or Slanderer, who like a Serpent bites ſecretly, who may be ſo called, becauſe he takes liberty to uſe his tongue as he liſts, without any regard either to the offence of God, or to the injury of others, like them who ſaid, Our lips are our own; who is Lord over us? But I do not ſee either why this Phraſe ſhould be limited to the Detractor, which equally belongs to all abuſers of the tongue in any other way; or how this particular vice of detraction comes to be inſerted here among things of a quite differing nature. Or, 2. Of an eloquent perſon, who may well be called a Maſter of the Tongue, or of Speech, nothing being more uſual in the Hebrew, than to call a man Maſter of that which he excels in, or hath a full and free power to uſe. And this clauſe is and may be rendred thus, And there is no excellency or profit of the Maſter of the Tongue; i. e. The moſt eloquent perſon, who doth not underſtand, and in due time uſe the Charmer's Art, cannot by all his eloquence afterward hinder the biting of the Serpent, or the miſchievous effects of it: And ſo this agrees with the principal ſcope of the Chapter, which is to ſhew the neceſſity and uſefulneſs of Wiſdom, and the miſchief of Folly.

12. * The words of a wiſe mans mouth are † gracious k: but the lips * of a fool will ſwallow up himſelf l.

* Prov. 10. 32. & 12. 13. † Heb. grace. * Prov. 10. 14. & 18. 7.

k Heb. Grace, as profitable, ſo alſo acceptable to others, procuring him favour with thoſe who hear him. l His diſcourſes are ungracious and offenſive to others, and therefore pernicious to himſelf.

13. The beginning of the words of his mouth is fooliſhneſs: and the end of † his talk is miſchievous madneſs m.

m All his talk from the beginning to the end is fooliſh and miſchievous, and the more he talks, the more doth his folly appear, he proceeds from evil to worſe, and adds wilfulneſs to his weakneſs, and never deſiſts till he hath done miſchief to himſelf or to others.

14. * A fool alſo † is full of words n, a man cannot tell what ſhall be; and * what ſhall be after him, who can tell him o?

* Prov. 15. 2. † Heb. multiplieth words. * Chap. 3. 22. & 6. 12. & 8. 7.

n Either, 1. Talkative. Or, 2. Forward to promiſe and brag what he will do, which is the common practice of fooliſh men: he is a man of words, as we uſe to ſay. o Theſe words contain either, 1. A Mimetical repreſentation of his folly in uſing vain repetitions of the ſame words, ſuch as theſe, a man cannot tell, &c. and who can tell, &c. Or, 2. A confutation of his folly in promiſing or boaſting of things which are wholly out of his power: For what ſhall be, no man can either himſelf foreknow, or learn it from others.

15. The labour of the fooliſh wearieth every one of them p, becauſe he knoweth not how to go to the city q.

p Fools diſcover their folly, as by their words, of which he hath hitherto ſpoken, ſo alſo by their actions, and by their endleſs and fruitleſs endeavours after things which are too high and hard for them. q For he is ignorant of thoſe things which are moſt eaſie and moſt neceſſary for him, as of the way to the great City whither he is going, or obliged by his buſineſs to go, which being a great and beaten road, is known even to children and natural fools.

* Isa. 3. 3, 4, 5, 12. & 5. 11.

16. ¶ * Wo to thee, O land, when thy king is a child r: and thy princes eat s in the morning t.

r Either, 1. In Age. Or, 2. (which is more agreeable to the following clause) In childish Qualities, as Ignorance, Inexperience, Injudiciousness, Rashness, Frowardness, Fickleness, or Wilfulness, and the like: in which sense this word is used, 2 Chron. 13. 7. compared with 1 Kings 14. 21. Isa. 3. 4, 12. 1 Cor. 14. 20. Eph. 4. 14. s Give up themselves to eating and drinking excessively and intemperately, as it is explained in the next verse. t The fittest time for God's service, and for the dispatch of weighty affairs, and for sitting in judgment, Psal. 101. 8. Jer. 21. 12. Which circumstance is added as a plain evidence of men that wholly devote themselves to vanity and luxury; which must needs occasion gross neglect of the great concerns of the Kingdom, the oppression of the people to support such extravagancies, and a woful and general corruption of the people by their example, and otherwise; which makes him say, Wo to that people.

* Prov. 31. 4.

17. Blessed art thou, O land, when thy king is the son of nobles u, and * thy princes eat in due season x, for strength y and not for drunkenness z.

u Not so much by Birth, as even the worst of Kings commonly are, and have been, as by their noble and worthy dispositions, and endowments, and carriages; for such an one is opposed to the Child in the former verse. Sons of nobles are put for noble persons, as the sons of men for men, and the sons of physicians for physicians. x So as may further and not hinder their main business. y To refresh and strengthen their Natures, that they may be fit for action and business. z Not only nor chiefly to please their palates, and indulge themselves in sensuality.

18. ¶ By much slothfulness the building decayeth, and through idleness of the hands the house droppeth thorough a.

a That House which is neglected by its owner, and not repaired, must needs come to ruine. Whereby he intimates, that the sloth and carelesness of Princes in the management of publick affairs, which is an usual attendant upon that Luxury, of which he hath now discoursed, is most destructive both to themselves, and to their people.

* Psal. 104. 15. † Heb. maketh glad the life.

19. ¶ A feast is made for laughter, and * Wine † maketh merry b: but money answereth all things c.

b The design and effect of feasting and drinking Wine, is, that Men may exhilarate their Minds with the society of their Friends, and with the use of the Creatures. c It procures not only Meat and Drink for Feasting, but for all other things; as the Heavens are said to answer the Earth, when they give it those showers which it desires and needs to make it fruitful, Hos. 2. 21. And this clause seems to be added as an aggravation of the sin and folly of Luxury, because Princes do thereby waste that Mony and Treasure which is so highly necessary for the support and preservation of themselves, and of their Kingdoms, and are forced to squeeze Money out of their People by oppressive and dishonourable and dangerous practices, that they may have more to spend in riotous courses.

* Exod. 22. 28. ‖ Or, conscience.

20. ¶ * Curse not the king d, no not in thy ‖ thought e, and curse not the rich f in thy bed-chamber g: for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter h.

d Having spoken of the miscarriages of Kings, he now gives a caution to their Subjects, that they should not thence take occasion to speak irreverently or contemptuously of them, or wish or design any evil against their Persons or Government: For though vices may be condemned, wheresoever they are, yet both Reverence and Obedience are due to Magistrates, as they are God's Vicegerents and Ordinances, notwithstanding their Vices, as is manifest from Rom. 13. 1, &c. 1 Pet. 2. 13, &c. e In the most secret manner, by giving way to such thoughts or affections; for these will very probably break forth into such words and practices. f The Princes or Governours under the King, who are commonly rich: or any other rich men, who can oppress or punish thee by their Wealth, as well as Kings can do it by their Power. g Where thy Wife or Servant may hear thee, and afterwards through folly or passion discover it to thy ruine. h The King will hear of it by unknown and unsuspected hands, as if a Bird had chanced to be at the window when thou didst speak the words, and did hear them, and carry the report of it unto the King. It is a proverbial expression, as when we say, Hedges have Ears, and the Walls will speak. Hence Kings are said to have long Ears.

CHAP. XI.

† Heb. upon the face of the waters. * Deut. 15. 10. Prov. 19. 17. Matt. 10. 42.

1. CAst thy bread † upon the waters a; for thou shalt find it b after * many days c.

a Solomon having discovered divers vanities, and amongst others the vanity of heaping up Riches, he now teacheth us that it is our Interest as well as Duty, not so much to lay them up, as to lay them out in pious and charitable uses; and having taught us the true and best use of worldly things, for our present comfort and benefit, which is to enjoy them with a chearful and contented Mind, he now directs us to the best improvement of them, for our future and greater advantage; and having acquainted us with our duty towards our Superiours, he now directs us in our carriage towards our Inferiours, and especially to such of them as are poor. The sense of these words is either 1. Cast thy seed (which is here called Bread, as it is also Job 28. 5. Isa. 28. 28. and elsewhere) beside (for so the Hebrew particle al, is oft used) the waters, i. e. either by the Rivers side, or in moist and watery grounds, which usually are very fruitful. Or, 2. Cast (freely and liberally bestow) thy bread (i. e. thy Money or Provisions, which are oft signified by the name of bread. By saying thy bread, he cautions us that we give away only that which is our own, and not that which is another's; as they do who give either what they get from others by fraud or power, or what they owe to others, and are unable to pay, and so exercise Charity to the hindrance of Justice, or of the payment of their just debts,) upon the waters, i. e. upon those poor Creatures, upon whom, by reason of their unthankfulness or inability to make any returns to thee, it may seem to be as utterly lost as the seed which a man casts into the Sea or River. This sense agrees much better, 1. With the words; for he doth not barely mention the waters, (for then the particle, al, might have been translated beside) but the face, i. e. the surface or top, of the waters, in which, and such like cases, al, constantly signifies upon. 2. With the design and scope of the place, which is to perswade men to be liberal and charitable, notwithstanding the discouragements which they meet with in so doing, of which see the next clause, and the next verse. b It shall not be lost, as covetous men, or thine own corrupt heart, may suggest, but it shall certainly be restored unto thee, either by God or by Men, and that with great Honour and Advantage. This is added to prevent an objection, and to quicken us to the duty enjoined. c Not immediately, but in due time, and when you least expect it. So you must be content to wait for it with Patience, as the Husbandman doth for the fruits of the Earth.

* Psal. 112. 9. Luk. 6. 30.

2. * Give a portion f to seven, and also to eight g, for thou knowest not what evil shall be upon the earth h.

f A part of thy Estate or Provisions. He alludes to the ancient custom, whereby the Master of the Feast did distribute several parts to each Guest, and withal sent portions to the poor: of which custom see 2 Sam. 6. 19. Neh. 8. 10, 12. Esth. 9. 22. g To as many as thou art able; a certain number for an uncertain, as Mic. 5. 5. and oft elsewhere. h Great calamities may come, whereby thou maist be brought to poverty, and so both utterly lose that blessed opportunity of doing good, which now thou hast in thine hands, whereby thou maist gain unspeakable Honour, and Comfort, and Advantage to thy self, and moreover need the Charity of others, which thou maist comfortably expect, either from Men, or at least from the powerful Providence of God, disposing the hearts of men to pity and help thee, if thou hast been kind and merciful to others; as on the contrary they can expect no Mercy from God or Men, who have shewed no Mercy to others. Thus he not only answers but retorts the Argument by which the covetous man excuseth his uncharitableness, because he must lay up against a rainy day.

3. If the clouds be full of rain, they empty themselves upon the earth i: and if the tree fall toward the south, or toward the north; in the place where the tree falleth there it shall be k.

i Learn, O man, the practice of liberality from the very lifeless Creatures, from the Clouds; which when they are filled with water, do not hoard it up, or keep it to themselves, but plentifully pour it forth for the refreshment both of the fruitful field and of the barren wilderness. k These words contain either 1. An Argument to perswade Men to Charity, because they must shortly fall or die, and then all opportunity of being charitable will be lost, and they must expect certainly and eternally to reap whatsoever they have sown, whether it hath been Mercy or Unmercifulness. Or rather, 2. An Answer to a common Objection against it, because we are not certain whether the person who desires our Charity doth really need it, or be worthy of it. To this he answers, As a Tree when it falls, either by the violence of the wind, or being cut down by its owner's order, it is not considerable whether it falls Southward or Northward, for there it lies ready for the Master's use; so thy Charity, though it may possibly be misapplied by thee, or abused by the Receiver, yet being conscientiously given by thee, it shall assuredly return to thee, and thou shalt reap the fruit of it.

4. He that observeth the wind, shall not sow, and he that regardeth the clouds, shall not reap l.

l He who neglects or delays the necessary works of sowing and reaping, because the weather is not exactly suitable to his desires, may possibly lose his Harvest. Whereby he intimates what is easily understood out of the foregoing verses, that Men will never do good here, which is expressed by sowing, Psal. 112. 9. 2 Cor. 9. 6. and consequently not receive good hereafter, which is called reaping, Gal. 6. 7, 8. if they be discouraged and hindred from it by every doubt or difficulty, such as covetous worldlings object to themselves, that others either do not want their Charity, or will abuse it, that they may possibly need it hereafter.

‖ Or, of the wind, Joh. 3. 8. * Psal. 139. 14, 15.

5. As thou knowest not what is the way ‖ of the spirit m, nor * how the bones n do grow in the womb o of her that is with child; even so thou knowest not the works of God p who maketh all.

m Of the Spirit or Soul of Man, how it first comes into the Body of the child in the Womb, whether from God by Creation, or from the Parents by Propagation; nor how it is united with, and so fixed in the Body that it cannot get out of it when it would; nor how and whether it goes out of the Body; all which things are great mysteries. Others translate it, of the wind, whence it cometh, and whither it goeth, as is observed Joh. 3. 8. or how violently it will blow, or how long it will last. But the former Translation seems to agree better with the following clause. n i.e. The whole Body, which is elsewhere signified by the Bones, as Psal. 34. 20. & 35. 10. because they are a principal part, and the very foundation and support of the Body. o How it comes to pass that one and the same small quantity of seed should diversifie it self into skin, and flesh, and sinews, and veins, and bones, and intrals, or how it receiveth nourishment and growth. p What God is doing and will do with thee or others, the Counsels and Methods of God's Providence in the future time of thy Life, what evil God will send upon the Earth, v. 2. or what weather he will send, of which v. 4. how long or how little a while God will continue thy Life or Estate, and how soon God will call thee to an account. These and many other future events thou canst not foresee, and therefore thy Wisdom and Duty is to cast off all distracting cares, and distrustful fears about them, and chearfully to commit thy self, and all thy affairs, into the Hand of God in well-doing.

6. In the morning q sow thy seed r, and in the evening q with-hold not thine hand s: for thou knowest not whether † shall prosper t, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good u.

q Early and late, in all seasons and occasions, do it speedily and continually, be not weary of it. r Do all good works, and especially that of Alms-giving, as swing is understood, 2 Cor. 9. 6. Gal. 6. 7. s From working or giving. t Which shall prosper most, as the next clause explains it; the positive Degree being put for the comparative, or the superlative, which is not unusual in the Hebrew Text. Which shall best answer thine end, or do most good to others, or which shall tend most to the comfort of thy great and last account: for thy Morning-Alms may possibly be given to an unworthy person, or to one who did not need it, and will abuse it, and thy Evening-Alms may fall upon a person of eminent worth, yea, upon an Angel in humane shape, which is remembred as a motive to Hospitality. Heb. 13. 2. or upon one in extream necessity, who might possibly have perished both in Soul and Body, if thou hadst not comforted and relieved him: Or, one time thou mayest give with more sincere intention, and with more tender compassion than another time, and so one will be more right and more acceptable to God than the other. u Equally successful to the receiver, or to the giver.

7. ¶ Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing is it for the eyes to behold the sun x.

x It cannot be denied that this present Life (which is called light, Job 3. 20. & 33. 30. Psal. 56. 13. and which is expressed Synecdochically, by seeing the Sun, Eccl. 6. 5. & 7. 11.) is in it self a great blessing, and very desirable; but it is not perpetual nor satisfactory, which is here implied and expressed in the next verse.

8. But if a man live many years y, and rejoyce in them all z; yet let him remember a the days of darkness b, for they shall be many c. All that cometh d is vanity.

y Which is a priviledge granted but to few persons comparatively. z And suppose he enjoy all the comforts, and escape all the imbitterments of humane Life, all his days: which also is a great rarity. a It is his duty and interest seriously to consider. b Of death, or of the state of the dead, which is oft expressed by darkness, as Job 10. 21. Psal. 88. 12, &c. and here is opposed to the foregoing Light. c (i. e.) Far more than the days of this short Life, especially if to the time of lying in the Grave be added that greater and utter darkness which is reserved for impenitent sinners, and which is everlasting, Mat. 22. 13. & 25. 30. 2 Pet. 2. 17. Jud. v. 13. And this is added for the caution of mankind, that they may not rejoice excessively in, nor content themselves with the happiness of the present Life, but may seek for something more durable, and more satisfactory. d All things which befal any man belonging only to this Life, whether they be comfortable or vexatious, they are but vain and inconsiderable, because they are short and transitory.

9. ¶ Rejoice e, O young man f, in thy youth, and let thy heart chear thee g in the days of thy youth; and walk in the ways of thy heart, and in the sight of thine eyes h: but know thou i, that for all these things k, God will bring thee into judgment l.

e This verse is to be understood either 1. As a serious Advice to this purpose, seeing Life is short and transitory, improve it to the best advantage, take comfort in it whilest you may, only do it with moderation, and the fear of God. Or rather, 2. As an Ironical concession, such as are usual both in Scripture, as 1 Kin. 18. 27. & 22. 15. Ezek. 28. 3, 4. Matt. 26. 45. and in other Authors. For this agrees much better with the context, and with the Expressions here used. And so the sense is, I foresee what evil use some men will make of what I have now said; Things being thus, Let us eat and drink, for to morrow we shall die, as they also reasoned, 1 Cor. 15. 32. f He speaks to young men particularly, because they have both the greatest ability, and the strongest Inclinations to pursue sensual pleasures, and are most impatient either of Restraint or Admonition. g Indulge thy frolick and jolly humour, and take thy fill of delights. h Whatsoever thine Eye or Heart lusteth after, deny it not to them; as this Phrase is taken, Num. 15. 39. nor is it ever used in a good sense. Compare Job 31. 7. Psal. 81. 12. Jer. 18. 12. 2 Pet. 2. 14. 1 Joh. 2. 16. i But in the midst of thy feastings and jollity it will become thee, if thou art a reasonable Creature, to consider thy reckoning, and whether thou dost not purchase thy Gold too dear. k For all thy follies and sinful Lusts, which thou sleightest as tricks of youth. l Will force thee to appear before his Judgment-seat, to give a serious account of all thy youthful and exorbitant courses, and to receive that sentence which thy own Conscience will then say thou dost justly deserve. And if thou likest thy sensuality upon these terms, much good may it do thee. I do not envy thee, nor desire to partake of thy delicates.

‖ Or, anger.

10. Therefore remove ‖ sorrow m from thy heart, and put away evil n from thy flesh o; for childhood and youth are vanity p.

m i.e. Sensual and disorderly Lusts, which he elegantly and emphatically calls sorrow, with respect to the foregoing words, to intimate, that although such practices do at present gratifie and delight mens Senses and vain Minds, yet they will shortly and certainly bring a man to intolerable and eternal sorrows, which it is thy Wisdom to prevent. m Or, as it is rendred in the margent, and by divers others, anger; a passion to which men are most prone in the heat of youth. Whereby he may understand either anger against him for this sharp admonition; or rather against God, who hath laid such severe restraints upon them, and threatens such punishments to them for following their own natural Inclinations. So the sense is, do not quarrel with thy Judge, but submit and make thy Peace with him by declaring War against all thy Sins. n All evil Concupiscences or Lusts, which though now they seem good to thee, will another day appear to be very evil and bitter things. o From thy bodily members. Which he mentions not exclusively, as if he would allow them their spiritual evils, but emphatically, because young men, to whom he is here speaking, are most given to fleshly or bodily Lusts. p i.e. Most vain, either 1. In their temper and dispositions. Young men are frothy, and foolish, and inconsiderate, whereby they run into manifold dangers, and therefore they shall do well to hearken to the Counsels of those who by their greater Wisdom and Experience, are more capable Judges of these matters. Or, 2. In their condition. The time of Youth is vanishing and transitory, and Old-age and Death will speedily come, against which every man in his wits will take care to lay in solid provisions and comforts.

CHAP. XII.

* Prov. 22. 6‖ * See 2 Sam. 19. 35.

1. * Remember a now thy Creator b in the days of thy youth c, while the evil days d come not, nor the years draw nigh * when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them e.

a To wit, practically, or so as to fear, and love, and faithfully serve and worship him, which when men do not, they are said to forget God, Psal. 9. 17. & 106. 21. and in many other places. b The first Author, and continual Preserver of thy Life and Being, and of all the perfections and enjoyments which accompany it, to whom thou hast the highest and strongest obligations to do so, and upon whom thou hast a constant and necessary dependance, and therefore to forget him is most unnatural, and inhumane, and disingenuous. c For then thou art most able to do it, and thou owest the best of thy Time and Strength to God; then thou hast opportunity to do it; and thou maist not live till Old-age: then it will be most acceptable to God, and most comfortable to thy self, as the best evidence of thy sincerity, and the best provision for Old-age and Death; and then it is most necessary for the conquering those impetuous Lusts and Passions which drown so many Thousands of young Men in perdition, both in this Life, and in that to come. d The time of Old-age, which is evil, i.e. burdensome, and calamitous in it self, and far more grievous and terrible when it is loaded with the ſad remembrance of a man's youthful follies and luſts, and with the dreadful proſpect of approaching death and judgment, which makes him ſee that he cannot live, and yet dare not die, and with the conſideration and experience of the hardneſs of his heart, which in that age is rarely brought to true repentance, and ſo generally expires either in vain preſumption, or in helliſh deſperation. e My life is now bitter and burdenſom to me, and worſe than death: which is frequently the condition of old age.

2. Whilſt the ſun, or the light, or the moon, or the ſtars be not darkned f, nor the clouds return after the rain g:

f Heb. While the Sun, and the light, and the Moon, &c. That clauſe, and the light, ſeems to be added to ſignifie that he ſpeaks of the darkning of the Sun, and Moon, and Stars, not in themſelves, or in their own bodies, but only in reſpect of that light which they afford to men. And therefore the ſame clauſe which is expreſſed after the Sun, is to be underſtood after the Moon and Stars, as is very uſual in Scripture in like caſes. And thoſe expreſſions are to be underſtood either, 1. Literally, of the dim-ſightedneſs of old men, by reaſon whereof the light of the Sun, &c. ſeems dark to them. Which ſeems not to agree with the Context, partly becauſe the dimneſs of their ſight is expreſſed in the next verſe, and partly becauſe both this and the following verſes are wholly Allegorical. Or rather, 2. Figuratively, and that either, 1. Of the outward parts of the body, and eſpecially of the face, the beauty of the countenance, the lightſom and pleaſant complexion of the cheeks, the livelineſs of the eyes, which are compared to the Sun, and Moon, and Stars, and which are obſcured in old age, as the Chaldee Paraphraſt underſtands it. Or, 2. Of the inward parts of the mind, the Underſtanding, Phancy, Memory, which may not unfitly be reſembled to the Sun, and Moon, and Stars, and all which are ſenſibly decayed in moſt old men. For it may ſeem improbable, that Solomon in his deſcription of the infirmities of old age, ſhould omit the decays of the moſt noble part of Man, which are commonly incident to old age. And yet, with ſubmiſſion to thoſe worthy perſons who think otherwiſe, it ſeems not neceſſary that he ſhould here ſpeak of thoſe inward decays, partly becauſe they are not ſo general in old men as the decays of the body are; partly becauſe he here directeth his Speech to ſenſual men, who are more affected with corporal than with intellectual maladies; and partly becauſe both the foregoing and following paſſages concern the ſtate of mens bodies and their outward condition. Or rather, 3. Of external things, and of the great change of their joy and proſperity, which they had in their youthful time, into ſorrow, and manifold calamities, which are uſually the companions of old age: For this interpretation ſeems beſt to agree both with the foregoing verſe, in which he deſcribes the miſeries of old age, and with the following clauſe, which is added to explain and determine thoſe otherwiſe ambiguous expreſſions; and with the Scripture uſe of this Phraſe, which is the beſt key for the underſtanding of Scripture; for a ſtate of comfort and happineſs is oft deſcribed by the light of the Sun, &c. as Judg. 5. 31. 2 Sam. 23. 4. Iſa. 30. 26. & 60. 20. and a time and ſtate of great trouble is ſet forth by the darkning of the light of the Sun, &c. as Iſa. 13. 9, &c. & 24. 23. Joel 2. 10. & 3. 15. Mat. 24. 29. and oft elſewhere. g This Phraſe notes a perpetual ſucceſſion, and reciprocation of rain, and Clouds bringing rain, and then rain and Clouds again, and ſo without end. Whereby he expreſſeth either, 1. The rheums or defluxions which do abundantly and inceſſantly flow in and from old men, for want of natural heat and ſtrength to prevent or remove them. Or rather, 2. The continual viciſſitude of infirmities, diſeaſes, and griefs, in old men, one deep calling upon another, and one affliction beginning at the end of another; whereas in young men after rain the Clouds are diſperſed, and fair weather ſucceeds.

3. In the day when the keepers of the houſe h ſhall tremble, and the ſtrong men i ſhall bow themſelves, and ‖ the grinders k ceaſe l, becauſe they are few m, and thoſe that look out of the windows n be darkned.

h (i. e.) Of the body, which is oft and fitly compared to an houſe, as Job 4. 19. Pſal. 119. 54. 2 Cor. 5. 1. whoſe keepers here are either, 1. The ribs and bones into which they are faſtned, which are the Guardians of the inward and vital parts, which alſo are much weakned and ſhaken by old age. Or rather, 2. The hands and arms, which are man's beſt inſtruments to defend his body from the aſſaults of men or beaſts, and which in a ſpecial manner are ſubject to this trembling, by paralytical or other like diſtempers, that are moſt incident to old men. i Either the back, or the thighs and legs, in which the main ſtrength of the body doth conſiſt, which in old men are very feeble, and unable both for the ſupport of the body, and for motion. k The teeth, thoſe eſpecially which are commonly ſo called, becauſe they grind the meat which we eat. l To wit, to perform their office. m Heb. becauſe they are diminiſhed, either, 1. In ſtrength. Or, 2. In number; being here one, and there another, and not united together, and one directly againſt another, and conſequently unfit for their work. n The eyes. By windows he underſtands either, 1. The holes in which the eyes are fixed, Zech. 14. 12. Or, 2. The eye-lids, which, like windows, are either opened or ſhut. Or, 3. Thoſe humours and coats of the eyes, noted by Anatomiſts, which are the chief inſtruments by which the eye ſees.

4. And the doors ſhall be ſhut in the ſtreets o, when the ſound of the grinding is low p, and he ſhall riſe up q at the voice of the bird r, and all the daughters of muſick s ſhall be brought low t.

o Or, towards the ſtreets: which lead into the ſtreets. This is underſtood either, 1. Literally; becauſe men, when they are very old, keep much at home, and have neither ſtrength nor inclination to go abroad. Or rather, 2. Allegorically, as all the other clauſes are underſtood. And ſo the doors are either, 1. The outward ſenſes, which, as doors, let in outward objects to the Soul. Or rather, 2. The mouth, or the two lips, here expreſſed by a word of the dual number, which are oft called a door, both in Scripture, as Pſal. 141. 3. Mic. 7. 5. and in other Authors, which, like a door, open or ſhut the way which leads into the ſtreets or common paſſages of the body, ſuch as the gullet, and ſtomach, and all the bowels, as alſo the wind-pipe, and lungs; which alſo are principal inſtruments both of ſpeaking and eating. And theſe are ſaid to be ſhut, not ſimply and abſolutely, as if they did never eat, or drink, or ſpeak; but comparatively, becauſe men in extream old age grow dull and liſtleſs, having little or no appetite to eat, and are very much indiſpoſed for diſcourſe, and ſpeak but ſeldom. p Or, becauſe the ſound, &c. So this may be added, not as a new ſymptom of old age, but only as the reaſon of the foregoing ſymptom. The ſenſe is, When, or becauſe the teeth, called the grinders, v. 3. are looſe and few, whereby both his ſpeech is low, and the noiſe which he makes in eating is but ſmall. And this is one great cauſe of his indiſpoſedneſs both to eating and to ſpeaking. Some underſtand this of concoction, which after a ſort doth grind the meat in the ſtomach, and in the other parts appointed by God for that work. But that is tranſacted inwardly, and without all noiſe or ſound. q To wit, from his bed, being weary with lying, and unable to get ſleep. r Either, 1. Upon the ſmalleſt noiſe. Which doth not conſiſt with that deafneſs incident to old men, and deſcribed in the next words. Or rather, 2. As ſoon as the birds begin to chirp, which is early in the morning, whereas children and young men, can lie and ſleep long in the morning. s All thoſe ſenſes or parts of the body, which are employed in Muſick and Song, as well thoſe which make it, as the parts of and within the mouth, as thoſe which receive it, to wit, the ears. t Shall be caſt down from their former excellency, they are become incapable either of making muſick, or of delighting in it.

5. Alſo when they ſhall be afraid u of that which is high x, and fears ſhall be in the way y, and the almond-tree ſhall flouriſh z, and the graſhopper ſhall be a burden a, and deſire b ſhall fail: becauſe man goeth c to his long home d, and the mourners e go about the ſtreets:

u The paſſion of Fear is obſerved to be moſt incident to old men, of which divers reaſons may be given. x Either, 1. Of high things, leſt they ſhould fall upon them. Or rather, 2. Of high places, of going up hills or ſtairs, which is very irkſom to them, becauſe of their weakneſs, and wearineſs, and giddineſs, and danger, or dread of falling. And this clauſe, together with the next, may be rendred thus, and that agreeably to the Hebrew Text, Alſo they ſhall be afraid and terrified (two words expreſſing the ſame thing, which is very frequent in the Hebrew) of that which is high in the way. When they walk abroad they will dread to go up any high or ſteep places. y Leſt as they are walking, they ſhould ſtumble, or fall, or be thruſt down, or ſome infirmity or miſchief ſhould befal them. z Their heads ſhall be as full of gray hairs, as the Almond-tree is of white flowers. Such Metaphors are not unuſual in other Authors. Hence Sophocles calls a gray or hoary head flowry, and again, covered with white flowers. a If it doth accidentally hop up and reſt upon them. They cannot endure the leaſt burden, being indeed a burden to themſelves. But the words may be, and are by others rendred, the locuſt (as the ancient Interpreters, and many others render it; or, as ours, and ſome others, the graſhopper, which comes to the ſame thing; for theſe two ſorts of inſects are much of the ſame nature and ſhape,) ſhall be a burden to it ſelf. And by the locuſt or graſhopper may be underſtood either, 1. The old man himſelf, who bears ſome reſemblance to it, in ſhape, by reaſon of the bones ſticking out, in the conſtitution of the body, which is dry and withering, and in the legs and arms which are ſlender, the fleſh being conſumed. Or, 2. The back, which fitly follows after the head upon which the Almond-tree flouriſhed, in which the ſtrength of the body lay, and which formerly was able to bear great burdens, but now, through its weakneſs and crookedneſs, is a burden too heavy for it ſelf. And ſome of the Jewiſh and other Interpreters underſtand this word, which others render locuſt or graſhopper, to be ſome part of the body, either the Back-bone, or the head of the Thigh-bone, or the Ankle-bone, any of which may well be said to be heavy or burdensom to it self, when it moves slowly and listlesly, and not without difficulty and trouble. b To wit, of Meats, and Drinks, and Musick, and other carnal Delights, which are vehemently desired by men in the heat of their Youth, but are unsavoury to old men; of which see an Instance, 2 Sam. 19. 35. It is true, the former Expressions are metaphorical, but the two next following are proper, and to be understood literally, and so may this clause also. c Is travelling towards it, and every day nearer to it than other. d From this place of his pilgrimage into the Grave, from whence he must never return into this world, and into the state and place of the future Life, which is unchangeable and everlasting. e Either such as were hired to that end, of whom see on Jer. 9. 17. Matt. 9. 23. & 11. 17. or true Mourners, near Relations, and dear Friends, accompany the dead Corps through the streets to the Grave.

6. Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern f.

f This verse is to be understood either 1. Literally, of the ornaments of Life, such as Chains, and Jewels, and vessels of Gold and Silver, and of the instruments by which the necessary Provisions and supports of Life are conveyed to us, such as fountains of water, and Pitchers, &c. which may be said to be loosed or broken, because they are neglected as useless things to the dead man. Or rather, 2. Allegorically, of those inward parts of Man's Body which are the chief Instruments of Life, or Sense and Motion, and of the vital or animal operations, whether such from which they first proceed, or in which they are first elaborated and contained, which may fitly be compared to a bowl, and fountain, or cistern; or such by which they are derived or conveyed to the several parts of the body, which are very conveniently designed by the cord, and pitcher, and wheel; all which are truly said to be loosed or broken, i. e. dissolved, or become useless and insufficient for the performance of their several functions. This in the general. But it seems most probable that Solomon, who was so profound a Philosopher, and doubtless had an accurate knowledge of all the parts of man's Body, and their several offices and operations, doth by these several Expressions describe so many particular parts and offices. By the silver cord it is generally and most probably conceived, that he understands the pith or marrow of the back-bone, which comes from the brain, and thence goeth down to the very lowest end of the Back-bone, together with the Nerves and Sinews, which, as Anatomists observe, are nothing else but the production and continuation of the marrow. And this is most aptly compared to a cord, both for its figure, which is very long and round, and for its use, which is to draw and move the parts of the Body, and to silver, both for its excellency and colour, which is white and bright, even in a dead, and much more in a living Body. And this may properly be said to be loosed, or dissolved, or broken, or removed, as others render the word, the sense of all these translations being the same, because it is relaxed, or obstructed, or otherwise disenabled for its proper service. And answerably hereunto by the golden bowl he understands the Membranes of the Brain, and especially that innermost Membrane which is called by Anatomists, the pious mother, because it doth with a motherly care defend the Brain, and assist and govern its actions, which insinuates it self into all the parts of the Brain, following it in its various windings and turnings, keeping each parcel of it in its proper place, and distinguishing and dividing one part from another, to prevent disorder and mischief. This is not unfitly called a bowl, partly because it is round, and partly because it receives and contains in it all the substance of the Brain; and a golden bowl, partly for its great preciousness and usefulness; partly for its ductility, being drawn out into a great thinness or fineness, as Gold is capable of being drawn forth into thinner plates than other metals can bear; and partly for its colour, which is somewhat yellow, and comes nearer to that of Gold than any other part of the Body doth. And this is well said to be broken, as for the reasons above noted, so because upon the approach of Death it is commonly shrivel'd up, and many times broken. And as these two former clauses concern the Brain, and the animal Powers, so the two following clauses of this verse respect the Spring and seat of the vital Powers and Operations, and of the blood, the great instrument thereof, which hath been commonly conceived, and consequently is here understood, to be the Liver, but more truly and certainly is the Heart, which is now known and confessed to be the source of the blood. And so Solomon here describes the chief Organs or Vessels appointed for the Production, and Distribution, and Circulation of the Blood in Man's Body. For although the Doctrine of the Circulation of the Blood hath lien hid and unknown for very many Generations together, and therefore the honour of the invention of it is justly ascribed to a famous Physician of our Country, yet it is not improbably supposed by some, that it was well known to Solomon, although after his time it was lost, as doubtless many other things were, which he wrote concerning Plants, and other things. According to this notion the fountain here is the right Ventricle of the heart, which is now acknowledged to be the spring of Life, and of the vital Spirits, and the pitcher is the veins which convey the blood from it to other parts, and especially that arterious Vein, as Anatomists call it, by which it is transmitted to the Lungs, and thence to the left Ventricle of the Heart, where it is better elaborated, and then by the Pulse thrust out into the great Artery, called Arteria aorta, and by its branches dispersed into all the parts of the Body, to give them Life and Vigor, which being done, the residue of the Blood is carried back by the Veins into the right Ventricle of the Heart, whence it is disposed, as hath been now mentioned, and so runs in a perpetual round, unless it be obstructed by some disorder in the Body. And the cistern is the left Ventricle of the Heart, and the wheel seems to be that great Artery which is joined to it, which is very fitly so called, because it is the first and great instrument of this Rotation or Circulation of the Blood, which by its Pulse is forcibly thrust out into all the parts of the Body, whence, by various windings and turnings, it returns thither again, and so is sent again upon the same journey, which in like manner it performs again and again, as long as Life and Health continue; and when any of these parts are disenabled for the discharge of their Offices, then are they fitly said to be broken. The pitcher may be said to be broken at the fountain, when the veins do not return the blood to the Heart, but suffer it to stand still and cool within them, whence comes that coldness of the outward parts, which is a near forerunner of Death. And the wheel may be said to be broken at the cistern, when the great Arteries do not perform their Office of conveying the Blood into the left Ventricle of the Heart, and of thrusting it out thence into the lesser Arteries, whence comes that ceasing of the pulse, which is a certain sign of approaching Death.

m This sentence wherewith he began this Book he here repeateth in the end of it, partly as that which he had proved in all the foregoing discourse, and partly as that which naturally and necessarily followed from both the branches of the assertion now laid down, v. 7.

9. And ‖ moreover, because the preacher was wise n, he still taught the people knowledge o; yea, he gave good heed p, and sought out q, and * set in order r many proverbs s.

n Which he affirmeth not out of vain ostentation, but partly to procure the more credit and acceptance to his Doctrine and Counsel here delivered; and partly to declare his Repentance for his former follies, and God's great Mercy in restoring his Wisdom to him. o As God gave him this Wisdom, that he might be a teacher of others, so he used it to that end. Therefore despise not his Counsel. p He did not rashly and foolishly utter whatsoever came into his mind, or mouth, but seriously pondered both his matter and words. q Both by the exercise of his own mind, and by reading and learning from others. r Or, directed or fitted. He selected such as were most useful. s Excellent and wise sayings, which are oft called Proverbs, as was noted before upon the Book of Proverbs.

11. The words of the wise z are as goads, and as nails a fastened b by the masters of assemblies c, which are given from one shepherd d.

z Not of secularly or politickly wise men, but of the spiritually wise and holy men of God; of which, and not of the former, this whole context treats. a Piercing into mens dull Minds, and hard Hearts, and quickening and provoking them to the practice of all their duties. b Which do not only amuse and startle men for the present, as the wise and grave Counsels of moral Philosophers frequently do, but make powerful and abiding impressions in them; which is the peculiar effect of God's Word. c By the teachers of God's Church and People, whether whether Prophets or others, appointed by God for that work. d From God, or from Jesus Christ, the great Shepherd and Teacher of the Church in all Ages, by whose Spirit the ancient Prophets, as well as other succeeding Teachers were inspired and taught, Jer. 3. 15. 1 Pet. 1. 11. & 2 Pet. 1. 21. And this clause seems to be added partly as the reason of that admirable Harmony and Agreement which is amongst all the men of God in all ages and places, because they are all taught by one Master, and guided by the same Hand; and partly to oblige us to the greater Attention and Reverence to all their Doctrines and Counsels, which we are to receive as the word of God, and not of Men only, as is said 1 Thes. 2. 13.

12. And further, by these e, my son, be admonished f: of making many books there is no end g, and much ‖ study h is a weariness to the flesh i.

e By these Wise Men, and their Words or Writings, of which he spake in the foregoing verse. f Take your Instructions from them, for their words are right and true, as he said v. 10. whereas the words of other men are false, or at best doubtful. g I could easily write many Books and large Volumes upon these matters, but that were an endless and needless work; seeing things necessary to be known and done, lie in a little compass, as he informs us in the next verse. h The reading of many Books written by learned Philosophers about these things; which it is more than probable were then extant, though since lost, which also Solomon, being so curious and inquisitive a person, would in all likelihood procure and peruse as far as he had opportunity. i It wasteth a man's strength and Spirits, and yet (which is implied) doth not satisfie the Mind, nor sufficiently recompence the trouble and inconvenience to which man is exposed by it.

13. ¶ ‖ Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter k, * Fear God l, and keep his commandments m: for this is the whole duty n of man.

‖ Or, the end of the matter, even all that hath been heard.

* Deut. 6. 2. & 10. 12.

k The summ and substance of all that hath been said or written by wise men, so far as it is necessary for us to know. l Which is Synecdochically put here, as it is very frequently in Scripture, for all the inward Worship of God, Reverence, and Love, and Trust, and a Devotedness of Heart to serve and please God, and a Lothness to offend him, and an Aptness to tremble at his Word and Judgments. m This is fitly added as a necessary effect and certain Evidence of the Fear of God. Make Conscience of practising whatsoever God requires, how costly, or troublesom, or dangerous, soever it be. n In the Hebrew it is only, the whole: it is his whole work and business, his whole Perfection and Happiness, it is the summ of what he need either know, or do, or enjoy.

14. For * God shall bring every work into judgment o, with every secret thing p, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.

* Rom. 2. 16. & 14. 10. 1 Cor. 4. 5. 2 Cor. 5. 10.

o This is added either, 1. As a reason of what he last said, this is the whole of man, because all men must give an account to God of all their works, and this alone will enable them to do that with joy, and not with grief: Or, 2. As another Argument to press the foregoing Exhortation, Fear God, and keep his commandments, for you must be called to judgment about it; &c. p Not only outward and visible actions, but even inward and secret thoughts.

CANTICLES.

CANTICLES.

Before I come to the Explication of this Book, some things must be premised concerning it. 1. That it was of Divine Inspiration is so clear and certain, that as the Jewish Writers note, none ever questioned it, although some doubted of some other of Solomon's Writings. And the same Arguments which prove the Divinity of other Books, are found here, such as the quality of the Pen-man, who was confessedly a man inspired by God; the Excellency and Usefulness of the Matter; the sacred and sublime Majesty of the stile; and the singular efficacy of it upon the Hearts of sober and serious Persons, who read it with due preparation; and those other Characters which are commonly known, and therefore it is needless here to enumerate. 2. The form of this Book is dramatical, wherein several parts or parcels of it are uttered by, or in the Name of several persons, which are chiefly Four, the Bridegroom and the Bride, and the Friends or Companions of the one, and of the other. Nor is it declared what or when each of them speak, but that is secretly couched, and is left to the observation of the prudent Reader, as is usual in Writings of this Nature. 3. The design of the Book in general is to describe the passionate Loves and happy Marriage of two persons, and their mutual satisfaction therein, and the blessed Fruits and Effects thereof. But then it is not to be understood carnally concerning Solomon and Pharaoh's Daughter, as some have fansied, although the occasion of this Love and Marriage may be taken from that, or rather he makes an alluſion to that, but spiritually concerning God, or Christ, and his Church and People. This is sufficiently evident from the descriptions of this Bridegroom and Bride, which are such as could not with any decency be used or meant concerning Solomon and Pharaoh's Daughter, as when he is brought in like a Country Shepherd, Ch. 1. 7. and is called his Brides Brother, Ch. 5. 2. and when he gives such high and excessive Commendations to himself, as we shall see, and when she is made the keeper of Vineyards and of Sheep, Ch. 1. 6, 8. and is said to be smitten and abused by the Watchmen, Ch. 5. 7. and to be terrible as an Army, Ch. 6. 4. and to be like Pharaoh's Horses, and to have an Head like Carmel, a Nose like a Tower, Eyes like Fish-pools, Teeth like a flock of Sheep, &c. Ch. 7. 4, 5. And there are many such like Expressions and Descriptions, which being applied to them are absurd and monstrous. Hence it follows that this Book is to be understood mystically or Allegorically concerning that spiritual Love and Marriage which is between God or Christ, and his Church, or every believing Soul. And this will be more than probable to any man who shall consider the following particulars. 1. That the Scriptures both of the Old and New Testament are full of mystical and Allegorical passages; which being known and confessed, it is needless to prove. 2. That the Doctrine of Christ, or the Messias, and of his being the Head, and Husband, and Saviour of God's Church or People, was well known, at least to the Prophets, and the wise and pious Israelites, in the time of the Old Testament; whereof we have many manifest and unquestionable evidences, not only in the New Testament, but in the Writings of Moses, in the Books of Psalms and Proverbs, and in the Prophets, as hath been noted in part, and will, God assisting, be further observed in the proper places. 3. That God compares himself to a Bridegroom, and his Church to a Bride, Isa. 62. 5. and calls, and owns himself the Husband of his People, Isa. 54. 5. Hos. 2. 16, 19, 20. In which places, by comparing these with many other Texts of Scripture, by God, or the Lord, is meant Christ, the second Person in the Godhead, who then was to come down, and since did come from Heaven to Earth, for the consummation of that eternal project of Marriage between God and his People. Which also is fully confirmed by the Writings of the New Testament, which were designed for the Explication of the Old, in which Christ is expresly declared to be the Bridegroom or Husband of his Church, as Mat. 9. 15. & 22. 2. John 3. 29. 2 Cor. 11. 2. Eph. 5. 23. Rev. 19. 7. & 21. 2. & 22. 17. 4. That the 45th Psalm, which is a kind of abridgment of this Book, although it had its rise from, or alludes to the Marriage between Solomon and Pharaoh's Daughter, was written concerning the Messias, as all Interpreters, both Christian and Jewish, agree, and concerning the mystical Marriage between Christ and his Church; of which see my notes upon that Psalm. From these considerations, and many others which might be suggested, and which will offer themselves to our thoughts from several passages of it, it is sufficiently manifest, that the main scope and business of this Book is to describe the mutual Love, Union, and Communion which is between Christ and his Church in the various conditions to which it is liable in this World, as in the state of Weakness, and Desertion, and Persecution from foolish Shepherds, and the like, Ch. 1. 6, 7. & 3. 1, 2, 3, 4. & 5. 2, 7, &c. Moreover it is to be considered, that Solomon doth here vary his Speech, sometimes speaking of the Church in general, as one Person or Body; or sometimes of the particular Members of it, or of several Believers, both of such as really and sincerely are so, or such as profess to be so, and of their various dispositions and conditions. And hence comes the difference of Persons here mentioned, the Mother, or Sponse, and the Children, or Daughters of Jerusalem, Sixty Queens, and Eighty Concubines, some that are Strangers to the Bridegroom, and some that are well acquainted with him, &c. These things being premised will give great light to the several passages of this Book.

CHAP. I.

THE song of songs a, which is Solomons b.

a The most excellent of all Songs, whether composed by profane or sacred Authors, by Solomon, or by any other. So this Hebrew Phrase is understood in other cases, as the holy of holies signifies the most holy; and the highest King is called King of Kings; and there are multitudes of such instances, as hath been oft observed. And so this might well be called, whether you consider the Author of it who was a great Prince, and the wisest of all mortal Men, the two Adams only excepted; or the Subject of it, which is not Solomon, but a greater than Solomon, even Christ, and his Marriage with the Church, as hath been noted; or the Matter of it, which is most lofty and mysterious, containing in it the greatest and noblest of all all the mysteries contained either in the Old or the New Testament; most pious and pathetical, breathing forth the hottest flames of love between Christ and his People, most sweet, and comfortable, and useful to all that read it with serious and Christian Eyes. Nor is it the worse because prophane and wanton Wits abuse it, and indeavour to fasten their absurd and filthy senses upon some passages in it. The truth is, this Book requires a sober and pious, not a lascivious and foolish Reader: for which reason some of the ancient Hebrews advised young men to forbear the reading of it, till they were thirty years old. b Which was composed by Solomon: but whether before his Fall, or after his Repentance, is not easie to determine, or necessary to be known.

2. Let him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth c:
* for † thy love d is better than wine e.

* Ch. 4. 10.

c The beginning of this Book is abrupt, and may seem disorderly; but is very suitable to, and usual in Writings of this Nature, wherein things are not related in an historical and exquisite order, but that which was first done is brought in as it were accidentally after many other passages; as we see in Homer and Virgil, and in the Greek and Latine Comedians. These are the words of the Spouse, as all acknowledge, wherein she breatheth forth her passionate Love to the Bridegroom, whom she doth not name, but only intimate by the Prononn Relative, him, which is here put without and for the antecedent, as Ps. 87. 1. & 114. 2. Joh. 20. 15. Which manner of Expression she useth because it was needless to name him, as being so well known to the person, or persons, to whom she speaks, and being the only person who was continually in her thoughts and speeches. By kisses, which were the usual tokens of Love and good-will, she means nothing else but the communications and manifestations of his Love and favour to her, as the following clause explains this, his Graces and comforts breathed into her from the mouth and spirit of Christ. d This sudden change of the person is frequent, especially in such pathetical discourses. First she speaks of him as absent, and at a distance, but speedily grows into more acquaintance with him, and by ardent desire and faith, embraceth him as present. e Than the most delicious meats or drinks, or than all sensual delights, this one kind being Synecdochically put for all the rest, as it is Esth. 5. 6. Job 1. 13. Prov. 9. 2. Eccl. 2. 3.

3. Because of the savour of thy good ointments f, thy name g is as ointment poured forth h, therefore do the virgins i love thee.

f Because of those excellent Gifts and Graces of God's Spirit wherewith thou art repleniished, and which flow from thee upon thy Members. g Either, 1. Thou thy self, Names being oft put for Persons, as Act. 1. 15. Rev. 3. 4. Or rather, 2. Thy fame or report, the very mention of thee, and all those things by which thou makest thy self known to men, thy Word, and particularly thine offers and promises of Pardon and Salvation made to sinners, and all thy works, both ordinary and miraculous, especially that great work of Redemption. h Most lovely and acceptable, and refreshing. i Called the Companions of the Bride, Psal. 45. 14. particular Believers, who are called Virgins, 2 Cor. 11. 2. Rev. 14. 4. who have their senses exercised to perceive this sweetness and fulness of Christ.

* Joh. 6. 44.
* Ps. 45. 14, 15.

‖ Or, they love thee uprightly.

k By thy Grace and holy Spirit effectually inclining my heart to come unto thee, as this Phrase implies, Jer. 31. 3. Hos. 11. 4. Joh. 6. 44, 45. As thou hast outwardly called and invited me, so do thou inwardly move me, who am naturally averse and backward to follow thee. l Both I thy Spouse, and the Virgins my Companions. And this change of numbers teacheth us that the Spouse in this Book is one great Body, consisting of many Members, of whom therefore he speaks sometimes in the singular, and sometimes in the plural number. m Will follow thee readily, and chearfully, and swiftly; which is opposed to her former sluggishness and listlessness. We will not receive thy Grace in vain, but will improve it, and cooperate with it, and stir up all our strength to serve and obey thee. n Christ, my Husband and Lord, the King of his Church, as he is oft called the King of Kings, &c. o Heb. hath caused me to come, by drawing me as I desired. He hath answered my Prayer. p Where I may most freely and familiarly converse with him, and enjoy him. He hath taken me into intimate communion with himself. These Chambers seem to note either 1. Those heavenly Mansions into which Believers are sometimes said to be brought, even in this Life, as Eph. 2. 6. because they have a lively Faith, and well-grounded Hope, and Assurance, and some comfortable foretasts of that blessed State. Or rather, 2. Those places and conditions upon Earth, in which they enjoy the special favour and fellowship of God in Christ, as the publick Assemblies in which Christ is in a peculiar manner present, Mat. 18. 20. where his Word and Ordinances are dispensed, and where he poureth forth his Spirit, and Blessings, and speaks great Peace, and gives forth his Loves unto his People. Yea, even the private Closets, wherein Believers enjoy much of Christ by Prayer, and Praise, and Reading, and Meditation, are such Chambers also: For it is not the Place, but the State, or Priviledge, which is here signified, and which is considerable. q Or, For thee, in, or for, thy Love and Favour to us, which is the principal cause of our Joy. r Or, commemorate or celebrate. This shall be the matter of our Thoughts and Discourses. s Those chaste and sincere Virgins mentioned v. 3. who are here opposed to hypocritical Professours.

5. I am black t, but comely u, O ye daughters of Jerusalem x, as the tents of Kedar y, as the curtains of Solomon z.

t It might be objected, who art thou, that thou shouldest have or pretend to such a Royal Bridegroom, and such Honours and Favours? To this the Church answers, I confess, as to my self, and outward appearance in the Eyes of the World, I have not that pomp and beauty which Men admire, but am black, contemptible and deformed, both for my own Infirmities and Disorders, and for the scandals of some of my own Members, and for the Reproaches and Persecutions of worldly men. She alludes to the complexion of Pharaoh's Daughter, who was black. u Yet I am glorious within, Psal. 45. 13. and comely through the Beauty which my Husband hath put upon me, by his Graces and Blessings conferred upon me, such as Justification, and Sanctification, &c. x By which she understands particular Believers, whose Mother Jerusalem is called, Gal. 4, 26. who had joined themselves to her, especially young Converts and weak Christians, who were startled and offended at the contemplation of her blackness. y (i.e.) Of the wild Arabians, the Posterity of Kedar, Gen. 25. 13. who dwelt in Tents, which were black and uncomly, both in themselves, and by the injuries of the weather, to which they were constantly exposed. z As the Hangings wherewith Solomon's House was furnished, which none can doubt that they were most beautiful and glorious. So these two last clauses answer to the two first, and that in the same order in which they lie.

6. Look not upon me a because I am black, because the sun hath looked upon me b: my mothers children c were angry with me d, they made me the keeper of the vineyards e, but mine own vineyard have I not kept f.

a With wonder and disdain, because of my blackness, as it follows. b My blackness is not essential, and inseparable, but chiefly caused by the scorching beams of the Sun, (i. e.) of sore Persecutions and Tribulations, which by God's permission have befaln me, which are represented by the Sun, Mat. 13. 6, 21. c False Brethren, who pretend that the Church is their Mother, when their Actions demonstrate, that God, the Husband of the Church, is not their Father, hypocritical Professors, who are, and ever were, the keenest Enemies to the true Church and People of God, Isa. 66. 5. Gal. 4. 29. false Teachers and their followers, who by their corrupt Doctrines, and Divisions, and Contentions which they raise, bring great mischief to the Church. See 2 Cor. 11. 26. Gal. 2. 4. d Or fought against me, as the ancients render it, and so marred my Beauty. e (i.e.) Of their Vineyards, for to these she opposeth her own in the next clause. Having prevailed against me, they used me like a slave, putting me upon the most dishonourable and troublesom services, such as the keeping of the Vineyards was esteemed, 2 Kin. 25. 12. Isa. 61. 5. Mat. 20. 17. f They gave me such a full and constant employment in their drudging work about their Vineyards, that they left me no time to mind mine own, they hindred me from doing my own duty, and from minding my own concerns. And therefore it is no wonder, if in this posture and condition I be uncomely, and scorched by the Sun. But because Churches or Societies of Professors of Religion, whether good or bad, are oft called Vineyards, as Deut. 32. 32. Psal. 80. 8. Isa. 5. 1, 2, 7. this and the foregoing clause may be thus understood, that they endeavoured to seduce and corrupt the Church with false Doctrines, and Superstitious, or Idolatrous Worship, and to oblige her to countenance and maintain them, and thereby disturbed and hindred her from her proper work, which was the propagation and advancement of the true Doctrine and Worship in particular Assemblies and Persons, belonging, or to be brought in, to her.

7. Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth g, where thou feedest h, where thou makest thy flocks to rest at noon i: for why should I be ‖ as one k that turneth aside l by m the flocks of thy companions n?

‖ Or, as one that is vailed. 2 Sam. 15. 30.

g Notwithstanding all these Discouragements and Afflictions which I suffer for thy sake, and for my Love to thee. Being reproached and persecuted by others, I flee to thee, O my only Refuge and Joy, and I beg direction and help from thee. h Understand thy flock as Gen. 29. 7. & 37. 16. Seeing false Teachers and Churches bear thy Name, Mark. 13. 21, 22. and thy true Church sometimes lies hid, Rev. 12. 14. discover to me which is thy true Church, and which are those Assemblies and People where thou art present, and where thine Ordinances are dispensed ſed in purity and power, and where thou doſt and wilt command the bleſſing, even life for evermore, as it is expreſſed, Pſal. 133. 3 that I may join my ſelf to them. This is the requeſt of particular Believers. For it muſt be minded, as that which will be uſeful to explain many difficulties in this Book, that the Church in this Book is ſometimes conſidered, and ſpeaketh, or is ſpoken of, as one entire Body, and ſometimes with reſpect unto, and in the name of her particular Members, and that promiſcuouſly; and, in which of theſe capacities each place is to be underſtood, is left to the prudent and diligent Reader to gather out of the words and Context. i In the heat of the day, when the Shepherds in thoſe hot Countries uſed to carry their flocks into ſhadowy places. Whereby he means the time of hot perſecution, when it is hard to find and diſcover the true Church, partly becauſe ſhe is deformed by it, and partly becauſe ſhe is obſcured and driven into the Wilderneſs, as it ſaid, Revel. 12. 14. k (i.e.) Be really one, the Particle, as, being here a note of truth, as it is in many other places. Why wilt thou by withdrawing thy ſelf from me, and denying thy direction to me, ſuffer me, or give occaſion to me to be ſuch a one. l Or, a wanderer, or vagabond, like a neglected and forlorn Creature expoſed both to cenſure and danger, from both which it belongs to thee, my Husband, to protect and ſave me. m Or, about, or towards, as this Particle is elſewhere uſed. n The aſſemblies of corrupt and falſe Teachers and Worſhippers, by which I am like to be enſnared, if thou doſt forſake me. Theſe he calls Chriſt's Companions, partly becauſe they profeſs the Name of Chriſt, and their conjunction with him in God's Worſhip; and partly becauſe they ſet themſelves up in Chriſt's ſtead, and uſurp his Power in delivering and impoſing their own Laws and Doctrines upon mens Conſciences, and behave themſelves like his equals or companions, not as becometh his Subjects.

* Chap. 5. 9. & 6. 1.

8. ¶ If thou know not n, * O thou faireſt among women o, go thy way forth by the footſteps of the flock p, and feed thy kids q beſide the ſhepherds tents r.

n To wit, where I feed my ſheep. For this is Chriſt's anſwer to his Spouſe or People. o Though thou art black in thine own and others eyes, yet thou art very beautiful and amiable to me, as being waſhed white in my Blood, and beautified with my Gifts and Graces. p Obſerve and follow the paths which my ſheep have trodden before thee, of my faithful Servants, Abraham, and others, whoſe Examples are propounded for our imitation, Rom. 4. 12. Heb. 6. 12. For the Church in all Ages is one and the ſame, and there is but one way for the ſubſtance, in which all the Saints from the beginning to the end of the World do walk, Chriſt being yeſterday, and to day, and the ſame for ever, Heb. 13. 8. and the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world, Rev. 13. 8. q Take care for the feeding or teaching of all, and eſpecially of young and weak Chriſtians, who do and ſhall aſſociate themſelves to thee, whom the Holy Ghoſt calls Lambs, Joh. 21. 15, 16. as here Kids. For although grown and wanton Goats are commonly uſed in Scripture in a bad ſenſe, yet the Kids of the Goats do ſometimes note Believers, as Iſa. 11. 6. and Kids were among thoſe Sacrifices which repreſented Chriſt, Heb. 9. 12, 13, 14. r Under the conduct, and according to the inſtruction of my faithful Shepherds, or Paſtors, firſt and chiefly thoſe who have gone before thee, the Prophets and Apoſtles, and after, and in ſubordination to them, and to their Writings, others whom I ſhall raiſe from time to time to feed my people with Wiſdom and Underſtanding.

* Ch. 2. 2. 10, 13. & 4. 1, 7. & 5. 2. & 6. 4. Joh. 14. 15.

9. I have compared thee s, * O my love, to a company of horſes in Pharaohs chariots t.

s Heb. I have made thee like; which may be underſtood either, 1. Verbally, by comparing. Or, 2. Really, by making a real reſemblance in quality or condition. t Either, 1. For comelineſs; for an Horſe is a very ſtately and beautiful Creature, and the Egyptian Horſes were preferred before others, 1 Kings 10. 28. Iſa. 31. 1. and Pharaoh's own Chariot-horſes were doubtleſs the beſt of their kind. Or, 2. For excellent order and uſefulneſs, as thoſe Horſes did equally and orderly draw the Chariot, and carried Pharaoh with eaſe and ſpeed whither he deſigned to go. Or rather, 3. For ſtrength and courage, to overcome all thine Enemies. For Horſes are famous for that property, Job 39. 21, &c. And the ſtrength of the Battle was then thought to conſiſt very much in Horſes, Prov. 21. 31. and Chariots, and eſpecially in a company or multitude of them. And the Church in this Book is repreſented not only as fair and beautiful, but alſo as terrible to her Enemies, Cant. 6. 10. Compare Rev. 19. 11, 14.

* Ezek. 16. 11, 12, 13.

10. * Thy cheeks are comely with rows of jewels u, thy neck x, with chains of gold y.

u Which being faſtned to the heads of Brides, uſed to hang down upon, and to adorn their cheeks, according to the manner in thoſe times. He mentions the Cheeks as the chief ſeat of Beauty: and he intimates that the Churches Beauty is not natural, nor from her ſelf; but from the jewels wherewith Chriſt adorns her. x Which is mentioned as another viſible part and ſeat of Beauty, Hoſ. 10. 11. But to accommodate every part and ornament named in this Book, to ſome particular thing in the Church, ſeems to have more of curioſity and artifice than of ſolidity and uſe. y Whereby, as well as by the rows of Jewels, he may ſeem to deſign all thoſe perſons and things wherewith the Church is made beautiful in the Eyes of God, and of men, ſuch as excellent Miniſters, and Saints, righteous Laws, holy Ordinances, and the Gifts and Graces of God's Spirit, all which are given by God to the Church, and are her beſt ornaments.

11. We z will make thee borders of gold, with ſtuds of ſilver a.

z I thy Bridegroom, with the cooperation of my Father, and of the holy Spirit. Such plural Expreſſions are ſometimes uſed in Scripture concerning one God, to note the plurality of Perſons in one Divine Eſſence, as hath been noted upon Gen. 1. 26. and elſewhere. a Beautiful and honourable ornaments, ſuch as thoſe v. 10. Variety of Expreſſions are uſed to ſignifie the various kinds and improvements of the Gifts and Graces which are beſtowed by Chriſt upon the Church. The Phraſe here uſed may be compared with that of Apples of Gold in pictures of ſilver, Prov. 25. 11.

12. ¶ While the king b ſitteth at his table c, my ſpikenard d ſendeth forth the ſmell thereof e.

b My Royal Husband. c Either, 1. With the ſpirits of juſt men and bleſſed Angels in heavenly Glory, to which Chriſt was advanced after his ſufferings, and from which he poureth down his Spirit upon his People. Or rather, 2. With me in his Goſpel and ordinances, in which Chriſt entertaineth his People, and is in a ſpecial, and gracious, and glorious manner preſent with them, Mat. 18. 20. & 28. 20. which alſo is oft repreſented in Scripture under the notion of a Feaſt or Banquet, of which ſee Prov. 9. 1, 2, 3, 5. Iſa. 25. 6. Mat. 8. 11. & 22. 12. 1 Cor. 10. 21. d The Graces of his Spirit conferred upon me, and drawn forth by his powerful preſence, which is here compared to thoſe ſweet Ointments which the Maſter of the Feaſt cauſed to be poured out upon the heads of the Gueſts, of which ſee Mark 14. 3. Luk. 7. 38. in which Ointments Spikenard was a chief ingredient, Joh. 12. 2, 3. e Which notes the exerciſe and manifeſtation of her Graces, which is a ſweet ſmelling ſavour in the noſtrils of her Husband, and of her Companions.

13. A bundle of myrrh f is my well-beloved unto me g; he ſhall lie all night betwixt my breaſts h.

f Or, A bag of myrrh, in which there was a conſiderable quantity of the Gum which droppeth from the Myrrh-tree. Myrrh is bitter to the taſte, but ſweet to the ſmell, and therefore was ever reckoned amongſt the beſt perfumes. See Exod. 30. 23. Pſal. 45. 8. Joh. 19. 39. g He is moſt precious and comfortable to me, and the Author of my ſweet ſmell laſt mentioned. h In the place where bundles or bags of Myrrh, or other perfumes hung down, being faſtened about their Necks, which yet were taken away, and laid aſide by night. But the Church intimates that ſhe will not part with Chriſt, neither day nor night. Or this Phraſe may note the Churches intimate Union with, and hearty Affection unto Chriſt.

14. My beloved is unto me, as a cluſter of || camphire i in the vineyards of En-gedi k.

i Or, Cypreſs, as others render it. It was an odoriferous plant growing in Vineyards, and ſome think that it was a moſt pleaſant kind of Vine, like that which bears Muſcatella Grapes; yea ſome very learned men underſtand it of that Plant which dropped Balm, which grew in, or near, the place here ſpecified, as is affirmed not only by the Jews, but alſo by Pagan Writers, as Diodorus and Trogus. Nor are we concerned to know which or what it was; it being confeſſed and evident, that it was ſome pleaſant and grateful Plant, and that it ſets forth that great delight which the Church hath in the enjoyment of Chriſt. k A pleaſant and well watered place in the Tribe of Judah, Joſ. 15. 62. Ezek. 47. 10. where there were many pleaſant Plants, whence it was called Hazazon Tamar, 2 Chron. 20. 2.

* Chap. 4. 1. & 5. 12. || Or, my companion.

15. * Behold, thou art fair, || my love; behold, thou art fair l, thou haſt doves eyes m.

l This is the Speech of Chriſt. The words are doubled, partly to note the certainty of the thing, notwithſtanding her mean and modeſt opinion of her ſelf, and partly to manifeſt his high eſteem and fervent affection for her, and to aſſure her, that notwithſtanding all her infirmities, he was very well pleaſed with her. m Which are, 1. Comely and pleaſant. 2. Modeſt and humble, not lofty, as the looks of ſome other Creatures are. 3. Mild and harmleſs, not fierce and fiery, not looking and watching for prey, as the eyes of ravenous birds are. 4. Chaſt and faithful, looking only to their Mates: ſo that if any of them caſt a luſtful eye upon another, her companions are enraged againſt her, and quickly tear her in pieces, as ſome natural Hiſtorians write. And ſuch are the Churches Eyes ſaid to be. And by the Eyes he ſeems to deſign partly her Looks, and outward Behaviour or Converſation, and partly and chiefly the inward diſpoſition of her Mind, which is commonly diſcovered, and in Scripture is oft ſignified by the Eye, in which ſenſe we read of an evil Eye, Prov. 23. 6. Mat. 6. 23. of a bountiful Eye, Prov. 22. 9. of a ſingle Eye, Luk. 11. 34. of a proud or lofty Look, all which ſignifie ſuch tempers of mens minds.

16. Behold, thou art fair, my beloved n, yea pleasant o: also our bed p is green q.

n The Church here again speaks, and retorts Christ's words upon himself. If I am fair, it is only by thy Grace, and favourable acceptation; thou, and thou only, art fair indeed, thy beauty is exquisite and perfect. o As thou art beautiful in thy self, so thou art amiable and pleasant in thy condescension to me, and converse with me, in communicating thy blessed Counsels, and Graces, and Comforts to me. p Either, 1. Upon which we sit at meat, as the manner then was, Esth. 1. 5, 6. Ezek. 23. 41. Or rather, 2. Upon which we lie, our nuptial Bed: for the Union and Communion between Christ and his Church is here represented under the notion of Marriage. And accordingly the Bed seems to denote the place or places where the Church enjoyeth sweet fellowship with Christ, by his Spirit accompanying his Ordinances, and imparting his Merits, and Graces, and Comforts to her. q Is pleasant, as that colour is to the Eye; is prepared for us, being adorned with green Garlands, or Boughs, and Herbs, as the manner seems to have been with Country-Brides, such as the Spouse in this Book is represented to be. Or, as others, both ancient and later Interpreters, render it, is flourishing, i. e. fruitful. So it is an happy presage, that the Church should not be barren, but bring forth many Children to Christ; of which see Isa. 54. 1, &c. By these and the following words, the Church invites Christ to her Bed and House, where she may freely and fully enjoy spiritual Communion with him.

17. The beams of our house are cedar r, and our ‖ rafters s of firre t.

r Not only strong and incorruptible, but also fragrant and delightful. Though I am in my self but a mean and rustick person, yet the house to which I invite thee, and where thou and I shall dwell together, is, by thy favour built with Cedar. Whereby is here signified the stability of God's Church upon Earth, which is called God's house, 1 Tim. 3. 15. and the firmness and sureness of God's Word and Promises. s The lesser Beams. Or, as it is rendred in our Margent, and by others, Galleries, wherein we may walk. t Or, as the Ancients and others render it, of Cypress, which was used in buildings, which also was strong and fragrant, and therefore suits well with Cedars.

CHAP. II.

1. I Am the rose of Sharon, and the lilly of the valleys a.

a These are the words either, 1. Of the Spouse, continuing her discourse. Or rather, 2. Of the Bridegroom, drawing forth the Churches affections to him. He compares himself to the Rose and Lilly, for fragrancy and beauty. Nor is it in the least degree indecent, that Christ should thus commend himself, partly because his excellency is so transcendently great, that he is free from all suspicion of vanity and self-flattery; and partly because it is suitable to the stile of such Writings, and to the present design of recommending himself to the affections of his Spouse. He mentions the Rose of Sharon, which was a very fruitful place, as is evident from 1 Chron. 27. 29. Isa. 33. 9. & 65. 10. and famous for Roses, as may seem probable from Isa. 35. 1, 2. Or, as others translate it, the Rose of the field, which may note that Christ is not only pleasant and beautiful, but free and communicative, offering himself to all that come to him. The Lilly is a beautiful and glorious Creature, Mat. 6. 29. especially to one who beholds it through a magnifying Glass. He saith, the Lilly of the valleys, because they grew and flourished best in such low and watterish grounds.

2. As the lilly among the thorns b, so is my love among the daughters c.

b Compared with Thorns, which it unspeakably exceeds in glory and beauty. c So far, and much more, doth my Church or People, excel all other Assemblies or People. The title of Daughter is oft given to whole Nations; whence we read of the Daughter of Babylon, and of Egypt, and of Edom, &c. Isa. 47. 1. Jer. 46. 11. Lam. 4. 21. These are Christ's words, to which the Spouse makes the following reply. And it is observable here, that as Christ is here represented as a Shepherd, and the Spouse as a Country Virgin, so the similitudes here used are agreeable to that estate.

3. As the apple-tree d among the trees of the wood e, so is my beloved among the sons. † I sat down under his shadow f with great delight, and his fruit g was sweet to my † taste.

† Heb. I delighted and sat down, &c.

d Whose fruit is very pleasant and wholsom. e Which are either barren, or bear ungrateful and worthless fruit. f Being weary and heavy laden with manifold sins and troubles, inward and outward, I confidently reposed my self under his Protection (which is commonly signified by a shadow, as Isa. 4. 6. & 25. 4, &c.) and by him was defended from the scorching heat of God's wrath, and from the Curse of his fiery Law, and from the mischief or hurt of all sorts of distresses. g The benefits which I received by him, the clear, and full, and certain knowledge of God's Will, and the way of Salvation, Adoption, and Remission of Sins, Faith, and Repentace, and all manner of Grace, and Assurance of Glory. Thus he was to me both a Sun, and a Shield, as is said Psal. 84. 11.

4. He brought me to the † banqueting-house h, and his banner over me i was love k.

h Heb. House of wine, or, by a common Synecdoche, of feasting. By which he understands the places in which, or the means and instruments by which Believers receive the Graces and Blessings of Christ, to wit, the holy Scriptures, Ministers, and publick Assemblies, and all Christ's Institutions. i Or, to, or towards me, by the lifting up or displaying whereof I was invited and encouraged to come in to him, and to list my self under him, as Souldiers are by the lifting up of a Banner or Ensign, of which see Isa. 11. 10. & 49. 22. k The Love of Christ crucified, which, like a Banner, is displayed in the Gospel, whereby sinners are drawn and engaged to come to Christ: see Joh. 3. 14. & 12. 32. 2 Cor. 5. 14. The Motto or device of Christ's Banner was not like those of other great Generals, a Lion, or Leopard, or Eagle, but Love, by which alone Christ made all his Conquests.

5. Stay me l with flagons m, † comfort me with apples n; for I am sick of love o.

l Or, Support me, keep me from sinking or fainting. The Spouse speaks this to her Bride-maids, the daughters of Jerusalem, as it is expressed v. 7. or to the servants or friends of the Bridegroom there waiting, and to the Bridegroom himself; as a person ready to faint cries to any or all that are near to him, or her, for help. m With wine, which is a good cordial, Psal. 104. 15. Prov. 31. 6, 7. and which was there present, v. 4. Flagons are here, and 1 Chron. 16. 3. put for Flagons of wine, as it is fully expressed, Hos. 3. 1. or for the Wine contained in them, as the Cup is put for Wine, Luk. 22. 20. by a common Metonymy. n With odoriferous Apples, such as Pomegranates, or the like, the smell whereof was grateful and useful to persons ready to faint. By these Metaphors understand the application of the Promises, and the comfortable and quickening influences of the Spirit. o Either, 1. With transports of joy, which sometimes causes a fainting of the Spirits, as Gen. 45. 26. 1 Kings 10. 5. Or, 2. With grief for his departure from her, of which we read, Ch. 3. 1, 2. or for fear of it. Or rather, 3. With ardent desire of a stricter Union, and clearer discoveries of his Love, and perfect and uninterrupted Communion with him in Glory. That sickness is sometimes the effect of Love hath been oft observed by Physicians.

6. * His left hand ‖ is under my head p, and his right hand ‖ doth embrace me.

* Chap. 8. 3.
‖ Or, was.
‖ Or, did.

p As a pillow for me to rest upon. No sooner did I cry out for help, but he was at hand to succour me, and did manifest his tender care and dear love to me.

7. † * I charge you q, O ye daughters of Jerusalem r, by the roes, and by the hinds s of the field t, that ye stir not up, nor awake u my love x, till he please y.

† Heb. I adjure you.
* Chap. 3. 5. & 8. 4.

q This verse is spoken either, 1. By the Bridegroom, who having reposed the sick Church in his Arms, chargeth them not to disturb her, till she please, as the last clause, in this case, must be rendred. Or rather, 2. By the Bride, as may be gathered, 1. From the connexion; because both the foregoing and following words are hers. 2. Because it was more decent for the Bride than for the Bridegroom to give this charge to the Bride-maids, the daughters of Jerusalem; and therefore in all places in this Book, where they are mentioned, the person speaking to them is the Bride, and not the Bridegroom, and particularly Ch. 3. 5. & 8. 4. where this verse is repeated, and is confessedly and evidently spoken by the Spouse. r My Bride-maids, Friends, and Members, over whom I have Authority. s Either, 1. By the kindness you have to those pretty and amiable Creatures, as you would not injure nor disturb them, nor drive them away, but please your selves with the sight of them, as Shepherds and Country-Damosels commonly do. Or, 2. By the Example of those Creatures, which are pleasant, and loving in their carriage towards one another. t Which have their usual abode in the fields. u That you do not disturb nor offend him by your miscarriages, but permit him and me to enjoy a quiet repose. Do nothing to grieve him, or molest me. x My dearly beloved, called Love Emphatically, to express her great passion for him. So Love is used, Cant. 7. 6. and in other Authors. y (i. e.) Never, as this word, until, in such like Phrases, is commonly used, as Gen. 28. 15. 2 Sam. 6. 23. Isa. 22. 14. For neither can sin ever please him, nor can the Church bear it, that Christ should ever be offended, or that her sweet Fellowship with him should be interrupted.

8. ¶ The voice of my beloved z! behold, he cometh a leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills b.

z Methinks I hear his voice. The Spouse being now refreshed and and revived with Christ's presence, awakes out of sleep, and breaks forth into this joyful exclamation. Christ's voice is nothing else but the word of Grace revealed outwardly in the Gospel, or the Evangelical passages of the Old Testament, and inwardly to the heart of the Spouse by the Spirit of God. a Either 1. He is coming, or will shortly come into the World; which Solomon and the rest of the Old-Testament Prophets, and Saints, did earnestly desire and confidently expect. Or, 2. He is coming to me for my support and comfort. b He saith, leaping and skipping, to note that Christ came readily, and swiftly, with great desire and pleasure; and he adds, upon the Mountains and Hills, either with respect to Mount Zion or Jerusalem, in and from which Christ first discovered himself: or to signifie Christ's fixed resolution to come, in spight of all discouragements and difficulties which stood in his way: or to shew that his coming was manifest and visible to the eye of her Faith. Or, in this Phrase he may have a respect to the Roes and Harts here following.

* Ver. 7. ‖ Or, fawn. † Heb. flourishing.

9. * My beloved is like a roe, or a ‖ young hart c: behold he standeth behind our walk d, he looketh forth e at the window f, † shewing himself through the latteſs.

c Either, 1. In loveliness. Or rather 2. In swiftness by comparing this verse with the former. The swiftness of roes is noted 2 Sam. 2. 18. 1 Chr. 12. 8. He is coming to me with all speed and will not tarry a moment beyond the appointed and proper season. d And whilest he doth for wise and just reasons forbear to come, he is not far from us. Though he be not yet come into the door of our House, yet he stands behind the wall of our House, and is always at hand, to give me that succour and comfort which I do or may need and desire. Both this and the following Phrases seem to note the obscure and imperfect manner and degree of Christ manifesting himself to his People, either 1. Under the Law in comparison of his discoveries in the Gospel. Or 2. In this Life, in comparison of what he will do in the future Life. e From his high and heavenly Palace towards me, to watch over me and refresh me with the prospect of his favour. f This Phrase and that, through the latteſs, intimate that the Church doth indeed see Christ, but, as through a glass, darkly, as is said even of Gospel-Revelations, 1 Cor. 13. 12. and was much more true of legal Administrations.

10. My beloved spake g, and said unto me, Rise up h my love, my fair one, and come away i.

g Invited and called me outwardly by his Word, and inwardly by his Spirit. h Shake off sloth and security, and disintangle thy self more fully from all the snares of this World, and of thy own Lusts, that thou maiest be more ready to come to me, and more fit for my embraces. i Unto me, and with me, follow me fully, serve me more perfectly, labour for a nearer Union, and more satisfying communion with me.

11. For lo, the winter k is past, the rain is over, and gone.

k Which made the ways in some sort unpassable, and so might seem to hinder or affright thee from coming to me. This winter, and the following rain may be understood either 1. Of worldly Tribulations, which he intimates to be past and gone, to wit, so far that they shall not destroy nor hurt the Church, but on the contrary do her much good, both by multiplying her Members, and increasing her Graces, and promoting her eternal Happiness. Or rather, 2. Of spiritual Troubles arising in the Minds and Consciences of sinners, from a deep sense of the guilt of sin, the Justice and Wrath of God, the Sentence and Curse of the Law; all which made them afraid to come unto God, and desirous, if possible, to run away from him. But, saith Christ, I have removed this great impediment, God is ready to be reconciled, and therefore cast off all discouragements and excuses, and come unto me.

12. The flowers appear on the earth l, the time of the singing of birds m is come, and the voice of the turtle n is heard in our land o.

l This and the following clauses are here alledged as evidences of the Spring time, which in the mystical and principal sense seems to signifie the day of Grace, or the glad tydings of Salvation proposed to sinners in the time of the Law, by Types, and shadows, and Promises, but much more clearly and fully in the Gospel, and all the discoveries and communications of God's Grace to Mankind in holy Ordinances, in the Gifts, and Graces, and Comforts of the Holy Spirit, vouchsafed unto, and appearing in Believers, as Buds and Blossoms do in the Spring time. m When Birds sing most freely and sweetly, as they do in the Spring. Or, as the ancient Translators render it, of cutting or cropping, not Trees, which agrees not with that season, but the flowers last mentioned, for Nosegays, or other uses. n Which changeth its place according to the season, as is observed, Jer. 8. 7. and by all other Writers, who affirm that it disappears in Winter, and appears in the Spring, as some other Birds also do; but this seems particularly to be mentioned, because it doth not only give notice of the Spring, but also doth aptly represent the Spirit of God, which even the Chaldee Paraphrast understands by this Turtle, which appeared in the shape of a Dove, and which worketh a Dove-like Meekness, and Chastity, and Faithfulness in Believers. o In Immanuel's Land, as Canaan is called, Isa. 8. 8. in the Church.

13. The fig-tree putteth forth her green-figs p, and the vines, with the tender grape, give a good smell q. Arise my love, my fair one, and come away r.

p Which it shooteth forth as soon as it doth Leaves, in the Spring-time, Mat. 24. 32. q Which, though not strong, is pleasant and grateful, and given by it in the progress of the Spring. r These words are here repeated, to shew both the Churches infirmity, and indisposition, which needs so many Calls and Arguments to press so necessary and advantageous a Duty; and Christ's tender compassion to her weakness, and fervent desire of converse with her.

14. ¶ O my dove s, that art in the clefts of the rock t, in the secret places of the * stairs u, let me see thy countenance x, * let me hear thy voice y: for sweet is thy voice, and thy countenance is comely z. * Ezek. 38. 20. * Chap. 8. 13.

s So the Church is called, partly for her Dove-like temper and disposition, because she is chaste, and mild, and harmless, &c. and partly for her Dove-like Condition, because she is weak, and exposed to Persecution, and given to Mourning, as Doves are, Isa. 38. 14. & 59. 11. Ezek. 7. 16. and subject to many Fears, and therefore forced to hide her self in Rocks, as it follows. t Where she hid her self, either 1. For fear of her Enemies, whom to avoid she puts her self into the Protection of the Almighty. Or 2. Out of Modesty, and an humble sence of her own Deformities, and Infirmities, which makes her endeavour to hide her self even from her Beloved, as ashamed to appear in his presence, which is frequently the case of God's People, especially after falls into sin. And this sence seems to be favoured by the following words, in which Christ relieveth her against such discouraging thoughts. u In the holes of craggy and broken Rocks, which resemble stairs. So the same thing is here repeated in other words. x Be not afraid nor ashamed to appear before me, come boldly into my presence, and acquaint thy self with me. y Thy Prayers and Praises. z Thy Person and Services are accepted by me, and are amiable in my sight.

15. Take a us b * the foxes c, the little foxes d, that spoil the vines e: for our vines have tender grapes f. * Ezek. 13. 4. Luk. 13. 32.

a The Bridegroom gives this charge to his Bridemen or Friends, whose Office it is to attend upon him, and to observe his Commands. By whom he understands those Magistrates and Ministers to whom, under Christ, the Custody of the Vineyards, to wit, the Churches, principally belong. These he commands to take the Foxes, (i. e.) to restrain them from doing this mischief. b Heb. for us, (i. e.) at our instance, and for our common good, as this spoiling of the Vines was injurious and grievous to them both. c The disturbers of the Vineyard, or the Church, Seducers, or false Teachers, who are fitly compared to Foxes here, and Ezek. 13. 4. partly to distinguish them from great Tyrants and Persecutors, who are compared to wild Boars, or other wild Beasts, Psal. 80. 13. as to Lions, 2 Tim. 4. 17. and partly for their fox-like qualities and actions, because they are very crafty and deceitful, 2 Cor. 11. 13, 14. Eph. 4. 14. and very mischievous also, Ezek. 34. 2, 3. 2 Tim. 2. 17. Tit. 1. 10, 11. 2 Pet. 2. 2. He mentions Foxes, because these abounded in that Country, as is manifest from Judg. 15. 4. Psal. 63. 10. Lam. 5. 18, &c. but under them he comprehends all noxious Creatures upon the same reason. d This he adds, not as if the great Foxes were excused or exempted, but for more abundant caution to teach the Church to prevent Errors and Heresies in the beginnings of them, before they spread, and grow strong and incurable. e Which Foxes do many ways, as those who write of them have observed, by gnawing and breaking the little Branches and Leaves, and the bark, by digging holes in the Vineyards, and so spoiling the Roots, by eating the Grapes, and other ways. f Which gives us hopes of a good Vintage, and which are easily spoiled, if great care be not used to prevent it.

16. ¶ * My beloved is mine, and I am his g: he feedeth among the lillies h. * Ch. 6. 3. & 7. 10.

g These are the words of the Bride, who having come to him upon his gracious Invitation, now maketh her boast of him, and of that intimate Union and Communion which was between them. h Either 1. He feedeth his flock in sweet and lovely Pastures, where there is not only Herbage to feed them, but Lillies to delight them. Or rather 2. He feedeth himself, (i. e.) he abideth and refresheth himself amongst his faithful People, which are compared to Lillies, above v. 2. and Hos. 14. 5. as Christ also is here, v. 1.

17. * Until the day † break, and the shadows flee away i: turn k my beloved, and be thou * like a roe, or a young hart l upon the mountains ‖ of Bether m. * Chap. 4. 6. † Heb. breath. Chap. 4. 6. * Chap. 8. 14. ‖ Or, of divisi-

i Until the morning of that great and blessed day of the general Resurrection and Judgment, when all the shadows, not only of Ignorance, and Sin, and Calamity, but even of all Ordinances, and outward Administrations, shall cease, and make way for the immediate enjoyment of my Beloved. And this clause may be joined, either 1. With the foregoing words, and so the sense is, Christ doth and will abide with his Church as long as this Life and World lasts; which agrees with Christ's Promise of being with his Church to the end of the World, *Matt.*28.20. But neither that nor this place imply that Christ will then forsake his People, but only secures God's People against that which was the chief, if not only, matter of their fear, to wit, lest Christ should leave them, and cast them off in this Life, which if he did not, they were assured that hereafter they should be ever with the Lord, 1 Thes.4.17. For it is well known, and hath been oft observed already, that the word, until, doth not always exclude the time to come. Or, 2. With the following words, Turn thou my Beloved until the day break, &c. k Return to me. For although Christ had come to her, and she had gladly received and embraced him, yet he was gone again, as is here implied, and evidently appears from the next following verse. Which sudden change is very agreeable both to the nature and method of such dramatical Writings, and amatorious Transactions, and to the state of God's People in this world, where they are subject to frequent changes, and vicissitudes of Christ's withdrawing from them, and returning to them again. l In swiftness, make haste to help me, for I am ready to faint. m A place in the Land of Promise, possibly the same called Bithron, 2 *Sam.*2.29. where it seems those Creatures were in great abundance, or where they were commonly hunted, and so being pursued, they made all possible haste to escape.

CHAP. III.

1. BY night on my bed a I sought him b whom my soul loveth: I sought him c, but I found him not d.

a Either, 1. In a time of Tribulation, which is commonly signified by the Night, and sometimes by a Bed, as Revel. 2. 22. Or 2. When I expected to find him; for the Husband who by his occasions is oft forced to be absent from his Wife in the day time, but at night returns to her, and beds with her. Or, 3. When others compose themselves to rest and sleep, my Thoughts were troubled, and my Affections were working towards him, and I was very desirous to enjoy him. b I sought for Christ's gracious and powerful Presence, in, and by, the Word, and Prayer, and Meditation. c This repetition notes her perseverance and unweariedness in seeking him. d For he had withdrawn himself, and the manifestations of his Love from me, either because I had not sought him diligently, or because I had abused his favour, or to try and exercise my Faith, and Patience, and Love, and other Graces.

2. I will rise now e, and go about the city f in the streets, and in the broad ways g, I will seek him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, but I found him not h.

e I will immediately apply my self to seek him, without whom my bed can give me no rest nor comfort. f The City of God, the Church in which Christ resides. g Not finding him in private Prayer, and Meditation, I sought him in the places of publick Assemblies, and Ordinances; for the People frequently met together in the streets, not only for civil, but for religious ends, 2 Chron. 32. 6. Neh. 8. 1, 3, 16. Prov. 1. 20, 21. Luk. 13. 26. h He saw fit still to delay the discoveries of his Grace, partly to chastise my former folly, partly to try my sincerity and constancy, and partly that he might be more welcome when he came to me.

* Chap. 5. 7. 3. * The watch-men i that go about the city k, found me l: to whom I said m, Saw ye him whom my soul loveth n?

i The Ministers of Christ, and Rulers of the Church, who are oft called Watchmen, as Isa. 62. 6. Ezek. 3. 17. and elsewhere. k To prevent disorders and dangers by night. l Whilest they walked round about the City, according to their duty. m Without either fear or shame, as being transported and wholly swallowed up with Love. n She doth not name him, because she thought it needless, as supposing that a Person of such transcendent excellency could not be unknown to men in that publick capacity. Their answer is not mentioned, either because they gave her no answer, at least no satisfactory answer, or because by their silence she gathered that they were unable, or unwilling to inform her; and being eager in the pursuit of her beloved, she would not lose time in impertinent discourses with them.

4. It was but a little that I passed from them, but I found him o whom my soul loveth: I held him, and would not let him go p, until I had brought him into my mothers house q, and into the chamber of her that conceived me r.

o Christ met me, and manifested his Love to me, according to his Promise made to those that seek him constantly and diligently, Prov. 8. 17. Matt. 7. 7, &c. p Being taught by my late experience how doleful a thing it was to lose him, and how hard it was to find and recover him when he was lost. q That there I might entertain and embracce him, and gain my Mothers consent, and so proceed to the consummation of the Marriage. She saith her Mothers, rather than her Fathers House, because the Men and the Women had several and separated apartments in the House. For the mystical meaning which is the principal sense intended in this Book, as the Spouse here, and in many other places in this Book, signifies particular Believers, so her Mother is the universal Church, or the true Jerusalem, which hath its rise from above, which is the Mother of us all, Gal.4.26. in which Christ and Believers are united, and have sweet communion together in holy Ordinances, into which Believers are said to bring Christ by Faith, and Prayer, and the preparation of their Hearts for him, whereby they invite and in some sort ingage Christ to go with them into the publick Assemblies, and there to give them his Loves, although otherwise it is Christ who properly brings Believers into the Church. But all particulars in Allegorical Scriptures, are not to be strictly urged, as all learned Interpreters agree, many being added only for the decency of the Allegory. r Christ is as it were the Father that begets, and the Church the Mother that conceiveth and bringeth forth Believers.

5. * I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the roes, and by the hinds of the field, that ye stir not up, nor awake my love till he please s. * Chap. 2. 7. & 8. 4.

s This verse is repeated from Ch. 2. 7. where it is explained. The Spouse exhorts her self, and all her fellow-Members to be very circumspect, lest by any unkind or provoking carriage, they should give Christ any cause to depart from them. He is supposed to allude to the custom of awakening the Bridegroom and Bride by Songs and musical instruments.

6. ¶ * Who is this t that cometh out of the wilderness u like pillars of smoak x, perfumed y with myrrhe and frankincense, with all powders of the merchant z? * Chap. 8. 5.

t The persons speaking seem to be the Daughters of Jerusalem, who upon occasion of the Bride's Speech to them, make this reply, or the Friends of the Bridegroom: The person spoken of is the Spouse or Bride. u From the Country, which in comparison of Cities, is oft called a Wilderness, as Isa. 42. 11. Luk. 1. 80. & 3. 2. and elsewhere, from whence we little expected to see so beautiful and glorious a Bride to come, such Persons being usually bred in Courts or noble Cities. This Phrase implies that Believers were and were to be called out of the World, which for its barrenness, and disorder, and replenishment with wild Beasts, may fitly be compared to a Wilderness, and not only out of the Holy Land, which was as the Garden of God, but also out of the Gentile-World, which in Prophetical Writings is frequently described under the notion of a Wilderness, as Isa. 35. 1. & 43. 19, 20. With al he seems to allude to the People of Israel, which to the wonder and astonishment of all those parts came up out of the Wilderness into Canaan. x To which the Church may not unfitly be compared, partly for its excellent order and comely proportions, partly for its direct and constant motion towards Heaven, and partly to imply that though she was really and inwardly glorious, yet she was outwardly obscure and despicable in the eyes of the World. Possibly the words may be rendred thus, as with (which particle is very frequently understood, as hath been shewed in divers foregoing Texts) Pillars or a Pillar (for the plural number is oft put for the singular) of smoak. And so the sense may be, either, 1. Being conducted out of the Wilderness as by a Pillar of smoak going before them, as the Israelites were led through the Wilderness to Canaan, by a Pillar of Cloud and Fire, Exod. 13. 21, 22. Or rather, 2. Attended with many Prayers and Praises, and other holy performances, which are perpetually ascending from her, and offered by her unto God. So he alludes to those Pillars of smoak which all the day long ascended from those numerous Sacrifices which were offered in the Temple, which also was a Type of the Prayers of the Saints offered by Christ unto his Father, as may be gathered from Rev. 8. 3, 4, 5. But this I only propose. y This doth not belong to the Pillars, as appears by the difference of the numbers in the Hebrew words, the Pillars being plural, and this word singular, but to the Person, to wit, the Spouse, who is said to be thus perfumed, partly for her good Name or Renown, which is compared to Perfumes, Eccl. 7. 1. partly for her excellent Virtues and religious Services which are pleasant and acceptable to God, and to Angels, and Men; and partly for the Merits and Graces of Christ, which are a sweet savour to God, Eph. 5. 2. and wherewith she is enriched and beautified. z Which are fetched by the Merchants from Arabia, or other remote parts of the World for the use of perfuming.

7. Behold, his bed a, which is Solomons b, threescore c valiant men are about it, of the valiant of Israel d.

a These are the words either 1. Of the Bridemen, who spake v. 6. and here continue their speech, and from the admiration of the Bride proceed to the admiration of the Bridegroom. Or, 2. Of the Spouse, who being admired by the Bridemen, turns their Eyes and Thoughts to the Bridegroom, and directs them to the study of his excellencies, and intimates that all her comfort and safety safety is from him. The Bed, the place of rest and conjugal converse, seems to denote the Church, which is comely through Christ's Beauty, and safe by his Protection, in which Christ is glorified, and Believers enjoy sweet fellowship with him, both here in the Church militant, and especially hereafter in the Church triumphant. b Which is the Bed, not of an ordinary Man, but of a great King, whom Solomon represents or typifies, and who is greater than Solomon. Nor is it hard to understand the Messias under the name of Solomon, his Type and Progenitor, seeing he is, upon the same reason, called David, Jer. 30. 9. Ezek. 34. 23. and elsewhere, especially considering that this whole Book is by the confession both of Jewish and Christian Interpreters to be mystically understood. c (i.e.) Very many, the certain number being put for an uncertain, as is frequent. d He alludes to Solomon's Guard, or Watchmen, whereby he designs all those Creatures, whether Angels, Princes, Ministers, or others, whose Ministry God useth for the Protection of his Church.

8. They all hold swords, being expert in war: every man hath his sword upon his thigh e, because of fear in the night f.

e Is prepared and ready to fight, as this Phrase notes, Exod. 32. 27. Psal. 45. 3. f To prevent those dangers and mischiefs which are most frequent, and most dreadful in the night season. The night may note either, 1. The time of tribulation, temptation, or desertion: Or, 2. The whole time of this life, which may well be called night in respect of that ignorance and Errour, and other kinds of darkness wherewith it is attended, as the future life is compared to a day, this life being the only time wherein such a Guard is necessary.

9. King Solomon made himself a ‖ chariot g of the wood of Lebanon h.

g In which the Royal Bridegroom and Bride might ride together in state, as the manner was in the nuptial solemnities of such persons. By this Chariot he seems to understand the Word of Christ dispensed by his Ministers in the Church, whereby both Christ is exalted and rides triumphantly in the World, conquering his Enemies, and subduing the World to the obedience of the Gospel, and all Believers are carried with safety and comfort through this present evil World into those blessed Mansions of heavenly Glory. h (i.e.) Of Cedars, for which Lebanon was famous: which wood being incorruptible, doth fitly signifie the Word of the Gospel, which endureth for ever, 1 Pet. 1. 25. and is called the everlasting Gospel, Rev. 14. 6. in opposition to the Legal institutions which were to continue only until the time of reformation, as we read Heb. 9. 10.

† Heb. from the daughters.

10. He made the pillars thereof i of silver, the ‖ bottom k thereof of gold, the covering l of it of purple m; the midst n thereof being paved o with love p, † for the daughters of Jerusalem q.

i Whereby the Chariot is either supported or adorned. Which may signifie either, 1. Ministers, who are called Pillars, Gal. 2. 9. and that of silver, because they are, or should be, pure and precious like silver. Or, 2. The firmness and certainty of Christ's Word, both of his Doctrines and Promises, which also are pure as silver, Psal. 12. 6. Although there is no necessity that either this or the following particulars should be distinctly applied to several things in or about the Gospel; but this in the general may suffice, that as all these particulars are added to shew the perfection and beauty of the Chariot, so they do imply that Christ's word is every way amiable, and perfect, and able to make the man of God perfect. k Either, 1. The couch or seat, which was made of, or covered with cloth of Gold. Or, 2. The under and lower part, which was at least covered with pure Gold. Whereby he may seem to understand the foundation of the Word and Promises, which is either God's Covenant, or Christ's Mediation, in whom all the Promises are Yea and Amen. l Either, 1. The curtains whereby persons in the Chariot are covered or hid from the sight of the people. Or rather, 2. The uppermost part of it, either in the outside or the inside of it. Some render the word, the seat or seats. m Which represents Christ's Blood, which is our Propitiatory or covering to shelter us from God's wrath. n The inward parts, especially those between the upper and lower parts, which have been already mentioned. o Covered and adorned. p With beautiful and lovely Ornaments, such as curious Embroidery, enriched with Gold and precious stones: Love being here put for lovely objects, as Fear is oft put for terrible things, as hath been oft noted. Whereby we may understand the Love of Christ to the Sons of Men, or his Lovely Life, and Death, and Resurrection, &c. which is the most amiable part and matter of the Word or Gospel. q For their delight and comfort, who are all concerned, and bear a part in this Marriage.

11. Go forth r, O ye daughters of Zion s, and behold king Solomon t with the crown wherewith his mother crowned him u in the day of his espousals x, and in the day of the gladness of his heart y.

r The Bride, to wit, the Church, bids particular Believers go forth to see this sight. Whereby is implied, that Christians must go out of the World, to wit, in affection, and out of themselves, by denying themselves, and putting off the old man, their corrupt Nature, if they desire to see and enjoy Christ. s The same with daughters of Jerusalem; for Zion and Jerusalem are oft-times promiscuously used in Scripture. t Looking in and through him upon the Messias, who is the King of Peace, and of whom Solomon was an illustrious Type. u Which being applied to Solomon, may design either, 1. The Crown Royal, wherewith his Mother, Bathsheba, is said to have crowned him, because Solomon was crowned by David's Order upon her suggestion, and by virtue of his Promise confirmed by an Oath to her, 1 Kings 1. 16, &c. Or, 2. That Garland or Crown which was usually worn in nuptial solemnities, as may be gathered from Ezek. 16. 12. and is expresly affirmed by divers ancient Writers. But being applied to Christ, it notes that Honour and Glory which was given to him, which though principally done by his Father, yet is here ascribed to his Mother, i.e. to the universal Church, or Congregation of Believers, which in respect of his Humanity may be called his Mother, partly because he was born in, and of, her, and one of her Members, and therefore was subject to her Institutions, whence she is represented as a Woman in travel, bringing forth a Man-child, to wit, Christ, Rev. 12. 1—5. and partly because in a spiritual sense she is said to conceive and bring forth Christ in particular Believers, Gal. 4. 19. And this Mother may be said to crown Christ, both because it is the great design and business of the Church to advance Christ's honour in the World, and because she brings forth Believers, whom Christ esteems as his Crown and Glory, as God calls them, Isa. 62. 3. x When the Church is betrothed or married to him, Jer. 2. 2. Hos. 2. 19. 2 Cor. 11. 2. which is done when the Covenant is made or confirmed between them, or when faithful persons are converted and united to Christ, and more compleatly when they are received by Christ into his more full and immediate fellowship in the Kingdom of Glory. y When he rejoiceth over his Bride, as the Phrase is used Isa. 62. 5. So this is the same thing expressed in other words. The Conversion and Salvation of sinners is the joy of Christ, as appears from Isa. 53. 11. Luk. 15. 32. and many other places of Scripture.

CHAP. IV.

* Chap. 1. 15. & 5. 12.
* Chap. 6. 5, 6.
‖ Or, that eat of, &c.

1. * Behold a, thou art fair b, my love, behold, thou art fair c, thou hast doves eyes d within thy locks e: thy hair f is as a * flock of goats g, ‖ that appear from h mount Gilead i.

a These and the following words are evidently spoken by the Bridegroom to, and concerning, his Spouse. b Not in thy self, but by my beauty, being cloathed with my Righteousness, and adorned with all the Graces of my Spirit, which I acknowledge to be in thee. c He repeats it both to confirm the truth of his assertion, and to shew the sincerity and fervency of his affection to her. d Thou art harmless, chast, &c. as appears by thine Eyes, which commonly discover the temper of the mind or person. See more of this Phrase Ch. 1. 15. And whereas the beauty of the Spouse is here described in her several parts, we need not labour much about the application of each particular to some distinct Member or Grace of the Church, this being the chief design of this description of a Bride which is beautiful in all points, to shew that compleatness and absolute perfection which the Church hath in part received, and shall more fully receive from Christ in the future life. Yet because the Church is a Body, consisting of divers Members, and enriched with variety of Gifts and Graces, I know no reason, but the several parts of this description may have a more special regard to one or other of them. And so her Eyes may here note either, 1. Her Teachers, who are instead of Eyes to her, as the Phrase is, Numb. 10. 31. whence they are called Seers and Guides, &c. Or, 2. The disposition of her mind or heart, which is compared to the Eye, Mat. 6. 22, 23. and is oft discerned in the Eye. e Which being decently composed, make the Eyes appear more amiable, withal this intimates the modesty of her Looks: her Eyes are not wanton, and wandring, or lofty, but sober, and humble, and confined within their proper bounds, looking directly upon her Husband, not looking asquint upon other Lovers, nor minding other Gods or Christs. If the Eyes signifie Teachers, the Locks may note the People assembled together to hear their Teachers, to whom they are a great Ornament when they thrive by his Teaching. f The hair of thine Head, which is a great Ornament to the Female Sex, 1 Cor. 11. 15. This Hair may signifie either, 1. The inward Thoughts and Meditations: Or rather, 2. The outward Conversation, and visible fruits of Holiness, which do greatly adorn the Professors and Profession of Religion, as hair doth the head, as is implied 1 Tim. 2. 9, 10. 1 Pet. 3. 3, 4, 5. g Which are comely and orderly in going, Prov. 30. 29, 31. and afford a goodly prospect. Or rather, or the hair (which word is here to be understood, as appears both from the comparison it self, and from divers places where Goats are put for goats hair, as it is in the Hebrew Text, Exod. 25. 4. & 26. 7. & 35. 26.) of a flock of goats, which in these parts was of extraordinary length, and thickness, and softness, and comeliness, and much more like to the hair of a man or woman than the hair of our Goats is, as is evident both from Scripture, as Gen. 27. 16. 1 Sam. 19. 13. and from the testimony of other ancient Writers, Writers, as Apuleius, Martial, &c. b That feeding there, or coming down thence, or going up thither, ſhew themſelves evidently to thoſe who ſtand below it, or near them. Or, as it is rendred in our margent, and by others, that eat, or graze of, or upon. i Which he mentions as a very fruitful place, and fit for the breeding of all ſorts of cattle, as is manifeſt from *Num.*32.1. Jer. 50. 19. Mich. 7. 4. and eſpecially of Goats, partly becauſe it was an hilly and woody country, and partly becauſe it abounded with roſinous, and oily, and gummy Trees, as appears from Gen. 37. 25. Jer. 8. 22. & 46. 11. wherewith the Goats are much delighted, as Dioſcorides obſerves. And ſome affirm that the Hair of theſe Goats was commonly of a yellow colour, as may ſeem probable from 1 Sam. 19. 13, 16. compared with 1 Sam. 16. 12. and from Cant. 7. 5. which alſo was in ancient times eſteemed a beauty in Men or Women, as the Learned know.

2. Thy teeth are like a flock k of ſheep l that are even ſhorn m, which came up from the waſhing: whereof every one bear twins n, and none is barren among them o.

k Numerous and placed in due order. l Which is here fitly ſupplied out of Cant. 6. 6. where it is expreſſed. m Smooth and even, as alſo clean and white, whereas unſhorn ſheep retain much filth in their wool, even after their waſhing. n Which ſeems to note the two rows of Teeth, like Twins, one directly anſwering to the other; which is a great part of the beauty or comelineſs belonging to the Teeth. Nor let any wonder to hear of ſheep bearing Twins; for that there were many ſuch in the Eaſtern Countries is apparent, not only from holy Scripture, but alſo from the expreſs Teſtimony of Ariſtotle, and other ancient Writers. o Not one Tooth is lacking. By the Teeth ſome underſtand the Teachers, which may be compared to Teeth, becauſe they prepare, and as 'twere chew ſpiritual Food for the People, and to ſuch Teeth as are here deſcribed for their great number and excellent order, and for that purity and fruitfulneſs which is required of them: others underſtand ſome gracious qualification or action of the faithful, either their Faith, which is compared to eating, Joh. 6. 41, &c. and elſewhere, which alſo purifies the heart and life, and produceth good works in abundance; or their Meditation or ſtudy of God, and of his word, whereby, like the clean Beaſts under the Law, they chew the cud, which alſo much promotes their purity and fertility. But, as I ſaid on the firſt verſe, there is no need of a diſtinct Application of every particular, as it is in parables where many things are added for decency, which belong not to the main ſcope, and therefore are neglected in the interpretation of them. The ſcope of this place is only to ſet forth the Churches perfection and beauty by the reſemblance of a beautiful Woman, and one part of beauty conſiſts in the colour and order of the Teeth.

3. Thy lips are like a thread of ſcarlet p, and thy ſpeech is comely q: * thy temples r are like a piece of a pomgranate s within thy locks t. * Chap. 6. 7.

p Fine, and ſmooth, and ſoft, and round, and red, in which the beauty of the Lips conſiſteth. q Which is added partly as another ingredient of an amiable Perſon; and partly to explain the foregoing Metaphor. The Communication or Diſcourſe of Believers is edifying, and comfortable, and acceptable to God, and to ſerious men. Compare Pſal. 45. 2. Col. 4. 6. r Under which doubtleſs he comprehends the cheeks, which are joyned to them, and in which a great part of Beauty lies; which therefore would not have been omitted in this deſcription. s In which there is a lovely mixture of red and white. This may note both the Churches beauty, and her modeſty, which ſheweth it ſelf by bluſhes in thoſe parts when ſhe hath fallen into any ſin, as the higheſt Believers in this World ſometimes do. t A further evidence both of beauty and modeſty. See on v. 1.

4. Thy neck s is like the tower of David t built for an armory, whereon there hang a thouſand bucklers, all ſhields of mighty men u.

s This may ſeem to repreſent the Grace of Faith, by which we are united to Chriſt, as the Body is to the Head by the neck, and through which Chriſtians receive their ſpiritual Food, and conſequently their ſtrength and ability for Action. t Round, and ſmooth, and white, long, and ſtreight, and upright, firm, and ſtrong; and moreover adorned with chains of Gold or Pearl, or the like Ornaments. All which things as they ſet forth the beauty of the neck, ſo they may ſignifie the various excellencies and uſes of Faith. By this Tower he underſtands either 1. The ſtrong hold of Sion, of which ſee 2 Sam. 5. 9. Or rather 2. Some other Tower built by David, when he repaired, and enlarged, and fortified his Royal City, 1 Chr. 11. 8. and uſed by him as an Armory. See Neh. 3. 19, 25, 26, 27. u Either 1. Such as are fit and reſerved for the uſe of mighty men. Or 2. Such as had been uſed either by themſelves, or by their Enemies, from whom they took them by force, and were hung up there as Trophies or Monuments of Victory. Which is added to ſhew that the Church is not only beautiful and glorious, but alſo ſtrong and victorious over all her Enemies, and to intimate the great power and exploits of Faith, of which read Heb. 11. and which is compared to a ſhield, Eph. 6. 16. A thouſand is here put indefinitely for a great number.

5. * Thy two breaſts x are like two young roes that are twins, which feed among the lillies y. * Chap. 7. 3.

x Another part in which beauty conſiſts, Ezek. 16. 7. By which ſome underſtand the two Teſtaments, or the two Sacraments; but theſe are rather Chriſt's than the Churches Breaſts. Others, the Churches fervent Love to Chriſt, and to all the Saints, for the Breaſts ſignifie Love, Prov. 5. 19. Cant. 1. 13. Others her fruitfulneſs, both in good works, and in bringing up Children unto Chriſt, like a Nurſe with her Breaſts. But the following ſimilitude ſeemeth not to reſpect the uſe of the Breaſts, or the Love which is ſignified or manifeſted by them, but their comelineſs. And therefore this is generally to be underſtood of the Churches Beauty in all parts, as hath been ſaid. y (i.e.) In the fields where Lillies grew, as is evident both from Mat. 6. 28. where they are called the Lillies of the field, and from other Scriptures, and from the Teſtimony of other Writers. The Lillies being white and ſwelling, and the Roes of a reddiſh colour, and their Bodies being hid from ſight by the Lillies, their Heads only appearing above them, bear ſome reſemblance to the red nipples appearing in the top of the lilly white Breaſts. But we muſt remember that this Book is a ſacred Paſtoral, and the Bridegroom is repreſented as a Shepherd, and the Bride as a country-Maid, and therefore ſuch ſimilitudes are uſed as are agreeable to perſons of that quality, and ſuch are uſual in prophane Writers of this kind, as the Learned have obſerved. They are compared to Roes for their lovelineſs, of which ſee Prov. 5. 19. to young ones for their ſmallneſs, which in breaſts is a beauty; to Twins for their exact likeneſs.

6. * Until the day † break, and the ſhadows flee away z, I will get me to the mountain of myrrhe, and to the hill of frankincenſe a. * Chap. 2. 17. † Heb. breath.

z Theſe words are uttered by the Bride, *Ch.*2.*v.*17. and here returned by the Bridegroom as an Anſwer to that Requeſt. And this place may be underſtood either 1. Of the day of the Goſpel when all legal ſhadows ſhall vaniſh: Or 2. Of the day of Glory, or of the general Reſurrection, when all manner of ſhadows and Ordinances ſhall ceaſe. Till which time either the Spouſe feeds among Lillies, as was now ſaid, v. 5. or the Bridegroom gets him to the mountains, &c. as it follows. For the words are by moſt joined with the foregoing, and by ſome with the following clauſe. a Either 1. To the Temple at Jeruſalem, which is oft and fitly expreſſed by the name of a mountain or hill, becauſe it was built upon a Mountain, and which may be called a Mountain of Myrrhe and Frankincenſe, becauſe of the abundance of Myrrhe and Frankincenſe which was there uſed and offered; in which place the Church was to feed, and Chriſt would continue his preſence until the dawning of the Goſpel-day. Or, 2. To my Church upon Earth, which was typified by the Mountain of Moriah, and the Temple upon it, and which in Prophetical Writings is called a Mountain, as Iſa. 2. 2, 3. Mich. 4. 1, 2. and elſewhere, and which may well be call'd a Mountain of Myrrhe and Frankincenſe, both for the acceptable ſervices which are there offered to God, and for the precious Gifts, and Graces, and Comforts of the Holy Spirit, which are of a ſweet ſmelling ſavour to God and Men, and which there, and there only, are poured forth. Thus Chriſt directs his Bride, to wit, particular Believers, where they may find and enjoy him, namely in his Church and Ordinances.

7. * Thou art all fair b, my love, there is no ſpot in thee c. * Eph. 5. 27.

b It is needleſs to mention the ſeveral beauties of all thy parts, for in one word thou art wholly beautiful, and it may be ſaid more truly of thee than it was of Abſalom, 2 Sam. 14. 25. that from the ſoal of thy Foot to the Crown of thy Head there is no blemiſh in thee. c Which is not to be underſtood ſimply and abſolutely, as if the People of God were really perfect, and free from all ſin, but either 1. Comparatively, no ſuch ſpot or blemiſh as is in wicked Men, or, as is inconſiſtent with true Grace, of which Moſes ſpeaks, Deut. 32. 5. Or 2. In regard of God's gracious acceptation, in which reſpect he is ſaid, not to behold iniquity in Jacob, Num. 23. 21. God doth not look upon them with a ſevere Eye, as they are in themſelves, but in and through Chriſt, in whom he accepts them as if they were perfect, partly becauſe it is their chief deſign, deſire, and endeavour to be ſo, and partly becauſe Chriſt hath undertaken to make them ſo, Eph. 5. 25, 27. and they ſhall one day be ſuch.

8. ¶ Come with me d from Lebanon e, my Spouſe f, with me from Lebanon: look g from the top of Amana h, from the top of Shenir * and Hermon i, from the lions dens, from the mountains of the leopards k. * Deut. 3. 9.

d Unto the Mountains of Myrrhe, &c. mentioned v. 6. e A known Mountain in the North of Canaan, which is ſometimes mentioned as a pleaſant and glorious place, as Cant. 5. 15. Iſa. 35. 2. Hoſ. 14. 6, &c. in regard of its goodly Cedars; and ſometimes as a barren Wilderneſs, as Iſa. 29. 17. and ſeat of Wild-Beaſts, as 2 Kin. 14. 9. Which latter ſenſe ſeems more agreeable, both to the oppoſition which is here tacitly made between this Mountain and the Mountain of Myrrhe, and to the quality of the other Mountains here joined with Lebanon, and to the laſt clauſe of the verſe. f This is the firſt time that Chriſt gives her this name, name, which he now doth both to encourage and oblige her to go with him. g To the place to which I invite thee to go, which from those high Mountains thou maist easily behold, the sight of which will certainly enflame thee with desire to go thither. He alludes to Moses his beholding the promised Land from mount Pisgah. h Not that Amana which divided Syria from Cilicia, which was too remote from these parts, but another of that name not far from Lebanon. i Which may be the names of two tops of the same Mountain, as Horeb and Sinai seem to have been. Or, Shenir, or (the copulative, and, being put disjunctively for or, as it is in many places, which have been observed before) Hermon, for this Mountain is called both Shenir and Hermon, Deut. 3. 9. and the latter name, Hermon, may be added to the former, as being better known to the Israelites. k From these or other such like Mountains, which are inhabited by Lions and Leopards. Which seems to be added as an Argument to move the Spouse to go with him, because the places where now she was, were not only barren, but also dangerous, as being the Habitations of Tyrants and Persecutors, and wild or salvage People, who are oft described by the names of wild Beasts, whose natures they have, and whose practices they imitate.

‖ Or, taken away my heart.

9. Thou hast ‖ ravished my heart l, my sister m, my spouse; thou hast ravished my heart with one of thy eyes n, with one chain of thy neck o.

l I am overcome with thy beauty, and therefore am so desirous of thy company. m So he calls her, partly because both he and she had one and the same Father, to wit, God, yea, and Mother too, being both at this time born in and of the Commonwealth and Church of Israel; and partly to shew the greatness of his Love to her, which is such as cannot be sufficiently expressed by any one Relation, but must borrow the Perfections and Affections of all to describe it. n With one glance of one of thine Eyes. By which Phrase he intimates the Modesty and Humility of the Church, which was ashamed or afraid to look fully and directly upon the Bridegroom with both her Eyes, and withal alludes to the ancient custom of Virgins, who used to cover their Faces with a Veil, and to look out only with one of their Eyes for the direction of their steps. By this one Eye he seems to mean that fundamental Grace of Faith, by which Christians look upon Christ, and discern his beauty, and which is precious in the sight of God and of Christ. o With one of those other Graces and Perfections wherewith thou art adorned. How then should I be ravished if thou didst discover both thine Eyes, and thy whole Countenance, and all thine excellent Gifts and Graces!

10. How fair p is thy love q, my sister, my spouse! * how much better is thy love than wine r! and the smell of thine ointments s than all spices!

p How amiable and acceptable to me. q I do not disdain thy love, as I might do, but take it kindly, and prise it highly. r Of which see on, chap. 1. 2, 4. s Of the Gifts and Graces of God's Spirit, wherewith thou art anointed. Compare Isa. 61. 1. 1 Joh. 2. 20, 27.

11. Thy lips, O my spouse, drop as the honeycomb t: honey and milk u are under thy tongue x, and the smell of thy garments y is like the smell of Lebanon z.

t Thy Speeches both to me in Prayer and Praises, and to men for their Edification, are highly acceptable to me. u Words more sweet and comfortable than Honey or Milk. x By which Phrase he may possibly intimate, that her words were not uttered in Hypocrisie, or with evil design, as many fair and smooth Speeches are, but proceed from her very Heart which is under her Tongue, as mischief is said to be under his Tongue, Psal. 10. 7. who devised it in his Heart. y Of that Righteousness wherewith I have cloathed and adorned thee. Christ and the Graces of the Spirit are oft compared to Garments, as Rom. 13. 14. Eph. 4. 24. 1 Pet. 5. 5. z Which is also mentioned and commended Hos. 14. 6. which must needs be very sweet and grateful in regard of the great numbers of sweet-smelling Spices and Trees which grew in that Mountain.

12. A garden a † inclosed b is my sister, my spouse: a spring c shut up d, a fountain sealed e.

a For Order and Beauty, for pleasant Walks, and Flowers, and Fruits. b Either 1. Defended by the care of my Providence: Or, 2. Reserved for my proper use. She will not admit of other Lovers, either false Teachers, or worldly Lusts, but keeps her self close for me. She is chast, and pure, and modest, as Virgins are or should be. c Either 1. For others, sending forth the wholsom streams of saving Doctrine, for the refreshing, and healing, and cleansing of those who receive it. Or, 2. Within her self, being well watered, i.e. replenished with spiritual Graces and Blessings, which are frequently compared to waters, both in the Old and New Testament, as Isa. 44. 3. Joh. 4. 10. & 7. 38. for which the Church is compared to a watered Garden, or Spring of water, Isa. 58. 11. d Either 1. To preserve it from all pollution, or injury: Or, 2. To reserve it for the use and service of its owner, for which reason Springs were shut up in those Countries where water was scarce and precious, as Gen. 29. 3. e The same thing is here repeated in other words.

13. Thy plants f are an orchard g of pomgranates, with other pleasant fruits, ‖ camphire with spikenard h.

f The plants of thy Garden, Believers which are planted in thee. g Are like the plants or fruits of an Orchard, which are pleasant to the Eye, and delicious to the taste or smell, such as are here mentioned in the following words. Whereby he signifies the variety and excellency of Gifts and Graces in the several members of the Church. h Which he mentions both here with camphire or cypress, and in the next verse with saffron, because it is mixed with both these, and being so mixed, yieldeth the more grateful smell.

14. Spikenard and saffron, calamus and cinnamon, with all trees of frankincense i, myrrhe and aloes, with all the chief spices.

i Such Trees as produce Frankincense. Or, as others, both ancient and modern, render it, Trees of Lebanon, such sweet smelling Trees and Plants as grew in Lebanon, of which see above on v. 11.

15. A fountain of gardens, a well of living waters k, and streams from Lebanon l.

k These are the words either 1. Of the Bride, who returns this Answer to the Bridegroom. Thou calleſt me a Fountain, but in truth thou only art that Fountain from whence I derive all my streams of comfort: Or rather, 2. Of the Bridegroom, who hath hitherto been speaking to and of the Church, and still continues his Speech. He seems to add this by way of correction to, or exposition of what he said v. 12. Though my Spouse be in some sort a Fountain shut up or sealed, yet that is not so to be understood as if she kept her Waters to her self, for she is like a Fountain or Well of living or running water, which floweth into Gardens, and maketh its Flowers and Plants to grow and flourish. The Church conveyeth those Waters of Life which she receiveth from Christ unto particular Believers and Congregations. l Like those sweet and refreshing Rivers which flow down from Mount Lebanon, of which Jordan is one.

16. ¶ Awake m, O north-wind, and come thou south, blow upon my garden n, that the spices thereof may flow out o: let my beloved come into his garden p, and eat his pleasant fruits q.

m Or, Arise, either 1. To be gone, as being commonly hurtful to Plants and Gardens: Or rather, 2. To come, as the next clause explains it: For both the North-wind and the South-wind have their several uses in Gardens, the former to purge and cool the Air, and to bring fair weather, the latter to warm and moisten the Earth, and cherish the Plants. And these Winds may signifie the several Dispensations either of God's Providence, or rather of his Spirit, which is compared to the wind, Joh. 3. 8. whereby the following effects are produced. n This verse is spoken by the Spouse, as appears from the last clause of it. And she calls the Garden both hers and his, because of that oneness which is between them, ch. 2. 16. whereby they have a common Interest one in another's person and concerns. o That my Graces may be exercised to thy Glory, the Edification of others, and my own comfort. p Let Christ afford his gracious presence more and more to his Church. q And let him delight himself in that Service and Glory which is given to him, both by the religious Worship, and by the holy conversations of his People.

CHAP. V.

1. I Am come into my garden a, my sister, my spouse; I have gathered my myrrhe with my spice, I have eaten my honey-comb with my honey, I have drunk my wine with my milk b: eat, O friends c, drink, ‖ yea, drink abundantly, O beloved.

a This is the Bridegroom's Answer to her Request, delivered in the next foregoing words. b I have eaten of my pleasant fruits, as thou didst desire. I have taken notice of, and delight in the service and Obedience of my People. c The friends of the Bridegroom. Whereby he understands either 1. The holy Angels and glorified Saints, who in a sublime and spiritual sense may be said to eat and drink in Heaven, the happiness whereof is frequently represented under the name and notion of a Feast: Or rather, 2. Believers or Members of the Church militant upon Earth, who by the Argument of Christ's gracious presence with them, and acceptation of their works signified in the last words, are here invited and encouraged with great freedom and chearfulness to eat and drink their spiritual Food, to feed upon God's Holy Word and Sacraments, to eat the Flesh and drink the Blood of the Son of God, who here gives them an hearty welcome to this Feast.

2. ¶ I sleep d, but my heart waketh e: it is the voice of my beloved f that knocketh g, saying, Open to me h, my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled i: for my head is filled with dew k, and my locks with the drops of the night l.

d Heb. I was asleep, (i. e.) I was dull, and sluggish, and insensible of his kind Expressions, and offers of Grace. e Yet in my very sleep my thoughts were running upon my Beloved, as is not unusual in such cases, which at last awakened me. Thus she implies the conflict which was between the Flesh and the Spirit, and the Spirits Victory in the Combate. f Between sleeping and waking I fancied that I heard his voice. g By his Word, and Providence, and Spirit, at the door of mine Heart, desirous that I would receive him by Faith and Love. Compare Rev. 3. 20. h Inviting me to accept of his gracious Offers, and to let him into my Soul. i This heap of kind compellations signifies Christ's sincere and fervent affection to his people, notwithstanding her manifold imperfections and infirmities. The title of dove signifies her Chastity, and constant faithfulness to her Husband, for which Doves are famous. How she is undefiled see on ch. 4. 7. k Whilest I wait without thy door. He alludes to the custom of Lovers, which oft and willingly suffer such inconveniencies for their hopes and desires of enjoying their Beloved, and signifies his sufferings for the Churches good. l The dew which falls in the end of the night, or towards the morning, whence it is called Morning dew, Hos. 6. 4.

3. I have put off my coat m, how shall I put it on n? I have washed my feet o, how shall I defile them?

m My day-cloaths, as persons use to do when they go to rest. n It is inconvenient and troublesom to do it at this time. Thus she tacitly reflects upon the Bridegroom for coming to her so unseasonably, and giving her such disturbance, and puts him off to another time, and excuseth her non-admission of him by her present indisposition, and the difficulty of the thing required of her. o Which the Eastern people commonly did when they went to Bed, partly to cool their Feet, and partly to cleanse them from that dust and sweat which they had contracted in the day time by Labour and Travel, as being used to go barefoot.

4. My beloved put in his hand by the hole of the door p, and my bowels were moved || for him q.

|| Or, (as some read) in me.

p He assayed to open the door. When his Word would not prevail, his Spirit, which is called the finger of God, Luk. 11. 20. compared with Mat. 12. 28. wrought inwardly upon my Conscience, and affected mine heart. q With compassion for him and his sufferings, and with affection to him; for both these ways is this Phrase oft used, as Job 37. 1. Phil. 2. 1, 2, &c.

5. I rose up to open to my beloved r, and my hands dropped with myrrhe s, and my fingers with † sweet smelling myrrhe, upon the handles of the lock t.

† Heb. passing, or running about, Nah. 1. 8. Heb.

r I repented of my former drowsiness and neglect, and went forth to receive him. s (i. e.) With Oil or Ointment made of Myrrhe, which either 1. She had taken out of her own stock to prepare her self for the entertainment of the Bridegroom: Or rather 2. Dropped from the Bridegroom's hand upon the door in great abundance, when he put it into the hole of the door, v. 4. and consequently upon her hands and fingers when she touched the door to open it. By which she signifies that Christ though he withdrew himself from her, yet left a sweet savour behind him, infusing into her, and stirring up in her the Graces of the Spirit, such as Repentance, which is bitter as Myrrhe, earnest desire after Christ, &c. t Heb. with Myrrhe passing or flowing upon the handles of the lock, which place the Bridegroom had touched when he attempted to open it.

6. I opened to my beloved, but my beloved had withdrawn himself u, and was gone x: my soul failed y when he spake z: I * sought him a, but I could not find him; I called him, but he gave me no answer b.

u Denied me his gracious and comfortable presence, as a just punishment for my former neglect and folly. x Either she repeats the same thing to shew how deeply she was affected with it: Or this is added to imply that he had not only stepped aside, but was quite gone away. y Heb. went out of me. I fainted and was ready to die away through excessive passion, as this Phrase is used, Gen. 35. 18. & 42. 28. and elsewhere. z Or, for what he spoke, for those endearing Expressions related v. 2. which then I did not heed, but this sad occasion brings them to my remembrance: as oft-times that word which is ineffectual when it is preached, is afterwards brought to a mans mind, and produceth blessed effects. a By diligent inquiry and importunate Prayer. b That so he might both chastise her folly, and quicken her desires, and prepare the way for a more hearty welcome, and his longer abode with her.

7. The watch-men that went about the city c, found me, they smote me, they wounded me d; the keepers of the walls e took away my veil f from me.

c The Governours of the Church, as Ch. 3. 3. who, though by their place and office they be obliged to comfort and protect the faithful, do frequently discourage and oppress them, as they manifestly did both in the days of Isaiah, and Jeremiah, and the other holy Prophets, and in the time of Christ and his Apostles, and in divers other ages. d With bitter Calumnies and Persecutions. e The same with the Watchmen, whose Office it is to keep the Gates and Walls of the City. f Which was an ornament of her Sex, Isa. 3. 23. and a badge of her modesty, Gen. 24. 65. or an ensign of her Relation and Subjection to Christ, Gen. 20. 16. 1 Cor. 11. 5. And so the taking of this Veil away, signifies their contemptuous and injurious usage of her, their endeavours to blast her Reputation, and to represent and treat her as a common and impudent prostitute, and as one that had no Relation to Christ.

8. I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem g, if ye find my beloved †, that ye tell him, that I am sick of love h.

g Of whom see on ch. 1. 5. & 2. 7. The Church having passed the Watchmen, and patiently born, and in a manner forgotten their injuries, proceeds in the pursuit of her beloved, and enquires of every particular Believer or Professor whom she meets concerning him. h That I am ready to faint for want of his presence, and the tokens of his Favour. Use all your interest and importunity with him on my behalf.

9. ¶ What is thy beloved more than another beloved i, * O thou fairest amongst women k? What is thy beloved more than another beloved, that thou dost so charge us?

* chap. 1. 8.

i Wherein doth he excel them? Which Professors of Religion might ask, because they were ignorant of Christ's Excellency, and true Believers might ask it, that they might be more fully informed of it, and might give the Spouse occasion to discourse of that subject which was very grateful to them. k Whose Beauty may command the Respects and Affections of the most worthy persons; and therefore we conclude it must be some person of transcendent excellency with whom thou art so highly enamoured.

10. My beloved is white and ruddy l, † the chiefest m among ten thousand n.

† Heb. a standard-bearer. or, taller than ten thousand.

l Which two colours rightly mixed together, make a Face beautiful. Or the white may note his pure and spotless Innocency, and the brightness of his Glory and Majesty, and the ruddy colour may intimate his bloody passion, which made him amiable both to God and Men. m Heb. the standard-bearer; for such are usually persons of great Eminency, both for Stature, and Courage, and Dignity. n Among all persons, Angels or Men, A certain number is put for an uncertain. There are other Kings, and Priests, and Prophets, but none to be compared with him.

11. His head is as the most fine gold o, his locks p are || bushy, and black as a raven q.

o It shines like Gold, not in respect of the Hair, which is black, as it followeth, but by reason of his Crown of pure Gold upon his Head, Rev. 14. 14. Whereby she implies that her Bridegroom was a King, which she declared above, ch. 3. 11. p In which a part of Mans Beauty consists. I shall not trouble my Reader with a distinct application of this and the following particulars, unto some special part or excellency of Christ, because such things are meer conjectures without any solid grounds, and the only design of this description seems to be this, to set forth the beauty of Christ under the notion of a most compleat and amiable person, in whom there is no defect nor blemish, from the crown of his Head, to the soal of his Feet. q Which is mentioned, partly because this was esteemed a beauty, and partly because it was an evidence of his Youth and vigor, as grey hairs are characters of age and infirmity, Hos. 7. 9.

12. * His eyes are as the eyes of doves r by the rivers of waters s, washed with milk t, and † fitly set u.

* chap. 1. 15. & 4. 1.
† Heb. sitting in fulness, that is, fitly placed, or set as a precious stone in the foil of a Ring.

r Lovely and pleasant, chaste and innocent. s Where they delight to abide, and wherewith they bath themselves, and wash their Eyes, where also their Eyes are most lively and beautiful, both by the reflection of the Waters, and from that pleasure which they take in such places. t Which may belong either 1. To the Eyes, which are supposed to be washed with water, as white and pure as Milk: Or, 2. To the Doves, which are intimated to be of a milk-white-colour, which in those parts was most esteemed, which colour also made the Eyes appear more lovely. u Neither sinking into the Head, nor standing out too much, but in a moderate and comely situation. Heb. sitting in fulness: which may note a full and competently large Eye, which is esteemed one beauty of the Eye.

13. His cheeks x are as a bed y of spices z, as || sweet flowers a: his lips like lillies b, dropping sweet smelling myrrhe c.

|| Or, towers of perfumes.

x His Face or Countenance, an eminent part whereof is the cheeks, in which the Beauty or Deformity of a Face doth much consist. y Which being higher than other parts of the Garden fitly represents the cheeks which are higher than other parts of the Face. z Not of drie spices, for they are not in Beds, but of Aromatical Flowers which delight both the eye with a pleasant prospect, and the smell with their fragrancy. This may also signifie the down or hair upon the bridegrooms cheeks, which is the evidence of his mature and vigorous Age, and may denote that Christ's sweetness and gentleness is accompanied with Majesty, and Gravity, and just severity. a This may be added to explain the the former Phraſe. Or, towers of perfumes, i. e. Boxes in which perfumes were put, which by their height or form, had ſome reſemblance to a Turret. b Beautiful and pleaſant. Or this is meant of that ſort of Lillies which were of a red or purple colour, as ancient Writers affirm, and ſo ſignifie the graceful colour of the Lips. This may note that Grace which was poured into Chriſt's Lips, and which flowed from them in ſweet and excellent diſcourſes. c Not only graceful to the eye, as Lillies are, but alſo fragrant to the ſmell.

14. His hands d are as gold-rings ſet with the beryl e: his belly f is as bright ivory overlaid with Sapphires g.

d The inſtruments of action and of diſtribution, which may deſign the actions of Chriſt, and particularly his diſtributing Gifts and Graces to his Members. e Beautiful, and precious, and richly adorned, as it were with Gold-rings ſet with precious ſtones. f Which ſeems to be here uſed, either, 1. Metonymically, for the bowels which are contained in the belly: Or rather, 2. Synecdochically, for the whole body, reaching from the neck to the bottom of the belly, which is diſtinguiſhed from the face, and the joints, which are deſcribed in the other clauſes. For he ſpeaks here of thoſe parts which are viſible to the eye. And thus here is a compleat deſcription of Chriſt's beauty in all parts from his head to his feet. g Of a pure and bright white colour, intermixt with blue veins; for ſome Sapphires are of a bright blue colour.

15. His legs h are as pillars of marble i, ſet upon ſockets of fine gold k: his countenance l is as Lebanon m, excellent as the cedars.

h The inſtruments of local motion, and the ſupporters of the body. i White, and ſtreight, and well-ſhaped, and ſtrong. Which may note the firmneſs and ſtability of Chriſt's Kingdom in ſpight of all oppoſition. k Which add both beauty and ſtrength to them. Theſe may note his Feet compared to Gold, either for their great price and worth, or for their ſingular brightneſs, for which they are compared to fine braſs, Revel. 1. 15. or, as others, for his golden ſhoes wherewith they were covered or adorned, as the Spouſe is commended from her ſhoes, Cant. 7. 1. l Heb. his aſpect or appearance, his form or perſon, as this Hebrew word is elſewhere uſed. m In reſpect of its Cedars, as the next words explain it, to wit, tall, and upright, and ſtately, and withal pleaſant to the eye.

16. † His mouth is ‖ moſt ſweet n, yea, he is altogether † lovely o. This is my beloved, and this is my friend, O daughters of Jeruſalem p.

n Which was ſaid before in other words, v. 13. and is here juſtly repeated, becauſe it was a principal part of Chriſt's beauty, and the chief inſtrument of the Spouſe's comfort and happineſs, which wholly depends upon his ſweet and excellent Speeches, his holy Precepts, and gracious Offers and Promiſes contained in the Goſpel. o Not to run out into more particulars, in one word there is no part of him which is not exquiſitely beautiful. p And therefore you have no cauſe to wonder or to blame me, if I am tranſported with love to ſo excellent a Perſonage.

CHAP. VI.

* Chap. 1. 8. 1. WHither is thy beloved gone a, * O thou faireſt among women? whither is thy beloved turned aſide b? that we may ſeek him with thee c.

a Theſe are the words of the daughters of Jeruſalem, laſt mentioned, whom this full and pathetical deſcription of the Bridegroom's Excellency had inflamed with Love to him. b To wit, from thee, as thy words imply, v. 6, 8. where doſt thou uſe to look for him, and to find him when thou haſt loſt him? c O thou who art well acquainted with all the places both of his uſual abode, and of his diverſion, inform us who are ignorant of them. We ask not with any evil deſign, but only becauſe we deſire an intereſt in him.

2. My beloved is gone down into his garden d, to the beds of ſpices e, to feed f in the gardens, and to gather lillies g.

d The Spouſe had hitherto been at a loſs for her beloved, but having diligently ſought him, and inflamed both her own and others affections with love to him by her juſt commendations, now at laſt ſhe meets with a gracious Anſwer from God, directing her where to find him, which alſo comes very ſeaſonably, not only for her own relief and comfort, but alſo for the benefit of others, who inquired after him. The garden ſeems to ſignifie the Church Catholick, and the gardens, as it follows here, as alſo the beds, may note the particular Aſſemblies of the faithful, in which Chriſt affordeth his Preſence, and his bleſſing. e In which the Gifts and Graces of God's Spirit, which are fitly compared to Spices, or aromatical Flowers, do appear and grow. f To refreſh and delight himſelf, or to gather the flowers and fruits of it, as men uſe to do in their gardens. g Which may note either, 1. Particular Believers, whom Chriſt gathereth to himſelf in his Church, who are compared to Lillies, Cant. 2. 2. Or, 2. The Prayers and Praiſes rendred to him by his people in the publick Congregations, and all their gracious diſpoſitions & actions.

3. * I am my beloveds, and my beloved is mine: he feedeth among the lillies. * Chap. 2. 16. & 7. 10.

4. ¶ Thou art beautiful, O my love h, as Tirzah i, comely as Jeruſalem k, terrible l as an army with banners.

h Theſe are the words of Chriſt, who had now again manifeſted himſelf to his Church, whereby he declares, that though he had for a ſeaſon hid his face from her, yet ſtill he retained a ſincere and fervent affection to her, and that notwithſtanding her manifold infirmities, ſhe was yet beautiful in his Eyes. i A very pleaſant City, as its very name ſignifies, and therefore made the Royal Seat of the Kings of Iſrael; of which ſee 1 Kings 14. 17. & 15. 21, 33. & 16. 6, &c. k Which was beautiful both for its ſituation, Pſal. 48. 2. and for its goodly buildings, eſpecially the Temple. See Lam. 2. 15. l Either, 1. To ſtrangers, whom by her grave and majeſtick looks and carriage ſhe affrights from rude or bold attempts, whereas ſome Women invite others to familiarity with them by their looſe and wanton carriage. Or, 2. To her Enemies, whom God will certainly deſtroy.

5. Turn away thine eyes from me m, for ‖ they have overcome me: thy hair is as a flock of goats that appear from Gilead n. ‖ Or, they have puffed me up.

m For I can ſcarce bear the luſtre of them. It is a poetical and amatorious expreſſion, ſignifying how beautiful the Church was in Chriſt's Eyes, and how paſſionately he loved her. n This clauſe, and the whole following verſe are repeated from Ch. 4. 1, 2. And this repetition is not vain nor abſurd, but very agreeable to the nature of a Paſtoral and Song of Love, as being an effect and teſtimony of vehement affection, and beſides it confirms what was ſaid before, and ſheweth that the Churches miſcarriage and Chriſt's deſertion of her upon it, had not made him change his opinion of her, or affection to her.

6. Thy teeth are as a flock of ſheep which go up from the waſhing, whereof every one beareth twins, and there is not one barren among them.

7. As a piece of a pomegranate are thy temples within thy locks o.

o This alſo is repeated from Chap. 4. 3.

8. There are threeſcore queens, and fourſcore concubines p, and virgins q without number.

p A certain number for an uncertain. The ſenſe ſeems to be this, There are many beautiful Queens and Concubines in the World, in the Courts of Princes, and particularly in Solomon's Court, but none of them is to be compared with my Spouſe, and my heart is ſet upon none of them, but only upon my Spouſe, as the following verſe declareth. Or, the Queens and Concubines may note the particular Congregations which are called by Chriſt's name, and the Virgins may ſignifie the particular Believers or Profeſſors; all which do make up one Catholick Church, as it follows. Compare the notes on Pſal. 45. 10, 14, 15. q Either, 1. Which wait upon the Queens and Concubines. Or, 2. Which were reſerved as a Nurſery, out of which Queens and Concubines were to be taken.

9. My dove, my undefiled is but one r; ſhe is the only one of her mother s, ſhe is the choice one of her that bare her: the daughters t ſaw her, and bleſſed her; yea, the queens and the concubines, and they praiſed her u.

r The only beloved of my Soul, my only Spouſe, in compariſon of whom I deſpiſe all others. s Of Jeruſalem above, which is the Mother of us all, Gal. 4. 26. Or, if this ſeem to confound the Mother and Daughter, the words may be thus rendred, ſhe is as the only one of her Mother, i. e. ſhe is as dear and precious to me as only children uſe to be to their Parents, and eſpecially to their Mothers. So there is only a defect of the note of ſimilitude, which is frequently underſtood, as hath been formerly noted and proved by undeniable inſtances. t Called Virgins, v. 8. u As more beautiful and worthy than themſelves, which was ſo evident that they were forced to confeſs it.

10. ¶ Who is ſhe x that looketh forth as the morning y, fair as the moon z, clear as the ſun a, and terrible as an army with banners b?

x Theſe are the words either, 1. Of the Bridegroom: Or, 2. Of the Queens and Concubines laſt mentioned, as praiſing of her. And they are either words of inquiry, or rather of admiration and commendation, who, i. e. what manner of perſon is this, how excellent and glorious! And ſo this Pronoun, who, is underſtood, Pſal. 24. 8. Mark 4. 41. compared with Mat. 8. 27. y As the morning light, which coming after the darkneſs of the night is very pleaſant and amiable, which alſo ſuddenly ſpreadeth it ſelf from the Eaſt to the Weſt. z To wit, when it is full, and walking in brightneſs, as the Phraſe is, Job 31. 26. But withal he ſeems to intimate timate that the Church, like the Moon, may have her Eclipses, and be in darkness for a time. a Without any such spots or dark specks as are in the Moon. Which is to be understood in the same sense, that she is said to be without spot, or wrinkle, or blemish, Eph. 5. 27. which she is partly by God's gracious acceptation of her as such in Christ, and through his Righteousness; and partly because she shall be such in the future Life. b See above, v. 4.

‖ Or, almonds. * Chap. 7. 12.

11. I went down c into the garden of ‖ nuts d, to see the fruits of the valley e, and * to see whether the vine flourished, and the pomgranats budded f.

c To wit, when I went away from thee. So this is an account of the reason of his former departure from her. Or, I am come down to visit thee, my garden, Cant. 4. 12. Either way these are the words of the Bridegroom. d In which Nuts and other fruits are planted. By Nuts may be meant either 1. Ordinary Nuts, and so this is supposed to intimate the mean and contemptible condition of the Church in her outward Estate, and that her sweetness is all inward and spiritual. Or, 2. Aromatical Nuts, to wit, Nutmegs, and so this notes how acceptable the Church and her Productions are to Christ. e Which being low, and well watered, is most fruitful. f What beginnings or appearances there were of good fruits or works among Believers, whether their Practices answered their Professions.

† Heb. I knew not. ‖ Or, set me on the chariots of my willing people.

12. † Or ever I was aware g, my soul ‖ made me h like the chariots of Amminadib i.

g I was surprized with a sudden and vehement desire of enjoying my Spouse, which is to be understood figuratively, and so as to agree with the Majesty and Omniscience of Christ. h I made my self; which may signifie Christ's activity in stirring up his Affections to the Church; or I was made; for the active Phrase is oft understood passively; and the Soul is commonly put for the Person. i Eager in my desire, and swift in my motion towards the Church. Amminadib is supposed to be some eminent Charioteer then well known, and famous for his speed in driving Chariots. But this clause with the former is otherwise rendred, both in the margent and by others, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew words, my soul set me on the chariots of my willing (or, as others, noble or princely) people, i.e. which mine and the Bride's friends had prepared to bring me to the Bride with more expedition, into which I ascended with all my Soul, as longing to come to my Bride.

13. Return k, return l, O Shulamite m, return, return, that we may look upon thee n: what will you see o in the Shulamite? as it were the company p ‖ of two armies q.

k Christ recalls his Spouse, who as when Christ was gone she pursued after him, so now when Christ was coming or come to her, she was ready to wander and go astray from him according to the common and corrupt disposition and custom of Mankind, and therefore he seeks to stop or to reclaim her, and to oblige her to return to her first Love, and to repent more throughly than she had yet done. l This word is here repeated four times to signifie both Christ's passionate Love to her, and earnest desire of her return, and her backwardness to it, which made so many calls necessary. m This title signifies either 1. One born in, or belonging to Jerusalem, called also Salem, Psal. 76. 2. Or, 2. The Wife of Solomon, thus called after her Husband's name, see Isa. 4. 1. And as Christ is called by the name of Solomon, ch. 3. 7, 9, 11. so the Church is fitly described by the title of Solomon's Wife. n That I and my companions, and friends may contemplate thy Beauty. o But what do you, my friends, expect to discover in her? Christ proposeth the question, that he may give the following answer; and that they should take special notice of this as a very remarkable thing in her. p Whereby he intimates that this one and onely Spouse was made up of the whole multitude of Believers. q Either 1. Opposite one against the other; and so this may note the conflict between the Flesh and Spirit, which is in all the faithful in this Life. Or, 2. Confederate together, and so this may signifie either 1. The recollection and Union of Jews and Gentiles which shall one day be under Christ as their common head, Eph. 2. 15. Or, 2. The safety and strength of the Church, which is compared to an army with banners, above v. 4, 10. and here to a numerous Host distributed into two Armies. Wherein also there may be an allusion to that story, Gen. 32. 1. where this very word, here rendred, two armies, is used.

CHAP. VII.

The Bridegroom who spake the last words, here continueth his speech, and breaks forth into an elegant and particular description and commendation of the Spouse, partly from the parts of her Body, and partly from her Ornaments. In which the same thing is to be observed which was noted concerning her description of the Bridegroom, that there is no necessity of a distinct application of every parcel of it, the design being only this, to describe the Beauty and Glory of the Church under the representation of a beautiful and noble Woman. This also is observable, that in the description of Christ she begins at the Head, and so goeth downward, ch. 5. 11, &c. but Christ in the description of the Spouse proceedeth from the Feet upwards.

1. How beautiful are thy feet a with shoes b, O princes daughter c! the joints of thy thighs d are like jewels, the work of the hands of a cunning workman e.

a Which being the chief instrument of our motion from place to place, is oft used metonymically for the motion it self, and so may here signifie either the inward motions, the workings of the affections, or the outward motions, the steps or actions of the Life, both which are right and amiable in Believers. b Which were anciently evidences of a free and comfortable state, whereas slaves and mourners use to go barefoot, 2 Sam. 15. 30. Isa. 20. 4. which also in Women of high quality were adorned with Gold and other Ornaments; of which see Isa. 3. 18. These may also signifie that the Feet of Believers should be shod with the preparation of the Gospel of Peace, Eph. 6. 15. c Both by Birth, being born of God, and by disposition and deportment agreeable to that quality. d Either, 1. The hollow place in which the Hip or Thigh-bone moveth and turneth it self: Or rather, 2. The Hip or Thigh-bone which moveth there: for this is more fitly compared to a jewel well set. Some understand this of some Ornaments worn by Women upon those parts; for the word rendred joints may signifie girdles, or any Ornament which encompasseth any part of the Body, and the same words which signifie thighs are both in Hebrew, and other Languages, sometimes used concerning the legs. Which being admitted, this might seem to be understood of the Bride's Garters about her Legs, which not unfitly follows the Shoes upon her Feet last mentioned. But this sense seems not to suit so well with the following comparison as the former doth. e Like Jewels orderly and excellently set by a skilful Artist. So this signifies the uprightness and decency of her going, which depends very much upon the right situation of the Hip or Thigh-bone, which when it is dislocated or disordered causeth a lameness or uncomeliness in going; whereby he understands the orderliness and amiableness of her conversation.

2. Thy navel is like a round goblet f which wanteth not † liquor g: thy belly h is like an heap of † Heb. mixed wheat i, set about with lilies k.

f To which it is not unfitly compared because it is of a round form, and hollow, and hath windings and circlings in it. g Thy Navel is not only comely but fruitful. For the Navel is the proper instrument of nourishing the Child or Children which are in the Womb. And so this seems to signifie the Churches fruitfulness partly in her self, in cherishing and improving all the Graces and good motions of God's Spirit within her; and principally in reference to those many Children which she bears and feeds in her Womb with the wholesom liquor of God's Ordinances. h In which thy Children are for a time contained and fed. i i.e. Of wheat corn, round and swelling, as it is in Women with child, and full of nourishment, not only of Liquor, as was last said, but also of Meat, which may note the various provisions which Christ hath laid up in his Church according to the several capacities of her Children, Milk for Babes, and stronger Meat for those who are grown up. k Not for defence, which the Church doth not need, having the strong God for her Protector, but for Ornament and Beauty. Whereby is implied, that she is not only fruitful but beautiful, and that her Children are not only numerous and well fed, but also comely and delightful to the Eye, as Lilies are, and withal pure and innocent, in which respect both Christ and the Church are compared to Lilies, Cant. 1. 1, 2.

3. * Thy two breasts are like two young roes that are twins l. * Chap. 4. 5.

l Which is repeated from Ch. 4. 5. where it is explained.

4. Thy neck m is as a tower of ivory n, thine eyes o like the fishpools p in Heshbon q, by the gate of Bathrabbim: thy nose r is as the tower of Lebanon s, which looketh toward Damascus t.

m Of which see on Ch. 4. 4. n Clear, and smooth, and long, and streight, and erected. o Of which see on Ch. 1. 15. & 4. 1. p Full, and clear, and quiet, and pleasant. Possibly here were two fish-ponds, which being conveniently seated in a large field, might bear some resemblance to the Eyes placed in the Head. q A pleasant and well watered City, beyond Jordan, as we may guess from Num. 32. where doubtless there were some eminent and well known fish-pools, as further appears by the exact description of the particular place here following, in which they were. r The instrument of smelling and discerning between pleasant and loathsom things; which may signifie the Churches sagacity in discerning between good and evil. s Which, though it be not elsewhere mentioned, was in all probability built by Solomon in the Mountain of Lebanon, which was the Northern Border of the Land of Israel towards Damascus, and therefore a very fit place for a watch Tower. To this Tower her Nose is compared, not for its greatness, but for its comely and convenient proportions, and beautiful aspect, which doubtless were in this as well as in the rest of Solomon's Buildings. t Which words seem to be added to distinguish this from another Tower or Building, in, or near to Jerusalem, which was called the house of the forrest of Lebanon, 1 Kin. 7. 2.

5. Thine head u upon thee x is like ‖ Carmel y, and the hair of thine head like purple z, the king is † held in the galleries a. ‖ Or, crimson. † Heb. bound.

u Which may ſignifie the Churches Mind or Underſtanding, which is ſeated in the head. x Which is upon thee, or above the reſt of thy Body. y Eminent and pleaſant to the Eye, and fruitful as Mount Carmel was, as hath been formerly noted. Which may note that her Mind was adorned and repleniſhed with knowledge and other excellent Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt. Or, as others render it, like crimſon or purple, which is called Carmel, 2 Chr. 2. 7. & 3. 14. becauſe thoſe fiſhes, out of which they had their purple, were taken in the Sea bordering upon Mount Carmel. And ſo the ſame thing is repeated in the next clauſe in other words. z Which colour was anciently much eſteemed, and commended, as by ſacred, ſo alſo by prophane Writers. a In which he walketh, and having once eſpied thee, is captivated by thee, and unable or unwilling either to depart, or to take off his Eyes from thee, as if he were faſt bound and chained to thee. The galleries may note either the Ordinances, or rather the Churches, in which Chriſt walketh, Rev. 2. 1. in which Chriſt and Believers converſe together.

6. How fair and how pleaſant art thou b, O love, for delights c!

b It were infinite to reckon up all the particulars of thy Beauty, in one word, thou art univerſally amiable beyond Expreſſion. c For thoſe various lovely features which are in thee, and for the great and manifold delights which are or may be enjoyed in converſing with thee.

7. This thy ſtature is like to a palm-tree d, and thy breaſts to cluſters e of grapes f.

d Tall and ſtreight, or upright, as a Tree. And he ſeems to mention the Palm-tree, rather than any other, partly becauſe it grows more directly upward than other Trees; and partly becauſe it is conſtantly green and flouriſhing, and groweth upward, in ſpight of all preſſures, and therefore was uſed in feſtival ſolemnities, Lev. 23. 40. Joh. 12. 13. and was a ſymbol of Victory, Rev. 7. 9. In all which reſpects it fitly repreſents the ſtate of Believers. e Large, and round, and full of juice. See on v. 3. This particular is added as an evidence of her maturity and married eſtate, and of her fruitfulneſs. f Which word may eaſily be ſupplied out of the next verſe. Although the fruit of the Palm-tree alſo is ſaid to grow in cluſters.

8. I ſaid g, I will go up to the palm-tree h, I will take hold of the boughs thereof i: now alſo thy breaſts ſhall be as cluſters of the vine, and the ſmell of thy noſe k like apples l.

g Within my ſelf, I reſolved. h I will climb up, that ſo I may take hold, as it follows, of the boughs, which do not grow out of the ſides, as in other trees, but only at the top of it. i Partly to prune and dreſs them, and partly to gather the fruit. Whereby is ſignified Chriſt's care of his Church, and his delight in her. k Of thy breath; which is oft called the breath of, or in, a mans noſtrils, Gen. 7. 22. Iſa. 2. 22. Lam. 4. 20. l Either 1. Common Apples, which ſometimes yield a very pleaſant ſmell: Or 2. Odoriferous Apples. See on chap. 2. 5.

9. And the roof of thy mouth m like the beſt wine n, for my beloved o, * that goeth down † ſweetly p, cauſing the lips ‖ of thoſe that are aſleep, to ſpeak q.

m Either 1. Thy ſpeech, the palate being one of the principal inſtruments of Speech: Or rather, 2. Thy taſte, whereof the Palate or Roof of the Mouth is the moſt proper and principal inſtrument, Job 34. 3. But then this is not to be underſtood actively of her taſt, but paſſively of the taſt or reliſh, which her beloved had of her; as in the foregoing clauſe, the ſmell of her noſe was not meant ſubjectively or actively of that ſenſe of ſmelling which was ſeated in her Noſe, but objectively or paſſively of the breath of her Noſtrils, which was ſweet to the ſmell of her beloved. n Grateful and refreſhing, o Either 1. For thee my beloved, who reapeſt the comfort and benefit of that pleaſure which I take in thee: Or 2. For me thy beloved, or according to thy uſual expreſſion, for my beloved. Which words Chriſt takes as it were out of her Mouth, and repeats them emphatically. Which agrees very well to the ſtile and uſage of theſe dramatical and amatorious Writings. And this clauſe further intimates the Churches Loyalty or Faithfulneſs to Chriſt, that ſhe reſerves her ſelf, and all her loves for Chriſt alone. p Whereas bad Wine either goeth down ſlowly and tediouſly, or is not permitted to go down at all; Heb. that walketh directly, or, that moveth it ſelf aright, which is given as the character of good Wine, Prov. 23. 31. q Cauſing the moſt dull, and ſtupid, and ſleepy headed perſons to ſpeak, and that fluently and eloquently, which is a common effect of good wine.

10. ¶ * I am my beloveds r, and his deſire is towards me s.

* Ch. 2. 16. & 6. 3.

r This and the following verſes contain the words of the Bride, in anſwer to the Bridegroom's moſt indearing Expreſſions delivered in the foregoing Verſes. s I perceive, and am fully ſatisfied, that he heartily loves me. It is my duty to have my deſire towards him as my Husband, according to God's Sentence, Gen. 3. 16. but it is a wonderful condeſcenſion in him, that his deſire is towards me.

11. Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field t: let us lodge in the villages u:

t That being retired from the crowd, we may more freely and ſweetly converſe together, and may obſerve the ſtate of the fruits of the Earth. u In one of the villages, as Cities is put for one of the Cities, Judg. 12. 7.

12. Let us get up early x to the vineyards y, let us ſee if the vines flouriſh, whether the tender grapes † appear, and the pomgranates bud forth z: there will I give thee my loves a.

x The Church having offended and loſt her beloved by her former lazineſs, now doubles her diligence, and diſcovers how eatneſtly ſhe was ſet upon the following work. y To particular Congregations. See Cant. 6. 1. Iſa. 5. 1. z Let us enquire into the ſucceſs of our Labours, what Souls are brought in and built up, how they proſper and grow in Grace, whether they abound in good Works, &c. a There, I will diſcover the ſincerity and fervency of my affections to thee, and maintain communion with thee in thy holy Ordinances.

13. The mandrakes b give a ſmell, and at our gates c are all manner of pleaſant fruits, new and old d, which I have laid up for thee e, O my beloved.

b This Hebrew word is uſed Gen. 30. 14, 15. and the ſignification of it is very much doubted and diſputed by Interpreters; of which ſee my Latin Synopſis on that place. But this is certain that the word ſignifies ſweet and pleaſant flowers, and therefore if it be underſtood of Mandrakes, they were of another ſort than ours, as it is no unuſual thing for flowers of the ſame kind in ſeveral Climates to have very differing Natures and Qualities. c Either 1. Growing there upon the Walls, or in Gardens, or Orchards, near the door of our dwelling-Houſe: Or rather 2. Brought thither by divers Perſons to congratulate and adorn our Nuptials, or laid up for our entertainment, as may be gathered from the nature of the fruits, which were not only new, and growing, but alſo old, and laid up, as it here follows. d Fruits of this year, and of the former, that the variety might delight. Which ſeems to be ſpiritually meant of the various fruits and operations of the Spirit, and degrees of Grace in ſeveral Believers. e Which have been produced by my Miniſtry for thy Service and Glory.

CHAP. VIII.

1. O That thou were as my brother a that ſucked the breaſts of my mother b; when I ſhould find thee without c, I would kiſs thee d, yea, † I ſhould not be deſpiſed e.

† Heb. they ſhould not deſpiſe me.

a Moſt intimate and free, and familiar with me, as Brethren and Siſters commonly are. b That came out of the ſame womb, and ſucked the ſame breaſts, and conſequently were Brother and Siſter by Father and Mother too; for ſuch are moſt dear to one another. See Gen. 43. 29. Deut. 13. 6. Heb. Sucking the breaſts, &c. So ſhe wiſheth that he were as a little ſucking Brother, with whom ſhe might innocently and inoffenſively delight her ſelf, as Siſters do with ſuch a Brother. The Church here expreſſeth her paſſionate deſire of a ſtricter Union, and cloſer Communion with Chriſt than yet ſhe had attained. And in particular, theſe may be the breathings of the ancient Jewiſh Church after Chriſt's Incarnation, whereby he was to be their Brother, Rom. 8. 29. Heb. 2. 11, 12. and a ſucking Infant. c In the open ſtreets; I might then expreſs my Affections to thee, and kiſs thee openly without any ſcandal or contempt. Or, without, (i.e.) come forth from the Fathers boſom into the World, Joh. 16. 28. d I would demonſtrate my Reverence, and Subjection, and Affection to thee, of all which kiſſing was a token in thoſe times and places, as hath been oft obſerved in divers foregoing Texts. e Then ſhould I not be aſhamed or cenſured, as if I had done an indecent or immodeſt action, becauſe ſuch Expreſſions of Love are uſual amongſt perſons ſo nearly and dearly related.

2. I would lead thee, and bring thee f into my mothers houſe g, ‖ who would inſtruct me h: I would cauſe thee to drink of * ſpiced wine of the juice of my pomgranate i.

* Prov. 9. 2.

f With joy and triumph, as the Bridegroom was uſually brought to the Brides houſe. See Pſal. 45. 15, 16. g Either 1. My Mothers in Law, my Husbands Mother, as the cuſtom was, Gen. 24. 67. Judg. 12. 9. Or 2. My own Mothers; to ſhew her extraordinary Reſpect and Affection to him. In the myſtical ſenſe both come to one; for the univerſal Church was in ſome ſort both his and her Mother. h To wit, how I ſhould behave my ſelf towards thee. Or, where ſhe did inſtruct or educate me. i I would give thee the beſt entertainment which the Houſe affords. My Gifts and Graces ſhould all be employed to ſerve and glorifie thee.

3. * His left hand ſhould be under my head, and his right hand ſhould embrace me k.

* Ch. 2. 6.

k The ſame expreſſions are uſed, ch. 2. 6. The ſenſe is, He would not deſpiſe me for my forwardneſs in ſhewing my affections to him, as men commonly do in like caſes, but would kindly accept of my Love, and return Love for it.

* Chap. 2. 7. & 3. 5. † Heb. why should ye stir up, or why, &c.

4. * I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem, † that ye stir not up, nor awake my love until he please l.

l This verse is here repeated again from Ch. 2. 7. & 3. 5. where see the Explication of it.

* Chap. 3. 6.

5. (* Who is this that cometh up from the wilderness m, leaning upon her beloved n?) I raised thee up o under the apple-tree p; there thy mother brought thee forth q, there she brought thee forth that bare thee.

m These words are repeated from Ch. 3. 6. of which see the Notes there. This and the next clause are the words either, 1. Of the Daughters of Jerusalem, or the Friends of the Bride and Bridegroom, admiring and congratulating this happy conjunction: Or, 2. Of the Bridegroom, who proposeth the question, that he may give the answer here following. n Which implies both great freedom and familiarity, and fervent affection, and dependance upon him. If these be the Bridegroom's words, he speaketh of himself in the third Person, which is usual in the Hebrew Language. o When thou wast faln, and laid low, and wert dead in trespasses, and in the depth of misery, I revived thee. p Under my own shadow; for she had compared him to an apple-tree, and declared, that under the shadow of that Tree she had both delight and fruit, Cant. 2. 3. which is the same thing with this raising up. q Under that Tree, either the Universal or the Primitive Church did conceive and bring thee forth.

6. ¶ Set me as a seal upon thine heart, as a seal upon thine arm r: for love s is strong as death t, jealousie u is † cruel x as the grave: the coals thereof are coals of fire y, which hath a † most vehement flame.

† Heb. hard. † Heb. flame of the Lord.

r These are undoubtedly the words of the Bride. The sense is, Let thy mind and thy heart be constantly set upon me, let me be engraven upon the Tables of thine Heart. He seems to allude to the engraven Tablets which are frequently worn upon the Breast, and to the signet on a mans arm or hand, which men prize at a more than ordinary rate, as appears from Jer. 22. 24. Hag. 2. 23. and which are continually in their sight. s My Love to thee, from whence this desire proceeds. t Which conquers every living thing, and cannot be resisted nor vanquished. u Or, zeal; my ardent Love to thee, which also fills me with fears and jealousies, lest thou shouldest bestow thine affections upon others, and cool in thy Love to me, or withdraw thy Love from me: for true Believers are subject to these passions. x Heb. hard, grievous and terrible, and sometimes ready to overwhelm me, and swallow me up; and therefore have pity upon me, and do not leave me. y It burns and melts my heart like fire.

* Prov. 6. 35.

7. Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it: * if a man would give all the substance of his house for love, it would utterly be contemned z.

z It is the nature of Love in general, and of my Love to thee, that it cannot be taken off, neither by terrours and afflictions, which are commonly signified in Scripture by waters and floods, Psal. 32. 6. & 42. 7. and elsewhere; nor by temptations and allurements. Nothing but the presence and favour of the beloved person can quiet and satisfie it. And therefore do not put me off with other things, but give me thy self, without whom, and in comparison of whom I despise all other persons and things.

8. ¶ We a have a little sister b, and she hath no breasts c: what shall we do for our sister d in the day when she shall be spoken for e?

a These are manifestly the words of the Bride, still continuing her speech. b The present Church, which was that of the Jews, speaks of another future Church, which was to consist of the Gentiles, which she calls little, because she was the younger Sister, and then scarce had a being; and she calls her her Sister, partly because she was so in the purpose of God, their common Father, though at present she was a stranger to him; and partly to intimate that the Gentile-Church should be admitted to the participation of the same priviledges with that of the Jews. c No grown and full breasts, as Virgins have when they are ripe for Marriage, Ezek. 16. 7. This signifies the present doleful estate of the Gentiles, which as yet were not grown up into a Church Estate, and wanted the milk or food of life, as for it self, so also for its Members. d Teach us to know and perform our duty to them, which is to embrace them with sincere and fervent affections, to promote their coming in to Christ, and to rejoice in it, and not to envy it, and murmur at it, as the Jews did in the days of Christ, and of his Apostles. e To wit, for bringing her into the state of Matrimony: when Christ, and his Apostles, and others the first Ministers of the Gospel, who were Members of the Jewish Church, did speak and act for the conversion of the Gentiles.

9. If she be a wall, we will build upon her a palace of silver: and if she be a door, we will inclose her with boards of cedar f.

f This seems to be Christ's Answer to the foregoing question of the Jewish Church concerning their Sister Church of the Gentiles, for which they were very solicitous. Christ therefore engageth himself to take care of her, and to provide for her, as the matter doth require, and as suits best with her condition. If the Gentiles when they are converted shall be like a Wall, strong and firm in Faith, stedfast against all assaults and temptations, for a Wall in Scripture-use signifies strength, Isa. 26. 1. Jer. 15. 20. and elsewhere g We, my Father, and I, and the Holy Ghost, as the principal Builders, and my Ministers as workers with, and under us, will build upon her a palace of silver, will add more strength and beauty to her, will enlarge and adorn her, make her more amiable in mine Eyes, and more visible and glorious in the Eyes of the World: And if she be as a Door, which is weaker than a Wall, and where the Enemy doth or may break in upon her, if she be weak in Faith, and sometimes overcome by the Tempter, yet we will not therefore reject and forsake her, but we will inclose, or (as many others render the word) strengthen or fortifie her with boards of Cedar, which are not only beautiful, but also strong, and durable. If she be sincere, and open the door of her Heart to me, though she be weak, I will come in to her, and make her stronger.

10. I am a wall g, and my breasts like towers h: then was I in his eyes, as one that found † favour i.

g These seem to be the words of the Jewish Church to Christ, O Lord, by thy Grace I am what thou wouldst have my Sister to be, a Wall, and therefore do humbly beg and hope, that according to thy promise to her in that case, thou wilt build upon me a Palace of Silver. h Which stand out from and above the Wall, and are an ornament and defence to it. Of the Churches Breasts, see before Ch. 4. 5. & 7. 3. 7. i When by his Grace I was made a Wall, he was well-pleased with me, and with his own workmanship in me.

11. Solomon had a vineyard at Baal-hamon k, he let out the vineyard unto keepers: every one for the fruit thereof was to bring a thousand pieces of silver l.

k A place not far from Jerusalem, where Solomon had, as it seems, a noble vineyard. l Whereby he signifies both the vast extent of the Vineyard which required so many keepers, and its singular fertility which afforded so great a Rent.

12. My vineyard m which is mine, n, is before me o: thou, O Solomon, must have a thousand p, and those that keep the fruit thereof, two hundred q.

m My Church, which is oft compared to a Vineyard, and is here opposed to Solomon's Vineyard. It is much doubted and disputed whether this verse be spoken by Christ, or by the Spouse; the first clause seems to agree best to the former, and the following clause to the latter. Possibly the difficulty may be reconciled by ascribing the first clause to Christ, and the latter to the Spouse: such interlocutions being familiar in this Book, and in other Writings of this kind. n This Repetition is not idle, but very emphatical, to shew that Christ had a more eminent and special title to his Vineyard, the Church, than Solomon had to his Vineyard, because it was purchased not by his money, but by his blood, and because it was his, not only for the short time of this present life, as Solomon's was, but to all eternity. o Is under my own eye and care, and is not wholly committed to the care and management of others, as Solomon's was; I the Lord do keep it night and day, as we read Isa. 27. 3. I am with it to the end of the world, Mat. 28. 20. p These are the Churches return to Christ, who is here called Solomon, as he was, Ch. 3. 9. 11. as elsewhere he he is called David. Dost thou, O Christ, keep thine own Vineyard, which Solomon did not? Then surely it is meet that thou shouldst receive, and thou shalt receive as large a revenue from thy Vineyard, as he did from his. q Though the chief revenue belongeth, and is justly given to thee, yet thy Ministers, who serve thee in thy Vineyard shall have, and are allowed by thee to receive, some encouragement for their service. See 1 Cor. 9. 7.

* Chap. 2. 14.

13. Thou that dwellest r in the gardens s, the companions t hearken to thy voice u: * cause me to hear it x.

r The Hebrew word is of the Feminine gender, which plainly sheweth that Christ speaks here to his Spouse, being about to depart from her for a season, as the next verse sheweth. s Not in the Wilderness of the World, for Believers are chosen, or called out of the world, Joh. 15. 19. but in the Church, the Garden of God, which God hath fenced and appropriated to himself. He saith, Gardens, because of the many particular Congregations, into which the Church is divided. t The friends of the Bride and Bridegroom. u Diligently observe all thy words and carriages towards me, and all the transactions between thee and me. x When I am gone from thee, let me hear thy Prayers, and Praises, and the preaching of my Gospel to the World.

† Heb. flee away. * Rev. 22. 17, 20.

14. ¶ † * Make haste, my beloved, and be thou like to a roe, or to a young hart upon the mountains of spices y.

y Seeing we must part for a time, make haste, O my beloved Bridegroom, and speedily finish the work which thou hast to do in the World, that so thou maist take me to thy self, that I may live in thine everlasting embraces. The words of this verse are borrowed from Chap. 2. 17. where they are explained.

ISAIAH.

The ARGUMENT.

THE Teachers of the ancient Church were of two sorts, 1. Ordinary, the Priests and Levites: 2. Extraordinary, the Prophets. These were immediately called by God, and inspired, as with other singular Gifts and Graces, so particularly with a supernatural knowledge of Divine Mysteries, and of future things, and invested by God with an Authority Superior not onely to the Ordinary Teachers of the Church, but in some sort, even to the Civil Powers of the Nation. These holy Prophets, whose Writings are contained in the sacred Scripture, are sixteen. Of these Isaiah is first in place, and, as may seem probable, in time also. But undoubtedly he was contemporary with Hosea, whom others suppose to have been before him. Compare Isa. 1. 1. with Hosea 1. 1. The Jews tell us that he was of the Blood Royal of Judah, which is uncertain. But undoubtedly he was the Prince of all the Prophets, whether we consider the great extent and variety of his Prophecies, the excellency and sublimity of those Mysteries, which were revealed to him and by him, the Majesty and Elegancy of his style, or the incomparable livelinesse and power of his Sermons. He doth so evidently and fully describe the Person, and Offices, and sufferings, and Kingdom of Christ, that some of the Ancients called him the fifth Evangelist. And it is observed, that there are more Testimonies and Quotations in the New Testament taken out of Isaiah, than out of all the other Prophets.

CHAP. I.

THE Vision a of Isaiah the Son of Amoz b, which he saw c concerning Judah and Jerusalem d, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah e, Kings of Judah.

a Or, The Visions; the word being here collectively used, as it is ch. 22. 1. 1 Sam. 3. 1. The sense is, This is the Book of the Visions or Prophecies. As Prophets were called Seers, 1 Sam. 9. 9. so Prophecies are called Visions, because they were as clearly and certainly represented to the Prophets minds, as bodily Objects are to men's eyes. b Either the Brother of Amaziah King of Judah, as the Hebrew Writers fancy: Or, rather some other person then well known. c i.e. Foresaw and foretold. But he speaks, after the manner of the Prophets, of things to come, as if they were either past or present. d Principally, but not exclusively. For he prophesieth also concerning Egypt and Babilon, and divers other Countries; which yet he doth with respect to Judah. e In the time of their Reign. Whence it may be gathered, that Isaiah exercised his Prophetical Office above fifty years together, See 2 Kings 15 and 16.

* Deut. 32. 1. Jer. 2. 12. & 22. 29. Ezek. 36. 4.

2. * Hear, O Heavens, and give ear, O Earth f; for the Lord hath spoken g, I have nourished and brought up Children h, and they have rebelled against me.

f He directeth his speech to these senseless Creatures, that thereby he might more awaken and affect the Israelites, whom he hereby proclaimeth to be so dull and stupid that they were past hearing, and therefore he gives them over as desperate, and calleth in the whole Creation of God to bear witness against them. g This is his Plea against them, of the equity whereof he is willing that all the Creatures should be Judges. h I first made them a People, and until this time I have sustained and blessed them, above all other Nations.

* Jer. 8. 7.

3. * The Ox knoweth his Owner, and the Ass his Masters Crib i: but Israel doth not know k, my People doth not consider.

i The most stupid bruit beasts acknowledge and obey their Lord and Benefactor, as experience sheweth. k To wit, me their Owner and Master, which is easily and necessarily understood out of the former Clause. Knowing is here taken practically, as it is usually in Scripture, and includes reverence and obedience.

† Heb. of heavinesse.

4. Ah l sinful Nation, a People † laden with iniquity m, a seed of evil-doers n, children that are corrupters o, they have forsaken the LORD p, they have provoked the holy One of Israel unto anger q, they are † gone away backward r.

† Heb. alienated; Or, separated. Psal. 58. 3.

l This Particle implies both his wonder, and anger, and grief, and shame that they were such. m Heb. Of heavinesse of iniquity, i.e. of heavy or great sins, for heavy is commonly put for great or grievous, as Isa. 21. 15. and 30. 27. Laden not with the sense of sin, as Matt. 11. 28. but with the guilt and bondage of sin. n The Children of wicked Parents, whose guilt they inherit, and whose evil Example they follow. o Heb. that corrupt, to wit, themselves or their ways, or others by their counsel and example. Or, that destroy themselves and their land by their wickedness. p Not in profession, but in practice and reality, neglecting or corrupting his Worship, refusing his yoke and conduct. q They have lived as if it were their great design and business to provoke him. r Instead of proceeding forward and growing in grace, which was their duty, they are all fallen from their former professions, and grown worse and worse, and have impudently turned their backs upon me.

5. ¶ Why should ye be stricken any more s, ye will † revolt more and more t: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint u.

s It is to no purpose to seek to reclaim you by one Chastisement after another; and therefore I will utterly forsake and destroy you at once. t I see you are incorrigible, and turn even your afflictions into sin. u Your disease is mortal, as being in the most noble and vital parts, the very head and heart of the body politick, from whence the plague is derived to all the other Members, as it follows. And this is to be understood either, 1. Of their sins; or rather, 2. Of their miseries. Which best suits, 1. with the foregoing words, this being added as a reason why it was in vain to strike them any more, or to expect any amendment that way, because he had stricken them already, and that very terribly, even in their head and heart, whole wounds are most dangerous, and yet they were not at all better for it. 2. With vers. 7, 8. where this Metaphor is so explained.

6. From the sole of the foot even unto the head, there is no soundness in it x; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ‖ ointment y.

x You have been all of you punished, from the highest to the lowest, from the worst to the best. y I have suffered you to lie under your maladies for a time, without applying any remedies, to try whether the length and continuance of your affliction might not work that cure which the strength of it could not do, but all in vain.

* Deut. 28. 51, 52. Chap. 5. 5.

† Heb. as the overthrow of strangers.

7. * Your country is desolate, your cities are burnt with fire: your land, strangers devour it z in your presence a, and it is desolate †, as overthrown by strangers b

z All this and what follows was verified in the days of King Ahaz, 2 Chron. 28. in whose time, and upon which occasion, this Prophecy seems to have been delivered, as more exactly agreeing with that time than with any other. If any object, That this being the first of his Prophecies, must rather belong to the days of Uzziah, they must take notice, and it is agreed by by Interpreters, and is undeniably true, that the Prophecies of Isaiah, as also of the other Prophets, are not set down in the same order in which they were delivered, but oftentimes the latter are put before the former. a Which your eyes shall see to torment you, when there is no power in your hands to deliver you. b Heb. As the overthrow of strangers, i. e. which strangers bring upon a land which is not theirs, nor likely to continue in their hands, and therefore they spare no persons that come in their way, and they spoil and destroy all things, which is not usually done in wars between persons of the same, or of a neighbour nation.

8. And the daughter of Zion c is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers d, as a besieged city.

c (i. e.) Zion, or Jerusalem; for these two names are promiscuously used of the same place. The manner of daughter being frequently given to cities or countries. Thus the daughter of Babylon is put for Babylon it self, Psal. 137. 8. Isa. 47. 1. In the same sence we read of the daughter of Tyre, Psal. 45. 12. and of Zidon, Isa. 23. 12. and of Egypt, Jer. 46. 11, 24. and of Edom, Lam. 4. 21. d Is left solitary, all the neighbouring villages and country round about it being laid waste.

9. * Except the LORD of hosts had left unto us a very small remnant e, we should have been as * Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrha f.

e If God, by his infinite Power and Goodness, had not restrained our enemies, and reserved some of us. f The whole nation and race of us had been utterly cut off, as the people of Sodom and Gomorrha were. So great was the rage and power of our enemies, and so utterly unable we were to deliver our selves.

10. ¶ Hear the word of the LORD g, ye rulers of Sodom h; give ear unto the law i of our God, ye people of Gomorrha.

g I speak not my own fancies or passions, but the message of our Lord and Governour, to whom you owe all reverence and obedience. h So called for their resemblance of them in wickedness. Comp. Deut. 32. 32. Ezek. 16. 46, 48. i Or, Doctrine, as this word is commonly used: the message which I am now to deliver to you from God, your great Lawgiver, which ought to have the force of a Law with you.

k They are vain and useless, being neither accepted by me, nor beneficial to you. l Who am a Spirit, and therefore cannot be satisfied with such carnal Oblations, but expect to be worshipped in spirit and truth, and to have your hearts and lives, as well as your Bodies and Sacrifices, presented unto me. m I am glutted with them, and therefore loath them. n He mentions the fat and blood, because these were in a peculiar manner reserved for God, Levit. 3. 15, 16. & 17. 11. to intimate, that even the best of their Sacrifices were rejected by him.

The thing that I commanded, was not only, nor chiefly, that you should offer external Sacrifices to me, but that you should do it with true repentance for all your sins, with Faith in my Promises, with hearty Love to me, and sincere Resolutions of devoting your selves to my Service, without which you offer me a dead Carcass instead of a living Sacrifice. q The Courts of my Temple, which were two, that of the Priests, and that where the People assembled, 2 Chron. 4. 9. h Shall not onely have ſome weak deſires of going, but ſhall be ready to take pains, and ſhall actually go. i Such ſhall be their Zeal, that they ſhall not onely go themſelves, but ſhall perſwade and preſs others to go with them. k They ſhew the truth of their Converſion, by their hearty deſire to be inſtructed in the way or method of worſhipping and ſerving God acceptably, and by their firm purpoſe of practiſing the Inſtructions given to them. l This laſt Clauſe contains the Reaſon why the People ſhould be ſo forward to go, and to invite others to go with them; and they may be the Words either of the People, continuing their Speech; or of the Prophet, now returning to ſpeak in his own name. m The New Law, the Doctrine of the Goſpel, which is frequently called a Law, becauſe it hath the Nature and Power of a Law, obliging us no leſs to the Belief and Practice of it, than the Old Law did. n For the Accompliſhment of this Promiſe, ſee Luk. 24. 47. Act. 1. 8. Rom. 10. 18.

their ſwords into plow-ſhares, and their ſpears into || pruning-hooks: nation ſhall not lift up ſword againſt nation, neither ſhall they learn war any more q.

|| Or, Scithes.

o Chriſt ſhall ſet up and uſe his Authority among and over all Nations, not onely giving Laws to them, as other Rulers do, but doing that which no other Powers can do, convincing their minds and Conſciences, conquering and changing their Hearts, and ordering their Lives. p Either verbally, by his Word and Spirit reproving or convincing the World of Sin; or really, by his Judgments upon his implacable Enemies, which obſtruct the Propagation of the Goſpel. q He ſhall root out thoſe great Animoſities and Hoſtilities which were between the Jews and Gentiles, Eph. 2. 13, &c. and between ſeveral Nations, ſubduing Mens Pride, and Paſſions, and Luſts, which are the Cauſes of all Wars and Contentions; and working Humility, and Meekneſs, and Self-denial, and true and fervent Love to all Men, from whence Peace neceſſarily follows. This was the Deſign of the Goſpel in all, and the Effect of it in thoſe that rightly received it. And that War and Diſſenſion which was occaſioned by the Preaching of the Goſpel, as was foretold Mat. 10. 21, 22. it was wholly accidental, by reaſon of Mens corrupt Intereſts and Luſts, which the Goſpel oppoſed; and it was not amongſt thoſe who received the Goſpel in the love of it, but between them and thoſe who were either open Enemies or falſe Friends to them and to the Goſpel. But if this Place be underſtood of an external and general Peace which was to be in the World in the Days of the Meſſias, this alſo may in due time be verified, when all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved, and the fulneſs of the Gentiles ſhall be brought in, and both Jews and Gentiles ſhall be united together into one Fold, under Chriſt their great Shepherd; all which is propheſied and promiſed Joh. 10. 16. Rom. 11. and elſewhere. For it is not neceſſary that all the Prophecies concerning the Kingdom of the Meſſias ſhould be accompliſhed in an inſtant, or at the beginning of it; but it is ſufficient if they be fulfilled before the end of it. And ſome of them do manifeſtly belong to the laſt days of that Kingdom. And therefore there is no truth nor weight in that Argument which the Jews bring from this Place, againſt our Meſſias, becauſe of thoſe Wars that have hitherto been and ſtill are amongſt Chriſtians; for this doth not prove that theſe Wars ſhall never ceaſe, or that there ſhall not be ſuch a Peace in the World as they underſtand, before the end of Chriſt's Kingdom.

5. O houſe of Jacob, come ye r, and let us walk * in the light of the LORD ſ.

* Chap. 10. 17.

r Seeing the Gentiles are thus ready and reſolved to go to the Lord's Houſe, let this oblige and provoke you, O ye Iſraelites, to go with them, or before them. Whereby he ſecretly intimates their backwardneſs, and that when the Gentiles did come into the Church, they would apoſtatize from it. ſ Take heed that you do not reject that Light which is ſo clear that even the blind Gentiles will diſcern it.

6. ¶ Therefore t thou haſt forſaken u thy people the houſe of Jacob x, becauſe they be repleniſhed || from the eaſt y, and * are ſoothſayers z, like the Philiſtins a, and they || pleaſe themſelves b in the children of ſtrangers c.

I foreſee they will refuſe it; and God, for their many and great Sins, will give them up to Apoſtaſie and Infidelity. u Wilt certainly forſake and reject. x The Body of that Nation. y Their Land is full of the impious, and ſuperſtitious, and idolatrous Manners of the Eaſtern Nations, the Syrians and Chaldæans. z Theſe undertook to diſcover ſecret things, and to foretel future contingent things, by the ſuperſtitious Obſervation of the Stars, or Clouds, or Birds, or other ways of Divination, which God had ſeverely forbidden. See Levit. 19. 26. a Who were infamous for thoſe Practices; of which ſee one Inſtance, 1 Sam. 6. 2. b They delight in their Manners, and Company, and Converſation, making Leagues, and Friendſhips, and Marriages with them. c Either, 1. in the Children begotten by them upon ſtrange Women; or rather, 2. in ſtrangers, as this Phraſe is uſed, Neh. 9. 2. Iſa. 60. 10. and elſewhere.

f They give that worſhip to their own Creatures which they deny to me their Creator, than which nothing can be more impious and abſurd.

9. And the mean man boweth down, and the great man humbleth himſelf g: therefore forgive them not h.

g Men of all Ranks fall down and worſhip idols. h Cut off theſe incorrigible Idolaters. Such an Imprecation is not ſtrange, conſidering the hainouſneſs and inexcuſableneſs of the Crime, the ſingular Condition of the Prophets, who ſpake ſuch things not from any diſorderly Paſſion, but by Divine Inſpiration, and from a fervent Zeal for God's Glory, which ever was and ought to be dearer to them than all the Intereſts of Men; and from a pious Care and Fear leſt others ſhould be infected by their Counſel or Example. Yet the Words may be taken as a Prediction, Thou wilt not forgive them: By this I know thou haſt determined utterly to deſtroy them; for the Hebrew Particle al is ſometimes taken onely for a ſimple denial, as Pſal. 121. 3. Prov. 12. 28.

10. ¶ Enter into the rock, and hide thee in the duſt i, for fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majeſty k.

This great and ſudden change proceeded either from true repentance, which filled them with ſhame, and grief, and indignation againſt themſelves, and all the inſtruments of their wickedneſs; or from a conviction of the vanity of their Idols, which afforded them no help in the time of their need; or from a juſt fear leſt God's Judgments ſhould have fallen more heavily upon them, if it had found them in the practice of Idolatry; and that by this profeſſion of Repentance, they might, if it were poſſible, either prevent or mitigate their calamity.

Or, they have done: for this word is oft ſo uſed, without any ſignification of a recompence, as Pſal. 7. 4. They cannot blame me, but themſelves: their deſtruction is wholly from themſelves. Compare Hoſ. 13. 9.

10. Say ye f to the righteous, That it ſhall be well with him: for they ſhall eat the fruit of their doings g.

14. The LORD will enter into judgment with the ancients o of his people, and the princes thereof: for ye have ‖ eaten up p the vineyard q; the ſpoil of the poor r is in your houſes.

‖ Or, burnt up.

18. In that day the LORD will take away the bravery of their tinkling ornaments about their feet, and their ‖ cauls d, and their round tires like the moon e.

d As for this and the other Hebrew words here following, I judge it unneceſſary and improper to trouble the Engliſh Reader with the differing Interpretations given of them by Learned Men, which the curious may find in my Latin Synopſis, It is agreed by all that they were Ornaments uſed by that People in thoſe times, and made fewel to their Luſts. And it is of no concernment to the Direction either of our Faith or Manners, exactly to underſtand the Nature and Differences of them. And therefore I ſhall take them as they are in our Tranſlation. e There were in ancient Times, and at this day there are ſome Jewels or other Ornaments worn, which carry a manifeſt reſemblance to the Moon or Half-moon. CHAP. IV.

1. AND in that day a ſeven b women ſhall take hold c of one man d, ſaying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel e: onely † let us be called by thy name f, ‖ to take away our * reproach g.

A certain number for an uncertain. c Shall ſue to him, and even lay hands upon him, contrary to their Cuſtom, and their natural Modeſty. d Becauſe few Men ſhall ſurvive that dreadful Stroke. They who before were not contented with their own Husbands, are now glad of a ſeventh part of an Husband. e We will eaſe thee of that Charge, which otherwiſe would fall upon thee by God's Law, Exod. 21. 10. f Own us for thy Wives. g Virginity was eſteemed a reproach, eſpecially among that People, becauſe it was a Token of Contempt from Men, and of the Curſe of God; Children, the uſual Fruit of Marriage, being both an Honour to their Parents before Men, and a great Bleſſing of God, eſpecially to that people, from ſome of whoſe Loins the Meſſiah was to ſpring.

2. In that day h ſhall the branch of the LORD i be † beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the earth ſhall be excellent k and comely † for them that are eſcaped l of Iſrael.

For after the foregoing Miſeries were brought upon the Jews, by the Remainders of the Grecian Empire, of which Daniel Propheſies ſo exactly and particularly, and afterwards by the Roman Empire, the Meſſiah was born; and after that utter Deſtruction brought upon the Jewiſh City, and Temple, and Nation, by Titus, the Kingdom of the Meſſiah became beautiful and glorious, as it here follows. k The Land which for the ſins of the people was made barren, upon their Repentance and return to Chriſt ſhall recover its former Fertility. Under this one Mercy he ſeems to underſtand all temporal Bleſſings, which together with ſpiritual and eternal nal, God ſhall confer upon them; and withal to intimate the Fruitfulneſs of the People (the earth or land being oft put for its Inhabitants) in Knowledge, and Grace, and all good works. l That ſhall ſurvive all the forementioned Calamities.

3. And it ſhall come to paſs, that he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jeruſalem, ſhall be called holy m, even every one that is written ‖ among the living n in Jeruſalem o:

m i.e. Shall be really holy, as is ſaid, Chap. 60. 21. To be called is oft put for to be, as Gen. 21. 12. Iſa. 1. 26. & 44. 5. n So this is a Reſtriction of the foregoing indefinite Propoſition. Not all that are left, but a great number of them, ſhall be holy, even all that are written, &c. i. e. all the Elect, who are frequently deſcribed by this Character, that they are written in God's or the Lamb's book, or in the book of life, or of the living, Pſal. 69. 28. Dan. 12. 1. Phil. 4. 3. Rev. 3. 5. & 13. 8. & 17. 8, &c. But this laſt Clauſe of the Verſe is by ſome Learned Interpreters rendred thus, all that are in Jeruſalem (i. e. a very great number of them, as ſuch general Expreſſions are frequently uſed, or the generality of them) ſhall be written unto life, i.e. ſhall be ſuch as are elected unto Salvation through Sanctification: Which may deſerve conſideration. So he notes the ſingular Priviledge of this People at this time, above the former Ages, in which many were called, but few were choſen. o Of the People living in or belonging to Jeruſalem.

4. When the Lord ſhall have waſhed away the filth of the daughters of Zion p, and ſhall have purged the blood q of Jeruſalem from the midſt thereof, by * the ſpirit of judgment, and by the ſpirit of burning r.

* Chap. 32. 15, 16.

p This ſhall be accompliſhed when God hath thorowly cleanſed the Jewiſh Nation from their Sins. q The Blood-guiltineſs, and eſpecially that of killing the Lord of Life, their own Meſſiah. r This is oppoſed to the former Legal way of Purification, which was by Water. By the ſpirit he ſeems to underſtand the Holy Spirit of God, to which this waſhing and purging Work is commonly aſcribed, as 1 Cor. 6. 11. and elſewhere; which Spirit did accompany the Preaching of the Goſpel, and did this Work in part in ſome of the Jews, and will do it more fully in the Body of the Nation. And this Spirit may well be called a ſpirit of judgment, becauſe it executes Judgment in the Church, and in the Conſciences of Men, ſeparating the precious from the vile, convincing men of Sin, and Righteouſneſs, and Judgment, Joh. 16. 8, 9. manifeſting the Secrets of mens Hearts, in the Preaching of the Word, 1 Cor. 14. 25. accuſing and terrifying and puniſhing ſome, witneſſing for and with others, and filling them with Peace and Joy in believing, hardning ſome, and ſoftning and ſubduing others to God, as this Spirit is particularly promiſed to do to the Jews, Zech. 12. 10. And the ſame Spirit may be fitly called the ſpirit of burning, as he is compared to fire, Matt. 3. 11. becauſe he doth burn up and conſume the Droſs which is in the Church, and in the Minds and Hearts of men, and enflames the Souls of Believers with Love to God, and Zeal for his Glory.

5. And the LORD will create ſ upon every dwelling place of mount Zion, and upon her aſſemblies, a * cloud, and ſmoke by day, and the ſhining of a flaming fire by night t: for ‖ upon all the glory u ſhall be † a defence.

* Exod. 13. 21.

ſ Will in a marvellous manner produce, as it were by a new Work of Creation. t A Pillar of Cloud and Fire, like that wherewith the Lord directed and protected and honoured the Iſraelites, when they came out of Egypt: Whereby he implies, That God would be their Protector, and their Glory. u Upon all that Church and People, which God will make ſo glorious, not onely in his own Eyes, but even in the Eyes of the World; upon all holy Aſſemblies of ſincere Chriſtians.

6. And there ſhall be a tabernacle x for a ſhadow in the day time from the heat, and for a place of refuge, and for a covert from ſtorm and from rain.

x Or, he, i.e. the Lord, ſhall be a tabernacle, or a tent, to defend them from the violent Heat of the Sun, and other Injuries of the Weather, which was the Uſe and Benefit of Tents.

k Or, the grave, as this word moſt commonly ſignifies. l To receive thoſe vaſt numbers which ſhall die by this Famine, or otherwiſe, as is here implied. m Their Honourable men, as they were called, v. 13. being diſtinguiſhed both here and there from the multitude. n All their Glory ſhall die with them. o That ſpendeth all his days in Mirth and Jollity, and caſteth away all Cares and Fears.

* Chap. 2. 9, 11, 17.

15. And * the mean man ſhall be brought down, and the mighty man ſhall be humbled p, and the eyes of the lofty ſhall be humbled.

p All of them, both high and low, ſhall be brought to deſtruction.

‖ Or, the holy God. † Heb. the God the holy.

16. But the LORD of hoſts ſhall be exalted in judgment q, and ‖ † God that is holy ſhall be ſanctified r in righteouſneſs s.

q By the execution of this juſt Judgment upon his incorrigible Enemies. r Shall appear to be an holy God. s By his righteous Judgments.

17. Then t ſhall the lambs u feed after their manner x, and the waſte places y of the fat ones z ſhall ſtrangers a eat.

t When God ſhall have finiſhed that work of Judgment upon the ungodly, he will extend Mercy to a remainder. This is very uſual in this Prophet, in the midſt of his Threatnings, to inſert ſomething for the ſupport of Believers. u The poor and harmleſs People, who ſhall be left in the Land when the Rich are carried into Captivity, as it fell out, 2 Kings 25. 12. x Or, by their fold, as this word is manifeſtly uſed Mic. 2. 12. the only place of Scripture, except this, in which this word is found. y The Lands left by their Owners, who were either ſlain, or carried into Captivity. z Of the Rich and Great men, ſo called Pſal. 22. 29. & 78. 31. Iſa. 10. 16. a The poor Iſraelites, who were left to be vine-dreſſers and huſbandmen, 2 Kings 25. 12. who are called ſtrangers, becauſe they were ſo in reference to that Land, not being the proper Owners of it, nor related to them; as the Iſraelites of other Tribes are called ſtrangers, in oppoſition to the Levites, as Numb. 1. 51. and elſewhere; yea, and the Levites are ſo called, in oppoſition to the Seed of Aaron, Numb. 16. 40.

18. Wo unto them that draw iniquity b with cords of vanity c, and ſin as it were with a cart-rope d:

b That are not only drawn to ſin by the allurements of the World, or by the perſwaſions of wicked men, being ſurpriſed and overtaken by ſin, as ſometimes good men are, Gal. 6. 1. but are active and induſtrious in drawing ſin to themſelves, or themſelves to ſin; that greedily and ſteadily purſue ſin, and the occaſions of it, and are not at reſt till they have overtaken it; that ſin wilfully, and reſolvedly, and induſtriouſly. c Or, with cords of lying, as the laſt word frequently ſignifies, i. e. with vain and deceitful Arguments and Pretences, whereby ſinners generally draw themſelves to ſin; among which, one follows in the next Verſe, to wit, the impunity which they promiſe to themſelves. Or theſe Cords may note the means which they uſe to accompliſh that iniquity which they have deviſed. d With all their might, as Beaſts commonly do that draw Carts with Ropes.

* Jer. 17. 15. Amos 5. 18. 2 Pet. 3. 3, 4.

19. * That ſay, Let him e make ſpeed, and haſten his work, that we may ſee it f: and let the counſel of the holy One of Iſrael g draw nigh and come, that we may know it.

e To wit, God, in whoſe Name thou and other Prophets are always reproving and threatning us. f He only thinks to affright us with Bugbears; but he either cannot, or will not do us any harm: we do not fear him, let him do his worſt, let him begin as ſoon as he pleaſeth. Not that any of the Iſraelites were ſo impudent as to uſe theſe expreſſions; but this was the plain language of their actions, they lived as if they were of this opinion; their preſumption and ſecurity ſhewed their deſperate contempt of God, and of all his Judgments. g Who by his Holineſs is engaged to puniſh us. They ſcornfully repeated the Title uſually given by the Prophets unto God.

† Heb. that ſay concerning evil, It is good, &c.

20. ¶ Wo unto them † that call evil good, and good evil h; that put darkneſs for light, and light for darkneſs; that put bitter for ſweet, and ſweet for bitter.

h That take away the difference between good and evil, that juſtifie and approve wicked men and things, and condemn Piety, or Vertue, or righteous Perſons. Compare Prov. 17. 15. Thus many call ſerious Godlineſs, humourous Singularity; and Juſtice, Moroſity; and Meekneſs, Stupidity, &c. as on the contrary, they call Pride, Magnanimity; and Covetouſneſs, Good-husbandry. And men are very apt to follow the courſe of the World in their falſe judgmens of things: which therefore the Prophet ſo ſeverely forbids.

* Prov. 3. 7. Rom. 12. 16. † Heb. before their face.

21. Wo unto them that are * wiſe in their own eyes, and prudent † in their own ſight i.

i That being puffed up with an opinion of their own Wiſdom, deſpiſe the Counſels and Inſtructions of God by his Prophets, and prefer their own vain Fancies before the Judgment of the All-wiſe God, as appears by the Errour beforementioned, v. 20. that they affirmed that to be Evil, which God had declared to be Good.

22. Wo unto them that are mighty to drink wine k, and men of ſtrength to mingle l ſtrong drink.

k That can drink much without intoxication, in which they gloried, as too many do at this day. l (i. e.) To drink: the Antecedent being put for the Conſequent; which is uſual: for they mingled it in order to drinking.

* Prov. 17. 15. & 24. 24.

23. Which * juſtifie the wicked for reward m, and take away the righteouſneſs of the righteous from him n.

m Not by miſtake or incogitancy, but wilfully for Bribes. n To wit, juridically, they pronounce Sentence againſt him, as if he and his Cauſe were unjuſt.

† Heb. the tongue of fire.

24. Therefore as † the fire devoureth the ſtubble, and the flame conſumeth the chaff, ſo their root shall be as rottenness o, and their blossom shall go up as dust p: because they have cast away q the law of the LORD of hosts, and despised the word of the holy One of Israel.

o They shall be like a Tree which not only withers in its Branches, but dies and rots at the Roots, and therefore is past all hopes of recovery. The sence is, They shall be destroyed both Root and Branch. p Shall vanish (for so the Word ascend or go up is oft used, as Exod. 16. 14. Job 5. 26. Jer. 48. 15. Ezek. 11. 23, 24.) as the Dust, which is blown away with every Wind; or, shall be resolved into Dust, and yield no Fruit. q Which implies Disobedience joyned with contempt.

25. Therefore is the anger of the LORD kindled against his people, and he hath stretched forth his hand against them, and hath smitten them: and the hills did tremble r, and their carcases were ‖ torn in the midst of the streets. * For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still s.

‖ Or, as dung.
* ch. 9. 12. & 17. 21. & 10. 4.

r A Metaphorical and Hyperbolical Description of a grievous Calamity, familiar in the Prophets, as Isa. 64. 1, 3. Jer. 4. 24. and in other Authors. s Ready to give you another and a sorer blow. This is not the end, as you vainly imagine; but if you repent not, the beginning of your Sorrows, and an earnest of further Calamities.

26. ¶ And he will lift up an ensign t to the nations from far u, and will * hiss unto them x from the ends of the earth y: and behold, they shall come with speed swiftly.

* Chap. 7. 18.

t To call them together for this Service, as Generals use to do for the raising of Armies. u Either, 1. to the Assyrians, of whom he speaks more particularly ch. 10. and that under this same character of a people that come from far, v. 3. and who did not long after this Prophecy invade Judæa, and did much mischief in it. Although that part of the Prediction, v. 29. they shall lay hold of the prey, and shall carry it away safe, and none shall deliver it, do not seem to agree to them, nor that Invasion; for the Assyrians were forced to retreat with great shame and loss, and the Jews were delivered from them. Or, 2. to the Chaldæans; for even Babylon is called a far country, Isa. 39. 3. And he saith nations, because the Chaldæan Army was made up of several Nations. x Or, will whistle unto, or for them: will gather them together by his Word, as Shepherds gather their Sheep. He intimates how easily and speedily God can do this Work. y Which is not to be understood strictly, but popularly, and with a latitude, from very remote places; although part of the Chaldæan Army did come from Places not very far distant from the end of that part of the World, so far as it was then known.

27. None shall be weary z, nor stumble amongst them: none shall slumber nor sleep a: neither shall the girdle of their loins be loosed, nor the latchet of their shoes be broken b.

z Though their March be long and tedious. As I have called them to this Work, so I will strengthen and assist them in it. a They shall all be watchful and diligent to take all Opportunities and Advantages of executing my Judgments upon my People. b Which otherwise would hinder, or at least slacken them in their March. I will take all Impediments out of their way.

28. Whose arrows are sharp, and all their bows bent c: their horses hoofs shall be counted like flint d, and their wheels like a whirlwind e.

c Who are every way furnished and ready for my Work, waiting only for my Command. d Because they shall not be broken or battered by the length or stoniness and ruggedness of the way. e Partly for the swiftness of their March, and partly for the force and violence of their Chariots in Battel.

29. Their roaring shall be like a lion, they shall roar like young lions f; yea they shall roar and lay hold of the prey, and shall carry it away safe, and none g shall deliver it.

f Which signifies both their cruelty, and their greediness and eagerness to catch and devour the prey. g Neither the Jews themselves, nor the Egyptians, to whose help they will trust, nor any of their Confederates.

30. And in that day they shall roar against them, like the roaring of the sea h: and if one * look unto the land, behold, darkness and ‖ sorrow i, ‖ and the light is darkned in the heavens thereof k.

* Chap. 8. 22.
‖ Or, distress.
‖ Or, when it is light, it shall be dark in the destructions thereof.

h Which is violent and frightful. i Darkness, to wit, Sorrow; the latter Word explains the former, and the Particle and is put expositively, as it is frequently. k When they look up to the Heavens, as men in distress usually do, they see no Light there; their Comforts are wholly eclipsed, and their Hopes are like the giving up of the Ghost.

CHAP. VI.

1. IN the year that * king Uzziah died, I * saw a also the LORD b sitting upon a throne c, high and lifted up d, and ‖ his train e filled the temple f.

* 2 Kings 15. 7.
* John 12. 41.
‖ Or, the skirts thereof.

a In a Vision or Ecstasie. b Either, 1. God the Son, who frequently appeared to the Patriarchs and Prophets, and that sometimes in the form of a Man: Or rather, 2. the Divine Majesty, as he subsisteth in Three Persons, as may be gathered both from the Plural Number us, used of this Lord v. 8. and by comparing other Scriptures; for God the Father is described as sitting upon a Throne, Dan. 7. 9, 13. and elsewhere; and the Glory of God here manifested, is said to be Christ's Glory, Joh. 12. 41. and the Words of the Lord here following, are said to be spoken by the Holy Ghost, Act. 28. 25. c In the posture of a Judge, to hear Causes, and give Sentence. d Towards the Roof of the Temple. e Or, as the word properly signifies, and is here rendred by divers, the skirts, or borders of him, or of it, to wit, his Royal and Judicial Robe; for he is represented as a Judge. f His glorious robes reached down to the bottom of the Temple, and were spread abroad in the Temple, which was an Evidence of a more than ordinary Majesty. The Temple may be here taken either 1. largely, and so it includes the Courts as well as the House, as that Word is oft used; or, 2. strictly, for the House it self, or for that part of the Temple in which this Vision was exhibited, which may seem to have been the Porch, for that was much higher than the other parts.

2. Above it stood g the Seraphims h: each one had six wings; * with twain he covered his face i, and with twain he covered his feet k, and with twain he did flie l.

* Ezek. 1. 11.

g As Ministers attending upon their Lord, and waiting to receive and execute his Commands. h Certain holy and blessed Angels, thus called from fire and burning, which this Word properly signifies; to represent either, 1. their Nature, which is bright and glorious, subtil, and pure, and spiritual, like Fire; or, 2. their Property, of fervent Zeal for God's Service and Glory; or, 3. their Office and present Employment, which was to execute God's Vengeance upon the Jews, and to burn them up like Dross. i Out of profound Reverence, as being so sensible of the infinite distance between God and him, that he durst not presume to look directly upon him, and judg'd himself neither able nor worthy to behold the brightness of his Glory. k Either, 1. his secret parts, which sometimes come under that name, as Deut. 28. 57. Isa. 7. 20. & 36. 12. of which see more in my Latin Synopsis upon Exod. 4. 25. And so this is done for our Instruction, to teach us Modesty and Chastity: Or, 2. their Feet properly so called, as that Word is generally used; from which use we should not depart without necessity, which, with submission, seems not to be in this place. And so this may signifie a sence of their own natural, though not moral Infirmity, and a desire that God would not too severely examine all their Ways and Actions, which the feet commonly signifie, because though they did not swerve from God's Commands, yet they were not worthy of the acceptation, nor suitable to the Dignity of so glorious a Majesty. l Which signifies their great forwardness and expedition in executing God's Commands. Comp. Dan. 9. 21.

3. And † one cried unto another m, and said, * Holy, holy, holy n is the LORD of hosts, † the whole earth o is full of his glory p.

† Heb. this cried to this.
* Rev. 4. 3.
† Heb. his glory is the fulness of the whole earth.

m Singing in Consort the Praises of their Lord. n This is repeated thrice, either, 1. to intimate the Trinity of Persons united in the Divine Essence, or, 2. that he was most eminently and unquestionably holy in his present work of Judgment, and in all his ways; such Repetitions being very frequent in Scripture, for the greater assurance of the thing, as Jer. 7. 4. Ezek. 21. 9. o Not only Canaan, to which the Jews did vainly and arrogantly confine the Presence of God, but all the World: Which seems to have a respect to the Conversion of the Gentiles, which did accompany the plenary and last Execution of this Judgment here threatned against the Jewish Nation, v. 10. as is evident by comparing this with Mat. 13. 14, 15. & Act. 28. 19. and other places of the New Testament. p Of the Effects and Demonstrations of his glorious Holiness, as well as of his Power, and Wisdom, and Goodness.

4. And the posts of the † door q moved at the voice of him that cried r, and the house was filled with smoak s.

q Together with the Door it self, as if the Door was to be removed, and the Temple thereby to be exposed to the view view and rapine of prophane Persons. Such violent Motions were commonly Tokens of God's Anger. r To wit, the Angel which cried, v. 3. s Which elsewhere is a Token of God's Presence and Acceptance, as Exod. 40. 34. 1 Kings 8. 10. but here of his Anger, as Psal. 18. 8. and elsewhere.

5. Then said I, Wo is me, for I am † undone, because I am a man of unclean lips t, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips u: for mine eyes have seen the king, the LORD of hosts x.

t I am a great Sinner, as many other ways, so particularly by my Lips, which being in a special manner consecrated to God by my Prophetical Office, should have been intirely devoted to him: But alas! my Speeches, either to God in Prayer, or from God in Preaching and Prophesying to the People, have been mixed and defiled with so much irreverence, dulness, distraction of Thoughts and Affections, carnal Fear, and many other Infirmities, that I dread the thoughts of appearing before thy Judgment-seat, which I see erected in this place. For Isaiah had been a Prophet before this time, chap. 1. 1. and was now called, not in general to his Prophetical Office, but to the delivery of this special Message. u I am an unclean Branch of an unclean Tree, and, besides my own Uncleanness, I have both by my Omissions and Commissions involved my self in the guilt of their Sins, and therefore may justly fear to partake with them in their plagues. x The sight of this glorious and holy God gives me cause to fear that he is come to Judgment against me, together with others. Whilest Sinners are secure and presumptuous, the holiest Persons have ever been filled with great Reverence, and oft times with Doubts and Fears at any extraordinary Manifestation of God's Presence. See Gen. 16. 13. & 17. 3. Judg. 13. 23.

† Heb. and in his hand a live coal.

6. Then flew one of the Seraphims unto me y, † having a live coal z in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar a.

y By God's Command. z Both a Token and an Instrument of Purification, as the next verse explains it. a Of Burnt-offering, which stood in the Court of the Priests near the Porch, and which had always coals of Fire upon it, Levit. 6. 12, 13. Hence he took it, to shew that men are to expect Purification and Expiation of sin only by such means as God hath appointed, and particularly by Christ, whom that Altar did manifestly represent, Heb. 13. 10.

† Heb. caused it to touch
† Heb. atoned or, expiated.

7. And he † laid it upon my mouth b, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin † purged c.

b Sleightly, so as only to touch my Lips, and not to burn them; which God could easily effect. c This is a sign that I have pardoned and purged the Uncleanness of thy Lips, and do own and accept thee as a fit Minister for my Service.

* Gen. 1. 26.
† Heb. behold me.

8. Also I heard the voice of the LORD, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for * us d? Then said I, † Here am I, send me e.

d To deliver the following Message. The change of the Number, I and us, is very remarkable; and both being meant of one and the same Lord, do sufficiently intimate a Plurality of Persons in the Godhead. e God's last and great Favour to him did both encourage and oblige him to be forward in God's Service.

* Mat. 13. 14. Mar. 4. 12. Luk. 8. 10. Joh. 12. 40. Act. 28. 26. Rom. 11. 8.
‖ Or, without ceasing, &c.
† Heb. hear ye in hearing, &c.
† Heb. in seeing.

9 And he said, Go and tell this people f, * Hear ye ‖ † indeed, but understand not; and † see ye indeed, but perceive not g.

f Not my people, for I disown them, as they have rejected me. g The Hebrew Words are Imperative; yet they are not to be taken as a Command what the People ought to do, but only as a Signification and Prediction what by their own Wickedness, and by God's just Judgment, they did and would do, as is manifest by Mat. 13. 14. Act. 28. 26. where they are so rendred. And Imperative words among the Hebrews are frequently put for the future, as is well known to the Learned. The sence is, Because you have so long heard my Words, and seen my Works, to no purpose, and have heardned your Hearts, and will not learn nor reform, I will punish you in your own kind, your sin shall be your Punishment. I will still continue my Word and Works to you, not in Mercy, and for your good, but to aggravate your Sin and Condemnation; for I will blind your Minds, and withdraw my Spirit, so that you shall be as unable, as now you are unwilling, to understand or perceive any thing that may do you good.

* Jer. 5. 21.

10. Make the heart of this people fat h, and make their ears heavy i, and shut their eyes k: * lest they see l with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert m and be healed n.

h (i. e.) Stupid and senseless: For the Fat which is in the Body is without sense; and Fatness in the Heart, makes it dull and heavy. Thus this Phrase is used, Psal. 119. 70. And this seems best to agree with the following words. This making of their hearts fat is here ascribed to the Prophet, as it is ascribed to God in the repetition of this Prophecy, Joh. 12. 40. because God inflicted this Judgment upon them by the Ministry of the Prophet, partly by way of Prediction, foretelling that this would be the effect of his Preaching; and partly by way of Judical Operation, withdrawing the Light and Help of his Spirit, and giving them up to the Power and Arts of Satan, and to their own Mistakes and Lusts, whereby they are easily and commonly led to turn God's Word, as they do other things, into Occasions of Sin. i Make them dull of hearing, as Isa. 59. 1. Zech. 7. 11. as sometimes the Ears are made by an excessive Noise. k Heb. dawb their Eyes, as the VVord is used also Isa. 44. 18. l That they may not be able, as before they were not willing to see. m Turn from their sinful Practices unto God. n Of Sin, which is the Disease of the Soul, by Remission and Sanctification, and of all the deadly Effects of Sin.

† Heb. desolate with desolation.

11. Then said I, LORD how long o? And he answered, Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be † utterly desolate p.

o An abrupt Speech, arising from the Prophets great passion and astonishment: How long shall this dreadful Judgment last? p Until this Land be totally destroyed, first by the Babylonians, and afterwards by the Romans.

12. And the LORD have removed men far away q, and there be a great forsaking in the midst of the land r.

q Hath caused this People to be carried away Captive into far Countries. r Till Houses and Lands be generally forsaken of their Owners, either because fled away from the Sword into strange Lands, or because they went into Captivity.

‖ Or, when it is returned, and hath been brouzed.
‖ Or, stock and stem.

13. ¶ But yet in it shall be a tenth s, ‖ and it shall return t, and shall be eaten u: as a teil-tree, and as an oak x whose ‖ substance is in them, when they cast their leaves y: so the holy seed shall be the substance thereof z.

s A small Remnant reserved, that Number being put indefinitely, as is very usual. t To wit, out of the Babylonish Captivity, into their own Land. u That Remnant shall be devoured and destroyed a second time, by the Kings of Syria, and afterwards more effectually by the Romans. x Or, Yet as, &c. Or, Nevertheless as, &c. such Particles being frequently understood in the Hebrew, as hath been noted again and again. So the Sence of the following words of the verse seems to be this, Although the Jewish Nation shall undergo a second and a greater Desolation by the Romans, yet there shall be another Remnant, not such an one as that which came out of Babylon, which, for the most part, were corrupt and degenerate, as appears by the Sacred Histories and Prophecies relating to that time; but an Holy Seed, a number of Elect and Godly Israelites, who shall afterwards look upon him whom they pierced, and mourn over him, as is said Zech. 12. 10. and by me be received to Mercy. y VVho when their Leaves are withered and cast, as it is in VVinter, have a Substance, or Subsistence, or Support within themselves, to wit, a Vital Principle, which preserves Life in the Root and Body of the Tree, and in due time sends it forth into all the Branches. But others take the Hebrew word, Shallecheth, for the proper name of a place, to wit, a Causeway which led from the Palace to the Temple, 1 Chron. 26. 16. and so the place is and may be rendred thus, As a teil-tree (or, an elm) and as an oak (the Singular Number for the Plural, as is very frequent) As the elms and the oaks which are at or by Shallecheth (on both sides of which way such Trees were planted, to beautifie and to support that Causeway, as some have observed) have subsistence or support in them, either, 1. for themselves; they stand fast and firm, when other Trees are blown down: or, for the way which they uphold. z Or rather, the support (as the same word seems to be taken in the next foregoing Clause) thereof, to wit, of the Land or People, which, were it not for the sake of these Elect Persons, should be totally and finally rooted out; or, of that Tenth part, which shall be delivered and preserved for the sake of that Holy Seed, those true-hearted Israelites which are among them.

CHAP. VII.

* 2 King. 16. 5. 2 Chron. 28. 5.
† Heb. fight.

1. AND it came to pass in the days of * Ahaz a the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah king of Judah, that Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, went up towards Jerusalem to war against it b, but could not † prevail against it.

a A most

a A moſt wicked King: Yet no Prophecies are more comfortable than thoſe which were delivered in his time; God ſo ordering it, partly for the encouragement of the Faithful that lived under his tyrannical and impious Reign; and partly to manifeſt the riches and freeneſs of his Grace, in conferring ſuch favours upon a moſt worthleſs Generation. b Which they attempted before in Jotham's Reign, 2 Kings 15. 37. but now more ſeriouſly undertook, though without ſucceſs, as is noted here, and 2 Kings 16. 5.

4. And ſay unto him, Take heed, and be quiet i; fear not, † neither be faint-hearted, for the two tails of theſe ſmoaking fire-brands k, for the fierce anger of Rezin with Syria, and of the ſon of Remaliah l.

† Heb. let not thy heart be tender.

i See that thou be quiet, abandon thy fears, and ſettle thy mind by the belief of that joyful Meſſage and Promiſe which I am now to deliver to thee from the Lord. k They are not whole Firebrands burning in the fire, but only ſmall pieces or ends of them, taken out of the fire, in which there is more ſmoak than fire, and the fire will be ſpeedily extinguiſhed. They have more of ſhew and terror, than of ſtrength. l Pekah King of Iſrael, v. 1. whom here, and in the next Verſe, he calls only the ſon of Remaliah, to intimate, that he was unworthy of the Name of King, as having got that Title and Power by Uſurpation, and the Murder of his Maſter and King, Pekahiah, 2 Kings 15. 25.

5. Becauſe Syria, Ephraim, and the ſon of Remaliah have taken evil counſel againſt thee, ſaying,

6. Let us go up againſt Judah, and || vex it, and let us make a breach therein m for us, and ſet a king in the midſt of it, even the ſon of Tabeal n.

m Either, 1. break and divide that Country into two parts, one for thee, and another for me; or rather, 2. break their Power and Kingdom, and ſubdue it to our ſelves: For, 1. the ſame word and Phraſe is ſo uſed, 2 Chron. 32. 1. where there was no ſuch Diviſion intended. 2. Becauſe the next clauſe intimates, that the Kingdom of Judah was ſtill to be united under another King, who ſhould pay Tribute to them ſeverally, as they ſhould agree. n Some conſiderable Captain, in whoſe fidelity both of them had good confidence; but whether he was an Iſraelite or Syrian, is uncertain, and not material.

7. Thus ſaith the LORD God, It o ſhall not ſtand, neither ſhall it come to paſs.

o Their evil counſel, as it is called, v. 5.

8. For the head of Syria is p Damaſcus, and the head of Damaſcus is Rezin; and within threeſcore and five years q ſhall Ephraim be broken, † that it be not a people.

p Or rather, ſhall be; for the Verb is not expreſſed in the Hebrew Text, and therefore may be either way ſupplied. The ſence is, Damaſcus ſhall ſtill continue to be the Capital and chief City of the Kingdom of Syria; and therefore Jeruſalem ſhall not be taken, nor become a part of Rezin's Dominion; but he ſhall be kept within his own Bounds, and be King of Damaſcus only, and not, as he hopes, of Jeruſalem. q To be computed either, 1. from the Prophecy of Amos, who propheſied in the days of Uzziah, two years before the earthquake, Amos 1. 1. which the Jews affirm to have happed about the time of his Uſurpation of the Prieſts Office, and being ſmitten with Leproſie, 2 Chron. 26. 16, &c. which, though it be not proved, yet may be admitted, becauſe it cannot be diſproved. And it is more than probable, that that action and accident was divers years before his death, during which time Jotham acted as his Viceroy, 2 Chron. 26. 21. And the Prophecy of Amos being expreſs and full concerning the deſtruction of the People and Commonwealth of Iſrael, being alſo freſh in the memory of many now living, the Prophet Iſaiah might well have reſpect to it. So the ſence is as if he had ſaid, There ſhall be but ſixty five years between the Delivery and the Execution of that Prophecy. And ſo the number of years may be thus made up. Fix the beginning of them ten years before Uzziah's death, add the ſixteen years of Jotham's Reign, and then the ſixteen years of Ahaz his Reign, and then ſix of Hezekiah's Reign, in which Iſrael was carried captive, 2 Kings 18. 10. theſe make up forty eight years: And for the ſeventeen years, which yet remain of the ſixty five, they may be taken out of the reſt of Hezekiah's Reign. For although the Tranſportation of that People began in the ſixth year of Hezekiah, yet it might be continued or repeated divers years after, and compleated ſeventeen years after, Jer. 52. 28, 29, 30. Or rather, 2. theſe years may be computed from the time of this Prophecy of Iſaiah. And whereas it may be objected againſt this Opinion, That the Judgment here threatned was executed in the ſixth year of Hezekiah, as was before noted, and therefore within eighteen or nineteen years of this Prophecy, which was delivered in the third or fourth year of Ahaz: Two things may be anſwered, 1. That the Iſraelites were not tranſported in the ſixth year of Hezekiah: For although Samaria be ſaid to be taken in the ſixth year of Hezekiah, 2 Kings 18. 10. and the Tranſportation of the Iſraelites be mentioned immediately after it, v. 11. yet it doth not thence follow, that it was done immediately, and at that one time; becauſe this is not unuſual in Scripture, in Hiſtorical Relations, to mention thoſe things together which were done at a conſiderable diſtance of time one from another; as it is recorded Acts 7. 15, 16. Jacob—died, he and our fathers, and were carried over into Sychem, and laid in the ſepulchre of Abraham, &c. although it was above two hundred years ere all which is ſaid in thoſe few words was done. And other inſtances of like nature might eaſily be produced. 2. That this work of Tranſportation was not done at once, but ſucceſſively, and by degrees. Thus it certainly was in the Tranſportation of Judah, which was begun in Nebuchadnezzar's ſeventh year, continued in his eighteenth year, and perfected in his three and twentieth year, Jer. 52. 28, 29, 30. And thus it might be, and probably was, in this Tranſportation. It might be begun preſently after the taking of Samaria, and afterwards continued, until at laſt the whole Body of the People was removed. And as ſoon as that was done, and not before, the King of Aſſyria brought into their place thoſe new Colonies mentioned 2 Kings 17. 24. Which that it was not done at the time of the taking of Samaria, but many years after it, ſeems to me evident, becauſe thoſe Colonies were not brought thither by Shalmanezer, who took Samaria, 2 Kings 18. 10. no nor by Sennacherib, his next Succeſſor; but by Eſarhaddon, as is affirmed Ezra 4. 2. who was the Son and Succeſſor of Sennacherib, 2 Kings 19. 37. and reigned above fifty years; for he ſeems to have begun his Reign about the fourteenth year of Hezekiah's Reign, by comparing 2 Kings 18. 13. & 19. 35, 36, 37. and ſo he reigned with Hezekiah about fifteen years, and with Manaſſeh above forty years, as the Learned Sir John Marſham affirms in his Chronicus Canon, &c. pag. 496. And this work of tranſporting the remainders of the Iſraelites, and bringing the new Colonies, might not be done till towards the end of his Reign: Which delay might be occaſioned by his Wars, or great Affairs. And leſt this ſhould ſeem to be only my own private conjecture, if the Reader conſult Sir John Marſham's fourth and laſt Chronological Table, inſerted after pag. 589. of his Work, he will find that Learned Chronologer to be of the ſame mind, and to make above fifty years diſtance between the taking of Samaria, and the Tranſlation of the new Colonies into thoſe Parts. And thus theſe ſixty five years might well be accompliſhed in his time. And ſo this place agrees with other Scriptures, and the difficulties objected againſt other Interpretations, ſeem to be avoided.

9. And the head of Ephraim is r Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Remaliahs ſon *: || If ye will not believe, ſurely ye ſhall not be eſtabliſhed s.

* See 2 Chron. 20. 20.

|| Or, Do ye not believe? it is becauſe ye are not ſtable, or ſhall not be eſtabliſhed.

r Or rather, ſhall be; and the ſence is the ſame as in the foregoing Verſe, Samaria ſhall continue to be the Chief City of the Kingdom of Iſrael, and Pekah ſhall not conquer Jeruſalem, as he hoped and deſigned to do. s If you do not believe this and the other Promiſes of God, but, in diſtruſt of God, ſhall ſeek to the Aſſyrians for Succour, to which I perceive you are inclined, inſtead of that Deliverance and Settlement which you expect, you ſhall be diſtreſſed and conſumed thereby; the Accompliſhment of which Threatning is recorded, 2 Chron. 28. 20. And by this Threatning he implies, That if they did rely upon God's Word and Help, they ſhould be eſtabliſhed. Onely he deliver-eth it in the form of a Threatning, rather than of Promiſe, partly becauſe he foreſaw that they would chuſe the worſe part, and bring the Judgment threatned upon themſelves: and partly becauſe this was moſt neceſſary for them, to affright them out of their preſent Security and Infidelity.

† Heb. And the LORD added to ſpeak.

10. ¶ † Moreover, the LORD ſpake again unto Ahaz, ſaying,

11. Ask thee a ſign of the LORD t thy God u, || ask it either in the depth, or in the heighth above x.

|| Or, make thy petition deep.

t I perceive thou doſt not believe God's Word and Meſſage now delivered by me; yet God is ſo patient and merciful to thee, that he gives thee liberty to demand of him any Signal or miraculous Work, whereby thou mayſt be aſſured of the Truth and Certainty of this Promiſe. u Both by right of Dominion, and by vertue of his gracious Covenant made with all Iſrael, of whom thou art a Member, and King; and by thy own Profeſſion, for he ſtill worſhipped God together with his Idols; and by the continuance of his Care and Kindneſs to thee, and to thy People, notwithſtanding all your Wickedneſs; whereof this Promiſe and Offer is a clear Demonſtration. x Demand ſome Prodigie to be wrought, either in Earth or in Heaven, at thy pleaſure.

12. But Ahaz ſaid, I will not ask y, neither will I tempt the LORD z.

y This Refuſal proceeded not from the ſtrength of his Faith, but from his contempt of God, and total diſtruſt and diſregard of his Word, and inward Reſolution to take another Courſe; as is manifeſt both from the following words, and from the Hiſtory of Ahaz, 2 Chron. 28. z Either, 1. by asking a Sign, as if he queſtioned the Truth of his Word: So this was deep Hypocriſie: Or, 2. by neglecting any means neceſſary for my preſervation, which were indeed a tempting of God. And therefore I ſhall not ſit ſtill and relie upon God till I be deſtroyed, which will be the effect of thy Counſel; but I ſhall do as becometh a wiſe King, ſeek for Succour from Potent Allies, ſuch as the Aſſyrian is. So this is flat Rebellion againſt God.

13. And he ſaid, Hear ye now, O houſe of David a, Is it a ſmall thing for you b to weary men c, but will ye weary my God alſo d?

a Of which, ſee above, v. 2. He reproveth them all, becauſe they were the King's Counſellors, and promoted the Deſign of ſending for the Aſſyrian Succours. b Is not that Wickedneſs more than enough? Muſt you add more to it? c To vex God's Prophets and People, and the generality of your Subjects, with your Oppreſſions and horrid Impieties. d By your curſed Ingratitude and Unbelief, and Diſobedience to his Commands. He ſaith, my God, i.e. the God whoſe Servant and Prophet or Meſſenger I am, to intimate, that this heinous Offence was not committed againſt a weak and fooliſh Man, ſuch as they might think the Prophet to be, but againſt God himſelf, who ſent the Meſſage. Compare Exod. 16. 8.

14. Therefore e the Lord himſelf ſhall give you a ſign f; * Behold g, a virgin h ſhall conceive, and bear i a ſon, and || ſhall call k his name Immanuel l.

* Matt. 1. 23. Luke 1. 31.

e Becauſe you deſpiſe me, and the Sign which I now offer to you, God of his own free Grace will ſend you a more honourable Meſſenger, and give you a nobler Sign, to try whether that will cure you of your Infidelity. Or, Nevertheleſs, as this Particle ſeems to be underſtood, Iſa. 30. 18. Jer. 16. 14. & 30. 16. Although you deſerve no Sign nor Favour, yet for the comfort of thoſe few Believers which are among you, and to leave you without excuſe, I ſhall mind you of another and a greater Sign, which God hath promiſed, and will in his due time perform; which alſo is a Pledge of the certain Accompliſhment of all God's Promiſes. Or, Surely, as this Particle is ſometimes uſed, as Gen. 4. 15. Jer. 2. 33. & 5. 2. Zech. 11. 7. f To wit, of your Deliverance. Qu. How was this Birth of a Virgin, which was not to come till many Ages after, a Sign of their Deliverance from the preſent Danger? Anſw. 1. Becauſe this was a clear Demonſtration of God's infinite Power and Goodneſs, and Faithfulneſs, and conſequently of the certain Truth of all God's Promiſes from time to time, which can never fail ſo long as thoſe Attributes of God ſtand: And men's Faith is either ſtrong or weak, as they believe them or doubt of them. Of which ſee Pſal. 77. 8. & 78. 19, 20. Rom. 4. 20, 21. And ſo this was a proper Remedy for Ahaz his Diſeaſe, which was a ſecret Suſpicion that God either could not, or would not deliver them. 2. Becauſe that Promiſe, I ſay, not only the actual Giving, which was long after, but even the Promiſe of the Meſſiah, which had been made long ſince, and oft renewed, and was univerſally believed by all the People, was the Foundation of all God's Mercies and Promiſes unto them, 2 Cor. 1. 20. and a Pledge of the Accompliſhment of them. 3. Becauſe this promiſed Birth did ſuppoſe and require the Preſervation of that City, and Nation, and Tribe, in and of which the Meſſiah was to be born; and therefore there was no cauſe to fear that utter Ruine which their Enemies now threatned to bring upon them. 4. This is one, but not the onely Sign here given, as we ſhall ſee at v. 16. g You who will not believe that God alone is able to deliver you from the united Force of Syria and Iſrael, take notice, for your full ſatisfaction, that God is not only able to do this Work, but to do far greater and harder things, which he hath promiſed, and therefore both can and will accompliſh. h Strictly and properly ſo called. The Jews, that they may obſcure this plain Text, and weaken this Proof of the Truth of Chriſtian Religion, pretend that this Hebrew Word ſignifies a young woman, and not a virgin. But this corrupt Tranſlation is eaſily confuted, 1. Becauſe this Word conſtantly ſignifies a virgin in all other places of Scripture where it is uſed, which are Gen. 24. 43. compared with v. 15. Exod. 2. 8. Pſal. 68. 25. Cant. 1. 3. & 6. 8. To which may be added Prov. 30. 19. the way of a man with a maid, or a virgin. For, though it be ſuppoſed that he did deſign and deſire to corrupt her, and afterwards did ſo; yet ſhe may well be called a virgin, partly becauſe he found her a Virgin, and partly becauſe ſhe ſeemed and pretended to others to be ſuch, which made her more careful to uſe all poſſible Arts to preſerve her Reputation, and ſo made the diſcovery of her impure Converſation with the Man more difficult, whereas the filthy Practices of Common Harlots are eaſily and vulgarly known. 2. From the ſcope of this Place, which is to confirm their Faith by a ſtrange and prodigious Sign, which ſurely could not be, that a young Woman ſhould conceive a Child, but that a Virgin ſhould conceive, &c. i Or rather, bring forth, as it is rendred Mat. 1. 23. and as this Hebrew Word is uſed Gen. 16. 11. & 17. 19. Judg. 13. 5. k The Virgin, laſt mentioned, ſhall call: Which is added as a further Evidence of her Virginity, and that this Son had no Humane Father; becauſe the Right of Naming the Child (which, being a Sign of Dominion, is primarily in the Husband, and in the Wife onely by his conſent or permiſſion, as is evident from Gen. 5. 29. & 35. 18. Luke 1. 60, 63. and many other places of Scripture) is wholly appropriated to her. l Which ſignifies, God with us, God dwelling among us, in our Nature, Joh. 1. 14. God and Man meeting in one Perſon, and being a Mediator between God and Men. For the deſign of theſe Words is not ſo much to relate the Name by which Chriſt ſhould commonly be called, as to deſcribe his Nature and Office: As we read that his name ſhall be called Wonderful, Counſellor, &c. Iſa. 9. 6. and that this is ſaid to be his (the Meſſiah's) name whereby he ſhall be called, The Lord our righteouſneſs, Jer. 23. 6. although he be never called by theſe Names in any other place of the Old or New Teſtament; but the meaning of theſe Places is, He ſhall be Wonderful, and our Counſellor, &c. and our Righteouſneſs: for, to be called is oft put for to be, as Iſa. 1. 26. & 4. 3, &c.

15. Butter and honey m ſhall he n eat, that he may know o to refuſe the evil, and chuſe the good p.

m The common Food of Children in that Country, where they were in great abundance, and of the beſt ſort. n The Virgin's Son laſt mentioned, who, though he be God bleſſed for ever, yet ſhall become Man, and, to ſhew the truth of his Humanity, ſhall not onely be conceived and brought forth, but alſo ſhall be nouriſhed and brought up by the ſame means and ſteps as other children; which is juſtly mentioned here as a ſtupendious and miraculous Work of God. o That by this Food he may grow up, and ſo may know, &c. Or, until he know, as it is rendred by divers Learned Men, and, among others, by the Chaldee Interpreter, who beſt knew the uſe of this Particle among the Hebrews. p To diſcern between things morally good and evil; which Children are capable of doing in ſome meaſure, when they are five or ſix years old. Compare Deut. 1. 39. where young Children are deſcribed by this Character, that they had no knowledge between good and evil.

16. * For q before the child r ſhall know to refuſe the evil, and chuſe the good, the land ſ that thou abhorreſt t ſhall be forſaken of both her Kings u.

* See Ch. 8. 4.

q Or, Yea; for ſo this Particle is uſed by way of amplification or addition, Iſa. 32. 13. Jer. 14. 5, 18. So the ſence is, Not onely this Land of thine ſhall be preſerved until the Virgins Son be born, but thine Enemies Land ſhall be ſorely ſcourged, and theſe two Kings deſtroyed, within a very little time. r Heb. this child; not the Virgin's Son, but the Prophet's Child, Shear-jaſhub, whom in all probability the Prophet, to prevent miſtakes, pointed at, and who was brought hither by God's ſpecial command, v. 3. and that for this very uſe; for otherwiſe his Preſence was wholly inſignificant. ſ The Lands, to wit, of Syria and Iſrael, as is evident from the next Words. It is an Enallage of the Singular for the Plural. t For its cruel Deſigns and Practices againſt. Or, which vexeth or moleſteth thee, as this Word is uſed Exod. 1. 12. Numb. 22. 3, &c. u So far ſhall Pekah and Rezin be from conquering thy Land, that they ſhall loſe their own Lands, and their Lives too; which they did within two years after this time, being both ſlain by the King of Aſſyria, 2 Kings 15. 29, 30. & 16. 9.

17. ¶ The LORD ſhall bring x upon thee y and upon thy people, and upon thy fathers houſe z, days a that have not come, from the day that x But although God will deliver you at this time for his own Names sake, yet he will remember and requite all your present and following wickedness, and hath a dreadful Judgment in store for you. y For part of this Assyrian storm fell in Ahaz his Reign, 2 Chron. 28. 20, &c. z Upon thy Sons and Successours, the Kings of Judah: the accomplishment whereof is recorded in their History. a To wit, evil days, by a Synecdoche; or calamities: for days are oft put for the Events which happen in them, and especially for Judgments and Tribulations, as Job 18. 20. Psal. 137. 7. Isa. 9. 4. Obad. v. 12. b When Ten Tribes revolted from thy Father's House, and set up another opposite Kingdom. c Who may well be called their Plague or Calamity, as he is called the rod of God's anger, Isa. 10. 5. Or, with (as this Hebrew Particle oft signifies) the King, &c. or, by the King, &c. And King is here put for Kings, as Dan. 2. 37. & 8. 21.

* Ephraim

* 1 Kings 12. 16. * Ephraim departed from Judah b, even the king of Assyria c.

18. And it shall come to pass in that day d, that the LORD shall hiss e for the flie f, that is in the uttermost part g of the rivers h of Egypt, and for the bee i that is in the land of Assyria k, d Known to God, and appointed by him for the execution of these Judgments. e See on Isa. 5. 26. f The Flies. So he calls these Enemies, to imply either their great Numbers, or their speedy March, or their unavoidable Assault. g In, or near, or towards their extremity or end, where they go out into the Sea. h Of the River Nilus, which may be called Rivers, either for its greatness, for which cause the title of Rivers is given also to Euphrates, Psal. 137. 1. and to Tigris, Nah. 2. 6. or because, towards the end of it, it is divided into seven famous Streams, by which it emptieth it self into the Midland Sea, Isa. 11. 15. He seems plainly to design and describe the Egyptians, who were always dangerous Neighbours to Judah, and did probably animate and assist the Philistins, and Edomites, and others, against them, and at last made a formal Invasion and Conquest of their Land, 2 Kings 23. 33, &c. Besides, when the Chaldæans had in good measure subdued the Egyptians, it is very probable that great numbers of the Egyptian Souldiers did list themselves in the Chaldæan Army, and with them invade the Land of Judah. i The Bees, the Assyrian Army, who are compared to Bees, as for their numerous Forces and orderly March, so for their fierce Attempts and mischievous Effects. k In the Empire of Assyria or Babylon; for these two were united into one Empire, and therefore in Scripture are promiscuously called sometimes by one Title, and sometimes by the other.

19. And they l shall come, and shall rest all of them m in the desolate valleys n, and in the holes of the rocks o, and upon all thorns, and upon all ‖ bushes p.

l The Flies, and especially the Bees. m They shall have an easie Victory; few or none of them shall be slain in the Attempt. n Either, 1. such as were and had long been desolate. So it signifies the vast numbers of their Enemies, which filled all places, both such as are well inhabited, and such as were in a great measure desolate: Or, 2. such as they found very fruitful, but made them desolate. o To which possibly the Israelites fled for refuge. p Which he mentions partly because Flies and Bees use frequently to rest there; and partly to intimate, that no place should escape the fury of this Enemy.

* 2 Kings 19. 35. 20. In the same day shall the LORD shave with a * rasour q that is hired r, namely by them beyond the river s, by the king of Assyria t, the head and the hair of the feet u; and it shall also consume the beard x.

q (i. e.) Utterly spoil and destroy, as shaving takes away all the hair, and leaves not any thing of it visible, as there is when the hair is only cut or polled. r Either, 1. by Ahaz, who did hire them, 2 Kings 16. 7, 8. And so the Prophet notes the just Judgment of God, in scourging with a Rod of their own making; and by this Threatning he endeavours to prevent that wicked design which then was on foot, of hiring Assyrian Succours: Or, 2. by God, who did stir them up, and send them upon his Errand against Judah, as he threatens Isa. 10. 6, and paid them liberally for that Service, as he did Nebuchadnezzar, of which see Jer. 25. 9. & 27. 6, 7. Dan. 2. 37, 38. s Euphrates, called the River by way of eminency, Psal. 72. 8. Jer. 2. 18. beyond which Assyria lay. t By the Successive Kings of the Assyrian Empire, Sennacherib, 2 Kings 18. 13, &c. Esarhaddon, 2 Chron. 33. 11. and especially by Nebuchadnezzar, who having subdued the Assyrian Monarchy, from thenceforth was King of Assyria as well as of Chaldæa. And the Prophet rather mentions Assyria than Chaldæa, or Babylon, partly because the Assyrian began and continued to execute this Judgment, although the Babylonian complicated it; and partly to inform them, that they laid the foundation of their own ruine, by opening the door to the Assyrian, who afterwards entred at his pleasure, and left it open for Nebuchadnezzar. u Of the lower or secret parts, which come under that name, Ezek. 16. 7, 25. and elsewhere, as hath been noted again and again; and which the Jewish Writers affirm to have been shaved in the Purification of Lepers and Levites, Levit. 14. 8, 9. Numb. 8. 7. x Which they highly esteemed, as a great ornament. By these Metaphorical Expressions he signifies the total destruction of their State, from head to foot, from the highest to the lowest.

21. And it shall come to pass in that day, that a man shall nourish a young cow, and two sheep y.

y This and the following Verse contain either, 1. a mitigation of the foregoing calamity, or some comfort for the remainders of the people, after the publick devastation: or rather, 2. a further declaration of the threatned desolation; which best agrees not only with the foregoing, but also with the following Verses. So the sence of this Verse is this, They who formerly used to keep great Herds of Cattel, and many Flocks of Sheep, shall esteem it a great happiness if they can keep but one Cow and two Sheep, to keep themselves from extremity of Famine.

22. And it shall come to pass for the abundance of milk that they shall give z, he shall eat butter: for butter and honey a shall every one eat that is left † in the land.

† Heb. in the midst of the land.

z Because they shall have excellent and large Pastures, by reason of the great scarcity of Cattel; whereas formerly their Lands were oft-times over-stocked with Cattel. a Which may be here mentioned, either, 1. as mean and vulgar Food, being very common in those parts; which are opposed to that Flesh and Corn, and other excellent Fruits of the Earth, wherewith their Land formerly abounded: or, 2. as very good and pleasant Food, which the poorer sort had formerly used to sell, to procure more necessary and cheaper Food for themselves: but now the Land should be so destitute of People, that there were none to whom they could sell them, and those few who did survive might freely eat all sorts of Provisions.

23. And it shall come to pass in that day, that every place shall be, where there were a thousand vines at a thousand silver rings b, it shall even be for briers and thorns c.

b Or, pieces of silver, as the same word is commonly rendred. Whereby we may understand either, 1. so many pounds; a pound for each Vineyard, to wit, for the annual Rent: or, 2. so many shekels, which word is most commonly understood, when no particular kind of Coin is expressed, as 2 Sam. 18. 11, 12. Matt. 26. 15. and then the meaning is, not that the thousand Vineyards were let for a thousand shekels, a Vineyard for a shekel, which is a contemptible price; but that each of the thousand Vineyards might have been sold or let for a thousand shekels, which was the yearly Rent of some excellent Vineyards, as may be gathered from Cant. 8. 11. Except we understand this not of so many Vineyards, as other Interpreters do, but of so many single Vines, as the word properly and generally signifies, planted together in one large Vineyard, which may be here meant by the place of the River; and then each Vine may be valued at a shekel. But this place may possibly be otherwise rendred, and that exactly according to the Hebrew Text, Every place where there are a thousand vines, shall be for a thousand pieces of silver, i. e. It shall be valued, or offered, either to be let, or rather to be sold, at that price; which was a very low price, and therefore fitly signifies the greatness of the desolation. c Because it shall be utterly neglected, and therefore overspread with them. Or, yea it shall be for briers and thorns. No man will either buy or hire it upon any terms.

24. With arrows and with bows d shall men come thither: because all the land shall become briers and thorns.

d Either to hunt, or to defend themselves from wild beasts, which commonly abide in such desolate & overgrown grounds.

25. And on all hills that shall be digged e with the mattock, there shall not come thither the fear of briers and thorns f: * but it shall g be for the sending forth of oxen, and for the treading of lesser cattel h.

* Chap. 32. 20.

e Or, that were digged, to wit, formerly, that used to be digged and dressed for the planting of Vines, or other choice Fruit-trees. f The words thus rendred, sound like a promise: But that doth no way agree with the scope of the place. And they may be, and are by some, understood not of Briers and Thorns growing in those Grounds, which would hinder the feeding of Cattel there, but of such wherewith they were fenced, and by which the Cattel were affrighted or hindred from breaking into them, which cause of their fear being now removed by the general devastation, they might now enter there, and feed at pleasure, as the next words imply. Or they may be be rendred thus, as they are by a late Learned Interpreter, That there might not come thither, &c. which is mentioned as the reason why they were digged and dressed, that they might be freed from Briers and Thorns. And so there is only a defect of the Hebrew Particle asher, which is frequent, and that not only as it signifies which, but as it is taken finally for that, as Isa. 5. 11. & 10. 2. and elsewhere. g Or, even (as this Particle is oft rendred) there shall be, to wit, a place; which word is understood, 2 Sam. 7. 1. 1 Kings 18. 12. Or the Words may be thus rendred, And all hills that shall be digged——and thorns, even they or each of them shall be, the Singular being taken collectively, as is very usual. h All sorts of Cattel may fairly enter, and feed there, the Fences being broken down, and the Owners generally slain, or carried into Captivity.

CHAP. VIII.

MOreover the Lord said unto me, Take thee a great roll a, and write in it with a mans pen b, concerning † Maher-shalal-hash-baz c.

† Heb. in making speed to the spoil, he hasteneth the prey, or, make speed, &c.

a Or, A great volume, because the Prophecy to be written in it was large, and God would have it written in very large and legible Characters. b With such a Pen as Writers use, Psal. 45. 1. Jer. 8. 8. that so all may read and understand it. c Concerning that thing which is signified by the Name of thy Child, which is here mentioned by way of anticipation, as not being given him till v. 3. i.e. concerning that which God is making haste to do, the giving up the Kingdoms of Syria and Israel for a Prey to the Assyrian, as this Name is explained, v. 4.

2. And I took unto me faithful witnesses, to record d, * Uriah the priest, and Zechariah the son of Jeberechiah.

* 2 Kings 16. 10.

d Persons of unquestionable Reputation, who should bear witness that the following Name and Prophecy was written and published by me according to God's Command.

3. And I † went unto e the propheteſs f, and she conceived and bare a son: then said the LORD to me, Call his name Maher-shalal-hash-baz.

e Heb. I came near to her. A modest Expression of the Conjugal Act. f So called, partly as she was the Prophet's Wife, Wives being frequently denominated from their Husband's Titles, as the Wives of Mayor or Doctor, &c. are commonly called Mayoreſs, Doctoreſs, &c. and partly because she did concur with the Prophet to the Procreation of this Prophetical Child.

4. For before the child shall have knowledge to cry, My father, and my mother g, ‖ * the riches of Damascus, and the spoil of Samaria shall be taken away h before the king of Assyria i.

‖ Or, he that is, before the king of Assyria shall take away the riches, &c.

* 2 Kings 16. 9.

g To speak, and to know his Parents; which is within the space of two years. And this agrees with the other Prophecy, Isa. 7. 16. Before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and chuse the good, which requires a longer time than to distinguish his Parents from Strangers; which suits well to Shear-jashub, who, being born some years before this, was capable of that further degree of Knowledge, as soon as this was capable of the lower degree. h The Kingdoms of Syria and Israel, here signified by their two Capital Cities, shall be stripped of their Wealth and Power, as they were by Tiglath-Pileser, within the time here limited, 2 Kings 15. 29. i In his Presence, and by himself and his Forces: For in Scripture-use that is said to be before a man, which is in, or is put into a man's power, as Gen. 13. 9. & 20. 15, &c. and men are said to be smitten before their enemies, when they are smitten by them, as Numb. 14. 42. Deut. 1. 42. Judg. 20. 39. and oft elsewhere. Others refer this Phrase to the ancient Custom of Conquerors, of sending or carrying their Spoils before them into their own Country.

5. ¶ The LORD spake also unto me again, saying,

6. For as much as this people k ‖ refuseth l the waters of Shiloah m that go softly n, and rejoice in Rezin and Remaliahs son:

k Either, 1. the People of Judah, which are suppos'd to have grown weary of their present Government, and out of distrust of God's Protection, designed to revolt from God, and from the House of David, and to put themselves under the Power and Protection of the Kings of Syria and Israel. But there are no Footsteps of any such Design or Practice of that People. And the following Clause of rejoycing in Rezin, &c. cannot with any colour be ascribed to the Jews, whom at this time they sought to destroy: or, rather, 2. the People of Israel, of whom he last spake, v. 4. and who are the chief Subject of this whole Prophecy, contained in this and the foregoing Chapter; and who did rejoyce not onely in their own King Pekah, but also in the Assistance of so powerful an Allie as Rezin was. l Or rather, despiseth, as the Word properly and most frequently signifies. m That small and contemptible River or Brook which ran by that City, which is here secretly opposed to the great Rivers of Tigris and Euphrates, by which the Assyrian Empire was fortified. Hereby he understands the Munitions and Strength of the Jews, which their Enemies derided and contemned. n Gently, as little Rivers do.

7. Now therefore o behold, the LORD bringeth up upon them p the waters of the river q strong and many, even the king of Assyria, and all his glory r: and he shall come up over all his chanels s, and go over all his banks.

o Because they despise the Opposition which they have from Siloah and Jerusalem, they shall have a more potent Enemy. p Upon Israel. See on the foregoing Verse. q Of Euphrates, oft called the river, for its eminent greatness: Whereby he understands the Assyrian Forces, as the next Words explain the Metaphor. r His numerous and puissant Army, in which he gloried, See Isa. 10. 8. s This great River shall overflow its own proper Channels. The meaning is, This great Monarch shall enlarge his Dominions, and add the Lands of Syria and Israel to them. Some render the words, he shall come up with all his channels or streams; for the Hebrew Particle al sometimes signifies with, as Job 38. 32. But it seems hard to understand the same Particle one way in this Clause, and another in the last Clause. Besides, the last Clause favours the former Interpretation, the same thing being repeated in it, as is usual in the Sacred Writings. Or, this may be understood of the Channels and Banks of the People or Land of Israel. The Enemy being represented under the Metaphor of a River breaking in upon their Land, may fitly be said to overflow all their Channels and Banks, to wit, all Places both low and high, so that nothing shall be able to withstand his Fury.

8. And he t shall pass through Judah u, he shall overflow and go over, he shall reach even to the neck x, and † the stretching out of his wings y shall fill the breadth of thy land, O * Immanuel z.

† Heb. the fulness of the breadth of thy land shall be the stretchings out of his wings.

* Chap. 7. 14.

t Or, it, to wit, the River, v. 7. which yet designs the same Person and Thing, to wit, the Invasion of the King of Assyria. u And when he shall have finished his Work against you, he shall invade the Land of Judah, as Sennacherib did some few years after his Conquest of Samaria, 2 Kings 18. 9, 13. x So as they shall be in great danger of being drowned or destroyed. He persists in the Metaphor of a River swelling so high as to reach to a man's Neck, and be ready to overwhelm him. Such was the danger of Judah's Land, when Sennacherib took all the fenced Cities of Judah, 2 Kings 18. 13. and sent his Army against Jerusalem. y Of his Forces, or of the Wings of his Army, as they anciently were and still are called. z Of the Land of Judah, so called because the Messiah, who is called by God himself Immanuel, ch. 7. 14. should certainly be born and live and die there. And this is added emphatically for the Consolation of God's People, to assure them, that notwithstanding this dreadful Scourge, yet God would make a difference between Israel and Judah, and whereas Israel should be so broken by the Assyrian, that they should not be a people, as was threatned ch. 7. 8. Judah should be restored and preserved, for the sake of the Messiah, to be the Place of his Birth and Ministry, according to that famous Prophecy, Gen. 49. 10.

9. ¶ Associate your selves O ye people a, ‖ and ye shall be broken in pieces; and give ear all ye of far countries b: gird your selves, and ye shall be broken in pieces; gird your selves c, and ye shall be broken in pieces d.

a Syrians and Israelites. Immanuel's Name inspireth the Prophet with new Courage, and makes him send a Challenge to all God's Enemies, and foretel their certain downfal. b Whosoever you be, whether far or near, who do or shall conspire against Immanuel's Land. c With Sword and Belt. Prepare your selves for War. d This is repeated for the greater Assurance of the thing, and the Comfort of God's People, who are apt to despond upon such occasions.

10. Take counsel together, and it shall come to nought: speak the word e, and it shall not stand: for God is with us f.

e Declare and fix your Purpose, and make your boast of it. f The Almighty and onely True God fighteth for us, and against you. He gives the Interpretation of the Name Immanuel expressed before, v. 8. for though the Word in the Hebrew be the same here and there, yet there it seems to be taken properly, and here appellatively.

11. ¶ For the LORD spake thus to me † with a strong hand g, and instructed me, that I should not walk in the way of this people h, saying, † Heb. in strength of hand.

g With a vehement and more than ordinary Inspiration, strongly imprinting it in my Mind. h Of the generality of the People of Judah; whose eminent Danger and Calamity he foretels, v. 8. but withal gives them full assurance that God would would deliver them out of it, v. 9, 10. Which he doth to aggravate the preſent ſin of Ahaz and his People, in forſaking God, and ſeeking to the King of Aſſyria for help, as they did, 2 Kings 16. 6, 7, 8.

12. Say ye i not, A confederacy k, to all them to whom this people ſhall ſay, A confederacy: neither fear ye their fear l, nor be afraid.

i Thou, Iſaiah, and thine and my Children. k Do not approve of or conſent to this wicked deſign of making a Confederacy with the King of Aſſyria. l That thing which they fear, that, if they do not call in the Aſſyrian Succours, they ſhall certainly be deſtroyed by thoſe two potent Kings united againſt them, and that God either cannot or will not deliver them.

13. Sanctifie the LORD of hoſts m himſelf, and let him be your fear n and let him be your dread.

m Give him the Glory of his Power, and Goodneſs, and Faithfulneſs, by truſting to his Promiſes for your deliverance. n Let God, and not the Kings of Syria and Iſrael, be the chief object of your fear.

14. And he ſhall be your ſanctuary o: but for * Chap. 28. 16. Luk. 2. 34. Rom. 9. 33. 1 Pet. 2. 8. * a ſtone of ſtumbling and for a rock of offence p to both the houſes of Iſrael q, for a gin, and for a ſnare to the inhabitants of Jeruſalem r.

o A ſure refuge to all that truly fear him, and rely upon him. p An occaſion of ſin and ruine, at whom they will take offence and ſtumble, ſo as to fall and be broken, as it is expreſſed, v. 15. q To the two Royal Families of Iſrael, largely ſo called; that of Judah, to wit, the Houſe of David; and that of Ephraim: or, to the two Kingdoms, that of the Ten Tribes, and that of the Two Tribes. r Which are diſtinctly mentioned, as a very obſervable and wonderful thing, becauſe Jeruſalem was the Seat of the Temple, and of God's ſolemn Worſhip, where all the means of Knowledge and Grace were in greateſt power and plenty, where the Thrones of Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Judicature were eſtabliſhed, where the moſt wiſe and learned Doctors had their conſtant or frequent abode. And that ſuch a place and people ſhould reject Immanuel, or their Meſſiah, when he ſhould appear, was ſo great and ſtrange an occurrent, that the prediction of it was highly neceſſary, leſt otherwiſe, when it came to paſs, it ſhould ſhake the Faith of all who did believe on him; whereas now the accompliſhment hereof was a notable confirmation of their Faith, and an evidence that Chriſt was the true Meſſiah.

* Mat. 21. 44. Luk. 20. 18. 15. And many among them s ſhall * ſtumble t, and fall, and be broken, and be ſnared, and be taken.

s Not all; for there ſhall be a remnant, as was foretold Iſa. 4. 2. & 6. 13. t At that Stone or Rock, mentioned v. 14. This was accompliſhed at the coming of the Meſſias, whom the Jews rejected to their own deſtruction.

16. Bind up the teſtimony, ſeal the law among † Heb. learned ones. Ch. 50. 4. my † diſciples u.

u Theſe are, by the conſent of all, God's words to the Prophet. By the teſtimony and the law or doctrine (for ſo this word is frequently taken) he underſtands one and the ſame thing, as he doth alſo v. 20. to wit, the Word of God, and eſpecially that which is the main ſcope and ſubſtance thereof, the Doctrine of the Meſſias, which, though now profeſſed by all the Iſraelites, ſhall be diſowned by the generality of them, when the Meſſiah ſhall come. Bind up and ſeal are to be underſtood prophetically, Declare and propheſie that it ſhall be bound up and ſealed; as Iſaiah is ſaid to make fat and to blind, &c. Iſa. 6. 10. and Jeremy to root out and pull down, &c. Jer. 1. 10. when they foretel theſe Events. Moreover, bind up and ſeal deſign the ſame thing, and that is, either, 1. Security and Certainty, as things are bound up or ſealed, that they may not be loſt. So he ſignifies, That although this Doctrine would be loſt among the Body of the Iſraelites, yet it ſhould be preſerved among his Diſciples. Or, 2. Secrecy, as many things are bound up or ſealed, that they may be hid from the eyes of others. And ſo he informeth them, that this Doctrine now was and ſhould be hid in a great meaſure among all God's People, even till the accompliſhment of it; and that even when it was accompliſhed, it ſhould ſtill continue to be as a Secret and Myſtery, known indeed to his true Diſciples, but hid from the Body of the Nation, who would not ſee it, and therefore ſhould be blinded by God's juſt Judgment, that they ſhould not ſee it, as was propheſied Iſa. 6. 9, 10. Or, 3. both Security and Secrecy, ſignifying, That it ſhould certainly be fulfilled, yet withal kept ſecret from the unbelieving Jews. For why may not theſe two be joyned in the Expoſition of this Text, as they were in the Event? By God's Diſciples he means thoſe who were taught of God, as it is expreſſed Iſa. 54. 13. where this very word is uſed; or, every one that hath heard and learned of the Father, and therefore cometh unto Chriſt, as it is explained John 6. 45.

17. And x I will wait upon the LORD y that hideth his face z from the houſe of Jacob a, and I will look for him b.

x Or, as this Particle is rendred Jer. 2. 32, 35. and elſewhere, Yet, notwithſtanding this dreadful Prophecy concerning the Unbelief and Rejection of Iſrael. y I will refer my ſelf and this matter unto God, caſting my care upon him, and expecting the accompliſhment of his promiſe, in ſending the Meſſiah, and in conferring upon me and all believing Iſraelites all his Mercies and Bleſſings, to be procured by and through his Blood and Merits. z That now doth, and threateneth that he will hereafter, withdraw his Favour and Bleſſing, as this Phraſe ſignifies Pſal. 10. 1. & 27. 9. and oft elſewhere. a From the Family or People of Iſrael. b With an Eye of Faith and Expectation, till his time cometh.

18. * Behold c, I and the children d, whom the * Heb. 2. 13. * Pſal. 71. 7. Zech. 3. 8. LORD hath given me, are * for ſigns, and for wonders e in Iſrael f, from the LORD of hoſts g, which dwelleth in mount Zion h.

c It is worthy of your obſervation and admiration. Theſe words are literally ſpoken by Iſaiah concerning himſelf, but withal myſtically concerning Chriſt, of whom he ſpeaks more frequently and fully than any other Prophet, and of whom he was an evident Type; and therefore they are fitly applied to Chriſt, Heb. 2. 13. d Either, 1. his natural Children, whoſe very Names were Prophetical, and Signs of future Events, Ch. 7. 3. & 8. 3, 4. or, 2. his ſpiritual Children, whom he had either begotten or brought up by his Miniſtry. For the Prophets were called Fathers not only with reſpect to the young Prophets, who were commonly called the ſons of the prophets, but alſo in relation to others, as 2 Kings 2. 12. & 13. 14. And this ſence ſeems more probable than the former, becauſe it agrees beſt, 1. with the following words, which ſeem to be too lofty and emphatical to be uſed concerning his natural Children, for their Prophetical Names, which, if they were Signs, could not properly be called Wonders: 2. with the Context, and ſcope of the place, which is to ſet forth the Incredulity of the Iſraelites, and their Contempt and Rejection of Chriſt, and of all his faithful Meſſengers, both the Prophets, who were ſent as Harbingers before his coming, and the Apoſtles, who were Witneſſes of his coming: 3. with Heb. 2. 13. where they are expounded of ſpiritual Children. e Are a Gazing-ſtock to, and admired by them, for our folly in believing God's Promiſes: For ſo the believing Jews now were, to Ahaz and the generality of the People, who thought it their wiſdom and intereſt to procure aid from Aſſyria, and eſteemed thoſe Fools who, upon pretence of relying upon God, would neglect ſo great an advantage. And ſo the Prophet foretells that they ſhould be when the Meſſiah did come; which is the myſtical, as the other is the literal ſence: and ſo both of them may be meant in this place. f Even amongſt the Iſraelites, who have been taught and do profeſs better things. g Which comes to paſs by the wiſe Counſel and Providence of God, in which I willingly acquieſce. h Where the Temple now was, and where the Meſſiah was to ſet up his Kingdom.

19. ¶ And when they i ſhall ſay unto you k, Seek unto them l that have familiar ſpirits, and unto wizards m that * peep, and that mutter n: ſhould * Chap. 29. 4. not a people ſeek unto their God o? for the living to the dead p.

i The Iſraelites, to whom I and my Children are Signs and Wonders, who are fallen from God, and his true Religion and Worſhip, into Superſtition and Idolatry, and will endeavour to ſeduce you into the ſame impiety. k My Children, whom the Prophet here arms againſt the common Temptation. l For advice and help, and ſeek no more to the Prophets who have hitherto deluded you with vain words. This was the counſel of the ungodly and unbelieving Jews. m Of whom ſee Levit. 19. 31. & 20. 27. & Deut. 18. 11. n That ſpeak with a puling and low voice, as theſe two words ſignifie; which they affected to do, ſpeaking rather inwardly in their bellies, than outwardly and audibly with their mouths and voice, as the Title of Ventriloqui, commonly given to them, ſignifies. o This anſwer the Prophet puts into their mouths, to the foregoing counſel: Doth not every Nation, in caſes of difficulty or diſtreſs, ſeek to their own Gods for relief? Much more ſhould we do ſo, that have the only True God for our God. p Shall they ſeek (which words are eaſily underſtood out of the foregoing clauſe) for the living, &c. That living men ſhould inquire of the Living God, is proper and reaſonable; but it is highly abſurd for them to forſake him, and to ſeek to dead Idols, either to the Images, or to the Spirits of dead men, which are ſuppoſed to dwell and ſpeak in them.

20. * To the law and to the teſtimony q: if * Luk. 16. 29. they r ſpeak not according to this word, it is becauſe there is † no light in them s. † Heb. no morning.

q Let this Diſpute between you and them be determined by God's Word, which is here and in many other places called the Law, to ſignifie their obligation to believe and obey it; and the Teſtimony, becauſe it is a Witneſs between God and Man, Man, of God's Mind and Will, and of Man's Duty; and so these two Titles contain two Arguments against these Idolatrous Practices. r Your Antagonists, that seek to pervert you, v. 19. s This proceeds from the darkness of their Minds, because they are blind, and will not see, and God hath shut their Eyes that they cannot see. But these Words are by divers Learned Interpreters understood not as a Declaration of their Ignorance, but a Commination and Prediction of their Misery, light being most commonly used in Scripture for Comfort and Happiness, and darkness for Sorrows and Calamities. And this sence seems to be much favoured by the following Passages. And then the Words may be thus rendred, Assuredly (for the Hebrew Particle asher is frequently used as a Note of Asseveration, as 1 Sam. 15. 20. Psal. 10. 6. & 95. 11, &c. as hath been more than once observed before) no light or morning-light shall be (for that may as well be understood as is) to them, a Night of Misery shall come upon them, and they shall never have a Morning of Deliverance from it; they shall be swallowed up in endless Calamities.

21. And they t shall pass through it u hardly bestead x and hungry y: and it shall come to pass, that when they shall be hungry, they shall fret themselves, and curse their king z, and their God a, and look upward b.

t The Idolatrous and Apostatical Israelites. u Or, in it, to wit, their own Land, which is easily understood out of the Context, and from the Phrase it self, the Pronoun Relative being put without an Antecedent, as it is in other Places which have been formerly noted. They shall either pass through it into Captivity, or wander hither and thither in it, like distracted men, not knowing whither to go, nor what to do; whereas if they had not forsaken God, they might have had a quiet and setled abode in it. x Sorely distressed, as this Word is used Gen. 35. 16. & Job 30. 25. y Destitute of Food, and of all Necessaries, which are oft signified by Food. z Either because he doth not relieve them; or because, by his foolish Counsels and Courses, he brought them into these Miseries. a Either, 1. the True God; or rather, 2. to Idols, to whom they trusted, and whom they now find too late unable to help them. b To Heaven for help, as Men of all Nations and Religions in great Calamities use to do.

* Chap. 5. 30. 22. And * they shall look unto the earth c: and behold, trouble and darkness, dimness of anguish; and they shall be driven to darkness d.

c Finding no help from Heaven, they turn their Eyes downward, looking hither and thither for Comfort. d Many Words expressing the same thing are put together, to signifie the variety and extremity and continuance of their Miseries.

CHAP. IX.

NEvertheless, the dimness shall not be such as was in her vexation a, when at the first b he c lightly afflicted d the land of Zebulun, and the land of Nephtali e, and afterward did more grievously afflict her f by the way of the sea g, ‖ beyond Jordan h in Galilee ‖ of the nations i.

‖ Or, on this side. ‖ Or, populous.

a The Words thus rendred contain a Mitigation of the foregoing Threatning: And so the sence of the Verse may be this, The Calamity of this Land and its Inhabitants shall be great, yet not such as that which was brought upon the Kingdom of the Ten Tribes by the King of Assyria, who at first indeed dealt more gently with them, but afterwards quite rooted them out, and carried them away into a dreadful Captivity, from whence they were not to return, no not when the Messiah came into the World; for, after this Darkness, of which I have now spoken, there shall come a glorious Light, as it follows in the next Verse. The Dutch Interpreters take it in the same sence, and render the Words thus, But the Land that was distressed shall not be utterly darkned. To the same purpose they may be thus rendred, according to the Hebrew, But darkness shall not be (i. e. shall not abide or continue; for to be is sometimes put for to abide or continue to be, as 1 Sam. 12. 14. Prov. 23. 5. Matt. 17. 4. Heb. 8. 4.) unto her (to wit, the Land, which by the consent of Interpreters is understood here, as it was ch. 8. 21.) to whom this distress is or shall be. She shall be distressed and darkned, as I said before, ch. 8. 22. but not irrecoverably, not for ever. Some understand the Words to be an aggravation of the Darkness or Misery threatned, ch. 8. 22. rendring the Words thus, for the dimness shall not be, &c. And so the sence is, This shall not be so sleight an Affliction as that which befel them by Pul, 2 Kings 15. 19. nor as that which succeeded it by Tiglath-Pileser, who, at the desire of Ahaz, did about this time make another Invasion into the Land of Israel, 2 Kings 15. 29. and was an heavier Stroke than the former; but this shall be far heavier than either of them. But the former sence seems better to agree both with the following Verse, and with Matt. 4. 13, 14, 15. where these Words are expounded as a Promise, and said to be fulfilled by Christ's preaching the Gospel in these Parts. b In the first Invasion which the King of Assyria made upon Israel. c To wit, God, who is oft understood in such Cases, and who is here supposed to be the Author or Inflicter of this Judgment. Or, it is an Impersonal Speech, he afflicted for was afflicted, than which nothing is more common in the Hebrew Language. d Either, 1. by Pul; or rather, 2. by Tiglath-Pileser, who at this time invaded and subdued these Parts, as is expressed 2 Kings 15. 29. e These Parts are particularly mentioned, because this Storm fell most heavily upon them; but under them the other Parts of the Land are understood by a common Figure called Synecdoche. f Either, 1. by Tiglath-Pileser; or rather, 2. by Shalmaneser, who took Samaria, and carried Israel into Captivity, 2 Kings 17. 5, 6. Of which Calamity, though yet to come, the Prophet speaks as if it were past, as the manner of the Prophets is. g In that part of the Land which bordereth upon the Sea, to wit, the Lake of Genesareth, which is very commonly called a sea, as Mat. 4. 18. Joh. 21. 1, &c. and upon which the Portions of Zebulun and Nephtali bordered. h Or, on this side Jordan; for this Preposition is used both ways, and this Land might be said to be either beyond or on this side Jordan, in divers respects. i Or, Galilee of the Gentiles, to wit, the Upper Galilee, so called because it bordered upon the Gentiles. But this last Clause, and the two foregoing Clauses, are otherwise rendred and interpreted by divers Learned men, as a Prophecy concerning the Light of the Gospel that should shine in those Parts, As at the first time (to wit, in the former Ages of the Israelitish Church and Commonwealth) he made the land of Zebulun and the land of Nephtali vile or contemptible (as he might be said to have done, partly by putting those People at so great a distance from his Sanctuary, partly by exposing them to some Calamities which other Tribes escaped, and partly by denying them those Honours and Privileges which he afforded to other Tribes, of which see Joh. 7. 52. Out of Galilee ariseth no Prophet; and Joh. 1. 46. Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? which was an eminent City of Galilee); so in the latter or last time (to wit, in the days of the Messiah, or of the Gospel, which are frequently so called in the Scriptures both of the Old and New Testament) he made it (i. e. he will make it, for the Prophet speaks of things to come as past, as he doth most commonly in this Prophecy) glorious (to wit, by Christ's first preaching the Gospel in those Parts) in or towards the way of the sea (to wit, of Galilee or Genesareth) beyond or on this side Jordan, in Galilee of the Gentiles. Which Interpretation I thought fit to propose, as deserving farther Consideration.

2. * The people k that walked l in darkness m, * Matt. 4. 16. have seen n a great light: they that dwell in the Eph. 5. 14. land of the shadow of death o, upon them hath the light shined.

k The People of God, Israel and Judah, and especially those of them mentioned in the foregoing Verse. l In Matt. 4. 16. it is sate. It notes not their gesture, but their State or Condition, they lived or abode. Onely walking in darkness is more perillous than fitting. m The Expression is general, and so may well comprehend both the Darkness of Calamity, and the Darkness of Ignorance, and Idolatry, and Prophaneness, in which those Parts were eminently involved, by reason of their great distance from God's Sanctuary, and by their frequent Converse with the Gentiles, who bordered upon them, and of which this place is expounded, Matt. 4. n i. e. Shall see at the coming of the Messiah. o Which notes both extreme, and dangerous, or deadly Darkness.

3. Thou hast multiplied the nation p, and ‖ not increased the joy q: they joy before thee r, according to the joy in harvest s, and as men rejoyce when they divide the spoile t.

‖ Or, to him.

p Thou hast made good thy Promise to Abraham concerning the Multiplication of his Seed, Gen. 15. 5. & 22. 17. by adding his Spiritual Seed unto the Carnal, by gathering in the Gentiles to the Jews, and making them both one People in Christ, Joh. 10. 16. Eph. 2. 14, &c. For in Scripture-account the Believing Gentiles are the Seed of Abraham, as well as the Jews; of which see Gal. 3. 7, 8, 9. Or, thou hast magnified the nation, honoured them with peculiar Privileges above all other Nations, and especially with this transcendent Privilege, that the Messiah and Saviour of the World should be born of them, and live among them; of which he speaks more fully, v. 6, 7. q Or, yet not encreasing their joy. Which might very truly and fitly be said of the Jewish Nation, upon this occasion, partly because they did not rejoyce in the Conversion of the Gentiles, as they should have done, but murmured, and grieved, and stumbled at it; and partly because, through their perverseness and unbelief, that would be unto them an occasion of their utter ruine, the Conversion of the Gentiles being attended with the Rejection of the Jews. But because this Translation seems not to agree with the following Words, which ascribe great Joy to them, some render the Words otherwise; either thus, and wilt thou not encrease their joy? To which Question the next Words give an affirmative Answer. So the Hebrew Particle lo is put interrogatively for halo, as it is in many other places which I have formerly observed. Or thus, and hast increased to it, or him, or them (to that Nation) their joy. For though the Hebrew lo be written like an Adverb, yet it may be read like a Pronoun, as it is both by Jewish and Christian Christian Interpreters acknowledged to be in many places; of which see more in my Latin Synopsis. r In thy Presence, and in the place of thy Worship; not with a carnal and worldly, but with a spiritual and religious Joy, giving thee the Praise and Glory of all thy Favours afforded to them. s When men receive with great joy that for which they have laboured much, and long waited. See Psal. 125. 5, 6. t When, after a bloody Fight, and a glorious Victory, they come to take the Spoil.

‖ Or, when thou breakest. * Judg. 7. 22. Chap. 10. 26.

4. ‖ For thou hast broken u the yoke of his burden x, and the staff of his shoulder y, the rod z of his oppressour a, as in the day of * Midian b.

u This notes the matter and occasion of the foregoing Joy. x His burdensom and heavy yoke, as the throne of holiness is put for the holy throne, Psal. 47. 8. y Either the staff wherewith his shoulders were smitten, or the staff or staves by which he was forced to carry burdens upon his shoulders. z Wherewith he beat him. Or, the scepter, the Power and Tyranny which he exercised over him. a Of all his Oppressors, but especially of Sin and of the Devil. b When God destroyed the Midianites in so admirable a manner, and by such unlikely and contemptible means, by three hundred men, and they not fighting, but only holding Lamps in their hands, and sounding their Trumpets. Which was an eminent Type of Christ's conquering the Devil, and all his Enemies, by dying upon the Cross, and by the Preaching of a few unlearned and despicable persons, &c.

‖ Or, when the whole battel of the warriour was, &c. ‖ Or, and it was, &c. † Heb. meat.

5. ‖ For every battel of the warriour is with confused noise c, and garments rolled in blood d, ‖ but this shall be with burning and † fuel of fire e.

c With the triumphant Exclamations of the Conquerour, and the bitter Lamentations of the Conquered, and the differing cryes of the same persons, sometimes conquering, and sometimes conquered. d With great difficulty and slaughter. e But this Victory which God's People shall have over all their Enemies, shall be more easie to them, and more terrible to their Adversaries, whom God will suddenly and utterly consume, as it were by fire.

* Joh. 3. 16.

6. For f unto us g a child h is born i, unto us a * son k is given l, and the government m shall be upon his shoulders n: and his name shall be called o, Wonderful, Counsellor p, The mighty God q, The everlasting Father r, The prince of peace s.

f Having spoken of the glorious Light, and Joy, and Victory of God's People, he now proceeds to shew the ground of it, and by what person these things are procured. g Unto us Jews, of whom Christ was born, and to whom he was primarily sent; Mat. 15. 24. for our use and benefit. h The Messiah, by the consent of Interpreters, not only Christian, but Jewish. For so the ancient Hebrew Doctors understood the place, and particularly the Chaldee Paraphrast; although the later Jews, out of opposition to Christ, wrest it to Hezekiah. Which extravagant Conceit, as it hath no foundation at all in this or any other Text of Scripture, and therefore may be rejected without any farther reason, so it is fully confuted by the following Titles, which are such as cannot without Blasphemy and Notchee be ascribed to Hezekiah, nor indeed to any meer mortal man, as we shall see. But all the following particulars do so truly and exactly agree to Christ, that they cannot without great violence, be alienated from him; or ascribed to any other. i For shall be born, as the Prophets generally speak. k So he determines the Sex of the Child. Or, the son, to wit, of the Virgin, of whom I spake before, Ch. 7. 14. l Is freely and graciously given to us by God. Other Children also are said to be given by God, Gen. 30. 6. & 48. 9. but this in a peculiar manner, and therefore he is called the gift of God, Joh. 4. 10. m To wit, of Israel, or of God's People, to whom he is given. n (i. e.) Upon him, or in his hands. He mentions shoulders, because great burdens are commonly laid upon mens shoulders; and, as all Government, if it be rightly managed, so this especially, is a very heavy burden, requiring extraordinary care and diligence and self-denial. Possibly here may be also an allusion to the ancient Custom of carrying the Ensigns of Government before the Magistrate, upon the shoulders of their Officers; or to the Cross of Christ, which was laid upon his shoulders, Joh. 19. 17. which also was the way to his Kingdom or Government, Luk. 24. 26. o Either, 1. he shall be called; for names are oft put for persons, as Acts 1. 15. Revel. 3. 4. & 11. 13. or, 2. his Name shall be; for, to be called in Scripture is oft put for to be, as I have noted before on Ch. 1. 26. and oft elsewhere. But this is not to be taken for a description of his Proper Name, by which he should be commonly called, but of his glorious Nature and Qualities. See my Notes on Isa. 7. 14. p These words may be taken either, 1. severally, as they are in our Translation, and by many others. This the Jews apply to Hezekiah, who, as they say, is called Wonderful, because of the Miracle which God wrought for him, 2 Kings 22. 2, &c. and Counsellor, because he took counsel with his Princes about God's Worship, and the Defence of the City, 2 Chron. 29. 4, &c. and gave good counsel to others. Which ridiculous account is sufficient to overthrow that Exposition. But they agree most eminently to the Lord Christ, who is truly Wonderful, in his Person, and Natures, and Words, and Works, being made up of Wonders, in whom there was nothing which was not Wonderful; who also may well be called Counsellor, because he knew the whole Counsel of God, and (so far as it was necessary) revealed it to us, and is the Great Counsellor of his Church and People in all their doubts and difficulties. Or, 2. jointly, Wonderful Counsellor: Which may seem best to agree both with the following Titles, each of which is made up of two words, and with Isa. 28. 29. where God is called Wonderful in counsel, and makes the Title more full and emphatical. To call Christ simply a Counsellor, may seem too mean a Character, being common to many others with him: But to say he is a Wonderful Counsellor, is a singular commendation. And so Christ is, because he hath been the Counsellor of his Church in all Ages, and the Author and Giver of all those excellent Counsels delivered not only by the Apostles, but also by the Prophets, as is evident from 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. and hath gathered, and enlarged, and preserved his Church, by admirable Counsels and Methods of his Providence, and, in a word, hath in him all the treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge, Col. 2. 3. q This Title can agree to no man but Christ, who was God as well as Man, to whom the Title of God or Jehovah is given, both in the Old and New Testament, as Jer. 23. 6. Joh. 1. 1. Rom. 9. 5. and in many other places. And it is a most true Observation, That this Hebrew word El is never used in the Singular Number, of any Creature, but only of the Almighty God, as is evident by perusing all the Texts where this word is used. And although the Title of Elohim, which is of the Plural Number, be twice or thrice given to some men, yet there is constantly added some diminishing Expression to it, as when they are said to be afraid, Job 41. 25. and to die, Psal. 49. 10. whereas here he adds the Epithet of Mighty, which is ascribed to the Great God, Deut. 10. 17. and elsewhere. r Heb. the Father of eternity. Having called him a Child, and a Son, in respect of his Humane Nature, lest this should be misinterpreted to his disparagement, he adds, that he is a Father also, even the God and Father of all things, the Work of Creation being common and commonly ascribed to each of the Persons of the Blessed Trinity, the Maker and Upholder of all Creatures, as he is said to be Joh. 1. 3. Heb. 1. 3. and the Father of all Believers, who are called his children, Heb. 2. 13. and the Father of eternity, either, 1. the first Author (such persons being called Fathers, as Gen. 4. 20. and elsewhere) of eternal salvation, as he is called Heb. 5. 9. or, 2. as we render it, the everlasting Father, who, though as Man he was then unborn, yet was and is from everlasting to everlasting. They who apply this to Hezekiah render it, the Father of an age, and expound this of his long Life and numerous Posterity: Which I the rather mention, to shew what absurd shifts they are forced to use, who interpret this Text of any other but Christ. For, he did not live very long, nor had he, that we read of, more than one Son, Manasseh. And if both these things had been true of him, they were more eminently true of many other men. Besides, this Hebrew word being used of God, as here it is of him who was now called the mighty God, constantly signifies Eternity, as Isa. 26. 4. & 57. 15, &c. s This Title doth not fully agree to Hezekiah, whose Reign was not free from Wars, as we see 2 Kings 18. but it exactly agrees to Christ, who is called our peace, Mic. 5. 5. Eph. 2. 14. and is the only Purchaser and Procurer of Peace between God and men, Isa. 53. 5. and of Peace between men and men, Jews and Gentiles, Eph. 2. 15, and of the Peace of our own Consciences; and leaves Peace as his Legacy to his Disciples, Joh. 14. 27. & 16. 33.

* Luk. 1. 32, 33. * 2 Kings 19. 31. Chap. 37. 32.

7. Of the increase of his government and peace, * there shall be no end t, upon the throne of David u and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice x, from henceforth even for ever y: the * zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this z.

t His peaceable and happy Government shall be enlarged without end: either, without end of duration, for ever; but that is expressed in a following clause of this Verse: or, without end of limitation, or without bounds. It shall not be confined to a narrow spot of ground, the Land of Canaan, but shall be extended far and wide to all the ends of the Earth. u Which was promised to David, and to his Seed for ever. x Not with Oppression and Tyranny, by which other Kingdoms are commonly managed, but by the Administration of Justice. y From the beginning of it, unto all Eternity. z This great Work, which surpasseth all the power and skill of men, shall be brought to pass by Almighty God, out of that fervent Affection which he hath to his own Name and Glory, and to the Honour of his dearly beloved Son, and unto his Church and People.

8. ¶ The Lord sent a word a into Jacob, and it hath lighted b upon Israel c.

a A prophetical and threatning Message by me: For now the Prophet, having inserted some consolatory passages for the support support of God's faithful people, returns to his former Work of Commination against the rebellious Israelites. b Heb. it fell, i.e. it shall fall, in the Prophetical Stile. It shall certainly be accomplished. c The same with Jacob in the former clause, the Posterity of Jacob or Israel.

9. And all the people shall know d, even Ephraim e and the inhabitant of Samaria f, that say g in the pride, and stoutness of heart, d To wit, by experience: they shall know whether my Word be true or false; they shall feel the Effects of it. e The People of the Ten Tribes, and particularly Ephraim, the strongest and proudest of them all. f The strongest Place, and the Seat of the King and Court, who were most secure and presumptuous. g Within themselves, and one to another. They purpose and boast of it.

10. The bricks are fallen down, but we will build with hewn stones h: the Sycomores i are cut down, but we will change them into Cedars k.

h It is true, we have received some Damages from our Enemies; but, Rezin and the Syrians being now our Friends and Confederates, we doubt not we shall quickly repair them with great Glory and Advantage. i Wild Fig-trees, a contemptible sort of Trees, if compared with Cedars, 1 Kings 10. 27. k Putting Cedars into our Buildings in stead of Sycomores. See Jer. 22. 13, 15.

11. Therefore l the LORD shall set up m the adversaries of Rezin n against him o, and † joyn p his q enemies together.

† Heb. mingle.

l To chastise your Pride, and defeat your Hopes and Resolutions. m Heb. exalt, advance their Power, and give them Success against him. n The Assyrians, who, presently after this Prophecy, fought and prevailed against him, 2 Kings 16. 7. He mentions Rezin, partly because he was Confederate with Ephraim, and so his Enemies were their Enemies also; and partly because the Israelites trusted to his powerful Assistance. o Either, 1. against Rezin last mentioned; or rather, 2. against Ephraim or Israel, who may easily be understood either from the foregoing or following Verse: For against them this Prophecy is directed, and of them he speaks both in the next Clause of this Verse, and in the next Verse: and it seems reasonable, that him in this Clause, and his in the next Clause, should be understood of the same Persons. p Heb. mingle, i.e. unite them so that they shall agree together to fight against Israel, and shall invade him from several Quarters. q Not Rezin's, but Ephraim's, as appears from the next Verse, which is added to explain this Clause.

12. The Syrians r before s, and the Philistims behind t, and they shall devour Israel † with open mouth u: * for all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still x.

† Heb. with whole mouth.
* Chap. 5. 25. & 10. 4.

r For although Rezin King of Syria was destroyed, yet the Body of the Nation survived, and submitted themselves to the King of Assyria, and served under him in his Wars, and upon his Command invaded Israel afterwards. s Heb. on the east: for Syria stood Eastward from Israel. t On the Western side of the Land of Israel. u Like wild and furious Beasts, with great greediness and cruelty. x His Justice is not fully satisfied, but he will yet take further vengeance upon them.

13. ¶ For the people turneth not y unto him that smiteth them, neither do they seek the LORD of hosts z.

y From their wicked Courses unto God, by true Repentance. z They do not study and endeavour to procure his Favour, by sincere and fervent Supplication, and by removing the Causes of his just Displeasure.

14. Therefore the LORD will cut off from Israel, head and tail a, branch b and rush c in one day d.

a High and low, honourable and contemptible, as the next Verse explains it. b The goodly Branches of tall and strong Trees, the Mighty and Noble. c The Bulrush, the weakest and meanest Persons. d All together, one as well as another, without any distinction.

15. The ancient and honourable, he is e the head: and the prophet that teacheth lies f, he is the tail g.

e i.e. Signifies, as that Word is commonly used in the Hebrew Tongue, as Gen. 41. 26, 27. and every where. f Whose Destruction he mentions, not as if it were a Punishment to them to be deprived of such Persons, but partly to shew the Extent of the Calamity, that it should reach all sorts of persons; and partly to beat down their vain presumptions of peace and prosperity, by shewing that those false Prophets, which had fed their vain Hopes, should perish, and all their false prophecies of peace with them. g These I mean by the Tail, as being in truth the basest part of the whole body of the people.

16. * For ‖ the leaders h of this people cause them to err i, and ‖ they that are led of them, are † destroyed k.

* Chap. 3. 12.
‖ Or, they that call them blessed.
‖ Or, they that are called blessed of them.
† Heb. swallowed up.

h Their Governours both Civil and Ecclesiastical, and especially the latter, their Teachers, even the false prophets last mentioned. Or, they that bless or praise them, to wit, the false prophets, that flatter them in their wicked Ways, with hopes and promises of peace, as their manner was, Jer. 6. 14. & 28. 9. Both ways the sence is the same. i Either compelling them by power, or deceiving them by false Doctrines and evil counsels and perswasions. k Shall certainly perish; nor will it excuse them that they followed the counsel and conduct of their Leaders.

17. Therefore the LORD shall have no joy in their young men l, neither shall have mercy on their fatherless and widows m: for every one n is an Hypocrite o, and an evil doer p, and every mouth speaketh ‖ folly q: for all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

l Shall not rejoyce over them to do them good, as he doth to his people, Isa. 62. 5. Zeph. 3. 17. will not have mercy or pity on them, as the next clause explains it, but will abhor and utterly destroy them; for more is here intended than is expressed, as Prov. 17. 21. m Who are the special Objects of his care and pity, Deut. 16. 11, 14. & 24. 19, 20. and much less upon others. n Not precisely; for there were Seven thousand Elect persons among them, when they seemed to Elijah to be universally corrupt, 1 Kings 19. 18. but the Body or generality of the People. o For though they professed to worship and serve the true God, yet indeed they had forsaken him. Or, a prophane person, as this Word is rendred Jer. 23. 15. as also Isa. 32. 6. p Elsewhere called, a worker of iniquity, as Job 31. 3. Psal. 5. 5. Matt. 7. 23. one that gives up himself to a constant course and custom of sinning. q i.e. Wickedness, which is commonly called folly. They are not ashamed to proclaim their own Wickedness, and the corruption of their Hearts breaketh forth into ungodly Speeches.

18. ¶ For wickedness burneth r as the fire, * it shall devour the briers and thorns s, and shall kindle in the thickets of the forrest t, and they shall mount up like the lifting up of smoke u.

* Chap. 10. 17.

r i.e. Shall burn you, as it follows, shall devour. Your iniquity shall be your ruine, as God threatens, Ezek. 18. 30. s Either, 1. the Wicked, who are oft compared to briers and thorns, as 2 Sam. 23. 6. Isa. 27. 4. or rather, 2. the low and mean Persons; for these are opposed to the thickets of the forest, in the next Clause. t In the Wood, where the Trees are tall, and stand thick, having their Boughs entangled together, which makes them more ready both to catch and to spread the Fire. u Sending up Smoke like a vast Furnace. Heb. with heighth or pride of smoke, i.e. with aspiring Smoke, which in that case riseth high, and spreadeth far, and filleth all the neighbouring Air.

19. Through the wrath of the LORD of hosts is * the land darkned x, and the people shall be as the † fewel of the fire: no man shall spare his brother y.

* Chap. 8. 22.

x Either with the Smoke last mentioned, or with Misery. Or, burnt up, as the LXX. Chaldee and Arabick Interpreters render it. y They shall destroy one another, as they did in their Civil Wars, which were frequent among them. The name brother is oft largely used among the Hebrews, even of the remoter Kindred, yea, of the Fellow-members of one City, or Tribe, or Nation.

20. And he shall † snatch z on the right hand, and be hungry; and he shall eat on the left hand, and they shall not be satisfied: * they shall eat every man the flesh of his own arm a.

† Heb. cut.
* Chap. 49. 26.

z Every one shall greedily and violently seise upon any Provisions that come in his way. Which implies, either great Scarcity, or insatiable Covetousness, as is manifest from the next Clause. a Either, 1. properly; so it notes extreme Famine: in which case men are apt to eat their own Flesh. Compare Jer. 19. 9. Or, 2. metaphorically, which seems best to suit with the following Verse, the Flesh of his Brethren by Nation and Religion, which are as it were our own Flesh, and are so called Isa. 58. 7. Zech. 11. 9. and consequently, the Flesh of their Arm, is in a manner the Flesh of our own Arm. And one Tribe was to another as an Arm, i.e. a Support or Strength, which is called an arm, 2 Chron. 32. 8. Jer. 17. 5. and elsewhere.

21. * Manasseh, Ephraim b; and Ephraim, Manasseh: shall eat.

* Chap. 11. 13.

Manasseh: and they together shall be against Judah c. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

b Though more near and dear one to another, than any other Tribe, being both Sons of Joseph. c Which might be accomplished either before Shalmaneser took Samaria, or afterwards. For though the Israelites were miserably destroyed at that time, yet they were not utterly rooted out. Of which see my Notes on Isa. 7. 8.

CHAP. X.

* Psal. 58. 1. & 94. 20. ‖ Or, to the writers that write grievousness.

WO unto them that * decree unrighteous decrees a, and ‖ that write b grievousness c, which they have prescribed:

a Unto those Magistrates who make unjust Laws, and give unjust Sentences. b Either, 1. the Scribes, who were assistant to the Magistrates, and oft-times did promote or execute such Decrees: or, 2. the unjust Magistrates, whose Decrees were usually written. So the same thing is repeated in other words. Only this writing may note their obstinacy or perseverance in their unjust Decrees, and their proceeding to the Execution of them. c Grievous things, such unjust Decrees as cause grief and vexation to their Subjects.

2. To turn aside the needy from judgment d, and to take away the right from the poor e of my people f, that widows may be their prey, and that they may rob the fatherless.

d Or, from their right, as it is in the next clause: or, from obtaining a just Sentence, because they either denied or delayed to hear their Causes, or gave a wrong Sentence. e Whom I have in a special manner committed to your care. f Of Israelites, who profess themselves to be my People, and whom I did take into Covenant with my self; and therefore this is an injury not only to them, but to me also.

* Job 31. 14.

3. And * what will ye do g in the day of visitation h, and in the desolation which shall come from far i, to whom will ye flee for help k? and where will you leave l your glory m?

g To save your selves. h When I shall come to visit you in wrath, as the next words limit it, and as this Phrase is oft used; although sometimes it signifies a Visitation in mercy, as Luk. 19. 44. and elsewhere. i From the Assyrians. This he adds, because the Israelites, having weakned the Jews, and being in Amity with the Syrians their next Neighbours, were secure. k To the Syrians, as now you do? But they shall be destroyed together with you, as they were, 2 Kings 16. l To be kept safe for your use, and to be restored to you when you call for it. m Either, 1. your Power and Authority, which now you so wickedly abuse: or, 2. your Wealth, got by injustice, as glory is taken, Gen. 31. 1. Psal. 49. 16, 17, &c.

4. Without me they shall bow down n under o the prisoners, and they shall fall under the slain: * For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

* Chap. 5. 25. & 9. 12.

n The words thus translated seem to contain an Answer to the foregoing Questions: In vain do you seek for a refuge and help from others; for without me, without my favour and help, which you have forfeited, and do not seek to recover, and which I shall withdraw from you; or, because you are without me, or forsaken by me, you shall bow down, notwithstanding all your Succours. In the Hebrew here is a change of the Person and Number, which is very usual in Prophetical Writings. The LXX. and some others, join these words to the foregoing Verse, and translate them thus, that you may not bow down: So the sence of the place is, What will you do to prevent your Captivity or Slaughter? And it is true, that the first word is elsewhere taken for a Negative Particle: But the former Translation seems more genuine. o Or rather, in the place (as this Particle signifies, and is rendred by Interpreters, Gen. 30. 2. & 50. 19. Exod. 16. 29. Jos. 5. 8. and elsewhere) of the prisoners, or among the prisoners: And so in the next clause, among, or in the place of the slain.

‖ Or, Wo to the Assyrian. † Heb. Asshur. * Jer. 51. 20. ‖ Or, though.

5. ¶ ‖ O † Assyrian p, * the rod of mine anger q, ‖ and the staff in their hand is mine indignation r.

p So it is God's Call or Invitation to him to take the charge, and set upon the work. Or, Wo to the Assyrian, because though he do my work, yet he doth it in a wicked manner, and for wicked ends, as we shall see. q The Instrument of mine Anger, wherewith I shall chastise my People. r Mine Anger against my People puts the Weapons of War into their hand, and gives them strength and success in this Expedition.

6. I will send him s against an hypocritical t nation, and against the people of my wrath u will I give him a charge x to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and † to tread them down like the mire of the streets y.

† Heb. to lay them a treading.

s Not by express Commission, but by the secret yet powerful conduct of my Providence, giving him both occasion and inclination to this Expedition. t See on Ch. 9. 17. u The objects of my just Wrath, devoted to destruction. x By putting this instinct into his mind. y Which signifies that he should easily conquer them, and utterly destroy them, as he did after this time.

* Mic. 4. 12. † Heb. will not mean so, nor will his heart think so.

7. * Howbeit, he † meaneth not so z, neither doth his heart think so, but it is in his heart to destroy, and cut off nations not a few a.

z He doth not at all design the Execution of my Will, and the Glory of my Justice, in punishing mine Enemies; but only to enlarge his own Empire, and satisfie his own Lusts. Which is seasonably added, to justifie God in his Judgments threatned to the Assyrian, notwithstanding this Service. a To sacrifice multitudes of People to his own Ambition and Covetousness; which is abominable impiety.

* 2 Kings 18. 24, 33. & 19. 10, &c. † Heb. will say.

8. * For he † saith, Are not my princes altogether kings b?

b Equal for Power, and Wealth, and Glory, to the Kings of other Nations, though my Subjects and Servants. See the like Vaunts, 2 Kings 20. 10, &c.

9. Is not Calno, as Carchemish c? is not Hamath, as Arpad d? is not Samaria as Damascus e?

c Have not I conquered one place as well as another, the stronger as well as the weaker? Have I not from time to time added new Conquests to the old? Calno seems to be the same with Calneh, Gen. 10. 10. Amos 6. 2. a great and strong City. Carchemish was a City upon Euphrates, of which 2 Chron. 35. 20. Jer. 46. 2. d Hamath was an eminent City of Syria, not far from Euphrates, called Hemath or Hamath the Great, Amos 6. 2. of which see 2 Kings 14. 28. & 17. 24. Jer. 49. 23, 27. Arpad seems to have been an obscure place, not being elsewhere named. Is not that as soon conquered as this? e Or, Shall not Samaria be as Damascus? Shall I not take that, as I have done this City? For although Damascus possibly was not yet taken by the Assyrian, yet the Prophet speaks of it as actually taken, because these words are prophetically delivered, and supposed to be uttered by the King of Assyria, at or about the Siege of Samaria, when Damascus was taken.

10. As my hand hath found f the kingdoms of the idols g, and whose graven images did excel them h of Jerusalem, and of Samaria:

f (Ile.) Hath taken, as this word is used Prov. 1. 13. and oft elsewhere, the Antecedent being put for the Consequent, because what men find they commonly take to themselves. g Which worshipped their own proper Idols, and vainly imagined that they could protect them from my Power. He calls the Gods of the several Nations, not excepting Jerusalem, Idols, by way of contempt, because none of them could deliver their people out of his hands, as he brags Isa. 37. 11, 12. and because he judged them to be but Petty-Gods, far inferiour to the Sun, which was the great God of the Assyrians. h To wit, in reputation and strength. Which Blasphemy of his proceeded from his deep ignorance of the True God.

11. Shall I not, as I have done unto Samaria and her idols, so do to Jerusalem and her idols i?

i I shall certainly do it, and neither God nor man can hinder me.

* 2 Kin. 19. 31. † Heb. visit upon. † Heb. of the greatness of the heart.

12. Wherefore k it shall come to pass, that when the LORD hath performed his whole work l, * upon mount Zion, and on Jerusalem, I will † punish m the fruit † of the stout heart of the king of Assyria, and the glory of his high looks n.

k Because of this impudent Blasphemy. l Of chastising his people so long and so much as he sees fit and necessary for them. m Heb. visit, to wit, in wrath, as before on v. 3. n His insolent words and carriages, proceeding from intolerable pride of heart.

‖ Or, like many people.

13. For he saith a, By the strength of my hand I have done it, and by my wisdom p; for I am prudent: and I have removed the bounds q of the people, and have robbed their treasures r, and I have put down s the inhabitants ‖ like a valiant man.

o Not only within himself, but before his Courtiers and others. p I owe all my Successes to my own Power, and Valour, and wise Conduct, and to no other God or man. q I have invaded their Lands, and added them to my own Dominions, as this Phrase is used Prov. 22. 28. Hos. 5. 10. r Heb. their prepared things, their Gold, and Silver, and other precious things, which they had long been preparing and laying in store. s Deprived of their former Glory and Power.

14. And

14. And my hand hath found as a neſt t the riches of the people: and as one gathereth eggs that are left u, have I gathered all the earth x, and there was none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth or peeped y.

t As one findeth young Birds in a Neſt, the neſt being put for the Birds in it, as Deut. 32. 11. No leſs eaſily do I both find and take them. u Which the Dam hath left in her Neſt. This is more eaſie than the former; for the young Birds might poſſibly make ſome faint reſiſtance, or flutter away; but the Eggs could do neither. x All the Riches of the Earth or World. An Hyperbole not unuſual in the mouths of ſuch perſons, upon ſuch occaſions. y As Birds do, which, when they ſee and cannot hinder the robbing of their Neſts, expreſs their grief and anger, by hovering about them, and by mournful cries.

15. Shall the ax boaſt it ſelf againſt him that heweth therewith z? or ſhall the ſaw magnifie it ſelf againſt him that ſhaketh it? || as if the rod ſhould ſhake it ſelf againſt them that lift it up a, or as if the ſtaff ſhould lift up || it ſelf, as if it were no wood b.

|| Or, as if a rod ſhould ſhake them that liſt it up.

|| Or, that which is not wood.

z How abſurd and unreaſonable a thing is it, for thee, who art but an inſtrument in God's hand, and canſt do nothing without his leave and help, to blaſpheme thy Lord and Maſter, who hath as great a power over thee, to manage thee as he pleaſeth, as a man hath over the Ax wherewith he heweth? a Or, as it is rendred in the Margin, and by other Interpreters, as if a rod ſhould ſhake (i.e. ſhall pretend to ſhake, or, ſhould boaſt that it would or could ſhake; which may eaſily be underſtood out of the foregoing words) them that lift it up. b As if a ſtaff ſhould forget that it was wood, and ſhould pretend or attempt to lift up it ſelf either without or againſt the man that moveth it. Which is abſurd in the very ſuppoſition of it, and were much more unreaſonable in the practice. Nor are thy Boaſts leſs ridiculous.

16. Therefore ſhall the Lord, the Lord of hoſts c, ſend among his † fat ones leanneſs d, and under his glory he ſhall kindle a burning like the burning of a fire e.

Which was fulfilled 2 Kings 19. 25.

17. And the light of Iſrael f ſhall be for a fire g, and his holy One for a flame: and it ſhall burn and devour his thorns and briers h in one day:

f That God who is and will be a comfortable Light to his People. g To the Aſſyrians, who ſhall have heat without light, as it is in Hell. h His vaſt Army, which is no more able to reſiſt God, than dry Thorns and Briers are to oppoſe the fire which is kindled among them.

18. And ſhall conſume the glory of his foreſt i, and of his fruitful field k, † both ſoul and body l: and they ſhall be m as when a ſtandard-bearer fainteth n.

† Heb. from the ſoul, and even to the fleſh. Job 14. 22.

Heb. of his Carmel. Wherein it is not improbably conjectured by our late moſt Learned Mr. Gataker, that there is an alluſion to that Brag of the Aſſyrian, who threatens that he would go up to the ſides of (Iſrael's) Lebanon, and to the foreſt of his Carmel, and there cut down the tall cedars thereof. Which though it was not uttered by the Aſſyrian till ſome years after this time, yet was exactly foreknown to God, who underſtandeth mens thoughts, and much more their words, afar off, Pſal. 139. 2, 3, 4. and therefore might direct the Prophet to uſe the ſame words, and to turn them againſt himſelf. Whereas thou threatneſt to deſtroy Iſrael's Carmel, I will deſtroy thy Carmel. l (i.e.) Totally, both inwardly and outwardly, both ſtrength and life. Heb. from the ſoul even to the fleſh. Which may poſſibly ſignifie the manner of their death, which ſhould be by a ſudden ſtroke of the deſtroying Angel upon their inward and vital parts, which was ſpeedily followed by the conſumption of their fleſh. See Iſa. 37. 35, 36. m The State of that King, and of his great and valiant Army, ſhall be. n Like that of an Army when their Standard-bearer either is ſlain, or rather flees away, which ſtrikes a panick terrour into the whole Army, and puts them to flight.

20. ¶ And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, that the remnant of Iſrael, and ſuch as are eſcaped of the houſe of Jacob q, ſhall no more again ſtay upon him that ſmote them r: but ſhall ſtay upon the LORD, the holy One of Iſrael in truth s.

q Such Jews as ſhall be preſerved from that ſweeping Aſſyrian Scourge, by which great numbers both of Iſrael and Judah were deſtroyed, and from their ſucceeding calamities. For that this place looks beyond the deliverance from the Aſſyrian Army, and unto the Times of the New Teſtament, ſeems probable, 1. from the following Verſes, which belong to that Time, as ſhe ſhall ſee: 2. from the State of the Jewiſh Nation, which, after that deliverance, continued to be very ſad and corrupt, and averſe from that Reformation which Hezekiah and Joſiah proſecuted with all their might; and therefore the Body of that People had not yet learned this Leſſon of ſincere Truſting in God alone: 3. from S. Paul's Explication and Application of theſe words, Rom. 9. 27. of which more may be ſaid when I come thither. And for the words in that day, which may ſeem to reſtrain this to the time of the Aſſyrian Invaſion, they are frequently uſed in the Prophets of the Times of the Goſpel, as Iſa. 2. 11. & 4. 2. & 11. 10, &c. r Shall learn by this Judgment, and Experience, never to truſt to the Aſſyrians for help, as Ahaz and his People now did. s Not only by profeſſion, but ſincerely.

21. * The remnant t ſhall return, even the remnant of Jacob, unto the mighty God u.

* Chap. 7. 3.

t Or, a remnant; or, But a remnant; or, a remnant only. Which Particles are oft underſtood, as hath been formerly and frequently obſerved, and may be here ſupplied from the following Verſes. u Unto the Meſſiah, expreſly called the mighty God, Iſa. 9. 6.

22. * For though thy people Iſrael x be as the ſand of the ſea, yet a remnant y † of them ſhall return: * the conſumption decreed ſhall overflow z || with righteouſneſs a.

* Rom. 9. 27. † Heb. in, or amongſt. * Chap. 28. 22. || Or, in.

x Or, O Iſrael: to whom by an Apoſtrophe he directeth his ſpeech. y Or, a remnant only, as before: For that this is a Threatning in reſpect of ſome, as well as a Promiſe in reſpect of others, is evident from the reſt of this, and from the following Verſe. z The deſtruction of the People of Iſrael was already decreed or determined (as it is in the next Verſe) by the fixed Counſel of God, and therefore muſt needs be executed, and like a Deluge overflow them. a As this word is rendred Rom. 9. 28. the Preposition in or with being here underſtood, as it is every where. And this is added, to ſhew, that although this Judgment of God may ſeem very ſevere, yet it is moſt juſt, not only by the Laws of ſtrict and rigid Juſtice, but even by the Rules of Equity and Clemency, as this word oft ſignifies, inaſmuch as he hath ſpared a conſiderable remnant of them, when he might have deſtroyed them utterly. And ſo this word is added as a reaſon why a remnant, and why but a remnant, ſhould return; becauſe God would both glorifie his Juſtice, and manifeſt his Mercy. And in this mixed ſence the Apoſtle ſeems to expound this place, Rom. 9. 27, 28.

23. ¶ For the Lord GOD of hoſts ſhall make a conſumption, even determined b in the midſt of all the land c.

b The ſame thing is repeated in other words, with ſome addition: God will execute his own Decree concerning the deſtruction of Iſrael, which he is well able to do, becauſe he is the Lord of Hoſts. c In all the parts of the Land, not excepting Jeruſalem, which was to be preſerved in the Aſſyrian Invaſion, when almoſt all the other fenced Cities of Judah ſhould be taken; but ſhould afterwards be taken and deſtroyed, as it was, firſt by the Babylonians, and then by the Romans.

24. Therefore d thus ſaith the Lord GOD of hoſts, O my people that dwelleſt in Zion e, be not afraid of the Aſſyrian: he ſhall ſmite thee with a rod f, || and ſhall lift up his ſtaff againſt thee, after the manner of * Egypt g.

|| Or, but he ſhall lift up his ſtaff for thee. * Exod. 14.

d This is an inference, not from the words immediately foregoing, but from the whole Prophecy. Seeing the Aſſyrian ſhall be deſtroyed, and a remnant of my people preſerved and reſtored. e In Jeruſalem, which is frequently called Sion, as Pſal. 48. 12. & 87. 2. Iſa. 1. 8, 27. & 33. 20, &c. Which he mentions, becauſe this was the principal object of the Aſſyrians deſign and rage, and there were the Temple, and Thrones of Juſtice, and the King and his Princes; and multitudes had fled thither from the Aſſyrian. f He ſhall afflict thee, but not deſtroy thee. Compare 1 Kings 12. 11. g As the Egyptians formerly did, and with the ſame ill ſucceſs to themſelves, and comfortable iſſue to you.

25. For yet a very little while, and the indignation h shall cease i, and mine anger in their destruction.

h Mine anger, as it is explained in the next clause; either, 1. towards my People; which shall weaken the Assyrian, whose great strength lay there: of which see above, v. 5. or, 2. towards the Assyrian, with whom God was very angry, v. 12, &c. yea, so angry, as not to be satisfied without their destruction, as it follows. i As anger commonly doth, when vengeance is fully executed.

26. And the LORD of hosts shall stir up a scourge k for him, according to the slaughter of * Midian l at the rock of Oreb m: and as his rod was upon the sea n, so shall he lift it up after the manner of Egypt o.

* Judg. 7. 25. Chap. 9. 4.

k Shall send a destroying Angel, Isa. 37. 36. l Whom God slew suddenly, and unexpectedly, and in the night, as he did the Assyrians. m Upon which one of their Chief Princes was slain, and nigh unto which the Midianites were destroyed. n To smite and divide it, and so to make way both for thy deliverance, and for the destruction of the Egyptians. o As he did in Egypt, to bring his Plagues upon that Land and People.

27. And it shall come to pass in that day, that * his burden p † shall be taken away from off thy shoulder, and his yoke from off thy neck, and the yoke shall be destroyed because of the anointing q.

* Chap. 14. 25. † Heb. shall remove.

p The burden of the Assyrian; for so it was actively, because imposed by him; though passively it was Israel's burden, as being laid upon him. q Out of the respect which I bear to that Holy Unction, which I have established amongst you. And so this may relate either, 1. to the Body of the People, who were in some sort anointed, being made by God a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation, Exod. 19. 6. or, 2. to that Sacred Kingdom which God had, by his positive Precept, and solemn Covenant, established in David and his Posterity for ever. The Jews therefore, and some others, understand this of Hezekiah, to whom God had a singular respect, and upon whose Prayers God gave this deliverance, as we read Isa. 37. 15, &c. Possibly it might be better understood of David, who is oft mentioned in Scripture by the name of God's anointed, as Psal. 20. 6. & 89. 20. & 132. 17. and elsewhere; and for whose sake God gave many deliverances to the succeeding Kings and Ages, as is expressly affirmed 1 Kings 11. 32, 34. 2 Kings 8. 19. And, which is more considerable, God declareth, that he would give this very deliverance from the Assyrian for David's sake, 2 Kings 19. 34. & 20. 6. But the Messiah, I doubt not, is here principally intended, of whom David was but a Type; and who was in a peculiar manner anointed above all his fellows, as is said Psal. 45. 7. For he is the Foundation of all the Promises, 2 Cor. 1. 20. and of all the Deliverances and Mercies granted to God's People in all Ages; whence this very Prophet makes use of this great Promise of the Messiah, as an assurance that God would make good his Promises of particular deliverances from their present or approaching calamities, as Isa. 7. 14, &c. and 9. 4, &c. And therefore the Prophet might well say, that God would grant this deliverance for Christ's sake: Especially if it be considered, that this was the very reason why God had promised, and did so constantly perform his Mercy promised unto the Tribe of Judah, and unto the House of David, until the coming of the Messiah, because the Messiah was to come of the Tribe of Judah, and of the Posterity of David, and was to succeed David in his Throne and Kingdom; and he was to be known by this Character: and therefore this Tribe and House and Kingdom were to continue, and that in a visible manner, till Christ came.

28. He is come to Ajath r, he is passed to Migron: at Michmash he hath laid up his carriages s.

r Here the Prophet returns to his former Discourse concerning the Assyrian Invasion into Judah; which he describes, after the manner of the Prophets, as a thing present, and sets down the several Stages by which he marched towards Jerusalem. The places here named are most of them Towns of Benjamin, and some of Judah, as appears from other Scriptures; of which it is needless to say more in this place. He, to wit, Sennacherib King of Assyria, is come in his way to Jerusalem. s Leaving such things there as were less necessary, that so he might march with more expedition. Heb. he visited his vessels or instruments: which may be meant of his taking a Survey of his Army and Artillery, to see that all things were ready for his Enterprise.

29. They are gone over the passage t: they have taken up their lodging at Geba, Ramah is afraid, Gibeah of Saul is fled u.

t Some considerable passage then well known; possibly that 1 Sam. 14. 5. u The people fled to Jerusalem for fear of the Assyrians.

30. † Lift up thy voice, O daughter of Gallim x: cause it to be heard unto Laish, O poor Anathoth.

x Jerusalem was the Mother-City, and lesser Towns are commonly called her daughters, as hath been oft noted.

31. Madmenah is removed, the inhabitants of Gebim gather themselves to flee.

32. As yet shall he remain at Nob that day; he shall shake his hand y against the mount of the daughter of Zion, the hill of Jerusalem.

y By way of Commination. But withal he intimates, that he should be able to do no more against it, and that there his proud waves should be stayed, as it is declared in the following Verses, and in the History.

33. Behold the Lord, the LORD of hosts shall lop the bough z with terrour a: and the high ones of stature shall be hewn down, and the haughty shall be humbled.

z The top-bough, Sennacherib; or, the boughs, his valiant Souldiers or Commanders of his Army, which he compareth to a Forest, v. 18. & 24. a With a most terrible and amazing stroke by an Angel.

34. And he shall cut down the thickets of the forest with iron b, and Lebanon c shall fall || by a mighty one d.

b Or, as with iron; as the Trees of the Forest are cut down by instruments of Iron. c Or, his Lebanon, the Pronoun being oft understood in the Hebrew Text: the Assyrian Army, which being before compared to a Forest of Wood, and being called his Carmel in the Hebrew Text, v. 18. may very fitly, upon the same ground, be called his Lebanon here; especially considering that the King of Assyria is called a cedar of Lebanon, Ezek. 31. 3. d By a mighty Angel, Isa. 37. 36.

CHAP. XI.

AND * there shall come forth a a rod b out of the stem c of * Jesse d, and * a branch shall grow e out of his roots f.

* Zech. 6. 12. Revel. 5. 5. * Acts 13. 23. * Chap. 4. 2. Jer. 23. 5.

a The Prophet having dispatched the Assyrian, and comforted God's People with the promise of their deliverance from that formidable Enemy, now he proceeds further, and declares, That God will do greater things than that for them, that he will give them their long-expected and much-desired Messiah, and by him will work Wonders of Mercy for them. For this is the manner of the Prophets, to take the occasion of particular deliverances, to fix the People's minds upon their great and everlasting deliverance from all their enemies by the Messiah. And having said that the Assyrian yoke should be destroyed because of the anointing, Ch. 10. 27. he now more particularly explains who that anointed Person was. b Or, twig, called a branch in the next clause. Parents are oft compared to Roots or Trees, and their Children to Branches. He speaks of the most eminent Branch, of that famous Son of a Virgin, Isa. 7. 14. of that Wonderful Child, Isa. 9. 6. not of Hezekiah, as some of the Jews and Judaizing Christians conceit; but of the Messiah, as will evidently appear from the following description. c Or, trunk; or rather stump: for the word properly signifies a Trunk cut off from the Root: Or, root, as the LXX. here render the word, and as it is explained in the next clause. By which he clearly implies, That the Messiah should be born of the Royal House of David, at that time when it was in a most forlorn and contemptible condition, like a Tree cut down, and whereof nothing is left but a Stump or Root under ground. Which really was the state of David's Family when Christ was born, as is notoriously known; but was in a far better condition when Hezekiah was born. d He doth not say of David, but of Jesse, who was a private and mean Person, 1 Sam. 18. 18, 23. & 20. 30. to intimate, That at the time of Christ's Birth the Royal Family should be reduced to its primitive obscurity. e He speaks of one not yet born, and therefore not of Hezekiah, who was born divers years before his Father Ahaz (in whose time this Prophecy was delivered) was King, by comparing 2 Kings 16. 2. & 18. 2. but of the Messiah. f Out of one of his Roots, i. e. Branches, as this word root is sometimes used, by a very usual Figure called a Metonymy, as it is here below, v. 10. Isa. 53. 2. Hos. 14. 5.

2. And the ſpirit of the LORD g ſhall reſt upon him h, the ſpirit of wiſdom and underſtanding i, the ſpirit of counſel and might k, the ſpirit of knowledge l, and of the fear of the LORD m:

g The Holy Ghoſt, wherewith he was anointed, Acts 10. 38. and by whom his Mother was overſhadowed, Luk. 1. 35. h Not only come upon him at certain times, as he did upon the Prophets now and then at his pleaſure, but ſhall have its conſtant and ſetled abode in him; although the ſame Phraſe be ſometimes uſed of other Prophets in an inferiour ſenſe, as Numb. 11. 17. 2 Kings 2. 15. i Which hath theſe Perfections in it ſelf, and confers them upon him. It is neither eaſie, nor at all neceſſary, exactly to diſtinguiſh theſe two Gifts; it is ſufficient that they are neceſſary Qualifications for a Governour, and for a Teacher, both which Offices were to meet in the Meſſiah; and it is evident that they ſignifie a practical and perfect Knowledge of all things neceſſary for the diſcharge of his Truſt, and for his own and Peoples Good, and a ſound Judgment, to diſtinguiſh between things that differ. k Of Prudence, to give good counſel; and of Might and Courage, to execute it; which are two neceſſary Qualifications of a Ruler. l Of the perfect knowledge of the whole Will and Counſel of God, eſpecially that which concerns the Salvation of men, the proſecution whereof was his great Work, as alſo of all ſecret and hidden things, yea of the hearts of men, the knowledge whereof is aſcribed to Chriſt, Mat. 9. 4. Revel. 2. 23. m Not a fear of diffidence or horrour, but of reverence, a care to pleaſe him, and lothneſs to offend him; which well became the Meſſiah towards his God and Father.

† Heb. ſcent, or, ſmell.

3. And ſhall make him of † quick underſtanding n in the fear of the LORD o, and he ſhall not judge p after the ſight of his eyes q, neither reprove r after the hearing of his ears s.

n Heb. he ſhall make him ſmell, i. e. perceive, as that word is uſed Judg. 16. 9. Job 39. 25. underſtand or judge, as it is explained in the next clauſe. Or, his ſmelling ſhall be. Smelling is put for Judging, becauſe the ſenſe of Smelling, where it is quick and good, is more exact and ſure in the judging of its proper objects, than the ſenſes of Seeing and Hearing are. o Which is added, either, 1. as the object of his Judging: He is moſt perſpicacious and judicious in the things which concern the fear, i. e. the Worſhip and Service of God, which he was to order and eſtabliſh in his Church: Or rather, 2. as the Rule and Manner of his Judging, as may be gathered from the oppoſite and following clauſe. So the ſence is, He ſhall not judge raſhly and partially, but conſiderately and juſtly, as the Fear of God obligeth all Judges to do. p Of Perſons or Cauſes. And judging ſeems to be here Synecdochically put for abſolving or giving Sentence for a perſon, as it is uſed Pſal. 7. 9, 11. and in many other places, becauſe this is oppoſed to reproving in the next clauſe. q According to outward appearance, as men muſt do, becauſe they cannot ſearch mens hearts, 1 Sam. 16. 7. or with reſpect of perſons, but with righteous judgment, which is oppoſed to judging by appearance, Joh. 7. 24. r (i. e.) Condemn or paſs Sentence againſt a perſon: For Chriſt is here ſuppoſed to be a Judge, and ſo he ſpeaks of a Judicial Reproof. s By falſe or uncertain rumours or ſuggeſtions, but ſhall throughly examine all Cauſes, and ſearch out the Truth of things, and the very hearts of men.

4. * But with righteouſneſs ſhall he judge the poor t, and ‖ reprove u with equity for the meek x of the earth: and he ſhall * ſmite y the earth z with the rod ‖ of his mouth a, and with the breath of his lips b ſhall he ſlay the wicked c.

t Defend and deliver them, as judging is oft uſed, as Deut. 32. 36. Jer. 5. 28. & 22. 13. &c. Or, judge for the poor, the Prefix, lamed, being underſtood out of the next clauſe, as is uſual in the Hebrew Language. He mentions the poor, partly to ſignifie the Juſtice of this Judge, becauſe Humane Judges commonly neglect and oppreſs the Poor; and partly to declare the Nature of Chriſt's Kingdom, and the Quality of his Subjects, who ſhould, for the generality of them, be the poor and contemptible ſort of men, Mat. 11. 5. Jam. 2. 5. u Or, as this word ſeems to be taken v. 3. condemn, to wit, their malicious and furious Enemies. x On their behalf, or giving Sentence for them. He calls them meek whom before he called poor, partly to ſhew his Juſtice in defending them who are moſt expoſed to the contempt and injuries of men, and partly to ſignifie that his Subjects ſhould be poor in Spirit as well as in the World, and not poor and proud, as many worldly men are. (i. e.) Slay, as this word is uſed Iſa. 37. 36. and very commonly, as it is expounded in the next clauſe. z The men of the Earth, the wicked, as it is in the next branch of the Verſe: fitly called earth, either becauſe of their earthly minds and converſations, as they are called the men of this world, that have their portion here upon the Earth, Pſal. 17. 14. or becauſe the far greateſt part of the Inhabitants of the Earth is wicked, the whole world lies in wickedneſs, 1 Joh. 5. 19. for which reaſon they are oft called the world, as Joh. 16. 20. & 17. 9, 25, &c. a With his word, which is his Scepter, and the rod of his power, Pſal. 110. 2. which is ſharper than a ſword, Heb. 4. 12. by the preaching whereof he ſubdued the World to himſelf, and will deſtroy his Enemies, 2 Theſſ. 2. 8. This he adds, further to declare the Nature of Chriſt's Kingdom, that it is not of this World, and that his Scepter and Arms are not carnal but ſpiritual, as is ſaid 2 Cor. 10. 4. b With his Word breathed out of his Lips; whereby he explains what he meant by the foregoing rod. c Either ſpiritually, by inflicting deadly Plagues upon their Souls; or properly, which he doth very frequently by his terrible Judgments executed upon many of them, and will certainly do, and that fully and univerſally, at his coming to Judgment.

5. And righteouſneſs ſhall be the girdle of his loins d, and faithfulneſs the girdle of his reins e.

d It ſhall adorn him, and be the Glory of his Government, as a Girdle was uſed for Ornament, Iſa. 3. 24. and as an Enſign of Power, Job 12. 18. and it ſhall conſtantly cleave to him, in all his Adminiſtrations, as a girdle cleaveth to a mans loins, which is the Prophet's Similitude, Jer. 13. 11. e The ſame thing in other words.

* Chap. 65. 25. Ezek. 34. 25. Hoſ. 2. 18.

6. * The wolf alſo ſhall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard ſhall lie down with the kid f: and the calf and the young lion, and the fatling together, and a little child ſhall lead them g.

f The Creatures ſhall be reſtored to that ſtate of Innocency in which they were before the Fall of Man. But this is not to be underſtood literally, which is a groſs and vain conceit of ſome Jews; but ſpiritually and metaphorically, as is evident. And the ſence of the Metaphor is this; Men of fierce, and cruel, and ungovernable diſpoſitions, ſhall be ſo transformed by the Preaching of the Goſpel, and by the Grace of Chriſt, that they ſhall become moſt humble, and gentle, and tractable, and ſhall no more vex and perſecute thoſe meek and poor ones mentioned v. 4. but ſhall become ſuch as they: of which we have inſtances in Saul being made a Paul, and in the rugged Jaylor, Acts 16. and in innumerable others. But how can this be applied to Hezekiah with any colour? g They will ſubmit their proud and rebellious Wills to the conduct and command of the meaneſt perſons that ſpeak to them in Chriſt's Name.

7. And the cow and the bear ſhall feed h, their young ones ſhall lie down together: and the lion ſhall eat ſtraw i like the ox.

h Together, as it follows, without any danger or Fear. i The Graſs and Fruits of the Earth, as they did at firſt, Gen. 1. 29, 30. and ſhall not devour other living Creatures, as now they do.

8. And the ſucking child ſhall play on the hole of the aſp k, and the weaned child ſhall put his hand on the ‖ cockatrice l den.

‖ Or, adders.

k A moſt fierce and poiſonous Serpent, Deut. 32. 33. Job 20. 14, 16. which alſo will not be charmed by any Art of Man, Pſal. 58. 5. l A Serpent of more than ordinary cunning and cruelty, Prov. 23. 32. The meaning is, They ſhall not fear to be either deceived or deſtroyed by thoſe who formerly watched all opportunities to do it.

9. * They ſhall not hurt nor deſtroy in all my holy mountain m: * for the earth n ſhall be full of the knowledge of the LORD o, as the waters cover the ſea p.

m In Zion, in my Church. Where-ever the Goſpel comes and prevails, it will have this effect. n Metonymically put for the Inhabitants of the Earth; and as before it was uſed for the greater part, v. 4. ſo here it is uſed for the better part of the World. o Of ſaving and practical Knowledge. Whereby he intimates, That all the ſavageneſs and malignity which is in wicked men towards true Chriſtians, proceeded from their deep ignorance, and particularly from ignorance of God; and withal, that a right Knowledge of God will make a marvellous and thorow Change in the Diſpoſitions and Converſations of men. p The Chanel of the Sea, the thing contained being put for 10 ¶ And in that day there shall be a root q of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign r of the people s: to it shall the * Gentiles seek t, and his rest u shall be † glorious x.

* Rom. 15. 10, 12.

q A Branch growing upon the Root: of which see on v. 1. r Shall grow up into a great and high Tree, shall become a visible and eminent Ensign. s Which not only the Jews, but all Nations, may discern, and to which they may, and shall resort. t As the Gospel shall be preached to the Gentiles, so they shall receive it, and believe in the Messiah. u His Resting-place, as this word frequently signifies, as Gen. 8. 9. & 49. 5. Psal. 132. 8, 14. Isa. 34. 14. Mic. 2. 10. his Temple or Church, the place of his Presence and Abode. x Shall be filled with greater Glory than the Jewish Tabernacle and Temple were; of which see on Hag. 2. 9. only this Glory shall be spiritual, consisting in glorious Ordinances, in the plentiful Effusions of the excellent Gifts, and Graces, and Comforts of the Holy Spirit.

11. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time y, to recover the remnant of his people which shall be left, * from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea z.

* Zech. 10. 10, 11.

y The first time, to which this word second relates, seems to be either, 1. the Deliverance out of Egypt, as most both Jewish and Christian Interpreters understand it: And then this second Deliverance must be that out of Babylon: Or, 2. the Deliverance out of Babylon: And then this second Deliverance must be in the days of the Messiah. Which, with submission to better Judgments, seems to me more probable; 1. because that first Deliverance is supposed to be, like the second, a Deliverance of the Remnant of this People from several Countries, into which they were dispersed: whereas that out of Egypt was a Deliverance not of a Remnant, but of the whole Nation, and that out of Egypt only: 2. because this second Deliverance was universal, extending to the generality of the Out-casts and Dispersed ones, both of Israel or the Ten Tribes, and of Judah or the Two Tribes, as is evident from v. 12, 13. whereas that out of Babylon reached only to the Two Tribes, and to some few of the Ten Tribes which were mixed with them, as is acknowledged both by Jews and Christians: 3. because this second Deliverance was given them in the days of the Messiah, and did accompany or follow the Conversion of the Gentiles, as is evident from v. 9, 10. whereas that out of Babylon was long before the coming of the Messiah, and the calling of the Gentiles. z From all places both far and near, into which either the Ten Tribes or the Two Tribes were carried Captives; for the places of both their Captivities are here named. Of which it is needless to discourse particularly, because they are well known, and have been considered in former Texts. Only Pathros was not named before; and that was a Province in Egypt, which yet is sometimes distinguished from Egypt strictly so called. See on Jer. 44. 1, 15. Ezek. 29. 14. & 30. 14.

12. And he shall set up an ensign for the nations a, and shall assemble the outcasts b of Israel c, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four † corners of the earth.

a All Nations, Jews and Gentiles, who shall then embrace the true Faith and the Messiah, as was said v. 10. b That were driven and banished out of their own Land, into Foreign parts, as the word implies. c Strictly so called, or of the Ten Tribes, as is manifest both from their opposition to Judah in this Verse, and from the mention of Ephraim in the next Verse.

13. * The envy also of Ephraim d shall depart e, and the adversaries of Judah f shall be cut off: * Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim g.

* Jer. 3. 18. Ezek. 37. 16, 22. Hos. 1. 11. * Chap. 9. 21.

d (i.e.) Of the Ten Tribes, frequently called by the name of Ephraim, as hath been already and frequently observed, between whom and Judah there were great Emulations and Contentions. e Of Enemies they shall be made Friends, and of Wolves, Lambs; as was said before on v. 6. they shall be united together in one Church, under the Messiah, keeping the Unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. f Not the Body of Ephraim, for they are supposed to be reconciled, and they shall not be cut off, but live in love with Judah, as we see by the next clause; but those few of them which possibly may continue in their Enmity against them, together with all the rest of their Adversaries. g Not only all outward Hostilities shall cease, but also their inward Animosities.

14. But they shall flie upon the shoulders h of the Philistims toward the West, they shall spoil † them i of the East together: † they shall lay their hand upon Edom and Moab, † and the children of Ammon shall obey them.

† Heb. the children of the East.
† Heb. Edom and Moab shall be the laying on of their hand.
† Heb. the children of Ammon their obedience.

h Either it is a Metaphor from Birds and Beasts of prey, which commonly fasten upon the shoulders of Cattel; or from Wrestlers, who endeavour to catch hold of their Adversaries shoulders, that they may throw them down. Or, shoulder is put for a side, as Numb. 34. 11. Jos. 15. 8, 10. or, for a part or quarter of a Country, as Deut. 33. 12. i They shall subdue them. Which is to be understood of the spiritual Victory which the Jewish Messiah shall obtain by his Apostles and Ministers over all Nations, in bringing them to the obedience of his Gospel. For it is the manner of the Prophets to speak of the spiritual things of the Gospel under such corporeal Representations.

15. And the LORD shall utterly destroy k the tongue of the Egyptian sea l, and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand m over the river n, and shall smite it in the seven streams o, and make men go over † dry-shod.

† Heb. in shoes.

k Shall not only divide it, as of old, but will quite dry it up, that it may be an High-way, as it is explained in the next Verse. l The Red Sea, which may well be called the Egyptian Sea, both because it borders upon Egypt, and because the Egyptians were drowned in it, which is called a tongue in the Hebrew Text, Jos. 15. 2, 5. as having some resemblance with a Tongue: for which reason the name of tongue hath been given by Geographers to Promontories of Land which shoot forth into the Sea, as this Sea did shoot out of the Main Ocean into the Land. m He alludes to Moses his shaking of his hand with the Rod of God in it over the Sea. n To wit, of Egypt, Nilus, as appears both from the foregoing and from the following words. o For which Nilus is famous in all Authors, and by which it emptieth it self into the Sea.

16. And * there shall be an high-way for the remnant of his people, which shall be left from Assyria p, * like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.

* Chap. 19. 23.
* Exod. 14. 26, 29.

p As there was another High-way from Egypt, in the former Verse. So the sence is, That all impediments shall be removed, and a way made for the Return of God's Israel from all parts of the World. He mentions Assyria, because thither the Ten Tribes were carried, 2 Kings 17. 23. whose case seemed to be most desperate.

CHAP. XII.

AND in that day a thou shalt say, O LORD, I will praise thee: though thou wast angry with me, thine anger is turned away, and thou comfortest me.

a When this great Work of the Reduction of God's Israel, and of the Conversion of the Gentiles, promised in the foregoing Chapter, shall be fulfilled.

2. Behold, God is my salvation b: I will trust and not be afraid; for the LORD JEHOVAH is my * strength and my song, he also is become my salvation.

* Exod. 15. 2. Psal. 118. 14.

b My Salvation hath not been brought to pass by man, but by the Almighty Power of God.

3. Therefore with joy shall ye draw * water out of the wells of salvation c.

* Joh. 4. 14. & 7. 37, 38.

c Your thirsty and fainting Souls shall be filled with Divine Graces and Comforts, which you may plentifully draw from God, in the use of Gospel-Ordinances, which was oft signified by water, both in the Old and in the New Testament. He seems to allude to the State of Israel in the Wilderness, where when they had been tormented with Thirst, they were greatly refreshed and delighted with those Waters which God so graciously and wonderfully afforded forded them in that day and barren Land, Numb. 20. 11. & 21. 16, 17, 18.

16. Their children also shall be * dashed to pieces before their eyes k, their houses shall be spoiled, and their wives ravished.

k As a just Recompence for the like Cruelty acted by them upon the Jews, 2 Chron. 36. 17. which also was foretold Psal. 137. 9.

* Jer. 51. 11.

17. Behold, * I will stir up the Medes l against them, which shall not regard silver, and as for gold, they shall not delight in it m.

l Under whom he comprehends the Persians, who were their Neighbours, and Confederates in this Expedition. m Which is to be understood comparatively. They shall more eagerly pursue the Destruction of the People, than the getting of Spoil; whereby it shall appear, that they are onely the Executioners of my Vengeance against them; they will accept no Ransom to save their Lives.

18. Their bows n also shall dash the young men to pieces o, and they shall have no pity on the fruit of the womb; their eye shall not spare children.

n Under which are comprehended their Arrows, and possibly other Weapons of War; for so generally sometimes is the bow used in Scripture, as 2 Sam. 1. 18. Psal. 78. 9. Isa. 41. 2. o Or, shall pierce the young men through, as the Chaldee render it.

19. ¶ And Babylon the glory of kingdoms p, the beauty of the Chaldees excellency q, shall be † as when God overthrew * Sodom and Gomorrha r.

† Heb. as the overthrowing. * Gen. 19. 24. Deut. 29. 23. Jer. 49. 18. & 50. 40.

p Which once was the most noble and excellent of all the Kingdoms then in being, and was more glorious than the succeeding Empires, whence it was represented by the head of gold, Dan. 2. 37. q The famous and beautiful Seat of the Chaldean Monarchy. r Shall be totally and irrecoverably destroyed, as is more fully expressed in the following Verses. Which yet was not done immediately upon the taking of the City by Darius and Cyrus, but was fulfilled by degrees, as is confessed by Historians, and appears this day.

20. It shall never be inhabited s, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation: neither shall the Arabian t pitch tent there, neither shall the shepherds make their fold there.

s After the Destruction threatned shall be fully accomplished. t Who dwelt in Tents, and wandred from place to place, where they could find Pasture; but shall avoid this place, either because the Land, once noted for great Fruitfulness, is now become Barren; or because the Land is accursed by God, and abhorred by all men; or for fear of the Wild Beasts, as it follows.

† Heb. Ziim. † Heb. Ochim. ‖ Or Ostriches. † Heb. daughters of the owl.

21. But † wild beasts of the desert shall lie there u, and their houses shall be full of † doleful creatures, and ‖ † owls shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there x.

u The Land being forsaken by Men, shall be possessed by Wild Beasts, which love solitary places. x What the Hebrew Words used here, and in the next Verse, signifie, the Learned may see in my Latin Synopsis; and for others, it may suffice to know that in which all the Learned agree, that these are frightful and solitary Creatures: Of which if I should particularly discourse, I should rather perplex than edifie the Vulgar Reader.

22. And † the wild beasts of the islands shall cry in their ‖ desolate houses, and dragons in their pleasant places: and her time is near to come y, and her days shall not be prolonged z.

† Heb. Ziim. ‖ Or, palaces.

y So it was, though not according to Man's rash Judgment, and impatient Expectation, yet according to God's Estimation, and to the Eye of Faith, whereby Abraham saw Christ's Day as present, many Ages before it came, Joh. 8. 56. and comparatively; for it hapned within Two hundred years; which is but a small proportion of Time, if it be compared either with the foregoing or following Ages of the World, or with the immense duration of Eternity, from whence it was decreed by God, and therefore might well be said now to be near the Accomplishment of it. In like manner the Apostles speak of the Day of Judgment as near in their time, though it was at many Ages distance. z Beyond the time prefixed and appointed by God. Compare Habak. 2. 3.

CHAP. XIV.

FOR the LORD will have mercy on Jacob a, and * will yet chuse b Israel, and set them in their own land: and the stranger shall be joyned with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob c.

* Zech. 1. 17. & 2. 12.

a God will pity and deliver his People; and therefore will destroy Babylon, which hinders it, and set up Cyrus, who shall promote it. b Will renew his Choice of them; for he had refused and rejected them. c So they did in part at their coming from Babylon, being thereunto moved either by the Favour which the Jews had in the Persian Court, or by the consideration of their wonderful Deliverance, and that exactly in the time designed by their Holy Prophets. But what was then begun, was more fully accomplished at the coming of the Messiah.

2. And the people shall take them, and bring them to their place: and the house of Israel shall possess them in the land of the LORD, for servants and hand-maids: and they shall take them captives, † whose captives they were, and they shall rule over their oppressours d.

† Heb. that had taken them captives.

d Which they might do literally, and sometimes did, after their Return into their own Land, either by their Power with the Persian Monarchs, as in the days of Cyrus and Darius, and especially of Ahasuerus; or by their own Prowess, as in the time of the Maccabees. But this was more evidently and eminently verified in a Spiritual sence, in the days of the Gospel, when the Apostles and other Ministers, who were of the Jewish Nation, conquered a great part of the Gentile-world to the Worship and Obedience of their Messiah.

3. And it shall come to pass in the day that the LORD shall give thee rest from thy sorrow, and from thy fear e, and from the hard bondage wherein thou wast made to serve:

e For besides their present hard Service, they were in perpetual fear of further Severities and Sufferings, at the pleasure of their cruel Lords and Masters.

4. ¶ That thou * shalt take up f this ‖ proverb against the king of Babylon, and say, How hath the oppressour ceased g? the ‖ golden city h ceased.

* Hab. 2. 6. ‖ Or, taunting speech. ‖ Or, exactness of gold.

f Into thy Mouth, as it is fully expressed Psal. 50. 16. g This is spoken by way of Astonishment and Triumph, Who would have thought this possible? h As they used to call themselves; which therefore he expresseth here in a Word of their own Language.

5. The LORD hath broken * the staff of the wicked, and the scepter of the rulers i.

* Psal. 125. 3.

i This is an Answer to the foregoing Question. It is God's own Work, and not Man's; and therefore it is not strange that it is accomplished.

6. He who smote the people in wrath with † a continual stroke; he that ruled the nations in anger k, is persecuted, and none hindreth l.

† Heb. a stroke without removing.

k With Rigour, and not with Clemency, as many Conquerours have done. l Neither the Babylonians themselves, nor nor their Confederates, could withstand the Power of the Medes and Persians.

7. The whole earth m is at rest and is quiet: they break forth into singing.

m The Inhabitants and Subjects of that vast Empire, who groaned under their cruel Bondage.

8. Yea, the fir-trees rejoyce at thee, and the cedars of Lebanon n, saying, since thou art laid down, no feller is come up against us.

n Which were felled down for the service of her Pride and Luxury, but now are suffered to stand and flourish. It is a Figure usual in Sacred and Profane Writers, called Prosopopœia.

‖ Or, the grave. † Heb. leaders. ‖ Or, great goats.

9. ‖ Hell o from beneath is moved for thee, to meet thee at thy coming: it stirreth up the dead for thee, even all the † ‖ chief ones p of the earth; it hath raised up from their thrones q all the kings of the nations.

o Or, the grave, as the same Word is rendred v. 11. and in innumerable other places; to which he elegantly ascribeth Sense and Speech, as Poets and Oratours frequently do. p Heb. the he-goats; which lead and govern the Flock. q From their several Graves, which he seems to call their thrones by way of Irony or Derision, the onely Thrones now left to them, Thrones both paved and covered with Worms, as is noted v. 11. in stead of their former Thrones made of Ivory or Silver, and adorned with Gold and Precious Stones.

10. All they shall speak and say unto thee, Art thou r also become weak as we? art thou become like unto us?

r Who wast King of Kings, and far superiour to us in Power and Authority, that didst neither fear God nor reverence Man, that didst slay whom thou wouldest, and keep alive whom thou wouldest, Dan. 5. 19.

† Heb. hell.

11. Thy pomp is brought down to † the grave s, and the noise of thy Viols t: the worm is spread under thee u, and the worms cover thee.

s All thy Glory is lost and buried with thee. t All thy musical and melodious Instruments, which were much used in Babylon, Dan. 3. 5, 7, 10. and were doubtless used in Belshazzar's Solemn Feast, Dan. 5. 1. at which time the City was taken; to which possibly the Prophet here alludes. u In stead of those rich and stately Carpets upon which thou didst frequently tread.

‖ Or, O day-star.

12. How art thou fallen from heaven x, ‖ O Lucifer y, son of the morning z? how art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations?

x From the heighth of thy Glory and Royal Majesty, as Kings are sometimes called gods in Scripture, so their Palaces and Thrones may be fitly called their heavens. y Which properly is a bright and eminent Star, which ushers in the Sun and the Morning; but is here metaphorically taken for the high and mighty King of Babylon. And it is a very usual thing, both in Prophetical and in Profane Writers, to describe the Princes and Potentates of the World under the Title of the Sun or Stars of Heaven. Some understand this Place of the Devil; to whom indeed it may be mystically applied: But as he is never called by this Name in Scripture, so it cannot be literally meant of him, but of the King of Babylon, as is undeniably evident from the whole Context, which certainly speaks of one and the same Person, and describes him as plainly as Words can do it. z The Title of son is given in Scripture not onely to a Person or Thing begotten or produced by another, but also in general to any thing which is any way related to another; in which sence we read of a son of stripes, Deut. 25. 2. the son of a night, Jonah 4. 10. a son of perdition, Joh. 17. 12. and, which is more agreeable to the present Case, the sons of Arcturus, Job 38. 32.

13. For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into heaven a, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God b: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation c, in the sides of the North d.

a I will advance my self above the State of a weak and mortal Man. Great Monarchs are easily induced, by their own vain Imaginations, and the Flattery of their Courtiers, to entertain an Opinion of their own Divinity; so far, that many of them have received and required Divine Worship to be paid to them. b Either, 1. above all other Kings and Potentates whom God hath set up; or, 2. above the most eminent Persons of God's Church and People, who are frequently called stars, as Dan. 8. 10. Revel. 1. 16, 20. & 12. 1. which sence the next Words favour. c I will establish my Royal Throne upon Mount Sion, where the Jews meet together to worship God. d This is added as a more exact Description of the Place of the Temple, which stood upon Mount Moriah, which was Northward from the Hill of Zion strictly so called, and was a part of the Hill of Zion largely so called. See on Psal. 48. 2.

14. I will ascend above the heights of the clouds e, I will be like the most high f.

e To wit, into Heaven, as he said v. 13. f In the uncontrollableness of my Power, and the universal Extent of my Dominion over all the Earth.

15. Yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit.

16. They that see thee, shall narrowly look upon thee g, and consider thee, saying, Is this the man that made the earth h to tremble, that did shake kingdoms?

g As hardly believing their own Eyes, because this Change seemed impossible to them. h All the Nations of the Earth.

17. That made the world as a wilderness, and destroyed the cities thereof, that ‖ opened not the house of his prisoners ***?

‖ Or, did not let his prisoners loose homeward.

 Whereby he signifies both his irresistible Power, and his continued Cruelty. He neither was willing to give them any Liberty or Ease, nor could any force him to do it.

18. All the kings of the nations, even all of them i lie in glory, every one in his own house k.

i Other Kings most commonly do, as the Word all is frequently used. k Are buried in their own Sepulchres, having stately Monuments erected to their Honour and Memory.

19. But thou art cast out of thy grave l, like an abominable branch m: and as the raiment n of those that are slain, thrust through with a sword, that go down to the stones of the pit o, as a carcase trodden under feet p.

l Or, cast from thy grave or burying-place. Which very probably hapned to Belshazzar, who was slain in the Night, Dan. 5. 30. when his People had neither opportunity nor heart to bestow an honourable Interment upon him, and the Conquerours would not suffer them to do it. m Like an useless and rotten Twig of a Tree, which he that pruneth the Trees cutteth off, and casteth away with abhorrency, and suffers to lie rotting more and more upon the Ground: Or, like a degenerate Plant of a noble Vine, which is abominable. n Which, being cut and mangled, and besmeared with Mire, and defiled with Blood, was cast away with contempt, and abominated as an unclean thing, as it was in divers respects, in that Age and State of the Church. o Which Persons being slain, they, together with their Garments, are cast into some Pit. He saith, to the stones of the pit, either because such Bodies are commonly thrown into the next Pits, and Pits were frequently made by digging Stones out of their Quarries; or because there usually are a great number of Stones in the bottoms of Pits, either naturally, or being cast in thither upon divers occasions; and when dead Bodies are cast in thither, men use to throw an heap of Stones upon them. p Neglected, like such a Carcass. Or, this might literally happen to Belshazzar's dead Body, through Military Fury and Contempt, or from other Causes.

20. Thou shalt not be joyned with them q in burial, because thou hast destroyed thy land, and slain thy people r: * the seed of evil doers s shall never be renowned t.

* Job 18. 19. Psal. 21. 10. & 37. 28. & 109. 13.

q Not in place; for so the Kings of several Nations did not use to be joyned in the same Sepulchre; but in Condition, dition, not be buried as they are. r Thou haſt exerciſed great Tyranny and Cruelty, not onely to thine Enemies, but even to thine own Subjects. Which it is more than probable Belſhazzar did, and it is certain that his Parents and Predeceſſors had done, whoſe Sins contributed, together with his, to bring down God's Judgments upon that Empire. s Such as Belſhazzar was, being deſcended from that Nebuchadnezzar who had made ſuch horrid Slaughters and Devaſtations in the World, meerly to gratifie his own inſatiable Luſts, and who had been ſo impious towards God and his Temple, and ſo bloody towards his Church and People. t Or, ſhall not be renowned for ever. Although I have long born with thee and thy Family, and ſuffered them to get a great Name in the World, yet I will now put a period to the Renown of thy Family and Empire.

* Exod. 20. 5. Matt. 23. 35.

21. Prepare ſlaughter for his children u * for the iniquity of their fathers x; that they do not riſe y, nor poſſeſs the land, nor fill the face of the world with cities z.

u O ye Medes and Perſians, cut off all the Branches of the Royal Family of Babylon. x In the Guilt whereof the Children are juſtly involved, partly becauſe of that Community of Nature and Intereſt which is between Parents and Children, which makes them for the moſt part bear a ſhare with them, as in their Rewards and Advantages, ſo alſo in their Puniſhments and Miſeries; and partly becauſe they juſtified their Sins by their impenitency, and Imitation of their wicked Example. y i.e. Not recover their former Splendour and Power. z Erected by them, either as Inſtruments of Tyranny, to keep the Country round about them in Slavery; or as Monuments of their Power and Riches, as Babylon was, Dan. 4. 30.

22. For I will riſe up againſt them, ſaith the LORD of hoſts, and cut off from Babylon the name, and remnant a, and ſon, and nephew, ſaith the LORD.

* Ch. 34. 11. Zeph. 2. 14.

23. * I will alſo make it a poſſeſſion for the bittern b, and pools of water c: and I will ſweep it with the beſom of deſtruction, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

b A great Water-fowl, which thruſting its Bill into ſome broken Reed, or other hollow thing, makes a great noiſe; which alſo delights in ſolitary places, as alſo in Wateriſh Grounds, ſuch as thoſe were about Babylon. Others render the Word Hedg-hog, or Porcupine: But this being not conſiderable in it ſelf, nor at all neceſſary for the clearing of the Text, I ſhall not trouble the Engliſh Reader with my Diſcourſe about it: And the Learned may conſult my Latin Synopſis. c The Ground about Babylon was of it ſelf very moiſt and wateriſh, becauſe of the great River Euphrates running by it, which was kept from overflowing the Country with great Charge and Labour; which being neglected, as it muſt needs be when the City was deſtroyed and diſpeopled, it was eaſily turned into Pools of Water.

24. ¶ The LORD of hoſts hath ſworn, ſaying, Surely as I have thought, ſo ſhall it come to paſs; and as I have purpoſed, ſo ſhall it ſtand d:

d I will not repent of this Threatning, as I did of that againſt Nineveh, Jonah 3. 4, 10. And this ſolemn Oath is added to confirm the Faith of God's People, becauſe otherwiſe the Deſtruction of this vaſt and mighty Empire might ſeem incredible. But it is to be diligently obſerved, that this Verſe doth not onely concern this preſent Prophecy of Babylon's Deſtruction by the Medes and Perſians, but is alſo to be extended unto the foregoing Prophecy concerning the Overthrow of Sennacherib and the Aſſyrian Hoſt, ch. 10. as appears by the next Verſe, where the ſum of that Prophecy is repeated. Nor is this any Digreſſion, but very pertinent to the main Deſign and Buſineſs of this Chapter; inaſmuch as the Overthrow of that great Aſſyrian Hoſt, and of the Deliverance of God's People at that time, was a Pledge of the certain Accompliſhment of that future Deſtruction of the City and Empire of Babylon, and of their Deliverance out of that Captivity.

* 2 Kin. 16. 20.

29. ¶ Rejoyce not thou whole Paleſtina, becauſe the rod of m him that ſmote thee is broken: for out of the ſerpents root ſhall come forth a || cockatrice, and his fruit ſhall be a fiery flying ſerpent n.

m Moſt underſtand this of Uzziah, who did them much miſchief, 2 Chron. 26. 6. But he was dead Thirty two years before this time, and therefore their Joy for his Death was long ſince paſt. Others underſtand it of Ahaz: But he was ſo far from ſmiting them, that he was ſmitten by them, as was noted on v. 27. It ſeems better to underſtand it more generally, of the Royal Race, or foregoing Kings of Judah, who had been a terrible Scourge to them, whoſe Rod might be ſaid to be broken, becauſe that Scepter was come into the hands of ſlothful and degenerate Princes, ſuch as Ahaz was, who had been lately broken by the Philiſtins, and who probably was alive when this Prophecy was delivered, becauſe he here ſpeaks of Hezekiah not as a preſent, but as a future King. It is ſaid indeed, that this burden was in the year that Ahaz died: But ſo it might be, though it was before his Death. n From the Root and Race of David ſhall come Hezekiah, who, like a Serpent, ſhall ſting thee to death, as he did, 2 Kings 18. 8.

30. And the firſt born of the poor o ſhall feed p, and the needy ſhall lie down in ſafety: and I will kill thy root q with famin, and he ſhall ſlay thy remnant.

o The People of the Jews, who are brought to extreme Poverty by thy Cruelty, and the Malice of other Enemies. The Firſt-born were the chief of all the Children. Hence the Title of firſt-born is given to Perſons or Things which are moſt eminent in their Kind, as to the People of Iſrael, Exod. 4. 22. to David, Pſal. 89. 27. to a grievous Death, Job 18. 13. and here to Perſons eminently poor. p Shall have plenty of Proviſions, in ſpight of all thine Attempts againſt them. q I will utterly deſtroy thee both Root and Branch, ſo that there ſhall not be a Remnant of thy People reſerved, as it follows. It is a Metaphor from a Tree, which for want of Nouriſhment is dried up by the Roots.

31. Howl, O gate r, cry, O city ſ, thou whole Paleſtina art diſſolved t: for there ſhall come from the North u a ſmoke x, and || none ſhall be alone in his || appointed times y.

|| Or, he ſhall not be alone.

r The gate is put either, 1. Metaphorically, for the People paſſing through the Gates, or for the Magiſtrates and others who uſed to meet in the Gate for Judgment, or upon other Occaſions; or, 2. Synecdochically, for the City, as gates are commonly put, as Jer. 22. 19. and as it is explained in the next Words. ſ City is here put collectively for their Cities, of which ſee 1 Sam. 6. 17. t Heb. melted. Which may be underſtood either, 1. of the fainting of their Spirits and Courage, as Exod. 15. 15. Joſ. 2. 9, 24, &c. or, 2. of the Diſſolution of their State. u Either, 1. from Judea; which lay Northward from ſome part of the Philiſtins Land. But in truth Judea lay more Eaſt than North from Judah, and therefore the Philiſtins are ſaid to be on the Weſt, Iſa. 11. 14. and never, ſo far as

I remember, on the North: Or, 2. from Chaldæa, as may be gathered, 1. from the Scripture use of this Phrase, which generally designs that Country, as Jer. 1. 14, 15. & 6. 1, 22, &c. 2. from Jer. 47. where Destruction is threatned to the Philistins from the North, v. 2. which all understand of the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar. And whereas it is speciously objected, That this suits not with the next Verse, which speaks of Zions Safety at the time of this Destruction of the Philistins, whereas Zion and the Land and People of Judah were destroyed together with the Philistins by Nebuchadnezzar; I humbly conceive it may be answered, That that Verse is added to express the far differing Condition of God's People and of the Philistins in the Events of that Babylonian War; and that whereas the Philistins should be irrecoverably and eternally destroyed thereby, and no Remnant of them should be left, as was said v. 30. God's People, though they should be sorely scourged, and carried into Captivity, yet they should be strangely preserved, and after some years delivered, and restored to their own Land and Temple; whereby it would appear, that Zion stood upon a sure Foundation, and, albeit it was grievously shaken, yet it could not be utterly and finally overthrown. x A grievous Judgment and Calamity, which is oft signified by smoke, as Gen. 15. 17. Deut. 29. 20. Joel 2. 30. either because Smoke is generally accompanied with Fire, or because it causeth a great Darkness in the Air; for Afflictions are frequently described under the names of fire and darkness. y When God's appointed time shall come for the execution of this Judgment, not one Person of all that numerous Army, which is signified by the smoke last mentioned, shall retire and desert his Colours, or lag behind the rest; But they shall march with great unanimity and alacrity, and none of them shall withdraw his hand till the Work be finished, till the Philistins be utterly destroyed.

32. What shall one then answer the messengers of the nation z? That * the LORD hath founded Zion, and * the poor of his people shall || trust in it a.

* Psal. 87. 1, 5. & 102. 16. * Zeph. 3. 12. Zech. 11. 11. || Or, betake themselves unto it.

z What shall a Jew say to the People of other Nations, who shall either be sent or come to enquire concerning the State of Zion in that day, when not onely the Philistins, but even the Jews themselves, shall fall by the hands of one and the same Enemy? Nation is put collectively for nations, as gate and city for gates and cities in the foregoing Verse. a They shall give them this answer, That although Zion at present be in a very distressed and deplorable condition, and seems to be forsaken by her God, yet she stands upon a firm Foundation, and God who first founded her, will again restore and establish her, and his poor despised People shall resort to her, as to a strong and sure Refuge.

* Jer. 47. 5. & 48. 37, 38. Ezek. 7. 18.

f Which signifies an house. It is supposed to be the Name of a Place so called from some eminent House or Temple of their Idols which was in it. It is called more fully Beth-baal-meon, that is, The house of Baals habitation, Jos. 13. 17. g Another City of Moab, as is manifest from Jer. 48. 18, 22. where also was their other eminent High places. To these two Places they used to resort in case of great Difficulties and Troubles. h To offer their Supplications with Tears to their Idols for help. i Two considerable Cities, anciently belonging to the Moabites, from whom they were taken by the Amorites, and from them by the Israelites, and possessed by the Reubenites, Numb. 21. 30. & 32. 3, 38. but were, as it seems, recovered by the Moabites, in whose hands they now were, as is evident, for Nebo, Jer. 48. 1, 22. and for Medeba, from this Text. k The Hair of their Heads and Beards (which was their Ornament) was shaved, as was usual in great Mournings, as hath been oft observed upon divers preceding Texts. See on Levit. 19. 27, 28. & 21. 5.

3. In their streets they shall gird themselves with sack-cloth l: on the tops of their houses m, and in their streets n, every one shall howl †, weeping abundantly.

† Heb. descending into weeping, or, coming down with weeping.

l This was another Practice of Mourners. m Which were made flat, Deut. 22. 8. to which men used to go up, either to walk, or to cry to God in Heaven or to Men for Help. n Publickly, without shame; whereas in ordinary Sorrows men are wont to seek secret Places for their Mourning.

4. And Heshbon shall cry, and Elealeh o: their voice shall be heard even unto Jahaz p: therefore the armed souldiers q of Moab shall cry out, his life shall be grievous unto him r.

o Two other Moabitish Cities; of which see Numb. 21. 25, 26. & 32. 3. 37. p Another City in the utmost Borders of Moab, Numb. 21. 23. called also Jahazah, Jos. 21. 36. q Who should be and use to be the most courageous. r The Moabites shall generally long for death, to free themselves from those dreadful Calamities which they perceive unavoidably coming upon them.

5. My heart shall cry out for Moab s, || his fugitives t shall flee unto Zoar u, an * heifer of three years old x: for by the mounting up of Luhith with weeping shall they go it up: for in the way of Horonaim, they shall raise up a cry y of † destruction z.

|| Or, to the borders thereof, even to Zoar, as an heifer. † Jer. 48. 5. 34. * Heb. breaking.

s Their destruction approaching is so dreadful, that although they are a most vile Nation, and by their implacable Enmity against God and his People do abundantly deserve it, yet the respect which I have to Humane Nature fills me with horrour at the very thoughts of it. Compare Isa. 16. 11. t Or, his bars, as others render it, and as this word is frequently taken, as Exod. 26. 26, 27. Psal. 107. 16, &c. whereby he may understand their valiant men, or their Princes and Rulers, who as they are called the shields of the earth, Psal. 47. 9. because, like shields, they do or should defend their people; so for the same reason they may be called bars, because Bars are the strength of the Gates of Cities or Castles, and therefore are mentioned as such, Psal. 147. 13. Prov. 18. 19. Jer. 51. 30. u Or, shall cry unto Zoar; either shall cry as they go along the way, even till they come to Zoar; or, shall cry so as they may be heard to Zoar: which may easily be understood out of the foregoing Verse. Zoar was a Town bordering upon Moab; of which see Gen. 19. 20, 21, 22. & Deut. 34. 3. x Which some understand of the City of Zoar, so called for her strength and wantonness. But such a description of Zoar seems very improper and impertinent in this place. The words therefore are to be translated here, as they are by our Translators, Jer. 48. 34. as an heifer of three years old; and so they belong to their Cry, and signifie that it is strong and loud, like that of such an Heifer. y He signifies, that the Cry should be universal, in all places where they come, and reaching from one side of the Country to another. Of Luhith see Jer. 48. 4, 5. z Such a Cry as men send forth when they are just falling into the pit of destruction.

6. For the waters a of Nimrim shall be † desolate: for the hay is withered away, the grass faileth, there is no green thing b.

a Either, 1. properly, they shall be dried up; or, 2. figuratively, the watrish grounds, as waters seem to be taken, Eccles. 11. 1. Isa. 32. 20. These being very fruitful, are commonly most inhabited and cultivated; but now they also, and much more the dry and barren grounds, shall be desolate, and without inhabitant. b By the just and special Judgment of God. Thus God and Man conspire together to destroy them.

7. Therefore the abundance they have gotten, and that which they have laid up, shall they c carry to the || brook of the willows d.

|| Or, valley of the Arabians.

c To wit, their Enemies; which is plainly implied. d Unto some Brook or River having great numbers of Willows growing by it, by which they might convey them to some eminent and strong City built upon the same River. Possibly he means some such River which ran into Euphrates, and and ſo gave them opportunity of carrying their Spoils by Water unto Babylon. Though the Words may be rendred, into the vally of the Arabians; whither the Spoils might be firſt carried, in order to their Tranſportation into Aſſyria or Chaldæa; for part of Arabia lay between Moab and thoſe Countries. But the former Tranſlation ſeems better, becauſe theſe very Words are ſo rendred, Levit. 23. 40.

8. For the cry is gone round about the borders of Moab: the howling thereof unto Eglaim, and the howling thereof unto Beer-elim e.

e Their Cry fills all the Parts of the Country.

9. For the waters of Dimon f ſhall be full of Blood: for I will bring † more g upon Dimon, lions upon him that eſcapeth of Moab h, and upon the remnant of the land.

f This ſeems to be the ſame place with Dibon mentioned v. 2. here called Dimon for the great bloudſhed in it, as it here follows; ſuch changes of a Letter being not unuſual in Proper Names, as in Merodach for Berodach, Iſa. 39. 1. g Either, 1. more than upon other parts of the Country, that being one of their High-places, v. 2. or rather, 2. more than hath been already mentioned. h God ſhall ſend Lions to find out thoſe who eſcape the Fury of Men.

CHAP. XVI.

‖ Or, of the ruler. ‖ Or, Petra. † Heb. a rock.

SEnd ye the lamb ‖ to the ruler of the land a, from ‖ † Sela b to the wilderneſs c, unto the mount of the daughter of Zion d:

a The Prophet continues his Prophecy againſt Moab in this Chapter, and here turneth his Speech to them, and gives them Counſel what to do, to prevent, if poſſible, the threatned Deſolation. In theſe firſt Words he adviſeth them to the Practice either, 1. of Juſtice: Pay that Tribute of Lambs and Goats which you obliged your ſelves to pay unto David, and to his Poſterity, 2 Sam. 8. 2. and pay it not unto Iſrael, as you have done, 2 Kings 3. 4. but unto the King of Judah, who is the rightful Heir of David, and King of the Land: Or, 2. of Piety: Send a lamb, for a Sacrifice, unto God, who is the Ruler of the land; to wit, of your Land no leſs than of ours, or, of the earth, as the Word is commonly rendred, who is the God of the whole earth, as he is called Iſa. 54. 5. the God of all the kingdoms of the earth, Iſa. 37. 16. Make your Peace with God, by Sacrifice, for all your Injuries done to him, and to his People. Theſe Words may be underſtood Ironically, and the Deſign of them may be to repreſent their miſerable and deſperate Condition; as if he had ſaid, You have tried all other ways, and ſought to your Idols, ch. 15. 2. and all in vain; now ſeek to the God of Iſrael, who alone can help you. But, alas! he is highly incenſed againſt you, and coming to deſtroy you. But this ſeems rather to be ſerious Advice, by comparing theſe Words with v. 3, 4. b An eminent City of Moab, ſeated upon a Rock, which is here named, either becauſe the King and his Court at this time reſided there, or for ſome other Reaſon then evident, though now unknown. c To the Wilderneſs of Moab, of which we read Numb. 21. 11. Deut. 2. 8. and ſo onward to Zion, as it follows. Or, this may be added as a Deſcription of the Place called Sela. Hence ſome render the Words, Sela of the wilderneſs; and others, Sela which lieth or looketh towards the wilderneſs. And this Limitation might be the more neceſſary, to diſtinguiſh this from other Places of Moab called by the ſame name, which, ſignifying a rock, might be common to ſeveral Places in that Rocky Country. d Unto the Temple upon Mount Zion.

2. For e it ſhall be that as a wandring bird ‖ caſt out of the neſt f, ſo the daughters of Moab ſhall be at the fords of Arnon g.

e Or, Otherwiſe, as this Particle is ſometimes uſed, if you do not follow my advice. f Which knows not whither to go, nor what to do. g Which was the Border of the Land of Moab, where they were, either being carried that way into Captivity, or rather with deſign to flee out of their own Land, although they knew not whither, as the foregoing Metaphor ſheweth.

† Heb. Bring.

3. † Take counſel h, execute judgment i, make thy ſhadow as the night k in the midſt of noonday, hide the out-caſts l, bewray not him that wandreth m.

h Conſider ſeriouſly among your ſelves what courſe to take to prevent your utter Ruine. i Do thoſe things which are juſt and right, as to all men, ſo particularly to my People, to whom you have been moſt unrighteous and unmerciful. k Or, as the ſhadow of the night, large and dark, as the Shadow of the Earth is in the Night-ſeaſon. The meaning is, Conceal and protect my People in the time of their Diſtreſs and Danger, as this Metaphor is explained in the reſt of this, and in the following Verſe. l Mine out-caſts, as it follows v. 4. thoſe of my People which are driven out of their own Land. m Unto their Enemies, as thou haſt treacherouſly done in former times.

† Heb. wringer. † Heb. the treaders down.

4. Let mine out-caſts n dwell with thee Moab, be thou a covert to them from the face of the ſpoiler: for the † extortioner is at an end o, the ſpoiler ceaſeth, † the oppreſſours are conſumed out of the land.

n Whom though I have forſaken, and ſorely chaſtened, yet I do, and ſtill will, own for my People; and I do obſerve, and will requite, both the Kindneſſes and the Injuries done to them. o Shall ſhortly be deſtroyed, and my People ſhall ere long be reſtored, and then thou wilt not loſe the Fruit of thy Kindneſs. The Preſent Tenſe is put for the Future, as it is uſually in Prophecies.

* Dan. 7. 14. 27. Mic. 4. 7. Luk. 1. 33. ‖ Or, prepared.

5. And in mercy p, * ſhall the throne q be ‖ eſtabliſhed, and he r ſhall ſit upon it in truth ſ, in the tabernacle t of David, judging and ſeeking judgment u, and haſtning righteouſneſs x.

p By my Mercy. Though they have ſinned, and I am now puniſhing their Sins, yet I will deliver them for my own Mercies ſake. q The Kingdom of Judah. Therefore for thine own ſake ſhew them Kindneſs in this day of their diſtreſs; for they will be capable of requiting thee. r Their King, which is eaſily and neceſſarily underſtood. ſ Which may reſpect either, 1. the Manner of his Government, exerciſing Truth and Juſtice: But that is more plainly and fully expreſſed in the laſt part of the Verſe. Or, 2. the Continuance of it, in truth, i.e. firmly and conſtantly; for truth is oft put for the ſtability and certainty of a thing, as 2 Chron. 32. 1. Prov. 11. 18. Iſa. 51. 8. And this makes the Argument more conſiderable to the preſent purpoſe. The Kingdom ſhall not only be reſtored, but firmly ſetled: Therefore it is your Intereſt, O Moabites, to be kind to my People. t In the Houſe, or Palace, which is called a tent or tabernacle, either becauſe Houſes are frequently ſo called in Scripture, as 2 Sam. 20. 1. 1 Kings 8. 66. & 12. 16. or with reſpect unto the unſettledneſs of David's Houſe, which now indeed was more like a Tabernacle than a ſtrong Palace; and yet notwithſtanding its preſent Imbecillity, ſhould be firmly eſtabliſhed. u Searching out the Truth of Cauſes and Things with care and diligence, which is the Duty of a Judge. x Neither denying, nor yet delaying Juſtice. And theſe good Qualifications ſeem to be here mentioned, partly to teach the Rulers of Moab their Duty towards their own People, and the Iſraelites which were among them; and partly as a Reaſon and Evidence of that Stability which he had promiſed to the Houſe of David.

* Jer. 48. 29. Zeph. 2. 10.

6. ¶ We have heard of the * pride of Moab y, (he is very proud) even of his haughtineſs, and his pride, and his wrath: but his lies ſhall not be ſo z.

y The Prophet, having ſpoken to the Moabites, and acquainted them with their Duty and Intereſt, now he turneth his Speech to God's People, whom he armeth and comforteth againſt their approaching Miſery. The ſcope and ſence of the Prophet in this Verſe is this, I do not expect that my Counſels will have any good effect upon Moab, they will ſtill carry themſelves inſolently and outragiouſly towards you, and they promiſe themſelves that they ſhall now effect what they have long deſired, even ſatisfie their Malice in your total and final Deſtruction; but they ſhall be diſappointed of their Hopes. It is well known to me, and you, and all their Neighbours, that they are an haughty and furious People, and therefore they will ſcorn my Advice, and doubt not to ſtand upon their own Legs. z His vain Imaginations, and falſe and crafty Counſels, ſhall not take effect. But the Words are and may be otherwiſe rendred. But his ſtrength (as this Word is rendred Job 18. 13. Heb. bars, which are the Strength of Gates or Doors) is not ſo, not equal to his Pride or Fury. Or thus, exactly according to the Words and Order of the Hebrew Text, not ſo lies. A conciſe Speech, ſuch as are very common in this and other Prophets. And theſe Words may poſſibly be brought in as the Words of the Moabites, making this ſhort Reply to the Prophets Counſels and Threatnings, directed to them in the foregoing Verſes of this Chapter: It is not or ſhall not be ſo as thou ſay'ſt; thy Words are but Lies, we fear not thy Threats againſt us. But this I propoſe with ſubmiſſion.

* Jer. 48. 20.

7. Therefore ſhall Moab * howl for Moab a, every one ſhall howl: for the foundations of Kirhareſeth b ſhall ye ‖ mourn c, ſurely they are ſtricken d.

a For it ſelf; the Noun put for the Pronoun, as is uſual in the Hebrew Text. Or, to Moab. One Moabite ſhall howl or lament to or for another. b An ancient and eminent City of Moab, called Kir, chap. 13. 1. and Kir-hareſh, v. 11. which ſignifies, The city of the ſun; probably becauſe there was the Temple of the Sun: which City was preſerved when their other Cities were ruined, 2 Kings 3. 25. and therefore the Deſtruction of it was more lamented. c Or, ye ſhall meditate or talk, as this Word commonly ſignifies. Your Thoughts and Diſcourſes will run much upon the Ruine of ſuch a City. d Or, broken, overthrown or deſtroyed.

8. For the fields of Heſhbon languiſh e, and the vine of Sibmah, the lords of the heathen f have broken down the principal plants g thereof, they are come even unto Jazer h, they wandered through the wilderneſs i, her branches k are ‖ ſtretched out l, they are gone over the ſea m.

‖ Or, plucked up.

e Either for want of Rain, as ch. 15. 6. or becauſe there are no men left to till and manure them. f The Aſſyrians or Chaldeans, the great Rulers of the Eaſtern Nations. g The choiceſt Vines. Under which one Particular he ſeems to underſtand not onely all their other Fruits and Goods, but even their Perſons and choiceſt People. h Either, 1. the Lords of the Heathen are come as far as Jazer, which is the utmoſt Border of Moab; or, 2. the People of Moab are going into Captivity, and part of them are already gone as far as Jazer. Some underſtand this and the following Clauſes of the Vines, which are here commended, to aggravate the Loſs and Ruine of them, and render the Words, which reached even unto Jazer, which Vineyards were planted for many miles together, even as far as Jazer. i Others of the Moabites fled away for their Lives, and wandred hither and thither in the Wilderneſs of Moab; of which ſee Numb. 21. 11. Deut. 2. 8. k i. e. Her People, called plants before. l Or, are ſpread abroad, as this Word ſignifies Numb. 11. 32. Judg. 15. 9. 1 Sam. 30. 16. are driven from their own Homes, and diſperſed into ſeveral Countries. m Over the Dead Sea, which was the Border of Moab. They were forced to flee out of their own Country, to ſave their Lives.

9. ¶ Therefore I will bewail with the weeping of Jazer, the vine of Sibmah n: I will water thee with my tears, O Heſhbon, and Elealeh: for ‖ the ſhouting for thy ſummer fruits, and for thy harveſt is fallen o.

‖ Or, the alarm is fallen upon, &c.

n So the ſence is, I will bewail Sibmah as I did bewail Jazer, which, they ſay, was deſtroyed before. Sibmah: Or, the weeping of Jazer might be a Proverbial Expreſſion; for it is uſed alſo Jer. 48. 32. like that of the mourning of Hadad-rimmon, Zech. 12. 11. though the Reaſon of it be now unknown, as it is in many other Proverbs. The Words are by others rendred, and that more agreeably to the Hebrew Text, I will bewail with weeping (which is an uſual Hebraiſm for, I will bitterly bewail) Jazer, and (which Particle is oft underſtood) the vine of Sibmah. But our Tranſlation ſeems to be juſtified by the parallel Place, Jer. 48. 32. where it is, O vine of Sibmah, I will weep for thee with the weeping of Jazer. o Thoſe joyful Shouts and Acclamations which were cuſtomary in the time of Harveſt and Vintage, Iſa. 9. 3. Jer. 25. 30. ſhall ceaſe, becauſe thy Land ſhall be waſted, and thy People deſtroyed. Or, as it is in the Margin, the ſhout or alarm is fallen upon thy ſummer-fruits and thy harveſt, inſtead of that joyful Shout which was then uſed, to which he here alludes. Which ſeems to be the truer Tranſlation, not onely becauſe this Hebrew Word is elſewhere uſed concerning the ſhout of an Enemy falling upon a People, as Jer. 25. 30. & 51. 14. but eſpecially by conſidering the parallel Place, Jer. 48. 32. where, for the ſhout is fallen, it is, the ſpoiler is fallen upon, &c. If it be objected, That the next Verſe ſpeaks of the ceaſing of their joyful Shouts, and that this Hebrew Word is there uſed for vintage-ſhouting, which at firſt made me incline to the former Interpretation; that ſeems to be fully anſwered from Jer. 48. 33. which ſpeaks likewiſe of the ceaſing of their Joy and joyful Shouts, but withal adds, in the cloſe of the Verſe, what may end this Controverſie, their ſhouting ſhall be no ſhouting; They ſhall indeed have a Shouting, but not ſuch an one as they uſed to have, a joyful Shouting of their own People, but an inſulting Shout of their Enemies.

* Jer. 48. 33.

10. And * gladneſs is taken away and joy out of the plentiful field, and in the vineyards there ſhall be no ſinging, neither ſhall there be ſhouting: the treaders p ſhall tread out no wine in their preſſes; I have made their vintage-ſhouting to ceaſe.

p In thoſe times they uſed to ſqueeze out the Juyce of their Grapes by treading them with their Feet, in Veſſels appointed for that uſe, Judg. 9. 27. Nehem. 13. 15.

11. Wherefore my bowels ſhall ſound q like an Harp for Moab, and mine inward parts for Kirhareſh.

q Through compaſſion to them: of which ſee on Iſa. 15. 5. In exceſſive Griefs the Bowels are ſometimes rolled and tumbled together, ſo as to make an audible noiſe. Hereby he ſignifies the greatneſs of their approaching Calamity, which being ſo grievous to him, muſt needs be intolerable to them.

12. ¶ And it ſhall come to paſs, when it is ſeen that Moab is weary * on the high place r, that he ſhall come to his Sanctuary ſ to pray, but he ſhall not prevail t.

* Chap. 15. 2.

r When it ſhall appear to them and others, that all their other Devotions are vain and ineffectual. ſ To the Temple of his great God Chemoſh, Numb. 21. 29. 1 Kings 11. 7. Jer. 48. 46. from whom he ſhall ſeek and expect Succour. t His God can neither hear nor help him.

13. This is the word that the LORD hath ſpoken concerning Moab † ſince that time u.

† Heb. from then, that is, heretofore.

u Since the beginning of God's Revelation to me concerning Moab, and hitherto. Which Expoſition ſeems to be confirmed by the following Words, But now.

14. But now the LORD hath ſpoken x, ſaying, Within three years y, * as the years of an hireling z, and the glory of Moab a ſhall be contemned b, with all that great multitude c; and the remnant ſhall be very ſmall and ‖ feeble d.

* Chap. 21. 16.

‖ Or, not many.

x Hath made this further diſcovery of his Mind to me. y To be computed either, 1. from the time of Jeruſalem's Deſtruction by Nebuchadnezzar, who did, as is confeſſed by all, invade the Moabites at or about that time, and execute the Judgment firſt foretold by this Prophet, and afterwards by Jeremy, ch. 48. or rather, 2. from the time of the Delivery of this Prophecy. Which, being uncertain, leaves us the greater Latitude for the determination of the preciſe time when this was fulfilled. But this is certain, from Iſa. 1. 1. that this Prophecy muſt be delivered, at fartheſt, before the end of Hezekiah's Reign. And then there ariſeth this great Difficulty, How this can conſiſt with the Prophecy of Jeremiah, who above or about an hundred years after this time ſpeaketh of Moab as a People that had been at eaſe from their youth, and had not gone into captivity, Jer. 48. 11. and propheſieth againſt them in the very ſame Words which Iſaiah uſeth in this Prophecy? The Anſwer is, That they do not ſpeak of the ſame time, nor of the ſame Calamity; but Iſaiah of a former Tribulation, and Jeremiah of their latter Devaſtation. It is true, Jeremiah uſeth the ſame Words which Iſaiah doth, and ſo do the later Prophets ſometimes uſe the Words of the former, to other purpoſes than they were firſt delivered, as we ſhall ſee hereafter, and as is moſt evident from the Revelation of St. John, in which the ſame Words are uſed concerning Myſtical Babylon, which were uſed by the foregoing Prophets concerning the firſt and literal Babylon. And although the foregoing Prophecy of Iſaiah ſeems to ſpeak of the ſame Deſtruction threatned by Jeremiah, and inflicted by Nebuchadnezzar; yet this Prophecy contained in this Verſe, and uſhered in with another Preface, ſeems to be of a differing nature, and to ſpeak of a more ſpeedy and leſs grievous Affliction that ſhould befal them, which ſhould be as a Pledge to aſſure them of the certain Accompliſhment of the other Prophecy, and of their utter Deſtruction. And therefore it is obſervable, that the Prophet doth not here ſay, Within three years all that I have foretold and threatned ſhall be fulfilled; but onely, the glory of Moab ſhall be contemned, &c. which is quite another thing; and as the Terms here uſed are much milder, ſo the Judgment here denounced ſeems much leſs, than in the foregoing Prophecy. And therefore this Verſe may very well be underſtood of ſome great Blow given to the Moabites, either by Sennacherib, or by his Son Eſarhaddon, from which notwithſtanding they in a little time recovered themſelves, and flouriſhed again, and continued ſo to do, till Nebuchadnezzar compleated their Deſtruction. And this may well enough conſiſt with what is ſaid of Moab's being at eaſe from his youth, Jer. 48. 11. which is not to be underſtood ſimply as if they had been wholly free from War and other Calamities; for the contrary trary is evident both from Scripture, as 1 Sam. 8.2. 2 Kings 3. 24,25. and from other Hiſtories: but comparatively, that they had not been brought to Deſolation, nor carried away into Captivity, as it is explained in the following Words, and as Iſrael had been at that time, and Judah was threatned to be. x i.e. Within three years preciſely accounted; for Hirelings are very punctual in obſerving the Time for which they are hired; and their Thoughts and Deſires run much upon it, becauſe then they are to receive their Wages: of which ſee Job 7. 1, 2. & 14.6. And this Expoſition is confirmed by comparing this Place with Iſa. 21.16. where the ſame Phraſe is uſed of one year. So groundleſs is that Opinion which the Jewiſh Writers gather from this Place, compared with Deut. 15. 18. That three years was the uſual and appointed time for the generality of hired Servants. a Their Strength, and Wealth, and other things in which they glory. b Shall be made contemptible to thoſe who formerly admired them. c With the great numbers of their People, of which they boaſted. d Comparatively to what they were before. Which might be very true, and yet afterwards, in a hundred years ſpace, they might be ſufficiently recruited.

CHAP. XVII.

* Jer. 49. 23. Amos 1. 3. Zech. 9. 1.

*THE burden of Damaſcus a: Behold Damaſcus is taken away from being a City, and it ſhall be a ruinous heap b.

a Both of that City and Kingdom, as appears from v. 2,3. b This was fulfilled by Tiglath-pileſer, 2 Kings 16. 9. although afterwards it was re-edified and poſſeſſed by another ſort of Inhabitants.

2. The cities of Aroer c are forſaken: they ſhall be for flocks which ſhall lie down, and none ſhall make them afraid d.

c Of that part of Syria called Aroer, from a great City of that name; of which ſee Deut. 2. 36. & 3. 12. Theſe Cities were poſſeſſed by the Reubenites and Gadites, whom Tiglath-Pileſer carried into Captivity, 1 Chron. 5. 26. Theſe he mentions here, as he doth Ephraim in the next Verſe, becauſe they were Confederate with Syria againſt Judah. d Becauſe the Land ſhall be deſolate, and deſtitute of Men who might diſturb them.

3. The fortreſs alſo e ſhall ceaſe from Ephraim, and the kingdom from Damaſcus, and the remnant of Syria f: they ſhall be as the glory * of the children of Iſrael, ſaith the LORD of hoſts.

e Either Samaria, their chief Fortreſs; or all their Fortreſſes or Strong Holds, the Singular Number being put for the Plural; or all their Strength and Glory; which anſwers to the kingdom in the next Clauſe. f Or, and from (which Particle is eaſily underſtood from the former Clauſe) the remnant of Syria. So the ſence is, The Remainders of Damaſcus and of Syria ſhall be an Headleſs Body, a People without a King. * An Ironical Speech, implying their contemptible Condition; for their Glory is ſuppoſed to be departed from them, by what he had already ſaid of them. The ſence is, Syria ſhall have as much Glory as Iſrael, i.e. neither of them ſhall have any at all.

4. And in that day it ſhall come to paſs, that the glory of Jacob ſhall be made thin g, and the fatneſs of his fleſh ſhall wax lean.

g Or, ſhall be emptied, as this word is rendred Iſa. 19. 6.

5. And it ſhall be as when the harveſt-man gathereth the corn, and reapeth the ears with his arm h; and it ſhall be as he that gathereth ears in the Valley of Rephaim i.

h Taking care, as far as may be, that all may be gathered in, and nothing left. So ſhall the whole Body of the Ten Tribes be carried away Captive, ſome few Gleanings onely being left of them, as it is in the Harveſt. i A very fruitful Place near Jeruſalem, Joſ. 15.8. & 18.16.

* Chap. 24. 13.

6. ¶ * Yet gleaning grapes ſhall be left in it k, as the ſhaking of an olive-tree, two or three berries in the top of the uppermoſt bough, four or five in the outmoſt fruitful branches thereof, ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael.

k Some few Iſraelites were left after their Captivity, who joyned themſelves to the Kingdom of Judah, and were carried Captive to Babylon with them, from whence alſo they returned with them, as we find in the Hiſtory of their Return in Ezra and Nehemiah.

7. At that day ſhall a man l look to his maker m, and his eyes ſhall have reſpect to the holy One of Iſrael.

l Thoſe few Men that are left. m They ſhall ſincerely reſpect, and truſt, and worſhip (all which are underſtood by looking to) God, and God onely, as the next Verſe explains it. Their Afflictions ſhall at laſt bring them to Repentance.

8. And he ſhall not look to the altars n, the work of his hands o, neither ſhall reſpect that which his fingers have made, either the groves p, or the ‖ images q.

‖ Or, ſun-images.

n Not reſort or truſt to them, or to the Worſhip offered to Idols upon them. o Their own Inventions; for otherwiſe the Altars made by God's Command were the Work of Mens Hands. p Which were deviſed and planted by Men, as fit Places for the Worſhip of their Gods; and therefore were forbidden, Deut. 16. 21. 1 Kings 14.15. q Worſhipped in their Groves. The Word properly ſignifies images of the ſun, either having the Form and Shape of the Sun, or at leaſt erected to his Honour and Worſhip; of which ſee Deut. 4.19. & 17. 3. 2 Kings 23. 5,11. Jer. 8.2. & 7.18. & 44. 17,18.

9. ¶ In that day r ſhall his ſtrong cities be as a forſaken bough, and an uppermoſt branch ſ, which they left, becauſe of the children of Iſrael t: and there ſhall be deſolation.

r In the day of Jacob's Trouble, of which he ſpake v. 4. and continueth his Speech unto theſe Words, and afterwards. ſ Which he that pruneth the Tree neglecteth, either becauſe he eſteems it uſeleſs and inconſiderable, or becauſe he cannot reach it. t The ſence is, either, 1. Which they, to wit, the Enemies, left, or, which ſhall be left (the Active Verb being put Imperſonally, as it frequently is in the Hebrew Text) becauſe of or for the children of Iſrael; which God inclined their Hearts to leave or ſpare, out of his Love to his Iſrael. Thus this is mentioned as a Mercy, or Mitigation of the Calamity. But this ſeems not to agree either with the foregoing or following Words, both which manifeſtly ſpeak of the greatneſs of the Judgment. And that their ſtrong Cities were not left for them, but taken from them, ſeems evident from v. 3, 4. Or, 2. As the Cities (which Words are eaſily underſtood out of the former part of the Verſe, where they are expreſſed) which they (to wit, the Canaanites, as the Seventy Interpreters expreſs it; and it was needleſs to name them, becauſe the Hiſtory was ſo well known to them to whom the Prophet writes) left or forſook (which they did either by departing from them, or being deſtroyed out of them) becauſe of (or before, or for fear of) the children of Iſrael. And this was a very fit Example, to awaken the Iſraelites to a ſerious belief of this Threatning, becauſe God had inflicted the ſame Judgment upon the Canaanites, and that for the ſame Sins of which they were guilty.

10. Becauſe thou u haſt forgotten the God of thy ſalvation, and haſt not been mindful of the rock of thy ſtrength x: therefore ſhalt thou plant ‖ pleaſant plants y, and ſhalt ſet it with ſtrange z ſlips:

‖ Or, plants of pleaſant fruits.

u O Iſrael. x That God who was thy onely ſure Defence. y Excellent Flowers and Fruit-trees. z Fetched from far Countries, and therefore highly eſteemed. The ſence is, Thou ſhalt uſe much Induſtry and Coſt, but to no purpoſe, as it follows.

11. In the day ſhalt thou make thy plant to grow, and in the morning ſhalt thou make thy ſeed to flouriſh a: but the harveſt ſhall be ‖ a heap in the day of grief, and of deſperate ſorrow b.

‖ Or, removed in the day of inheritance. and there ſhall be deadly ſorrow.

a Thou ſhalt from day to day, beginning early in the Morning, uſe all Care and Diligence that what thou haſt planted and ſown may thrive; and thou ſhalt ſee ſome Effect of thy Labours, and ſome Hopes of Succeſs. b The ſence of the Words thus rendred is this; But in the time of your grief, &c. or when this grievous Calamity ſhall come, all your Harveſt ſhall be but one Heap, which in it ſelf is very inconſiderable, and is eaſily carried away by your Enemies. But the Place is and may be otherwiſe rendred, and that very agreeably both to the Words and Order of the Hebrew Text; But the heap (or, heaps, the Singular Number being most commonly put for the Plural) of the harveſt (i.e. inſtead of thoſe Heaps of Corn which thou didſt expect, and which Men uſually reap in Harveſt) in the day or time (to wit, of the Harveſt; or, in the day of Calamity, of which I have ſpoken v. 4, 9. or, in a day, i.e. ſpeedily or ſuddenly) ſhall be (or, thou ſhalt have) grief and deſperate ſorrow. This ſhall be all thy Harveſt, and the Event of thy Labours.

‖ Or, many, or, noiſe.

12. ¶ Woe to the ‖ multitude of many people d, which make a noiſe like the noiſe of the ſeas e; and to the ruſhing of nations, that make a ruſhing like the ruſhing of ‖ mighty waters.

‖ Or, many.

c This is a new Prophecy, added for the preſent ſupport and comfort of God's People. d Combined together againſt Judah. It matters not whether you underſtand this of the Syrians and Iſraelites who were united againſt Judah, or of the Aſſyrians, whoſe Army conſiſted of vaſt numbers, and of men of ſeveral Nations. The following Words agree to either of them. e Which invade my Land and People with great force and fury, as the Sea doth, either in its own Channel, or when it enters into the Land by a Breach.

13. The nations ſhall ruſh like the ruſhing of many waters: but God ſhall rebuke them f, and they ſhall flee far off, and ſhall be chaſed as the chaff of the mountains before the wind, and like ‖ a rolling thing g before the whirlwind.

‖ Or, thiſtle-down.

f Not in Words, but Deeds; ſhall diſcomfit and overthrow them. g Which is eaſily moved by every ſleight touch, and much more by a violent Wind. Or, like a wiſp, to wit, of Straw, which is ſometimes rolled together.

14. And behold at evening-tide trouble, and before the morning he is not h: this is the portion of them that ſpoil us, and the lot of them that rob us i.

h At Even there is a great Terrour and Conſternation among God's People, for fear of their Enemies; and ere the Morning cometh, their Enemies are cut off by the Hand of God. This was literally and eminently fulfilled in the Deſtruction of Sennacherib's Army before Jeruſalem. Although the Words may be more generally underſtood of any great and ſudden Change, and unexpected Deliverance, granted to God's People, when their Enemies were ready to devour them. And this Place may be compared with that in Pſal. 30. 5. ——weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. i This is a triumphant Concluſion, uttered by the Prophet in the name of God's People.

CHAP. XVIII.

* Chap. 20. 4. Ezek. 30. 9. Zeph. 2. 12. & 3. 10.

WO to the land a ſhadowing with wings b, which is * beyond c the rivers d of Ethiopia e:

a Either, 1. of Arabia; or, 2. of Ethiopia beyond Egypt; or, 3. of Egypt, as ſome both ancient and later Interpreters judge; of whom he ſpeaks more darkly in this Chapter, and then explains himſelf more clearly in the next Chapter. But this Controverſie will be beſt determined by examining the following Deſcription. b The Title of wings is oft given, both in Scripture and in other Authors, unto divers things which have ſome general kind of reſemblance to Wings, as to the Battlements of an Houſe or Temple, as Matt. 4. 5. to the Skirts of a Garment, as Ruth 3. 9. and oft elſewhere; to an Army, as Iſa. 8. 8. Jer. 48. 40. & 49. 22. and to the Sails of a Ship, as this Word is here commonly underſtood, and as it is unqueſtionably uſed in other Authors. And ſhadowing with wings is nothing elſe but overſpread or filled with them. Which Title may be given either to Ethiopia or Egypt, in regard of the great numbers, either, 1. of their Armies; or rather, 2. of their Ships or Veſſels ſailing upon the Sea or Rivers: For, 1. in theſe they exceeded moſt of thoſe Nations who had Dealings with the Jews, whereas other Nations either equalled or exceeded them in numerous Armies: But they had an innumerable Company of Ships or Boats, not onely becauſe of the Commodiouſneſs of the River Nilus, and its many Branches, and the Red Sea, and the Midland Sea, for Navigation; but alſo becauſe of the frequent Overflowings of the River Nilus over their Land, which made them abſolutely neceſſary. 2. This beſt ſuits with the next Verſe. 3. Thoſe ancient and venerable Interpreters, the Seventy, and the Chaldee, who beſt underſtood the Hebrew Words and Phraſes, expound it ſo. c Or, on this ſide, as this Particle is rendred Numb. 21. 13. & 22. 1. and in many other places. Or, as others tranſlate it, beſides, which may comprehend both ſides; and ſo the Land of which he ſpeaks is ſuppoſed to be ſituated on both ſides of this River or Rivers; which is moſt true both of Egypt and of Ethiopia. d A late Learned Writer underſtands this of three or four Rivers of Arabia Chuſæa, whereof one flows into the Red Sea, another into the Midland Sea, and a third into a great Lake. Which being obſcure and very inconſiderable Rivers, and running in ſo diſtant Channels, it is not probable that this Land ſhould receive its Denomination from them. And therefore it ſeems more reaſonable to underſtand this of the great River Nilus, which comes from Ethiopia, and runs through the length of that Land, and through Egypt, into the Midland Sea; and which is here called rivers, in the Plural Number, as it is alſo Exod. 7. 19. Iſa. 7. 18. Ezek. 29. 3, 4. and, unqueſtionably, Nahum 3. 8. And ſo it might well be called, either for its Greatneſs, or for the many Rivulets that run into it, or for the various Streams or Channels into which it is divided; as Tigris, upon the ſame Reaſons, hath the ſame Title of rivers aſcribed to it, Nahum 2. 6. e Heb. of Cuſh. By which he ſeems to underſtand either, 1. Arabia, which in many places of Scripture comes under that name, though not in all places, as ſome Learned Men contend. Nor doth this Place ſeem to be underſtood here, becauſe theſe Rivers were not interpoſed between Judæa, in which Iſaiah wrote this Prophecy, and Arabia; nor were the Rivers of Arabia, mentioned before, interpoſed between Judæa and Egypt or Ethiopia: and beſides, thoſe Rivers were but ſmall and inconſiderable, and therefore, as was noted before, this Land, whatſoever it is, would not have been denominated from them, eſpecially when it is not properly ſituated either beyond them, or on this ſide of them. But if this Cuſh be Arabia, peradventure it were better to underſtand the rivers, or the river, as it was explained before, of the Red Sea, beyond which indeed both Egypt and Ethiopia were, in reference to Arabia. And whereas it may be objected, That the Title of river or rivers is very improperly given to the Sea, it may be fairly anſwered, That as Rivers are ſometimes called by the name of the ſea, as Euphrates is, Iſa. 21. 1. Jer. 51. 36. ſo this very Word here rendred river, is uſed concerning the Sea in the Hebrew Text, Jonah 2. 3. and indeed may not unfitly be given to the Red Sea, which both for its Length and Breadth hath a manifeſt reſemblance unto ſome large Rivers which are in the World. And ſo the Words may be very truly underſtood either of Egypt or of Ethiopia, both which Countries in this ſence are beyond the rivers or river of Arabia. But this I onely propoſe, and ſubmit to the Reader's Judgment. Or, 2. Ethiopia, properly ſo called: For the Cuſhites or Ethiopians are diſtinguiſhed by Herodotus, and divers other both ancient and later Writers, into the Eaſtern, which ſeem to be the Arabians, and the Weſtern, which ſeem to be the Ethiopians under Egypt. And it is probably thought, that theſe Cuſhites were firſt planted in Arabia, and, upon their increaſe, part of them paſſed over into Africa by croſſing the Red Sea, which was a very ſhort and an eaſie Paſſage, and ſetled there. And according to this Interpretation of the Word, the Deſcription of the Land given in the laſt Clauſe of this Verſe agrees either to Ethiopia, or to Egypt, as is evident from what hath been already ſaid for the clearing of this dark and difficult Verſe.

2. That ſendeth ambaſſadours f by the ſea g, even in veſſels of bulruſhes h upon the waters †, ſaying *, Go ye ſwift Meſſengers i to a nation ‖ ſcattered k and peeled l, to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto m; ‖ † a nation meted out n and trodden down o, ‖ whoſe land the rivers have ſpoiled p.

‖ Or, out-ſpread and poliſhed.

‖ Or, a nation that needeth out and treadeth down.

† Heb. a nation of line, line, and treading under foot.

‖ Or, whoſe land the rivers deſpiſe.

f That at this time are ſending Ambaſſadours, after their manner, to ſtrengthen themſelves with Leagues and Alliances, whereby they think to prevent thoſe Judgments and Calamities, which, notwithſtanding all their Endeavours, I will bring upon them. The firſt part of this Verſe ſeems to contain a further Deſcription of the People of the Land mentioned in the foregoing Verſe. g Either by the Midland Sea, or by the Red Sea, or by great Lakes which were both in and near the Land of Egypt; it being uſual among the Hebrews to give the Title of ſeas to Lakes, or any great Collections of Waters, as hath been oft obſerved before. h For both the Egyptians and Ethiopians, as Diodorus Siculus, and Strabo, and Pliny relate, did commonly uſe Boats of Ruſhes or Reeds, which were more convenient for them than thoſe of Wood, becauſe they were both cheaper, and ſwifter, and lighter for carriage from Place to Place; for which they had frequent occaſion in thoſe Parts: and ſafer, becauſe of the many Rocks, and Shelves, and Waterfalls of Nilus. † Heb. upon the face or ſurface of the waters. Which is properly expreſſed, becauſe ſuch Veſſels being very light, did not ſink ſo deep into the Waters as thoſe of Wood do. * This Word is ſupplied here, as it is in many other Places. And the Words here following are ſuppoſed to contain the Commiſſion and Direction given by the People hitherto deſcribed, unto their Meſſengers, to go to the People deſcribed in the following Words.

But

But this word, saying, is not in the Hebrew Text, nor is it supplied either by the LXX. or by the Chaldee: nor doth it seem necessary to be understood. And it seems very improbable, that the People to whom the Messengers were sent, should be described in such general and ambiguous terms, and in so large a manner, and not a word said concerning their Message. And therefore, with submission, I humbly conceive these to be the words of the Prophet, who having in God's Name pronounced a Wo against the Land hitherto described, here continues his Speech, and gives a Commission from God to these messengers following, to go to this nation scattered, &c. Then he calls to all Nations to be Witnesses of the Message sent by these Messengers, v. 3. And then the Message follows in the succeeding Verses. And so the coherence seems to be clear. i O you my Angels, or Men, whom I have appointed for this work, go speedily to them, and tell them what I am about to do with them, or inflict the following Judgment upon them. k Not by Banishment, but in their Habitations. Which agrees well to the Cushites or Ethiopians, both for the vastness of the Land inhabited by them, to wit, Ethiopia and Arabia, and for the manner of their Habitation, which is more scattered than that of other people. Or, these people may be called scattered prophetically, not that they were so, but that they should be so. Or, this word may be rendred, as it is in the Margin, and by some others, out-spread, or drawn out at length; which exactly suits to Egypt, which is much more extended in length than in breadth. l Either, 1. without hair; for so were the Ethiopians in a great measure, through the great heat of their Country: Or, 2. having their hair shaven or plucked off; for the word doth not signifie a natural want of hair, but a violent taking away of hair, as appears from Ezra 9. 3. Nehem. 13. 25. Isa. 50. 6. And this plucking or shaving of the hair is metaphorically used in Scripture to signifie some great calamity, whereby men are stripped of all their comforts, as Isa. 7. 20. and elsewhere. And this Title may be given to them prophetically, to signifie their future and approaching destruction. m Such were the Egyptians, and Ethiopians or Cushites, as appears both from Sacred and Profane Histories. And this may be here added as an aggravation of their impending miseries, that they who had been for a long time terrible to others, should now become a contemptible and wretched people. n Heb. of line line, i. e. meted out as it were with Lines to destruction; of which Phrase and Custom see 2 Sam. 8. 2. 2 Kings 21. 13. Psal. 60. 6. Isa. 34. 11. o By Divine Sentence, and to be trodden down by their Enemies. p Which may be taken either, 1. literally, because Egypt and Ethiopia were frequently overflowed by those two great Rivers Niger and Nilus; although that Overflow was rather an advantage to the Land, by making it fruitful, than a mischief: Or, 2. metaphorically and prophetically, of the Assyrians or Babylonians breaking in upon them like a River, and destroying their Land and People; of which see more on Ezek. 30. For powerful Enemies invading a Country, are oft compared to a River, as Isa. 8. 7, 8. & 59. 19. Jer. 46. 7, 8.

3. All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye q when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains, and when he bloweth a trumpet r, hear ye s.

q Take notice of what I say, and God will do. Or, Ye shall see it; you shall be Eye-witnesses of this dreadful Wo or Judgment which I am bringing upon the people of whom I have spoken. The Prophet doth in a manner summon all Nations to bear witness of his Prophecy, and of the accomplishment thereof. r When God shall gather together the Nations, as it were by the lifting up of an Ensign, or by the sound of a Trumpet, to execute his Judgments upon this people. Heb. as when a man lifts up an ensign upon the mountains, which men can easily see; and as when a man sounds a trumpet, they can hear: no less visible and manifest shall this Judgment of God be. s Ye shall hear it, as in the other Branch.

4. For so the LORD said unto me, I will take my rest t, and I will ‖ consider u in my dwelling-place x, like a clear heat ‖ upon herbs, and like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest y.

‖ Or, regard my set dwelling.

t I will sit still, and not bestir my self, either to help this People, or to hinder their Enemies. God is said in Scripture to rest, or sit still, when he doth not work on the behalf of a person or people; as, on the contrary, he is said to bestir himself, when he acts for them. u Or, I will contemplate, or look upon them, to wit, the people of whom I am here speaking. So it is only an Ellipsis of the Pronoun. Now God's looking in Scripture is variously used; sometimes in way of Favour and Mercy, as Psal. 25. 18. Isa. 66. 2, &c. and sometimes in a way of Anger and Judgment, as Exod. 14. 24. Psal. 25. 19. and, as I humbly conceive, in this place. I know some Learned men render this and the next words, I will look upon my dwelling-place, and interpret the place of God's gracious respect to his Church or People, to preserve and deliver it in the midst of all the Confusions and Combustions that happen in the World. Which Interpretation seems altogether unsuitable to the scope and business of the Chapter, which in all the foregoing and following Verses speaks of another sort of people, even of the Egyptians or Ethiopians, of whom therefore this Verse also must be understood, or otherwise we make a breach in the Context. x In Heaven, the place where God dwells, and where he is said to hear Prayers, 1 Kings 8. 30, 32. as here to consider men and things, as elsewhere he is said to hear and to look from heaven, as 2 Chron. 6. 21. Isa. 63. 15. the Hebrew Particles beth, in, and mem, from, being put promiscuously one for another, as hath been noted before. y The sence is, That God would look upon them, as the Sun with clear heat looks upon Herbs, &c. But this may be understood either, 1. in way of Mercy, as most take it: And so the sence is, That God would look out and shine forth upon his Church and People, and be as comfortable and refreshing to them, as the clear heat which shines upon the herbs: or, as others render it, after the rain, or, as a cloud of dew is in the heat of harvest: Or, 2. in way of Judgment: And so the sence is, That God would look upon them with as uncomfortable an influence as the Sun with a clear heat upon the herbs, which are scorched and killed by it; and as a cloud of the dew, which brings dew or rain, in the heat of harvest, when it is unwelcome and hurtful. And this sence seems best to agree with the following Verse, which continueth the Metaphor of an Harvest, and manifestly speaks not of refreshing, but of the destruction of the Fruits thereof.

5. For afore the harvest z, when the bud is perfect, and the sour grape is ripening in the flower a, he b shall both cut off the sprigs with pruning-hooks, and take away and cut down the branches c.

z Before they receive the end of their hopes, and finish the work which they have designed and begun. a When the Bud or Flower is turned into a perfect but unripe Grape, which gives hopes of a good Vintage. The Body of this People are compared to a Vine-tree. b The Lord, who is easily understood from the foregoing Verse, and who is here represented under the Notion of an Husbandman or Vine-dresser. c Instead of the gathering of Grapes, he shall cut down the Body and Branches of the Tree, and throw it into the fire.

6. They d shall be left together unto the fowls of the mountains, and to the beasts of the earth: and the fowls shall summer upon them, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them e.

d The Sprigs and Branches being cut down and thrown upon the ground, with the unripe Grapes upon them. e They shall lie upon the Earth neglected by men, as being unripe, and unfit for their use, so that either Birds or Beasts may shelter themselves with them, or feed on them, both Summer and Winter. You are not to understand that the Summer is appropriated to the Fowls, and the Winter to the Beasts; but this is only an Elegancy of the Hebrow Language, to use such distributions, of which we have many instances in prophetical Writings.

7. ¶ In that day f * shall there a present be brought unto the LORD of hosts of a people g ‖ scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the Name of the LORD of hosts, and mount Zion.

* Zeph. 3. 10.
‖ Or, out-spread and polished.

f Which is to be taken largely and indefinitely, as it is frequently in the Prophets, as we have already seen, and shall more fully see hereafter. At or after that time, when the Judgment threatned in the foregoing Verses shall be fully and compleatly executed, whereby that People will be awakened to Repentance. g The People of whom I am speaking shall present and offer themselves, and their Sacrifices, unto the true God. He speaks of their Conversion to God and Christ, by the Preaching of the Gospel; the accomplishment of which promise is recorded in the Histories of the Church.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIX.

* Jer. 46. 13. Ezek. 29. & 30.

* THE burden of Egypt a: Behold the LORD rideth b upon a swift cloud c, and shall come into Egypt, and the idols of Egypt shall be moved d at his presence, and the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it e.

a Some Learned men conceive, that what was said more generally and darkly in the foregoing Chapter, is here more particularly and clearly explained to be meant of Egypt; it being usual for the Prophets to mix obscure and plain passages together, and to clear the one by the other. Others understand that Chapter of Ethiopia, and this of Egypt. But this Controversie must be decided by an exact consideration of all the passages of the former Chapter. b As a General in the Head of his Army; or, as a Judge riding Circuit to execute Judgment. c Which Phrase sheweth, that the Judgment shall come speedily, unexpectedly, and unavoidably. And Clouds being very unusual in Egypt, the Appearance of a Cloud was a kind of Prodigy, and a Prognostick of some grievous Calamity. d From their Seats, and from their former Reputation. Or, shall shake or tremble. So far shall they be from helping the Egyptians, as they expect, that they shall tremble for themselves; which divers of the Egyptian Gods, being living Creatures, might properly do. e They shall lose all their ancient strength and courage, for which they had been famous formerly.

† Heb. mingle.

2. And I will † set the Egyptians against the Egyptians f; and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour; city against city, and kingdom against kingdom g.

f I will raise Civil Wars among them. g For although all Egypt was now one Kingdom, and under one King, yet not many years after this time it was divided into twelve several Kingdoms, between whom there were many and cruel Wars, as is related by the Historians of those Times, and particularly by Herodotus and Diodorus.

† Heb. shall be emptied. † Heb. swallow up.

3. And the spirit h of Egypt † shall fail in the midst thereof: and I will † destroy the counsel thereof: and they shall seek to the idols i, and to the charmers, and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizards.

h Either, 1. their Courage: But of that he spake v. 1. Or, 2. their Understanding, as it is explained in the next clause for the word spirit is oft put for the reasonable Soul, as Eccles. 3. 21. & 12. 7. and for the thoughts of the mind, as Prov. 29. 11. Ezek. 13. 3. i As not knowing what to do, without the help of an higher Power.

‖ Or, shut up.

4. And the Egyptians will I ‖ give over into the hand of a cruel lord, and a fierce king k shall rule over them, saith the LORD, the LORD of hosts.

k Either, 1. of the King of Assyria or Chaldæa; or, 2. of those twelve petty Kings, the Singular Number being put for the Plural; or, 3. of Psammeticus, who being at first one of those twelve Kings, waged War with the rest, and subdued them, and conquered all the Land of Egypt, and ruled it with rigour.

5. And the waters shall fail from the sea l, and the river m shall be wasted and dried up n.

l Which may be understood either, 1. Metaphorically, of the taking away of their Dominion or Commerce, &c. or rather, 2. Properly, as may be gathered from the following words and Verses. For as the River Nilus, when it had a full stream, and free course, did pour forth a vast quantity of waters by its seven famous Mouths into the Sea, so when that was dried up, which is expressed in the next clause, those waters did truly and properly fail from the Sea. So there is no need of understanding by sea either the River Nilus, or the great Lake of Mœris, which, after the manner of the Hebrews, might be so called. m To wit, Nilus, upon whose fulness and overthrow both the safety and the wealth of the Land depended, as all Authors agree; and therefore this was a very terrible Judgment. n Not totally, but in a very great measure, as such Phrases are commonly used.

6. And they shall turn the rivers far away o, and the brooks of defence p shall be emptied and dried up: the reeds and flags q shall wither r.

o Which is to be taken Impersonally, as such Expressions are very frequently, for, the rivers (those small Rivulets by which the waters of Nilus were conveyed and distributed into several parts of the Land) shall be turned far away, as they must needs be, when the great River Nilus, which fed them, was dried up. p The several Branches of the River Nilus, which were a great Defence to Egypt, as is well known. q Which were very useful to them for making their Boats, which were absolutely necessary in that Country, and divers other things. r As they commonly do for want of water.

7. The paper-reeds s by the brooks, by the mouth of the brooks, and every thing sown by the brooks t shall wither, be driven away, † and be no more.

† Heb. and shall not be.

s Which by a Needle, or other fit Instrument, were divided into thin and broad Leaves, which being dried and fitted, were used at that time for Writing, as our Paper is; and consequently was a very good Commodity. t And much more what was sown in more dry and unfruitful places.

8. The fishers also shall mourn u, and all they that cast angle into the brooks shall lament, and they that spread nets upon the waters shall languish.

u Because they could catch few or no Fish, by which Trade they got their Living. Which also was a great Plague to the People, whose common diet this was, because out of superstitious Conceits they killed and eat but few living Creatures, as appears both from Sacred and Profane Writers.

9. Moreover they that work in fine flax x, and they that weave ‖ net-work, shall be confounded.

‖ Or, white works.

x That make fine Linen, which was one of their best commodities; of which see 1 Kings 10. 28. Prov. 7. 16. Ezek. 27. 7.

10. And they shall be broken in the † purposes thereof y, all that make sluces and ponds † for fish.

† Heb. foundation. † Heb. of living things.

y (i. e.) Of Egypt, or of the Egyptians. They shall lose their ends and hopes; for the Fishes in them shall die for want of water.

11. ¶ Surely the princes of Zoan z are fools, the counsel of the wise counsellers of Pharaoh is become brutish a: how say ye unto Pharaoh b, I am the son of the wise c, the son of ancient kings d?

z The chief City, in which the King and Court frequently resided. See Psal. 78. 12. a Exceeding foolish, and destructive to themselves. b Why do you put such false and foolish words into Pharaoh's mouth? c Wisdom is hereditary and natural to me. This vain Opinion of himself they cherished by their flatteries, although he undid himself and his People by his folly. d He derides the Vanity of the Egyptians, who used to make great brags of the Antiquity of their Nation, and especially of their Kings, who, as they pretended, had reigned successively for above ten thousand years. Which number of years they made up by this Craft, by making those Successive Kings, which reigned together at the same time, in their several Nomi or Provinces.

12. Where are they? where are thy wise men e? and let them tell thee now, and let them know what the LORD of hosts hath purposed upon Egypt.

e Who pretended, that either by their deep Policy, or by their skill in Astrology or Magick, they could certainly foresee things to come.

13. The princes of Zoan are become fools, the princes of Noph f are deceived, they have also seduced Egypt, even ‖ † they that are the stay g of the tribes h thereof.

‖ Or, governors. † Heb. corn.

f Another chief City, and one of the King's Seats, so called called also Jer. 2. 16. & 44. 1. called also Moph in the Hebrew Text, Hos. 9. 6. and by other and later Authors, Memphis. g Heb. even the corner, or, the Corner-stone, which is the chief support of the Building. Whereby he may design either, 1. the King; or, 2. some eminent Statesman of that Age, upon whose Counsels both King and People depended; or, 3. their chief Counsellors, the Singular Number being here put collectively, as it is in many other places. h Of the Provinces, which he calls by a Title borrowed from the Hebrews, in whose Language he spake and wrote this Prophecy.

14. The LORD hath mingled i † a perverse spirit k in the midst thereof; and they have caused Egypt to err in every work thereof l, as a drunken man staggereth in his vomit m.

i Or, hath poured out, or given them to drink, as appears from their drunkenness, expressed in the end of the Verse. Which also suits with the Scripture-phrase, whereby a cup signifies God's Judgments, as Isa. 51. 17, 21, 22. Jer. 25. 15, &c. k Heb. a spirit of perversities or crookednesses; or, as the LXX. and Chaldee render it, of errour or delusion; a disposition of mind very apt to mistake, and to mislead them into foolish and crooked counsels and courses. Which God could easily effect, partly by laying occasions of stumbling in their way, and partly by withdrawing or darkning that wisdom which he had infused, by which alone men can discern their way. l In all their designs and undertakings. m When he is so excessively drunk, that he reels to and fro, and vomits up his drink.

15. Neither shall there be any work for Egypt; which * the head or tail, branch or rush may do n.

* Chap. 9. 14.

n All people, both high and low, shall be at their wits end, not knowing what to do.

16. In that day shall Egypt * be like unto women o: and it shall be afraid and fear, because * of the shaking of the hand of the LORD of hosts p, which he shaketh over it.

* Jer. 51. 30. Nah. 3. 13. * Zech. 2. 9.

o Feeble and fearful, as it follows. p Because they shall perceive that they do not fight with men only, but with the Lord of Hosts, who now lifts up his hand against them, as he did against their Forefathers, Exod. 14. the very remembrance whereof is very terrible to them.

17. And the land of Judah shall be a terrour unto Egypt q, every one that maketh mention thereof shall be afraid in himself; because of the counsel of the LORD of hosts, which he hath determined r against it s.

q Either, 1. because of Judah's calamities and desolations: For Judah was their Bulwark against the Assyrians and Babylonians; and when this Bulwark was removed, the Egyptians, their Neighbours and Confederates, had just cause to fear: Or, 2. because of their manifold both former and later injuries against Judah, for which they now apprehend that God is calling them to an account. Which Interpretation seems to be favoured by the following words; for their fear of mentioning Judah's Name seems to have proceeded partly from the sence of their guilt and miscarriages towards Judah, and partly from their apprehension and experience of the irresistible Power and Justice of the God of Judah, whom they had provoked, and who was now marching to plead his own and Judah's Cause against them. Compare Jer. 23. 34, &c. r Because God is now about to execute his appointed Judgments. s Against Egypt.

18. ¶ In that day t shall five cities u in the land of Egypt speak † the language of Canaan x, and swear to the LORD of hosts y; one z shall be called the city ‖ of destruction.

‖ Or, of Heres, or, of the sun.

t After that time, as this Phrase is used Isa. 4. 2. & 18. 7. and oft elsewhere. In the Times of the Gospel, which are oft noted in the Prophets by that very Expression. u A considerable number of their chief Cities, a certain number being put for an uncertain. x Profess the Jewish Religion, agree with them in the same mind; which is fitly signified by speaking the same Language, because out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Thus the changing and purifying of a People's Lip, is used to signifie the change of their Hearts and Lives, Zeph. 3. 9. and praising God with one Mouth, to note their Unity or Consent in the Faith, Rom. 15. 6. y It is well observed by some Learned Interpreters, that he doth not say, swear by the Lord, which is the most common Phrase, and which, being one eminent Part and Act of Worship, is put for the whole, but swear to the Lord; which Phrase is also used 2 Chron. 15. 14. Psal. 132. 2. Isa. 45. 23. and it implies the Dedication, or Oblation, and yielding up of a Person or Thing to the Lord, by a solemn Vow, or Covenant, or Oath, as appears by the places now quoted. In like manner God is said to swear to a man, Deut. 26. 15. and one man to another, Gen. 21. 23. when they oblige themselves by Oath to do such or such a thing for them. And therefore what is called swearing to God, Isa. 45. 23. is rendred or expounded bowing the knee (which signifies the subjection of a man's self) to God, and confessing to God, Rom. 14. 11. z Not one of the five, for they are supposed to be saved in the foregoing clause; but one City, or another City, the sixth City. As divers Cities shall be converted and saved, so some other Cities shall continue in their impenitency, and be destroyed. Others render this clause thus, One of them shall be called (or, shall be; for, to be called is oft put for to be) the city of the sun; or, as the Gracians call it, Heliopolis; which the Egyptians called On, Gen. 41. 45. which was a very eminent City, and a chief Seat of Idolatry, being a City of Priests, as Strabo reports; and therefore its Conversion to the Faith was more wonderful.

19. In that day shall there be an altar a to the LORD in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar b at the border thereof c to the LORD.

a For God's Worship; not a Levitical, but a Spiritual and Evangelical Altar, as appears from hence, because that was confined to one place, Deut. 12. 13, 14. The altar is put for the Worship of God, as it is in many places both of the Old and New Testament. And nothing is more common in the Prophets than to speak of Gospel-worship in the Phrases of the Law. b A Monument of the True Religion. Here also he alludes to the ancient Custom of erecting Pillars to God; of which see Gen. 12. 7. & 28. 18, &c. Jos. 22. 10. & 24. 26, 27. c As before, in the midst of it. The meaning is, There shall be Evidences of their Piety in all places.

20. And * d it shall be for a sign, and for a witness unto the LORD e of hosts in the land of Egypt: for they shall cry unto the LORD because of the oppressors f, and he shall send them a Saviour and a great one g, and he shall deliver them.

* See Jos. 4. 20, 21. & 22. 27.

d The Altar or Pillar last mentioned. e To testifie that they own the Lord for their God. f Being sorely distressed, and finding the weakness of their Idols, they shall turn unto the True God. g A great and mighty Saviour, by a common Figure called Hendiadys, as a cloud and smoak is put for a smoakie cloud, Isa. 4. 5. or, a Saviour and a Prince, even Christ, who is so called Acts 5. 31. as is evident from the whole Context, which apparently speaks of Gospel-times. And the emphatical Phrase here used, directed them to look for an extraordinary Saviour.

21. And the LORD shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the LORD h in that day, and shall do sacrifice and oblation i, yea, they shall vow a vow unto the LORD, and perform it k.

h Shall acknowledge, and love, and serve them; for words of Knowledge in Scripture commonly include Affection and Practice, as hath been often observed. i Shall worship God spiritually; which yet is signified by Typical Phrases, as it is Mal. 1. 11. and in many other places. k They shall not only profess and promise piety, but shall seriously and diligently practise it.

22. And the LORD shall smite Egypt, he shall smite and heal it l, and they shall return even to the LORD, and he shall be intreated of them, and shall heal them.

l God will afflict them by Oppressors, v. 20. and otherwise; and by those Afflictions he will convert and save them.

23. ¶ In that day * shall there be a high-way out of Egypt to Assyria, and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria m, and the Egyptians shall serve n with the Assyrians.

* Chap. 11. 16.

m They who were implacable Enemies one to another, and both to the Church and People of God, shall now be reconciled and united together in the Service of God, and

Love

Love to his Church. n To wit, the Lord; who is eaſily underſtood from v. 21. & 25.

24. In that day ſhall Iſrael be the third o with Egypt, and with Aſſyria p, even a bleſſing q in the midſt of the land r:

o The third Party, to wit, in that ſacred League, whereby all of them oblige themſelves to God. p Theſe People are named, becauſe they were the moſt obſtinate and malicious Enemies to God's Church, and therefore in a ſpecial manner accurſed by God; but they are here put Synecdochically for all the Gentiles. q This is peculiar to Iſrael, who is not only a third Party, as the others are, but is the moſt eminent and bleſſed of the three, as being the Fountain, or rather the Conduit-pipe, by which the Bleſſing is conveyed to the other two, becauſe Chriſt was to be born of them, and the Goſpel-Church and Ordinances were firſt eſtabliſhed among them, and from them derived to the Gentiles. r Or, of the earth. Which may be added, to imply, that God's Bleſſing ſhould be conveyed from and by Iſrael, not only to the Egyptians and the Aſſyrians, but to all the Nations of the Earth, in the midſt of which the Land of Iſrael might well be ſaid to lie. Or, of that land, of which I am here ſpeaking; or, the Singular Number being put for the Plural, of thoſe lands, Egypt and Aſſyria, between which Iſrael lay.

25. Whom the LORD of hoſts ſhall bleſs s, ſaying, Bleſſed be Egypt my people t, and Aſſyria the work of my hands, and Iſrael mine inheritance.

s Whom, i.e. which People, to wit, Iſrael, Egypt, and Aſſyria, expreſſed both in the foregoing Verſe, and in the following clauſe of this Verſe; of whom he ſpeaks as of one People, in the Singular Number, becauſe they are all united into one Body and Church. Or, For, or, Becauſe (as this Particle is taken 1 Sam. 15. 15. and elſewhere) the Lord of hoſts ſhall bleſs him or them. So this is added as a Reaſon why he ſaid, Iſrael ſhould be a Bleſſing to them all. t This Title, and thoſe which follow, that were peculiar to the People of Iſrael, ſhall now be given to theſe and all other Nations of the World.

CHAP. XX.

* 2 Kings 18. 17. IN the year that * Tartan a came unto Aſhdod b, (when Sargon c the king of Aſſyria ſent him) and fought againſt Aſhdod and took it:

a A great Commander in Sennacherib's Army, 2 Kings 18. 17. b An eminent and ſtrong City of the Philiſtins, Joſ. 13. 3. 1 Sam. 5. 1. in the utmoſt part of the Land of Canaan, towards Egypt. c What King of Aſſyria this was, is much diſputed. It is well known, and confeſſed, that one and the ſame perſon hath frequently ſeveral names, both in Scripture, as hath been obſerved again and again, and in other Authors. And therefore this may be either, 1. Salmaneſer, who, when he took Samaria, might alſo by Tartan take this place; or, 2. Sennacherib, who, before he came to Jeruſalem, came up againſt and took all the fenced cities of Judah, 2 Kings 18. 13. of which Aſhdod might be reckoned one, as being in the Tribe of Judah, Joſ. 13. 3. & 15. 47. and taken by Hezekiah from the Philiſtins, as it ſeems very probable from that paſſage, 2 Kings 18. 8. He ſmote the Philiſtins even unto Gaza, and the borders thereof, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city. Or, 3. Eſarhaddon, Sennacherib's Son, who, by cutting off the firſt Letter, is called Sarchedon, Tobit 1. 21. and thence poſſibly, by abbreviation, Sargon: Who might do this thing in Hezekiah's time, ſome years after his Father's death, and his coming to the Empire, although it be not recorded in Scripture: For no man doubts that there were many great Actions in thoſe Times, which are wholly omitted in the Sacred Writings.

† Heb. by the hand of Iſaiah. 2. At the ſame time ſpake the LORD † by Iſaiah the ſon of Amoz, ſaying, Go, and looſe d the ſackcloth e from off thy loins f, and put off thy ſhoe from thy foot: And he did ſo, * walking naked g and bare-foot h.

* Mic. 1. 8, 11.

d Ungird it and put it off; the Anteceedent put for the Conſequent, which is very uſual, as hath been often noted. God would ſometimes have his Prophets to add to their word a viſible Sign to awaken peoples minds to a more ſerious conſideration of the matters propoſed to them. e Either, 1. his courſe and hairy garment, which the Prophets uſed to wear, 2 Kings 1. 8. Zech. 13. 4. as many underſtand it. But that is expreſſed by another word in the places quoted, and never, to my knowledge, by this word: Or, 2. his mournful habit, which was commonly made of ſackcloth, and which he wore in token of his hearty grief for the great calamities which were already come upon Iſrael, and were either come or coming upon Judah. f Upon which the upper Garments were commonly girt, 1 Kings 20. 32. 2 Kings 9. 1. g Not wholly naked, which had been indecent and ſcandalous, and withal very dangerous, at leaſt to do ſo for three years, as he did, v. 3. but without his upper Garment, as ſlaves and priſoners uſed to do, whoſe poſture he was to repreſent, v. 4. And ſo the word naked is uſed, 1 Sam. 19. 24. 2 Sam. 6. 20. Joh. 21. 7. Thus alſo men are ſaid to be naked when they are ill-clothed, as Job 22. 6. Mat. 25. 36. 1 Cor. 4. 11. James 2. 15. h After the manner of Mourners, 2 Sam. 15. 30. and Captives, Jer. 2. 25.

3. And the LORD ſaid, Like as my ſervant Iſaiah hath walked naked and bare-foot three years i for a ſign k and wonder upon Egypt, and upon Ethiopia:

i Not conſtantly, but when he went abroad among the People, to whom this was appointed for a Sign. Some think it was only three days, a day being uſually put for a year in Prophetical Scriptures, as Numb. 14. 33, 34. Ezek. 4. 4, 5, 6. But although a day be put for a year, yet a year is never put for a day. k Either, 1. when this Judgment ſhould come; to wit, three years after this Prophecy. Or, 2. how long it ſhould continue; for three years: For ſome have obſerved that the Chaldeans ſpent ſo much time in conquering Egypt and Ethiopia.

4. So ſhall the king of Aſſyria lead away l † the Egyptians priſoners, and the Ethiopians captives, young and old, naked and bare-foot, even with their buttocks uncovered m to the † ſhame of Egypt.

l Like Beaſts, of which this word is commonly uſed. m Having their Garments cut off by the middle, to the diſcovery of their Buttocks and their Secret parts. Compare 2 Sam. 10. 4. Iſa. 47. 2.

5. And they n ſhall be afraid and aſhamed of Ethiopia their expectation, and of Egypt their glory.

n All they that ſhall truſt to them, and glory in them, as appears from the following words, the Pronoun they being put Indefinitely here, as it is Iſa. 2. 19. and elſewhere. But under this general expreſſion the Iſraelites not only are comprehended, but ſeem to be principally intended, becauſe to them this Prophecy was delivered, and they were eminently guilty of this ſin; of which ſee Iſa. 30. 2. & 31. 1.

6. And the inhabitants of this ‖ iſle o ſhall ſay in that day, Behold, ſuch is our expectation p whither we flee for help q, to be delivered from the king of Aſſyria: and how ſhall we eſcape r?

o Of this Land, in which the Prophet was, and to whoſe Inhabitants theſe words were uttered. For the Title of Iſles or Iſlands in Scripture is frequently given not only to Lands encompaſſed with the Sea, but alſo to ſuch Countries, as lay upon the Sea-Coaſts, as Pſal. 72. 10. Ezek. 26. 15, 18. as Paleſtina or Canaan did, yea to ſuch Countries as are remote or ſeparated from that place in or of which the words are ſpoken, as Eſth. 10. 1. Iſa. 24. 15. & 42. 4, 10, &c. as Canaan was from Egypt, or at leaſt from Ethiopia. Add to this, that Canaan had ſome reſemblance with an Iſle, either becauſe it was almoſt encompaſſed with the Midland Sea on one ſide, and with the Dead Sea, and the Sea of Galilee or Tiberias and Jordan on the other ſide; or becauſe, as Iſles are ſeparated from other Lands by the Sea, ſo this Land and People were ſeparated from all the reſt of the World by God's ſpecial Providence, and Preſence, and Worſhip. p So vain is our hope placed upon ſuch a People as are unable to deliver themſelves, and much more to deliver us. q To whom we now and uſually truſt, for this was the common diſeaſe of the People of Iſrael, although Hezekiah was in a good meaſure free from it, as we read 2 Kings 18. 5. r Either by their help, who cannot defend themſelves; or, by our own ſtrength; ſeeing they who were much more potent than we are, could not eſcape.

CHAP. XXI.

THE burden of the desert of the sea a. As * whirlwinds in the south b pass through c, so it d cometh from the desert e, from a terrible land f.

* Zech. 9. 14.

a Of Babylon, as is evident both from her destroyers, the Medians, v. 2. and especially from v. 9. where she is named. She seems to be called Desert Prophetically, to intimate, that although she was now a most Popular City and Kingdom, yet shortly she should be turned into a Desolate Wilderness, as was threatned ch. 13. 19, &c. But the Word here rendred Desert sometimes signifies a Plain, as a very learned Interpreter hath observed, and thus it most properly agrees to Babylon and the Land about it, which Geographers note to be a very plain Country, without any Considerable Mountains in it. It is called the Desert of the Sea, because it is situate by the Sea, as the Isles of the Sea, Esth. 10. 1. are those Countries which were beside the Sea. And the Title of the Sea might well be given to the Waters of Babylon, because of the great plenty and multitude of them, the great Channel of Euphrates, and the several lesser Chanels cut out, and the vast Lakes of Water; in which respects it is said to sit upon many waters, Jer. 51. 13. the Name of sea being given by the Hebrews to every great Collection of Waters. b In those Parts which lay Southward from Judea, where there were many and great Desarts, in which the Winds have greater force. See Job 1. 19. Jer. 4. 11. c As meeting with no stop or opposition. d The Burden or Judgment. Or, he, the Median, as it is in the next Verse. e From Media and Persia; thus expressed, either because those Countries were full of Desarts, or because a great Desart lay between them and Chaldæa, as Geographers and Historians report. f From the Medes, a warlike and formidable People, as appears both from Sacred and Prophane Writers.

2. A † grievous vision g is declared unto me, the treacherous dealer dealeth treacherously, and the spoiler spoileth h: * Go up i, O Elam k, Besiege l, O Media; all the sighing thereof m have I made to cease

* Chap. 13. 17.

g A Vision or Prophecy, containing dreadful Calamities which were to fall upon Babylon. h This is spoken either, 1. of the Chaldeans, as their Sin, for which God sends the following Judgment: So the sence is, The Chaldeans still persist in the Practice of Treachery and Rapine, to which they have been so long accustomed: Or, 2. of the Medes and Persians, who are here noted to pay the Babylonians in their own Coin, and to use the same Treachery and Violence towards them, which they had done to others. To which purpose the Words are and may well be rendred otherwise, either thus, The treacherous dealer hath found a treacherous dealer, and the spoiler hath found a spoiler: or thus, O thou that dealest treacherously with the treacherous dealer, and that spoilest the spoiler, go up, O Elam, &c. as it followeth. These Words will be much illustrated by comparing them with Isa. 33. 1. There is no doubt to be made, but the Medes and Persians used Treachery as well as Force against Babylon: And besides other Instances now unknown, we have one upon Record, of their entertaining those two Traytors, Gadatas and Gobrias, and following their Counsel and Conduct in taking the City, which made them Partakers of their Treason. i To fight against her. These are God's Words, either giving them Command and Commission to do so, or rather foretelling what they would do; which is oft done in this form of Speech. k Persia, called Elam Synecdochically, because Elam was an eminent Province of Persia, bordering upon the Medes. l To wit, Babylon, v. 9. m Either, 1. Babylon's sighing, which shall cease, because they shall have no time to sigh, or lament their Miseries, being suddenly surprised, and cut off in a moment, as they were. As God is said to seek out the wickedness of wicked men till he find none, Psal. 10. 15. when he utterly destroyeth them in or with their Sins: Or, 2. the sighing and groanings of God's People, and other Nations under the heavy Oppressions of that potent and cruel Empire; the Pronoun her, or thereof, being taken here not passively, as commonly it is; but actively, or efficiently, as sometimes it is, as Deut. 11. 25. your fear, i. e. the fear of you; and Job 33. 7. my terrour, i. e. the terrour or dread of me upon thee.

3. Therefore are my loins n filled with pain; pangs have taken hold upon me, as the pangs of a woman that travelleth o: I was † bowed down at the hearing of it, I was dismayed at the seeing of it.

n Which he mentions with respect to the following Similitude of child-bearing, in which the loins are sorely pained. And this the Prophet speaks, either 1. in the Name and Person of the Babylonian. Or rather, 2. in his own Name; which is most natural, and agrees best with the last clause of the Verse, which plainly speaks of the torment which he had in the meer hearing of the Word, and seeing the Vision, and not of that which they had in the feeling of it; although the latter is implied in the former; and the Prophet expresseth his horrour in hearing and seeing, to intimate the dreadful horrour which should seize upon them when it came upon them. o Sharp and grievous pains.

4. ‖ My heart panted, fearfulness affrighted me: the night of my pleasure p hath he q † turned into fear r unto me.

‖ Or, my mind wandred.

p The night, in which I used to have a sweet Repose and Sleep. He seems to have had this Vision in a night. But withal this horrour of the Prophet by night was Typical, and did signifie that grievous horrour and destruction, which should befal the Babylonians in a night of great Feasting and Jollity, as it did Dan. 5. 1, 30. q God, who shewed him that Vision. r Into a time and matter of fear.

5. Prepare the table s, watch in the watch-tower t, eat, drink: arise, ye Princes u, and anoint the shield x.

s Furnish it with Meats and Drinks, as it follows. The Prophet foretels what the Babylonians would be doing when their Enemies were at their Doors, that they would give up themselves to Feasting and Security. t To give us notice of any approaching danger, that in the mean time we may more securely indulge our selves in Mirth and Pleasures. u Either, 1. ye Medes and Persians: Whilst your Enemies the Babylonians are feasting securely, prepare to make your Assault. Or, 2. ye Princes of Babylon: Arise from the Table and run to your Arms. Which sudden alarm and change of their Posture proceeded from Tidings out of the Watch-tower, as may be gathered from the former Clause, and is more fully expressed in the following Verses. x Prepare your selves and your Arms for the Battel approaching: The shield is put for all their weapons of Offence and Defence. They used to Anoint their Shields with Oyl, partly to preserve and polish them; and partly to make them slippery, that their Enemies Darts might not fasten in them, but slide off from them.

6. For thus hath the Lord said unto me y, Go, set a watchman z, let him declare a what he seeth.

y I speak not my own fancies, but what God hath made me to see and hear in a Vision; the Particulars whereof are related in the following Verses. z Either, 1. a Prophet; such being oft so called, as Ezek. 3. 17. & 33. 2. Or rather, 2. a Military Watchman. For this was now done onely in a Vision, which yet did foresignifie what should be done really afterwards. a To thee in Vision, to them Really.

7. And he saw b a chariot c with a couple of horse men d, a chariot of asses and a chariot of camels e; and he hearkned diligently f with much heed.

b A short Speech, for, He told me that he saw. c Not for Burden, but for War, in which Chariots were then much used. d Attended with two Horse-men. So there were both Chariots and Troops of Horse-men. Or, with a couple of horses, as this Word is sometimes used, as 1 Sam. 8. 11. 2 Sam. 1. 6. The Chariot was drawn with two Horses. e Two Chariots, one drawn by Asses, (under which Title some understand Mules, as being engendred of Asses) and the other by Camels. Whereby he signifies the Variety and Abundance of Warlike Provisions which the Medes and Persians should have for this Expedition, and particularly of Chariots, whereof some were for the Carriage of Necessary Things, and others for the Battel. f He carefully observed what he saw, and what he could further discover.

8. And he ‖ cried, A lion g: my lord h, I stand continually upon the * watch-tower in the day-time, and I am set in my ward ‖ whole nights i.

‖ Or, cried as a lion.
* Hab. 2. 1.
‖ Or, every night.

g The sence of the Words thus rendred is this, The Watchman cried out, I see also a Lion, to wit, marching before the Horsemen and Chariots already mentioned: which they suppose to represent Cyrus or Darius marching in the Head of their Armies. h Or, as it is rendred in the Margin, and by divers others, he cried as (which Particle is oft understood, understood, as hath been formerly and frequently noted) a lion, with a terrible Cry, as being affrighted with the Vision, and withal signifying the dreadfulness of that Judgment which was here represented as coming upon Babylon. h The Watchman speaks these words either to God, or to the Prophet, who by command from God had set him in this place and station; to whom therefore he gives the following account of his discharge of the work wherewith he was intrusted. i According to thy command I have stood, and do yet stand continually, both day and night, upon my Watch-Tower.

9. And behold k, here cometh a chariot of men l, with a couple of horsemen m: and he n answered and said, * Babylon is fallen, is fallen: and all the * graven images of her gods o he p hath broken unto the ground.

* Jer. 51. 8. Rev. 14. 8. & 18. 2.
* Chap. 46. 1. Jer. 50. 2. & 51. 44.

k The summ of what I have discovered is this. l Not filled with Goods, as Chariots of Burden use to be; but provided with men, to fight from or with them. m Understand, and a chariot of asses, and a chariot of camels; which is easily understood from v. 7. where they are expressed. n The Prophet Isaiah, who set the Watchman; or the Lord, by whose command he was set, v. 6. who here gives an Explication of the Vision. o Which is mentioned as an Evidence that she was fully conquered, because otherwise they would not have suffered their Idols to have been thrown to the ground. p God, by the hands of Cyrus, his Instrument. Or, it is an indefinite Speech, he hath broken, &c. for they are broken, &c.

† Heb. son.

10. O my threshing q, and the † corn of my floor r: that which I have heard of the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, have I declared s unto you t.

q Threshing is here put for the Corn threshed, as it is explained in the following words, the Act being frequently put for the Object, as captivity for the Captives, fear for the thing feared, &c. as hath been noted before. And the Corn threshed is here metaphorically put for People sorely afflicted and punished, which is oft expressed by Threshing, as Isa. 25. 10. & 41. 15. Mic. 4. 13, &c. This is spoken either, 1. of the Jews, to whom he now turneth his Speech, whom God did grievously thresh and afflict by the Babylonians, and whom he here comforts with these Tidings, as if he had said, Though thou wilt be threshed first, yet Babylon shall be threshed last, and most dreadfully, and their Threshing shall be thy deliverance. This Interpretation is thought necessary, because of the latter clause of the Verse, wherewith this is to be joined. Or, 2. of Babylon. O my threshing: or, thou art my threshing, whom I have undertaken to thresh and punish. And so this is fitly mentioned here, to assure them that this Prophecy of Babylon's Fall must necessarily be accomplished, because the Almighty was engaged in the work. And this Interpretation seems not to be inconsistent with the rest of the Verse, as we shall see. r The Corn which I will cause to be threshed upon the floor. Heb. the son of my floor. For the Title of son is oft given to liveless things, as Arrows are called the sons of the bow, or of the quiver, Job 5. 7. & 41. 28, &c. s What I have foretold is not my own invention, but the Word of God, and therefore shall infallibly come to pass. t Either, 1. unto you my People, or Hearers; for all the Prophecies, even concerning other Nations, were published to them, and for their use and comfort: Or, 2. unto (or, concerning, as this Hebrew Particle is sometimes used, as the Learned know) you Babylonians, to whom this was in some sort declared, because it was published amongst the Jews, and by their means might easily come to the knowledge of other People, and consequently of the Babylonians. Nor is it unusual for the Prophets, in their Prophecies delivered to God's People concerning Babylon, by an Apostrophe to turn their Speech to the Babylonians themselves; of which we have instances, Jer. 50. 24, 31. & 51. 13, 14, 25, 26.

11. ¶ The burden of Dumah u. He x calleth to me y out of Seir z, Watchman a, what of the night b? watchman, what of the night c?

u Either, 1. of a part of Arabia, so called from Dumah, one of Ismael's Race, Gen. 25. 14. 1 Chron. 1. 30. Or rather, 2. of Edom or Idumea, as seems most probable from the mention of Mount Seir, which was a part of Edom; which may be here called Dumah, either by an abbreviation, or cutting off the first Letter from Idumea, as Ram is put for Aram, 1 Chron. 2. 9. Job 32. 2. or rather prophetically and sarcastically; for Dumah signifies silent: Whereby he intimates, That Edom, which was much given to vain boasting and railing against God, and against his People, as we read elsewhere, should be brought to silence and utter ruine. And such new, and enigmatical, and significant Names are elsewhere given by the Prophets to divers known places, as Babylon is called Sheshach, Jer. 25. 26. and Egypt, Mazer, Mic. 7. 12, &c. x To wit, Dumah, or the People of Dumah, of whom he speaks, or one of them in the name and by the appointment of the rest. y To the Watchman, as appears by the following words: For the Prophet delivers his Prophecy in the form of a Dialogue between the People and the Watchman. z Out of Edom, which is frequently called Seir, as Gen. 32. 3. & 36. 8. 2 Chron. 20. 20, &c. & 25. 11. a Whereby he means either, 1. the Prophet Isaiah, whom they call Watchman, either seriously, or in scorn, because the Prophets were so called by God, and by the People of the Jews: Or, 2. the Watchman of Edom, whom they had set as people use to do in times of great danger. b The night is taken either, 1. metaphorically, for a time of tribulation: So they ask the Prophet what he hath to say concerning that Night of Calamity which he had so long and oft threatned to them, whereof as yet they saw no appearance: Or, 2. properly; the night being the proper and chief time in which the Watchman's care is most necessary, because then their Enemies had opportunity to do them most harm. So the people are supposed to come to him very early in the morning, to inquire what hath hapned in the night; which shews a state of great perplexity and fear: which might well be called a burden, both because fear in it self is a great torment, and because this fear was a sign and presage of their approaching miseries. c The repetition of the same words, shews the greatness of their solicitude and fear.

12. The watchman said, The morning cometh, and also the night d: if ye will enquire, enquire ye: return, come e.

d The night is past without any great mischief to you, and the comfortable light of the morning is approaching, which freeth mens minds from the terrours of the night; but although the morning be coming, it will be gone, and the night will return, and your fears with it. The night seems to be here taken properly, as the morning is; yet so, that he alludes to the Metaphorical signification of the word, and intimates, that the night of affliction was coming upon them. e If this Watchman be the Prophet Isaiah, then the sence of these words is this, If you will be enquiring, enquire sincerely and seriously of God, by me, concerning your danger, and the way to prevent it; return unto the Lord by true Repentance, who alone can secure you, and come unto me for direction. But if it be their own Watchman, which, with submission, I conceive most probable, the sence is, If you will enquire, enquire; I perceive, by what I have observed this night, that your danger is not past, and there will be occasion for further Enquiries from time to time; and therefore return, come, i. e. either return to them that sent you with this Message, and then come to me for further Tidings; or, come again, as return, lie down, is put for lie down again, 1 Sam. 3. 5. come to me the next morning, as you have reason to do, and so from morning to morning; for I see every night is likely to bring some evil Tidings to you.

CHAP. XXII.

THE burden of the valley of Viſion a. What aileth thee now, that thou art wholly gone up to the houſe tops b?

a Of Judah; and eſpecially of the City of Jeruſalem, as the next Verſe ſheweth. Which is called a valley, becauſe a great part of it ſtood in a Valley, and comparatively to thoſe higher Mountains wherewith it was encompaſſed; of which ſee Pſal. 121. 1. & 125. 2. Iſa. 52. 7. and the valley of viſion, becauſe of the many and clear Viſions or Revelations of God's Mind, in that Place, above all other Parts of the World. As the Prophets are called ſeers, 1 Sam. 9. 9. ſo Prophecy is frequently called viſion, as 1 Sam. 3. 1. Iſa. 1. 1. Ezek. 7. 13, 26. b As they uſed to do in times of great Confuſion and Conſternation, that they might mourn, and look, and cry to Heaven for Help. Compare Iſa. 15. 3. Jer. 48. 38.

2. Thou art full of ſtirs c: a tumultuous d city, a joyous city: thy ſlain men are not ſlain with the ſword, nor dead in battel e.

c Or, Thou who waſt full of ſtirs, or noiſes, to wit, of joyful Shouts, as the following Words limit it, and as this Word is uſed Zech. 4. 7. though elſewhere it be taken for doleful Cries. d Or, ſtreperous, full of noiſe and clamour, through Revelling and Jollity. See Prov. 20. 1. Zech. 9. 15. e But either by Famine or Peſtilence in the Siege, as many died, Jer. 14. 18. & 38. 2. or in their Flight, as others were; both which were inglorious kinds of Death.

But this Word is by ſome, and may very well be joyned to the foregoing Clauſe; for the Words in the Hebrew lie thus, All thy rulers are fled together from the bow (or, bowmen, as this Word is rendred, Iſa. 21. 17.) they are bound. Which ſeems moſt plain and unforced, and ſuits beſt with the following Words, as alſo with the Prophet's uſe of the ſame Phraſe, ch. 21. 15. they fled——from the bent bow, &c. h That remaineth there with Zedekiah in the Siege; for thoſe who had fled to the Chaldeans ſaved their Lives and Liberties. i In Fetters, Jer. 52. 11. k Which fled to Jeruſalem from the remoteſt parts of the Land.——But he rather ſpeaks of thoſe who fled from Jeruſalem, and from their Enemies, whereof ſome had fled away, but were purſued and overtaken by their Enemies, and bound, as others had been. And the Words ſeem to be well rendred, they fled far away, as this very Word is uſed Iſa. 23. 7. which may be underſtood either of the ſame Perſons who fled, but were taken in their Flight, as was now ſaid; or of others, who fled away, when others abode there and were bound.

And it is uſual in Scripture for the Pronoun Relative to be put by it ſelf, without any expreſs mention of the Perſon or Thing to which it belongs, which is left to the Reader to gather out of the foregoing or following Words; of which ſee the Notes on Pſal. 87. 1. Cant. 1. 1. o Heb. the former, or framer of it, God, who made it a City, and the Place of his ſpecial Preſence and Worſhip: which alſo he had undertaken to protect, if the People would obſerve his Commands; to whom therefore they ſhould have reſorted and truſted in this time of their diſtreſs. p Which Clauſe may be added to aggravate their Sin, in diſtruſting that God who had now for a long time given proof of his Care and Kindneſs in defending this City.

A moſt perverſe and deſperate Concluſion, proceeding from obſtinate Profaneneſs, and Contempt of God's Judgments.

14. And it was revealed in mine ears u, by the LORD of hoſts, ſurely this iniquity ſhall not be purged from you, till ye die x, ſaith the Lord GOD of hoſts.

u What I am ſaying is not my own Invention, nor uncertain Reports; but what I heard with theſe Ears of mine. The like phraſe we have 1 Sam. 9. 15. the Lord had told Samuel in his ear. x You ſhall feel the ſad Effects of this wickedneſs, and my juſt diſpleaſure for it, as long as you live. This is not ſpoken excluſively, as if it ſhould be purged after their death, which is abſurd and impious to imagine, at leaſt concerning ſuch as lived and died in this deſperate and impenitent Condition; but emphatically, to ſhew that God would have no mercy upon them in that time of Life, in which he uſeth and delighteth to give Repentance and Remiſſion of Sins unto Mankind.

For the Jews ſay, he was a Stranger by Birth; which is the more probable, becauſe his Pedigree is not mentioned in any of thoſe places of Scripture where he is named. d As great and ambitious Men uſed to do. e Not in thine own Country, the proper place for ſuch a Monument; but in Jeruſalem, which ſhould not be defiled nor diſparaged with it. f In an high and eminent place, as Iſa. 57. 7. g Either, 1. a Sepulchre, which is called a man's houſe, Job 30. 23. or, 2. a Dwelling-houſe. He erected, or is compared to one that doth erect, a ſtately Houſe to live in, and a ſtately Sepulchre to receive him when he dies. And theſe two are fitly joined together, becauſe their Sepulchres were commonly built in or near their Houſes. See Iſa. 14. 18. Joh. 19. 41. h A fit place both for Strength and State. Thus we read of a ſepulchre hewed out in a rock, Matt. 27. 60.

17. Behold, ‖ the LORD will carry thee away with † a mighty captivity i, and will ſurely cover thee k.

‖ Or, the LORD who covered thee with an excellent covering, and clothed thee gorgeouſly, ſhall ſurely, &c.
† Heb. the captivity of a man.

i Will cauſe thee to be carried into Captivity by a ſtrong Hand, or by the Hand of a mighty man, from which therefore thou ſhalt not be able to eſcape. Or, will caſt thee away with the caſting of a mighty man, i.e. with great force: or, in caſting will caſt thee away, O thou mighty man. k To wit, with confuſion, as is here implied, and as this phraſe is more fully expreſſed, Pſal. 89. 40. & 109. 29. Or, covering may be put for obſcuring his Glory, which he deſigned to publiſh, and to that end erected ſtately Monuments, &c. Or, this may be an Alluſion to the ancient Cuſtom of covering the Faces of Condemned perſons; of which ſee Eſth. 7. 8. Compare Job 9. 24. Ezek. 12. 6, 12.

18. He will ſurely violently turn and toſs thee like a ball l into a † large country m: there ſhalt thou die, and there the chariots of thy glory ſhall be the ſhame of thy lords houſe n.

l Heb. Wrapping he will wrap thee up like a ball, which conſiſts of Materials wrapped and bound together, that it may be toſſed far away. Or, Rolling he will roll thee with the rolling of a ball. m Like a Ball which is caſt into a large and plain Spot of Ground, where being thrown by a ſtrong man, it runs far and wide. Or, to a far Countrey, which ſeems to be here called large of ſpaces, not ſo much in it ſelf, for that was inconſiderable to him, whether the Land of his Captivity was large or little, as in reſpect of its diſtance from the place of his Birth and Abode. n The ſence of the Words thus rendred, ſeems to be this, Thy glorious Chariots wherein thou didſt ride in great ſtate at Jeruſalem, ſhall then and there be turned into ſhame to thy ſelf, and to thy Maſter, to whom it is juſt matter of reproach, that he was ſo fooliſh as to advance and truſt ſuch a faithleſs and unworthy perſon. But the Words are by divers others fitly rendred, there the chariots of thy glory ſhall be, (or, ſhall die or vaniſh, i. e. That ſhall be the end of all thy pompous Chariots, and other Monuments of thy pride) O thou who art the ſhame of thy lords houſe, who by thy unjuſt and wicked practices haſt expoſed thy King and Maſter, and the Royal Family, to Reproach and Contempt.

19. And I o will drive thee from thy ſtation, and from thy ſtate ſhall he p pull thee down.

o The Lord, whoſe Words theſe are, v. 15. as is manifeſt from the following Verſes. p The Lord; ſuch ſudden changes of perſons being very uſual in theſe Writings.

20. ¶ And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, that I will call q my ſervant * Eliakim the ſon of Hilkiah:

* 2 Kings 18. 18.

q By my Spirit fitting him, and by my powerful Providence moving Hezekiah's Heart to call him.

21. And I will cloath him with thy robe, and ſtrengthen him with thy girdle r, and I will commit thy government into his hand, and he ſhall be a father ſ to the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem, and to the houſe of Judah.

r There was a peculiar ſort of Robe and Girdle which was the Badge of his Office, which ſhould be taken from him, and given to Eliakim. ſ He ſhall not onely have the Authority of a Father, which thou now haſt, in which reſpect all Rulers are called fathers, as Exod. 20. 12. Numb. 36. 1. but ſhall alſo govern them with Fatherly Care and Affection, and not with Rigour and Cruelty, as thou doſt.

22. And the key t of the houſe of David will I lay upon his ſhoulder u: ſo he ſhall * open and none ſhall ſhut x, and he ſhall ſhut and none ſhall open.

* Job 12. 14. Rev. 3. 7.

t The Government, the Power of opening and shutting, of letting men into it, or putting them out of it, whereof a key is a fit Emblem; whence the delivering of the Keys of an House or City into the hands of another, is a Sign to signifie and confirm the giving him the power and possession of it. u He mentions the shoulder rather than the hand, in which Keys are commonly carried, either from some Ceremony then in use, of carrying a Key upon the shoulder, either of the Officer of State himself, or of another in his name and stead; or to signifie that this was a Key of greater weight than ordinary, and that Government, which is designed by this Key, is an heavy burden, and therefore in Scripture-phrase said to be upon the shoulder, as Isa. 9. 6. x Against his will, or without his commission or consent.

* Ezra 9. 8.

23. And I will fasten him y as * a nail in a sure place z: and he shall be for a glorious throne to his fathers house a.

y I will establish the Power in his hands. z In the strong Walls, or solid Timber, in the House: Which is opposed to Shebna, instability, signified by a Ball, v. 18. a By his prudent and righteous Government he shall procure great Glory not only to himself, but to all that have any relation to him. This also is opposed to what is said of Shebna in the end of v. 18.

24. And they shall hang upon him all the glory of his fathers house b, the off-spring and the issue c, all vessels of small quantity d; from the vessels of cups, even to all the ‖ vessels of flagons e.

‖ Or, instruments of vials.

b Of his own Kindred and Family, who shall all depend upon him, and receive Glory from him: of the House of David, which is called his fathers house, either because Kings are called the fathers of all their Subjects, both in Scripture, as 1 Sam. 24. 12. 2 Kings 5. 13. & 16. 7. and in other Authors; or, as Calvin ingeniously conjectures, because he was of the Blood Royal. Otherwise this had been no great commendation to him, that he studied so much the advancement of his own private Family. And this seems more probable, because this Character is opposed to that of Shebna, who was the shame of his lords, to wit, the King's house or Family, v. 18. c Great and small, the Children and Grandchildren of his Father's House. d The meanest of them shall receive a Lustre and Advantage from their Relation to him. e All sorts of Vessels, great or small, mean or precious, may be hanged upon him, without any fear of falling; whereas ordinary Nails or Pins, if they be oppressed with too great weight, are easily broken down, and the Vessels fall with them.

25. In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, shall the nail that is fastned in the sure place f, be removed, and be cut down, and fall: and the burden that was upon it g shall be cut off: for the LORD hath spoken it.

f Shebna, who seemed to be so, both in his own eyes, and in the eyes of others. g All those wicked Officers that were advanced and supported by his Power.

CHAP. XXIII.

* Jer. 25. 22. & 47. 4. Ezek. 26. & 27. & 28. Amos 1. 9. Zech. 9. 2, 4.

* THe burden of Tyre a, Howl, ye ships b of Tarshish c, for it is laid waste d, so that there is no house, no entring in e: from the land of Chittim it is revealed to them f.

a The Prophecy of the heavy calamity and destruction of Tyre; which now stood in its strength and glory, being seated in an Island, upon a Rock, abounding in Riches, mighty in Naval Power, having lately conquered that Navy which the Assyrians brought against them. Yet this City was, according to this Prophecy, destroyed; and that twice, first by Nebuchadnezzar, and long afterward by Alexander the Great. And although this Prophecy seems directly and properly to respect the former destruction, yet it seems to have some reference to the latter also; only it is intimated, That after seventy years, Tyrus should recover her former Power and Glory, before her second and final destruction. b Either, 1. properly; to which Howling and Lamenting is ascribed by a known Figure called Prosopopœia: or, 2. Metonymically, the Merchants and Owners of Ships, who had much Commerce with this illustrious Mart. c Either, 1. of Tarsus, a great Port of Cilicia, which anciently had the Dominion of that part of the Sea: or, 2. of the Ocean, which is so called 1 Kings 10. 22. Psal. 48. 8. Isa. 2. 16. d It shall shortly be laid waste; Which was fulfilled not by Shalmanezer, as some would have it; for though he straitned it for some time, yet he never took it; but by Nebuchadnezzar. e So effectually wasted, that there is not an house left in it, nor any Merchants or others that go into it, either to trade in it, or to repair it. f The sence of the words thus rendred may be this, It, i. e. this Burden or Destruction of Tyre, is, i.e. shall be, revealed, declared or made known, unto them; either, 1. to the Tyrians, to whom this Notice should be sent concerning the Preparations of their Enemies against them; or, 2. to the Ships, by which he means their Owners or Merchants, from the land of Chittim: which may be here mentioned either because they first had and gave them notice of it, as was now said; or, because their last and forest destruction was brought upon them by Alexander, who was of the land of Chittim, as is affirmed by that very ancient and venerable, though Apocryphal Writer, 1 Maccab. 1. 1. & 8. 5. But this place is otherwise rendred, both by ancient and later Interpreters, which seems to be more natural and easie, and no less agreeable to the Hebrew Text; either thus, that she is laid waste, so that there is no house, nor entring or coming in (to wit, for Traffick) from the land of Chittim, is made known to them, to wit, to the Ships or Merchants that used to resort thither for Traffick: or rather thus, for it is laid waste, so that there is no house, (not any houses left for the Citizens to dwell in) nor entring or coming in (to wit, of Merchants) from the land of Chittim: she (to wit, her People) is removed or gone into captivity, as this word properly signifies, and is rendred Isa. 38. 12. And for the last Hebrew word, lamo, which is rendred to them (which is the only Objection against this Interpretation) it is only added as an Elegancy of the Hebrew Language, and hath no further signification, as it is also Psal. 58. 7. and as the Particle lo, which signifies the same thing, and such other Pronouns are frequently redundant and insignificant in the Hebrew Text, as hath been oft observed by Grammarians and Interpreters. He mentions the land of Chittim, because this was an eminent place for Shipping and Trading, as is manifest from Numb. 24. 24. Ezek. 27. 6. Dan. 11. 30. and therefore doubtless had great Dealings and Commerce with Tyre, and may here be put Synecdochically for all other Countries which Traded with her. It is not necessary, for the understanding of this Text, to determine what Chittim is, whether it was Italy, or Greece, or the Islands of those parts; it is sufficient to know, that it was a Sea-faring place in the Midland Sea, and so much startled and concerned in the destruction of Tyre.

2. Be † still g ye inhabitants of the isle h; thou whom the merchants of Zidon i, that pass over the sea k, have replenished l.

g Heb. Be silent, as one confounded, and not knowing what to say; or as Mourners use to be, Job 2. 8, 13. Isa. 47. 5. boast no more of thy Wealth and Power, as thou usedst to do. h Heb. of Tyrus, which now was an Island, Ezek. 27. 3. & 28. 2. till Alexander joined it to the Continent, as Pliny reports. Although the Title of Islands is oft given by the Hebrews to Places bordering upon the Sea. i An eminent City of Palestina, nigh unto Tyre, much concerned with her and for her. k That are a Sea-faring People. l With Mariners, Ezek. 27. 8. and Commodities.

3. And by great waters m the seed of Sihor n, the harvest of the river o is her revenue p, and she is a mart of nations q.

m By the Sea, which is very fitly called the great waters, Psal. 107. 23. understand, cometh, or is brought to her. n The Corn of Egypt, wherewith Egypt abounded, and furnished divers other parts of the World, whence it was called the Granary of the Roman Empire; which also was easily conveyed by Sea from Egypt to Tyre, and thence to divers other Countries. This is called seed here, as also Hag. 2. 19. and elsewhere, by an usual Metonymy; and the seed of Sihor, because it grew up the more abundantly because of the Overflow of the River, as all sorts of Authors have noted. For Sihor is nothing else but Nilus, as appears from Jer. 2. 18. which is called Sihor, as by the Greeks it was called Melas, from its black colour. And this and no other River seems to be that Sihor which is so oft mentioned as one of the Bounds of the Land of Canaan, as Numb. 34. 5, &c, because that Land, at least in that extent which God allotted and gave it to the Israelites, though they through neglect or cowardise might not actually possess it, did reach to one of the Branches of that River: And indeed, if Sihor be not Nilus, that great and neighbouring River is not named in all the Scripture, which seems very improbable. o This clause explains the former; that plentiful Harvest of Corn which comes from the Influence and Inundation of Nilus, which is emphatically called the river, as here, so also Exod. 1. 22. Isa. 19. 5. Ezek. 29. 3, 9. as Euphrates is in other Texts of Scripture. p Is as easily procured, and plentifully enjoyed by her, as if it grew in her own Territories. q A Place to which all Nations resort for Traffick.

4. Be thou ashamed, O Zidon r; for the sea s hath hath ſpoken, even the ſtrength of the ſea r, ſaying, I travel not, nor bring forth children, neither do I nouriſh up young men, nor bring up virgins u.

r For Zidon was a great City near Tyre, and ſtrongly united to her by Commerce and League, and called by ſome the Mother of Tyre, which, they ſay, was built and firſt inhabited by a Colony of the Sidonians; and therefore ſhe muſt needs be greatly concerned in the deſtruction of Tyrus. s That part of the Sea in which Tyrus was, and from which Ships and Men were ſent into all Countries. t This is added to explain what he meant by the ſea, even Tyrus, who might be called the ſtrength of the Sea, either actually, becauſe it defended that part of the Sea from Piracies and Injuries; or paſſively, becauſe it was defended and ſtrengthened by the Sea, which encompaſſed it. And this Title is here given to Tyrus, to ſhew what great cauſe of confuſion and fear Sidon had from this Example, which for ſtrength was much inferiour to Tyrus. u I who was ſo exceeding fruitful and populous, that I ſent forth Colonies into other Countries, (of which the famous City of Carthage was one) am now become barren and deſolate.

5. As at the report concerning Egypt, ſo ſhall they be ſorely pained at the report of Tyre x.

x According to this Tranſlation the ſence is, All the neighbouring Nations ſhall be no leſs terrified at the Tidings of the deſtruction of Tyrus, than they were of old upon the Report of God's former and dreadful Judgments upon the Egyptians; of which ſee Exod. 15. 14, 15, 16. Joſ. 2. 9, 11. becauſe they ſhall deſpair of reſiſting that Enemy againſt whom that vaſt and potent City, which was deemed impregnable, could not defend it ſelf. But the words are by the LXX. and other both ancient and later Interpreters, rendred otherwiſe, and that very agreeably to the Hebrew Text, When the report (to wit, of the deſtruction of Tyre) came, or ſhall come, (which word is eaſily underſtood, as it is above, v. 3. and in other Texts of Scripture before-mentioned) to the Egyptians, they ſhall be ſorely pained according to the report of Tyre; their grief ſhall be anſwerable to the report; as the report is very dreadful, ſo their grief and anguiſh ſhall be very great: or, they ſhall fear leſt they ſhould be deſtroyed in like manner as Tyrus was deſtroyed.

6. Paſs ye over to Tarſhiſh y, howl ye inhabitants of the iſle z.

y Flee from your own Country to Tarſus of Cilicia, and there bewail your calamities. Or, rather, as others render the place, Paſs over the ſea, which is oft called Tarſhiſh; of which ſee on v. 1. z Of Tyrus, as before, v. 2.

7. Is this your joyous city a, whoſe antiquity is of ancient days b? her own feet ſhall carry her c † afar off to ſojourn d.

a That formerly lived in ſo much Pomp, and Pleaſure, and Security. b Being built before Joſhua's time, as is manifeſt from Joſ. 19. 29. c Whereas before, like a delicate Lady, ſhe would not ſet the ſole of her foot to the ground, as the Expreſſion is Deut. 28. 56. but uſed to be carried in ſtately Chariots, or magnificent Veſſels. d To ſeek for new Habitations. For, as ſome of the Tyrians were taken and carried Captive into Chaldea and other places, ſo others fled by Sea into ſeveral parts of the World, Carthage, and divers other Towns of the Midland Sea, as is recorded by ancient Hiſtorians.

8. Who hath taken this counſel againſt Tyre e, the crowning city f, whoſe merchants are princes g, whoſe traffiquers are the honourable of the earth?

e Words of Admiration: Who and where is he that could imagine or durſt attempt ſuch a thing as this? This is the work of God, as is expreſſed v. 9. and not of man. f Which was a Royal City, Jer. 25. 22. and called a kingdom, Ezek. 28. 2, 12. and carried away the Crown from all other Cities, and Crowned her ſelf and her Citizens with Glory and Delights. g Equal to Princes for Wealth, and Power, and Reputation.

9. The LORD of hoſts hath purpoſed it h, † to ſtain the pride of all glory, and to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth i.

† Heb. to pollute.

h This is the Lord's own doing; therefore do not doubt it, nor wonder at it. i God's deſign is by this one Example to abate and abaſe the pride of all the Potentates of the Earth, that they may ſee and know what weak and wretched Creatures they are, when God leaves them, and ſets himſelf againſt them.

10. Paſs through thy land k as a river l, O daughter of Tarſhiſh m, there is no more † ſtrength n.

k Tarry no longer in thy own Territories, but flee through them, and beyond them, into other Countries, for ſafety and relief. l Swiftly, leſt you be prevented; and continually, till you be all gone; and in ſholes and multitudes. m O Tyrus; for of her he ſpeaks both in the foregoing and following words. And Tyrus might well be called the daughter of Tarſhiſh, i. e. of the Sea, as that word is uſed v. 1. and elſewhere, becauſe it then was an Iſland, and therefore as it were born of the Sea, and nouriſhed and brought up by it. n Heb. no more girdle, the Girdle, which ſtrengthens the Loins of a man, is put for ſtrength, as Job 12. 21. & 38. 3. It behoveth you, O People, of Tyrus, to flee away, as I adviſe you; for your City is unable to defend you; your Wealth, the ſinews of War, is loſt; your Walls broken down; the Sea, which, like a Girdle, ſurrounded and defended you, is now in part filled up by your Enemies, who have joined you to the main Land; your former Friends and Allies forſake you.

11. He o ſtretched out his hand p over the ſea q, he ſhook the kingdoms r: the LORD hath given a commandment s || againſt † the merchant city t, to deſtroy the || ſtrong holds thereof.

o The Lord, expreſſed v. 9. p To ſtrike it, the Antecedent being put for the Conſequent. q Or, againſt the ſea; i. e. againſt Tyrus, the Daughter of the Sea, as ſhe was now called; and conſequently againſt all thoſe Ships and Men which uſed to Traffick with Tyrus, and were enriched by that Trade, and therefore ſuffered in her Fall. r Heb. He made the kingdoms to tremble; either, 1. the two Kingdoms of Tyre and Sidon; or rather, 2. the neighbouring and confederate Kingdoms, as appears by comparing this with Ezek. 26. 15, 16, 17, 18. who might juſtly quake at her Fall, partly for the dreadfulneſs and unexpectedneſs of the thing; partly becauſe Tyre was a Bulwark, and a Refuge, and a great Advantage to them; and partly becauſe her Fall made way for their Ruine, as being deſtroyed by their common Enemy. s Hath contrived and purpoſed it, as was ſaid v. 8, 9. hath put this Deſign into the heads and hearts of her Enemies, and given them courage to attempt, and ſtrength to execute ſo difficult an Enterpriſe. t Heb. againſt Canaan: the word Canaan being taken either, 1. for a Merchant, as it is uſed Job 41. 6. Hoſ. 12. 7. or rather, 2. for the Proper Name of a Place or People, as it is generally uſed: for the Tyrians and Sidonians were deſcended from Canaan, Gen. 10. 15. and were the only conſiderable Remainders of that curſed Race whom God had devoted to deſtruction. And ſo this Phraſe may be here uſed both as an Evidence and as an Argument of their intended and approaching Ruine.

12. And he ſaid, Thou ſhalt no more rejoyce, O thou oppreſſed virgin u, daughter of Zidon x: ariſe, paſs over to Chittim y, there alſo ſhalt thou have no reſt z.

u So he calls her, either for her Pride and Beauty, and living in great Eaſe and Pleaſure; or becauſe ſhe had hitherto never born the yoke of a conquering Enemy: though withal he declares, that ſhe ſhould be oppreſſed or deflowred very ſuddenly. x Whereby he underſtands either, 1. Zidon her ſelf, who ſuffered in and with Tyre; for ſo this Phraſe ſeems generally to be uſed, the daughter of Sion, or of Jeruſalem, or of Babel, or Egypt, &c. being nothing elſe but Sion, Jeruſalem, Babel, Egypt, &c. or rather, 2. Tyrus, as moſt Interpreters, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian, underſtand it, of whom this whole Context and Prophecy ſpeaks; which may well be called the daughter of Zidon, becauſe ſhe was firſt built and poſſeſſed by a Colony of the Sidonians; as Pliny calleth Carthage the Daughter of Tyre, becauſe ſhe was built by a Colony of Tyrians. And the Title of daughter is oft-times given in Scripture unto Towns or Cities which had their Being from, or Dependence upon other Cities; in which ſence we read of the daughter of Heſhbon, Numb. 21. 25. and of Rabbah, Jer. 49. 2, 3. and of Sodom, and of Samaria, Ezek. 16. 46, 49, 53. And the daughter of Tarſhiſh here above, v. 10. is not meant of Tarſhiſh it ſelf, but of Tyrus, which had a Relation to, and Dependence upon Tarſhiſh. y Of which place, ſee on v. 1. z Thither thine Enemies ſhall purſue thee, and there ſhall they overtake thee, although thou wilt think thy ſelf ſecure when thou art fled to remote parts beyond the Sea.

13. Behold the land of the Chaldeans a; this people people was not k, till the Aſſyrian founded it for them that dwell in the wilderneſs c: they ſet up the towers thereof, they raiſed up the palaces thereof d, and he e brought it to ruine f.

a You Tyrians, who think your City impregnable, caſt your Eyes upon the Land and Empire of the Chaldeans, or Babylonians; which, though now it be a flouriſhing Kingdom, and ſhall ſhortly grow far more glorious and potent, even the glory of kingdoms, as it is called Iſa. 13. 19. yet ſhall certainly be brought to utter ruine: and therefore your Preſumption is moſt vain and unreaſonable. b The Chaldeans at firſt were not a People, not formed into any Commonwealth or Kingdom. c. Till Nimrod, the Head and Founder of the Aſſyrian Monarchy, built Babel, Gen. 10. 9. now the Head of the Chaldean Monarchy, which he built for thoſe People, who then lived in Tents, and were diſperſed here and there in wild and waſte places, that he might bring them into Order, and under Government, and thereby eſtabliſh and promote his own Empire. d The Chaldeans being by this means brought together into a Body, fell to the work of Building their City, and its Towers and Palaces, and thereby got Power and Dominion over their Neighbours, till at laſt they grew the greateſt of all the Monarchies that then were upon Earth. e The Lord, who is expreſſed before, and is frequently deſigned in Scripture by this indefinite Pronoun he, as hath been many times obſerved: VVhereby he inſinuates the true Reaſon why neither the Chaldeans nor the Tyrians ſhould be able to ſtand, becauſe the Almighty God was engaged againſt them. f VVill infallibly bring that great Empire to ruine. He ſpeaks of a future thing as if it were already paſt, as the Prophets uſe to do. The Chaldeans ſhall now return to their firſt Nothing, and become no People again.

14. Howl, ye ſhips of Tarſhiſh: for your ſtrength g is laid waſte.

m As Harlots uſe to do, to allure Cuſtomers. n So he calleth Tyre, partly becauſe ſhe enticed Merchants to deal with her by various Artifices, and even by diſhoneſt Practices, as Harlots uſe: and partly becauſe of the great and general Uncleanneſs which was both committed and tolerated in it. o By thoſe who had forgotten thee, v. 15.

17. ¶ And it ſhall come to paſs after the end of ſeventy years, that the LORD will viſit Tyre p, and ſhe ſhall turn to her hire q, and ſhall commit fornication with all the kingdoms of the world r upon the face of the earth.

p To wit, in mercy, as this Phraſe is uſed Ruth 1. 6. Pſal. 65. 9. and elſewhere. q The Hebrew VVord properly ſignifies, the hire of an harlot; which agrees well with the fornication in the next clauſe: although theſe Phraſes are not to be underſtood properly, but metaphorically, of Trading or Commerce with others, r Shall trade promiſcuouſly with People of all ſorts and Nations as Harlots entertain all Comers.

18. And her merchandiſe, and her hire ſhall be holineſs to the LORD s: it ſhall not be treaſured nor laid up t: for her merchandiſe ſhall be for them that dwell before the LORD u, to eat ſufficiently, and for * durable cloathing.

* Heb. Old.

s He ſpeaks not here of what the Tyrians would do immediately after their Reſtitution, but ſome time after it, even in the days of the Meſſiah; of which even ſome of the Jewiſh Rabbies underſtand it, and to which the Prophets have a ſpecial Reſpect in their ſeveral Prophecies, and Iſaiah among and above the reſt of them. So this is a Prophecy concerning the converſion of the Tyrians to the true Religion, of the accompliſhment whereof, ſomething is ſaid Acts 21. 3, 4, 5. and more in other Authors. t Either out of Covetouſneſs, or for the ſervice of their Pride and Luxury, as they formerly did; but now they ſhall freely lay it out upon Pious and Charitable Uſes. u For the ſupport and encouragement of the Miniſters of Holy Things, who ſhall teach the good knowledge of the Lord, who dwell in God's Houſe, and miniſter in his Preſence; the Support of ſuch Perſons being not only an Act of Juſtice and Charity, but alſo of Piety, and of great uſe and neceſſity to maintain and propagate Religion in the World. Although this doth not exclude, but rather imply their Liberality in contributing to the neceſſities of all Chriſtians.

CHAP. XXIV.

BEhold, the LORD maketh the earth a empty, and maketh it waſte b, and * turneth it upſide down c, and ſcattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof.

* Heb. pervertʒ eth the face thereof.

a Or, the land, to wit, of Canaan, or Iſrael, or Judæa. It is uſual with all VVriters, when they write of their own Country, to call it the land, by way of eminency. There are many things in this Prophecy which manifeſtly concern this Land and People; and nothing, at leaſt before v. 21. which may be taken as a new and additional Prophecy, which is neceſſarily to be underſtood of other Natio[illegible] But this I ſpeak with ſubmiſſion, and due reſpect to the [illegible]rned and Judicious Interpreters who take this to be a Prophecy againſt Judæa, and all the neighbouring Nations. b He will ſhortly make it waſte, firſt by the Aſſyrians, and then by the Chaldeans. c Bringeth it into great diſorder and confuſion.

2. And it ſhall be, as with the people, ſo with the ‖ * prieſt d; as with the ſervant, ſo with his maſter; as with the maid, ſo with her miſtreſs: * as with the buyer, ſo with the ſeller e; as with the lender, ſo with the borrower; as with the taker of uſury, ſo with the giver of uſury to him.

‖ Or, prince.
* Hoſ 4. 9.
* Ezek. 7. 12, 13.

d The approaching calamity ſhall be univerſal, without any reſpect or diſtinction of Perſons or Ranks of Men; the Prieſts themſelves having been partakers of the Peoples Sins, ſhall alſo partake with them in their Plagues. e The Purchaſer of Lands ſhall have no more left than he who hath ſold all his Patrimony; and all Perſons ſhall be made equal in Beggery and Slavery.

3. The land ſhall be utterly emptied, and utterly ſpoiled: for the LORD hath ſpoken this word.

4. The earth mourneth and fadeth away, the world f languiſheth and fadeth away, † the haughty people g of the earth do languiſh.

† Heb. the heights of the people.

f From this VVord ſome infer, That this Prophecy concerns not only the Land of Judæa, but alſo the neighbouring Countries: But if the proper Signification of that VVord be urged, this Prophecy muſt be extended to all the Parts of the VVorld, which theſe Learned men will not allow. And the world, both in Scripture, and other Authors, is oft uſed Synecdochically for that which is in truth but a ſmall part of it, at leaſt in compariſon with the VVhole; as it is not only of the Roman Empire, as Luke 2. 1. Acts 11. 28. but alſo of Babylon, Iſa. 13. 11. and, which cometh nearer to the point, of this very Land of Judæa, as Job. 12. 19. & 18. 20. and elſewhere. And therefore it may well be ſo underſtood here, eſpecially when this word world is explained by thoſe other words, the earth and the land, which the very next Verſe ſheweth to be meant of Iſrael or Judæa, as we ſhall there diſcover. g Not only Common People, who uſe to be of low Spirits; but the High and Lofty ones, who uſe to be ſtout in their Words and Carriages towards me, and to deride my Threatnings.

5 * The earth alſo h is defiled under the inhabitants thereof i: becauſe they have tranſgreſſed the laws k, changed the ordinance l, broken the everlaſting covenant m.

* Gen. 3. 17.

b Heb. And the land, or, this land; for here is an emphatical Article in the Hebrew Text. i By the Wickedneſs of its People; of which ſee Levit. 18. 25, 27. Num. 35. 33, &c. k The Laws of God revealed to them, and preſſed upon them in a ſingular manner, called ſimply the laws, as the Word of God is oft-times called the word by way of eminency. l God's Ordinances concerning his Worſhip and Service; the ſingular being put collectively for the plural. m The Covenant made between God and Abraham, and all his Poſterity, renewed with the Iſraelites at Sinai, which was everlaſting, both on God's part, who, upon the Conditions therein expreſſed, engaged himſelf to be a God to them and to their Seed for ever; and on Iſrael's part, who were obliged thereby to conſtant and perpetual Obedience through all Generations. All theſe Clauſes clearly prove, that the earth, or land, which this Prophecy concerns, is no other than the Land of Iſrael and Judah.

6. Therefore hath the curſe n devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are deſolate: therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned o, and few men left.

n The Curſe of God threatned to Tranſgreſſours, Deut. 28. 15. &c. and 29. 20. and imprecated by and upon themſelves, if they ſhould not perſiſt in their Obedience to God, Deut. 27. 26. and elſewhere. o Are conſum'd by the wrath of God, which is commonly compared to Fire.

* Chap. 16. 8, 9. Joel 1. 10, 12.

7. * The new wine mourneth p, the vine languiſheth q, all the merry-hearted r do ſigh.

p Becauſe there are either none, or none but the Enemies of God and Iſrael, to drink it. Grief is aſcribed to ſenceleſs Creatures by a figure uſual in all Authors. q Either becauſe there are no People left to dreſs it, or gather its Grapes; or becauſe it is broken down and ſpoiled by the [illegible] r That made their hearts merry with VVine, [illegible]04. 15.

* Jer. 7. 34. & 16. 9. & 25. 10. Ezek. 26. 13. Hoſ. 2. 11.

8. The mirth * of tabrets s ceaſeth, the noiſe t of them that rejoyce endeth, the joy of the harp ceaſeth.

s Which they uſed in their Feaſts and Revellings. t The word properly ſignifies a roaring Noiſe and confuſed Clamour, ſuch as drunken men make, Pſal. 78. 65. Zech. 9. 15.

9. They ſhall not drink wine with a ſong, ſtrong drink ſhall be bitter to them that drink it u.

u Becauſe of the fears and miſeries wherewith it is mixed.

‖ Or, emptineſs.

10. The city x of ‖ confuſion y is broken down: every houſe is ſhut up z, that no man may come in.

x Jeruſalem, and other Cities; for the ſingular word may be here taken collectively. y Or, of vanity, or emptineſs, or deſolation; for this Hebrew word ſignifies all theſe things. And the City may be thus called, either, 1. in regard of the Judgments of God coming upon it, as if he had ſaid, a City devoted to deſolation or deſtruction, to be emptied of its Goods and People: or, 2. for its ſin, a City of confuſion or diſorder, breaking all the Laws and Orders which God had eſtabliſhed among them; or a City that walketh with, or after vanity, as the Scripture ſpeaks Job 31. 5. Jer. 2. 5. that loveth and ſpeaketh vanity, as they did, Pſal. 4. 2. & 12. 2. And this may ſeem moſt convenient, that the ſin of the City ſhould be noted in this word, as the Puniſhment is expreſſed in the next. z Either for fear of the Enemy who have entred the City; or rather, becauſe the Inhabitants are either fled, or dead, or gone into Captivity, and ſo there are none to go into it, or come out of it.

11. There is a crying for wine a in the ſtreets all joy is darkned, the mirth of the land is gone.

a For the want or loſs of their Wine, and ſpoil of their Vines, whereby they were deprived of the Means both of their Delight and Profit. Whereby he intimates their groſs Senſuality and Sottiſhneſs, that in ſtead of crying for their ſins, and humbling themſelves under God's Judgments, did only howl for their corn, and wine, and oil, as they did Hoſ. 7. 14.

12. In the city is left deſolation, and the gate is ſmitten with deſtruction b.

b The Gates of the City are totally ruined, that the Enemy may enter when and where they pleaſe.

13. ¶ When thus it ſhall be c in the midſt of the land d among the people, * there ſhall be as the ſhaking of an olive-tree, and as the gleaning-grapes when the vintage is done e.

* Chap. 17. 5, 6.

c When this Judgment ſhall be executed. d In the Land: But withal this Phraſe may intimate, that the Judgment ſhould not be ſleight and ſuperficial, and in the Skirts of the Land; but that it ſhould reach their very heart, their moſt inward and beſt defended Parts. e There ſhall be left a Remnant, and that but a very ſmall Remnant; as there are ſome few, and but a few Olives or Grapes left after the Vintage is over. VVhich by comparing this with the following Verſe, ſeems to be added by way of mitigation, to ſignifie, that God would in Judgment remember Mercy.

14. They f ſhall lift up their voice, they ſhall ſing for the majeſty of the LORD g, they ſhall cry aloud h from the ſea i.

f The Remnant preſerved. g For his glorious Power and Goodneſs manifeſted in their Deliverance. h In way of Exultation and Thankſgiving to God. i From the Iſles of the Sea, as this is explained in the next Verſe; from thoſe Parts beyond the Sea, into which they were carried Captive, and in which they were miraculouſly preſerved.

15. Wherefore glorifie ye the LORD k in the ‖ * fires l, even the Name of the LORD God of Iſrael in the iſles of the ſea m.

‖ Or, valleys. * Ezek. 39. 6.

k Theſe are the VVords, either, 1. of the Remnant, who being themſelves delivered, do incourage and exhort their Brethren to glorifie God with them: or, 2. of the Prophet, directing and exciting God's People to glorifie God in their Afflictions, becauſe of that Deliverance which he had promiſed, and would aſſuredly give to them. l When you are in the Furnace of Affliction; although this word is never uſed in Scripture in this ſence. Others therefore render the word, in the valleys; and others, in the holts, you that are now forced to hide your ſelves in Holes. Poſſibly it may be better rendred, for light or illumination; which may be underſtood either of the Light of the Truth which God would reveal to them; or for the Comfort and Felicity which God would confer upon them; Light being frequently taken both ways in Scripture. For this Hebrew VVord, in all other Places of Scripture where it is found, ſignifies that Urim which was in the High-Prieſt's Breaſt-plate, and which properly ſignifies illumination, as both Jews and Chriſtians render it, whereof that was both a Sign and an Inſtrument; of which ſee on Exodus 28. 30. Add to this, that this Part of the Prophecy ſeems to concern the Days of the Goſpel, and that Light, which the Jews ſhould then receive by the Meſſias, of whom the High-Prieſt with his Ephod and Urim was a Type. And ſo this is an Exhortation to the converted Jews to bleſs God for the true Urim, even for Chriſt and the Goſpel. And ſome of the ancient Tranſlators had this Signification of the VVord in their Eye, as the Vulgar Latin, who render it, in doctrines; and the Chaldee, who tranſlate it, when light ſhall come to the juſt. But this I propoſe with Submiſſion. m In remote Countries beyond the Sea, which in Scripture are commonly called iſles, as hath been formerly and oft obſerved. VVhereby he ſeems to imply, that he here ſpeaks not ſo much of a Temporal Felicity which the Jews ſhould receive and enjoy in their own Country, as of a Spiritual Advantage which they ſhould have by the Meſſias in the Places where they were diſperſed.

16. ¶ From the † uttermoſt part of the earth n have we heard ſongs o, even glory to the righteous p; but I ſaid q, † My leanneſs, my leanneſs r, wo unto me: the treacherous dealers have dealt treacherouſly s, yea the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherouſly t.

† Heb. wing. † Heb. Leanneſs to me. Or, My ſecret to me.

n From all the Parts of the Earth or Land in which the Jews are or ſhall be. o Songs of Joy and Praiſe. p Or, glory be to the righteous; which may ſeem to be the Matter of the Song. By the righteous may be here underſtood either, 1. the Generation of Righteous and Holy Men, who formerly were deſpiſed, but now upon this eminent Deliverance, ſhall be highly honoured: or, 2. the Lord, whom they were exhorted to glorifie in the foregoing Verſe, and who may well be called the righteous one, as he is frequently ſtiled the holy one, as Hoſ. 11. 9. Habak. 3. 3, &c. or, 3. the Meſſiah, to whom this Title of juſt or righteous is frequently given, as Iſa. 53. 11. Jer. 23. 5. Zech. 9. 9, &c. And the believing Jews call him righteous emphatically, partly to intimate that he is the Author and Procurer of all true Righteouſneſs, and partly in oppoſition to their unbelieving Brethren, who rejected and condemned him as a Malefactor. All which the Prophet foreſaw by the Spirit of Prophecy.

q But in the midst of these joyful tidings, I discern something which interrupts my Joys, and gives me cause of bitter complaint and lamentation. r I faint and pine away for grief, for the following Reason. s The Jews, who have been frequently guilty of great perfidiousness towards God, are now acting the same Part. Which he speaks, either, 1. of those who lived in his time; or rather, 2. of those who should live when the Messias was upon Earth, of whom he foresaw by the Spirit, that they would forsake God, and reject their Messiah, and thereby bring utter Destruction upon themselves. For even the Hebrew Doctours expound this Place of the Perfidiousness of some Jews in the times of the Messiah. And it is not strange that so sad a sight made the Prophet cry out, My leanness, &c. t He repeats it, to shew the horridness of the Crime, and how deeply he was affected with it.

* Jer. 48. 43, 44. See 1 Kin. 19. 17. Amos 5. 19.

17 * Fear and the pit, and the snare x are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth.

x Great and various Judgments, some actually inflicted, and others expected and justly feared, as the punishment of their last-mentioned Treachery.

18. And it shall come to pass, that he who fleeth from the noise of the fear y, shall fall into the pit z; and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit, shall be taken in the snare; for the * windows from on high are open, and the * foundations of the earth do shake a.

* Gen. 7. 11.
* Psal. 18. 7.

y Upon the Report of some terrible Evil coming towards him, the Act fear, being here put for the Object, or the thing feared, as it is in many places. And thus this very Phrase is taken, Job 15. 21. z VVhen he designs to avoid one Danger, by so doing, he shall plunge himself into another, and a greater Mischief. a Both Heaven and Earth conspire against him. He alludes to the Deluge of Waters, which God poured down from Heaven, and to the Earthquakes which he oft-times causeth below.

19. The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly b.

b This is repeated again, partly to shew the dreadfulness and certainty of these Judgments, and partly to awaken and affect the stupid Israelites, who greatly needed it.

* Chap. 19. 14.

20. The earth c shall * reel to and fro like a drunkard d, and shall be removed like a cottage e, and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it f, and it shall fall, and not rise again.

c The People of the Earth. d Shall be sorely perplexed and distressed, not knowing whither to go, nor what to do. e Or, like a lodge in a Garden, of which this word is used, Isa. 1. 8. which is soon taken down, and set up in another place, as occasion requires. Or, as others render it, like a tent, which is easily and commonly carried from place to place. f Those sins which they formerly esteemed light and pleasant, shall now be most burdensome and grievous to them, because of the dreadful punishments which shall follow them.

21. And it shall come to pass in that day g, that the LORD shall † punish the host of the high ones that are on high h, and the kings of the earth i upon the earth.

g Either when God shall punish the Apostatical Jews; or, about, or after that time; or, in a time known to God: for this Phrase is oft used indefinitely, and without any respect to the time designed in the foregoing passages. h The proud and potent Enemies of God, and of his People, who possess the high places of the Earth. i Either, 1. the great Monarchs of the VVorld, who now scorn and trample upon God's People; or, 2. the Princes and Rulers of Israel, or Judah: for the Name of King is frequently given in Scripture unto mean and inferiour Rulers, as Judg. 1. 7. 1 King. 20. 1, 12. Psal. 119. 46. and elsewhere.

22. And they shall be gathered together k † as prisoners are gathered in the ‖ pit, and shall be shut up in the prison l, and after many days shall they be ‖ visited m.

k By God's special Providence, in order to their punishment, as the following VVords shew. And thus the unbelieving Jews were generally gathered together at Jerusalem, to their solemn Feast, when Titus came and besieged, and after some time took and destroyed them. VVhich was a very remarkable Hand of God, as Josephus and other Historians observed. And I know nothing to the contrary, but this very thing may be meant in this place; it being confessed, that divers passages of this Chapter concern the times of the Messiah. l As Malefactors, which are taken in several places, are usually brought to one common Prison, where they are reserved in order to their Trial and Punishment. m Either, 1. in Judgment, as visiting is oft used. So the sence is, After they had been punished with long Imprisonment, and tormented with Expectation and Fear, they shall be brought forth to receive condign Punishment. Or rather, 2. in Mercy. And so the sence may be either, 1. After the Jews shall have suffered many and grievous things from the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, and others, at last their Messiah and Deliverer shall come into the VVorld, &c. Or, 2. After the Unbelieving and Apostate Jews shall have been shut up in Unbelief, and in great Tribulations for many Ages together, they shall be convinced of their Sin in crucifying their Messiah, and brought home to God and Christ by true Repentance.

* Chap. 13. 10. Ezek. 32. 7. Joel 2. 31. & 3. 15.
‖ Or, there shall be glory before his ancients.

23. Then the * moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed n, when the LORD of hosts o shall reign in mount Zion and in Jerusalem p, and ‖ before his ancients q gloriously r.

n The sun and Moon are here considered, either, 1. as they were abused to Idolatry; for these two were most eminent Idols, and most generally worshipped, especially in those Eastern Countries, Deut. 4. 19. & 17. 3. Job 31. 26. &c. and so may be put for all Idols, which were confounded by Christ at his coming, as was foretold in Scripture, and verified by the Testimony of Ancient, yea even of Heathen Historians: Or, 2. as they were the most eminent and glorious Lights of the VVorld, and were oft used, both in Scripture and other Authors, to signifie the great Kings and Potentates and Glories of the VVorld, as hath been formerly noted, and we shall have further occasion to remember. So the sence is, That all Earthly Powers and Glories should be obscured with the far greater Splendour of Christ the King of Kings, at whose Feet even the Kings of the Earth shall fall down and worship, as we shall see in other parts of this Prophecy. o The Messiah, who, though Man, yet is also God, and the Lord of Hosts, and is so called, Zech. 2. 8, 11. p Shall come in the Flesh, and set up his Kingdom, first in Jerusalem, and afterward in all other Nations. q Before his Ministers, who are in some sort the Courtiers of this King of Glory, as being continually attending upon him, and enjoying his Presence, and executing the Powers and Offices of his Kingdom; and especially before his Apostles, who were the witnesses of his Divine words and works and particularly of his Resurrection and Ascension; by which he entred upon his Kingdom; and of the exercise of his Royal Power, in subduing both Jews and Gentiles to himself. The word ancient or elder is not a name of Age, but of Office, as it is in very many Texts of Scripture. And the ancients are here put Synecdochically for the whole Church, in whose Name, and for whose Service they act. r Heb. in glory: for that Preposition is very frequently understood.

CHAP. XXV.

O LORD, thou art my God, I will exalt thee, I will praise thy Name a; for thou hast done wonderful things; thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth b.

a The Prophet reflecting upon those great and glorious Prophecies which he had delivered concerning the Destruction of his Enemies, and the Protection and Deliverance of his People, and the sending of the Messiah, and the Establishment of his own Kingdom in spight of all opposition, interrupteth the Course of his Prophecies, and breaketh forth into a solemn Celebration of all these wonderful VVorks. b Thy counsels from which all thy works proceed, and which thou hast from time to time revealed to thy Prophets and People, which were of old, being conceived from all Eternity, and long since made known by thy Threatnings and Promises, are true and firm, and therefore shall certainly be accomplished.

* Chap. 21. 9. & 23. 13.

2. For thou hast made * of a city c, an heap; of a defenced city, a ruin: a palace of strangers d, to be no city, it shall never be built e.

c VVhich is put collectively for cities. He speaks of the Cities of strangers, as the following Clause explains it, or of Enemies of God, and of his People. And under the name cities he comprehends their Countries and Kingdoms, of which Cities are an eminent and commonly the strongest part. d The Royal Cities, in which were the palaces of strangers, (i. e.) of the Kings of strange People, or of the Gentiles. e Their Cities and Palaces have been, or shall be, utterly and irrecoverably destroyed.

3. Therefore ſhall the ſtrong people glorifie thee, the city of the terrible nations ſhall fear thee f.

f Thy ſtouteſt Enemies obſerving thy wonderful VVorks in ſaving thy People, and in deſtroying others of thine and their Adverſaries, ſhall be either converted, or at leaſt convinced, and forced to acknowledge thy Power, and ſhall tremble before thee.

4. For thou haſt been a ſtrength to the poor, a ſtrength to the needy in his diſtreſs, a refuge from the ſtorm, a ſhadow from the heat g, when the blaſt of the terrible one is as a ſtorm againſt the wall h.

g For thou haſt defended thy poor and helpleſs People, againſt the fierceſt Aſſaults of their Enemies. h Or, for (as this particle commonly ſignifies: or rather, therefore, as it is frequently uſed, becauſe thou art their Defender) the blaſt of the terrible, or ſtrong, or violent one, was like a ſtorm (of Hail, or Rain, or Wind) againſt a wall, which makes a great and terrible noiſe, but without any effect, for the Wall ſtands firm in ſpight of it. It is probable the Prophet in theſe Words had a ſpecial reſpect to that miraculous Deliverance of Jeruſalem from the Rage and Attempt of Sennacherib; although the VVords be general, and include other Deliverances of a like nature.

5. Thou ſhalt bring down the noiſe i of ſtrangers k, as the heat in a dry place; even the heat with the ſhadow of a cloud l: the branch m of the terrible ones ſhall be brought low.

i The tumultuous noiſe, as the VVord properly ſignifies, which he called their blaſt in the foregoing verſe; by which he means their Rage and furious Attempts, which are commonly managed with much Noiſe and Clamour. k Of thoſe ſtrange and Heathen Nations that fought againſt God's People. l VVith as much eaſe as thou doſt in the Courſe of thy common Providence allay the Heat of a dry Seaſon and Place, either by the ſhadow of thy Clouds, or by the Rain, which falleth from black and ſhadowy Clouds. m The Arm or Power, as a Branch is the Arm of a Tree. Or, The Prince or Commanders: for the VVord branch is ſometimes put for a Perſon of eminent Place and Power, as Pſal. 80. 15. Iſa. 4. 2. Zech. 3. 8. & 6. 12. But others render the Word, the ſong, as it is uſed Cant. 2. 12. their jovial and triumphant Song.

* Prov. 9. 2. Mat. 22. 4. &c.

6. ¶ And in this mountain n ſhall * the LORD of hoſts make unto all people o a feaſt of fat things p, a feaſt of wines on the lees q, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined.

n In Mount Zion, to wit, in God's Church, which is very frequently meant by the Names of Zion and Jeruſalem, both in the Old and in the New Teſtament. o Both Jews and Gentiles, who ſhall then be admitted to the participation of the ſame Priviledges and Ordinances. p A Feaſt made up of the moſt exquiſite and delicate Proviſions: which is manifeſtly meant of the Ordinances, Graces, and Comforts given by God in and to his Church. q Which have continued upon the Lees a competent time, whereby they gain ſtrength, and afterwards drawn off from the Lees, and ſo refined, as it is explained in the next Clauſe.

7. And he will † deſtroy in this mountain the face of the covering r † caſt over all people, and the vail s that is ſpread over all nations.

r VVhich is put either, 1. for the Covering of the Face, by an Hypallage, as ſilver of ſhekels, is put for ſhekels of ſilver, Levit. 5. 15. or, 2. for the Covering or vail, as the next Clauſe expounds it, the VVord face being oft ſuperfluouſly uſed in the Hebrew Language, as Gen. 1. 2, 29. and elſewhere. s The Vail of Ignorance of God, and of the true Religion, which then was upon the Gentiles, and now is upon the Jews, 2 Cor. 3. 14, 15, 16. which, like a Vail, covers Mens Eyes, and keeps them from diſcerning between things that differ. It may be alſo an Alluſion either to the Vail which was put upon Moſes his Face, Exod. 34. 33, 34. or to the Vail of the Sanctuary, by which the Perſons without it were kept from the ſight of the Ark. This is a manifeſt Prophecy concerning the Illumination and Converſion of the Gentiles.

8. He t will * ſwallow up death u in victory x, and the Lord GOD will * wipe away tears y from off all faces, and the rebuke of his people z ſhall he take away from off all the earth a: for the LORD hath ſpoken it b.

t The Lord, is expreſſed both in the foregoing and following Words, even the Meſſiah, who is God and Man. u Shall by his Death deſtroy the Power of Death, as is ſaid Heb. 2. 14. take away the Sting of the Firſt Death, and prevent the Second Death, and give Eternal Life to the World, even to all that believe in him. x Heb. unto victory, (i. e.) ſo as to overcome it perfectly; which compleat Victory Chriſt hath already purchaſed for, and will in due time actually confer upon his People. y VVill take away from his People all Sufferings and Sorrows, and all the cauſes of them; which is begun here, and perfected in Heaven. z The Reproach and Contempt which was daily caſt upon his faithful People by the ungodly World, and, among others, by the Apoſtate and unbelieving Jews, who accounted the Chriſtians to be the Scum and Off-ſcouring of all things. a Or, from off all this land, (i. e.) from all the Church and People of God, whereſoever they ſhall be, from all their Faces, as was ſaid in the foregoing Clauſe. b Therefore doubt not of it, though it ſeem incredible to you.

9. ¶ And it ſhall be ſaid c in that day, Lo, this is our God d, we have waited for him e, and he will ſave us: this is the LORD, we have waited for him, we will be glad, and rejoyce in his ſalvation.

c By God's People, in way of Triumph and reply to their Enemies. d Your Gods are ſenceleſs and impotent Idols; but our God is Omnipotent, and hath done theſe great and glorious works, which fill the World with Admiration. We may well boaſt of him; for there is no God like to him. Poſſibly it may be an Intimation, that God ſhould take Fleſh, and become viſibly preſent amongſt Men. e Our Meſſiah, or Saviour, long ſince promiſed, and for whom we have waited a long time, now at laſt is come into the VVorld, bringing Salvation with him.

10 For in this mountain ſhall the hand of the LORD reſt f, and Moab g ſhall be ‖ trodden down under him h, even as ſtraw is ‖ trodden down for the dunghill i.

‖ Or, threſhed. ‖ Or, threſhed in Madmenah.

f The powerful and gracious Preſence of God (which is oft ſignified in Scripture by God's hand) ſhall have its conſtant and ſettled abode, it ſhall not move from place to place, as it did with the Tabernacle; nor ſhall it depart from it, as it did from Jeruſalem, but ſhall continue in his Church even to the end of the World, Mat. 28. 20. g The Moabites, which having been conſtant and implacable Enemies to Iſrael, are ſynecdochically put for all the Enemies of God's Church, as the Edomites upon the ſame account are, Iſa. 34. 6. & 63. 1. h Under his Feet, as appears by the following ſimilitude. i As eaſily and as effectually as the Straw, which being left upon the ground, and mixed with the Dung which lies there, is trampled upon by the Feet of Men and Beaſts.

11. And he k ſhall ſpread forth his hands l in the midſt of them, as he that ſwimmeth ſpreadeth forth his hands m to ſwim: and he ſhall bring down their pride together with the ſpoils of their hands n.

k Either, 1. Moab, who being plunged into a Sea of Troubles, ſhall endeavour to ſwim out of it, but to no purpoſe; or rather, 2. the Lord, who is deſigned by this very Pronoun he, both in the latter Clauſe of this Verſe, and in the following Verſe; whoſe Power they ſhall be no more able to reſiſt, than the VVaters can reſiſt a man that ſwims, who with great facility divides them hither and thither. l Or, ſtretch forth his hands to the utmoſt, to ſmite and deſtroy them. m VVhich he doth to the uttermoſt. n VVith all that wealth which they have gained by Rapine, and ſpoiling of God's People, and others. But the VVords are otherwiſe rendred by others, with, or by (as this Hebrew Particle is uſed, Eſth. 9. 25.) the arms of his hands: which he may mention, becauſe the Strength of a man, and of his Hands, conſiſteth in his Arms; whence alſo the arm in Scripture is oft put for ſtrength: or, by the motion or ſtroke of his hands, as all the ancient Tranſlators do in effect render it. And this ſeems to agree beſt with the Metaphor here borrowed from one that ſwimmeth, which is performed in that manner.

12. And the * fortreſs of the high fort of thy walls o ſhall he bring down, lay low, and bring to the ground, even to the duſt.

* Chap. 26. 5.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXVI.

IN that day a shall this song be sung in the land of Judah b, We have a strong city c, * salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks d.

* Chap. 60. 18.

a When God shall do such glorious Works for the Comfort of his People, and for the Ruine of his and their Enemies, as he hath described in the foregoing Chapter. b In the Church of God, which in Scripture is oft signified by the Titles of Judah and Jerusalem, and Sion, or the like. c Jerusalem, or the Church, which is oft called or compared to a City, as Psal. 87. 3. Revel. 3. 12. & 11. 2. & 21. 2. d God's immediate and saving Protection shall be to his Church in stead of Walls, &c. But I conceive, with submission, the Words may very fitly be thus rendred, He will set or put, or make her walls and bulwarks salvation, i. e. as safe as Salvation it self: or, in safety, there being only a defect of the Preposition, which is very frequent in Scripture.

2. * Open ye the gates e, that the righteous nation f which keepeth the † truth g may enter in.

* Psal. 118. 19, 20.

e Of the City mentioned v. 1. f Either, 1. those godly Jews who are returning from Babylon; or, 2. the whole Body of righteous and holy Men, whether Jews or Gentiles. For he seems to speak here, as he apparently did in the foregoing Chapter, of the Times of the Gospel. g Which is sincere and stedfast in the Profession and Practice of the True Religion.

3 Thou wilt keep him in † perfect peace, whose ‖ mind is staied on thee h: because he trusteth in thee.

† Heb. peace, peace.
‖ Or, thought, or, imagination.

h Heb. the fixed thought or mind (i. e. the Man whose Mind and Thoughts are fixed and setled upon thee by Faith, as the next Clause explains it, the Qualification being put for the Person so qualified, as folly and wisdom are put for a Fool and a Wise man, Prov. 24. 9. Mic. 6. 9. and peace for a Man of peace, Psal. 120. 7.) thou wilt keep in peace, peace, i. e. in all manner of peace, in constant and perfect peace. In the foregoing Verse the Righteous were admitted into the City, and here they are preserved and defended in it by God's Almighty Power.

4. Trust ye in the LORD for ever i: for in the LORD JEHOVAH is † everlasting strength k.

† Heb. the rock of Ages. Deut. 32. 4.

i. In all Times and Conditions. k Heb. the rock of ages, a sure Refuge to all those that trust in him, through all generations; therefore you may safely trust in him, and that for ever.

5. ¶ For he bringeth down l them that dwell on high m, the * lofty city n, he layeth it low, he layeth it low, even to the ground, he bringeth it even to the dust.

* Chap. 25. 12. & 32. 19.

l Heb. he hath brought down, which yet may be put for the future, he will bring down, &c. You may trust him; for he can and doth raise some, and throw down others, according to his own good pleasure. m He speaks not so much of heighth of Place, as of Dignity and Power; in which sence also he mentions the lofty city in the next Clause. n VVhich may be understood either of proud Babylon; or, collectively, of all the strong and stately Cities of God's Enemies.

6. The foot shall tread it down, even the feet of the poor, and the steps of the needy o.

o God will bring it under the Feet of his poor and weak and despised People.

7. The way of the just is uprightness p: thou most upright, dost weigh the path of the just q.

p Or, most even or plain. Heb. evenness or plainness. VVhich is understood either, 1. of the Rectitude or Goodness of his Actions or Course: or rather, 2. of the good Success of his Affairs: for this suits best with the Coherence. VVhen the way of the wicked is rugged, in which they easily stumble and fall into mischief, of which he spoke v. 5, 6. the path of Just men is plain and smooth, and they walk safely and comfortably in it. q The sence of the VVords thus rendred is, Thou, O God, who art most upright in all thy ways, and therefore a Lover of Uprightness, and of all upright Men, dost weigh (i. e. examine) the path of the just, the course of his Actions, and, which is implied, dost approve of them, and therefore direct them to an happy issue. But the VVords are otherwise rendred by some late Learned Interpreters, to this purpose, Thou dost level or make plain (as this very VVord signifies Psal. 78. 50.) the path of the just exactly Heb. with evenness, or evenly, so as to make it very even. Thus the first clause declares that it was even or plain, and this sheweth whence or by whom it is made such, even by God.

8. Yea, * in the way of thy judgments, O LORD, have we waited for thee r; the desire of our soul is to thy Name, and to the remembrance of thee s.

* Chap. 64. 5.

r And as we thy People have loved and served thee when thou hast made our way plain and easie for us; so we have not forsaken thee, but waited upon thee, when thou hast made it rugged and troublesom by thy Judgments. He speaks of the same Just man, v. 7. 8, 9. though it be with a change of the Numbers and Persons, which is usual in Prophetical writings, the just, v. 7. we, v. 8. I, v. 9. s Heb. to thy name and thy memory; which, by a known Figure called Hendiadys, may be put for the remembrance of thy Name. And the Name of God is here, as it is in many other places, put for God himself, as he hath made himself known by his VVord and VVorks. And so the sence of this clause is, our Affections are not alienated from thee by thy judgments, but we still continue to desire thy Presence and Favour, and we support and comfort our selves with the remembrance of what thou art, and what thou hast done, and what thou hast promised to be and do to thy People.

9. * With my soul t have I u desired thee in the night x, yea, with my spirit within me will I seek thee y early z: for when thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness a.

t Sincerely and most affectionately, as Psal. 63. 1. and elsewhere. u The Prophet speaks this in the name of all God's People, by comparing this with the foregoing Verse. x Either, 1. figuratively, in the time of Affliction, which is oft called night or darkness; or rather, 2. properly, as appears from the next clause, wherein early or in the morning is opposed to it. VVhen others are sleeping, my thoughts and desires are working towards God. y By fervent Prayer for thy lovingkindness. z Betimes in the morning, as the word signifies. a And good reason it is that we should thus desire and seek thee in the way of thy judgments, because this is the very design of thy judgments, that men should thereby be awakened to learn and return to their duty; and this is a common effect of them, that those who have been careless in prosperity, are made wiser and better by Afflictions. The inhabitants of the world seem to be here taken not in opposition to God's people, as if not they only, but even the wicked world would do thus; but in a general notion, so as to include, yea principally to design God's people, as may be gathered both from the former part of this, and the foregoing verse, in which he describes their pious carriage under Affliction; as also from the two following verses, in which he speaks of the wicked, whom he seems to oppose to these inhabitants of the world, because these learn Righteousness, whilst those wicked men remain incorrigible both under mercies and judgments, v. 10. 11.

10. * Let favour be shewed to the wicked, yet will he not learn righteousness b: in the land of uprightness c will he deal unjustly, and will not behold the majesty of the LORD d.

* Eccl. 8. 12.

b This is the carriage of thy people; but the course of Wicked men is directly contrary in all conditions: For if thou doest spare them, when thou punishest thine own People, they will not accept of that gracious Invitation to Repentance, nor walk worthy of so great a Mercy. c Even in God's Church, and among his People, where Righteousness is professed and taught, and by many practised; and where Unrighteousness is discountenanced and punished: all which things are Aggravations of his Sin. d Although God gives such plain and clear discoveries of his Majesty and Glory, not only in his word, but also in his works, and especially in this glorious work of his patience and mercy to wicked men, yet they wilfully shut their Eyes at it, and will not acknowledge it.

11. LORD, when thy hand is lifted up, they * will not see e: but they shall see f, and be ashamed for their envy † at the people g; yea, the fire of thine enemies h shall devour them.

* Job 34. 27. Psal. 28. 5. Chap. 5. 12.

e And they are guilty of the same obstinate Blindness when thou dost smite and punish them, which is commonly signified by lifting up thy hand, as Ezek. 44. 12. Micah 5. 9. Compare also 2 Sam. 20. 21. 1 Kings 11. 26. Or, as others render it, when thine hand is high or exalted, i. e. VVhen thy works are most evident and most glorious, when thou appearest most gloriously for the defence of thy People, and for the punishment of thine and their Enemies, they will not see. f The same word is repeated in another sence: They shall feel and know that by sad and costly Experience, which they would not learn by other and easier ways. Seeing is oft put for feeling; in which sence men are said to see affliction, Lam. 3. 1. and to see death, Psal. 89. 48. and the like. g Or, at or towards thy people, the Pronoun thy being repeated out of the following Clause, as it is in many other places of Scripture, as hath been before noted. Their Envy and Hatred against God's People blinded their Minds, that they neither could nor would see that God was on their side, though the Tokens of it were most manifest and undeniable. Which was the Case of Pharaoh and the Egyptians, who were not sensible that the Lord fought for Israel against the Egyptians, as they said Exod. 14. 25. till it was too late. h Not efficiently, but objectively: Such Fire or VVrath as thou useſt to pour forth upon thine implacable Enemies. As my wrong, Gen. 16. 5. Is not the VVrong done by me, but to me; and my violence, Jer. 51. 35. is the violence done to me, as we translate it, not by me.

12. LORD, thou wilt ordain peace for us i: for thou alſo haſt wrought all our works k * in us l.

* Or, for us.

i As thou wilt deſtroy thine and our Enemies, ſo thou wilt bleſs us thy People with Peace and Proſperity. k Either 1. all the Good VVorks done by us, which are the Effects of thy Grace: or rather, 2. all the Good and Great VVorks which have been wrought for us, all our wonderful Deliverances and ſingular Bleſſings come from thee. And ſo the Argument is this, God hath delivered us formerly upon all occaſions, and therefore he will ſtill deliver us, and give us Peace: VVhich Inference is frequently made by Holy Men in Scripture. l Heb. to or for us.

* 2 Chron. 12. 8.

13. O LORD, our God, * other lords beſides thee m have had dominion over us n: but by thee only o will we make mention of thy Name p.

m Others beſides thee, who art our only Judge, and King, and Lawgiver, Iſa. 33. 22. and beſides thoſe Governours who have been ſet up by thee, and have ruled us for thee, and in ſubordination to thee, even Foreign and Heathenish Lords, ſuch as the Philiſtins, and lately the Aſſyrians. n Have exerciſed a Tyrannical Power over us. o By thy Favour and Help, by which alone (and not by our Strength or Merits) we have been reſcued from their Tyranny. p VVe will celebrate thy Praiſe, and truſt in thee for the future. Thou only haſt given us both Ability and Occaſion to magnifie thy Name, whereas without thy ſuccour we had gone into the place of ſilence, where there is no remembrance of thee, as is ſaid Pſal. 6. 5.

14. They are dead, they ſhall not live; they are deceaſed, they ſhall not riſe q: therefore r haſt thou viſited and deſtroyed them, and made all their memory to periſh s.

q Thoſe Tyrants and Enemies are utterly and irrecoverably deſtroyed, ſo as they ſhall never live or riſe again to moleſt us. Poſſibly he ſpeaks of the miraculous Deſtruction of Sennacherib's Army before Jeruſalem. r That they might be ſo effectually deſtroyed, thou didſt undertake the VVork. Or, rather, becauſe (as this Particle is uſed Numb. 14. 43. Pſal. 42. 6.) thou haſt, &c. as it follows. s Thou haſt deſtroyed both them and theirs, and all the Monuments or Memorials of their Greatneſs and Glory.

15. Thou haſt increaſed the nation t, O LORD, thou haſt increaſed the nation, thou art glorified u; thou haſt removed it far unto all the ends of the earth x.

t Heb. Thou haſt added to the nation. VVhich may be underſtood either, 1. in way of Mercy, of adding to their Numbers, as our Tranſlation takes it; and ſo we have in effect the ſame Phraſe, 2 Sam. 24. 3. The Lord add to the people, &c. and Pſal. 115. 14. in the Hebrew Text, The Lord ſhall add upon or to you: or 2. in way of Judgment, of adding to their Plagues or Miſeries, of which we read Rev. 22. 18. in which ſence the Phraſe is found in the Hebrew Text, Pſal. 120. 3. What ſhall be added to thee; and in that uſual Form of Imprecation, The Lord do ſo to me and more, Ruth 1. 17. 1 Sam. 3. 16. &c. where it is in the Hebrew, The Lord do ſo to me and add. And this ſence ſeems to be favoured by the Context, as alſo by the ancient Greek Tranſlators, who render the Words, add to them evil or puniſhments. And ſo the VVord adding may be uſed emphatically and ſarcaſtically: God indeed will add to them; but what? Not Numbers, and Power, and Glory, as they expected; but Plagues or Judgments, one after another. This nation is ſuppoſed by the Current of Interpreters to be the People of Iſrael, emphatically called the nation. Poſſibly it may be the Aſſyrians, of whom he ſpoke in the laſt Verſe. But this I propoſe with ſubmiſſion. u Thy Juſtice is glorified in their Puniſhment or Deſtruction. x VVhich may be underſtood either, 1. of Iſrael, and that either in a way of Mercy, Thou haſt by deſtroying the Aſſyrians enlarged thy People, who were ſhut up in Jeruſalem, ſo that now they may go to the remoteſt parts of the Land; or in way of Judgment: Thou haſt removed thy People out of their own Land, and ſuffered them to be carried Captive to the ends of the Earth: Or, 2. of the Aſſyrians; Thou haſt removed them from Jeruſalem, which they had beſiegedy and cauſed them to flee into their own Country, which in Scripture phraſe was in the ends of the earth; of which ſee Iſa. 5. 26. & 13. 5.

16. O LORD, in trouble have they y viſited thee z, they poured out a a † prayer b when thy chaſtning was upon them c.

y To wit, thy People, as appears both from the Matter of this Verſe, and from the following Verſes. z Come into thy Preſence, with their Prayers and Supplications, as the next Clauſe explains it. a VVhich notes the Plenty or rather the Earneſtneſs of their Prayers, as Pſal. 42. 4. & 142. 2. b Heb. a muttering or lowly ſpeech, ſuch as Charmers uſe, and ſuch as Hezekiah uſed when he was in great diſtreſs, Iſa. 38. 14. Like a crane or ſwallow ſo did I chatter, I did mourn as a dove; and ſuch as is uſual in caſe of great humiliation and dejection of Mind. c VVhen thou waſt puniſhing them for their Sins.

17. Like as * a woman with child, that draweth near the time of her delivery, is in pain, and crieth out in her pangs: ſo have we been d in thy ſight e, O LORD.

* John 16. 21.

d Such was our Anguiſh and Danger. e VVhilſt thou didſt only look upon us like a meer Spectator, without affording us the leaſt degree of Pity or Help. Or, this Phraſe notes only the reality of the Thing; God was VVitneſs of this our Miſery, and knoweth the Truth of what I ſay.

18. We have been with child, we have been in pain, we have as it were brought forth wind f, we have not wrought any deliverance g in the earth h, neither have the inhabitants of the world i fallen.

f VVe have had the Torment of a woman in childbearing, but not the comfort of a living child, Job. 16. 21. for we have brought forth nothing but wind, all our labours and hopes were vain and unſucceſsful. The Prophet here repreſents their deplorable and deſperate condition, before God appeared ſo eminently to deliver them. g VVe found that we were utterly unable to deliver our ſelves. h Or, in the land, in our own Country, where yet we had far greater Advantages than we could have had elſewhere. i The Aſſyrians, or our other Enemies; for they are here oppoſed to God's People.

19. Thy dead men ſhall live k, together with my dead body l ſhall they ariſe m: awake n, and ſing, ye that dwell in the duſt o: for thy dew p is as the dew of herbs q, and the earth ſhall caſt out the dead r.

k The Prophet here turneth his Speech to God's People, and gives them a Cordial to ſupport them in their deep diſtreſs, expreſſed in the foregoing Verſe. Thy dead men are not like thoſe, v. 14. for they ſhall not live, as I there ſaid; but thine ſhall live. You ſhall certainly be delivered from all your fears and dangers. Nothing is more frequent, both in Scripture and other Authors, than for great Calamities to be compared to death, and deliverance from them to life, and reviving and reſurrection: And particularly the Captivity of the Jews in Babylon, and their deliverance out of it, is largely expreſſed by this very ſimilitude, Ezek. 37. 11, &c. l As I my ſelf, who am one of your number, and of theſe Dead men, ſhall live again. You ſhall be delivered together with me. Which he might add, to meet with an Objection; for they might think that God would take ſome ſpecial Care of this Holy Prophet, and would preſerve him when they ſhould be deſtroyed. No, ſaith he, As I am at preſent like a dead Carkaſs no leſs than you, ſo you ſhall be reſtored to Life no leſs than I. If the Supplement of our Tranſlation ſeems to be too literal, it may be rendred to the ſame purpoſe, as my body, the Particle as, being oft underſtood, as I have divers times obſerved: As my dead body ſhall riſe, ſo ſhall theirs alſo; we are equally dead, and ſhall equally live again. m Unto Life, as appears from the former Clauſe. n Out of your ſleep, even the ſleep of death, as it is called, Pſal. 13. 3. Death being oft compared to a Sleep, as John 11. 11. Acts 7. 60. and Reſtauration to Life unto awaking, as 2 Kings 4. 31. o You that are dead and buried in the duſt, as the Dead are ſaid to ſleep in the duſt, Dan. 12. 2. p The favour and bleſſing of God upon thee, which is oft compared to the dew, as Hoſ. 14. 5. Mic. 5. 7. The Pronoun thy is here taken not efficiently, but objectively, as thy curſe, Gen. 27. 13. is the Curſe coming upon thee. q VVhich gently refreſheth and reviveth them, and maketh them to grow and flouriſh. q As an abortive Birth is caſt out of the VVomb, to which the Grave is compared, Job 1. 21. But becauſe the Verb here uſed doth not ſignifie to caſt out, but to caſt down, which ſeems not proper here, theſe VVords may be and are, both by ancient and later Interpreters, rendred otherwiſe, and thou wilt caſt down the land of the giants, or of the violent ones, of the proud and potent Tyrants of the VVorld. For the VVord here rendred dead, is elſewhere rendred giants, as 2 Sam. 21. 16. 18. See alſo on Job 26. 5. Prov. 9. 18. & 21. 16. But then the VVords ſeem to be better rendred, and thou wilt call the giants down to the ground: Either, 1. thou, O God, who is oft understood in such Cases; or rather, 2. thou, O my People, to whom he speaks in the foregoing Clauses of the Verse, thy dead body, and thy dew, and here continueth his Speech, thou wilt, or shalt cast, &c. thou shalt subdue even thy most Giant-like and mighty Enemies. Which, though it be properly God's Work, the Church is oft said to do, because she by her Prayers engageth God to do it. And so as the former Clauses of the Verse speak of the Deliverance and Prosperity of God's Church and People, so this Clause speaks of the Destruction of their Enemies, which usually accompanieth it.

20. ¶ Come, my people s, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee t: hide thy self as it were * for a little moment u, until the indignation x be overpast.

* Psal. 30. 5. Chap 54. 7, 8. 2 Cor. 4. 17.

s Having foretold the wonderful Deliverance and great Happiness of God's People, and the utter Destruction of their Enemies, lest they should think they were now entring into the possession of this Felicity, he adds what here follows, and intimates, that for the present they were to expect Storms, and to prepare for them, and patiently to wait God's time for the Accomplishment of so great a Mercy. t Withdraw thy self from the Company and Conversation of the wicked World, lest partaking with them in their Sins, thou dost also partake of their Plagues; pour out thy Prayers to God in thy Closet, as this may be explained, by comparing Matt. 6. 6. put thy self under the protection of my Providence and Grace by Faith and Prayer. He alludes to the common practice of men, who when there are Storms or Dangers abroad, betake themselves into their own Houses or Chambers for safety; or, as some think, to that History Exod. 9. 19, 20. or to that Command of not going out of their houses, Exod. 12, 22. or to the like Charge given to Rahab, as the Condition of her Preservation, Jos. 2. u Whereby he intimates, that all their Afflictions, how long and tedious soever they may seem, are but short and momentany, in comparison of that Happiness which is reserved for them. x The dreadful Effects of God's Anger, those sore Judgments of God mentioned in the following Verse.

* Mic. 1. 3.

21. For behold the LORD * cometh out of his place y to punish the inhabitants of the earth z for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her † blood, and shall no more cover her slain a.

y Cometh down from Heaven; which God in Scripture is frequently said to do, when he undertaketh any great and glorious Work, either of delivering his People, or of destroying their Enemies. The Speech is borrowed from the manner of Princes, who come out of their Palaces either to sit in Judgment, or to fight against their Enemies, which is the case here. z All the Enemies of God and of his People; for these are here opposed to God's People: Therefore take heed you be not found in the number of them. a The innocent Blood which hath been spilled upon the Earth shall be brought to light, and shall be severely revenged upon the Murderers. For the Phrase, see on Gen. 4. 10. Job 16. 18. Ezek. 24. 7.

CHAP. XXVII.

1. IN that day the LORD with his sore and great and strong sword shall punish Leviathan a the ‖ piercing serpent b, even Leviathan that crooked serpent c, and he shall slay * the dragon d that is in the sea.

‖ Or, crossing like a bar, * Chap. 51. 9.

a What kind of Creature the Leviathan is, see in my Notes on Job 41. 1. &c. Whence it is evident, that it was a very great and terrible Sea-monster. But here it is certain that the Expression is metaphorical, and that by this Leviathan, Serpent, and Dragon, (for all signifie the same thing) he understands some very powerful Enemy, or Enemies, (for the singular Number may be here put for the plural, as it is in many other places) of God, and of his Church or People, which may well be called by these names, partly for their great might, and partly for the great terrour and destruction which they cause upon the Earth, as the Leviathan doth in the Sea. He seems to have a special respect to some particular Enemy and Oppressour of God's People; either the Assyrian Emperour, who now was so; or rather the Babylonian, who should be so. Some understand this of the Devil: but although it may be applied to him in a mystical sence, it seems to be literally meant of some potent and visible Adversary; which seems more agreeable to the following Verses, and to the Usage of this and other Prophets. b Which by its Sting pierceth quickly and deeply into Mens Bodies. Or, the bar (as this word is elsewhere used) serpent, as this may be called, either for its length, or strength, or swift motion. c Winding and turning it self with great variety and dexterity. Whereby he seems to signifie the Craftiness and Activity of this Enemy, which being added to his Strength, makes it more formidable. d Or rather, the whale, as this Word is rendred, Gen. 1. 21. Job 7. 12. and elsewhere; which agrees better with the following Words, that is in the sea, which possibly were added onely to limit that general and ambiguous word to a Sea-monster, and not to describe the Place in which the Enemy signified by this Dragon had his abode. Although the sea, which here follows, may be metaphorically understood of the great largeness of his Empire, and the multitude of his Subjects, by comparing this with Revel. 17. 1, 15.

2. In that day e sing ye unto her; A vineyard of red wine f.

e When this potent Enemy shall be destroyed. f The words in the Hebrew Text lie thus, A vineyard (Behold, a vineyard); or, Jacob, or Israel, my Church and People, which is sufficiently understood from the next Verse, and is expressed v. 6. shall be a vineyard, shall be defended and dressed, shall thrive and flourish like a Vineyard) of red wine (i. e. of the choicest and best Wine, which in those Parts was Red, as appears both from Scripture, as Prov. 23. 31. whence it is called the blood of the grape, Gen. 49. 11. Deut. 32. 14. and from other Authors) sing ye (O you faithful Souls, sing with Joy and Thanksgiving to God) to (or of, or concerning, as this Prefix is elsewhere used) her, or it, to wit, the Vineyard or Church (which is frequently compared to a Vineyard, as Psal. 80. 8. Isa. 5. 7. and elsewhere) now delivered from her great Enemy, and blessed with Peace and Prosperity.

3. I the LORD do keep it g, I will water it every moment: lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day.

g I will secure it, that neither Men, nor Beasts, nor drought shall spoil it; which alone are the things that can hurt it. I will protect my Church from all the Assaults of her Enemies, and supply her with all necessary Provisions, with my Ordinances, and with my Spirit and Grace.

4 Fury h is not in me: who would set the briers and thorns against me in battel? I would ‖ go through them, I would burn them together i.

‖ Or, march against.

h To wit, against my Vineyard or my People; which is easily understood both from the foregoing and following Verses. I have been displeased with them, and have chastised them; but I am not implacable towards them, and resolved utterly to destroy them, as their Enemies are, and would have me to be. i This is added as a Reason of the foregoing clause and assertion, which may be conceived, either, 1. thus, I rather desire to contend with Briars and Thorns, (i. e.) with the wicked Enemies of my Church, who are thus called, Isa. 10. 17. Ezek. 28. 24. and if my Wrath was now kindled against them, as it is against my People, I would be furious towards them, and never leave till I had utterly consumed them; but I will deal more indulgently with my People. Which Exposition seems to receive some light and strength from v. 6, 7, 8. Or, 2. thus, for I consider the weakness of my People, that if I should let loose my Fury upon them, they could no more stand before me, than Briars and Thorns, (to which God's People, when they fall into sin, and provoke God, are not unfitly resembled) can stand before a devouring Fire, and therefore they would in an instant be utterly destroyed; which I will not do. And this consideration of Man's Imbecillity is elsewhere alledged as a Reason of God's Indulgence, as Psal. 103. 13, 14, 15, 16. Isa. 57. 16. But this I deliver with submission.

5. Or k let him l take hold of my strength m, that he may make peace with me n, and he shall make peace with me.

k Or if at any time Fury be, or seem to be in me against my Vineyard or People. l My People, as is clealy implied from the following words; for there is no peace to those who are not God's People, or to the wicked, Isa. 57. 21. and is expressed in the following Verse. m (i. e.) Take hold of my Arm, which is metonymically called strength, and stay it from giving the Blow, not by Force, which is impossible, but by humble Submission and earnest Supplication. Or, strengthen himself, or be strong (as this Word properly signifies, and is elsewhere used) by my strength; not by his own strength, which he will oppose to mine, but by my strength, which he may by humble and frequent Prayers, not only restrain from doing him hurt, but effectually engage to assist him, and do him good. He seems to allude to that History of Jacob's wrestling with the Angel of God, Gen. 32. 28. which he could never have done, but by a strength received from God. n that instead of opposing me, he may in this manner reconcile himself to me. Or, and he shall make peace with me, as the same words are rendred in the next Clause; which may be repeated to assure them, of that great and important Favour, that God would make Peace with them. Or, the words may be rendred in both Clauses, let him make peace with me, yea, let him make peace with me, this Future Verb being taken imperatively, as the other is in the former Clause of the Verse.

6. He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root o: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit p.

o To be firmly ſetled in their Poſſeſſions, and not toſſed hither and thither, as they have been. p Their Poſterity ſhall be ſo numerous, that their own Land ſhall not be ſufficient for them, but they ſhall be forced to ſeek Habitations in other Countries, and ſhall repleniſh them with People. But this ſeems to be underſtood of the ſpiritual Seed of Jacob, or of Believers, who are oft called God's Iſrael, as Rom. 9. 6. and elſewhere.

† Heb. according to the ſtroke of thoſe.

7. ¶ Hath he ſmitten him, † as he ſmote thoſe that ſmote him q? or is he ſlain according to the ſlaughter of them that are ſlain by him r?

q The Queſtion implies a Denial; He hath not ſo ſmitten him, to wit, Jacob. He hath not dealt ſo ſeverely with his People, as he hath dealt with his and their Enemies, whom he hath utterly deſtroyed. This may look, either, 1. backward upon times paſt. If you conſult former Experiences, you will find that God hath done ſo, hath ſpared and reſtored his People, and in Judgment remembred Mercy to them, when he hath totally ruined their Enemies; or, 2. forward upon the time to come, of which he ſpeaks as of a thing paſt, after the manner of the Prophets, and of which he ſpeaks in the next Verſe. r Of thoſe who were ſlain by Iſrael, or rather, by God at the Prayer and on the behalf of Iſrael. Heb. of his ſlain ones (i. e.) of thoſe of his Smiters or Enemies who were ſlain. Which Expoſition is favoured, by comparing this with the foregoing Clauſe.

* Job 23. 6. Jer. 10. 24. & 30. 11. & 46. 28.

‖ Or, when thou ſendeſt it forth.

‖ Or, when he removeth it.

8. * In meaſure s ‖ when it ſhooteth forth t, thou wilt debate with it u: ‖ he ſtayeth his rough wind x in the day of the eaſt-wind y.

s VVith moderation, in certain Proportions which God meteth out and fitteth to their ſtrength. t VVhen the Vine ſhooteth forth its luxuriant Branches, he, like the Vine-dreſſer, cutteth them off, but ſo as not to ſpoil, or deſtroy the Vine. Or, as divers Interpreters render it, and the word properly and frequently ſignifies, in, or by caſting, or diſmiſſing, or ſending her, or it out, or, when thou doſt caſt, or ſend her out, to wit. out of her own Land, in which ſhe was planted, into Captivity, He alludes to a Man that divorceth his VVife, which is expreſſed by this word; but withal intimates, that this ſhall not be peremptory and perpetual, as other Divorces were. u God is ſaid to debate or contend with men, when he executeth his Judgments upon them, as Iſa. 49. 25. & 57. 16. Amos 7. 4. x He mitigateth the ſeverity of the Judgment. But, I muſt confeſs, I do not meet with any of the ancient or modern Tranſlators that agree with ours in this Verſion: nor is the Hebrew Verb ever uſed, ſo far as I know, in the ſignification of ſlaying, or reſtraining: beſides our Tranſlation takes no notice of the Hebrew Prepoſition. But this VVord unqueſtionably ſignifies to remove, or take away, as 2 Sam. 20. 13. Prov. 25. 4, 5. and thus moſt Interpreters underſtand it. And ſo the Place is very fitly thus rendred, he (or, when he, which Particle may eaſily be underſtood out of the former clauſe, as is uſual) removeth (underſtand either it, to wit, the Vine; or them, to wit, the Enemies of God and his People. And ſo this agreeth with the former Verſe, in repreſenting the different way of God's Proceeding againſt his People, and his and their Enemies. Either way there is onely a defect of the Pronoun, which I have before ſhewed in divers places to be very uſual in the Hebrew Language) with or by his rough wind, by which ſometimes Vines and other Trees are pulled up by the Roots, as that did 1 Kings 19. 11 whereby he underſtands his moſt terrible Judgements. y In the time when he ſendeth forth his Eaſt-wind; which he mentions becauſe that Wind in thoſe Parts was moſt violent and moſt hurtful to Trees and Fruits, as hath been obſerved, and therefore is uſed to ſignifie the moſt grievous Calamities.

* 1 Kings 18. 38.

9. By this z therefore a ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged b, and this is all the fruit to take away his ſin c: * when he maketh d all the ſtones of the altar e as chalk-ſtones f that are beaten in ſunder g, the groves h and ‖ images ſhall not ſtand up i.

z By this manner of God's dealing with his People. a That the difference betwixt Jacob and his Enemies, in their ſeveral Sufferings, may appear. b Heb. expiated, or forgiven upon their true Repentance, which ſhall be the happy effect of their Chaſtiſement. c The effect hereof ſhall not be to deſtroy the Sinner, as it is in other Men, but onely to take away the Guilt and Power of their Sins. d VVhich Sin of Jacob's ſhall be purged and taken away, and the Judgment removed, when he ſhall truly repent of all his ſins, and eſpecially of his Idolatry, to which they were moſt inclined, and for which the moſt of God's Judgments which they had hitherto felt had been inflicted upon them. e VVhich by an uſual Enallage, may be put for the Altars, to wit, their Idolatrous Altars, as is evident from the following VVords. Poſſibly he may ſay the altar with reſpect to that particular Altar which Ahaz had ſet up in the place of God's own Altar; and this Prophecy might be delivered either to the Prophet, or by him to the People, in Ahaz his time, while that Altar ſtood and was uſed. f When he ſhall break all thoſe goodly Altars in pieces, which God by his Law had enjoyned. g VVhich kind of ſtones are of themſelves apt to break into ſmall pieces, and by the Artificer are broken into ſmaller pieces for making Mortar. He ſeems to allude to that Fact of Moſes, who, to ſhew his deteſtation of Idolatry, took the golden calf, and burnt it, and ground it to powder; and intimates, that when their Repentance ſhould be ſincere, it would diſcover it ſelf by their Zeal in deſtroying the Inſtruments of their Idolatry. h VVhich were frequently erected to the Honour of Idols, of which we have many Inſtances in Scripture, which God therefore commanded his People to deſtroy, Deut. 7. 5. & 12. 3. i Shall be thrown down with Contempt and Indignation.

10. Yet k the defenced city l ſhall be deſolate, and the habitation m forſaken and left like a wilderneſs n: there ſhall the calf o feed, and there ſhall he lie down, and conſume the branches thereof p.

k Yet before this glorious Promiſe concerning the removal of Iſrael's ſin and Calamity be fulfilled, a dreadful and deſolating Judgment ſhall firſt come upon them. l Jeruſalem and the reſt of the defenced Cities in the Land, the ſingular number being put for the plural. m The moſt inhabited and populous places. Or, as the Hebrew word properly ſignifies, their pleaſant habitations, whether in the City or Country. n VVhich was fulfilled in the time of the Babyloniſh Captivity. o Which is ſynecdochically put for all ſorts of Cattel, which may ſecurely feed there, becauſe there ſhall be no Men left to diſturb or annoy them. p Of their pleaſant Habitation of the young Trees which ſhall grow up in that ruinated Country.

11. When the boughs thereof are withered q, they ſhall be broken off r: the women s come and ſet them on fire: for * it is a people of no underſtanding t: therefore he that made them u, will not have mercy on them; and he that formed them, will ſhew them no favour.

* Deut. 32. 28. Chap. 1. 3.

q When they ſhall begin to wither, as they will when they are thus gnawed and cropped by Cattel. r That there may be no hopes nor poſſibility of their Recovery. s He mentions women, either becauſe it is their uſual VVork in the Country to make Fires, and to gather Fewel for them; or to ſignifie, that the Men ſhould be generally deſtroyed. t They do not underſtand either me or themſelves, either my word or works; they know not the things which concern their own Peace and Happineſs, but like brute Beaſts, made to be deſtroyed, they blindly and wilfully go on in thoſe Courſes which will bring them to certain ruine. u Both as they are Creatures, and as they are his People; for this alſo is expreſſed by making or forming, as Pſal. 100. 3. & 102. 18. & 149. 2. Thus he overthroweth their falſe and preſumptuous Conceits, that God would never deſtroy the Work of his own hands, nor the Seed of Abraham his Friend for ever, and plainly declareth the contrary.

12. ¶ And it ſhall come to paſs in that day that, the LORD ſhall beat off x from the chanel of the river unto the ſtream of Egypt y, and ye ſhall be gathered one by one z, O ye children of Iſrael.

x Or, ſhall beat out: which is not meant in a way of Puniſhment, which is rather deſigned by threſhing, as Iſa. 21. 10. & 25. 10. than by beating; but as an Act of Mercy, as is evident from the following Clauſe of this, and from the next Verſe. It is a Metaphor from ſome Grains which were beaten out with a Rod or Staff, of which ſee Iſa. 28. 27, 28. and then were carefully gathered and laid up for the uſe of Man. y From Euphrates to Nilus, which were the two Borders of the Land of Promiſe, Joſ. 1. 4. & 13. 3. All the Iſraelites which are left in the Land; which are here oppoſed to thoſe of them that are diſperſed into foreign Parts, ſuch as Aſſyria and Egypt. z Which ſignifies either the ſmallneſs of the Remnant of that numerous People; or rather God's exact and ſingular Care of them, that not one of them ſhould be loſt.

13. And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, that the great trumpet a ſhall be blown, and they ſhall come which were ready to periſh in the land of Aſſyria b, and the out-caſts in the land of Egypt c, and ſhall worſhip the LORD in the holy mount at Jeruſalem.

a Which may be heard even to the remoteſt Parts of the Earth. God ſhall ſummon them all together as it were by ſound of Trumpet, to wit, by an eminent Call or Act of his Providence on their behalf. He alludes to the Cuſtom of calling the Iſraelites together with Trumpets; of which ſee Numb. 10. 2, 3. b Where the ten Tribes were carried Captive. c Where many of the Jews were, as is manifeſt both from Scripture, as Jer. 43. 7. & 44. 28. Hoſ. 8. 13. Zech. 10. 10. and from other Authors.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXVIII.

WO to the crown of pride a, to the drunkards b of Ephraim c, whose glorious beauty is a fading flower d, which are on the head of the † fat valleys f of them that are * overcome g with wine.

a That proud and insolent Kingdom; for the Crown is oft put for the Kingdom, as Jer. 13. 18. &c. b Either 1. Metaphorically, drunk with proud self-confidence, and security, and prosperity: Or rather 2. Properly, by comparing this with v. 7. and Hos. 7. 5. Amos 6. 6. where the Israelites are taxed with this sin. For having many and excellent Vines among them, they were exposed to this sin, and frequently overcome by it. c Of the Kingdom of the Ten Tribes, which is commonly called by the name of Ephraim, as hath been oft noted before. d Whose Glory and Greatness shall suddenly wither and perish. e Which proud and drunken Israelites have their common and chief abode. Or, which is, i. e. which flower is; or which beauty or glory is. f Either 1. in Samaria, which might well be called the Head, as being seated upon a Mountain, and the Head of the Kingdom, and The head of the fat Vallies, because it was encompassed with many fat and rich Vallies. Or. 2. Upon the chief or choicest (as this word signifies, Exod. 30. 23. Cant. 4. 14. Isa. 9. 14, 15. and elsewhere) of the fat or rich Vallies: which they made occasions and instruments of Luxury. g Heb. That are smitten, or broken, or overthrown, or knocked down; all which significations of this word fitly agree to Drunkards.

2. Behold, the Lord hath h a mighty and strong One, i, which as a tempest of hail, and a destroying storm, as a flood of mighty waters overflowing, shall cast down k to the earth with the hand l.

h To wit, at his command, prepared and ready to execute His Judgments. i The King of Assyria. k Understand it, the crown of pride, or them, the drunkards of Ephraim. l Or, by his hand, either by that Kings force or strong hand; or by the hand of God, which shall strengthen, and succeed him in this work.

3. The crown of pride, the drunkards of Ephraim shall be troden † under feet m.

m The Expression is emphatical; the Crown which was upon their own heads, shall be trodden under the feet of others; and they, whose Drunkenness made them stagger, and fall to the ground, shall be trodden down there.

4. And the glorious beauty which is on the head of the fat vally, shall be a fading flower, and as the hasty fruit n before the summer: which when he that looketh upon it, seeth it, while it is yet in his hand, he * eateth it up o.

n Which coming before the Season, and before other Fruits, is most acceptable. o Which, as soon as a Man sees he covets it, and plucks it off, yet doth not long enjoy it, but through greediness devours it, almost as soon as he can get it into his hand. And so shall it be with Ephraims glory, which his Enemies, as soon as they observe, shall covet and spoil, and devour it greedily, and with delight.

5. ¶ In that day p shall the LORD of hosts be for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty q unto the residue of his people r:

p When the Kingdom of Israel shall be utterly destroyed. q God shall give them eminent Glory and Beauty. r Unto the Kingdom of Judah, who shall continue in their own Country, when Israel is carried into Captivity.

6. And for a spirit of judgment to him that sitteth in judgment, and for strength s to them that turn the battel to the gate t.

s He explains how, or wherein God would glorify and beautify them, even by giving wisdom to their Rulers, and courage to their Souldiers; which two things contribute much to the strength and safety, and glory of a Nation. t To their Warriors; whom he describeth by this Phrase, to intimate, That their Valour should be crowned with Success, and that they should not only drive their Enemies from their own Gates and Land, but should pursue them into their own Lands, and besiege them in their own Cities, which Hezekiah did 2 Kings 18. 8.

7. ¶ But they also u have erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way x: the Priest y and the Prophet z have erred a through strong drink, they are swallowed up b of wine: they are out of the way through strong drink, they err in vision c, they stumble in Judgment d.

u But alas! Judah is guilty of the same sins with Israel, and therefore they also must expect the same Calamities; of which he speaks afterward. x They run into the same excess of VVine and strong drink, whereby they befor themselves, and fall into many errors and miscarriages, both in sacred and civil Things. The many emphatical Phrases and Repetitions of the same thing in other words, in this verse seem to evince, That he here speaks of Drunkenness, properly so called, although he afterward chargeth them with Ignorance, and Error, and Stupidity; which also were the Companions, and in part, the Effects of that Sin. y To whom strong Drink was expressly forbidden, in the time of their sacred Ministrations, lest they should thereby be led into errors in their work, Levit. 10. 9, 10. z The Teachers, who should have been patterns of Sobriety to the people, and to whom Sobriety was absolutely necessary for the right discharge of their Office. a In their conversation, and in their holy Administrations. b They are, as we say, drowned in it; their Senses and Reason are swallowed up, and lost in it. They design only to swallow it, but indeed are swallowed up by it. c The Prophets miscarry in their sacred Employment of Prophesying or Teaching, which is called Vision, Pro. 29. 18. and elsewhere. d The Priests mistake in pronouncing the Sentence of the Law, which was their duty, Deut. 17. 9, 10, 11.

8. For all tables e are full of vomit, and filthiness, so that there is no place f clean.

e At which the Priests and Prophets, and other Jews did eat and drink. They hardly made one sober Meal: Drunkenness was their daily practice. f No Table, or no part of the Table; no not so much as the holy Places, in which the Priests did frequently eat their Meals.

9. Whom shall he g teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand * doctrine? them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts h.

* Heb. the hearing.

g To wit, the Teacher, which is easily understood, out of the following Verb, either God or his Prophets, or Ministers. h VVho is there among this People, that are capable and willing to be taught the good knowledge of God? A Minister may as soon teach a young Child, as these Men.

10. For precept ‖ must be upon precept i, precept upon precept; line upon line k, line upon line; here a little, and there a little.

‖ Or, hath been.

i They must be taught, like little Children, slowly, and by leisure, the same things being oft repeated, because of their great dulness. k One line of the Book after another, as Children are taught to read.

11. For l with † * stammering lips m, and another tongue n † will he speak to this people o, † Heb. stammerings of lips.

* 1 Cor. 14. 21.
† Or, he hath spoken.

l Or, therefore, as this Particle is oft used. For this seems to be the punishment of their dulness. m Either 1. in way of condescension, as Mothers or Nurses teach Children, lisping and stammering with them. Or, 2. in way of judgment; which suits best with the next Clause. n By People of a strange Language, whom He shall bring among them, and into whose power He shall deliver them; which is a great aggravation of their Misery, see Deut. 28. 49. Jer. 5. 15. Ezek. 3. 5. o Seeing they will not hear Him speaking, by His Prophets Ministers, in their own Language, they shall hear their Enemies speaking to them in a strange and rough Language.

12. To whom he said p, This q is the rest r wherewith ye may cause the weary to rest s, and this is the refreshing: yet they would not hear t.

p To which People the Lord, by his Ministers, said. q This Doctrine or Precept, as it is expressed, ver. 9, 10. or the word of the Lord, as it follows, ver. 13. r The only way, in the observation of which you will find rest and satisfaction. s Heb. Cause the weary (understand either Soul or Country) to rest. As Rest is offered to you by the Prophets in God's name, do you embrace it; which is to be done by hearkening to God's VVord, as appears by the following Clauses. So shall this People, which hath been so oft, and so long wearied, and harassed by great and manifold Calamities, find Rest and Peace. t They are wilfully ignorant, and obstinately refused the very means of Instruction.

13. But the word of the LORD was unto them, precept upon precept, precept upon precept;

cept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little u; that they might go and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken x.

u The sence of the words thus rendred, may be this, They speak of God's VWord, with scorn and contempt, repeating the Prophets words in a scoffing manner, and with a stammering and ridiculous tone, saying, Precept upon precept, &c. as if they had said, It seems the Prophet takes us to be meer Children, that need to be taught our first Rudiments, and that but slowly. That these were scornful men and mockers, is affirmed, ver. 14, 22. and as scoffers frequently catch the words out of other mens Mouths, and use them in way of derision; so it may be thought they did with the Prophets words. But the words may be, and by divers learned Men, are rendred a little otherwise; And the word of the Lord shall be unto them, precept upon precept, &c. As this Method hath been used with them, and was altogether necessary for them; so it still is, and for the future shall be. As they were Children in understanding, they shall still continue to be such; they shall be ever learning, and never come to the knowledge of the Truth; as they formerly would not, so now they shall not profit by the VWord; and their sin shall be their punishment. And this seems to suit with the following Close, which notes the dreadful design and effect of that judicial blindness, That they may, or might go and fall backward, &c. x According to the former, which is our Translation, this Clause notes only the event, or consequent of their Sin: According to the Latter, it notes the just Judgment of God designed and inflicted for it; that God's VWord being so horribly abused by them, might be an occasion at which they might stumble and fall, and that backward, which is the worst, and most dangerous way of falling; and so be broken to pieces, or by which they might be snared and taken.

14. ¶ Wherefore hear the word of the LORD, ye scornful men y that rule this people, which is in Jerusalem.

y VWhich make a mock at sin, and at God's words and Threatnings; and doubt not by your witty Devices, and by your wicked Practices, to escape God's Judgments, of which we read in the next Verse.

15. Because ye have said z, We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement a; when the overflowing scourge b shall pass through c, it shall not come unto us; for we have made lies our refuge, and under falshood have we hid our selves d.

z In your hearts. a VVe are as safe from Death, and Hell, or the Grave, as if they had entred into Covenant with us, that they would not invade us. The word rendred Hell, most commonly signifies the Grave; which also seems most proper in this place, that so the same thing may be repeated in other words, as is most usual in Prophetical VVritings. b The judgment of God, which is called a Scourge, for its sharpness and severity, and overflowing for its universality; two differing Metaphors being joyned together; which is not unusual, both in Scripture, and in other Authors. c To wit, the Land. d VVe shall secure our selves by lying and dissimulation, by compliance with our Enemies, and with their Religion too, if it be necessary, and many crafty devices. Or by lies and falshood, he means their Riches and Strength, to which they trusted, to which he giveth these Titles, not that they called or thought them such; but that he might signify what they really were, and would appear to be; see the Notes on Prov. 1. 11.

* Psal. 118. 22. Mat. 21. 42. Act. 4. 11. Rom. 9. 33. Eph. 2. 20. 1 Pet. 2. 6, 7, 8. † Heb. stone of trial. Jer. 6. 27. * Rom. 10. 11.

16. ¶ Therefore e thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I lay f in Zion g for a foundation h, * a stone i, a † tried stone k, a precious l corner stone m, a sure foundation n: he that believeth o, * shall not make haste p.

e The Coherence is something obscure and difficult. It may be made either 1. thus, Therefore I will bring most terrible Judgments upon you; which are fully expressed, ver. 17. 18, 19, 20, 21. But before he comes to the Commination, to which, therefore, properly belongs, he first propoundeth a comfortable Promise concerning the sending of the Messiah, partly for the support of Believers, who are apt to tremble at God's Word, and might otherwise be apt to despond at the prediction of such dreadful Things: And partly to aggravate their Misery by comparing it with the safety and happiness, which the Godly, and Believing Jews, whom they despised and mocked, should find in Zion; and by signifying, that that blessed and sure Foundation laid in Zion, should yield them no support nor benefit, nor secure them from the Vengeance of God. Or 2. thus, Because your Refuges are so mean, and vain, and deceitful; therefore I will direct you to a better and surer Refuge, which will never fail those that trust to it, which God hath made in Zion. But if you shall despise and reject that Refuge, which I now offer to you All, if you will Believe; then know, that I will lay judgment to the line, &c. as it follows, ver. 17. And this seems to me, to be the most natural and easy Connexion. f I have purposed and promised it, and will, in the fulness of time, actually perform it. g In my Church, which is commonly called Zion; and in Jerusalem, where this Stone shall be first laid, which afterwards spread further, and filled the whole Earth, as it is said of it, Dan. 2. 35. h Upon which I will Build my Church, consisting both of Jews and Gentiles, the Foundation of all the hopes, and comfort, and happiness of my People; the Foundation of my Covenant made with my Church, and of all my Promises. i Not Hezekiah, but the Messiah, as appears, 1. From those Scriptures of the Old Testament, in which Christ is called a Stone, as Psal. 118. 22. Isa. 8. 14. Dan. 2. 34, 35, 45. Zach. 3. 9. 2. From the New Testament, where this Text is directly expounded of Christ, as Rom. 9. 32, 33. 1 Pet. 2. 4. 3. From the last Clause, wherein He requires Faith in this Stone, which is not to be given to any meer Man. Jer. 17. 5. and wherein He implies, That this Stone was not yet come, nor to come speedily into the World; whereas Hezekiah was King at the time of this Prophecy. 4. From the usual practice of the Prophets, and especially of this Prophet, which is, to comfort and fortify God's People, against the dread of approaching Calamities, by that great and fundamental Promise of the Messiah, in whom alone all other Promises are, Yea, and Amen; whereof we have seen some Instances already, and shall see more hereafter. k Which I have tried, and approved as every way sufficient to be a Corner-Stone, and a Foundation-Stone. Such Stones in Buildings use to be chosen with care, and to be thoroughly examined by the Builder. l Giving not only strength, but beauty, and glory to the Building, as Corner-Stones frequently do, Psalm 144. 12. m Uniting the several parts of the Building together, making Ephraim and Judah, now sadly divided, one stick, Ezek. 37. 19, 24. and Jews and Gentiles, now implacable Enemies, one Church and People, Eph. 2. 14. &c. n Upon whom you may securely Rest; One who will not fail, nor deceive you, as your lying Refuges will. o To wit, this Promise; or in this Stone, as it is explained, 1 Pet. 2. 6. p Shall not make more haste than he ought, or, as we say, more haste than good speed; shall not hastily and greedily catch at any way of escaping his danger, whether it be right or wrong, but shall patiently wait upon God in His way, till He deliver him. Withal, here is a plain intimation, that the Mercy here promised was not to be given presently, but after some considerable time; and therefore, that they should quietly, and patiently submit to God's Will, under their present difficulties, and expect the accomplishment of it in God's due time; compare Hag. 2. 3. The Word here rendred, make haste, is by the Seventy Interpreters rendred, be confounded, whom the Apostles follow, Rom. 9. 33. and 1 Pet. 2. 6. either because they thought it most convenient, in a matter where the difference was not considerable, to follow that Translation which was most used, and best understood by the generality of Jewish and Gentile Christians; or because the same Word hath both these significations in the Eastern Languages, as the most Learned, and worthy Dr. Pocock hath proved; or because the one follows upon the other; and precipitation or haste commonly exposeth Men to shame and confusion; which also is implied in the following Verses, wherein the dreadful Judgments of God are denounced against those, who should not believe, and would make haste to prevent or remove their Dangers by any means whatsoever.

17. Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet q, and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding place r.

q I will Execute just Judgment, as it were by a Line and Plummet, annexed to it, i. e. with exactness and care. And this may be understood, either 1. That God would so order and settle things in his Church, that Justice and Judgment should prevail, and not Iniquity, as hitherto it had done: or rather 2. That as God would build up, and preserve all Believers upon that Foundation-Stone, so He would severely punish, and utterly destroy all those unbelieving Jews, who should reject that Stone. For the line and plummet, or the plum-line, was not only used in erecting Buildings, but also in pulling them down; those parts of the Building being thus marked out, which were to be demolished; and therefore is used in Scripture, to signify the Destruction of a Place or People, as is evident from 2 Kings 21. 13. Isa. 34. 11. Lament. 2. 8. Amos 7. 7, 8. And this sence agrees best with the following Clause and Verse. r My Judgments, which in Scripture are compared to a storm of Hail or Rain, shall discover the vanity of all your crafty and wicked Devices, and shall sweep you away with the Besom of Destruction, in spight of them.

18. ¶ And your covenant with death shall be disannulled s, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, then ye shall be † trodden down by it t.

† Heb. a treading down to it.

s Made void or of none effect: it shall stand you in no stead. t Which you flattered your selves, that it should not come unto you, ver. 15.

‖ Or, when he shall make you to understand Doctrine.

u As soon as this overflowing Scourge or Judgment shall go forth from me into the Land, it shall assuredly, and with the first, take or seize upon you scoffers, or carry you away, which agrees well, both with the Hebrew word, which is frequently taken in that Sence, and with the Metaphor of a Flood, which is here used. x It shall not only come to you, contrary to your presumption, ver. 15. but it shall abide upon you; and when it hath passed over you, it shall return again to you, morning after morning; and shall follow you day and night, without giving you the least respite. y So dreadful shall the Judgment be, that it shall strike you with great horror, when you only hear the rumor of its approach, of the sad effects of it, upon other persons or parts of the Land.

20. For the bed is shorter, than that a man can stretch himself on it: and the covering † narrower, than that he can wrap himself in it z.

† Heb. narrow when he wrappeth himself.

z For those lying Refuges, to which you trust, will not be able to give you that Protection and Comfort, which you expect from them; no more than a man can stretch himself (as these luxurious Israelites used to do, Amos 6. 4.) upon a bed which is too narrow for him, or wrap and keep himself warm, with a covering or bed cloaths, which are not large enough for him.

21. For the LORD shall rise up a as in mount * Perazim b, he shall be wroth as in the valley of * Gibeon c, that he may do his work, his strange work d; and bring to pass his act, his strange act.

* 2 Sam. 5. 20. 1 Chr. 14. 11.
* Josh. 10. 12. 2 Sam. 5. 25. 1 Chr. 14. 16.

a To act and fight against you, as he is said to sit still, when he doth forbear to act. b Where he fought against the Philistines, 2 Sam. 5. 20. c Where he fought against the Canaanites, Jos. 10. 10, &c. and afterwards against the Philistines, 1 Chron. 14. 16. d The execution of his Judgment against Israel, which he calleth his strange work, to intimate, either 1. That God would punish them not with ordinary punishments; but in a most dreadful and singular, and extraordinary manner; such a judgment being called a marvellous work, Isa. 29. 14. although the Hebrew word there used, be not the same with this, but of a much differing signification: Or rather 2 That this work of bringing total and irrecoverable Destruction upon Israel, was contrary to the benignity of his own Nature, and to his usual way of dealing with his people, whom he used and delighted to protect, and spare, and bless; and whom, even when he is angry with them, and punisheth them, he handleth more gently, than he doth other persons, in Judgment remembring mercy to them, as was noted, Isa. 27. 7, 8. see also chap. 26. 11.

22. Now therefore be ye not mockers e, lest your bands be made strong f: for I have heard * from the Lord GOD of hosts a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth g.

* chap. 10. 22, 23.

e For your own sakes do not make a mock of God's Word and Threatnings, as you use to do. f Lest thereby you make the Judgments of God, which are oft compared to bands, as Psal. 66. 11. and 73. 4. and elsewhere, more sure and unavoidable, and more severe and terrible, as bands are, when they are tyed faster, and more strongly upon a prisoner. g God hath assured me, That he will utterly root out, and destroy the people of Israel, as indeed he did in Hezekiah's Reign.

23. Give ye ear, and hear my voice; hearken and hear my speech h.

h Observe what I say, and do you judge if it be not reasonable.

24. Doth the plowman plow all day to sow i? doth he open k and break the clods of his ground l?

i The plowman doth not spend all his time in plowing the Ground, in order to the sowing it, or, as it follows, in opening it, and breaking its clods; but he hath several times for several works, a time for plowing, and a time for sowing and harrowing, and a time for reaping, and a time for threshing or beating; and bruising his Corn for his own use. Which wisdom God hath put into him. This is the sum of the similitude propounded here, and in the following Verses. The design and meaning whereof seems to be this, to teach them, That God had his times and seasons for several Works, and that the methods of his providence were various at several times, and towards several persons or people; and therefore, that those scoffing Israelites were guilty of great Folly, in flattering themselves, and despising God's Threatnings, because of God's long Patience towards them, and because of their present impunity and prosperity; for God would certainly and speedily take a time to Thresh, and break them with his Judgments, as at present he plowed and harrowed them, and so prepared them for it by his threatnings. k Understand all day, or continually, out of the foregoing clause. l Which they used to do with a kind of Harrow, or other proper Instrument. See Jer. 4. 3. Hos. 10. 11, 12.

25. When he hath made plain the face thereof m, doth he not cast abroad the fitches, and scatter the cummin, and cast in ‖ the principal wheat n, and the appointed barley o, and the ‖ rie in their † place p?

‖ Or, the wheat in the principal place, and barley in the appointed place.

m By breaking the Clods, which made it ragged and uneven. n Either 1. the Wheat, which is the principal or chief of all these Grains: Or, 2. The best Wheat which he prudently chuseth for Seed. o That proportion of Barley which he appointed. Or, as others, the marked Barley; or, the choice Barley, which they laid aside in a sack for Seed; and therefore set it apart with a peculiar Mark upon it. p Heb. in his Border; each Seed in a several and proper place.

26. ‖ For his God doth instruct him to discretion, and doth teach him q.

‖ Or, and he bindeth it in such sort as his God doth teach him.

q The Sense of the Words thus rendred is this, All this he performeth by that discretion, which God hath put into him: and therefore be assured, that God will order all His Affairs with Judgment, and will in due season execute the Punishments which now he threatens, and will perfect his own works. But the words by some are rendred otherwise. And he beateth it out (as this word may be rendred, 1 Kings 12. 11. Prov. 19. 18. and 29. 17.) in such sort, as his God doth teach him, in a discreet manner, which being generally mentioned here, is particularly described in the following Verse.

27. For the fitches are not threshed with a threshing instrument r, neither is a cart-wheel s turned about upon the cummin: but the fitches are beaten out with a staff, and the cummin with a rod t.

r Which then and there was made like a Sled shod with Iron, which was drawn by Men or Beasts, over the sheafs of Corn to bruise them, and beat the Grain out of them. s A lesser and lower Wheel than a Cart-wheel, but of the same form, upon which possibly the threshing Instrument was drawn. t As being unable to bear harder usage.

28. Bread-corn is bruised u; because x he will not ever be threshing it, nor break it y with the wheel of his cart, nor bruise it with his horsemen z.

u With a threshing Instrument, by comparing this with the foregoing Verse, and the following words. x Or rather, but, or nevertheless, as this word is frequently used. The Sense is, The Husbandman doth indeed thresh the Bread-corn, but he doth it with moderation, and only for a time, not for ever. y Understand, for ever, out of the foregoing clause, as is usual in Scripture. z Which governed the Horse or Horses, that drew the threshing Instrument. Or, with horses: For it is evident, and hath been observed before, that this Hebrew word signifies Horses, as well as Horsemen. And this was another way of Threshing out the Corn, by driving Horses, or other Cattel, over the Sheaves to tread it out: of which, see Deut. 25. 4. Mich. 4. 13.

29. This also a cometh forth from the LORD of hosts, which * b is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working †.

* Jer. 32. 19.
† Heb. he hath made counsel wonderful, he hath made wisdom great.

a This part of the Husbandmans discretion expressed, ver. 27, 28. as well as that expressed, ver. 24, 25. b These words contain the Application of the Similitude. The Husbandman manageth all his Affairs with common discretion; but God governs the World, and his Church, with wonderful Wisdom: He is great and marvellous, both in the design or contrivance of things; and in the Execution of them.

CHAP. XXIX.

1. ‖ WO to Ariel a, to Ariel ‖ the city where David dwelt b: add ye year to year; let them † kill sacrifices c.

‖ Or, Oh Ariel. that is, the lion of God.
‖ Or, of the city.

a This word signifies a ſtrong Lion, or the Lion of God; and is uſed concerning Lion-like Men; as it is rendred, 1 Chron. 11. 22. and of God's Altar, as it is rendred, Ezek. 43. 15, 16. which ſeems to be thus called, becauſe it devoured and conſumed the Sacrifices put upon it as greedily, and as irreſiſtably, as the Lion doth his prey. If the Altar be here meant, it is put Synecdochically for the Temple, and the words may be rendred, Wo to Ariel, to Ariel or in the City, or, and the City; for that conjunction is ſometimes underſtood, as Iſa. 22. 6. Hab. 3. 11. And ſo the threatning is denounced both againſt the Temple, and againſt Jeruſalem. But he ſeems rather to underſtand it of Jeruſalem, as may be gathered, 1. From the next words, which ſeem to be added by way of Appoſition, to explain what he meant by that obſcure and ambiguous Term, Wo to Ariel, to Ariel, even to the City: 2. from the following Verſes, which plainly declare, That this Ariel is the place which God threatens, that he would diſtreſs and fill with heavineſs, ver. 2. and lay ſiege againſt her, ver. 3. And that the Nations ſhould fight againſt her, ver. 7. All which Expreſſions agree much better to Jeruſalem, than to the Altar. And this City might be called Ariel, or the ſtrong Lion: Either 1. For its eminent ſtrength in regard of its Situation and Fortifications, by reaſon whereof, it was thought almoſt impregnable, both by themſelves and others, Lam. 4. 12. Or 2. For its Lion-like fierceneſs and cruelty, for which ſhe is called the bloody City, Ezek. 7. 23. and 22. 2. and in effect, Iſa. 1. 15. and 59. 3. and Jer. 19. 4. and for which her Princes are called Lions, Ezek. 19. 2. Zeph. 3. 3. Or, 3. In reſpect of the Altar of God, which was erected in, and confined to that City, and in which the Strength and Glory of that City did chiefly conſiſt. b The Royal City, and Seat of David and his Poſterity. Which is here mentioned, as the ground of their Confidence; and withal it is implyed, That their Relation to David, and their ſuppoſed Intereſt in the promiſes made to him, and to his Seed, ſhould not ſecure them from the Deſtruction here threatned. c Go on in killing Sacrifices from time to time, one year after another, whereby you think to appeaſe me, and to ſecure your ſelves: But all ſhall be in vain.

2. Yet d I will diſtreſs Ariel e, and there ſhall be heavineſs and ſorrow, and it ſhall be unto me as Ariel f.

d Notwithſtanding all your Sacrifices. e By bringing and ſtrengthning her Enemies againſt her. f The Senſe is, Either 1. I will treat her like a ſtrong and fierce Lion, which the people, among whom it is, indeavour by Nets, or Pits, and all other wayes to take and to deſtroy. Or, 2. I will make Ariel the City, like Ariel the Altar, filling it with Sacrifices, even with Men, whom I will ſlay in my Anger; which Act of God's is called his Sacrifice, Ezek. 39. 17, 19.

3. And I will camp againſt thee ‖ round about, and will lay ſiege againſt thee g ‖ with a mount, and I will raiſe forts againſt thee.

‖ Or, with an army.
‖ Or, with a ſetled camp, or leaguer.

g By thoſe Enemies whom I will aſſiſt, and enable to deſtroy thee. This was fulfilled, Either 1. by Sennacherib, as ſome Learned Men think. But what is here affirmed of theſe Enemies, is expreſly denied concerning Sennacherib, Iſa. 37. 33. or rather, 2. by the Chaldeans, 2 Kings 25. 1, &c.

4. And thou ſhalt be brought down, and ſhalt ſpeak out of the ground, and thy ſpeech ſhall be low out of the duſt h, and thy voice ſhall be as of one that hath a familiar ſpirit out of the ground i, and thy ſpeech ſhall † whiſper out of the duſt.

† Heb. peep, or chirp. Chap. 8. 19.

h Thou who now ſpeakeſt ſo loftily, and ſcornfully againſt the Lord's Prophets and others, ſhalt be humbled and confounded, and afraid and aſhamed to ſpeak aloud, and ſhalt in a ſubmiſs manner, and with a low Voice, beg the favour of thine Enemies. i Who, that they might poſſeſs the people with a kind of Reverence and Horrour, uſed to ſpeak and deliver their Anſwers with a low Voice, either out of their Bellies, or from ſome dark Cave under the ground.

5. Moreover, the multitude of thy ſtrangers a ſhall be like ſmall duſt b, and the multitude of the terrible ‖ ones ſhall be * as chaff that paſſeth away: yea it ſhall be c at * an inſtant ſuddenly.

* Job 21. 18. Chap. 17. 13. * Chap. 30. 13.

a Either 1. of the Strangers that Encamp and fight againſt thee. Or, 2. of the Egyptians, and other Strangers, whom thou haſt hired to aſſiſt thee, as indeed they did, when the Chaldeans came againſt them. This Expoſition ſeems to agree beſt, as with the phraſe, thy ſtrangers, ſo with the ſcope of the place, and with the whole Context, eſpecially the foregoing Verſes; which plainly ſhews, that this is not a promiſe to Jeruſalem, but a Threatning againſt it. b Quickly blown away with the leaſt Wind, by comparing this with the following clauſe. ‖ Of thy great Commanders, and ſtouteſt Souldiers. c This diſſipation and deſtruction of thy Strangers, and terrible ones ſhall come to paſs.

6. Thou d ſhalt be viſited of the LORD of hoſts with thunder, and with earthquake, and great noiſe, with ſtorm and tempeſt, and the flame of devouring fire e.

d Thou, O Ariel or Jeruſalem, of, or to whom this whole Context manifeſtly ſpeaks. e With dreadful Judgments, which are frequently expreſſed in the Prophets, by theſe and ſuch like Metaphors.

7. And the multitude of all the nations that fight againſt Ariel, even all that fight againſt her, and her munition, and that diſtreſs her, ſhall be as a dream of a night viſion f.

f Wherein it ſhall be ſo, is explained in the next Verſe.

8. It ſhall even be as when a hungry man dreameth, and behold he eateth; but he awaketh, and his ſoul is empty g: or as when a thirſty man dreameth, and behold he drinketh; but he awaketh, and behold he is faint, and his ſoul hath appetite: ſo ſhall the multitude of all the nations be, that fight againſt mount Zion h.

g His appetite or deſire (as the ſoul is taken, Pſal. 41. 4. and 78. 18. and elſewhere) is unſatisfied. Or, his ſtomach or body (as the ſoul is uſed, Pſal. 16. 10.) is empty. h No leſs unſatisfied and inſatiable, ſhall the Enemies of the Jews be, with all the cruelties which they have committed againſt you; and they ſhall be always thirſting after more of your Blood, as if they had never taſted any of it.

9. Stay your ſelves and wonder i, ‖ cry ye out, and cry k: they are drunken, but not with wine l; they ſtagger, but not with ſtrong drink.

‖ Or, take your pleaſure and riot.

i Pauſe upon it, and you will ſee cauſe to wonder at the ſtupidity of this People, of which he is now about to ſpeak. He directeth his Speech, either to the Religious part of the people, or to thoſe particular perſons, who heard him when he delivered this Prophecy. k Cry out again and again, either in way of Supplication for them; or rather through Aſtoniſhment and Horror. Or, They take pleaſure or ſport themſelves (as this word moſt commonly ſignifies) and riot: In the midſt of all theſe Threatnings and Dangers, they are ſecure, and give up themſelves to ſenſuality; which is matter of juſt wonder. l But either 1. With drinking the Cup of God's fury, wherewith they are ſaid to be made drunk, Iſa. 51. 17, 20. And then they are drunk, is put for, they ſhall be drunk, after the manner of the Prophets. Or, 2. With the ſpirit of giddineſs or ſtupidity, which makes them like drunken men, inſenſible of their danger, and not knowing what to do.

10. For * the LORD hath poured out upon you m the ſpirit of dead ſleep n, and hath cloſed your eyes: the prophets and your † rulers, the ſeers o hath he covered p.

* Rom. 11. 8.

m Which phraſe notes the plenty, and vehemency of this Judgment. n Hardneſs of heart, and inſenſibleneſs of your Danger and Miſery, which God is ſaid to ſend, becauſe he denies, or withdraws his Light and Grace, which alone can cure thoſe Maladies. o Your Magiſtrates and Miniſters, whoſe blindneſs or ſtupidity is a great Curſe and Plague to the people. Or, the Prophets, even the chief (for the head is oft put for the chief of perſons or things, as Exod. 30. 23. 1 Chron. 12. 18. and elſewhere) of your ſeers. p With the veil of ignorance and ſtupidity, or as to their Eyes, which is underſtood out of the former Clauſe. And this laſt Clauſe is, and may be rendred thus, The Eyes (which may be repeated out of the foregoing Clauſe) of your Prophets, and of, or even of your principal ſeers (or, and of your moſt intelligent rulers) hath he covered.

11. And the viſion of all q is become unto you, as the words of a ‖ book that is ſealed r, which men deliver to one that is learned, ſaying, ‖ Or, letter.

ing, Read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I cannot, for it is sealed:

q Of all your Prophets, whether the true or false Ones. r In which no man can read, whilst it is sealed up, as books then sometimes were, 1 Kings 21. 8. Esth. 3. 12, 13. being made in the form of Rolls, which was convenient for that purpose.

12. And the book is delivered to him that is not learned s, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned.

s Unsealed and opened, as the following Clause implies. God so orders the manner of delivering this Book, that neither the learned nor unlearned could read and understand it.

*Ezek. 33. 31. Mat. 15. 8. Mar. 7. 6.

13. ¶ Wherefore the LORD said, * Forasmuch as this people draw near me t with their mouth, and with their lips u do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me x, and their fear towards me is taught by the precept of men y:

t To wit, in acts of Worship. u With outward Devotions, and the profession of Religion. x They do not pay me that Love, and Fear, and Obedience, which I require, and prefer before all Sacrifices, and external Services. y They worship me not in such way and manner, as I have commanded and prescribed, but according to their own, and other Mens inventions, preferring the devices and traditions of their false Prophets, before my Institutions. For this was a common Errour among the Jews, as we learn from Jer. 7. 31. Hos. 5. 11. and many other Scriptures; And thus our blessed Saviour expounds this very place, Mat. 15. 7, 8, 9.

† Heb. I will add. *Jer. 49. 7. Obad. ver. 8. 1 Cor. 1. 19.

14. Therefore behold, † I will proceed to do a marvellous work amongst this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder, * for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid z.

z Shall disappear and vanish; for this answers to, shall perish, in the former clause. A veil shall be cast upon the Eyes of their minds; they shall give no evidences or proofs of their Wisdom, but their Folly shall be made manifest. And this was indeed a wonderful thing for their wise men to be made fools.

*Chap. 30. 1. *Psal. 94. 7.

15. * Wo unto them that seek deep a to hide their counsel from the LORD b, and their works are in the dark c, and * they say, Who seeth us? and who knoweth us d?

a Heb. That make deep. A Metaphor from Men, who use to dig deep into the Earth, that they may hide any thing there, which they would keep safe and unknown. b Vainly imagining, That they can keep all their Hypocrisie and secret Wickedness out of God's sight, and that they can deceive, not only Men, but God, by their external professions and services. c Their wicked Counsels are contrived, and their Idolatry is practised in secret and dark places, of which see Ezek. 8. 12. d We act so cunningly, that neither God nor Man can discover us.

16. Surely your turning of things upside down e shall be esteemed as the potters clay f: for shall *Chap. 45. 9. the * work say of him that made it, He made me not, or shall the thing framed, say of him that framed it, He had no understanding g?

e All your subtle devices, by which you turn your selves into all shapes; and turn your Thoughts hither and thither, and pervert the order which God hath appointed. f It is no more to me, than the Clay is to the Potter, who can not only discern it thoroughly, but alter and dispose it as he seeth fit. g And no less absurd and ridiculous is your conceit, that I your Maker, and supream Governor, cannot discover and controul all your Artifices at my Pleasure.

17. Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon h shall be turned into a fruitful field; and the *Psal. 72. 16. fruitful field shall be esteemed * as a forest?

h The Forest of Lebanon, which was a barren Mountain, and a desolate Wilderness, shall, by God's wonderful providence, become a fruitful and populous Place; and these places which are now fruitful and populous, shall then become as barren and desolate, as that Forest. This Sense is confirmed by that parallel place, Isa. 32. 15. And from both places compared together, this seems to be a Prophecy of the rejection of the wicked and unbelieving Jews, whose sins and marvellous Judgments, and particular Infatuation, are declared in the foregoing Verses; and of the calling of the Gentiles, of which he speaks in the following Verse, as appears further by comparing that Verse with Isa. 35. 5. And this Opinion may receive some Countenance from Mat. 15. 7, &c. where Christ expounds the foregoing words, ver. 13. upon which, these have a dependance, of his own times.

18. ¶ And in that day shall * the deaf i hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness k. * Chap. 35. 5.

i Who were deaf before, God by His Word and Grace, did open their Ears: even the deaf and blind Gentiles, as was now noted. Compare Isa. 35. 5. k Being, by God's Grace, brought out of that gross, and worse than Egyptian darkness of ignorance and wickedness, in which they formerly lived, unto a clear and saving knowledge of the Truth.

19. The meek l also † shall increase their joy in the LORD m, and the poor n among men shall rejoyce in the holy one of Israel. † Heb. shall add.

l The humble and meek Believers, opposed to those proud and scornful Israelites or Jews, of whom he speaks in this, and in the foregoing Chapter. m Shall greatly rejoyce in this, that the Lord, and holy One of Israel is now their God and Portion. n Either 1. Spiritually; of which Mat. 5. 3. Or 2. outwardly, mean and despicable People, such as the Gentiles were in the Opinion of the Jews, and such as the greatest part of the first believing Christians were, Mat. 11. 5. 1 Cor. 1. 26. Jam. 2. 5.

20. For the terrible one o is brought to nought, and the scorner p is consumed, and all that watch for iniquity q are cut off:

o The proud and potent Enemies of those meek and poor Believers now mentioned, shall as the unbelieving Jews, and the heathen Potentates were in the first Age of Christianity. p The scornful Opposers of God's Word and People. q That early and diligently apply themselves to the practice of Wickedness, or to do mischief to others.

21. * That make a man an offender r for a * Am. 5. 10. word s, and lay a snare for him that reproveth t in the gate u, and turn aside x the just y for a thing of nought z.

r That condemn and punish a Man, as if he were a great Criminal. s For a verbal Reproof, as appears from the next clause. t For God's faithful Prophets and Ministers, whose Office it is to reprove ungodly Men, such as these were. u Publickly; which they took for a great Affront and Disgrace, although the Reproof ought to be publick, where the sin is publick and scandalous. u He mentions the gate, because there the people used to assemble both upon civil and sacred accounts, and their Prophets used to deliver their Prophecies; of which see Jer. 7. 2. & 17. 19. x To wit, from judgment, as this phrase is more fully delivered, Isa. 10. 2. or from his Right; which is elsewhere called the perverting, or overturning, or overthrowing of a man's right or judgment, as Deut. 27. 19. Prov. 17. 23. Lam. 3. 35. y The faithful Prophets and Ministers of God, and among others Christ, who is oft called the just or righteous one, both in the Old and New Testament. z Not for any great advantage, but for a trifle, which is a great Aggravation of their injustice. Or, with vanity, (i. e.) with vain and frivolous pretences, or without any colour of Reason or Justice.

22. Therefore thus saith the LORD, who redeemed Abraham a, concerning the house of Jacob, Jacob b shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale c.

a From manifold dangers, and especially from that Idolatry in which his Family and Ancestors were generally involved, Jos. 24. 2, 3. b The Israelites or posterity of Jacob, who are oft called Jacob in Scripture, who had great cause to be ashamed, for their continued infidelity, and for their persecutions of God's Prophets, and righteous Servants, and for their Rejection of their own Messiah; but shall at last be brought back unto the God of their Fathers, and to their Messiah. c Through fear of their Enemies, who from time to time have molested them, but now they shall be delivered from them all, and shall serve God without fear, as is said, Luk. 1. 74.

23. But when he seeth his children d, the work of mine hands e, in the midst of him f, they shall sanctify my name g, and sanctify the holy one of Jacob, and shall fear the God of Israel.

d When the believing seed of Jacob shall see those Children, whom they have begotten to God, by the Preaching of the Gospel, even the Gentiles converted by their Ministry. e The Children, not of the flesh, but of the promise, Rom. 9. 8. whom I, by My almighty Power and Grace, have Created or Regenerated, of Stones raising up Children to Abraham. f Which Gentiles shall be incorporated with the Jews, into one and the same Body and Church. g They shall not despise and hate the Gentiles, and envy them the Grace of God, and an interest in their Messiah, but shall praise and glorifie God, with them and for them, as the believing Jews did, Act. 11. 18.

24. They also that erred in spirit h † shall come to understanding i, and they that murmured, shall learn doctrine k.

h Those Gentiles, whose Spirits or Minds were ignorant of, and erred from God's Truth; and who were led aside by a lying Spirit, or by the Spirit of errour and delusion to Idolatry, and all manner of Impiety. i Shall come to the knowledge of the Truth. k They that would not receive the doctrine of God, but murmured at God's faithful Prophets and Teachers, who delivered it, which was the practice of divers, both Jews and Gentiles, shall now learn Doctrine, and receive God's Truth in the Love of it.

CHAP. XXX.

* Chap. 29. 15.

1. WO to the rebellious children a, saith the LORD, * that take counsel b, but not of me c, and that cover with a covering d, but not of my spirit e, that they may add sin to sin f:

a The Jews, who call themselves God's Children, though they are rebellious Ones, as was said, Isa. 1. 2. b That consult together, and resolve to do what follows, ver. 2. c Not following, nor asking my Advice, which they had command and encouragement from me to do. d That seek protection. e Not such as by my Spirit, speaking in my Word, I have directed, and required them to do; but such as I have severely forbidden to them; for the contrary Affirmative is frequently implied in the Negative; of which I have formerly given many instances. f That unto those sins, by which they have deserved and procured my Judgments upon them, they may add distrust of my Power and Mercy to save them, and confidence in an Arm of Flesh, which also is Rebellion against my express command to the contrary.

* Chap. 31. 1.

2. * That walk to go down into Egypt g (and have not asked at my mouth h) to strengthen themselves in the strength of Pharaoh, and to trust in the shadow i of Egypt.

g That send Ambassadors to Egypt for succour, as we read, ver. 4. which the Jews were forward to do upon all occasions, and did now upon the Invasion of the King of Assyria, as is evident, from Isa. 20. 5, 6. and did the like against the King of Babylon, Jer. 37. 7. Ezek. 17. 15. h Either by the Priests or Prophets, as they were to do in weighty cases; of which, see Numb. 27. 21. Jos. 9. 14. 1 Sam. 23. 9, 10. 1 Kings 22. 7. Jer. 21. 2. and 42. 2, 20. or by studying my Word; which plainly directs them to another course, and forbids them this practice. i In their power (as it is in the foregoing Clause) and protection, which is oft signified by the shadow, as Judg. 9. 15. Psal. 17. 8. and 91. 1, 4.

3. Therefore shall the strength of Pharaoh be your shame k, and the trust in the shadow of Egypt your confusion.

k As being not only unprofitable, but mischievous to you.

4. For his princes l were at Zoan, and his ambassadours came to Hanes m.

l The Princes of Judah, either sent by the King, or by the appointment of their Brethren. m An eminent City of Egypt, called more largely Tahapanes, and Tahpanhes, Jer. 2. 16. and 43. 3, 8.

* Jer. 2. 36.

5. * They n were all ashamed of a people that could not profit them, nor be an help nor profit, but a shame and also a reproach.

n Both the Messengers, and they who sent them.

6. The burden o of the beasts of the south p: into the land of trouble and anguish q, from whence come the young and old lion r, the viper and fiery flying serpent s, they t will carry their riches u upon the shoulders of young asses x, and their treasures upon the bunches y of camels, to a people that shall not profit them.

o Either 1. the Prophecy; which is oft called the burden: or rather 2. the burden of riches or treasures, as it is explained in the latter part of the Verse. p Which is carried upon Asses or Camels, as it follows, into Egypt, which lay southward from Judea. q Into Egypt and Ethiopia, or Cush; for both are joyned together in this matter, Isa. 20. whose Land seems to be called a land of trouble and anguish prophetically, because they should distress them, and not help them; as was said of the Assyrians in the like case, 2 Chron. 28. 20. Some render it, by or through the land, &c. and understand it of the vast Wilderness which lay between Judea and Egypt. But it was more proper and important to speak of the Land, to which these Men and Beasts went, than of that, through which they were to pass; which it was needless so particularly to describe. Nor was the direct Road from Judea to Egypt such a place as is here described. r Which may be understood properly, because these and the following Creatures did abound, and were very fierce and mischievous in Egypt and Ethiopia: But withal, seems to design the craft and cruelty of that People, and the danger of their Confederacy with them, and the harm which they should have from them. s That there were flying Serpents in those parts, is affirmed, not only in Scripture, but also by Herodotus, Cicero, Ammianus, and divers other Authors. t The Jews designed by the same pronoun, they, ver. 5. u Either 1. to secure them: or rather, 2. to procure their assistance. x Much used there for carrying Burdens, as is evident from Gen. 32. 15. and 45. 23, &c. y Upon the backs, which were strengthned with bunches, by a Synecdoche.

‖ Or, to her. * Chap. 7. 4. ver. 15.

7. For the Egyptians shall help in vain, and to no purpose: therefore have I cryed ‖ concerning this z, * Their strength is to sit still a.

z Concerning this Counsel or Practice, Or, to her, to Jerusalem or Judah. a It is safer and better for them to sit quietly at home, seeking to me for help, than to go or send to Egypt for help. He seems industriously to use an ambiguous word, Rahab, which signifies both strength, as Job 9. 13. Psal. 90. 10. and Egypt, Psal. 87. 4. Isa. 51. 9. So called from its singular strength, to intimate, that if they did not go to Rahab; Rahab, or what they expected from Rahab or Egypt, which was powerful succour, should come to them.

8. ¶ Now go, write it b before them c in a table, and note it in a book d, that it may be for † the time to come e for ever and ever.

b Write this Prophecy and Warning which I have now delivered. c In their presence, in the publick Assembly: For the Prophets were many times commanded to do such Actions, as well as to deliver their Messages. d So this was to be written twice over, once in a Table, to be hanged up in some publick place, that all that were then and there present, might read it; and again, in a Book, that it might be kept for the use of Posterity. e As a Witness for me and against them, that I have given them fair warning, and that they have wilfully run upon their own Ruine.

9. That this is a rebellious people, lying children f, children that will not hear the law of the LORD g:

f Which profess one thing, and practise another. g The Commands of God, either contained in Scripture, or delivered by my Mouth, whereby these Practices are expresly forbidden to them.

* Jer. 11. 21. Amos 2. 12. & 7. 13. Mic. 2. 6. Mic. 2. 11.

10. * Which say to the seers, See not; and to the prophets, prophesy not unto us right things, * speak unto us smooth things, prophesie deceits h:

h He speaks not of the words of their Mouths; for none could be so mad or impudent, as to have or profess a desire to be cheated, but of the Language of their Actions. They do so discourage and threaten God's faithful Prophets; and so encourage their own false Prophets, as if they had rather be deceived to their Destruction, than hear the Truth for their Preservation and Salvation. They prefer the pleasing of their Humours, before the saving of themselves.

11. Get ye out of the way i, turn aside out of the path, cause the holy one of Israel to cease from before us k.

i In which you now walk, out of your present course of Preaching unsavoury, and frightful things to us. k Do not trouble us with harsh and repeated Messages from God, as you use to do.

12. Wherefore thus saith the holy one of Israel, Because ye despise this word, and trust in

‖ Or, fraud. in ‖ oppreſſion l and perverſeneſs m, and ſtay thereon:

l In the Wealth which you have gotten by Oppreſſion, whereby you now think to procure Egyptian Succours; of which ſee on ver. 6. m And in your perverſe and rebellious Courſe of ſending to Egypt for help.

13. Therefore this iniquity n ſhall be to you

n Of ſending and truſting to Egypt for ſuccour. o Like a Wall which is high, and ſeems to be ſtrong, but ſwelling forth in ſome parts, which upon the leaſt Accident, falleth down ſuddenly to the Ground. Such ſhall be the iſſue of your high and towring Confidence in Egypt.

* Jer. 19. 11. † Heb. the bottle of potters. 14. And * he ſhall break it p as the breaking of † the potters veſſel, that is broken in pieces, he ſhall not ſpare; ſo that there ſhall not be found in the burſting of it, a ſherd to take fire from the hearth, or to take water withal out of the pit.

* Ver. 7. 15. For thus ſaith the Lord GOD, the holy one of Iſrael, * in returning q and reſt ſhall ye be ſaved, in quietneſs r and in confidence s, ſhall be your ſtrength; and ye would not.

q Either from your preſent purpoſe of ſending to Egypt; or unto God, as the Seventy, and Syriack, and Arabick Tranſlators render it. Or, In quietneſs; for the Verb, from which this word comes, is elſewhere uſed in that ſence, as Pſal. 23. 3. Jer. 30. 10. and 46. 27. r In ſitting ſtill, and quieting your own Minds. s To wit, rightly placed upon me, and my promiſes for your deliverance.

16. But ye ſaid, No, for we will flee t upon horſes, therefore ſhall ye flee: and we will ride upon the ſwift; therefore ſhall they that purſue you, be ſwift.

t Out of this Land from the King of Aſſyria; which it is very probable, divers of the richer ſort did, having ſent their Treaſures before them, as we read, ver. 6.

19. For the people ſhall dwell in Zion at Jeruſalem: thou ſhalt weep no more f: he will be very gracious unto thee, at the voice of thy cry: when he ſhall hear it, he will anſwer thee g.

f For although the time is coming, when this people ſhall be baniſhed from Jeruſalem, and carried Captives into Babylon; yet, after a ſet time, they ſhall return to Jeruſalem, and have a fixed and comfortable abode there. Which was in part accompliſhed upon their return from Babylon; but more fully in the times of the Goſpel, when many of them were, and the whole Body of them ſhall be brought into Chriſt's Church, which is often called Zion and Jeruſalem, both in the Old and New Teſtament. g Whereas now he ſeems to be deaf to thy Prayers.

h And although in that time and ſtate of the Church, you will be ſubject to many outward Straits and Afflictions. This Phraſe is borrowed from Deut. 16. 3. and 1 Kings 22. 27. He ſeems to allude to the condition of beſieged Cities, and particularly of Jeruſalem, as it was ſtraitned and diſtreſſed by Sennacherib; and as it ſhould be far more ſtraitned by the Chaldeans; of which ſee 2 King. 25. 3. Or, The Lord indeed will give, &c. i As they have been in former times, both in Iſrael and Judah, when the Godly Prophets and Miniſters were but few, and when they were perſecuted and baniſhed by their wicked Rulers. But in the New Teſtament God hath made better proviſion for his Church, ſending his Son the great Teacher of the Church into the World; and pouring forth the Gifts and Graces of the Spirit in abundance, and increaſing the number of able and faithful Miniſters; and promiſing a continued Succeſſion of them to the end of the World, Mat. 28. 19, 20. k Thou ſhalt have their preſence, and their inſtruction and aſſiſtance.

And ſo this, as well as other paſſages in this Chapter, concerns the times of the Goſpel. b As if the Light of ſeven days were combined together into one: Its Light ſhall then be tranſcendently more bright and glorious, than it hath hitherto been. Which magnificent Expreſſions ſeem to be too high for the deliverance of the Jews, either from Sennacherib, or out of Babylon: And do much better agree to the times of the Goſpel, in which the Light is far more clear, and the Grace of God much more abundant, than ever it was in former times. And this Expoſition ſeems the more probable, becauſe it is the manner of the Prophets; and eſpecially of this, who is rightly called the Evangelical Prophet, to take all occaſions to ſpeak of the days of Meſſiah, and of the bleſſed Priviledges of that time and ſtate of the Church, among which, they conſtantly reckon Light, whether you take it for Knowledge or for Comfort, to be one. c When God ſhall effectually cure the Wounds and Breaches of his people, firſt making up the Breach between him and them, then making Iſrael and Judah to be one, who now are ſadly divided; and making Jew and Gentile to be one Fold under one Shepherd, even the Meſſiah, which the Prophets foretell, that it ſhall be in the times of the Goſpel.

27. ¶ Behold d, the name of the LORD e cometh from far f, burning with his anger, ‖ and the burden thereof is † heavy g: his lips are full of indignation, and his tongue as a devouring fire h.

‖ Or, and the grievouſneſs of flame. † Heb. heavineſs.

d Here begins the laſt part of the Chapter, wherein he gives them an earneſt of thoſe greater Mercies promiſed for times to come, by aſſuring them of the approaching Deſtruction of the Aſſyrian Forces. e The Lord himſelf: For as the names of Men are oft put for the Men themſelves, as Numb. 26. 53. Act. 1. 15. Revel. 3. 4. and 11. 13. So the name of God is frequently put for God, as Gen. 4. 26. Deut. 28. 58. Pſal. 20. 1, 7, &c. f From a very remote place; even from Heaven, whence God ſent his Angel to deſtroy them, Iſa. 37. 36. Poſſibly this Expreſſion may reſpect the judgment of the Aſſyrians, who looked upon God as one afar of, not only in his Preſence, which they thought to be confined to Heaven, but in his care of, and affections to the Jews; and therefore, no more expected any oppoſition from him, than from them who live in the ends of the Earth. g He will inflict heavy Judgments upon them. h He hath pronounced a ſevere ſentence againſt them, and will give Command for the Execution of it.

28. And his breath i as an overflowing ſtream k, ſhall reach to the midſt of * the neck l, * to ſift m the nations n with the ſieve of vanity o: and there ſhall be a * bridle in the jaws of the people p, cauſing them to err q.

* Chap. 8. 8.
* Amos 9. 9.
* chap. 37. 29.

i Either 1. The breath of his Noſtrils, as it is called, Job 4. 9. or The blaſt of the breath of his Noſtrils, as Pſal. 18. 15. in both which places it is mentioned, as a ſign and effect of God's Anger, and the cauſe of the Deſtruction of thoſe, againſt whom it is directed. And the Expreſſion ſeems to be borrowed from hence, that Men diſcover their Anger by a ſtrong and vehement breathing through their Noſtrils. Or, 2. The breath of his Lips or Mouth, to which the deſtruction of God's Enemies is elſewhere aſcribed, as Job 15. 30. Iſa. 11. 4. which may be the ſame thing with his Lips and Tongue in the foregoing Verſe, or may deſign a ſtrong blaſt coming out of his Mouth: for God is frequently ſaid to deſtroy wicked men, by blowing upon them, as Iſa. 40. 7, 24. Ezek. 21. 31. and 22. 21. k Coming from him as vehemently as a mighty Torrent of Waters. l Shall bring him into a moſt dangerous condition, as a man, who is in deep Waters, which reach to his Neck, is in danger of being drowned; and afterwards, as is related in the following Verſes, will utterly deſtroy him. And this was fulfilled in Sennacherib, who was highly endangered, when he loſt ſo great a part of his Army, and ſhortly after ſlain by his own Sons. Although theſe words may be added as a Deſcription of the overflowing ſtream now mentioned, and may be thus rendred, which reacheth even to the midſt of the neck; for the Relative Particle is frequently underſtood in Scripture. m To ſhake and ſcatter, as it were with a Sieve: or to try and vex, as this Metaphor ſignifies; Amos 9. 9. Luk. 22. 31. n The Aſſyrian Army, which was made up of the People of ſeveral Nations. o Not with an ordinary Sieve, which caſteth away the chaff only, and keepeth the Corn; but with a Sieve, which ſhould ſhake them ſo long and ſo vehemently, as to caſt away all together, and to make a full end of them. p God will reſtrain, and over-rule them by his ſecret and powerful Providence. q Whereas other Bridles guide the bridled Creatures into the right way, this ſhall turn them out of the way, by giving them up to their own miſtakes and fooliſh Counſels, and wicked courſes, which ſhall bring them to ſore and certain ruine.

29. Ye ſhall have a ſong r, as in the night, when a holy ſolemnity is kept s, and gladneſs of heart, as when one goeth with a pipe t to come into the mountain of the LORD, to the † mighty one of Iſrael.

† Heb. rock. Deut. 32. 4.

r You ſhall have occaſion of great Joy, and ſongs of Praiſe for your ſtupendious Deliverance from that formidable Enemy. s He mentions the Night, either becauſe the Jewiſh Feaſts begun at the Evening, and were celebrated with great Joy in part of the Night-ſeaſon, as well as on the following Day; or becauſe he hath a particular reſpect to the ſolemnity of the Paſſover, in which they ſpent ſome conſiderable part of the Night in Feaſting and Rejoycing, and ſinging of Pſalms and Songs before the Lord. t Like the joy of one that is going up to the ſolemn Feaſts with muſick, and the voice of Joy and Praiſe, as they uſed to do, Pſal. 42. 4. to cheer up themſelves in the way, which to many of them was long, and would otherwiſe have been tedious.

30. And the LORD ſhall cauſe † his glorious voice u to be heard, and ſhall ſhew the lighting down of his arm x, with the indignation of his anger y, and with the flame of a devouring fire, with ſcattering, and tempeſt, and hailſtones.

u His Thunder, which is called God's Voice, and ſaid to be full of Majeſty, Pſal. 29. 4. But then Thunder is metaphorically taken for ſome terrible Judgment, as it is in many places of Scripture. x Upon the Aſſyrian, whom He will ſmite with a deadly blow in the face of the World. The phraſe is taken from the geſture of a Man, who is about to ſmite another; who firſt lifts up his hand, and then lets it fall with great force upon him, whom he deſigns to ſtrike. y With great Wrath; which is ſignified by the heaping of ſo many words of the ſame ſignification together.

31. For through the voice of the LORD z ſhall the Aſſyrian be beaten down, which ſmote with a rod a.

z That voice mentioned in the laſt verſe. a Which was the Rod wherewith God ſmote his and other people, Iſa. 10. 5, 6. He who uſed to ſmite others, ſhall now be ſmitten himſelf. Or, as the words may be, and by others are rendred, He (the Lord laſt mentioned) ſhall ſmite him with a rod, or with his rod.

32. And † in every place where the grounded ſtaff b ſhall paſs, which the LORD c ſhall † lay upon him d, it ſhall be with tabrets and harps e: and in battles of ſhaking f will he g fight ‖ with it h.

† Heb. every paſſing of the rod founded. † Heb. cauſe to reſt upon him. ‖ Or, againſt them.

b Heb.

b Heb. the founded rod, the Judgment of God, which is frequently called a Rod in Scripture, and may be here called a founded Rod, or the Rod of Foundation; either because it was firmly established, and certainly to come by God's immutable purpose and Appointment: or because the Rod should not slightly touch him, and pass over him, but strike deep, and be fixed; and as it were grounded or founded in his Flesh; and made to rest upon him, as it follows in the next clause. c Heb. shall cause to rest; which is contrary to the manner of God's dealing with his People, upon whom he will not suffer the rod of the wicked to rest, Psal. 125. 3. d Upon the Assyrian, mentioned in the foregoing Verse. e The Sence is, Either 1. their Destruction shall be celebrated by God's people, with joy and musick, and songs of Praise. Or, 2. the Victory shall be got, not by warlike Instruments and Atchievements, but as it were by Tabrets and Harps. Wherein he may possibly allude to the Victory which Jehoshaphat got against Moab and Ammon, not by fighting, but only by singing, and praising God with the Voice, and with musical Instruments, 2 Chron. 20. 19, 21, 27, 28. God being pleased to fight for them, by his own immediate Power; which also was the case here, which made the people of God sing a Triumph before the fight, Isa. 37. 22. f Or, with battles or fightings of shaking, to wit, of shaking of the hand, of which kind of shaking this Hebrew word is constantly used, such as are performed by the meer shaking of the hand; namely, by God's shaking his hand against them, as he threatens to do against others, Isa. 11. 15. and 19. 16. in which last place this very word is used; and in the former, the Verb from whence it comes. For that this shaking is an Act of God, seems more than probable, and from the following words, Will he, (i.e.) God, as all understand it, fight against it. And so the sence of the place may be this, God will fight against them, and destroy them by his own hands. g To wit, the Lord, who declareth himself to be the Enemy of the Assyrian, both in the foregoing and following Verses. h With the Army of the Assyrians: Or, according to the other Hebrew reading, with them, with the Assyrians.

†Heb. from yesterday.

and much wood o, * the breath of the LORD p, like a stream of brimstone q, doth kindle it r.

i This was a place near Jerusalem, in which the Idolatrous Israelites used cruelly to offer up their Children to Moloch, 2 Chron. 28. 3. and 33. 6. See also Jer. 7. 31. and 19. 6. And it may be put Synecdochically, for any place of Torment or Misery: And particularly it is put for Hell, as well in the Writings of the ancient Jewish Doctors, as in holy Scripture, as Mat. 18. 8, 9. and 23. 15. Mark 9. 43, 44. And so this place may be understood: Either, 1. literally, of Tophet in the Valley of Hinnom, in which the Assyrian Host was either slain by the Angel, as Josephus reports, or buried, or burnt. For although the Assyrians did not make any great attempt upon Jerusalem, Isa. 37. 36. yet Rabshakeh came very near it with a great Army, Isa. 36. 2. Or, 2. figuratively of Hell. k Or, was ordered or prepared. And it might be said, in some sort, to be prepared by Hezekiah for this end, by the care which he took to purge this and other places, abused to Idolatry, which made them more fit to receive so great a favour and deliverance from God. But for Hell, that doubtless was Ordained or prepared by God, for the punishment of impenitent sinners. l Heb. from yesterday: Which phrase is sometimes used of a time but lately past, as Job 8. 9. 2 Sam. 15. 20. and sometimes of any time past, without limitation. m For the King of Assyria, Either 1. for the Kings, the Singular number being put for the Plural, whereby he may understand the Princes, or chief Commanders of the Host, by comparing Isa. 10. 8. Are not my Princes altogether Kings? Or, 2. for Rabshekah, the General of this Army, who, according to the style of Scripture, might very well be called King. Or, 3. for Sennacherib; for whom this place might be said to be ordained or prepared: partly because it was ordained for the Destruction of his Host; nothing being more ordinary, both in sacred and prophane Writers, than to impute the King, or General of the Army, to all the Victories procured, or Losses and Slaughters sustained by his Army: And partly, because the sudden Destruction of the Assyrian Army, supposed to be in this place, was the occasion of the Conspiracy of that King's Son, and so of the King's Death. But if this Tophet design Hell, this is emphatically denounced against him, to intimate, That although he escaped that sudden Plague which cut off his Army, yet there was a more terrible Judgment appointed for him, which he should be utterly unable to escape. n The Lord, who is ofe designed by this Pronoun, as in the next foregoing Verse, and elsewhere; and who is expressed in the following words. Or it is an indefinite Expression; for, it is made deep and large. ‖ Capable of receiving vast Numbers; whereby He intimates, That He designed to make a great and general Destruction of the Assyrians; and withal, that it was a vain and foolish Confidence which the Assyrians had in their numerous Host, seeing the greatest Numbers of God's Enemies are wholly unable, either to oppose him, or to save themselves from his Wrath and Power. o Whereby he further implies, That he intended to make a great Slaughter among them. And he alludes in this phrase, to the ancient custome, either of burning Sacrifices, and particularly burning Children to Moloch, or of burning the dead Bodies of Men. p The immediate hand of God, or his word of Anger: See on ver. 28. q He seems to allude to that shower of Fire and Brimstone, Gen. 19. 24. r The pile of Fire and Wood now mentioned.

CHAP. XXXI.

1. WO to them * that go down to Egypt for help a, and stay on horses b, and trust in chariots, because they are many, and in horsemen, because they are very strong: but they look not unto the holy one of Israel, neither seek the LORD c.

* Chap. 30. 2.

a As the Jews did contrary to God's Command, Deut. 17. 16. and 28. 68. b For Egypt had many and choice Horses. c Their confidence in the Creature was accompanied with, and did produce a distrust of God, and a neglect of seeking to him by Prayer for his help.

d You think you are wise, and act wisely in ingaging the Egyptians, who are a wise and warlike people, to help you; but God is not inferiour to them in Wisdom nor in strength, but much their Superior; and therefore you have done foolishly, and wickedly in preferring them before him. e Will execute his Judgments upon you, notwithstanding all that you, or your Allies the Egyptians, can do to hinder it. f His Threatnings denounced against you, will infallibly execute them. g Though at present He sit still, yet He will bestir himself and fight. h Against this wicked and rebellious people of the Jews. i The helpers, as it is explained in the next Verse: The Abstract being put for the Concrete.

3. Now † the Egyptians are men and not God k, and their horses flesh l, and not spirit m, when the LORD shall stretch out his hand, both he that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down, and they all shall fail together.

k And therefore utterly unable to defend you, either without or against my Will. l Weak and frail, as that word signifies Psal. 78. 39. Heb. 5. 7. and elsewhere. m Not like spiritual Substances, such as the Angels, who are immortal, and invisible by Men; whereof we have Instances, Exod. 12. 29, 30. Isa. 37. 36.

4. For n thus hath the LORD spoken unto me, Like as the lion and the young lion roaring on his prey o, when a multitude of shepherds is called forth against him, he will not be afraid of their voice, nor abase himself p for the ‖ noise of them, so shall the LORD of hosts come down to fight for q mount Zion, and for the hill thereof.

n Or, But: or, Nevertheless, as this particle is elsewhere used, as hath been proved before. Although you have done evil in sending to Egypt for help, and they shall not be able to help you; yet the Lord himself will, of his own Grace, and for the Glory of his own Name, give you that help and deliverance which you do not deserve, and have no reason to expect from him. And therefore desist from those evil Counsels and Courses, as those which are both unnecessary and pernicious. o When he is ready to seize upon it, and devour it. p It hath been observed of Lions, That when they are pursued, they do not run away with all speed, as other Creatures do, but march away slowly, and make an honourable Retreat. q Although this Hebrew particle might be rendred against; and so this place might be understood of God's fighting against the Jews and Egyptians, of which he speaks, ver. 3. yet it is better rendred, for, as it is taken in many other places, as is manifest from the following similitude, and verse.

5. * As

* Pſal. 91. 4.

5. * As birds flying r, ſo will the LORD of hoſts defend Jeruſalem, * defending alſo he will deliver it, and paſſing over s he will preſerve it.

r Which come from above, and ſo cannot be kept off, which fly ſwiftly, and ingage themſelves valiantly and reſolutely, when they perceive, that their young Ones are in imminent danger. He ſeems to allude, and to oppoſe this to thoſe boaſting Expreſſions of the Aſſyrians, Iſa. 10. 14. compare Deut. 32. 11, 12, Mat. 23. 37. s The deſtroying Angel ſhall paſs over Jeruſalem untouched, and ſhall fall upon the Aſſyrians. He ſeems to allude to the Hiſtory of God's paſſing over, and ſparing the Houſes of the Iſraelites, when he ſlew the Egyptians, in which this word is conſtantly uſed, Exod. 12. 12, 22, 26.

6. ¶ Turn ye unto him t from whom the children of Iſrael u have deeply revolted x.

t Let the conſideration of this gracious promiſe ingage you to repent of your carnal Policies, in ſeeking and truſting to Egypt for help, and ſincerely to return to God. u Either 1. the Iſraelites ſtrictly ſo called, who are now utterly deſtroyed for their Apoſtaſy; and therefore take heed that you do not follow their Example. Or, 2. you Jews, who are the Children of Iſrael: which Title he here gives them, partly to admoniſh them of their great and many Obligations to God; and partly to aggravate the ſin of their Apoſtaſy. x In neglecting and forſaking him, and ſeeking to Egypt for help; which he calls a deep revolt, partly becauſe it was an hainous ſin, being contrary to God's expreſs Command; and highly diſhonourable to God: And partly becauſe it was carried on with deep Diſſimulation, and with a publick profeſſion of cleaving to God, and with a deſign of ſeeking deep to hide this their counſel from the Lord, wherewith he charged this People, Iſa. 29. 15.

* Chap. 2. 20. & 30. 22.
† Heb. the idols of his gold.

7. For in that day every man ſhall * caſt away his idols y of ſilver, and † his idols of gold, which your own hands have made unto you for a ſin z.

y For when the Aſſyrians ſhall invade your Land, you ſhall find the vanity of thoſe Idols, to which you have truſted; and therefore ſhall caſt them away with indignation, and be forced to ſeek to me for help. So this is added as an argument to perſwade them to practiſe his Counſel of turning to God. z Which you have made as Inſtruments of your ſin of Idolatry. Or, Which your ſinful hands (by a common Hebraiſme, called hands of ſin) have made for you. Or, the ſin (as an Idol is called, Deut. 9. 21.) which your hands have made for you. So there is only a Tranſpoſition of one word, which is very uſual in the Hebrew Text.

a When you have caſt away your Idols, and ſeriouſly ſought to me for help; both which things were performed by Hezekiah. b By the Sword, not of any Man, either mean or mighty, but of an Angel. c From, or for fear of, that Plague which ſo ſtrangely and ſuddenly deſtroyed his Army. d Heb. his choice young men, his Guards and valiant Commanders and Souldiers. e Heb. ſhall melt away, a great part of them being deſtroyed by the Angel; and the hearts of the reſt melting for fear.

† Heb. his rock ſhall paſs away for fear.

9. And † he ſhall paſs over to ‖ his ſtrong hold f for fear, and his princes ſhall be afraid of the enſign g, ſaith the LORD, whoſe fire is in Zion h, and his furnace in Jeruſalem i.

f Sennacherib ſhall flee away, with all ſpeed, from Jeruſalem, to his ſtrong City of Nineveh, Iſa. 37. 37. Or, as it is in the Margent, and as the Words lie in the Hebrew Text, his rock, (i. e. his Strength, the greateſt Champions of his Army, to whom he truſted) ſhall paſs away (ſhall flee with all ſpeed from Jeruſalem) for fear, leſt the Sword of the deſtroying Angel ſhould overtake them. g Either 1. of any Enſign. This dreadful Judgment ſhall ſtrike them with ſuch a Terror, that they ſhall not dare to look any Enemy in the Face. Or 2. of the Lord's Enſign, which he hath lifted up againſt them. h So the Sence is either 1. whoſe Fire is continually burning upon the Altar in Zion; which ſignifies his Preſence and Reſidence there. Or rather 2. who is, and will appear to be in Zion, like a Fire to defend his People, and to conſume their Enemies; for which end God promiſeth, That he would be unto Jeruſalem a wall of fire round about, Zech. 2. 5. And that he would make the Governours of Judah like a hearth of fire among the wood, or like a Torch of fire in a ſheaf; and that they ſhould devour all the people round about. Poſſibly theſe and the following Words may be thus rendred, and that very agreeable to the Hebrew words, Who will be a fire (to wit, a conſuming fire) to him (to the King of Aſſyria, of whom he is here ſpeaking) in Zion (from whence he will ſend forth that fire which ſhall conſume his Army: Or, for Zion, for Zion's ſake; for the Prefix here rendred in, frequently ſignifies for, as hath been proved) and a furnace to him in or for Jeruſalem. But this I only propoſe, leaving it to the Judgment of the intelligent Reader. i The ſame thing repeated in other words.

CHAP XXXII.

* Pſal. 45. 1. Zech. 9. 9.

1. BEhold, * a king a ſhall reign b in righteouſneſs, and princes c ſhall rule in judgment.

a This ſeems to me to be a diſtinct Prophecy from the former, and delivered at another time, and probably before that which is related in the former Chapters. For this is certain, and confeſſed by all, That the Prophecies are not always ſet down in that order, in which the Prophets delivered them. The foregoing Prophecy ſeems to have been delivered, not in the time of Ahaz, for he ſent to the Aſſyrian, and not to the Egyptian for help; but in the days of Hezekiah, who rebelled againſt the King of Aſſyria, as is ſaid, 2 Kings 18. 17. and was too prone to truſt upon the ſtaff of Egypt, as the Aſſyrian expreſly chargeth him there, ver. 21. To which courſe it is likely he was drawn or tempted by ſome of his wicked Princes and Counſellors, whom the Prophet therefore ſeverely cenſures and condemns in the two foregoing Chapters. And this ſeems to have been delivered in the time of Ahaz, and to ſpeak of Hezekiah, and of his righteous and happy Government; but withal, as Hezekiah and his Reign, was an eminent Type of Chriſt, and of his Kingdom; ſo this Prophecy looks through Hezekiah unto Chriſt, as many other Scriptures in their literal Sence do unqueſtionably concern David, which yet have a myſtical Sence, and are alſo meant of Chriſt, in whom thoſe things were more fully and eminently accompliſhed. Hezekiah a Type of Chriſt, and Chriſt Typified by him. b Therefore Hezekiah was not King, when this Prophecy was delivered. And whereas ſome ſay, That he ſpeaks of the good Government of Hezekiah, after the Deſtruction of Sennacherib; it is eaſie to obſerve, That his Government was as good before that time as afterward; and that in the very beginning of his Reign, he Ruled with Righteouſneſs, and the fear of God, as the Hiſtory plainly declareth. c The Miniſters of State, and Juſtice, and War, under the King. For a wiſe and good King will take care to have like Miniſters.

2. And a man d ſhall be as an hiding place e from the wind f, and a covert from the tempeſt: as rivers of water in a dry place g, as the ſhadow of a † great rock in a weary land h.

d Either 1. the Man or King ſpoken of. Or, 2. each or every one, to wit, of his Princes. That King ſhall not patch up an old Garment with new Cloth, nor mingle good and bad together; but ſhall take care to purge out all the corrupt Magiſtrates, and, as far as he can to ſettle good Ones in all places. A man is oft put for every or any man, as Iſa. 2. 20. and 3. 5, 6. and elſewhere. e Unto the people under their Government, eſpecially to ſuch as are oppreſſed or injured, by thoſe who are more Potent than they. f From the rage and violence of evil Men. g No leſs refreſhing and acceptable ſhall this King and his Princes be to their Subjects. h In a dry and ſcorched Country, which is called weary here, as alſo Pſal. 63. 1. Metonymically, becauſe it makes Travellers weary, as Death is called pale in other Authors, becauſe it makes men's Faces pale.

3. And the eyes of them that ſee, ſhall not be dim, and the ears of them that hear, ſhall hearken i.

i This is meant, Either 1. of the Princes or Magiſtrates, who are inſtead of Eyes and Ears, both to the King, and to the People, who, by their Office, are to ſee and obſerve all things, and to hear all Cauſes. Theſe, ſaith he, ſhall not ſhut their Eyes, nor ſuffer them to be blinded with Gifts, to favour a rich Man in an unjuſt Cauſe; they ſhall not ſhut their Ears againſt the Complaints of the poor oppreſſed Ones, as wicked Princes commonly do. Or, 2. of the People, they ſhall not ſhut their Eyes and Ears againſt the good Counſels and Examples of their Religious King and Rulers, as they have done formerly: Both Princes and and People shall be reformed. This was done in some poor measure in Hezekiah's time; but far more fully and eminently in the days of the Messiah, who by his grace, changeth Men's hearts, and cureth them of that wilful and obstinate blindness, whereof they had been guilty before. Which clearly sheweth that this Prophecy looks through Hezekiah unto Christ. And the like may be said of the following verse.

4. The heart also of the † rash k shall understand knowledge l, and the tongue of the stammerers m shall be ready to speak ‖ plainly.

k Who were hasty and heady in judging of Things; which is an argument of Ignorance and Folly. l Shall become more knowing and considerate in their Judgments and Actions. m That used to speak of the things of God, darkly, and doubtfully, and unwillingly. As Men's understandings shall then be enlightned, so their Speech shall be reformed. Which though it was in part fulfilled in Hezekiah; this Reformation being effected in some measure by his Counsel and Example, and by the powerful Preaching of the Levites, whom he excited and encouraged to Teach the good knowledge of the Lord, as is said, 2 Chron. 30. 22. yet was truly and fully accomplished only by Christ, who wrought this wonderful change in an innumerable company both of Jews and Gentiles.

5. The vile person n shall be no more called ‖ liberal o, nor the churl p said to be bountiful.

n Base and worthless Men. Heb. the fool: which in Scripture-use commonly signifies a wicked Man. o Or, Noble, or a Prince, or Lord, as this word is used, Psal. 118. 9. & 146. 3. and elsewhere. The Sence of the place is, Either 1. Unworthy Men shall not be advanced to places of Honour and Power, as the Seventy, and some others understand it; for, to be called, is oft put in Scripture for, to be, as hath been frequently observed. Or, 2. vicious and worthless Persons shall no longer be reputed Honourable and Vertuous, because of their high and honourable places, as commonly they are under wicked Princes, by means of Flatterers; but Wickedness shall be discovered and punished wheresoever it is, and Vertue shall be manifested and rewarded; and all things shall be managed with sincerity and simplicity: Which was eminently fulfilled under the Gospel; by the Preaching whereof, and by Christ's Spirit, Hypocrites are detected, and Men are enabled to discern between Good and Evil, both Persons and Things. p The sordid and covetous Man; which is a great Vice in any Man, but especially in Magistrates; who therefore must be Men hating Covetousness, Exod. 18. 21. But under this one Vice, all Vices are understood by a Synecdoche, very frequent in Scripture, and in other Authors; as under the opposite Vertue of bountifulness, all Vices are comprehended.

6. For the vile person will speak villany q, and his heart will work iniquity r, to practise hypocrisy s, and to utter errour against the LORD t, to make empty the soul of the hungry, and he will cause the drink of the thirsty to fail u.

q So this is a reason of the Assertion, ver. 5. either thus, Such shall not be advanced to Places of Trust and Dignity; for if they were, they would abuse them by unjust Sentences and Practices: Or thus, Men shall no longer be miscalled; for every one will discover what he is by his Words and Actions; which also shall be narrowly observed. But these and the following words are, and may be otherwise rendred: But (as this Particle oft signifies) he shall be called or said to be (which words are easily understood out of the former Verse, as is very frequent in Scripture) a fool, who (which relative Particle is understood in very many places) shall speak villany, and whose heart shall work iniquity, &c. r He will, from time to time, be devising Wickedness, that he may execute it when he hath opportunity. s To do bad things, but with a pretence of Religion and Justice, which he shall use to keep himself from the dis-favour of his Prince, and from the lash of the Law. Or, to practise prophaneness or wickedness, as this Word, at least sometimes, seems to signifie. t To pass unjust Sentences, which is directly contrary to the Will and Command of God. u Whereby they take away the Bread and Drink of the Poor, and give it to their rich Oppressors.

7. The instruments also of the churl are evil x, he deviseth wicked devices y to destroy the poor with lying words z, even ‖ when the needy speaketh right a.

‖ Or, when he speaketh against the poor in judgment.

x Heb. The vessels, &c. which is a word of a very general Signification among the Hebrews, and signifies any person or thing which is employed in a Man's use and service. I say, person, for the name of vessel is given to such Persons as are instrumental to another, as to the Babylonians, who were God's instruments in executing his Vengeance, Isa. 13. 5. to God's Ministers, Act. 9. 15. 2 Cor. 4. 5. and to useful Christians, 2 Tim. 2. 20. and to Wives, 1 Pet. 3. 7. And so it may here note, That such covetous or wicked Princes, most willingly chuse, and employ wicked Men in their Affairs, because such Men will, without any regard to Conscience or Justice, serve all their exorbitant Desires or Lusts. But withal, it seems to include his Counsels, and Practices, and Arts, which are here declared to be generally Evil. But this Verse is, and may be otherwise rendred, as the former was; And (repeat, he shall be called) a churl (as indeed he is one) whose instruments are evil, and who deviseth, &c. Which agrees with the order of the words in the Hebrew Text, and with the order of the foregoing Verses: For as he speaks of the vile person, and of the churl, ver. 5. So he gives a Description of the vile Person, ver. 6. and then of the churl, in this Verse. y He useth all his Wit and Art to do Injury to others, without any inconvenience to himself. z With false and unrighteous Decrees. a When their Cause is just and good.

8. But the liberal deviseth liberal things, and by liberal things shall he ‖ stand b.

b He who is truly Liberal and Vertuous, will shew it by designing and practising liberal or vertuous Actions: and he who doth so, will not destroy himself thereby, as wicked men falsly suppose, but establish and advance himself. But this Verse also, as well as the former is, and may be otherwise rendred: And (repeat, he shall be called, as before) liberal, who deviseth liberal things, and persisteth, or continueth in liberal things. If it be thought strange, That so many Verses should be spent in Affirming that which, in effect, was said, ver. 5. it must be considered, that these Verses do not only contain an Affirmation, that they should be called vile persons or churles, or, liberal, that were so; but also a Description of their Qualities and Practices, which was useful for their Conviction, and for the Instruction of others.

9. ¶ Rise up c ye women that are at ease d, hear my voice ye careless e daughters f, give ear unto my speech.

c Bestir, and prepare your selves to hear, as it follows; and shake off Sloth and Carelessness. d That indulge your selves in Idleness and Luxury. e Heb. confident or secure, who are insensible of your sin and danger. f The same before called women: Whom he here reproveth, and threatneth for their sins, as he did the men before, for seeking to Egypt for help, and divers other sins, whereof the Men were most guilty.

10 † Many days and years f shall ye be troubled, ye careless women: for the vintage shall fail g, the gathering h shall not come.

f Heb. Days above a year, (i. e.) a year and some days: Which notes, Either 1. the time from this Prophecy to the beginning of this Judgment, Or rather, 2. the time of the continuance of it; that it should last for above one Year; as indeed this did; and no longer: For Hezekiah reigned in all but twenty nine Years, 2 Kings 18. 2. and Sennacherib came in his fourteenth Year; and after his defeat and departure God promised, and added to him fifteen Years more, 2 Kings 20. 6. g During the time of the Assyrians Invasion. And this Commination is here added to qualify the foregoing promise, and to warn them, that although God would give them so good a King, and there should be some Reformation of their former abuses under the Government of Ahaz; yet as there were many sins among them, yet not repented of, so they should be severely chastised for them. h To wit, of the other Fruits of the Earth; as that Feast, which was observed after the gathering of all the Fruits, was called the feast of in-gathering, Exod. 23. 16.

11. Tremble ye women that are at ease, be troubled, ye careless ones: strip ye and make ye bare i, and gird sackcloth upon your loyns.

i Put off your Ornaments, as God commanded upon a like occasion, Exod. 33. 5. that you may put on Sackcloth instead of them, as Mourners and Penitents used to do.

12. They shall lament for the teats k, for † the pleasant fields, for the fruitful vine.

k Either 1. properly, because, through Famine, your Teats are destitute of Milk for the nourishment of your poor Children. Or rather 2. Metaphorically, as the following Words explain it, for the pleasant and fruitful Fields, which like Teats yielded you plentiful and excellent Nourishment, for which the Land was said to flow with Milk, Ezek. 20. 6. And the Earth being compared to the Womb that bare us, Job 1. 21. it is not ſtrange, if its fruitful Fields be compared to the Breaſts which nouriſh us.

*chap. 34. 13. Hoſ. 9. 6. ‖ Or, burning upon, &c.

13. * Upon the land of my people ſhall come up thorns and briers l, ‖ yea, upon all the houſes of joy m in the joyous city:

l If any of you think there is no great cauſe for ſuch Trembling and Lamentation, which ſhall laſt but for a year and ſome days; know that this Calamity, by the Aſſyrians, is but an earneſt of further and ſorer judgments: For the time is coming, when this Land ſhall be laid deſolate; and inſtead of Vines and other Fruits, it ſhall yield nothing but Briers and Thorns: of which, ſee on Iſa. 7. 23, 24. m Upon that Ground, where now your Houſes ſtand, in which you delight, and take your fill of mirth and pleaſure.

‖ Or, cliſts and watch-towers.

14 Becauſe the palaces n ſhall be forſaken, the multitude of the city ſhall be left o, the ‖ forts and towers ſhall be for dens for ever, a joy of wild aſſes p, a paſture of flocks.

n Heb. the palace, the King's Houſe, and other magnificent buildings in the City. o Or rather, ſhall be forſaken, to wit, of God, and given up into their Enemies hands. And the Verb in the foregoing clauſe may be rendred, ſhall be left. p Deſolate places, in which wild Aſſes delight to be, Job 39. 5. Jer. 2. 24.

15. Until the ſpirit be poured upon us from on high q, and * the wilderneſs be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forreſt r.

q And this calamity and deſolation ſhall, in a manner, continue until the time come, in which God will pour, or, as the Hebrew word properly ſignifies, reveal, (i.e.) evidently and plentifully pour out his ſpirit from Heaven upon His people. Which was done in ſome ſort upon the return of the People from Babylon, when God, by his Spirit, ſtirred up the Spirit, both of Cyrus to give them liberty of returning to Jeruſalem, and of the people to return and build the City and People: But was far more clearly and fully accompliſhed in the days of the Meſſiah. And indeed the promiſes contained in theſe, and the following words and verſes, were not fulfilled upon their coming out of Babylon, after which time they had but a little reviving in their bondage, as is ſaid, Ezra 9. 8. and continued in ſervitude and diſtreſs under the Perſian Emperours, Nehem. 9. 36, 37. and afterward ſuffered many and grievous calamities from the Kings of Syria, and Egypt, and from the Romans: which ſuits very ill with that glorious Promiſe here following, ver. 18. And therefore theſe Promiſes concern the times of the Goſpel, when God's Spirit was in a moſt evident and glorious Manner poured forth upon the Apoſtles, and other believing Jews, to the Aſtoniſhment of their very Adverſaries; and when the following Promiſes were in a good Meaſure fulfilled, and are more fully to be accompliſhed in God's due time. r Which is Allegorically underſtood. The meaning may be this; God's people who were deſolate and deſtroyed, ſhall be revived and flouriſh, and their flouriſhing Enemies ſhall be brought to Deſolation and Deſtruction. It may alſo ſignify, The Converſion of the barren and deſpiſed Gentiles, and the Rejection of the Jews in the time of the Meſſiah.

16. Then judgment s ſhall dwell in the wilderneſs, and righteouſneſs remain in the fruitful field t.

s Juſt Judgment, as the next clauſe explains it. t Juſtice ſhall be Executed in all the parts of the Land, both in the barren and fruitful Places, and ſhall be practiſed by all my people: Which agrees with that promiſe, Iſa. 60. 21. Thy people ſhall be all righteous, &c.

17. And the work of righteouſneſs ſhall be peace u, and the effect of righteouſneſs, quietneſs x and aſſurance y for ever.

u The effect of this prevailing practice of Righteouſneſs ſhall be Proſperity and outward Felicity. x Tranquillity, both of Mind and outward Eſtate. y Or, confidence. The obſervation of God's Precepts will beget in them a confidence and aſſurance of God's Mercy, and the fulfilling of his Promiſes.

18. And my people z ſhall dwell in a peaceable habitation, and in ſure dwellings, and in quiet reſting places:

z Either the Gentiles, who then ſhall be my People: Or, the Jews to whom this Promiſe ſhall be made good upon their Converſion to Chriſt in the latter times of the Goſpel.

19. When it ſhall hail, coming down on the foreſt a, ‖ and the city b ſhall be low in a low place c.

‖ Or, and the city ſhall be utterly abaſed.

a Heb. And it ſhall hail, &c. As my Bleſſings ſhall be poured down upon my People, who from a Wilderneſs, are turned into a fruitful Field, as it is ſaid, ver. 15. So my Wrath and Judgments (which are ſignified by hail, Iſa. 28. 2, 17. and elſewhere) ſhall fall upon them, who were a fruitful Field, but were turned into a Foreſt, as was ſaid, ver. 15. (i.e.) upon the unbelieving and rebellious Jews, who ſeem to be there deſigned under that Notion. b Either 1. Babylon, the great Enemy and Oppreſſour of God's People. Or, 2 Jeruſalem, which, though now it was the Seat of God's Worſhip and People; yet he foreſaw, by the Spirit of Prophecy, That it would be the great Enemy of the Meſſiah, and of Gods People. c Heb. Shall be humbled with humiliation: Which, by an ordinary Hebraiſm ſignifies, Shall be greatly humbled, or brought very low.

20. Bleſſed are ye that ſow d beſide all waters e, that ſend forth thither the feet of the ox and the aſs f.

d As the barren Foreſt ſhall be deſtroyed with hail, ver. 19. ſo the fruitful Field ſhall be improved, and bring forth much Fruit; which is ſignified by a Declaration of the Bleſſedneſs of them that Sow in it. e In all moiſt and fat Grounds, which are like to yield good Fruit. But this paſſage, as well as others in the foregoing Verſes, is to be underſtood myſtically, and ſeems to reſpect the times of the Goſpel. The Prophet reflecting upon his own unſucceſsful Labours, of which he complains, Iſa. 49. 4. and elſewhere, and foreſeeing by the Spirit, the great and happy Succeſs of his Succeſſors, the Miniſters of the Goſpel; tacitly bewails his own unhappineſs, who ſowed his Seed upon dry and barren Ground, by congratulating the happineſs of the Apoſtles, who ſowed their Seed more generally, upon all fit Grounds, without any diſtinction between Jews and Gentiles; and who found the Ground, to wit, the hearts of the People, more moiſtned and ſoftned, and better prepared to receive the good Seed of God's Word. f Which Creatures they employed in plowing and ſowing the Ground, Deut. 22. 10. Pſal. 144. 14. Iſa. 30. 24.

CHAP. XXXIII.

*chap. 21. 2. Hab. 2. 8.

1. WO to thee that * ſpoileſt a, and thou waſt not ſpoiled b, and dealeſt treacherouſly c, and they dealt not treacherouſly with thee d; when thou ſhalt ceaſe to ſpoil, thou ſhalt be ſpoiled e; and when thou ſhalt make an end to deal treacherouſly, they ſhall deal treacherouſly with thee.

a To Sennacherib, who waſted the Land of Judah. b Thou didſt not meet with any conſiderable Oppoſition, but waſt victorious over all thine Enemies; of which the Aſſyrian boaſteth, Iſa. 10. 8, 9. & 36. 18, 19. c As Sennacherib did with Hezekiah, 2 King 18. 14, 17. d None of thine Enemies could prevail againſt thee, either by force, of which he ſpeaketh in the former clauſe, or by treachery, as here. Or, when they dealt not, &c. when Hezekiah did not deal treacherouſly with thee. If it be ſaid, that Hezekiah dealt treacherouſly with him, in breaking his Faith, and rebelling againſt him; it may be anſwered, That Hezekiah neither promiſed nor owed him any Service or Subjection. What was done in that kind, was done by Ahaz only. And he only begged his aſſiſtance for a particular VVork, and paid him well for it, 2 Kings. 16, 7, 8. and the King of Aſſyria did not keep his Conditions with him; for, he diſtreſſed him, but ſtrengthned him not, 2 Chron. 28. 20. e When thou haſt performed the Work of chaſtiſing my People, for which I ſent thee, thou alſo ſhalt be ſpoiled by thine Enemies.

* Pſal. 85. 7, 8.

2. O LORD d, be gracious unto us, we have waited for thee, be thou their * arm e every morning f, our ſalvation alſo in the time of trouble.

d The Prophet contemplating the Judgment which was now coming upon God's People, directeth his Prayer to God for them. e Our Arm or Strength, the change of Perſons is moſt frequent in Prophetical VVritings. f VVhen we offer the Morning Sacrifice, and call upon Thee: VVhich yet is not meant excluſively, as if he did not deſire God's help at other times; but comprehenſively, the Morning being put Synecdochically for the whole day. The Sence is, Help us ſpeedily and continually.

3. At the noiſe of the tumult g the people h fled; at the lifting up of thy ſelf the nations i were ſcattered.

g Which the Angel ſhall make in deſtroying the Army. h Thoſe of the Army, who eſcaped that ſtroke. i The People of divers Nations which made up his Army.

4. And your ſpoil k ſhall be gathered l like the gathering of the catterpiller m: as the running to and fro of locuſts n ſhall he run upon them.

k That Treaſure which you have raked together, by ſpoiling divers people. l By the Jews at Jeruſalem, when you ſhall be forced to flee away with all poſſible ſpeed, leaving your Spoils behind you. m Either 1. paſſively, with as much eaſe, and in as great numbers as Catterpillers are gathered and deſtroyed. Or, rather 2. actively, as appears from the next Clauſe; as Caterpillers or Locuſts (for the word ſignifies either) gather and devour all the Fruits of the Earth; which was a common Plague in thoſe Countries. n As Locuſts, eſpecially when they are ſent, and armed by Commiſſion from God, come with great force, and run hither and thither, devouring all the Fruits of the Earth, whereſoever they find them.

5. The LORD is exalted o; for he dwelleth on high p, he hath filled Zion q with judgment and righteouſneſs r.

o Will get great Glory by the marvellous Deſtruction of ſo proud and potent an Army; and by the Defence of his People. p For he is, and will appear to be ſuperior to his Enemies, both in Place and Power. He dwelleth in the Heaven, whence he can eaſily, and irreſiſtibly pour down Judgments upon his Enemies. Although theſe words may be, and by ſome are joyned with thoſe that follow thus, For he that dwelleth on high hath filled, &c. q He will fill Jeruſalem. r Either 1. with a glorious Inſtance of his juſt Judgment againſt the Aſſyrians. Or, 2. with the Execution of Juſtice by good Hezekiah, as before it was filled with impiety and injuſtice under Ahaz. The City ſhall not only be delivered from that wicked Enemy, but ſhall alſo be eſtabliſhed and bleſſed with true Religion and Righteouſneſs; which was a great addition to that Mercy.

† Heb. the ſtrength of ſalvations, of wiſdom and knowledge, ſhall be the ſtability of thy times.

6. And † wiſdom and knowledge s ſhall be the ſtability of thy times t, and ſtrength of ſalvation u: the fear of the LORD is his treaſure x.

s To govern thy ſelf and thy people well. t Of thy Reign; times being oft put for things done in thoſe times, as 1 Chron. 12. 32. Pſal. 31. 15. & 37. 18, &c. He turneth his ſpeech to Hezekiah. The Sence is, Thy Throne ſhall be eſtabliſhed upon the ſure Foundations of Wiſdom and Juſtice. u Thy ſaving Strength, or thy ſtrong or mighty Salvation. x And although thou ſhalt have great Treaſures of Gold and Silver, &c. yet thy chief Treaſure and Delight is, and ſhall be in promoting the Fear and Worſhip of God; which ſhall be a great honour and ſafeguard to thy ſelf and people. He ſaith, his treaſure, for thy treaſure, by a ſudden change of the perſon, uſual in theſe Books.

7. Behold y, their ‖ valiant ones z ſhall cry without a, the embaſſadours of peace b ſhall weep bitterly c.

y That the Mercy here promiſed might be duly magnified, he makes a lively repreſentation of their great danger and diſtreſs, in which it found them. z Or, their heralds or meſſengers, as the Hebrew Doctors expound the word: Either 1. thoſe whom the King of Aſſyria ſent to Jeruſalem, 2 Kings 18. 17. Or rather thoſe whom Hezekiah ſent to treat with the Aſſyrian Commiſſioners, 2 Kings 18. 18. as the next clauſe ſheweth. a Through grief and fear. b Whom he ſhall ſend to beg Peace of the Aſſyrian. c Becauſe they cannot obtain their deſires.

* Judg. 5. 6.

8. * The high-ways lie waſt, the wayfaring man ceaſeth d, he hath broken the covenant e, he hath deſpiſed the cities f, he regardeth no man g.

d Becauſe the Aſſyrian Souldiers poſſeſſed and filled the Land. e Sennacherib broke his Faith, given to Hezekiah, of departing for a Sum of Money, 2 Kings 18. 14, 17. f The defenced Cities of Judah, which he contemned, and eaſily took, 2 Kings 18. 13. g Either to ſpare them, or to fear them, or to keep Faith with them. He neither feareth God, nor reverenceth Man.

‖ Or, withered away. * chap. 35. 2. ‖ Or, yell, Jer. 51. 38.

9. The earth mourneth h and languiſheth, Lebanon is aſhamed and ‖ hewn down i: Sharon k is like a wilderneſs, and Baſhan and Carmel l ‖ ſhake off their fruits m.

Or, as the Word ſignifies, and is here rendred by others, withereth or languiſheth, Becauſe its Trees are now uſed by the Jews for their Buildings, as they have been: And becauſe they are ſpoiled and deſtroyed by the Aſſyrians. k A pleaſant and fruitful Place, as appears from 1 Chron. 27. 29. Cant. 2. 1. Iſa. 35. 2. l Two places eminent for Fertility, and eſpecially for good Paſtures, Deut. 32. 14. 1 Sam. 25. 2. which are here Synecdochically put for all ſuch places. m Are ſpoiled of their Fruits. Or, as it is rendred in the Margent, and by ſome others, yell or roar, as this Word is rendred, Jer. 51. 38.

10. Now will I riſe n, ſaith the LORD; now will I be exalted, now will I lift up my ſelf.

n In this extremity, I will appear on the behalf of my People and Land.

11. * Ye ſhall conceive chaff, ye ſhall bring forth ſtubble o, your breath as fire ſhall devour you p. * Pſal. 7. 14.

o In ſtead of ſolid Corn. Your great hopes and deſigns, O ye Aſſyrians! ſhall be utterly diſappointed. p Your Rage againſt my People ſhall bring Ruine upon your ſelves.

12. And the people ſhall be as the burnings of lime q, as thorns cut up ſhall they be burnt in the fire.

q Shall be burnt as eaſily and effectually, as Chalk is burned to make Lime.

13 ¶ Hear ye that are far off, what I have done, and ye that are near acknowledge my might r.

r My power and juſtice in deſtroying the Aſſyrians, ſhall be ſo evident, that People, both far and near, ſhall be forced to acknowledge it.

14. The ſinners in Zion are afraid s, fearfulneſs hath ſurprized the hypocrites, who among us ſhall dwell with the devouring fire? who amongſt us ſhall dwell with everlaſting burnings t?

s This is ſpoken not of the Aſſyrians, as ſome would have it, but of the Jews, as appears, both from the Words themſelves, and from the following Verſes. The Prophet having foretold the Deliverance of God's People, and the Deſtruction of their Enemies, ver. 10, 11, 12. for the greater Illuſtration of that wonderful Mercy, here returns to the Deſcription, and gives a lively repreſentation of the diſmal and frightful condition, in which the Jews, eſpecially ſuch of them as were ungodly and unbelieving, were before this Deliverance came. Although the Godly Jews were in ſome meaſure, ſupported by the ſenſe of God's Favour, and by God's Promiſes delivered to them by Iſaiah; yet the generality of the people were filled with Horrors, and expectation of utter Deſtruction. t How ſhall we be able to abide the Preſence, and endure, or avoid the Wrath of that God, who is a conſuming Fire; who is now about to deſtroy us utterly by the Aſſyrians, and will afterward burn us with unquenchable Fire. For ſeeing it is ſufficiently evident from both Old and New Teſtament, as hath been formerly obſerved and proved, That the Jews, except the Sadducees, did generally believe the rewards and puniſhments of the future Life; and theſe Temporal Judgments, as they did frequently cut men off from this Life, ſo they tranſmitted them into that future and endleſs Life: It is not ſtrange if their guilty Conſciences made them dread both the preſent Judgment here, and the terrible conſequences of it hereafter. Heb. Who ſhall dwell for us, &c. (i. e.) in our ſtead? Who will interpoſe himſelf between God's Anger and us. How ſhall we eſcape theſe Miſeries? That this is the Sence of this Queſtion, may be gathered from the Anſwer, given to it in the following Verſe; in which, he directs them to the right courſe of removing God's Wrath, and regaining His Favour.

15. He that * walketh † righteouſly u, and ſpeaketh † uprightly x, he that deſpiſeth y the gains of ‖ oppreſſions, that ſhaketh his hands from holding z of bribes, that ſtoppeth his ears from hearing of † blood a, and ſhutteth his eyes from ſeeing evil b.

* Pſal. 15. 2. & 24. 4. † Heb. in righteouſneſſes. † Heb. uprightneſſes. ‖ Or, deceits. † Heb. bloods.

u Who is juſt in all His dealings with Men, of which the following Clauſes explain it. x Which is not ſpoken excluſively, as if Piety towards God were not as neceſſary, as Righteouſneſs towards Men; but comprehenſively, this being one Evidence, and a conſtant companion of Piety. y Who ſpeaks truly and ſincerely, what He really intends. z That refuſeth it, not for politick Reaſons, as Men ſometimes may do, but from a contempt and abhorrency of injuſtice. z Or, from taking or receiving; as this Verb ſignifies, nifies, Prov. 4. 4. & 5. 5. & 28. 17. That will not receive, much less retain Bribes. a Who will not hearken or assent to any Counsels or Courses, tending to shed innocent Blood. b That abhorreth the very sight of Sin, committed by others, and guardeth his Eyes from beholding occasions of Sin, of which, see on Job 31. 1.

16. He shall dwell on † high c, his place of defence shall be the munitions of rocks, bread shall be given him, his waters shall be sure d.

c Out of the reach of danger. d God will furnish him with all necessaries.

† Heb. the land of far distance.

17. Thine eyes shall see the king e in his beauty f, they shall behold † the land that is very far off g.

e First Hezekiah, and then Christ, as before. f Triumphing over all Enemies, and Ruling his own People with Righteousness; in which two things, the beauty and glory of a King and Kingdom, doth chiefly consist. g Thou shalt not be shut up in Jerusalem, and confined to thine own narrow Borders, as thou hast been, but thou shalt have free Liberty to go abroad with honour and safety, where thou pleasest, even into the remotest Countries, because of the great renown of thy King, and the enlargement of his Dominions.

* 1 Cor. 1. 20. † Heb. weigher.

18. Thine heart shall meditate terrour h; * Where is the scribe? where is the † receiver? where is he that counted the towers i?

h This is, Either 1. a Premonition concerning a future Judgment, as if he said, Before those glorious Promises shall be accomplished, thou shalt be brought into great straits and troubles. Or rather 2. a thankful acknowledgment of deliverance from a former danger; as if he had said, When thou art delivered, thou shalt, with pleasure and thankfulness recal to mind thy former Terrours and Miseries. i These words are, Either 1. Words of Gratulation, and Insultation over the Enemy. Thou shalt then say, Where are the great Officers of the Assyrian Host? They are no where, they are not, they are dead or slain. Or rather 2. the words of men dismayed and confounded, such as proceeded from the Jews, in the time of their distress; and are here remembred to aggravate the present Mercy. For the Officers here mentioned, seem not to be those of the Assyrian Army, who were actually fighting against the Jews and Jerusalem (for then he would rather have mentioned the Captains of the host, as the Scripture commonly doth in these cases, than the Scribes and Receivers, &c.) but rather of the Jews in Jerusalem, who, upon the approach of Sennacherib, began to make Military preparations for the defence of the City; and to chuse such Officers, as were necessary and usual, for that end; such as these were, to wit, the scribe, whom we call Muster-Master, who was to make and keep a List of the Souldiers, and to call them together, as occasion required: The Receiver who received and laid out the Money for the Charges of the War; and he that counted the Towers, who surveyed all the parts of the City, and considered what Towers or Fortifications were to be made or repaired for the security of the City. And unto these several Officers the People resorted, with great distraction and confusion, to acquaint them with all Occurrences, or to quicken them to their several Works, or to transact Matters with them, as occasion required.

* 2 Kin. 19. 32. * Jer. 5. 15. ‖ Or, ridiculous, or barbarous.

19. * Thou shalt not see a fierce people k, a * people of a deeper speech than thou canst perceive l; of a ‖ stammering tongue m, that thou canst not understand.

k As Moses said of the Egyptians, Exod. 14. 13. So I say of the Assyrians, that fierce and warlike People, whom thou hast seen, with great Terrour, near the Walls of Jerusalem, thou shalt see them again no more. l A foreign Nation, whose Language is abstruse and unknown to thee. m Of which, see on Isa. 28. 11.

* Psal. 46. 5. & 125. 1, 2.

20. Look upon Zion n the city of our solemnities o, thine eyes shall see * Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down, not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken p.

n Contemplate Zion's beauty and safety, and her glorious and peculiar Priviledges: It is an Object worthy of thy deepest Meditation. o This he mentions, as the chief part of Zions Glory and Happiness, that God was solemnly Worshipped, and the solemn Assemblies and Feasts kept in her. p Which was but very obscurely and imperfectly fulfilled in the literal Zion; but was clearly and fully accomplished in the mystical Zion, the Church of God in the times of the Gospel, against which, we are assured, that the gates of Hell shall not prevail, Mat. 16. 18.

‖ Or, but there (glorious is the LORD) we shall have a place, &c. † Heb. broad of spaces or hands.

21. ‖ But there q the glorious LORD will be unto us a place † of broad rivers and streams r, wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ships pass thereby s.

q In and about Zion, r Though we have nothing but a small and contemptible Brook to defend us; yet God will be as sure and strong a defence to us, as if we were surrounded with such great Rivers, as Nilus or Euphrates, which were a great security to Egypt and Babylon. s But although they shall have from God, the security of a great River, yet they shall be freed from the disadvantage of it; which is, That the Enemies may come against them in Ships; for no Galleys, nor Ships of the Enemies shall be able to come into this River to annoy them.

* Jam. 4. 12. † Heb. statute-maker.

22. For the LORD is our judge t, the LORD is our * † lawgiver u, the LORD is our king, he will save us.

t To judge for us, to plead our Cause against our Enemies, as the ancient Judges of Israel did, Judg. 2. 16. u Our chief Governour, to whom it belongs, to give Laws, and to defend his People.

‖ Or, they have forsaken thy tacklings.

23. ‖ Thy tacklings are loosed x, they y could not well strengthen their mast, they could not spread the sail: then is the prey of a great spoil divided, the lame take the prey z.

x He directeth his Speech to the Assyrians; and having tacitely designed their Army under the notion of a gallant Ship, ver. 21. he here represents their broken and undone condition, by the Metaphor of a Ship, tossed in a tempestuous Sea, having her Cables broken, and all her Tacklings loose, and out of order, so as she could have no benefit of her Masts or Sails; and therefore is quickly broken, or swallowed up by the Sea. y The Assyrians, of whom he still speaks, as in the first Clause he spake to them. z They, who came to spoil and prey upon my People, shall become a prey to them, and shall be forced to flee away so suddenly, that they shall leave so many Spoils behind them, that when strong and active Men have carried away all that they desired, there shall be enough left for the Lame, who come last to the spoil. The general sence of the place is, That God's People shall be Victorious over all their Enemies.

24. And the inhabitants a shall not say, I am sick b: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity c.

a To wit, of Jerusalem; God's people. b Shall have no cause to complain of any sickness or calamity; shall be fully delivered from all their Enemies and evil Occurrents; shall enjoy perfect tranquillity and prosperity. c This may be added, Either 1. as the Reason of the foregoing priviledge; Their Sins, the main causes of all their Distresses, shall be pardoned; and therefore their Sufferings, the effects of sin, shall cease: Or, 2. as an additional Favour. They shall not only receive from me a glorious Temporal Deliverance; but, which is infinitely better, the pardon of all their sins, and all those spiritual and everlasting Blessings, which attend upon that Mercy.

CHAP. XXXIV.

† Heb. the fulness thereof.

1. COme near, ye nations, to hear, and hearken, ye people a: let the earth hear, and † all that is therein, the world, and all things that come forth of it b.

a Let the People of all Nations take notice of what I am about to say and do, as that wherein they are generally concerned, and by the consideration whereof, they may, if they will, be instructed, and so delivered from the Calamity here denounced. b Heb. All the Off-springs of it: Either 1. all the Trees and Fruits, and other productions of it: For it is usual with the Prophets, by a Figure, to turn his Speech to these senseless Creatures. Or, 2. all the Inhabitants of the World, as the Chaldee and other Ancients restrain and understand this general Expression; which also is Emphatical, and admonisheth the proud and insolent Sons of Men, of their mean and obscure Original, that how great and glorious soever they may seem to themselves or others; yet in truth, they are but a better sort of Mushromes springing out of the Earth, for Dust they are, and unto dust they must return, as was said, Gen. 3. 19.

2. For the indignation of the LORD is upon all nations c, and his fury upon all their armies: he he hath utterly destroyed them d, he hath delivered them to the slaughter.

c Not only upon the Assyrians, and those Nations which were confederate with them in this Expedition, but upon all other Enemies of my People whatsoever. d He will infallibly destroy all of them.

* Joel 2. 20. 3. Their slain also shall be cast out e, and * their stink shall come up out of their carcases, and the mountains f shall be melted with their blood g.

e Into the Fields, where they shall lie unburied, and be left for a prey to all ravenous Birds and Beasts: Whereby he implies, either the vast Numbers which shall be slain, so as they could not have time or place to bury them: Or the curse of God upon them, and the Peoples contempt and abhorrency of them. f About Jerusalem, where they are supposed to be gathered to fight against Jerusalem, as the Assyrians now were, and as other Enemies afterward would be, Zech. 12. 2. & 14. 2. g Shall be filled with their Blood, which shall run down abundantly from the Mountains with great force, and dissolve and carry down part of the earth of the Mountains with it, as great showers of Rain frequently do.

* Rev. 6. 14. 4. And all the host of heaven h shall be dissolved i, and the heavens shall be * rolled together as a scroll k, and all their host shall fall down as the leaf falleth off from the vine l, and as a * Rev. 6. 13. * falling fig m from the fig-tree.

h The Sun and Moon, and Stars, which frequently come under this name in Scripture, as Deut. 4. 19. & 17. 3. and elsewhere. i Shall seem to be dissolved. So great shall be the confusion and consternation of Man-kind, as if all the frame of the Creation were broken into pieces. Some understand this of the general Judgment: which some passages here following will not permit. But it is a very usual thing for Prophetical Writers, both in the Old and New Testament, to represent great and general Calamities, in such words and phrases, as properly agree to the Day of Judgment; as on the contrary. The glorious Deliverances of God's People are set forth in such Expressions, as properly agree to the Resurrection from the Dead. See Ezek. 37. 7. Joel 2. 31. & 3. 15. Revel. 6. 12, 13. k Heb. as a book; for Books were then written in Scroles, which they usually rolled up together; and when they were so, no Man could read any word in it; and no more shall any Man be able to see those goodly Lights of Heaven, for they shall all be obscured and confounded. This Phrase is used also, Isa. 8. 1. & Revel. 6. 14. l When it is withered. m Which falleth, either through great Maturity, or being thrust out by green Figs coming forth, or by any other accident.

* Jer. 46. 10. * Jer. 49. 7. 5. For * my sword shall be bathed n in heaven o, behold, * it shall come down upon Idumea p, and upon the people of my curse q to judgment.

n In the Blood of these People, Heb. It or shall be made drunk. o Either 1. in my Church, which is called Heaven, Dan. 8. 10. Revel. 4. 1. & 12. 1. in and against which, these Enemies are said to be gathered together. Or, 2. in the highest Heaven, where God dwells; in which this is said to be done, because it was there decreed and appointed to be done. p Upon the Edomites, who, though they were nearly related to the Israelites, and were circumcised as well as they; yet were their most inveterate and implacable Enemies, watching all opportunities, and being ready to joyn with all those that attempted to destroy them; whereof we have many intimations and instances in Scripture. But these are not named exclusively, but rather comprehensively, and Synecdochically, for all the Enemies of God's Church, of whom they were a considerable Part, and an eminent Type. q To whom my Curse belongs; or, whom I have Cursed, and devoted to utter Destruction, as this Hebrew Word properly signifies.

6. The sword of the LORD is filled with blood r, it is made fat with fatness, and with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of the kidneys of rams s: for * the LORD hath a sacrifice t in Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea u.

* Zeph. 1. 7.

r Shall drink its fill of Blood. The Metaphor is here taken from a great Glutton or Drunkard, who is almost insatiable with Meat and Drink. s By Lambs, and Goats, and Rams, He means People of all ranks and conditions, high and low, rich and poor. t So he calleth this bloody Work, because it was done by God's Command, and for his Honour, and therefore was a Service acceptable to him. u A chief City of Edom, Isa. 63. 1. Jer. 49. 13. and a Type of those Cities which should be most opposite and mischievous to God's People.

7. And the ‖ unicorns x shall come down y with them z, and the bullocks with the bulls, and their land shall be ‖ soaked with blood, and their dust made fat with fatness a.

‖ Or, rhinoceros. ‖ Or, drunken.

x Heb. the Remim. But what kind of Beast this is, whether that Beast which is commonly called an Unicorn, which seems to be but a Fiction in the Judgment of the Learned; or a Rhinoceros, or a wild Ox or Bull; it is needless to trouble the ordinary Reader about it; and the Learned may consult my Latine Synopsis upon Numb. 23. 22. about it. It is confessed, That it was a Beast of great strength and fierceness; and it is certain, that it is Metaphorically used in this place, to signify their Princes and Potentates. y Shall be humbled and cast down. The Seventy and Syriack render it, they shall fall down, as such Beasts do, when they have received a deadly blow. z With the Lambs, and Goats, and Rams, last mentioned, ver. 6. a With the fat of the slain Sacrifices, which shall be mingled with it.

* chap. 63. 4. 8. For it is the day of the LORD's * vengeance, and the year of recompences for the controversy of Zion b.

b This is the time which God hath long since appointed and fixed, to avenge the cause of his oppressed and persecuted People against all their Enemies.

* See Deut. 29. 23. 9. * And the streams c thereof shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land thereof shall become burning pitch d.

c Which seem most secure from this Danger, and much more the Land. d Idumea shall be dealt with, as Sodom and Gomorrha were, even utterly destroyed, as it were by Fire, or burning pitch and brimstone thrown down upon it from heaven.

* Rev. 14. 11. & 18. 18. & 19. 3. 10. It shall not be quenched night nor day, * the smoke thereof shall go up for ever: from generation to generation it shall lie waste, none shall pass through it for ever and ever e.

e It shall be irrecoverably ruined, and shall remain as a spectacle of God's vengeance to all succeeding Ages.

* Zeph. 2. 14. Rev. 18. 2. ‖ Or, pelican. * Zech. 3. 9. & 4. 10. 11. ¶ * But the ‖ cormorant and the bittern shall possess it, the owl also and the raven shall dwell in it f, and he shall stretch out upon it the line of confusion, and the * stones of emptiness g.

f The Inhabitants shall be wholly cut off, and it shall be intirely possessed by those Creatures which delight in Deserts, and waste Places. See the same or like Expressions in the like case, Isa. 13. 21. 22. & 14. 23. g He shall use the Line, or the Stone or Plummet joyned to it, not to build them, but to mark them out to Desolation and Destruction, as Work-men commonly use them, to mark what they are to pull down.

12. They shall call the nobles thereof to the kingdom, but none shall be there h, and all her princes shall be nothing i.

h They shall indeavour to heal their Breaches, but in vain: The remnant of the People shall seek for any fit Person, and offer the Kingdom to him; but they shall not find any such, who shall be willing to undertake the Government. i Either shall be lost and cut off: Or, shall have no Courage or Strength left in them.

* Hos. 9. 6. * chap. 13. 21, &c. ‖ Or, ostriches. † Heb. daughters of the owl. 13. And * thorns shall come up in her palaces, nettles and brambles in the fortresses thereof k, and * it shall be an habitation of dragons, and a court for ‖ † owls.

k This is another Mark and Evidence of extream Desolation, as it is also, Hos. 9. 6.

† Heb. Ziim. † Heb. Ijim. ‖ Or, night monster. 14. † The wild beasts of the desert shall also meet with † the wild beasts of the island, and the satyr shall cry to his fellow l, the ‖ scrich-owl also shall rest there m, and find for her self a place of rest.

l See on Isa. 13. 21, 22. m Because there shall be no Men left to disturb or affright them, Isa. 17. 2.

15. There shall the great owl n make her nest, and lay and hatch, and gather under her shadow shadow o, there shall the vultures also be gathered, every one with their mate.

n Whether this, or what other Creature is meant by this Hebrew Word, the learned Reader may find largely discoursed in my Latine Synopsis upon this place. For others it may suffice to know, what all agree in, that, whether it be a Bird or a Serpent, it is a Creature that lives in desert places. o As fearing no Disturbance from any Men.

16. ¶ Seek ye out of the book of the law of the LORD, and read p: no one of these shall fail, none shall want her mate q: for my mouth it hath commanded, and his spirit r it hath gathered them s.

p When this Judgment is executed, if you peruse this Book of Holy Writ, and particularly this Prophecy of mine, you will find that all things shall exactly come to pass, as I have told you. q As I have said, that the Vultures should each have their Mate; so shall it be: And this Prophecy shall be exactly fulfilled, even in its smallest Circumstances. r My Spirit; such sudden changes of Persons being frequent here. And God's Spirit may be put for his Might and Power, as it is in many places of Scripture. s Hath brought all these Creatures together, as he formerly brought the Creatures to Adam, and to Noah by an instinct, which he put into them.

17. And he hath cast the lot for them, and his hand hath divided it unto them by line t: they shall possess it for ever, from generation to generation shall they dwell therein.

t He hath divided the Land to them, as it were, by Lot and Line, as Canaan was divided among the Israelites.

CHAP. XXXV.

† Heb. dry place. * chap. 52. 9. & 55. 12.

1. THE wilderness and the † solitary place a shall * be glad for them b, and the desert shall rejoyce, and blossom as the rose.

a And as the Land of God's Enemies, which was exceeding fruitful, shall be turned into a desolate Wilderness, as was declared in the foregoing Chapter; so on the contrary, Emanuel's Land, or the Seat of God's Church and People, which formerly was deserted, and despised like a Wilderness, and which the rage and malice of their Enemies had brought to desolation, shall flourish exceedingly. b For the Wilderness and solitary Place: or, for these things, which were prophesied in the foregoing Destruction, concerning the Ruine of the implacable Enemies of God, and his Church. But that Hebrew Letter which is in the end of this Hebrew Verb, and is here rendred for them, is by all the ancient Translators, and by divers others neglected in their Translations, as if it were only added to the Verb Paragogically, as Grammarians speak; and therefore those two words may well be omitted.

2. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoyce even with joy and singing; the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon c; they d shall see the glory of the LORD e, and the excellency of our God.

c The Wilderness shall be as pleasant and fruitful as Lebanon, and Carmel, and Sharon; which were eminent parts of the Land of Canaan, as hath been oft noted. d Who are understood by the Wilderness. e The glorious discoveries and effects of God's power and goodness to his people.

* Heb. 12. 12.

3. ¶ * Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees f.

f The Prophets and Ministers of God comfort and encourage God's people, who are now ready to faint with hopes and assurance of that Salvation, which in due time, I will work for them. He mentions hands and knees, because the Strength and weakness of any Man, eminently appears in those parts.

4. Say to them that are of a † fearful heart, Be strong, fear not; behold, your God will come g with vengeance h, even God with a recompence, he will come and save you.

g Though he seem to be absent, and departed from you, he will come to you, and abide with you. He will shortly come in the flesh. For although this, and the following Promises may be metaphorically taken, concerning the temporal Deliverance of his People from Babylonian and other Oppressors: yet they are much more Emphatically, and Literally understood concerning the Redemption of God's People by Jesus, as is sufficiently manifest, both from the Words and Phrases themselves, and from divers places of the New Testament, where they are so expounded by Christ and the Apostles. h To execute Vengeance upon the Enemies of God, and of his People: Which also was verified in Christ, who was Set for the fall, as well as for the rising of many in Israel, Luke 2. 34. and who did accordingly inflict most dreadful Judgments, both temporal and spiritual, upon the unbelieving and apostate Jews, who were the great Persecutors of Christ, and of his People.

5. Then * the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and * the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped i.

* chap. 29. 18. & 42. 7. Mat. 9. 27, &c. & 11. 5. & 12. 22. & 20. 30. & 21. 14. Joh. 9. 6, 7. * Mat. 11. 5. Mar. 7. 32, &c.

i The most ignorant and stupid Creatures shall be forced to acknowledge the wonderful Works of God. Or rather thus, The poor Gentiles who before were blind and deaf, shall now have the Eyes and Ears of their Minds opened to see God's Works, and to hear and receive his Word. And in token hereof many Persons, who are corporally blind and deaf, shall have sight and hearing miraculously conferred upon them: All which being so fully and literally accomplished in Christ, and applyed by Christ to himself; it is a plain Proof, That this Prophecy belongs to the times of the Gospel.

6. Then shall the * lame man leap k as an hart, and the * tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall * waters break out, and streams in the desert l.

* Mat. 11. 5. & 15. 30. & 21. 14. Joh. 5. 8, 9. Act. 3. 2, &c. & 8. 7. & 14. 8, &c. * Mat. 9. 32, 33. & 12. 22. & 15. 30. * Joh. 7. 38, 39.

k For joy, or go nimbly and readily. And this Clause also and that which follows are to be understood, both Spiritually, and Literally, as in the former Verse. l The most dry and barren Places shall be made moist and fruitful: Which is principally meant of the plentiful Effusion of God's Grace upon such Persons and Nations, as had been wholly destitute of it.

7 And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of waters: in the habitation of Dragons where each lay, shall be ‖ grass with reeds and rushes m.

‖ Or, a court for reeds, &c.

m Those dry and parched Deserts, in which Dragons have their Abode, shall yield abundance of Grass, and Reeds, and Rushes, which grow only in moist Grounds, Job 8. 11.

8. And an high-way shall be there, and a way n, and it shall be called the way of holiness o, * the unclean shall not pass over it p, ‖ but it shall be for those q: the way-faring men, though fools, shall not err therein r.

* Joel 3. 17. Rev. 21. 27. ‖ Or, for he shall be with them.

n The high-way, and the way are not to be taken for two different Ways, but for one and the same Way, even a Causey or Cast-way, which is both raised Ground, as the first Hebrew Word signifies, and a VVay; both signifying a convenient, prepared, plain, and common Road, or Path for Travellers, such as the Doctrine of the Gospel is, which is frequently compared to a Way, both in the Old and New Testament, as hath been oft observed. o It shall be an holy VVay, trodden by holy Men, and filled with holy Practices, The People (walking in it) shall be all (i.e. a very great number of them, not so few as in the times of the Law) righteous, as is declared and prophesied afterward, Isa. 60. 21. p Either to disturb or defile it. Unclean persons shall, in a good measure, be kept or cast out of my Church, by the strict exercise of good Discipline here, and hereafter not one unclean person shall enter into my Kingdom. q But this way shall be appropriated unto those persons above-mentioned; the weak, and blind, and Lame, whom God will heal and save, ver. 3, 4, 5, 6. The pronoun Relative is put without an Antecedent, as it is in many other places. But this and the following clause is, and may well be rendred otherwise, and he (to wit, God, who is oft designed by this Pronoun, and is easily understood out of the Context) shall be to or with them walking in the way (their Companion and Guide in their VVay, which is a great felicity) that fools may not err therein. r The VVay shall be so plain and straight, that even the most foolish Travellers (who are described by this Character, that They know not the way to the City, Eccles. 10. 15.) cannot easily mistake it.

9. No lion shall be there, nor any † ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there s, but the redeemed shall walk there.

† Heb. robber of, or among beasts.

s It shall not only be a plain but a safe VVay, free from all annoyance or danger from mischievous Creatures. This is the same Promise for substance, with that Isa. 11. 9. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy Mountain.

10. And

*chap. 51.11. 10. And the * ransomed of the LORD t shall return and come to Zion u with songs, and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall *Rev. 21.4. obtain joy and gladness, and * sorrow and sighing shall flee away x.

t They whom God shall Rescue and Redeem from their corporal Slavery in Babylon, and especially from their spiritual Bondage under Sin and Satan. u Shall come again to Zion, from whence they had been carried away Captive. Or, shall return, to wit, to the Lord now mentioned, and come to Zion, (i. e.) joyn themselves to God's Church and People. x VVhich Expressions are too magnificent and emphatical, to be satisfied by the return of the Jews from Babylon to their own Land, which was accompanied and followed with many Sighs and Sorrows, as appears, both from sacred and other Historians; and therefore must necessarily be understood of Gospel-times, and of the Joy and Happiness purchased by Christ for his people, begun here and continued to all Eternity.

CHAP. XXXVI.

*2 Kin.18.13. 2 Chr. 32.1. 1. NOW * it came to pass in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah, that Sennacherib king of Assyria came up against all the defenced cities of Judah, and took them.

2. And the king of Assyria sent Rabshakeh, from Lachish to Jerusalem, unto king Hezekiah, with a great army; and he stood by the conduit of the upper pool in the high-way of the fullers field.

3. Then came forth unto him Eliakim Hilkiahs son, which was over the house, and Shebna the ‖ scribe, and Joah Asaphs son the recorder.

‖Or, secretary.

4. ¶ And Rabshakeh said unto them, say ye now to Hezekiah, Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, What confidence is this wherein thou trustest?

†Heb. a word of lips. ‖Or, but counsel and strength are for the war. 5. I say, sayest thou (but they are but † vain words) ‖ I have counsel and strength for war: now on whom dost thou trust, that thou rebellest against me?

*Ezek.29.6,7. 6. Lo, thou trustest in the * staff of this broken reed, on Egypt, whereon if a man lean, it will go into his hand and pierce it; so is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all that trust in him.

7 But if thou say to me, We trust in the LORD our God: is it not he, whose high places, and whose altars Hezekiah hath taken away, and said to Judah, and to Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar.

‖Or, hostages. 8. Now therefore give ‖ pledges, I pray thee, to my master the king of Assyria, and I will give thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them.

9. How then wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my masters servants, and put thy trust on Egypt for chariots and for horsemen?

10. And am I now come up without the LORD against this land to destroy it? the LORD said unto me, Go up against this land, and destroy it.

11. ¶ Then said Eliakim, and Shebna, and Joah unto Rabshakeh, Speak, I pray thee, unto thy servants in the Syrian language, for we understand it: and speak not to us in the Jews language, in the ears of the people that are on the wall.

12. ¶ But Rabshakeh said, Hath my master sent me to thy master and to thee, to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men that sit upon the wall, that they may eat their own dung, and drink their own piss with you?

13. Then Rabshakeh stood, and cried with a loud voice in the Jews language, and said, Hear ye the words of the great king, the king of Assyria.

14. Thus saith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you, for he shall not be able to deliver you

15. Neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us, this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

16. Hearken not to Hezekiah, for thus saith the king of Assyria, ‖ † Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me, and eat ye every one of his vine, and every one of his fig-tree, and drink ye every one of the waters of his own cistern.

‖Or, seek my favour by a present. †Heb. make with me a blessing.

17. Until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards.

18. Beware lest Hezekiah perswade you, saying, the LORD will deliver us. Hath any of the gods of the nations delivered his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria.

19. Where are the gods of Hamath, and Arphad? where are the gods of Sepharvaim; and have they delivered Samaria out of my hand?

20. Who are they amongst all the gods of these lands, that have delivered their land out of my hand, that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of my hand?

21. But they held their peace, and answered him not a word, for the kings commandment was, saying, Answer him not.

22. ¶ Then came Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, that was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder, to Hezekiah with their cloaths rent, and told him the words of Rabshakeh.

The History related here, and in the Three following Chapters, is, for the substance of it, and almost wholly, in the same words contained, 2 Kings chap. 18. & 19. & 20. It is fitly inserted here, to explain and confirm some of the foregoing Predictions. It may seem to have been first VVritten by this Prophet, and from him to have been taken into the Book of Kings, to compleat that History.

CHAP. XXXVII.

1. AND * it came to pas when king Hezekiah heard it, that he rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth; and went into the house of the LORD. *2 King. 19. 1, &c.

2. And he sent Eliakim who was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests covered with sackcloth, unto Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz.

3. And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and of ‖ blasphemy: for the children are come to the † birth, and there is not strength to bring forth.

‖Or, provocation. †Heb. breach, or, breaking place, that is, the mouth of the Womb.

4. It may be the LORD thy God will hear the words of Rabshakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent to reproach the living God, and will reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant that is † left. †Heb. found.

5. So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

6. ¶ And Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say unto your master, Thus saith the Lord, Be not afraid of the words that thou hast heard, wherewith the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

7. Behold, I will ‖ send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and return to his own land, and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

‖Or, put a spirit into him.

8. So Rabshakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah, for he had heard that he was departed from Lachish.

9. And

9. And he heard ſay concerning Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, He is come forth to make war with thee, and when he heard it, he ſent meſſengers to Hezekiah, ſaying,

10. Thus ſhall ye ſpeak to Hezekiah, king of Judah, ſaying, Let not thy God in whom thou truſteſt deceive thee, ſaying, Jeruſalem ſhall not be given into the hand of the king of Aſſyria.

11. Behold, thou haſt heard what the kings of Aſſyria have done to all lands by deſtroying them utterly, and ſhalt thou be delivered?

12. Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have deſtroyed, as Gozan, and Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of Eden which were in Telaſſar?

13. Where is the king of Hamath, and the king of Arphad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, Hena and Ivah?

14. ¶ And Hezekiah received the letter from the hand of the meſſengers, and read it: and Hezekiah went up into the houſe of the LORD, and ſpread it before the LORD.

15. And Hezekiah prayed unto the LORD, ſaying,

16. O LORD of hoſts, God of Iſrael, that dwelleſt between the cherubims; thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth, thou haſt made heaven and earth.

17. Incline thine ear, O LORD, and hear; open thine eyes, O LORD, and ſee: and hear all the words of Sennacherib, which hath ſent to reproach the living God.

18. Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Aſſyria have laid waſt all the † nations, and their countreys:

19. And have † caſt their gods into the fire: for they were no gods, but the work of mens hands, wood and ſtone, therefore they have deſtroyed them.

20. Now therefore, O LORD our God, ſave us from his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know, that thou art the LORD, even thou only.

21. ¶ Then Iſaiah the ſon of Amoz ſent unto Hezekiah ſaying, thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, Whereas thou haſt prayed to me againſt Sennacherib king of Aſſyria:

22. This is the word which the LORD hath ſpoken concerning him, The virgin, the daughter of Zion hath deſpiſed thee, and laughed thee to ſcorn, the daughter of Jeruſalem hath ſhaken her head at thee.

23. Whom haſt thou reproached and blaſphemed? and againſt whom haſt thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? even againſt the holy one of Iſrael.

† Heb. by the hand of thy ſervants. * Jer. 22. 6, 7. † Heb. the talneſs of the Cedars thereof. and the choice of the fir-trees. thereof. ‖ Or, the foreſt and his fruitful field. ‖ Or, fenced and cloſed. ‖ Or, haſt thou not heard how I have made it long ago, and formed it of ancient times? ſhould I now bring it to be laid waſt, and defenced cities to be ruinous heaps. † Heb. ſhort of hand. ‖ Or, ſitting.

24. † By thy ſervants haſt thou reproached the LORD, and haſt ſaid, By the multitude of my chariots am I come up to the height of the mountains, to the ſides * of Lebanon, and I will cut down † the tall cedars thereof, and the choice fir-trees thereof; and I will enter into the height of his border, and ‖ the foreſt of his Carmel.

25. I have digged and drunk water, and with the ſole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of the ‖ beſieged places.

26. ‖ Haſt thou not heard long ago, how I have done it, and of ancient times that I have formed it? now have I brought it to paſs, that thou ſhould'ſt be to lay waſt defenced cities into ruinous heaps.

27. Therefore their inhabitants were † of ſmall power, they were diſmayed and confounded; they were as the graſs of the field, and as the green herb, as the graſs on the houſe tops, and as corn blaſted before it be grown up.

28. But I know thy ‖ abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage againſt me.

29. Becauſe thy rage againſt me, and thy tumult is come up into mine ears: therefore will I put my hook in thy noſe, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou cameſt.

30. And this ſhall be a ſign unto thee, Ye ſhall eat this year ſuch as groweth of it ſelf: and the ſecond year that which ſpringeth of the ſame, and in the third year ſow ye: and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruit thereof.

31. And † the remnant that is eſcaped of the houſe of Judah, ſhall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward.

† Heb. the eſcaping of the houſe of Judah that remaineth.

32. For out of Jeruſalem ſhall go forth a remnant, and † they that eſcape out of mount Zion: the * zeal of the LORD of hoſts ſhall do this.

† Heb. the eſcaping. * 2 King. 19. 31. Chap. 9. 7.

33. Therefore thus ſaith the LORD concerning the king of Aſſyria, He ſhall not come into this city, nor ſhoot an arrow there, nor come before it with ſhields, nor caſt a bank againſt it.

34. By the way that he came, by the ſame ſhall he return, and ſhall not come into this city, ſaith the LORD.

35. For I will * defend this city to ſave it, for my own ſake, and for my ſervant David's ſake.

* 2 Kin. 20. 6.

36. Then the * angel of the LORD went forth, and ſmote in the camp of the Aſſyrians a hundred fourſcore and five thouſand: and when they aroſe early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpſes.

* Kin. 19. 35.

37. ¶ So Sennacherib king of Aſſyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh.

38. And it came to paſs as he was worſhiping in the houſe of Niſroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his ſons ſmote him with the ſword, and they eſcaped into the land of † Armenia: and Eſar-haddon, his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

† Heb. Ararat.

For the underſtanding of this, and the foregoing Chapter, the Reader is deſired to conſult my Notes upon 2 Kings 18. & 19. & part of 20.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

1. IN * thoſe days was Hezekiah ſick unto death, and Iſaiah the prophet the ſon of Amoz came unto him, and ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith the LORD, † Set thine houſe in order, for thou ſhalt die, and not live.

* 2 Kin. 20. 1. 2 Chr. 32. 24.

† Heb. give charge concerning thy houſe.

2. Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall, and prayed unto the LORD.

3. And ſaid, Remember now O LORD, I beſeech thee, how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy ſight: and Hezekiah wept † ſore.

† Heb. with great weeping.

4. ¶ Then came the word of the LORD to Iſaiah, ſaying,

5. Go and ſay to Hezekiah, Thus ſaith the LORD, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayers, I have ſeen thy tears: Behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years.

6. And I will deliver thee, and this city out of the hand of the king of Aſſyria, and I will defend this city.

7. And this ſhall be a ſign unto thee from the LORD, that the LORD will do this thing that he hath ſpoken.

8. Behold, I will bring again the ſhadow of the degrees which is gone down in the † ſun-dial † Heb. degrees by or with the ſun.

dial of Ahaz ten degrees backward: so the sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down.

9. ¶ The writing of Hezekiah a king of Judah, when he had been sick, and was recovered of his sickness.

a Who was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and inspired by him to write this, both as a Testimony of his own gratitude to God, and for the instruction of after Ages.

10. I said b in the cutting off of my dayes c, I shall go to the gates of the † grave d; I am deprived of the residue of my years e.

† Heb. Hell. Mat. 16. 18.

b To and within my self I concluded it. c When my days were cut off by the Sentence of God, related here, ver. 1. d I perceive, That I must die without any hopes of prevention. The Grave is called a Man's long home, Eccles. 12. 5. and The house appointed for all living Men, Job 30. 23. and Death opens the Gates of this House. We read also of the gates of Death, Psal. 9. 13. & 107. 18. e Which I might have lived according to the common course of Nature, and of God's dispensations; and which I expected, and hoped to live for the Service of God, and of my Generation.

11. I said, I shall not see the LORD f, even the LORD in the land of the living g; I shall behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world h.

f I shall not enjoy him: for seeing is put for enjoying, as hath been frequently noted. g In this World, which is so called, Psal. 27. 13. & 116. 9. Isa. 53. 8. in his Sanctuary. Which Limitation is prudently added to intimate, That he expected to see God in another place and manner, even in Heaven, Face to Face. h I shall have no more Society with Men upon Earth.

12. Mine age is departed i, and is removed from me as a shepherds tent k: I have cut off l like a weaver m my life: he n will cut me off ‖ with pining sickness o, from day even to night wilt thou make an end of me p.

i The time of my Life is expired. k Which is easily and speedily removed. l To wit, by my Sins, provoking God to do it. Or, I do declare, and have concluded, That my Life is or will be suddenly cut off: For Men are oft said in Scripture, to do those things which they only declare and pronounce to be done, as Men are said to pollute, and to remit and retain sins, and the like; when they only declare Men and Things to be polluted, and Sins to be remitted or retained by God. m Who cutteth off the Web from the Loom, either when it is finished, or before, according to his pleasure. n The Lord, who pronounced this Sentence against him. o With a consuming Disease, wasting my Spirits and Life. Some render this Word, from the thrum, from those Threds at the end of the Web, which are fastned to the Beam. So the similitude of a Weaver is continued. p The Sence is, Either 1. This Sickness will kill me in the space of one day. Or, rather 2. thou dost pursue me night and day with continual pains, and will not desist till thou hast made a full end of me; so that, I expect that every day will be my last day.

13. I reckoned till morning q, that as a lion; so will he break all my bones, from day even to night wilt thou make an end of me.

q When I was filled with pain, and could not rest all the Night long, even till Morning my Thoughts were working and presaging, That God would instantly break me to pieces, and that every moment would be my last; and the like restless and dismal Thoughts followed me from Morning till Evening. But he mentions only the time before Morning, to aggravate his Misery, that he was so grievously tormented, when others had sweet Rest and Repose.

14. Like a crane or a swallow r, so did I chatter s: I did mourn as a dove t; mine eyes fail with looking upward u: O LORD, I am oppressed x, ‖ undertake for me y.

‖ Or, ease me.

r Or, a Crane and a Swallow; the conjunction, and, being here, as it is Hab. 3. 11. and elsewhere, understood, as is manifest from Jer. 8. 7. where it is expressed with these very words. s My complaint and cry was like to the noise of a Swallow, quick and frequent; and like that of a Crane, loud and frightful. And this very comparison is used of Mourners, not only in Scripture, but in other Authors; concerning which the Learned Reader may consult my Latine Synopsis. t Whose mournful Tone is observed, Isa. 59. 11. Ezek. 9. 16. and elsewhere. u Whilst I lift up mine Eyes and Heart to God for relief, but in vain. x By my Disease, which like a Serjeant hath seized upon me, and is haling me to the Prison of the Grave. y Stop the Execution, and rescue me out of his hands.

15. What shall I say z? he hath both spoken unto me, and himself hath done it a: I shall go softly b all my years in the bitterness of my soul c.

z I want words sufficient to express my deep Sense of God's dealings with me. He did foretel it by his Word, and effect it by his Hand. This Clause and Verse is, Either 1. a Continuance of his Complaint hitherto described: God hath passed this Sentence upon me, and hath also put it in Execution, and to Him I must submit my self: Or 2. a Transition or entrance into the Thanksgiving, which is undoubtedly contained in the following Verses. So the Sence is, God hath sent a gracious Message to me by his Prophet, concerning the prolongation of my Life; and he, I doubt not, will make good his Word therein. And this Sence seems the more probable: 1. Because here is mention of his years to come, whereas in his sickness he expected not to live to the end of a day. 2. Because the Chaldee Paraphrast, and the Seventy and Syriack, and Arabick Interpreters expound it so in their Versions. 3. Because this suits best with the connext and coherence of this Verse, both with the former, and with the following Verse. For as he endeth the foregoing Verse with a Prayer to God for longer Life, so in this Verse he relates God's gracious Answer to his Prayer: And if this Verse be thus understood, the next Verse hath a very convenient Connexion with this; whereas it seems to be very abrupt and incoherent, if the Thanksgiving begin there. b I shall walk in the course of my Life; Either 1. humbly, with all humble thankfulness to God for conferring so great a Favour upon so unworthy a Person: Or, 2. easily and peaceably with leisure, not like one affrighted, or running away from his Enemy: Or, 3. by slow and gentle paces, as men commonly spin out their Days by degrees unto a just length, which is not unfitly opposed to his former state and time of Sickness, wherein his days were swifter than a weavers shuttle, and than a post, as Job complained upon the same occasion, Job 7. 6. & 9. 25. and were cut off like a Weavers Web, as he complained, v. 12. c Arising from the remembrance of that desperate condition, from which God had delivered me: For great dangers, though past, are oft-times very terrible to those that seriously reflect upon them. But the Words may be rendred, upon or after (as this particle is rendred, Isa. 18. 4.) the bitterness of my soul, after the deliverance from this bitter and dangerous Disease. Which may be compared with ver. 17. where he saith, For or after peace, I had great bitterness; as here he presageth and assureth himself of the contrary, That he should have Peace after his great bitterness. The Chaldee Paraphrast renders the words, Because of my deliverance from bitterness of Soul; bitterness being put for deliverance from bitterness, as five is put for lack of five, as we render it, Gen. 18. 28. and fat for want of fat, Psal. 109. 24. and fruits for want of fruits, Lam. 4. 9. And other such like Defects there are in the Hebrew, which is a very concise Language.

16. O LORD, by these things d men live, and in all these things is the life of my spirit e: so ‖ wilt thou recover me, and make me to live f.

‖ Or, hast recovered me and made me sorer, &c.

d By vertue of thy gracious Word or Promise, and powerful Work, by thy Promises, and thy Performances of them, mentioned in the foregoing Verse. This place may be explained by comparing it with Deut. 8. 3. Man doth not live by bread, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord. The Sence is, Not I only, but all Men do receive and recover, and hold their Lives by thy Favour, and the Word of thy Power: And therefore it is not strange, That one Word of God hath brought me back from the very jaws of Death. e And as it is with other Men, so hath it been with me in a special manner; for In these above all other things is the life of my Spirit or Soul, (i.e.) either the comfort (which is sometimes called Life) of my Spirit: or rather, That Life which is in my Body, from my Spirit or Soul united to it. f Or, and or for thou hast recovered me, &c. to wit, by these things.

17. Behold, ‖ for peace I had great bitterness g, but † thou hast in love to my soul h, delivered it from the pit of corruption, for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back i.

‖ Or, on my peace came great bitterness. † Heb. thou hast loved my soul from the pit.

g My Health and Prosperity was quickly changed into bitter Sickness and Affliction. Or, as others render it, My great bitterness was unto Peace, was turned into Prosperity, or became the occasion of my safety and further advantages: For that drove me to my prayers, and my prayers prevailed with God for a gracious Answer, and the prolonging of my Life. h In kindness to me, the soul being oft put for the Man. This is an emphatical Circumstance: for sometimes God prolongs mens dayes in anger, and in order to their greater misery. i Thou hast forgiven those sins which brought this evil upon me, and upon that account hast removed the punishment of them; which sheweth that thou didst this in love to me. The phrase is borrowed from the custom of men, who when they would accurately see and observe any thing, set it before their faces, and when they desire and resolve not to look upon any thing, turn their backs upon it, or cast it behind them.

† Heb. Hell. * Psal. 115.17.

18. For k the † * grave cannot praise thee e, death cannot celebrate thee: they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth m.

k In this and the following verse, he declares God's design in delivering him, that he might praise him in his Church; which if he had died he could not have done. l The dead are not capable of glorifying thy Name among men upon Earth: which I desire and determine to do. See the like expressions, Psal. 6. 5. & 30. 9. and 88. 10, &c. The Grave is put for the persons lodged in it by a Metonymy. m They cannot expect nor receive the accomplishment of thy promised goodness in the Land of the living.

19. The living, the living, he shall praise thee n, as I do this day, the father to the children shall make known thy truth o.

n They are especially obliged to it, and they only have this priviledge. o They shall not only praise thee whilst they live, but take care to propagate and perpetuate thy Praise and Glory to all succeeding generations.

20. The LORD was ready to save me p, therefore we will sing my songs to the stringed instruments r, all the days of our life, in the house of the LORD.

p Was a present help to me, ready to hear, and succour me upon my prayer in my great extremity. q Both I and my People, who are concerned in me, and for me will sing forth those songs of praise which are due especially from me, for God's great mercy to me. r According to the custom of those times.

* 2 Kings 20.7.

21. For * Isaiah had said, Let them take a lump of figs, and lay it for a plaister upon the boil, and he shall recover s.

s This was rather a sign appointed by God, than a natural means of the cure: For if it had a natural faculty to ripen a sore, yet it could never cure such a dangerous and pestilential disease, at least in so little time.

22. Hezekiah also had said t, what is the sign, that I shall go up u to the house of the LORD x?

t Or, For Hezekiah had said, had asked a sign, which is here added as the reason, why Isaiah said what is related in the foregoing verse; to wit, in answer to Hezekiah's question. u Within three days, as is more fully related, 2 Kings 20. 5, 8. x For thither he designed in the first place to go, partly that he might pay his vow and thanksgivings to God, and partly that he might ingage the people to praise God with him, and for him.

CHAP. XXXIX.

* 2 King. 20. 12, &c.

1. AT * that time Merodach-baladan the son of Baladan king of Babylon, sent letters and a present to Hezekiah: for he had heard that he had been sick and was recovered.

‖ Or, Spicery.

2. And Hezekiah was glad of them, and shewed them the house of his ‖ precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and the house of his ‖ † armour, and all that was found in his treasures: there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah shewed them not.

‖ Or, Jewels. † Heb. vessels, or, instruments.

3. ¶ Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, They are come from a far countrey unto me, even from Babylon.

4. Then said he, What have they seen in thine house? and Hezekiah answered, all that is in my house have they seen, there is nothing among my treasures that I have not shewed them.

5. Then said Isaiah to Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD of hosts.

6. Behold, the days come that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store until this day, shall be carried to Babylon, nothing shall be left, saith the LORD.

7. And of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

8. Then said Hezekiah to Isaiah, Good is the word of the LORD which thou hast spoken: he said moreover, For there shall be peace and truth in my dayes.

The History contained in this Chapter is related in the same words, 2 Kings 20. 12, &c. onely he who here is called Merodach is there called Berodach, merely by the change of one letter, which is very usual in the Hebrew Language, especially in proper names, as Dimon is put for Dibon, Isa. 15. 9. and the same man is called Nebuchadnetsar, and Nebuchadretsar. This King is called Merodach from the Idol so called, Jer. 50. 2. and Baladan from his Fathers Name. But whether this man was an Assyrian or a Mede or a Babylonian it is not easie to determine, nor worth while to enquire. But this is certain, that about this time there were Wars between the Assyrians, and the Babylonians, the issue whereof was, that the latter subdued the former.

CHAP. XL.

The Prophet having now foretold the Babylonish Captivity, chap. 39. 6, 7. doth here arm his people against it by the consideration of their certain deliverance out of it, and their blessed condition after it, as in other things, so especially in the coming of the Messiah, and the great and glorious priviledges conferred upon God's Church and People in his dayes.

1. COmfort ye, comfort ye my people a, saith your God.

a Ye Prophets and Ministers of the Lord, which now are, or hereafter shall be, deliver this comfortable message from me to my People, that they may not sink under their burdens.

† Heb. to the heart. ‖ Or, appointed time. * Jer. 16. 18. Lam. 1. 12. Dan. 9. 12.

2. Speak ye † comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her b, that her ‖ warfare c is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned d: for she hath received of the LORD's hand * double for all e her sins.

b Proclaim it in my name. c The time of her servitude, and captivity, and misery. d I am reconciled to her; I will not impute sin to her, to punish her any longer for it. e Not twice as much as her sins deserved, for she her self confessed the contrary, Ezra 9. 13. Lament. 3. 22. but abundantly enough to answer God's design in this chastisement, which was to humble and reform them, and to warn others by their example. Double is oft put for abundantly, as Isa. 61. 7. Jer. 16. 18. & 17. 18. God here speaks of himself after the manner of men, and compareth himself to a tender-hearted Father, who when he hath corrected his Child for his misdemeanour relenteth and repenteth of his severity, and casteth his Rod away.

* Mal. 3. 1. Mat. 3. 3. Mark 1. 3. Luke 3. 4. John 1. 23.

3. * ¶ The voice f of him that crieth in the wilderness g, Prepare ye the way h of the LORD i, make straight k in the desert a high way for our God.

f An abrupt and imperfect speech, such as there are many in the Hebrew Language. Methinks I hear a voice: Or, a voice shall be heard. g Which words declare the place either 1. Where the cry was made: Or, 2. Where the way was to be prepared, as it is expressed in the following clause, which is added to explain this. And such places being commonly path-less, and many wayes incommodious to passengers, it was the more necessary to prepare a way there. But both come to one thing, for the cry was to be in that place which was to be prepared. This place seems to be understood immediately of the deliverance of the Jews out of Babylon, and of smoothing their passage from thence to Judea, which lay through a great Wilderness; but ultimately and principally concerning their Redemption by the Messiah, whose coming is ushered in by the Cry of John the Baptist, who did both cry and prepare the way in the Wilderness, as we read, Mat. 3. 1, &c. Where this Text is directly expounded of him. But withal the terms of Wilderness and Desert, seem to be here chiefly used in a metaphorical sence, to express the desolate and forlorn condition of the Jewish Nation, and especially of the Gentile-world, when Christ came came to redeem them; for ſo theſe words are frequently uſed in prophetical Writings, as hath been noted in divers places. h You to whom this work belongs. He alludes to the cuſtom of Princes who ſend Pioneers before them to prepare the way through which they intend to paſs. The meaning is only this, that God ſhall by his Spirit ſo diſpoſe mens hearts, and by his providence ſo order the Empires and Affairs of the World, as to make way for the accompliſhment of this promiſe. i For the Lord as it is expounded in the next clauſe, that the Lord may walk in it: VVhich though it may be underſtood of their coming out of Babylon, when God might in ſome ſort be ſaid to march in the head of them, conducting and preſerving them, yet it was much more evidently and eminently fulfilled, when Chriſt who was and is God bleſſed for ever, came into the VVorld in a viſible manner. k Either direct in oppoſition to crooked, or even and level in oppoſition to the Mountains and Valleys mentioned in the next verſe.

4. Every Valley ſhall be exalted, and every Mountain and Hill ſhall be brought low: and the crooked ſhall be made ‖ ſtraight, and the rough places ‖ plain l.

‖ Or, a ſtraight place. ‖ Or, a plain place.

l This is only a more particular explication of that which was generally expreſſed, ver. 3. The ſence is, All obſtructions ſhall be removed, and the way made in all reſpects convenient and eaſie for the paſſenger.

5. And the glory of the LORD ſhall be revealed m, and all flesh n, ſhall ſee it together; for the mouth of the LORD hath ſpoken it o.

m So it was in ſome ſort, when God brought them out of Babylon, which was a glorious work of God, but far more properly and eminently, when Chriſt who was the glorious God, was manifeſted in the fleſh, and gave much clearer and fuller diſcoveries of God's glorious wiſdom, and holineſs, and goodneſs, and other divine perfections than ever yet had been imparted to mankind and to the Church. n All Nations, both Jews and Gentiles. o Though this may ſeem incredible, yet God is able to accompliſh it.

6. The voice ſaid p, Cry. And he ſaid q, What ſhall I cry? * All fleſh is graſs, and all the goodlineſs thereof is as the flower of the field r.

* Job 14. 2. Pſal. 102. 11. & 103. 15. Jam. 1. 10. 1 Pet. 1. 24.

p God ſpeaks unto his Prophets or Miniſters. q The Prophet deſires to know God's mind and his meſſage. r The Prophet having foretold glorious and wonderful things, which God had declared and determined to do, and ſuſpecting that men would hardly believe them; he confirmeth their faith, and the certainty of the thing in this, and the two next verſes, by repreſenting to their minds the vaſt difference between the nature, and word, and work of men and of God. All that men are or have, yea their higheſt accompliſhments, are but like the graſs or flower of the field, weak and vaniſhing, ſoon nipt and brought to nothing; but God's word is like himſelf, Immutable and Irreſiſtible; and therefore as the mouth of the Lord, and not of man, hath ſpoken theſe things, as was ſaid ver. 5. ſo doubt not but they ſhall be fulfilled.

7. The graſs withereth, the flower fadeth; becauſe * the ſpirit of the LORD s bloweth upon it: ſurely the people t is graſs.

* Pſal. 147. 18. Hoſ. 13. 15.

s Or, The breath, &c. as this word is rendred, Pſal. 147. 18. the wind as it frequently ſignifies, which hath this effect upon graſs and flowers, Pſal. 103. 16. Jam. 1. 11. t The ſame which he calleth Fleſh, and ſaid they were Graſs, ver. 6. VVhich that he might prove, in this verſe he firſt declares the frail nature of Graſs and Flowers, and then he applies this to the people: Or, this People, the Jews no leſs than the Gentiles; for here is an Article in the Hebrew Text, which is frequently emphatical and reſtrictive.

8. The graſs withereth, the flower fadeth, but the * word of our God ſhall ſtand for ever u.

* John 12. 34. 1 Pet. 1. 25.

u VVhatſoever God hath ſaid ſhall infallibly come to paſs.

9. ¶ ‖ O Zion that bringeſt good tidings x, get thee up into the high mountain y: O Jeruſalem, that bringeſt good tidings, lift up thy voice with ſtrength; lift it up, be not afraid z: ſay unto the cities of Judah a, Behold your God b.

¶ Or, O thou that telleſt good tidings to Zion. ‖ Or, O thou that telleſt good tidings to Jeruſalem.

x O Zion, to whom the glad tidings of the coming of Chriſt into the VVorld, and of the Salvation of Mankind by him were firſt publiſhed by Chriſt and his Apoſtles, and by whom they were publiſhed to all Nations. But the words are otherwiſe rendred in the margent, and by others, O thou (whoſoever thou art, Prophet or Apoſtle) that bringeſt good tidings to Zion. So Sion is not the deliverer but the receiver of theſe good tidings, as ſhe is in the Parallel place, Iſa. 52. 7. But our tranſlation ſeems to agree better with the Hebrew Text, in which the particle unto, is not here expreſſed, as it is in the latter part of the verſe, by comparing which part with the former, it ſeems moſt probable, that Zion or Jeruſalem is the Speaker or Publiſher, and the Cities of Judah the hearers. y That thy voice may be better heard, as appears from the next branch of the verſe. z See Judg. 9. 7. 1 Sam. 26. 13, 14. z Leſt thou ſhouldeſt be found a falſe Prophet; for it ſhall certainly be fulfilled. a To all my people in the ſeveral places of their abode, whether Cities or Countreys. Only he names Cities to intimate, that they alſo, though they ſhould be deſtroyed, yet ſhould afterwards be rebuilt and inhabited again. b Take notice of this wonderful VVork, and glorious appearance of your God, who will be viſibly preſent with you, ſo that men may point at him, and ſay, Behold here he is.

10. Behold the Lord GOD will come ‖ with ſtrong hand c, and his arms ſhall rule for him d; behold, * his reward is with him e, ‖ and his work before him f.

c With invincible ſtrength conquering all his Enemies. The word Hand or Arm, may very well be underſtood out of the following clauſe. d He ſhall need no ſuccours, for his own power ſhall be ſufficient to govern his People, and to deſtroy his Adverſaries. e He comes furniſhed with recompences as well of Mercy and Bleſſings for his Friends and followers, as of Juſtice and Vengeance for his Enemies. f He carrieth on his work or deſign effectually, ſo as none can hinder him: for that is ſaid in Scripture to be before a man which is in his Power, as Gen. 20. 15. and 24. 51. &c. Or Work is here put for the reward of the Work, as it is, Iſa. 49. 4. and 65. 7. and elſewhere. And ſo the ſame thing is repeated in other words, as is very uſual.

11. He ſhall * feed his flock like a ſhepherd, he ſhall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his boſome, and ſhall gently lead thoſe ‖ that are with young g.

* chap. 49. 10. Ezek. 34. 23. Joh. 10. 11. ‖ Or, that give ſuck.

g He ſhall perform all the Offices of a tender and faithful Shepherd towards his People, carrying himſelf with great Wiſdom and Condeſcenſion, and Compaſſion to every one of them according to their ſeveral Capacities and Infirmities.

12. ¶ Who hath meaſured the waters in the hollow of his hand h? and meted out heaven with the ſpan, and comprehended the duſt of the earth in † a meaſure, and weighed the mountains in ſcales, and the hills in a balance!

h (i. e.) Who can meaſure them? for indicative Verbs in the Hebrew Language are oft taken potentially; who can do this and the following things but God? And this Diſcourſe of God's infinite Power and Wiſdom, is here conveniently added to give them the greater aſſurance, that God was able, as he had declared himſelf willing, to do theſe great and wonderful things which he had promiſed; and that neither men nor falſe Gods were able to hinder him in it. God is here compared to a mighty Giant, ſuppoſed to be ſo big that he can take up, and hold all the waters of the Sea and Rivers of the whole World in one hand, and ſpan the Heavens, and then take up and weigh the whole Earth with the other hand.

13. * Who hath † directed the ſpirit of the LORD, or being † his counſellor hath taught him i?

* Job 21. 22. & 36. 22, 23. Rom. 11. 34. 1 Cor. 2. 16. † Heb. weighed. Prov. 16. 1. † Heb. man of his counſel.

i Who did God either need or take to adviſe him in any of his Work, either of Creation or the Government of the World? VVere they not all the effects of his own ſole infinite VViſdom? Therefore though all the Nations of the VVorld contrive and conſpire againſt him, and againſt this VVork of his, as indeed they will do, yet his own counſel ſhall confound all their devices, and carry on his VVork in ſpight of them.

14. With whom took he counſel, and who † inſtructed him, and taught him in the path of judgment k, and taught him knowledge, and ſhewed to him the way of † underſtanding?

† Heb. made him underſtand. † Heb. underſtandings.

k How to walk and manage all his Affairs with good Judgment and Diſcretion.

15. Behold, the nations l, are as a drop of a bucket m, and are counted n, as the ſmall duſt of the balance o; behold, he taketh up the iſles p as a very little thing.

l All the Nations of the VVorld; m Compared with all the VVater in the Bucket wherein are innumerable drops:

such are they if compared with God. n By him, and in comparison of him. o Which accidentally cleaves to the Ballance, but makes no alteration in the weight. p Those numerous and vast Countries to which they went from Judæa by Sea, which are commonly called Isles, as hath been oft observed.

16. And Lebanon is not sufficient to burn, nor the beasts thereof sufficient for a burnt-offering q.

q And although he is pleased to accept of poor and small Sacrifices from his People, yet if men were to offer a Sacrifice agreeable to his infinite excellency, the whole Forest of Lebanon could not afford either a sufficient number of Beasts to be sacrificed: Or, a sufficient quantity of wood to consume the Sacrifice.

* Dan. 4. 35. 17. All nations before him r are as * nothing, and they are counted to him s less than nothing t, and vanity.

r Either in his eyes: Or, being set against him, as this Hebrew word properly and most usually signifies. s Either in his Judgment: Or, in comparison of him. t Less than a thing of nought or of no account or worth: Or, as others render it, For nothing.

* chap. 46. 5. Act. 17. 29. 18. ¶ To whom then will ye * liken God s? or what likeness will ye compare unto him.

s This is a proper inference from the foregoing discourse of God's immense and infinite greatness; from whence he taketh occasion to shew both the folly of those that make mean and visible representations of God, as not the Gentiles only, but even some of the Jews did; and the utter inability of Men or Idols to give any opposition to God in the doing of these great Works. And this discourse of the madness of Idolaters prosecuted both here, and in the following Chapter was designed by God, as a necessary antidote whereby the Jews might be preserved from the contagion of Idolatry, to which God saw they now had strong inclinations, and would have many and great temptations when they were in Captivity.

* chap. 41. 7. & 44. 12. Jer. 10. 3. 19. The workman melteth a graven image t, and * the goldsmith spreadeth it over with gold u, and casteth silver chains x.

t He melteth some base Metal into a mould, which giveth it the form of an image, which afterwards is graven or carved to make it more exact and amiable. Thus the Image oweth all its excellency to the Earth for the matter of it, and to the art of man for the form or fashion of it. u Beaten out into Leaves or Plates. x Either for Ornaments: Or, rather, for use, to fasten it to a Wall or Pillar, lest it should fall down, and be broken in pieces. Which is spoken in way of scorn and derision of such ridiculous deities as needed such supports.

† Heb. is poor of oblation. * chap. 41. 7. 20. He that † is so impoverished that he hath no oblation y, chooseth a tree that will not rot; he seeketh unto him a cunning workman z to prepare a graven image that * shall not be removed a.

y That he can hardly procure Mony sufficient to buy the meanest Sacrifice for his God. z He is so mad upon his Idols, that he will one way or other find mony to procure the choicest materials, and the help of the best Artist to make his Idol. a Which after all this cost and art, cannot stir one step out of its place to give you any help.

21. Have ye not known b? have ye not heard? hath it not been told you from the beginning c? have ye not understood from the foundations of the earth?

b To wit, God to be the only true God, the Maker and Governour of the World, and all its Inhabitants: how can you be ignorant of so evident a truth? He addresseth his speech to the Idolatrous Gentiles. c To wit, of the World, as the next clause explains it. Were not these infinite perfections of God manifestly discovered to all mankind by the Creation of the World?

‖ Or, him that sitteth, &c. * Job 9. 8. Psal. 104. 2. chap. 44. 24. Jer. 10. 12. 22. ‖ It is he that sitteth d upon the circle of the earth e, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers f, that * stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in g:

d As a Judge or Governour upon his Throne: e Or, above the Circle, &c. far above this round Earth, even in the highest Heavens; from whence he looketh down upon the Earth, where men appear to him like Grashoppers. He alludes to one that looks down upon the Earth below him from some very high place. As here we have the Circle of the Earth, so elsewhere we read of the Circle of Heaven, Job. 22. 14. and of the Circle of the Deep, or Sea, Prov. 8. 27. because the form of the Heaven, and Earth, and Sea is circular or round, as is evident both from Sense, and from the Principles of Philosophy. f Small and contemptible in his sight. Compare Numb. 13. 33. g For the benefit of the Earth and of Mankind, that all parts might partake of its comfortable influences. See on Job 9. 8. Psal. 104. 2.

* Job 12. 21. Psal. 107. 40. 23. That bringeth the * princes to nothing h, he maketh the judges of the earth as vanity.

h That can at his pleasure destroy all the great Potentates of the World.

24. Yea, they i shall not be planted, yea, they shall not be sown k, yea, their stock shall not take root in the earth; and he shall also blow upon them l, and they shall wither, and the whirlwind shall take them away as stubble.

i The Princes and Judges last mentioned. k They shall take no root, as it follows, for Planting and Sowing are in order to taking root, and are necessary to it. They shall not continue and flourish, as they have vainly imagined, but shall be rooted up and perish, as is declared in the rest of the verse. l Blast them, as a vehement East-wind doth Plants.

25. To whom then will ye liken me m, or shall I be equal? saith the holy One.

* Psal. 147. 4. 26. Lift up your eyes on high n, and behold who hath created these things o, that bringeth out p their host by number q, he * calleth them all by names r, by the greatness of his might, for that he is strong in power s, not one faileth t.

n To the high and starry Heaven, as appears from the following words. o Which you see on high, the Host of Heaven as it follows. p That at first brought them out of nothing, and from day to day brings them forth, making them to rise and set in their appointed and fixed times. q As a General brings forth his Army into the Field, and there musters them. r As a Master calleth all the Members of his Family. s Which work is a certain and evident proof of God's infinite power. t Either to appear when he calleth them; or to do the work to which he sends them.

27. Why sayest thou u, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel, My way x is hid from the LORD, and my judgment y is passed over from my God z?

u In thy heart, why dost thou give way to such jealousies concerning thy God, of whose infinite Power and Wisdom and Goodness, there are such evident demonstrations given to all mankind, and to thee in a singular manner? x The course and condition of my Life. He takes no notice of my Prayers and Tears, and Sufferings for his Name, but suffers my Enemies to abuse me at their pleasure, and doth not attempt to rescue me out of their hands. This complaint is uttered in the name of the People, being prophetically supposed to be in Captivity. y Either 1. My Punishment: Or, rather 2. My Cause, as this word is most commonly used. God hath neglected to plead my Cause, and to give Judgment for me against mine Enemies, as he hath formerly done. z God hath dismissed it, and left it and me in the hands of mine Enemies, and now our case is so desperate, that God cannot help us: for which reason they compared themselves to dry Bones lying in the Grave, Ezek. 37.

* Psal. 147. 5. 28. ¶ Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the LORD, the creator of the ends of the earth a fainteth not, neither is weary b? * there is no searching of his understanding c.

a Of all the Earth and the Inhabitants thereof, from one end to another. He seems to mention the ends or utmost bounds, because they must seem to be more out of the reach and care of God's providence, as being most remote from Jerusalem, the only place of God's solemn and publick Worship in the World, and being then thought to be uninhabited. The argument is clear and strong: God who made all, even the most desolate and barbarous parts of the Earth, and consequently takes care of them, will not neglect his own Land and People. b He is not by age or hard labour become weak and unable to help his People, as men are apt to be. c His Counsels by which which he governeth all the World. And in a most particular manner thine affairs are far above the reach of thy understanding; and therefore thou dost ignorantly and foolishly in passing so rash a censure upon the ways and works of the infinitely Wise God.

29. He giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might he increaseth strength d.

d He hath strength enough not only for himself, but for all, even the weakest of his creatures, whom he can easily strengthen to bear all their burdens, and to vanquish all their oppressors.

30. Even the youths e shall faint, and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall.

e The youngest and strongest men, left to themselves or without God's help, or which do not wait upon God; which is easily understood from the opposition in the following verse.

31. But they that wait upon the LORD f, shall † renew their strength g, they shall mount up with wings as eagles h, they shall run and not be weary, and they shall walk and not faint i.

f That rely upon him for strength to bear their burdens, and for deliverance from them in due time. g Shall grow stronger and stronger in Faith and Patience, and Fortitude, whereby they shall be more than Conquerours over all their Enemies and Adversities. h Which flyes most strongly and swiftly and high out of the reach of all danger. i They shall be enabled to run or walk in their way as they please, without any wearines.

CHAP. XLI.

1. KEep silence before me a, O islands b, and let the † people renew their strength c: let them come near d, then let them speak e: let us come near together to judgment.

a Attend diligently to my Plea, and then answer it if you can. b O you Inhabitants of Islands, as the next clause explains this. By Islands he here means, as he doth Chap. 40.15. and elsewhere, Countries remote from Judah, inhabited by the Idolatrous Gentiles, with whom he here debateth his cause. c Strengthen themselves to maintain their cause against me, let them unite all their strength together. d Unto me, that we may stand together, and plead our cause before any indifferent Judge. e I will give them free liberty to say what they can on their own behalf.

2. Who f raised up g † the righteous man h * from the East i, called him to his foot k, * gave the nations before him, and made him rule over kings l? he gave them as the dust m to his sword, and as driven stubble to his bow.

† Heb. righteousness.
* Chap. 46. 11, 12.
* See Gen. 14. 14, &c.

f What man or God? Was it not my alone work? The Idols were so far from assisting me, that they did their uttermost to oppose me in it. g Into being and Power, stirring up his Spirit, and strengthning him to the work. h Heb. Righteousness, which is put for a man of Righteousness, as Pride is put for a proud man, Psal. 36. 11. and Deceit for a deceitful man, Psal. 109. 2. For it is evident from the following words that he spake here of a Person: But who this Person is, is much disputed by Interpreters. Some understand it of Christ. And doubtless the Person here spoken of was an eminent Type of Christ, and so in a mystical sence it may belong to him. But the things here said to be done by this Righteous Man, seems to agree much better unto a man of War, than unto the Prince of Peace. And therefore this place is immediately understood either, 1. Of Abraham, who was a Person eminently righteous, and came out of Chaldea, which sometimes seems to be called the East, as Isa. 2. 6. Zech. 8. 7. who did the things here mentioned; partly in his own person, conquering five Kings and the Nations with them, Gen. 14. and following God he knew not whither; and partly by his posterity, whose exploits may well be ascribed to him, not only because he came out of his Loyns, but also and especially, because all their Successes and Victories were given to them for Abraham's sake, and by the vertue of God's promise and Covenant made with Abraham, for the giving of Canaan to him and to his Seed for ever. And this Interpretation may seem to receive some countenance from ver. 5, 6. which agrees well to the practice of the Canaanites and Neighbouring Nations; who upon Israel's March towards them were filled with great consternation, and used all possible diligence in seeking both to their Idols, and to men for help against them, as we read in that sacred History. And thus God's argument against Idolatry, is taken from an illustrious Example of God's infinite Power, put forth in saving his people, and destroying their enemies before them, and of the impotency of Idols to hinder him in that work: Or, 2. Of Cyrus, who might be called a Righteous man: Or, as it is in the Hebrew, a man of Righteousness, because he was Raised up in Righteousness, as it is said of him, Isa. 45. 13. and was God's great Instrument to manifest his Righteousness; both his faithfulness, in fulfilling his promise of delivering his people out of Babylon after seventy years (Righteousness being often put for Faithfulness) and his Justice, in punishing the Enemies and Oppressours of his People, the wicked Babylonians; upon which account, the Medes, who served under Cyrus in his expedition against the Babylonians, are called God's Sanctified Ones, Isa. 13. 3, 17. And all the other expressions, here used, are very applicable to him, and were verified in him. He came from the East, from Persia, which was directly Eastward, both from Judea and from Babylon, and which is called the East in this very case, Isa. 46. 11. He was raised up by God in an eminent and extraordinary manner, as is noted both by sacred and profane Historians; and therefore this very word is used, concerning him and his Army, not only here, but elsewhere; as Isa. 13. 17. Jer. 50. 9. and 51. 1, 11. To him also all the following passages agree, as we shall see. And although this great person and action were yet to come; yet the Prophet speaks of them as if they were already past, as the Prophets most frequently do. And as in the clause of the former Chapter he speaks of God's People, as if they were actually in the captivity of Babylon, ver. 27. so here he speaks of them as if they were actually brought out of Babylon by Cyrus. And by this instance he pleads his cause against the Gentiles and their Idols, because this was an evident proof of God's Almighty Power, and of the vanity and weakness of Idols, which eminently appeared in the destruction of the Babylonians, who were a People mad upon their Idols, as is said, Jer. 50. 38. and yet were destroyed together with their Idols, Jer. 51. 47. i From a Country Eastward from Judea, as Chaldea was in part, but Persia more directly. k To march after him, and under God's Banner against Babylon. Thus Barak's Army is said to be at his feet, Judg. 4. 10. Compare also, Gen 30. 30. l Subdued Nations and their Kings before him. m To be beaten by him as small as dust, as is said Psal. 18. 42. Or, to be put to flight as easily as the dust is scattered by the Wind, as the following Clause expounds this.

3. He pursued them and passed † safely n; even by the way that he had not gone with his feet o.

† Heb. in peace.

n Went on in the pursuit with great ease and safety, and success. o Which is added as a further evidence of God's wonderful Providence, in incouraging and enabling him to march by unknown paths; which hath oft proved dangerous and destructive to great Armies. This also was verified both in Abraham and in Cyrus, as is well known.

4. Who hath wrought and done it p, * calling q the generations from the beginning r? I the Lord, the * first, and with the last s, I am he.

p Whose work was this but mine? q Either, 1. Calling them out of nothing, giving to them breath and being: Or, 2. Calling them to his foot, as he said above, ver. 2. disposing and employing them as he sees fit, sending them upon his errands. r All Persons and Generations of mankind from the beginning of the World to the end of it. s Who was before all things, even from Eternity, and shall be unto Eternity; whereas the Idols, to whom God herein opposeth himself, were but of yesterday, being made by mens hands, and shall, within a little time vanish and be destroyed.

5. The isles t saw it u, and feared x, the ends of the earth were afraid, drew near, and came y.

t Even remote Countries, as ver. 1. u Discerned the mighty Work of God in delivering his People, and overthrowing their Enemies, in so wonderful a manner. x Lest they should be involved in the same Calamity, as being conscious to themselves, that they also were Enemies to God's People. y They gathered themselves together to consult for their common safety, and to maintain the cause of their Idols, whom by this instance they perceived in great jeopardy.

a Who brought wood to compose the body of the Idol. b VVho was to prepare golden plates for covering, and adorning of the Image, which some of them beat out upon the Anvil, and others smoothed or polished, as it follows. c That we may put the several parts together, and set it up to be worshipped. d To the VVall or Pillar, lest it should fall down, or go, or be carried away from them. See Isa. 40. 19, 20.

8. But thou, Israel, art my Servant e, Jacob whom I have * chosen f, the seed of Abraham my * friend g.

* Deut. 7. 6. & 10. 15. & 14. 2. Psal. 135. 4. Chap. 43. 1. & 44. 1. * 2 Chr. 20. 7. Jam. 2. 23.

e Thus the Gentiles shew themselves to be the servants of their Idols, and own them for their God, but thou art my People, and I am, and will be thy God. f Out of the heap of the Idolatrous Nations to be my peculiar People. g VVith whom I made a strict league of perpetual friendship; of which see Gen. 12. 2, 3. and 15. 1, 8.

9. Thou whom I have taken from the ends of the earth h, and called thee from the chief men thereof i, and said unto thee, Thou art my servant, I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away k.

h Thou, Israel, whom I took to my self, and brought hither in the Loins of thy Father Abraham from a remote Country; to wit, Chaldea: Or, whom I brought back out of Babylon into thine own Land. Which, though yet to come, he may speak of as of a thing past, as the Prophets use to do, as was noted before. But the former interpretation seems to agree better with the foregoing verse. i From the midst of many great and noble Persons among whom he lived in Chaldea. So this notes God's singular mercy to Abraham, and consequently to the Israelites descended from him, that he passed by many of Abraham's Betters, and called him into Fellowship with himself. k I have chosen thee not for a small moment, but for ever, by making an everlasting Covenant with thee and thy Seed through all Generations. Or the sence is this: As I have chosen thee at first, so I have not since that time cast thee off, as thou hast frequently given me sufficient occasion to do. Or, and did not refuse thee, as this word is elsewhere used. So the same thing is repeated in other words, not without some Emphasis; for he intimates that he chose them when he had just cause of refusing them.

10. ¶ Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God. I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness l.

l VVhich I do, and will manage with Righteousness, whereby I will deliver thee, and destroy thine and mine Enemies, as it follows.

11. Behold, all they that were incensed against thee, shall be * ashamed and confounded m: they shall be as nothing n, and † they that strive with thee shall perish.

* Exod. 23. 22. Chap. 45. 24. & 60. 12. Zech. 12. 3. † Heb. the men of thy strife.

m Both because their hopes and designs shall be utterly disappointed, and because the mischief which they contrived against thee shall fall upon themselves. n Shall come to nothing, or perish, as the next clause explains it:

12. Thou shalt seek them, and shalt not find them o, even † them that contended with thee: † they that war against thee shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought p.

o They shall be so totally consumed, that although thou searchest for them, thou shalt not be able to find them any where in the VVorld. p Shall be utterly brought to nought. The thing is twice repeated, to shew the certainty and greatness of their destruction.

13. For I the LORD thy God will hold thy right hand q, saying unto thee, Fear not, I will help thee.

q Or, will strengthen, &c. as this word properly signifieth, will assist and enable thee to vanquish all thine Enemies.

14. Fear not, thou worm r Jacob, and ye ‖ men of Israel: I will help thee, saith the LORD, and thy redeemer, the holy One of Israel.

‖ Or, few men.

r VVho art weak in thy self, and despised and trodden under foot by thy proud and potent Enemies.

15. Behold, I will make thee a new s sharp threshing instrument having † teeth t: thou shalt thresh the mountains u, and beat them small, and shalt make the hills as chaff.

s And therefore sharper and stronger than another which hath been much used. t Such as were usual in those times and places: of which, see on Isa. 28. 25, 28. u The great and lofty Potentates of the VVorld which set themselves against thee, such persons being frequently expressed in Scripture under the notion of Hills and Mountains.

16. Thou shalt fan them x, and the wind shall carry them away, and the whirlwind shall scatter them: and thou shalt rejoice in the LORD, and shalt glory in the holy One of Israel y.

x VVhen thou hast beaten them as small as dust or chaff. y For to him, and not to thy self, thou shalt ascribe thy victory over thine Enemies.

17. When the poor and needy seek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, I the LORD will hear them, I the God of Israel will not forsake them z.

z VVhen my poor people are come to the greatest extremity of danger and misery; then will I appear for their Relief.

I will open * rivers in high places a, and fountains in the midst of the Valleys b: I will make the * wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water c.

* Chap. 30. 25. & 35. 7. & 44. 3. * Psal. 107. 35.

a Upon the Mountains where by the course of nature there are no Rivers. b Or, in the Valleys, to wit, in such of them as are not well watered. c These people who were like a dry and barren VVilderness, I will abundantly water with my blessing, and make them fruitful and beautiful, as the next verse sheweth: which may be understood, either of the Jews who were in a VVilderness condition, till God brought them out of it; Or, of the Gentiles converted to the true Religion under the Gospel.

19. * I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah-tree, and the myrtle, and the oyl-tree: I will set in the desert the firr-tree, and the pine, and the box-tree together d:

* Chap. 55. 13.

d Trees which are both useful and pleasant to the Eye, and giving a good shadow to the Traveller, which in those hot and parched Countries was very comfortable. Thus much is evident and confessed: But what particular Trees these Hebrew words signifie seems to me improper to discourse here, because only the Learned are capable of judging in this case, and they may consult my Latin Synopsis upon this, and other places of Scripture where they are mentioned.

20. That they may see e, and know, and consider, and understand together, that the hand of the LORD hath done this, and the holy One of Israel hath created it.

e Or, That men may see: for it is an indefinite expression. The sence is, That all that see this wonderful change may consider it, and may know that is the work of God alone.

21. † Produce your cause f, saith the LORD; bring forth your strong reasons g, saith the King of Jacob.

† Heb. cause to come near.

f The Prophet having pleaded God's cause against the Idolatrous Gentiles, whom he challenged to a dispute, ver. 1. he now reneweth the Challenge, and gives them liberty and invitation to speak whatsoever they can on the behalf of their Idols. g To prove the Divinity of your Idols.

22. * Let them h bring them forth, and shew us what shall happen i: let them shew the former things k what they be, that we may † consider them l, and know m the latter end of them n; or declare us things for to come o.

* Chap. 45. 21. & 46. 10. † Heb. set our heart upon them.

h Either the Idols: Or, which is all one, the Idolaters in the name, and by the help of their Idols. i All future events; which he divides into two sorts in the following clause, the former and the later, as we shall see. k Which is not to be understood of such things as are past, for such things might easily be known by men from History, much more by the Devils who possessed and acted in their Idols, but of such things as should shortly come to pass, which may be better discerned, than those things which are yet at a great distance. So he propounds the easiest part first. Let us try whether they can foretel those things which are even at the door, and if so, we will try them further. Let them tell us what things shall happen, and in what order, which first, and which last. t Heb. and we will set our heart to it; we will allow the argument its due weight, and either fairly answer it, or give up our cause against Idols. u That we may know, or let us know by their information. x The consequence of them, whether the events did answer to their predictions: Or, what things happened next after those former things. o To wit, hereafter, or after a long time; which limitation may be easily gathered, both from the opposition of this clause to the former, and from the next following clause, where it is so limited and explained.

23. Shew the things that are to come hereafter: that we may know that ye are gods: p yea, * Jer. 10. 5. * do good, or do evil q, that we may be dismayed, and behold it together r.

p That we may have, if not a certain proof, yet at least a probable argument of your Deity. It may be objected that the Devil hath foretold future events by Idols: but it may be answered that such predictions were but rare, and oftentimes were false, and confuted by the event; and generally were dark and doubtful, as hath been noted; and when they were verified by the event, that was only done by Divine Permission and Revelation, for the tryal or punishment of wicked men, of which we have an instance, Deut. 13. 1, 2, 3. and therefore doth no more prove them to be Gods, than the Predictions made known by God unto the Prophets, proved them to be Gods. q Protect and bless your Worshippers whom I intend to destroy, and destroy my People whom I design to save, and then you have some colour to assert your Deity. But alas! You can neither do good nor evil. r That I and my People may be astonished, and confounded, and forced to acknowledge your Godhead.

* Chap. 44. 9. 1 Cor. 8. 4. ‖ Or, worse than nothing. ‖ Or, worse than of a viper.

24. Behold, * ye are ‖ of nothing s, and your work t ‖ of nought: an abomination is he that chooseth you u.

s You lately were nothing, without any Being at all, and now you have nothing at all of Divinity or Vertue in you. t Either, 1. Passively, your workmanship, all the cost and art which is laid out upon you. Or, 2. Actively, all that you can do. Your Operations are like your Beings, there is no reality in your Beings, nor efficacy in your Actions. u He that chuseth you for his Gods, is most abominable for his folly, as well as his wickedness.

25. I have raised up x one y from the north, and he shall come: from the rising of the Sun ‖ Or, proclaim. shall he ‖ call upon my name z, and he shall come upon princes as upon mortar a, and as the potter treadeth clay.

x You neither foreknow nor can do any thing. But I do now foretel, and will certainly effect a great revolution and change in the World, which you shall not be able to hinder. y Which word, though not expressed in the Hebrew must necessarily be understood, as being oft designed in the following words by the Pronoun He. He understands one People: Or, rather one Person, Prince or General together with his People or Forces, as appears from the latter part of the verse. Some conceive that the Prophet in this place speaks of two several Persons; in the first clause of Nebuchadnezzar, who in Scripture is commonly said to come from the North, as Jer. 1. 13, 15. & 4. 6. and in the next clause of Cyrus, who came from the East, Isa. 46. 11. and then the words may be thus rendred, one from the North, and he shall come: and one from the rising of the Sun, He shall call, &c. But it seems more natural and easie to understand the whole context of one and the same Person, even of Cyrus, of whom he spake before, ver. 2. &c. who might well be said to come, both from the North, and from the East; from the North rather, because he was a Mede by his Mother, as he was a Persian by his Father; or because a great part of his Army was gathered out of Media, which was, and in Scripture is said to be Northward, in reference to Judea, Jer. 50. 9, 41. and 51. 48. and because Darius the Mede was joyned with him in this expedition: and from the East, because Persia was directly eastward from Judea. And peradventure this work of calling upon or proclaiming God's Name, is here ascribed to him as he came from the East, rather than as he came from the North, because that work was not done by Darius the Mede, but by Cyrus the Persian. z Or rather, as others render it, who shall call upon: Or rather, proclaim my name, which Cyrus did in express and emphatical terms, Ezra 1. 1, 2. a Treading them down, as easily as a man treadeth down mortar.

26. Who hath declared from the beginning b, that we may know? and before time c, that we may say d, He is righteous e? yea, there is none f that sheweth, yea, there is none that declareth, yea, there is none that heareth your words g.

b Which of all your Idols did or could foretel such things as this from the beginning of the World unto this day? They never yet did nor can foreknow and foretel any such things, further than I think fit to reveal it to them. c Either, in time past: Or, before the things came to pass. d That we may be convinced and forced to acknowledge. e His Cause now pleaded is just and good: He is a God indeed as he pretends to be, he claims his Divinity by a good title. f Heb. Surely there is none of your Gods that hath done or can do this, and therefore their claim to the Deity is false and foolish. g None of your Worshippers ever heard any such thing, either from you or of you: nor indeed doth any man hear your words, because you are dumb and cannot speak.

27. * The first h shall say to Zion i, Behold, * verse 4. behold them k, and I will give to Jerusalem one that bringeth good tydings l.

h I who am the first, as I said before, ver. 4. and therefore capable of declaring or foretelling things to come from the beginning, which your Idols cannot do, ver. 26. i Do and will foretel unto my People by my Prophets things to come. k I represent things future as if they were present, and to be beheld with your eyes. By them he means, either, 1. These things which are to come: Or, 2. These men, either Cyrus and his Forces who came to deliver the Jews out of Babylon: Or, which is the same thing in effect, the Jews returning from their captivity in Babylon. l A Messenger, or Messengers, the singular number being here put for the plural, as it is in many other places, to wit, my Prophets, who shall foretel the good tidings of their deliverance from Captivity.

28. For I beheld m, and there was no man n, even amongst them, and there was no counseller o, that when I asked of them, could † answer a † Heb. return. word p.

m Heb. And I beheld, I looked about me to see if I could find any of them that could certainly, and of themselves foretel such future events. n Nor any, to wit, of the Idols; for the word Man is sometimes used by the Hebrews of brute creatures, and even of lifeless things, as Isa. 34. 15. and 40. 26. and elsewhere. o Though these Idols were oft consulted, and by the help of the Devil did sometimes deliver Oracles, yet none of them were able to give any solid and certain advice concerning future things. p when I tryed their Divinity by this character, they had nothing to say for themselves.

29. Behold, they are all vanity q, their works are nothing r: their molten Images s are wind t, and confusion u.

q This is the conclusion of the whole Dispute, and the just sentence which God passeth upon Idols after a fair tryal; they are vain things, and are falsly called Gods. r See ver. 24. s Which he mentions, because their materials were most precious, and more cost and art were commonly bestowed upon them; for after they had been molten, they used to be carved or polished and adorned: but under these he synecdochically comprehends all Images whatsoever. t Empty and unsatisfying things, which also like the wind, do quickly pass away and come to nothing. u Confused and deformed, and useless things, like that rude heap in the beginning of God's Creation, of which this very word is used, Gen. 1. 2.

CHAP. XLII.

1 BEhold a, * my servant b whom I uphold c, mine elect d in whom my soul * delighteth e: I * have put my spirit upon him f, he shall bring forth g judgment h to the Gentiles i. * Mat. 12. 18. * Mat. 3. 17. & 17. 5. Eph. 1. 6. * Chap. 11. 2. John 3. 34.

a The Prophet, having in the former Chapter detected the vanity of Idols by their gross ignorance of future things, and having given one eminent instance of God's certain Foreknowledge of things to come, in the Prediction of the destruction of Babylon, and the deliverance of the Jews out of it by Cyrus; he now addeth another more eminent and remote example of it, and foretelleth the Coming of the Messiah, and several great effects or consequences thereof. Which he the rather doth, because this was the Person by whom the Idols were to be utterly abolished, as was foretold, Isa. 2. ver. 18. compared with ver. 2, 3, 4. and as it fell out in the event: This having been observed not only by Christians, but even by the learned Heathens, not without astonishment, That at that time, time, when Christ came into the World, Idols were generally struck dumb, and the Oracles ceased. b The person, of whom he here speaketh, is by some supposed to be Cyrus, and by others Isaiah himself, and by others the People of the Jews. But the most and best Interpreters understand this place of Christ. And although I am sensible, that some learned men have done wrong to the sacred Text, and to the Christian cause, by expounding some places of Christ without sufficient evidence, yet this is one of the many places in this Prophecy, which cannot without manifest violence be applied to any other; which is so evident, that not only the Generality of Christians, but divers of the most learned Jews understand it of the Messiah, and of him alone; and pass a severe censure upon their Brethren, that expound it of any other person, and affirm that they are smitten with blindness in this matter. Moreover this place is expressly interpreted of Christ, Matth. 12. 18. &c. And to him, and to him onely all the particulars here following do truly and evidently belong, as we shall see. c VVhom I will assist and enable to do and suffer all those things which belong to his Office to do. d Chosen by me to this great work of Mediation and Redemption, to which he is said to be sealed and sent, John 6. 27, 29. and predestinated, 1 Pet. 1. 20. and chosen of God, 1 Pet. 2. 4. e Or, as this same word is oft rendred, is well pleased, both for himself and for all his People, being fully satisfied with that Sacrifice, which he shall offer up to me. f I have furnished him with that abundance and eminency of Gifts and Graces, which are necessary for the discharge of his high and hard imployment. g Shall publish or shew, as this word is translated, Matth. 12. 18. shall bring to light what before was hid in his breast, or in his Fathers bosome. h This word is very ambiguous, and elsewhere is put for punishment, which cannot be meant here, because the whole Context speaks of his Mercy and Sweetness, and not of his severity: but here it is clearly put for God's Law, as this very VVord is expounded here below, ver. 4. and as it is frequently used in the Holy Scriptures, as Psal. 119. and elsewhere: which also best agrees with the bringing forth or publishing of it here mentioned, publication being necessarily required and constantly used about Laws. And this Interpretation is confirmed by the following words, to the Gentiles. For the great things which Christ published unto all the VVorld, both Jews and Gentiles, was nothing else but the Law, and VVill, and Counsel of God concerning man's Salvation, and the way and means of obtaining it. i Not onely to the Jews, to whom the Knowledge of God's Laws had been hitherto appropriated, but to the Heathen Nations of the VVorld.

2. He shall not cry k, nor lift up l: nor cause his voice to be heard in the street m.

k Either, 1. In a way of contention, as Anger is oft accompanied with clamour, Eph. 4. 31. Or, In a way of ostentation. It seems to be meant both ways, by comparing this place with Matth. 12. 16, 17, 20. He shall neither erect nor manage his Kingdom with violence, or outward pomp and State, as worldly Princes do, but with Meekness and Humility. l His voice, which is easily understood out of the following clause, and from many other Scriptures, where that word is added to this Verb, to compleat the Phrase. m As contentious and vain glorious persons frequently do.

3. A bruised reed shall he not break n: and the ‖ smoaking flax shall he not † quench o: * he shall bring forth judgment unto truth p.

* Psal. 94. 15.

n He shall not break it to pieces, but rather will strengthen and bind it up. It is a common Figure, whereby more is understood than was expressed, and one contrary is left to be gathered from another, of which many instances have been given in former Texts. The sence is plainly this, Christ will not deal roughly and rigorously with those that come to him, but he will use all Gentleness and Kindness to them, passing by their greatest sins, bearing with their present infirmities, cherishing and incouraging the smallest beginnings of Grace, comforting and healing wounded Consciences, and the like. o The same thing is repeated in other words, to give us the greater assurance of the truth of it. That VViek of a Candle (called Flax metonymically, because it is made of Flax) which is almost extinct, and doth onely smoak and not flame, he will not utterly quench, but will revive and kindle it again. p Judgment may be here taken, either, 1. For the Law or VVill of God, or the Doctrine of the Gospel, which he will bring forth, (i. e.) publish, which he will do unto, or in, or with, or according to (for this Preposition is used all those ways) truth, (i. e.) truly and faithfully, not concealing nor corrupting it, as false Teachers commonly do. So this is a Character, like that which is given to Christ, Mat. 22. 16 Thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth: And thus this Phrase of bringing forth Judgment, is taken here, as it is ver. 1. Or, 2. for the cause which is debated, or for the sentence which is given in the cause, as this word is most frequently used, which he will bring forth, (i. e.) bring to light, or discover or publish; and this he will do according to truth and equity, and not unjustly and partially, as corrupt Judges use to give sentence against the poor and meek. In this sence this very Phrase of bringing forth Judgment, is taken Psal. 37. 6. And this sence seems to be favoured, both by the consideration of the quality of the Persons, to whom this judgment is here implied to be brought forth, who are called bruised Reeds, and smoaking Flax, whereby they are supposed to be Persons discouraged, and oppressed, and in a contest with themselves, or with their spiritual Adversaries about the state of their Souls; as also by comparing this place with Matth. 12 20. where these very words are quoted, and thus rendred, Till he send forth Judgment unto Victory, (i. e.) till Judgment or Sentence be given for him, in which case a man is said to be victorious in Judgment. If it be said for the former Interpretation, that it seems most reasonable to understand Judgment here as it is understood, ver. 1. and 4. and bringing forth Judgment here, as it is taken, ver. 1. It may be truly and fairly answered, that it is a very common thing in Scripture, for the same words or phrases to be used in several sences, not only in two neighbouring verses, but sometimes also in the very same verse, whereof I have formerly given divers instances.

4. He shall not fail, nor be † discouraged q, till he have set judgment in the earth r: and the isles s shall wait for his Law t.

q Though he be thus meek, and gentle, yet he is also courageous, and resolute, against all the great, and many difficulties, and conflicts, to which he will be exposed, and will not give over till he have finished his work: Or, as others render the words, He shall not be darkned: (This Glorious Light shall not be eclipsed or obscured: Or, He shall shine forth brightly and gloriously, as the Seventy render this word) nor broken, by all the attempts and vigorous indeavours of his Enemies who design it. r Till he hath published and established his Law or Doctrine (as this Judgment is expounded in the next clause) among the Nations of the Earth. And this word, till, respects onely the time past, but not the time to come, as if he would then fail, or be discouraged, when once he had set Judgment in the Earth; which is contrary to reason, and to other evident Scriptures. And so this word is used, Gen. 28. 15. Psal. 71. 18. Matt. 1. 25. s The Countries remote from Judea, to which God's Law was now confined, as this word is oft used. t Shall gladly receive his Doctrine and Commands from time to time.

5. ¶ Thus saith God the LORD, * he that created the heavens, and stretched them out; he that spread forth the earth, and that which cometh out of it, he that giveth breath unto the People upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein u:

* Chap. 44. 24. Zech. 12. 1.

u This large Description of God's infinite power, is here seasonably added, to give them assurance of the certain accomplishment of these great and wonderful promises, which otherwise would seem incredible.

6. I the LORD have called thee in righteousness x, and will hold thine hand y, and will keep thee z, and give thee for * a covenant a of the people b, for * a light of the Gentiles c;

* Chap. 49. 8.
* Chap. 49. 6. Luk. 2. 32. Act. 13. 47.

x To declare my Righteousness, as is said, Rom. 3. 26. or my faithfulness, which is frequently called Righteousness in Scripture, according to my Promise long since made, and oft renewed. As the former verse asserted God's Power, so this Clause declares his will and firm purpose and obligation, to effect this work, and both together evince the certainty and necessity of it. y VVill give thee Counsel and Strength for thine high and hard VVork. z Thou shalt not fail in, nor be hindred by thine Enemies from the accomplishment of thy VVork. a To be the Angel of the Covenant, as Christ is called, Mal. 3. 1. or the Mediatour in and by whom my Covenant of Grace is made, and confirmed with mankind. b Either of my People, the Jews: Or, Indefinitely or universally, of all People, not only Jews but Gentiles also, as it follows. c To enlighten them with true and saving Knowledge, and to direct them in the right way to true happiness from which they had miserably wandred. He alludes to God's fiery Pillar, which inlightned and directed the Israelites in the Wilderness.

7. To open the blind eyes d, to bring out the prisoners e from the prison, and them that sit in * darkness out of the prison-house.

* Chap. 35. 5. & 61. 1. Luk. 4. 18. Heb. 2. 14, 15.

d The eyes of their minds blinded with long ignorance, and deep prejudice and inveterate error, and by the Power and and Policy of the God of this World, 2 Cor. 4. 4. which nothing but the Almighty Power of God could cure. e Sinners who are taken Captive by the Devil at his will, as we read, 2 Tim. 2. 25. and as daily experience sheweth, and who are enslaved and chained by their own lusts, and made Free-men only by Christ, Joh. 8. 32. 36. Compare this portion of Scripture with Isa. 61. 1. and both with Luke 4. 17, 18, 19. 20, 21. where it is said to be fulfilled in and by Christ.

8. I am the LORD f, that is my name g, and my * glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images h.

* chap. 48. 11.

f Heb. Jehovah: who have all Being in and of my self, and give being to all my Creatures, and to all my promises, as this name signifies, the everlasting and unchangeable, and omnipotent God, who therefore both can, and will fulfill all my promises, and plead the cause, and set up the Kingdom of my Son in spight of all opposition, and destroy all those Idols which are set up against him and me. g Which I must own and justifie to the World. He seems to allude to Exod. 3. 14, 15, & 6. 3. h I will not any longer suffer that Honour and Worship, which is peculiar to me, to be given to Idols as it hath been, but I will by Christ and the Gospel, abolish Idolatry in the World.

9. Behold, the former things are come to pass, and * new things do I declare i: before they spring forth I tell you of them k.

* chap. 43. 9, 10. & 44. 7, 8. & 46. 9, 10.

i As all things, which I have formerly promised or foretold, have exactly come to pass in their proper seasons, and not one of them failed, as was noted Josh. 23. 14. So you have great reason to believe, that what I now promise, though it be new and strange to you, shall infallibly be accomplished. k That when they come to pass, you may know that I am God, and that this is my Work. Compare John 13. 19.

* Psal. 33. 3.

10. * Sing unto the LORD a new song l, and his praise from the end of the earth m: ye that go down to the sea, and † all that is therein; the isles and the inhabitants thereof n.

† Heb. the fulness thereof.

l Upon this new and great occasion, the calling and salvation of the World by Christ. m All Nations from one end of the Earth to another, who shall be sharers in this Mercy. n You that go by Sea carry these glad tidings from Judea, where Christ was born, and lived, and died, and published the Gospel, unto the remotest parts of the Earth, that they may joyn with you in singing forth God's praises for his marvellous kindness and grace to them.

11. Let the wilderness o and the cities thereof lift up their voice, the villages that Kedar p doth inhabit: let the inhabitants of the rock sing, let them shout from the top of the mountains q.

o Those parts of the World which are now like a Wilderness; not literally, for he speaks of their Cities in the next clause, but spiritually desolate and forsaken of God, dry and destitute of the waters of God's grace, and barren of all good fruits. p The Arabians, which were an Heathenish and Barbarous People, and well known to the Jews, and are synecdochically put for all Nations in the same circumstances. q Having mentioned Cities and Villages, he now adds those who dwell upon Rocks and Mountains, which are commonly more savage and ignorant than others, and therefore harder to be taught and reformed.

12. Let them give glory unto the LORD, and declare his praise in the islands r.

r In the remotest parts of the World, as well as in Arabia, which was near to them.

13. The LORD shall go forth s as a mighty man, he shall stir up jealousie t like a man of war: he shall cry, yea, roar u; he shall ‖ prevail against his enemies.

‖ Or, behave himself mightily.

s To wit, to war, or battle, as this Phrase is used, Numb. 1. 3, 18. 2 Sam. 11. 1. t He shall stir up himself, and his strength, and anger against the obstinate and implacable Enemies of his Son and Gospel. u As a Lyon doth upon his prey, and as Souldiers do when they begin the Battle.

14. I have long time held my peace x, I have been still and refrained my self, now will I cry like a travailing woman y, I will destroy and † devour at once z.

† Heb. swallow or, sup up.

x I have for many ages suffered the Devil and his Servants, Tyrants, and Idolaters and Persecutors to prevail in the world, to afflict my people, and to hinder the entertainment of my Doctrine and Worship in the World. y Now I will bring forth and accomplish that glorious work which I have long conceived in my mind. z I will suddenly and utterly destroy the incorrigible Enemies of my Truth, and of my Sons Kingdom. He alludes to those wild Beasts which open their mouths wide, and devour all their prey at one morsel or at one time.

15. I will make wast mountains and hills a, and dry up all their herbs, and I will make the rivers islands, and I will dry up the pools b.

a Not dry and barren ones, for these were wast already, but such as are cloathed with Grass and Herbs, as the following words imply. Which is to be understood metaphorically, of God's destroying his most lofty and flourishing Enemies, who are oft compared in Scripture unto Mountains and Hills. b I will remove all impediments out of the way: which is expressed in the Prophetical dialect, by drying up Euphrates, that the way of the Kings of the East might be prepared, Revel. 16. 12. He seems to allude to that which God did in drying up first the Red Sea, and then Jordan, to give his people passage into Canaan. And this exposition is confirmed by the following verse.

16. And I will bring the blind c by a way that they know not d, I will lead them in paths that they have not known: I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things † straight e. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them f.

c The Gentiles who were blind and were called so above ver. 7. and in many other places of Scripture, and were so accounted by the Jews. d By the way of truth, which hitherto hath been hidden from them, until by my Word and Spirit I revealed it to them. e I will take away all hinderances, and give them all advantages and conveniences for their Journey. I will direct them in the right way. I will enlighten their dark minds, and rectifie their perverse wills and affections. f Until I have brought them with safety and comfort to the end of their journey.

17. ¶ They shall be * turned back, they shall be greatly ashamed that trust in graven images g, that say to the molten images, Ye are our gods.

* Psal. 97. 7. chap. 1. 29. & 44. 11. & 45. 16.

g This may be understood either 1. Of the Converted Gentiles; who shall be turned back from their former sinful course, and shall sincerely grieve, and be ashamed that they did trust, &c. as the word may be rendred; that they should ever be guilty of such wickedness and madness to Worship and Trust in Idols: Or, rather 2. Of those Gentiles who, when their Brethren embraced the true God and Christ, persisted obstinately in their Idolatrous courses, who shall be confounded and destroyed: For this phrase of being turned back is generally used in Scripture in a bad sence; or of them who are overthrown, or put to flight in battel, as Psal. 9. 3. & 35. 4. & 70. 2, 3, &c. And the like Imay say of being ashamed, or confounded, or put to shame, especially where this Phrase is joyned with the other, as it is in the two places of the Psalms last quoted.

18. Hear ye deaf, and look ye blind, that ye may see h.

h O you, whosoever you are, whether Jews or Gentiles, which shall resist this clear light, and obstinately continue in your former Errours, attend diligently to my words, and consider these mighty works of God.

19. * Who is blind but my servant i? or deaf as my messenger k that I sent? who is blind as he that is perfect l, and blind as the LORD's servant m.

* chap. 43. 8.

i But no People under Heaven are so blind as the Jews who call themselves my Servants and People, who will not receive their Messiah, though he be recommended to them, with such evident and illustrious Signs, and Miraculous works, as force belief from the most unbelieving and obstinate Gentiles. k My Messengers, the singular number being put for the plural, as it is commonly in Scripture. l The Priests and other Teachers whom I appointed to instruct my People in the right way. m As the most eminent Teachers and Rulers of the Jews, whom he calleth Perfect, either because it was their duty to know and teach the way, and truth of God perfectly; or rather Sarcastically, because they pretended to great perfection, and proudly called themselves Rabbies and Masters, as our Saviour observed, and despised the People as cursed and not knowing the Law, Joh. 7. 49. and derided Christ, for calling them blind, Joh. 9. 40. m Which Title as it was given to the Jewish people in the first clause of the verse; So here it seems to be given to the Priests, because they were called and obliged to be the Lord's Servants, in a special and eminent manner.

* Rom. 2. 22. 20. Seeing many things, * but thou obſerveſt not: opening the ears, but he heareth not n.

n Thou doſt not ſeriouſly and impartially conſider the plain word, and the wonderful Works of God, of which thine ears and eyes have been Witneſſes, which are abundantly ſufficient for the conviction of any conſidering man.

* Chap. 59. 16. 21. The LORD is well-pleaſed o * for his righteouſneſs ſake p, he will magnifie the law, and make || it honourable q.

o To wit, with you: Or, as this word is moſt commonly uſed, hath a good will, to you or to this People: which may be underſtood out of the following verſe, as is very uſual in Sacred Scripture. The meaning ſeems to be this; Although thou art a wicked people that rebelleſt againſt the cleareſt light, and therefore God might juſtly deſtroy thee ſuddenly, yet he is very unwilling to do it, and will patiently wait for thy repentance that he may be gracious unto thee. p Not for thy ſake, for thou deſerveſt no ſuch thing from him, but for the glory of his own faithfulneſs, in fulfilling that Promiſe and Covenant, which he made with thy pious Progenitors for themſelves, and for their Seed. q He will maintain the honour of his Law, and therefore is not forward to deſtroy you, who profeſs God's Law, and the true Religion, leſt his Law ſhould upon that occaſion be expoſed to contempt.

|| Or, in ſnaring all the young men of them. † Heb. a treading. 22. But this is a people robbed and ſpoiled r, || they are all of them ſnared in holes, and they are hid in priſon-houſes s: they are for a prey, and none delivereth; for a † ſpoyl, and none ſaith, Reſtore t.

r But notwithſtanding this great reſpect which God hath to his Law, and to his people for the ſake of his Law, it is apparent that God hath ſeverely ſcourged you for your ſins: and therefore take heed that you do not provoke him by your obſtinate infidelity, leſt he caſt you off for ever. s They are, or have been taken in ſnares made by their own hands, and by God's juſt Judgment delivered into the hands of their Enemies, and by them caſt into Pits or Dungeons and Priſons. t None afford them either pity or help in their extremities.

† Heb. for the after-time. 23. Who among you will give ear to this? who will hearken and hear † for the time to come u?

u O that you would learn from your former and dear-bought experiences to be wiſer for the future, and not to provoke God to your own total and final ruine.

24. Who gave Jacob for a ſpoil, and Iſrael to the robbers? did not the LORD x: he againſt whom we have ſinned? for they would not walk in his wayes, neither were they obedient unto his law.

x Do not flatter your ſelves with a conceit of impunity, becauſe you are a people whom God hath favoured and endowed with many, and great Privileges, which the Jews were very prone to do, as we ſee, Jer. 7. 4, &c. and elſewhere; for as God hath puniſhed you formerly, doubt not, but if you continue to ſin, he will proceed in puniſhing you more and more for your ſins.

25. Therefore he hath poured upon him the fury of his anger, and the ſtrength of battel y: and it hath ſet him on fire round about, yet he knew not z; and it burned him, yet he laid it not to heart.

y Moſt grievous Judgments. z They were ſecure and ſtupid under God's Judgments, neither fearing them when threatned, nor truly ſenſible of God's hand in them, and of the cauſes of God's diſpleaſure againſt them, and of the means of cure.

CHAP. XLIII.

1. BUT now thus ſaith the LORD a that created thee b, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Iſrael, Fear not: for I have redeemed thee c, I have called thee by thy name d, thou art mine.

a But notwithſtanding thy groſs inſenſibleneſs under former Judgments, for which I might juſtly ſend far heavier ones upon thee, yet I will deal mercifully with thee. b That made thee his people, and that in ſo miraculous a manner, as if he had created thee a ſecond time out of nothing; and therefore he will be gracious to his own workmanſhip. c From the Egyptians, and divers other Enemies; and therefore I will redeem thee again. d By the name of God's people, which was as proper and peculiar to them, as the name of Iſrael.

2. When thou * paſſeſt through the waters, I will be with thee: and through the rivers, they ſhall not overflow thee: when thou walkeſt through the fire, thou ſhalt not be burnt; neither ſhall the flame kindle upon thee e. * Pſal. 66. 12.

e Though I will chaſtiſe thee for thy ſins, yet I will not ſuffer thine Enemies utterly to deſtroy thee, Compare Jer. 30. 11.

3. For I am the LORD thy God, the holy One of Iſrael, thy ſaviour: I gave Egypt for thy ranſom f, Ethiopia and Seba g for thee.

f This was fulfilled either 1. When God ſmote the Egyptians, both firſt-born and others in Egypt; and drowned Pharaoh, and his Hoſt in the Red Sea, for the ſafety and benefit of his people: Or, 2. When the King of Aſſyria, either Sennacherib, as many think, or rather Eſar-haddon, who deſigned to revenge his Fathers diſgrace, and loſs before Jeruſalem, upon the Jews, but was diverted and directed by God to employ his Forces againſt Egypt, and Ethiopia, and Seba, as it follows. See the Notes upon Iſa. 20. 1, &c. g The Sabæans who were confederate with the Ethiopians or Cuſhites.

4. Since thou was precious in my ſight, thou haſt been honourable, and I have loved thee h; therefore will I give men for thee i, and people for thy || † life. || Or, perſon. † Heb. ſoul.

h So the Sence is, From that time that I choſe thee for my precious and peculiar treaſure and people, I have had a great eſteem and affection for thee. But the words may well be, and by ſome are rendred thus, ſince that (or, For that: or, Becauſe) Thou waſt precious in my ſight, thou waſt honourable, (the ſame thing repeated in other words,) and I love thee. i As I did give up the Egyptians, and ſo I am ready to give up others to ſave thee, as occaſion requires.

5. * Fear not, for I am with thee; I will bring thy ſeed from the eaſt, and gather thee from the weſt k. * Chap. 44. 1, 2. Jer. 30. 10. & 46. 27.

k Although the Jews ſhall for their ſins be carried captives out of their own Land Northward and Eaſtward into Babylon, and the adjacent Countries, and others of them ſhall flee Southward and Weſtward, and ſhall there pine away in their iniquities, as I threatned; yet their poſterity I will bring back into Canaan, from all the places where they are diſperſed.

6. I will ſay to the north, Give up l; and to the ſouth, keep not back; bring my ſons m from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth.

l Thou who haſt ſo long had and held my people in bondage, reſign them to me, and permit them to return to their own Land. He ſpeaks either to the Countries themſelves by a Proſopopœia: Or, to the Inhabitants of them. m Do not only permit but aſſiſt and further their return.

7. Even every one that is called by my name n: for * I have created him for my glory o, I have formed him, yea, I have made him p. * Pſal. 100. 3. Chap. 29. 23. Joh. 3. 4, 5. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Eph. 2. 10.

n They are called by my Name. I own them for my People and Children; and therefore what kindneſs or cruelty you exerciſe to them, I take it as done to my ſelf. So it is an argument to move thoſe people to let their Captives go: Or, it is an argument to confirm the faith of God's people, that God would deliver them, becauſe they are his own. o And therefore I will glorifie my power and goodneſs, and faithfulneſs in delivering them. p I have not only created them out of nothing, as I did all other people, but I have alſo formed and made them my peculiar people.

8. ¶ Bring forth the blind people that have eyes, and the deaf that have ears q. * Chap. 42. 19. Ezek. 12. 2.

q The ſence is either 1. Bring out of Captivity my people who were blind and deaf, but now have their eyes and ears opened by my grace. So this verſe relates to the foregoing paſſages: Or rather, 2. O ye Idolatrous Gentiles, produce or bring forth your falſe Gods, which have eyes but ſee not, and ears but hear not, as is ſaid, Pſal. 115. 5, 6. So this verſe belongs to the following context, in which God reneweth his conteſt with Idols; which in this verſe verſe he calleth blind, and in the next verſe proveth them ſo to be.

9. Let all the Nations be gathered together, and let the people be aſſembled r: * who among them can declare this s, and ſhew us former things t? let them bring forth their witneſſes u, that they may be juſtified x; or let them hear and ſay, It is truth y.

* Chap. 41. 21, 22.

r To plead the cauſe of their Idols with me. s This wonderful Work of mine in bringing my People out of Captivity, which I have already foretold, and ſhall further declare; and that ſo exactly, that I ſhall name the perſon by whom this work ſhall be begun, even Cyrus who is yet unborn, and ſhall be ſo for above 200 years; let any of your Heathen Gods do the like. t Not things already paſt, but ſuch things as ſhall happen long before the return from the Captivity, which yet your blind Idols cannot foreſee. See on Iſa. 41. 22. u Who can teſtifie the truth and certainty of any ſuch Predictions of theirs x That they may be owned for true Gods, which in that caſe I allow them to expect. But of this Argument ſee on Iſa. 41. 22, 23. y Or if they can produce no evidence of any ſuch thing, as I am well aſſured that they cannot, let them be ſilent, and hear me and my witneſſes, as it follows in the next verſe; and let them confeſs, that what I ſay is truth, that I only am the true God, and that they are but vanity and falſhood.

10. Ye are my witneſſes z, ſaith the LORD, and my ſervant whom I have choſen a: that ye may know and believe me, and underſtand that I am he b: * before me there was ‖ no God formed, neither ſhall there be after me c.

* Chap. 41. 4. & 44. 8. ‖ Or, nothing [illegible] God.

z They can produce no VVitneſſes for themſelves, but you my people are able to witneſs for me, that I have given you many plain demonſtrations of my certain foreknowledge of future events, by my predictions and promiſes delivered to you from time to time. a Either, 1. Iſaiah, and other Prophets, the ſingular VVord being put collectively: Or, 2. Cyrus, who is an eminent inſtance and proof of Gods foreknowledge: Or 3. the Meſſiah, as not only Chriſtians, but even the Chaldee Paraphraſt underſtands it; who is called by this very Title, Iſa. 42. 1. who alſo is the moſt eminent witneſs in this cauſe; and that both paſſively, as he and the time and place, and other circumſtances of his birth, and life, and death were particularly foretold by God in Scripture; and actively, as many future things were foretold by Chriſt, of which we have many examples in the New Teſtament. b He of whom the preſent diſpute is, or he whom I have affirmed my ſelf to be. That I only am the true God whom we are now ſeeking in this debate. c The Gods of the Heathens neither had a Being before me, nor ſhall continue after me. VVherein more is underſtood than is expreſſed, That whereas the Lord is God from everlaſting to everlaſting, theſe falſe pretenders to the Deity, are but of yeſterday, and ſhall ſhortly be aboliſhed. And withal he calleth them Formed Gods, in way of contempt, and to ſhew the ridiculouſneſs of their pretence to the Divinity, which are formed by the hands of men.

11. I, even I * am the LORD, and beſides me there is no ſaviour d.

* Chap. 45. 21. Hoſ. 13. 4.

d That can and doth ſave his VVorſhippers; VVhereby he implies, that the falſe Gods were not only weak and unable to ſave their people, but alſo were the deſtroyers of their people, as being the great cauſe of their ruine.

12. I have declared, and have ſaved e, and I have ſhewed f, * when there was no ſtrange god among you g: therefore ye are my witneſſes, ſaith the LORD, that I am God.

* Deut. 32. 12.

e I firſt foretold your deliverance, and then effected it. f I foretold it. This branch he repeated, becauſe this is the principal Argument uſed here, and Chap. 41. to determine this controverſie between God and Idols. g And this I did when you did not worſhip any Idols, and therefore it could not be pretended that you had this knowledge from them.

13. Yea † before the day was h, I am he i, and there is none k, that can deliver out of my hand l: I will work, and who ſhall † * let it m.

† Heb. from the day. † Heb. turn it back. * Job 9. 12. Chap. 14. 27. & 46. 10.

h Before all time: Or, which is all one, from all eternity: Or, Since the day was, ſince the Beginning of time and things, in all Ages ſince the Creation of the VVorld. i I am God, and I have proved my ſelf to be ſo. k None of thoſe which are called Gods. l That can ſave them whom I will deſtroy. Therefore they are impotent, and conſequently no Gods. m Nor can they hinder me in any other work which I reſolve to do.

14. ¶ Thus ſaith the LORD your Redeemer, the holy One of Iſrael, For your ſake I have ſent to Babylon n, and have brought down o all their † nobles p, and the Chaldeans q, whoſe cry is in the ſhips r.

n I have ſent Cyrus, and the Medes and Perſians with him to war againſt Babylon, to this very end and purpoſe, that he might deliver you out of Captivity, and reſtore you to your Land, according to my promiſe. o From that height of Power, and Glory to which they were advanced. p Their Princes and great Commanders, who as they are called Shields, Pſal. 47. 9. So here they are called Bars, for the ſame reaſon, becauſe of that ſtrength and defence which they give to their People. q The Common People of Chaldea, together with their great men who had Palaces in Babylon. r Who make fearful Out-cries, as they flee away from the Perſians in Ships; which they had opportunity to do, becauſe of their two great and famous Rivers, Euphrates and Tigris, and the ſeveral branches of them.

15. I am the LORD, your holy One s, the creator of Iſrael, your king.

s The holy One of Iſrael, as he frequently ſtileth himſelf, who ſanctifie and glorifie my ſelf in this and ſuch other glorious Works, with reſpect to you, or for your benefit.

16. Thus ſaith the LORD, which * maketh a way in the Sea, and a * path in the mighty waters t:

* Exod. 14. 22. Chap. 51. 10. * Joſh. 3. 17.

t Who as he formerly made a path-way for his people through the Red Sea, ſo he will in no leſs wonderful manner remove all impediments or difficulties out of the way of his People when they return from Babylon.

17. Which bringeth forth the chariot and horſe, the army and the power u; they ſhall lie down together, they ſhall not riſe x: they are extinct, they are quenched as tow y.

u Or rather, who brought forth the Chariots, &c. (i. e.) Pharaoh and his Chariots and Horſes, and Army: as may be gathered from the next verſe, where the things here mentioned, are called former things and things of old. x Or, they did lie down together (to wit, in the bottom of the Sea,) they did not riſe; they ſank like lead, as it is ſaid, Exod. 15. 10. and they never roſe again to moleſt the Iſraelites, as God promiſed, Exo. 14. 13. Theſe two Hebrew Verbs are of the future Tenſe, but that ſeems to be put for the preter Tenſe, becauſe the two following Verbs, which treat of the ſame thing, and are added to explain theſe, are of the preter Tenſe. y As the wicke of a Candle when it is put into the VVater is wholly extinguiſhed, and not the leaſt ſpark of fire left, ſo were they utterly deſtroyed, and not one of them remained.

18. ¶ * Remember ye not the former things, neither conſider the things of old z.

* Chap. 46. 9.

z But although your former deliverance out of Egypt was in it ſelf a moſt glorious work which you ought always to remember and conſider, yet this other work of your deliverance out of Babylon by Cyrus, and thoſe bleſſings which ſhall follow upon it, and particularly that ineſtimable mercy of ſending the Meſſiah, ſhall be ſo tranſcendent a favour, that in compariſon thereof, all your former deliverances are ſcarce worthy of your remembrance and conſideration. VVhich expoſition is confirmed by two parallel Texts, Jer. 16. 14, 15. & 23. 7, 8. From all which Texts laid together it appears, that this later deliverance compared with that out of Egypt, is not to be confined to their freedom from the Babyloniſh Captivity, but to be extended to the conſequences of it, and eſpecially to the Redemption by Chriſt; becauſe otherwiſe that Egyptian deliverance, was more glorious and wonderful in many reſpects, than the Babylonian.

19. Behold I will do a * new thing a: now b it ſhall ſpring forth, ſhall ye not know it c? I will even make a * way in the wilderneſs, and rivers in the deſert d.

* 2 Cor. 5. 17. Rev. 21. 5. * Chap. 42. 16. Jer. 31. 9.

a Such a work as was never yet done in the VVorld, even the Redemption of the World by the Meſſiah. b Shortly, although it was not to be done till after ſome hundreds of years. For ſo the Scripture oft ſpeaketh of things at a great diſtance of time, as if they were now at hand, as Hagg. 2. 6. Jam. 5. 9. Revel. 22. 20. and elſewhere, which it doth to correct our impatience, and to make us willing to wait till God's time come; and to assure us that the mercy shall come as soon as ever it is fit for us, and we for it, and to make us sensible of the inconsiderableness of time, and all temporal things in comparison of God, and of the eternal things; upon which account it is said that a thousand years are in God's sight but as one day, Psal. 90. 4. c Certainly you Jews shall know it by experience, and shall find that I do not deceive you with vain hopes. d I will give you direction and provision in the Wilderness, where there is commonly no path, and where all necessaries are wanting: Which as it literally speaks of God's conducting them in the way from Babylon to Jerusalem, which lay through a great desert; so it is mystically meant of those spiritual blessings, which God in and through Christ will confer upon all his people, not the Jews onely, but also the Gentiles, who in Prophetical Language are oft compared to the Wilderness, as Isa. 35. 1. and elsewhere.

20. The beast of the field shall honour me e, the dragons f and the ‖† owls: because I give waters in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people g, my chosen.

e Shall have cause if they had abilities, to honour and praise me for their share in this mercy. Possibly the beast of the field may mystically signifie the Gentiles, whom the Jews reputed as Beasts, and who are as destitute of all saving knowledge, as the Beasts which perish, yet should become the Lord's People, as they seem to be called, ver. 21. f which live in dry and barren deserts, and are very thirsty, and therefore more sensible of this mercy. g To whom these waters were principally designed, but the Beasts fared better for their sakes. Thus Christ was primarily sent to the lost sheep of Israel, Matt. 15. 24. yet the Gentiles there compared to Dogs, fared better for the Children, picking up some crumbs of their bread; and the Jews generally rejecting Christ, the Gentiles came in their stead.

21. * This people h have I formed for my self, * they shall shew forth my praise i.

* Luk. 1. 74, 75. * 1 Pet. 2. 9.

h My People, as he now called them, ver. 20. consisting in part of the Jews, but especially of the Gentiles. i I have created, as it were, out of nothing, I have called them into my Church, that I might have glory and praise from them for so stupendious a mercy.

22. ¶ But k thou hast not called upon me l, O Jacob, but thou hast been weary of me m, O Israel.

k Or, For, as this conjunction is oft used. So this may be added as a reason, why God called the Gentiles to be his people, because the Jews forsook him. l Thou hast grosly neglected, or very slightly performed, the duties of my worship. m Thou hast not esteemed my service to be a priviledge, as in truth it is, but as a burden and bondage. Compare Mal. 1. 13.

† Heb. lambs, or, kids.

23. Thou hast not brought me the † small cattel of thy burnt offerings n, neither hast thou honoured me with thy sacrifices o, I have not caused thee to serve with an offering, nor wearied thee with incense p.

n Either, 1. Because thou didst not offer thy Sacrifices to me, but to Idols: Or rather, 2. because what thou didst offer, was not done to me, not for my sake, not from a principle of love and obedience to me, not to please and honour me with it, but merely for thine own ends. Which interpretation seems to be favoured by the following clause, and by comparing this with Zech. 7. 5, 6. Did ye fast unto me, even to me? And when ye did eat ——— did ye not eat for your selves? o Because thou didst either neglect this work of sacrificing to me; or didst perform it merely out of custome or ill design, and not with a purpose to please and glorifie me; or didst dishonour me, and pollute thy Sacrifices by thy wicked course of life. p So the sence may be this; I did not require these wearisome services of thee, to wit, upon these terms, or to be offered in such a manner, as God speaks, Isa. 1. 11, 12, 13. But the words may very well be rendred, Although I did not cause thee to serve with Offerings, nor weary thee with Incense: the particle, Although, being here understood, as it is in many other places as hath been formerly noted. And so this is an aggravation of their former sin, of being weary of, and negligent in his service; although God had not laid such heavy burthens upon them, nor required such hard services or costly offerings from them, as might give them cause to be weary, nor such as Idolaters did freely and greedily perform in the service of their Idols.

† Heb. made me drunk, or abundantly moistned.

24. Thou hast bought me no sweet cane q with money, neither hast thou filled me with the † fat of thy sacrifices r, but thou hast made me to serve with thy sins s, thou hast * wearied me with thine iniquities.

* Mal. 2. 17.

q Or, Calamus, as this word is rendred, Exodus 30. 23. which was used in the making of that precious Ointment, Exodus 30. 34. and as a perfume, or for the Incense, Exodus 30. 7. See Jer. 6. 20. The meaning of this clause seems to be this, Thou hast been niggardly in my service, when thou hast spared for no cost, in the service of thine Idols, as is elsewhere noted. r Thou hast offered no more Sacrifices than were simply necessary, thou hast not multiplyed thy thank-Offerings and free-will Offerings, though I have given thee sufficient occasion to do so. s Thou hast made me to bear the load and burden of thy sins, which are very grievous and oppressive to me, Amos 2. 13. and great exercises of my patience. Yea thou hast made it necessary for me, to take upon me the form of a Servant, that I might bear and carry away thy sins. This clause and that which follows are opposed to, and aggravated by what he said ver. 23. I did not make thee to serve or weary thee with offerings, though that work was honourable and beneficial to thee, as well as conducing to my service; but thou hast made me to serve in the vilest manner, with such things as are not only offensive to me, but also pernicious to thee.

25. I, even I t am he that * blotteth out u thy transgressions for mine own sake x, and will not remember thy sins y.

* Ezek. 36. 22. &c.

t I whom thou hast thus despised, and wearied and provoked to destroy thee. u Out of my book in which they were all written, and to be read unto thee, and charged upon thee another day. See Jer. 17. 1. Rev. 20. 12. Sins are oft compared to debts, Matt. 6. 12, 14, &c. which are written in the Creditors Book, and crossed or blotted out when they are pay'd. x Being moved thereunto not by thy merits, but by my own meer goodness and free mercy. y So as to punish them, and destroy thee for them, as thou deservest.

26. Put me in remembrance z: let us plead together: declare thou, that thou mayst be justified.

* Chap. 1. 18.

z I remember nothing by which thou hast deserved my favour and the pardon of thy sins, if thou knowest any such thing, bring it to my mind, I allow thee free liberty to plead with me, as it follows, and if thou hast right on thy side, I will justifie thee. It is an Ironical speech, whereby he insulteth over those, who were puffed up with an opinion of their own innocency, and merit; which was the case of many Jews, as this and other Prophets have oft observed.

27. Thy first * father a hath sinned; and thy † teachers b have transgressed against me.

* Jud. 17. 10. & 18. 19. † Heb. interpreters.

a Either, 1. Adam, from whom the guilt and filth of sin is propagated to thee: Or rather, 2. Abraham, who might well be called the first Father of the Israelites, because they all descended from him, had all their right and title to God's Ordinances and Promises, and other special Priviledges from God's Covenant, made with Abraham and with his Seed, and who is oft emphatically called their Father, as Josh. 24. 2. Isa. 51. 2, &c. and the Jews gloried in, and trusted to that Relation, which they had to Abraham, as we read Matt. 3. 9. Joh. 8. 33. and elsewhere. And this agrees well with the foregoing Context. For having sufficiently intimated, that they had no merits of their own, he now addeth, that even their Father Abraham, to whose merits they trusted, had no merits of his own, nor any occasion of boasting, for he also was a sinful man, and hath left some instances of his failings: Or, the first Father may be put collectively for their Forefathers; and so he tells them, that as they were sinners, so also were all their Progenitors, yea even the best of them, Abraham and David, and others, for whose sakes they expected to be pardoned and rewarded. And this indeed is usual with God to upbraid the Israelites with the sins of their Fathers. b Thy Priests and Prophets; who were their intercessours with God, and who were generally presumed to be the holiest part of that people, and therefore if these were transgressours, the people had no reason to fancy themselves to be innocent.

28. Therefore I have profaned c the ‖ princes of the sanctuary d, and have given Jacob to the curse e, and Israel to reproaches f.

‖ Or, holy princes

c As they have made themselves profane, so I have dealt with them as such, without any regard to the sacredness and dignity of their functions. I have exposed them to contempt and destruction. d The highest and best of your Priests, whose Persons were most sacred, and therefore supposed by themselves and others, to be furthest from danger. e To utter destruction, to which Persons or things accursed accurſed were devoted. Of which this Hebrew word is conſtantly uſed. f To be the Objects of their Enemies ſcorn and reproaches.

CHAP. XLIV.

1. YET now hear, * O Jacob my ſervant, and Iſrael whom I have choſen a:

*Chap. 41. 8. & 43. 1. Jer. 30. 10. & 46. 27.

a Although I have chaſtiſed thee for thy ſins, and had juſt cauſe utterly to deſtroy thee, yet in judgment I will remember Mercy, and will ſtill own thee for my Servant and choſen People.

2. Thus ſaith the LORD * that made thee, and formed thee from the womb b, which will help thee, Fear not, O Jacob, my ſervant, and thou Jeſurun c, whom I have choſen.

*Chap. 43. 7.

b From the time of thy Birth, or coming out of the Womb. From that time that I firſt took thee to be my People, I have been forming and faſhioning thee, by giving thee Laws and Ordinances, and Teachers, by threatnings and corrections, and many other ways. He ſeems to allude to the practice of Midwives, who uſe to compoſe all the parts of the new-born Infant into a right frame. c Another name of Jacob or Iſrael, given to him, Deut. 32. 15. and 33. 5, 26.

3. For I will * pour water d upon him that is thirſty e, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my ſpirit f upon thy ſeed, and my bleſſing g upon thine off-ſpring:

*Chap. 35. 7. Joel 2. 28. Joh. 7. 38. Act. 2. 18.

d My Spirit and Bleſſing, which is frequently compared to Water; and ſo it is expounded in the latter part of the verſe. e Either 1. Upon him that deſires it. Or rather 2. Upon him that is deſtitute of it: For what is here thirſty, in the next clauſe it is called dry ground. f The gifts and graces of my Spirit: Which expreſſion he ſeems deſignedly to uſe, to lift up the minds and hearts of the Jews from carnal and worldly things, to which they were too much addicted, unto ſpiritual and heavenly Bleſſings, and thereby to prepare them for the better entertainment of the Goſpel. g All the Bleſſings of my Covenant, both Spiritual and Temporal.

4. And they ſhall ſpring up as among the graſs h, as willows by the water-courſes.

h They ſhall increaſe and flouriſh like graſs, and thoſe Herbs and Plants which grow up in the midſt of it.

5. One ſhall ſay, I am the LORD's: and another ſhall ‖ call himſelf by the name of Jacob: and another ſhall ſubſcribe with his hand unto the LORD, and ‖ ſirname himſelf by the name of Iſrael i.

‖ Or, name the name of Jacob.
‖ Or, name the name of Iſrael.

i The Bleſſing of God upon the Jews, ſhall be ſo remarkable, that the Gentiles ſhall joyn themſelves unto them, and accept the Lord for their God, and own themſelves for his people.

6. Thus ſaith the LORD k the king of Iſrael, and his redeemer the LORD of hoſts, * I am the firſt, and I am the laſt, and beſides me there is no God.

*Chap. 41. 4. & 48. 12. Rev. 1. 8, 17. & 22. 13.

k Here God reneweth his Conteſt with Idols: which he inſiſteth upon ſo oft, and ſo much, becauſe his own People were exceeding prone to Idolatry.

7. And who l, as I, ſhall call, and ſhall * declare m it n, and ſet it in order o for me p, ſince I appointed the ancient people q? and the things that are coming, and ſhall come r? let them ſhew unto them s.

*Chap. 41. 22. & 45. 21.

l Which of all the Heathen Gods. m Shall by his powerful Call or Word cauſe it to be, and by his infinite fore-knowledge declare that it ſhall be. Or, ſhall publiſh and declare: Two words expreſſing the ſame thing, as is uſual. n That which ſhall come to paſs, whatſoever it be; which is eaſily underſtood out of the following clauſe. o Orderly relate all future Events in the ſame manner as they ſhall happen. p Heb. to me, ſo as I may hear it, and thereby be convinced of their Divinity. q Since the time that I appointed or called the Iſraelites to be my people, whom he calleth the ancient people, becauſe they were his people long before this time; or, as the Words may be rendred, the everlaſting people, becauſe he determined, that he would never totally and finally caſt them off and deſtroy them, as he would do other Nations. But the Words are, and may well be otherwiſe rendred, Since I conſtituted or made (as this Word is elſewhere rendred) The people of the world; ſince I firſt made Man upon Earth, as the Seventy and others underſtand it. Let them give me an account of any of their Predictions of future Events from the beginning of the World to this day. r Such things as are near at hand, and ſuch as are to come hereafter. s Unto their Worſhippers, who conſult their Oracles about future Events, as I have told them unto thee, O Jacob, as it follows in the next Verſe. So the pronoun Relative is put for the Antecedent, which is left to be underſtood out of the following clauſe. Or, to or for themſelves, in their own defence. Although theſe words might have been omitted in the Tranſlation, as being inſignificant, ſuch Pronouns being oft redundant in the Hebrew Language, as Gen. 12. 1. and oft elſewhere, as alſo in the Greek and Latine.

8. Fear ye not, neither be afraid: have not I told thee t from that time u, and have declared it x? * ye are even my witneſſes y. Is there a God beſides me z? yea, * there is no † God, I know not any a.

*Chap. 43. 10. * Deut. 4. 35, 39. & 32. 39. 1 Sam. 2. 2. Chap. 45. 5. † Heb. rock. Deut. 32. 4.

t Thee, O Iſrael, whom he bids not to fear. The Sence is, I call you Iſraelites to bear me Witneſs, Whether I have not from time to time, acquainted you with things to come, ſuch as your Sojourning in a ſtrange Land for Four Hundred Years, and your deliverance and happineſs after that time, Gen. 15. 13, 14. and many things of the like nature? u From the time when I appointed the ancient people, as I now ſaid, ver. 7. Theſe were pregnant Inſtances of God's Prediction of things to come, not only from the beginning of the Jewiſh Commonwealth; but even from the firſt Ages of the World, as unto Enoch, Jude ver. 14. and unto Noah, Gen. 6. 3. To ſay nothing of what other Authors relate concerning Adam and Seth. x Have publiſhed it to the World in my Sacred Records. y Both of my Predictions, and of the exact agreeableneſs of Events to them. z Judge by this Character, whether I be not the only true God. a If any of you be wiſer than I am, I am willing to be informed. It is a ſarcaſtical Speech. But this clauſe may be, and is by others taken interrogatively, do not I know it? Is it not a certain and undeniable Truth, that there is no other God?

9. ¶ They that make a graven Image are all of them vanity b, and their † delectable things c ſhall not profit, and they are their own witneſſes d, * they ſee not, nor know e; that they may be aſhamed f.

† Heb. deſirable. * Pſal. 115. 4, &c.

b Hereby diſcover themſelves to be vain, empty, or fooliſh Men. Or thus, They that make graven Images, all of them make (which word may fitly be repeated out of the foregoing clauſe, as is very uſual in Scripture) a vanity or a thing of nought. Which Tranſlation ſeems better to agree 1. With the following clauſe which is added to explain this, in which, not the Idol-makers, but the Idols themſelves, are ſaid to be vain or unprofitable. 2. With the uſe of this Hebrew word in Scripture, which is never applied to perſons, but conſtantly to things, and ſometimes to Idols, as 1 Sam. 12. 21. c Their Idols, in the ſight and worſhip of which, they take ſo much Pleaſure. d They that make them, are Witneſſes againſt themſelves, and againſt their Idols, becauſe they very well know, That they are not God's, but the work of their own hands, in which there is nothing but mean matter and man's Art. e Or, that they (to wit, their Idols) do not ſee nor know, have neither ſenſe nor underſtanding. f Therefore they have juſt cauſe to be aſhamed of their Folly and Stupidity, in worſhipping ſuch ſenſleſs things.

10. Who hath formed a god, or molten a graven image that is * profitable for nothing g?

* Hab. 2. 18.

g What Man in his Wits can eſteem, That a god which his own hands have formed; or melt a graven Image (underſtand out of the former clauſe, to be his God) which is profitable for nothing? He ſpeaks of melting a graven Image, becauſe the Image was firſt molten and caſt in a Mould, and then poliſhed and graven with a Tool, as was obſerved before. Or thus, VVho art thou, O Man, that formeſt a god, or melteſt a graven image to VVorſhip it, which is profitable for nothing? Come hither, and let me reaſon the caſe with thee. VVhich he doth in the following Verſes: So this verſe is a kind of Summons to Idolaters, to come and plead their own cauſe.

11. Behold, all his fellows h ſhall be * aſhamed: and the work-men, they are of men i: let them all be gathered together, let them ſtand up; yet they ſhall fear, and they ſhall be aſhamed together k.

* Pſal. 97. 7. Chap. 1. 29. & 42. 17. & 45. 16.

h Either 1. The VVorkmen, as it follows, who in this VVork are Companions or Partners with him, by whoſe coſt and command the VVork is done. Or, 2. thoſe who any any way assist or encourage him in this VVork, and joyn with him in worshipping the Image which he maketh. i They are of Mankind, and therefore cannot possibly make a god. Or, They are of the meanest sort of Men; for so the Hebrew VVord, Adam, sometimes signifies. k Though all combine together, and stand up with all their Might to maintain the Cause of their false gods, they shall be filled with Fear and Confusion, when God shall plead his cause against them.

* Chap. 40. 19. & 41. 6. Jer. 10. 3. ‖ Or, with an axe.

12. * The smith ‖ with the tongs both worketh in the coals, and fashioneth it with hammers l, and worketh it with the strength of his arms: yea, he is hungry, and his strength faileth; he drinketh no water, and is faint m.

l First he makes the Mettal soft and pliable, by putting it among burning Coals, and then he taketh it out, and beateth it into what form he pleaseth. It must be here noted, That some of these Images were made of Brass and Iron, as others were of Gold and Silver, Dan. 5. 4. m This is mentioned; Either 1. as an Argument of the vanity of Idols, which cannot relieve their poor VVorkmen when they are ready to faint away through hunger, and thirst, and weariness. Or, 2. as an Evidence of their great Zeal, and industry, in carrying on this work; so that they forget or neglect to eat and drink when their necessities require it. This I prefer, 1. Because it suits best with the next foregoing clause, He worketh with the strength of his arms, (i. e.) fervently, and putting forth all his might in the VVork. 2. Because the Prophet in this, and the next following Verses, is only describing the mechanical part, or the matter of Images, and the art and labour of the VVork-men in making them; and afterwards proceeds to the Theological consideration of the thing, and the confutation of these Practices, as we shall see.

13. The carpenter n stretcheth out his rule: he marketh it with a line o: he fitteth it with planes, and he marketh it out with the compass, and maketh it after the figure of a man, according to the beauty of a man p; that it may remain q in the house r.

n He here speaks; Either 1. of the same Image, which is supposed to be made of wood, and then covered with some Mettal: Or 2. of another sort of Images made of VVood, as the former might be made of Iron. It is not material which way you understand it. o He measureth and marketh that portion of VVood by his Rule and Line, of which the Idol is to be made. p In the same comely shape and proportions which are in a Living Man, whom he designs to represent as exactly as is possible. q Or sit or dwell. VVhich implies either 1. that it cannot stir out of its place: Or 2. that when the Image is made, it is set up and fixed in its appointed place. r Either in the Temple appointed for it: Or in the dwelling house of him that made it; that he and his Family might more frequently give VVorship to it, and might receive Protection from it, as Idolaters vainly imagined.

14. He heweth him down cedars, and taketh the cypress and the oak s, which he ‖ strengtheneth for himself among the trees of the forest t: he planteth an ash, and the rain doth nourish it.

s VVhich afford the best and most durable Timber. t The sence of the VVords thus rendred, is, That he planteth, and with care and diligence improveth, those Trees, among and above all the Trees of the Forest, that he or his Posterity may thence have Materials for their Images, and those things which belong to them. And this sence seems to be favoured by the following clause, wherein it is said, He planteth an Ash for this very reason: Or the sence may be this, VVhich he suffers to grow to greater strength and largeness, than other Trees of the Forest, that they may be better and fitter for his use. Heb. And he strengtheneth himself, &c. And he useth all his strength among the Trees of the Forest, in planting such as are proper for this end; in walking hither and thither to survey which is the best of them; in hewing them down, and in other things relating to them.

15. Then shall it be for a man to burn: for he will take thereof and warm himself: yea, he kindleth it, and baketh bread; yea, he maketh a god; and worshippeth it; he maketh it a graven image, and falleth down thereto u.

u Having related the practices of Idolaters, he now discovers the vanity and folly of them, that he maketh his fire and his god of the same Materials, distinguished only by the Art of Man.

16. He burneth part thereof in the fire: with part thereof he eateth flesh x: he rosteth rost, and is satisfied; yea, he warmeth himself, and saith, Aha, I am warm, I have seen the fire y.

x He dresseth Flesh for his eating. y I have felt the warmth of it. Seeing is oft put for other Senses, as Feeling, Hearing, &c. as hath been oft observed before.

17. And the residue thereof he maketh a god, even his graven image: he falleth down unto it, and worshippeth it, and prayeth unto it, and saith, Deliver me, for thou art my god.

18. * They have not known, nor understood z; for he a hath † shut their eyes, that they cannot see; and their hearts, that they cannot understand.

* Chap. 45. 20. † Heb. daubed.

z This sheweth that they want common discretion, and have not the understanding of a Man in them. a To wit, God; who is easily understood, and is oft expressed by this pronoun, He; and to whom this very act is frequently ascribed in other places of Scripture: And therefore Men need not be shie in ascribing it to God here. Which yet is to be soberly understood; not as if God did make Men wicked, but only permits them so to be, and orders, and over-rules their wickedness to his own glorious Ends. And such passages as these are added in such cases, to give an account of the prodigious madness of Sinners herein; because, as they wilfully shut their own Eyes, and harden their own Hearts, so God judicially blinds and hardens them, and sends strong Delusions upon them, and gives them up to believe Lies, and then it is no wonder if they fall into such dotages.

19. And none † considereth in his heart b, neither is there knowledge nor understanding to say, I have burnt part of it in the fire, yea, also I have baked bread upon the coals thereof: I have rosted flesh and eaten it, and shall I make the residue thereof an abomination? shall I fall down to † the stock of a tree?

† Heb. setteth to his heart.

† Heb. that which comes of a tree.

b Whereby he implies, That the true Cause of this, as well as of other absurd and brutish practices of Sinners, is the neglect of serious and impartial consideration of things.

20. He feedeth of ashes c: * a deceived heart d hath turned him aside e, that he cannot deliver his soul f, nor say, Is there not a lie in ‖ my right hand g?

* Hos. 4. 12. ‖ [Or at]

c Which is an unsavoury, unprofitable, and pernicious Food: and no less unsatisfying, uncomfortable, and mischievous is the worship of Idols. d A Mind corrupted and deceived by long custom, deep prejudice, gross errour, and especially by his own Lusts. e From the way of Truth, from the knowledge and worship of the true God, unto this brutish Idolatry. f From the snares and dangers of Idolatry. This cannot is to be understood morally, so as to note the great difficulty, but not the utter impossibility of it; for if Idolaters would consider things, they might be convinced of, and turned from that gross way of Wickedness, as is implied from the foregoing Verse. g What is this Idol, which I have made with my right hand, (i. e.) with all my strength, as was said before; the right hand being the strongest, and the chief Instrument of this and other actions; which I set at my right hand, as the true God is said in Scripture to be at the right hand of his people, Psal. 16. 8. & 109. 31. & 121. 5. Which I highly honour, for the most honourable place was on the right hand, as is known; to which I look and trust for relief and assistance, which God in Scripture is said to afford to his people, by being at and holding of their right hand, Psal. 73. 23. & 110. 5. What, I say, is this Idol? Is it not a lie, which though it seems and pretends to be something, and to be a god, yet in truth, is nothing but vanity and falshood, deceiving all that put their trust in it?

21. ¶ Remember these h, O Jacob and Israel; for thou art my servant; I have formed thee, thou art my servant: O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten of me i.

h Either these Men: Or, which comes to one, these things, the deep ignorance and stupidity of Idolaters; which may be a warning to thee. i I will not forget nor forsake thee; and therefore thou shalt have no need of Idols: Or, as the ancient Interpreters and divers others render it, do not forget me; what I am, and what I have done, and can and will do for Thee; the forgetting whereof is the ready way to Idolatry.

22. I

22. I have blotted out as a thick cloud k, thy transgressions, and as a cloud, thy sins: return l unto me, for I have redeemed thee m.

k As the Sun commonly dissolveth, or the VVind scattereth the thickest and blackest Cloud, so as there is no remnant, nor appearance of it left. l From thine Idolatry, and other wicked practices. m Therefore thou art mine, and obliged to return and adhere to me.

* Psal. 96. 11, 12. Chap. 42. 10. & 49. 13 Jer. 51. 48.

23. * Sing, O ye heavens: for the LORD hath done it: shout, ye lower parts of the earth: break forth into singing, ye mountains, O forest, and every tree therein n: for the LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himself in Israel.

n By such invitations to the senseless Creatures to praise God with and for his People, he signifies the transcendent greatness of this Mercy and Deliverance, sufficient to make even the Stones if it were possible, to break forth into God's Praises; and withal, that as the brute Creatures were Sufferers by Man's sin, so they should receive benefit by Man's Redemption.

* Chap. 43. 1. * Job 9. 8. Psal. 104. 2. Chap. 40. 22. & 42. 5. & 45. 12. & 51. 13.

24. Thus saith the LORD thy redeemer, and * he that formed thee from the womb o, I am the LORD, that maketh all things, * that stretcheth forth the heavens alone, that spreadeth abroad the earth by my self p:

o Of which Phrase see above on ver. 2. p And therefore I can save thee without the help of any other gods or men.

25. That frustrateth the tokens of the liars q, and maketh diviners mad r, that turneth wise men backward s, and maketh their knowledge foolish:

q Of the Magicians, and Astrologers, and Sorcerers, who were numerous, and greatly employed and esteemed in Babylon, Isa. 47. 12, 13. Dan. 2. 2, 48. and who had foretold the long continuance and prosperity of the Chaldean Empire. But, saith God, I will confute their tokens or predictions, and prove them to be Liars. r With grief for the disappointment of their hopes and predictions, and their disgrace and loss which followed it. s Stopping their way, thwarting and blasting their designs, so as they can proceed no further, but are forced to retreat and take new Counsels, and giving them up to such counsels and courses, as are foolish and pernicious to themselves.

26. That confirmeth the word of his servant t, and performeth the counsel of his messengers; that saith to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be inhabited, and to the cities of Judah, Ye shall be built, and I will raise up + the decayed places thereof.

+ Heb. wasts.

t Of his Servants, the Prophets, as appears from the next Clause, which answers to this, where he useth the plural number, his messengers; Isaiah and other Prophets, whom God sent upon this Errand, to foretel the destruction of Babylon, and the Redemption of his People.

* Chap. 50. 2.

27. That saith * to the deep, Be dry, and I will dry up thy rivers u.

u That with a word can and will dry up the Sea (which in Scripture is very frequently called the deep, as Psal. 107. 24. Isa. 63. 13. Jonah 2. 3. &c.) and Rivers, and remove all impediments, and make the VVay plain, that my People may return. Some think these words relate to that stratagem of Cyrus, whereby he diverted, and in a great measure dryed up the River Euphrates, and made it passable for his Army. But he seems rather to allude to that great Action of God's drying up the Red Sea and Jordan, to give passage to the Israelites.

1. THus saith the LORD to his anointed a, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have ‖ holden b, to subdue nations c before him: and I will * loose the loyns of kings d to open before him the two-leaved gates e, and the gates shall not be shut.

And they are thus called by way of allusion to the practice of the Jews, whose Kings were frequently Anointed, 1 Sam. 10. 1. and 16. 13. &c. b Or, Strengthned: whom I will powerfully assist, teaching his Hands to war, as the Phrase is, Psal. 18. 34. supporting and directing his right Hand to strike home. c The Babylonians, and those other Nations which were confederate with them, and fought for them, as may be gathered from Jer. 51. 9. d I will weaken them, for a Man's strength consists much in his Loyns, and receiveth some advantage by the girding of his Loyns: Or, I will take away their Girdle, which was about their Loyns; to wit, their Power and Authority, whereof that was an Ensign, of which, see on Job 12 18. Isa. 22. 21. e The great and magnificent Gates of their Cities and Palaces, which shall be opened to him as Conquerour.

Whereas Persons or People are sometimes delivered from their Troubles by unjust Courses; this shall be effected with Righteousness, both on God's part, who will hereby assert his own Justice and Faithfulness to his people; and on Cyrus his part, who will do a most righteous and worthy Action in rescuing a righteous and oppressed Nation from cruel Tyrants and Oppressors. u This great work of Salvation and Righteousness; whereof, though Cyrus is the Instrument, I am the chief Author.

9. Wo unto him that striveth with his maker x: let the potsherd strive with the potsherds of the earth y: * shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it, What makest thou? or thy work z, He hath no hands a?

* chap. 29.16. Jer. 18.6. Rom. 9.20.

x This wo is denounced; Either 1. against those Jews who hearing this and many other Prophecies, and Promises of their deliverance out of Captivity, and yet continuing in Captivity, were ever prone to distrust God, and to murmure at him for punishing them so grievously, and for not making more speed to deliver them. Or, 2. against the Babylonians, the great opposers of Cyrus, and of the deliverance of God's people, whom they were resolved to keep in Bondage, in spight of God and Men. And therefore, as God here makes many glorious Promises to Cyrus, in order to this work, so he pronounceth a Curse upon them, who should indeavour to hinder it; and admonisheth the Babylonians, That they did not only fight against Cyrus, a Man like themselves, but against God, the Maker and Governour of the World. For what Nebuchadnezzar spoke with respect to those three Jews, Dan. 3. 15. the Babylonians spoke in their Hearts, in reference to the People of the Jews, Who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands? y Contend, if you please, with your fellow Creatures, but not with your Creator. z He turneth his Speech to the Potter, of whom he spake in the Third Person in the foregoing Clause; such sudden Changes of Persons being usual in Prophetical Writings. a The Potter that made me, had no hands, (i. e.) no ability or skill to make good work.

10. Wo unto him that saith unto his father, What begettest thou? or unto the woman, What hast thou brought forth b?

b As it were an absurd and impudent thing, for a Child to quarrel with his Parents, either simply for begetting him, or for begetting him of this or that Sex, contrary to his desire; no better is it for any persons to quarrel with God the Maker and Father of all things, as God is called, 1 Cor. 8. 6. for disposing of them and their Affairs, by his Providence, as he sees fit, and otherwise than they desire or expect; as the Jews quarrelled with God, for bringing them into Captivity; and the Babylonians, for Translating the Empire from them to the Persians.

11. Thus saith the LORD, the holy One of Israel, and his maker c; † Ask me of things to come concerning my sons, and concerning the work of my hands command ye me d.

† Heb. do they ask me of things to come concerning my Sons, and concerning the work of my hands will ye command me?

c Israel's Maker, who not only Created him, as I did all others, but made him a new Creature, and a peculiar people to my self. d The words thus rendred, contain a concession or permission; and the Sence may be this, Although the Potter doth not give an account to the Clay, nor Parents to their Children; yet I will so far condescend to you, as to be at your Command in this matter, to give you an account of these great Actions of mine, for which you quarrel with me. As for the Expression, Command ye me, though it seem to be harsh, yet there are instances in Scripture of such wonderful Condescentions, as when it is said, that The Lord will make his People in Heaven to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them, Luk. 12.37. But the words seem to be better rendred interrogatively, as they are in the Margent, and by some other Interpreters, Do you, or, will you ask me of things to come concerning my Sons, and concerning the work of mine hands will ye command me? Will you not allow me that Liberty which your selves take, of disposing of my own Children and Works, as I see fit? Must I give you an account of these matters? Will you set Bounds to me by your commands, that I shall do this, and not that according to your good pleasure? This is intolerable boldness in you; and yet I am able to give a good account of my Actions. And the Account is given in the following Verse.

12. I have made the earth, and created man upon it e: I, even my hands have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded f.

e They are wholly and solely my Creatures, and therefore absolutely at my disposal. f I have commanded them to be, or made them by my Commands, or the Word of my Power: Compare Psal. 148. 5.

13. I have raised him g up in righteousness h, and I will ‖ direct all his ways i: he shall * build my city, and he shall let go my captives, * not for price nor reward k, saith the LORD of hosts.

‖ Or, make straight. * 2 Chron. 36. 22, 23. Ezra 1. 1. chap. 44. 28. * chap. 52. 3.

g Cyrus, who was named before, ver. 1. h Not in a way of absolute Soveraignty, as I might have done, but most justly, to punish the wicked Babylonians, to plead the Cause of the innocent oppressed Ones, to manifest my own Righteousness, and Truth, and Goodness. i Guide and assist him in all his Travels and Marches, in all his Attempts and Battles, and Sieges, crowning him with success in all his undertakings. k Freely without requiring any Ransom for or from them, as is usual in such cases. Such an exact Prediction of these things which depended wholly upon the Mind and Will of Cyrus, is mentioned here, as an infallible Evidence of the certainty of God's foreknowledge, and of his being the only true God; because Idols could discover no such things, at such a distance of time.

14. Thus saith the LORD, The labour of Egypt l, and merchandise of Ethiopia, ‖ and of the Sabeans, men of stature m shall come over unto thee n, and they shall be thine, they shall come after thee, in chains they shall come over o: and they * shall fall down unto thee, they shall make supplication unto thee p, saying, Surely God is in thee q, and * there is none else, there is no God r.

‖ Or, and the Sabeans, men of stature, so Gr. * chap. 60.14. * 1 Cor. 14.25. Ver. 5.

l The wealth gotten by their labour. m A tall and strong people, who yet shall use their strength not to oppose thee but to serve thee, and to bring their labour to thee. n Either. 1. To thee O Cyrus: Because thou wast so generous as to dismiss my people freely, I will give thee another, and a better recompence, even the labour of Egypt, &c. Or, 2. to thee, O my City, or my Captivity or Captive People. For it is not to be neglected, that there are no less than six pronouns in this verse, all which are of the feminine gender; which seems not to agree to Cyrus. It is true which is objected by the most learned Author of this part of the English Annotations, that the Scripture oft speaks of States and Kingdoms in the Feminine gender; but when it speaks of any particular King or Emperour, it constantly speaks of him in the Masculine gender, as it doth of Cyrus in this very Chapter, ver. 1. and elsewhere. And thus the sence of the place seems to be this, Jerusalem shall not only be rebuilt, but the Wealth and Glory of other Countreys shall be brought to it again, as it was in former times. Which although it was in part verified in Jerusalem, yet it was much more fully accomplished in the Church of the Gospel, which is oft expressed in Scripture under the name of Jerusalem; and in the Accession of the Gentiles to that Church which began in Jerusalem, and from thence spread it self into all the parts of the World. And this sence seems best to agree with the latter part of this and with the following verse, as we shall see. o They shall be taken captive by thee, and willingly submit themselves to thee. Which was accomplished in the Conversion of the Gentiles, whose Subjection to God's Church is oft expressed in Scripture under such Metaphors as this; as Psal. 45. 5, and 149. 8, &c. Psal. 68. 18. compared with Eph. 4. 8. p To obtain thy favour and society. q Or, with thee. We plainly discern that God is on thy side, or in the midst of thee; and therefore we desire to joyn our selves with thee. r We are now convinced, that thou art the only true God, and that Idols are vain and empty nothings. Which was but very obscurely fulfilled in Cyrus his time, but was most evidently and eminently accomplished in the days of the Messiah, of whom Cyrus was a Type; as also this deliverance of the Jews from Babylon by Cyrus was a Type of the Redemption of God's People by Christ.

15. Verily thou art a god s that hidest * thy self t, O God of Israel the Saviour.

* chap. 8. 17.

s These are the words of the Prophet drawn from him by the contemplation of the great and various works and dis-dispensations of God towards his Church, and in the World. t To wit, from thy people for a season: Thy counsels are deep and incomprehensible, thy ways and carriages are past finding out, and full of beautiful variety: Sometimes thou hidest thy face, and withdrawest thy help from thy people, and sometimes thou dost shew thy self to be their God and Saviour, as it follows. And therefore it is meet that we should patiently wait for the accomplishment of these glorious things here promised to us. And this admonition is most fitly inserted here, to prevent the mistakes of Gods people, and to intimate, that these promises were not to be speedily executed, but that they must expect and prepare for many and sharp afflictions, before that time should come, which yet should end in their Salvation.

16 They u shall be ashamed, and also confounded all of them: they shall go to confusion together that are * makers x of Idols.

u The Idolatrous Gentiles, as it is explained in the end of the verse, opposed to Israel in the beginning of the next verse. x Either the artificers, or the chief masters who set them on work, and consequently all their Worshippers; altho the Makers being most guilty, and the cause of the sins of others, might justly expect an higher degree of confusion.

Or by] 17 But Israel shall be saved in * the LORD with an everlasting Salvation y: ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded world without end.

y Not for a short time, as it was in the days of the Judges and of the Kings, under whom their dangers and calamities did frequently return upon them; but unto all ages, as it follows. Whence it appears, that he speaks not only nor chiefly for their Deliverance out of Babylon, which was far from being compleat or perpetual, as appears both from Scripture, as Ezra 9. 8. and elsewhere, and from other Authors; but of their Redemption by Christ, by which this was truly and fully verified, unto a great number of Israelites after the Flesh, and especially unto the mystical, Gods Church and People, who are frequently called in Scripture by that name; as the Ordinances and Priviledges of the Gospel, are commonly described in the Old Testament, by expressions borrowed from the Levitical dispensation. And that this is the meaning of the place, is evident from ver. 22. wherein all the ends of the Earth are said to be sharers in this Salvation.

Chap.* 42. 5. 18 For thus saith the LORD * that created the heavens, God himself that formed the earth, and made it, he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited, * I am the LORD, and there is none else z.

* Ver. 5.

z This description of God is here added, Either 1. To detect the Vanity of Idols, by asserting, that none was to be owned as the true God, besides that one God who made the Heavens and the Earth, and the Inhabitants thereof: Or, 2. To demonstrate God's Sufficiency to fulfil all these glorious promises made to his Church, because he made the World out of nothing, and upholds it by the word of his Power; and withal to discover Gods goodness to mankind, inasmuch as he did not create the Earth in vain, but for the use and comfort of men, that it might be a fit habitation for them: whence it was easie to infer, that God would much more be gracious to his own People.

Deut.* 30.11. Chap. 48. 16. 19 I have not spoken in * secret, in a dark place of the earth a: I said not unto the seed of Jacob, Seek ye me in vain b: I the LORD speak righteousness, I declare things that are right c.

a The Heathen Idols deliver their Oracles darkly and doubtfully, in obscure Cells and Caverns of the Earth, or out of the bellies of their Priests: but I have delivered my Oracles to Israel publickly and plainly, as one that was neither afraid nor ashamed to utter my mind, lest I should be convinced of folly and falsehood; which was the case of Idols. b Serve and Worship me for nought. As I appointed them work, so I promised, and from time to time have given, and shall give them, abundant recompence for their Service. Whereas the Gentiles seek to their Idols in vain, for they can do them no good, as is observed in the next verse. c I require nothing of my people which is not highly just and good; whereas the Idols commanded their Worshippers to do many sinful and shameful things, even in their Worship, as is notoriously known.

20 Assemble your selves and come: draw near together d ye that are escaped of the nations e: * they have no knowledge f that set up g the wood of their graven Image, and pray unto a god that cannot save.

Chap.* 44. 9, 17, 18.

d To debate the business with me concerning the Divinity of your Idols, and hear what I have said, and am now about to say again in that matter. e The remnant of the Gentiles, which shall survive those great and many destructions, which I am bringing upon the Heathen Nations, for their abominable Idolatries and other wickedness. Let these dreadful judgments upon others, and Gods singular mercy in sparing you, awaken you to a more impartial and serious consideration of this point, and cast off those Idols, which have now discovered their own vanity and inability, to help those who serve them and trust in them. f They hereby discover their deep ignorance and stupidity. g In an high place where it may be seen and worshipped.

21 Tell ye, and bring them near, yea, let them take counsel together h: * who hath declared this i from ancient time? who hath told it from that time? have not I the LORD? and * there is no God else beside me, a just God and a Saviour k, there is none beside me.

* Chap. 41. 22. & 43. 9. & 44. 7. & 46. 10. & 48. 14.
* Ver. 5, 14, 18.

h To maintain the cause of their Idols. i This great work of which I have spoken, concerning Babylons destruction and the redemption of God's people. k Whereas the Gods of the Heathens are neither Just nor Saviours to their people, but wicked, and the Authors and Abetters of all sorts of Wickedness; and so far from being either able or willing to save their Worshippers, that they are the chief occasion of their utter destruction.

22 Look unto me and be ye saved all the ends of the earth l: for I am God, and there is none else.

l Upon these Considerations, I advise all people upon earth, from one end to the other, to cast away their Idols, and to turn their eyes and hearts to me, expecting Salvation from me, and from me only; and their labour shall not be in vain; for they shall be saved: the Imperative being put for the Future, as Gen. 42. 18. and oft elsewhere. And this is not only an exhortation to the Gentiles to turn from Idols to God, but a Prediction that they shall turn to him and look upon Christ, who shall be the Author of Salvation to all that obey him, whether Jews or Gentiles, which is confirmed by the following verse.

23 I have sworn by my self m, the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness n, and shall not * return o, that unto me every † knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear p.

* Chap. 55. 11.
† Rom. 14. 11. Phil. 2. 10.

m Which is the highest and most solemn Oath that is possible, Heb. 6. 13. and therefore signifies, that the matter here sworn is of an extraordinary importance. n It is not a vain word rashly uttered, and afterwards never remembred nor observed, but what I sincerely speak, and will most faithfully and infallibly perform. o To wit, unto me void, or without effect, as this phrase is more fully delivered, Isa. 55. 11. It is a metaphor from Ambassadours, who sometimes return to their Princes without any success in their business. p Not only the Jews, but a people of all Nations shall worship me, and submit to my Laws; which is signified by an outward act, the bowing of the knee, which is a posture of reverence and subjection; and by one eminent part of Gods worship, which is swearing by his Name.

24 ‖ Surely, shall one say q, In the LORD r have I † righteousness s, and strength t: even to him shall men come u, and all that are incensed against him shall be ashamed x.

‖ Or, surely he shall say of me, In the LORD is all righteousness & strength.
† Heb. Righteousness.

q Or, shall he say, each or every one of those, whom he now said, that they should bow their knees to God, and swear by him, ver. 23. Or, it shall be said, such active verbs being oft used impersonally. r By or from God alone, or the Messiah, who is the true Jehovah as well as man. s To justifie me from all things from which I could not be justified by the Law of Moses, as is said, Act. 13. 39. This plainly points us to the Messiah, whose very name is, the Lord our Righteousness, Jer. 23. 6. and whose great business it was to bring in everlasting Righteousness, Dan. 9. 24. and who is made unto us of God Righteousness, 1 Cor. 1. 30. t Support and assistance to bear all my burdens, and overcome all my enemies, and perform all my duties. The sense is, The Gentiles shall expect and obtain from Christ both Justification, or forgiveness of sins by his blood, and Sanctification by his Spirit. u The Gentiles shall come to God and Christ, either 1. By constraint, or necessity to be judged by him at the last day: Or, 2. willingly by prayer to seek, and by faith to receive, Righteousness and Strength from him: Which seems better to agree with the foregoing clause, which speaks of true believers only. Coming to Christ is put for believing on him, Mat. 11. 28. John 5. 40. and 6. 35, 36, 37. and else where. x Or, but (as this particle is oft rendred) all that are, &c. But all his implacable enemies shall be brought to shame and punishment.

25 In the LORD shall all the seed of Israel y * be justified z, and shall glory ‖.

y All Iſraelites indeed, whether Jews or Gentiles; all Believers, who are frequently called Gods Iſrael in Scripture, as Pſal. 24. 6. Rom. 9. 6. and 11. 26. Gal. 6. 16. z Acquitted both from real guilt before God, and from all falſe Aſperſions before the world; for this juſtification of the true Iſrael is oppoſed to their enemies being aſhamed, ver. 24. which ſeems to deſign their publick ſhame and condition before God and Men. ‖ Shall not only receive him, but ſhall rejoyce and triumph in him as their God and portion.

So the meaning of this and the foregoing Verſe, is this, That neither the Babylonians, nor their Idols, could ſave either themſelves or one another; but both are bowed down, and gone into Captivity together.

6 * They laviſh gold out of the bag, and weigh ſilver in the ballance, and hire a goldſmith, and he maketh it a god o: * they fall down, yea, they worſhip.

* Chap. 40. 19. & 41. 6. & 44. 12. Jer. 10. 3. * Chap. 44. 17.

o Let us ſuppoſe, a god made with the greateſt Coſt and Art.

7 They bear him upon the ſhoulder, they carry him p, and ſet him in his place, and he ſtandeth; from his place ſhall he not remove q: yea, * one ſhall cry unto him, yet can he not anſwer, nor ſave him out of his trouble.

* Chap. 45. 20.

p Either 1. in pomp upon ſolemn occaſions: Or, 2. from that place where he is made, unto that place where they intend to ſet him up, as it is expreſſed in the following words. q Or rather, he cannot remove. He can ſtir neither hand nor foot to help his People.

8 Remember this r, and ſhew your ſelves men s: * bring it again to mind t, O ye tranſgreſſors u.

* Chap. 44. 19.

r Conſider theſe things which I now ſpeak, O ye Iſraelites. s Act like reaſonable Creatures, and be not ſo brutiſh, as to worſhip your own Works: Be ſo wiſe and couragious, as to withſtand all Sollicitations to Idolatry. t Think of this again and again. u You who have been guilty of this fooliſh Sin; and therefore are obliged to take the better heed, that you do not relapſe into it again.

9 ‖ Remember the former things of old, for I am God, and there is none elſe, I am God, and there is none like me.

‖ What I have done for you, and in the World, my evident Predictions of future things juſtified by the event; and thoſe other miraculous Works whereby I have abundantly proved my Divinity.

10 Declaring the end from the beginning x, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, ſaying, * My counſel ſhall ſtand y, and I will do all my pleaſure:

* Pſal. 33. 11. Prov. 19. 21. & 21. 30. Heb. 6. 17.

x Foretelling from the beginning of the World, or from the beginning of your Nation, thoſe future Events which ſhould happen in ſucceeding Ages, even to the end of the World, or to the end of your Commonwealth; for ſuch Predictions we find delivered by Moſes, the firſt Founder of their Common-wealth. y As I will not, ſo no other Power can diſappoint my Purpoſes and Predictions.

11 Calling a ravenous bird z from the Eaſt a, † the man that executeth my counſel b from a far country c; yea I have ſpoken it, I will alſo bring it to paſs, I have purpoſed it, I will alſo do it.

† Heb. the man of my counſel.

z Cyrus called a bird for his ſwiftneſs and great expedition, and ravenous for his fierceneſs, and victorioufneſs over his Enemies. a From Perſia, as Iſa. 41. 2. b Concerning the deliverance of my People, and the deſtruction of their cruel oppreſſors, the Babylonians. c From Perſia, which was far from Babylon, but much farther from Judea.

12 Hearken unto me, ye ſtout hearted d, that are far from righteouſneſs e.

d Or, Ye whoſe hearts are proud or hard or ſtubborn. He ſpeaks either, 1. To the Babylonians, you who are ſtout againſt God, and ſay or think that neither God nor any man can deliver my people out of your hands: Or rather 2. To the Houſe of Jacob, expreſſed ver. 3. Where he beſpeaks them in the ſame Words here uſed, hearken to me; and to whom alone he directeth his ſpeech in this whole Chapter; for though he ſpeaketh of the Babylonians, yet he doth not ſpeak to them; and to whom the Prophet, for the moſt part, turneth his ſpeech in all his Prophecies, unleſs where there is ſomething in the Text or Context, which determineth it to ſome other Perſon or People. And this very crime of ſtoutneſs, or hardneſs of heart is moſt juſtly and moſt frequently charged upon the Jews, by their own Prophets every where, becauſe of their groſs contempt of, and incorrigibleneſs under, all Gods Words and Works. And the Prophet ſpeaks this, either to the Jews of his Generation; Or rather to that Generation which was carried Captive to Babylon, whoſe ſtout-heartedneſs is particularly noted and reproved, Zech. 7. 11, 12. Compare Mal. 3. 13, 14, 15. e That are not only void of, but enemies to Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs, that give up your ſelves to wickedneſs, that deſpiſe my counſels, and promiſes, and threatnings.

13 I bring near my righteouſneſs f: it ſhall not be far off g, and my ſalvation ſhall not tarry; and I will place ſalvation in Zion h for Iſrael my glory i.

f Though you are moſt unrighteous perſons, and have given me juſt cauſe to make you to know my breach of Promiſe, as I threatned in the like caſe, Numb. 14. 34. Yet I will ſhew my ſelf to be a righteous and faithful God, making ing good my promiſe of delivering you out of Babylon after ſeventy years; and though you think the time long, and are apt to diſtruſt the thing it ſelf, yet it ſhall come, and that ſpeedily, I will bring it near, or cauſe it to approach, or come unto you, and as it follows, it ſhall not tarry beyond the appointed time. g My work of ſaving you from the Babyloniſh Captivity. h I will bring my People from Babylon to Zion, and there I will ſave them from all their Enemies. i In whom I will once again glory as my People, and the illuſtrious monuments of my glorious Wiſdom, and Power, and Truth, and Goodneſs; whom I will make a great and glorious People, though now they are mean and contemptible, and in whom I will once more ſettle my glorious Preſence and Ordinances.

CHAP. XLVII.

1 COme down a and ſit in the duſt b: O virgin daughter of Babylon c, ſit on the ground: there is no throne d, O daughter of the Caldeans: for thou ſhalt no more be called e tender and delicate.

a From thy Throne, as it follows. b Either neceſſarily, becauſe thou ſhalt have no higher ſeat: Or, voluntarily, as Mourners do, bewailing thine approaching calamities. c So called either, 1. becauſe ſhe had not yet been humbled and conquered: Or rather, 2. becauſe ſhe was tender and delicate, as the next clauſe informeth us. d To wit, for thee. The empire is taken away from thee, and tranſlated to the Perſians. e Either be reputed ſo: Or rather be ſo: for to be called is frequently put for to be, as hath been divers times noted. Thou ſhalt be reduced to great hardſhips and miſeries.

2 Take the Milſtones f and grind meal g, uncover thy locks h: make bare the leg: uncover the thigh i, paſs over the Rivers.

f Betake thy ſelf to the Milſtones; as we commonly ſay, take thy bed, or betake thy ſelf to thy bed. The meaning is, Thou ſhalt be brought down to the baſeſt kind of Slavery, which grinding at the Mill was eſteemed; of which ſee on Exod. 11. 5. Judg. 16. 21. Job 31. 10 Lament. 5. 13. For this work was not performed by Horſes, as now it is, but by the labour of Slaves and Captives. g Grind breadcorn into meal for thy Maſters uſe. Such metonymical expreſſions, we find Iſa. 28. 28. Hoſe. 8. 7. and elſewhere. h Or, thine hair. Take off the Ornaments wherewith ſuch women as were free, and of good quality, uſed to cover and dreſs their heads. This and the following paſſages, though delivered in the form of a Command, are only Predictions of what they ſhould be forced to do or ſuffer, as appears from the next verſe. i Gird up thy garments cloſe and ſhort about thee, that thou mayeſt be fit for ſervice, and for travelling on foot, and as it follows, for paſſing over thoſe Rivers, through which thou wilt be conſtrained to wade, in the way to the Land of thy Captivity.

3 Thy nakedneſs ſhall be uncovered k, yea thy ſhame ſhall be ſeen l: I will take vengeance m, and I will not meet thee as a man n.

k Either, 1. for want of raiment to cover it: Or, rather, 2. by thine Enemies in way of ſcorn and contumely, by comparing this place with Ezek. 16. 37. & 23. 29. l Upon thee for thy many and great injuries done to my people. m As a man meets his Enemy in the field, to contend with thee. n With moderation and gentleneſs, as thoſe men who have not quite put off Humanity, uſe to do, but like a Lyon tearing thee to pieces, to which God in ſuch caſe compareth himſelf, as Hoſe. 5. 14. & 13. 7, 8. Compare Hoſe. 11. 4.

4 As for our redeemer, the LORD of hoſts is his Name, the Holy one of Iſrael o.

o According to this Verſion, the Prophet inſerteth this paſſage in the midſt of this Prophecy againſt Babylon, as Jacob inſerteth the like paſſage in the midſt of his Bleſſings and Prophecies concerning his Children, Gen. 49. 18. And this may be here interpoſed, either 1. As the reaſon why the Judgment here denounced ſhould be certainly inflicted, becauſe he who had undertaken it was the Lord of Hoſts, and therefore able to effect it, and the Holy One, and the Redeemer of Iſrael, whom the Babylonians had cruelly oppreſſed, whoſe quarrel God would avenge upon them, and whom he had determined and promiſed to deliver out of their hands: Or, 2. As a pathetical exclamation or acclamation of Gods People, for this wonderful work of breaking the ſtaff of their Oppreſſors, which they here aſcribe to God, as he is their God and Redeemer, whom here they make their boaſt of, and whom they celebrate for this glorious deliverance. But becauſe theſe words, as for, are not in the Hebrew Text, and therefore another word may be as conveniently ſupplied, this verſe may be, and is by ſome learned Interpreters, otherwiſe rendred, and joyned with the foregoing words thus, I will take vengeance, and I will not meet thee as a man, ſaith our Redeemer, whoſe Name is the Lord of Hoſts, the Holy One of Iſrael. For the word, ſaith or ſaying is frequently underſtood, and therefore ſupplied by Tranſlators, as 1 King. 20. 34. Pſal. 27. 8. & 105. 15. and in this very Prophecy, as Iſa. 5. 9. & 45. 14. and elſewhere.

5 Sit thou ſilent p, and get thee into darkneſs q, O daughter of the Caldeans: for thou ſhalt no more be called the Lady of Kingdoms r.

p Through grief and ſhame, and as mourners uſe to do, Job 2. 13. Ceaſe thy vaunting, and inſolent ſpeeches: thou canſt ſay nothing for thine own juſtification. q Thou ſhalt go into an obſcure, diſconſolate, and calamitous condition. r The chief and glory of all Kingdoms, as Iſa. 13. 19. the moſt large and potent and glorious Empire of the World, as thou haſt been.

6 I was wrath with my people: I have polluted mine inheritance s, and given them into thine hand t: thou didſt ſhew them no mercy u, upon the ancient haſt thou very heavily laid the yoke x.

s I caſt them away as an unclean thing; I ſtained their glory; I removed them from the Holy Land, and from the place of my preſence and worſhip, which alone made them an Holy and peculiar people; I baniſhed them into a polluted Land, amongſt uncircumciſed and unclean perſons, by whom they were many ways defiled; I rejected them from being my people, and ſo they were in my ſight no better than the reſt of the Heathen Nations. t To puniſh them, and deal with them as thou ſaweſt fit. u Thou haſt exceeded the bounds of thy Commiſſion, and inſtead of that compaſſion, which humanity teacheth men to ſhew to ſuch as are in miſery, thou didſt add to their afflictions. x Who beſides their common calamity, were afflicted with the miſeries of old age, and therefore did require both pity and reverence.

7 And thou ſayeſt y, I ſhall be * a Lady for ever: ſo that thou diddeſt not lay theſe things to thy heart, neither didſt remember the latter end of it z. * Rev. 18. 7.

y Thy cruel uſages of my People, and the heavy Judgments which thou hadſt reaſon to expect for them. z Of that Lady, or of Babylon, and her Glory and Empire, or of thy ſelf; here being a ſudden change of the perſon, of which I have noted many examples in this Prophet. The ſenſe is: Thou waſt beſotted with the ſenſe of thy preſent felicity, and didſt not conſider, as thy duty and common diſcretion obliged thee, what might and was likely to befall thee afterward; thou didſt neither expect a change, nor prepare for it.

8 Therefore hear now this, thou that art given to pleaſures, that dwelleſt careleſly, that ſayeſt in thine heart, I am a, and none elſe beſides me b, I ſhall not ſit as a widow, neither ſhall I know the loſs of children c.

a I am independent, and ſelf-ſufficient and unchangeable, as that phraſe implies, which therefore is appropriated to God, Iſa. 41. 4. and 43. 10. and elſewhere. The Prophet doth not here uſe the very phraſe which the Babylonians uſed, but expreſſeth their ſenſe in a Scripture Phraſe. b Which is not either ſubject to me, or far inferiour to me in Power and Glory, ſo that in compariſon of me it may be ſaid not to be, becauſe it diſappears like Stars at the preſence of the Sun. c I ſhall never want either a King or People to defend me from all dangers.

9 But theſe two * things ſhall come to thee in a moment in one day; the loſs of children, and widowhood; they ſhall come upon thee in their perfection d, for the multitude of thy ſorceries, and for the great abundance of thine inchantments e. * Chap. 51. 19.

d In the higheſt degree. Thy King and Kingdom ſhall be utterly and eternally deſtroyed. e For thy ſuperſtitious and magical practices, which were very frequent there, as we ſee below, ver. 12, 13. and as was obſerved before. Or, as it is in the Hebrew, In the multitude of thy Sorceries, &c. in the midſt of, and notwithſtanding all thy Diabolical Artifices, whereby thou thinkeſt to foreſee any dangers, and to ſecure thy ſelf from them.

10 For thou haſt truſted in thy wickedneſs f: thou haſt ſaid, None ſeeth me g, Thy wiſdom and thy knowledge h, it hath ‖ perverted thee i, and thou haſt ſaid in thine heart, I am, and none elſe beſides me k.

‖ Or, cauſed thee to turn aſide.

f Confidently expecting to preſerve thy ſelf by theſe and other wicked Arts and Policies. g My Counſels are ſo deeply and cunningly laid, that God himſelf can neither diſcover nor prevent the Execution of them. h In State-

Policy, and the Arts mentioned above and below. i Hath misled thee into the way of Transgression and Perdition. k Which was said, ver. 8. and is here repeated, to note their intollerable Arrogancy and Self-confidence.

11 Therefore shall evil come upon thee l, thou shalt not know † from whence it riseth: and mischief shall fall upon thee, thou shalt not be able to † put it off: and desolation shall come upon thee suddenly m, which thou shalt not know

l Or rather, when it shall come: Heb. the morning of it, the day or time of its approach: And they are justly upbraided and derided for this ignorance, because the Astrologers, the Star-gazers, and the monthly Prognosticators, mentioned here, ver. 13. pretended punctuallly to foretel the particular time of all future events. And this explication agrees with the History, Babylon being surprized by Cyrus, when they were in deep security, as is manifest, both from Scripture, Jer. 51. 31. Dan. 5. and from other Histories. m Or, when thou shalt not know it. Thou shalt not apprehend thy danger till it be too late.

12 Stand n now with thine inchantments, and with the multitude of thy sorceries, wherein thou hast laboured from thy youth o: if so be thou shalt be able to profit, if so be thou mayest prevail.

n This word notes, Either 1. continuance. Persist or go on in these Practices. Or 2. their gesture. For those that enquired of their Gods by any of these superstitious Practices, used to stand, this being a posture, both of Reverence, and waiting for an Answer. But this is not a command or concession, but a sacred Irony, or scoff at the folly of these Men, who having so oft been disappointed by these Impostures, yet were as forward to use them, and trust to them, as if they had never deceived them. o From the beginning of thy Commonwealth or Kingdom. For the Chaldeans in all Ages were famous, or rather infamous, for the study and practice of these Arts.

13 Thou art wearied p in the multitude of thy counsels: let now the † astrologers, the star-gazers, the † monthly prognosticators stand up, and save thee q from these things that shall come upon thee.

† Heb. viewer of the heavens.

† Heb. that give knowledge concerning the months.

p Thou hast spent thy time and strength in going from one to another, in trying all manner of Experiments, and all to no purpose. q To succour thee, or to enquire for thee.

14 Behold, they shall be as stubble: the fire shall burn them, they shall not deliver * themselves r from the power of the flame s: there shall not be a cole to warm at, nor fire to sit before it.

r And much less thee. s They shall be totally consumed, and all the comfort which thou didst expect from them, shall utterly vanish.

15 Thus t shall they u be unto thee with whom thou hast laboured, even thy merchants from thy youth, they shall wander every one to his quarter: none shall save thee x.

t Such comfortless and helpless Creatures. u Either 1. thy Merchants, as it follows, with whom thou hast trafficked. Or 2. thy Sorcerers, Astrologers, &c. with whom they are said to have laboured, both here and ver. 12. who also may possibly be called their Merchants, because they traded so much with them; and because of their deceitful practices; for which Ephraim is called a Merchant, Hos. 12. 7. And so the following Clause may be rendred, who have been thy Merchants from thy Youth. Or, the last clause may be understood of Merchants properly so called, who came from several Countries to trade with Babylon, as is noted in Scripture, and by other Authors: And the Verse may be thus rendred. Thus (vain and unprofitable) shall they (thy Sorcerers, &c.) with whom thou hast laboured be unto thee. (So here is only a transposition of Words, than which nothing is more usual in Scripture. Then follows another matter in the next Clause:) also Thy Merchants, or they with whom thou hast traded from thy Youth, shall wander every one to his own quarter. x They shall all leave thee, and flee away with all possible speed to their several Countries and Habitations.

CHAP. XLVIII.

1 HEar ye this a, O house of Jacob, which are called by the Name of Israel b, and are come forth out of the waters of Judah c: which swear d by the Name of the LORD, and make mention of the God of Israel e, but not in Truth, nor in righteousness f.

a What I am now going to say against thee, that thou mayest be assured, that that great deliverance, which I have determined and declared to give thee, is not for thy own sake, but for my Name's sake. b Which are Israelites in name, but not in Truth, as it follows. c From the linage of your Progenitor, Judah, as waters flow from a Fountain, and as the Israelites are said to be of the Fountain of Israel, Psal. 68. 26. Compare also, Deut. 33. 28. Prov. 5. 15. &c. d Which profess the true Religion; one act of Religion being put for all. e Either in Oaths, or otherwise: that own him, and seem to glory in him as their God, and call themselves by his Name. f Which are the two chief ingredients of a lawful Oath, Jer. 4. 2. They are guilty of falshood and injustice both in Oaths, and in their whole Conversation.

2 For g they call themselves of the Holy City h, and stay themselves i upon the God of Israel, the LORD of Hosts is his Name k.

g Or, as others render it, and this particle frequently signifies, Though. And so this is added as a great aggravation of their want, and neglect of Truth and Righteousness. h They glory in this, that they are Citizens of Jerusalem, a City sanctified by God himself to be the only place of his true worship, and gracious presence; which as it is a great priviledge, so it laid a great obligation upon them, to walk more holily than they did. i Not by a true and well-grounded Faith, but by a vain and presumptuous Confidence, flattering themselves, as that people commonly did, that they should enjoy peace and safety, notwithstanding all their wickedness; because they were the Lords People, and had his Temple and Ordinances among them; which disposition the Prophets frequently observe, and sharply censure in them. k Or, Whose Name is the Lord of Hosts.

3 I have declared the former things from the beginning l, and they went forth out of my mouth, and I shewed them, I did them suddenly, and they came to pass m.

l Those things which have formerly come to pass, which I punctually foretold from time to time before they came to pass: Whereby I gave you full proof of my Godhead. m What my mouth foretold my hand effected.

4 Because I knew n that thou art † obstinate, and thy Neck is an Iron sinew o, and thy brow brass p.

n Therefore I gave thee the more and clearer demonstrations of my Divine Nature and Providence, because I knew thou wast an unbelieving and perverse Nation, that would not easily nor willingly be convinced. o Which will not bow down to receive my yoke, nor to obey my commands. It is a metaphor taken from untamed and stubborn Cattle: of which see also Nehe. 9. 29. Zech. 7. 11. Act. 7. 51. The sense is, I considered that thou wast unteachable and incorrigible, p Thou wast impudent, and therefore wouldst boldly pretend, that thou didst forsake me, for want of full conviction of my divine Authority, and of thy duty: therefore I determined that I would leave thee without excuse.

5 I have even from the beginning declared it to thee; before it came to pass I shewed it thee q lest thou shouldst say, Mine Idol hath done them, and my graven image, and my molten image hath commanded them.

q I foretold these things, that it might be evident, that they were the effects of my counsel, and not of thine Idols, as I knew thou wast very inclinable to believe.

6 Thou hast heard, see all this r, and will not ye declare it s? I have shewed thee new things from this time t, even hidden things, and thou didst not know them.

r As thou hast heard all these things from my mouth, from time to time, so now I advise thee to see, i. e. seriously to consider them, and to lay them to heart. s I call you to witness: must you not be forced to acknowledge the truth of what I say? Deny it if you can: Or, have ye not declared it unto all People as occasion required it? Have you not boasted unto the Gentiles of this as your Honour and Priviledge? t And I have now given thee new Predictions of secret things, and such as till this time were wholly unknown to thee, as it follows, concerning thy deliverance out of Babylon by Cyrus.

7 They are created now u, and not from the beginning x, even y before the day when thou heardest them not z; lest thou shouldst say, Behold I knew them a.

u i. e. Revealed unto thee by me; brought to light, as things are by Creation. Things are frequently said to be made or done in Scripture, when they are declared or manifested, Job 5. 3. I cursed, i. e. I pronounced it cursed, Psal. 51. 4. That thou mightest be justified, i. e. declared and acknowledged knowledged to be juſt, Hoſ. 5. 15. Till they acknowledged their offence; which in the Hebrew is, till they be guilty. x Heb. Not from thence, not from theſe ancient times when other things were revealed unto thee. y Heb. and (or, or, as this particle is frequently uſed:) before this day. Such Pronouns are oft underſtood, as we have ſeen: and this day anſwers to none in the firſt clauſe: and this clauſe ſeems to be added as an expoſition of the next foregoing clauſe, which is more general and ambiguous, not from then, or before this day. z Heb. and thou didſt not hear them, to wit, before this time in which God hath revealed them to thee by my Miniſtry. a Either by thine own ſagacity: or by the help of thine Idols. The ſenſe is, That it might appear, that thou hadſt the knowledge of theſe things only from me, who made known unto thee only what, and when I pleaſed.

8 Yea thou heardeſt not, yea thou kneweſt not b, yea from that time that thine ear was not opened c: for I knew that thou wouldeſt deal very treacherouſly d, and waſt called e a tranſgreſſor from the womb.

b The ſame things is repeated again and again, becauſe this was ſo illuſtrious a proof of the infinite power and providence of the God of Iſrael, and ſo clear and full a diſcovery of the vanity of Idols. c Heb. Tea from then (of which phraſe ſee the foregoing verſe) thine ear was not opened, i. e. thou didſt not hear, to wit, from me: I did not reveal theſe things unto thee: for ſo this Phraſe of opening the ear is underſtood, 1 Sam. 9. 15. 2 Sam. 7. 27. d I knew all theſe cautions were neceſſary to cure thine Infidelity and Apoſtacy. e To wit, juſtly and truly: Or, thou waſt indeed ſuch a perſon, to be called, put for to be, as we have oft noted.

9 For my Names ſake will I defer mine anger f, and for my praiſe g will I refrain h for thee, that I cut thee not off.

f And although thou doſt juſtly deſerve my hotteſt anger and moſt dreadful judgments, which alſo, if thou repenteſt not, I will in due time inflict, yet at preſent I will ſpare thee, and deliver thee out of Captivity, not for thy ſake, be it known to thee, but meerly for my own ſake, and for the vindication of my name and glory, as it follows, ver. 11. g That I may be praiſed and magnified for my Power, Faithfulneſs and Goodneſs, and other perfections. h To wit, mine Anger; which is eaſily underſtood out of the foregoing clauſe.

10 Behold, I have refined thee i, but not ‖ with ſilver k, I have choſen l thee in the furnace of affliction.

i Or, I will refine thee. Although I will not cut thee off, or utterly deſtroy thee, as I now ſaid, yet I will put thee into the Furnace, not to conſume thee, but to purifie thee from that droſs which cleaveth to thee, and needs ſuch afflictions to purge it away. k Or, not among Silver: Or, not as Silver, which is put into, and kept in the Furnace ſo long till all the droſs be purged away from it. I will not deal ſo rigorouſly with thee; for then I ſhould wholly conſume thee; in Judgment I will remember Mercy. l Or, I will chuſe thee: Or, I will yet chuſe thee, as it is expreſſed Iſa. 14. 1. Zech. 1. 17. Or, I will chuſe thee again, as Zech. 2. 12. For it muſt be conſidered, that God had in a manner rejected Iſrael, when he ſent them into Captivity, and given her a bill of divorce, as he ſaith, Jer. 3. 8. ſee alſo Iſa. 50. 1. and therefore it was neceſſary that God ſhould chuſe this people a ſecond time, that they might be betrothed to him again, as is expreſſed and promiſed, Hoſ. 2. 19, 20. This ſeems to me the true ſenſe; although it may be thus underſtood, I will chuſe thee, i. e. I will manifeſt by my carriage to thee that I have choſen thee: Or, that thou art my choſen People. Things being oft ſaid to be done when they are manifeſted, as was obſerved on ver. 7.

11 For mine own ſake, even for my own ſake will I do it m; for how ſhould my Name n be polluted? and I will not give my * glory unto another o.

* Chap. 42. 8.

m This great work of delivering my People out of Babylon. n My Name is here fitly ſupplied both out of ver. 9. where it is expreſſed, and out of the following clauſe of this Verſe, where he ſaith, my glory, which is equivalent to it. The ſenſe is, if I ſhould not ſpare and deliver my People, my name would be ſadly prophaned and blaſphemed, as if I were either impotent or implacable to them. o I will not give any colour or occaſion to Idolaters, to aſcribe the Divine Nature and Properties, which are my peculiar, unto Idols, as they would do if I did not reſcue my People out of their hands in ſpight of their Idols.

12 Haarken unto me, O Jacob, and Iſrael my called p; I am he; I am the * firſt, I alſo am the laſt.

* Chap. 41. 4. & 44. 6. Revel. 1. 17. and 22. 13.

p Who I have called out of the World to be my peculiar People, to ſerve, and glorifie, and enjoy me, and therefore you of all others have leaſt cauſe to forſake me, or to follow after Idols.

13 Mine hand alſo hath laid the foundation of the earth, and ‖ my right hand hath ſpanned q the heavens: when I call unto them, they ſtand up together r.

‖ Or, the palm of my right hand hath ſpread out.

q Or, doth ſpan, i. e. mete out the Heavens with a Span, as the Phraſe is, Iſa. 40. 12. Although that be expreſſed there in other Hebrew words. Or, hath ſpread them out with its palm, or like a palm, when the hand is ſtretched out. r Either they ſtood up and aroſe out of nothing, when I commanded them to do ſo: Or, they are ſtill continually in readineſs to execute my commands.

14 All ye * aſſemble your ſelves and hear: which among them hath declared theſe things †? the LORD hath loved him t: he will do his pleaſure on Babylon u, and his arm ſhall be on the Caldeans x.

* Ye Jews, to whom he addreſſed his Speech, ver. 12. and continueth his ſpeech, ver. 16, 17. &c. † I challenge you all to anſwer what I have ſaid before, and am now a going to ſay again. s Which of the Gods whom any of you have ſerved, or do ſtill hanker after? t To wit, Cyrus, who might eaſily be underſtood out of the foregoing contexr, in which he is frequently mentioned. The Pronoun is put for the Noun, as is uſual both in Scripture and in other Authors. Now God loved Cyrus, not with a ſpecial, and everlaſting, and complacential love; for he was an Heathen, and had ſome great Vices as well as Vertues, but with that general love and kindneſs, which God hath for all his Creatures, as is obſerved, Pſal. 145. 9. and moreover with that particular kind of love, which God hath for ſuch Men as excel others in any Vertues, as Cyrus did; in which ſenſe Chriſt loved the young man, Mark 10. 21. and with a love of good will, and beneficence. God had ſuch a kindneſs for him, as to make him a moſt glorious and victorious General and King, and the great inſtrument for the deliverance of his own People; which was a ſingular honour and advantage to him, and might have been far greater, and extended to the eternal Salvation of his Soul, if he had not wanted an heart to uſe the price which God hereby put into his hand. And as anger being aſcribed to God, is not meant of the affection, for ſuch paſſions are inconſiſtent with the perfection of Gods nature, but of the effects; ſo the Love of God when it is applied in Scripture, to ſuch Perſons as Cyrus, is not ſo much to be underſtood of an inward affection, as of the outward effects of it; and ſo this Love is explained in the following Words, by that proſperous Succeſs which God gave him againſt the Chaldeans. u Cyrus ſhall execute all that I have appointed him to do for the deſtruction of Babylon, and for the Redemption of my People; which was in it ſelf a good Work: And therefore this is added, as the reaſon why God loved him. x He ſhall ſmite and ſubdue them.

15 I, even I y have ſpoken, yea I have called him: I have brought him, and he ſhall make his way proſperous z.

y Both the foreknowledge and the execution of this great Atchievement cannot be aſcribed to Idols, but to me only. z God will give him good ſucceſs in this undertaking. Here is a ſudden change of the Perſon, from I to he, which is very uſual. Or, as others render it, he ſhall proſper in his way: the preposition in being moſt frequently underſtood.

16 Come ye near unto me a; hear ye this; I have not ſpoken in ſecret b from the beginning c: from the time that it was d, there am I e: and now the Lord GOD and his ſpirit f hath ſent me g.

a That you may the better hear me, as it follows. A Speech of God after the manner of Men. b I have not ſmothered the Counſel and Word of God, but have plainly and publickly declared it unto you: Or, I have openly Revealed my mind to you. See the Note on Iſa. 45. 19. where theſe very Words are ſpoken by God in his own Name, as here by the Prophet in God's Name; and ſo all comes to one. c Either 1. from the firſt time that I began to Prophecy until this time. Or 2. from the beginning of my taking you to be my People, and of revealing my Mind to you. See on Iſa. 41. 26. d Theſe Words alſo, as well as the former, are the Words, Either 1. of the Prophet; and ſo the Senſe ſeems to be this, From the time that I was firſt called to be a Prophet, I have been there. i. e. I have diligently purſued my Prophetical Function; I have hearkned from time to time, to hear what God would ſpeak to me, that I might impart it to you: Or, 2. of God; and then the Senſe may be this, From the time that I firſt ſpoke of it, or foretold it, I am, or was there, to take care to effect what I had foretold: I minded it carefully from that time, as being then more eſpecially obliged to do it, leſt my Truth or Power ſhould be queſtioned, stioned. Or the words may be thus rendred and explained, From the time that this shall be, when the time appointed for the doing of this work shall come, there I will be, to encourage and assist Cyrus in the Work, e This is opposed to those foregoing Words, from the beginning. f God by his Spirit; or God, even the Spirit or the Holy Ghost, to whom the sending and inspiring of God's Prophets is ascribed, 2 Pet. 1. 21. g To wit, the Prophet Isaiah; who yet was a Type of Christ, and so this may have a Respect unto him also.

17 Thus saith the LORD thy Redeemer, the holy One of Israel, I am the LORD thy God which teacheth thee to profit h, which leadeth i thee by the way that thou shouldst go.

h Which from time to time have made known unto thee, not vain and frivolous things, but all necessary and useful Doctrines; which, if believed and observed by thee, would have been infinitely profitable to thee, both for this life and that to come. So that it is not my fault, but thine own, if thou dost not profit. i Which acquainteth thee with thy Duty and Interest in all the parts and concerns of thy Life; so that thou canst not pretend ignorance.

18 O that thou hadst hearkened to my Commandements k, then had thy peace beeen as a river l, and thy righteousness m as the waves of the sea n.

k The failure hath not been on my part, but on thine: I gave thee my Counsels and Commands, but thou hast neglected and disobeyed them, and that to thy own great disadvantage. Such wishes as these are not to be taken properly, as if God longed for something, which he gladly would, but could not effect; or as if he wished that to be undone, which was irrecoverably past and done; which is a vain and foolish wish even in a Man; and much more are such wishes inconsistent with the infinite perfection and happiness of the Divine Nature: but they are only significations of God's good and holy Will, whereby he requires and loves Obedience, and condemns and hates Disobedience. l Which runs sweetly, strongly, plentifully, and constantly; and such had been thy Prosperity. Then thou hadst never gone into this Babylonish Captivity, nor needed such prodigies of my power and goodness to Deliver thee out of it. m Not properly so called (for he is not now speaking of their Vertues, but of their Priviledges) but thy Peace and Prosperity, as appears by the foregoing Clause, to which this manifestly answers; which is called Righteousness here, as it is also, 1 Sam. 12. 7. and Hos. 10. 12. and elsewhere, by a Metonymy, because it is the fruit of Righteousness, both of God's Righteousness and of Man's Righteousness; as by the very same figure iniquity is very frequently put for the fruit and punishment of iniquity. n Infinite and continual.

19 Thy seed also had been as the sand o, and the off-spring of thy bowels p like the gravel thereof: his name q should not have been cut off r, nor destroyed from before me s.

o To wit, for multitude, according to my promise made to Abraham: Whereas now I have, for thy Sins, made thee to know thy breach of Promise, as is said, Numb. 14. 34. and greatly diminished thy Numbers. p Which come out of thy Bowels, or Belly, or Loins: for all these are but various expressions of the same thing. q Which is continued in a Man's Posterity, and commonly dies with them; and so the name here, is the same thing in effect with the seed and off-spring in the former Clauses, which, for the most part, are the only memorials of Men, and of their Names, when they are dead and gone. r As now it hath been in a great measure, and should have been totally and finally cut off, if I had not spared them for my own Names sake, as he said before. s Or, out of my sight, out of their own Land, the place of my special Presence and Residence.

20 Go ye forth of Babylon t: flee ye from the Caldeans, with a voice of singing u, declare ye x, tell this, utter it even to the end of the earth: say ye, The LORD hath * redeemed his servant Jacob.

* Exod. 19. 4, 5, 6.

t The Imperative is here, as it is very frequently, put for the Future, Ye shall go forth, &c. for this is not so much a command as a promise. Although this form of speech may be the rather used to intimate, That it was their duty to go forth, as well as God's promise to carry them forth. u With Joy and Songs of Praise to the Lord. x Publish God's wonderful Works on your behalf to all Nations.

21 And they thirsted not when he led them through the desarts y: he * caused the waters to flow out of the rock for them: he clave the rock also, and the waters gushed out.

* Exod. 17. 6. Num. 20. 11.

y This is part of the matter which the Jews are obliged to declare to all People, as they have opportunity, to wit, That God took the same care of them in their return from Babylon to Canaan, which was through many dry and desart places, as he did in their march from Egypt to Canaan. They thirsted not, &c. i. e. They shall not Thirst. He speaks of things to come, as if they were already past or present, as the Prophets commonly do.

22 * There is no peace saith the LORD, unto the wicked z.

* Chap. 52. 21.

z God having in the next foregoing Verses, foretold that Peace and blessed Deliverance which he would certainly give to his servant Jacob, ver. 20. He here adds an explication and limitation of this Mercy: and declareth, That wicked men should not enjoy the benefit of this Mercy. Where by the wicked, he means, Either 1. the Babylonians, who well deserved that Title; who shall be destroyed, when God's Israel shall be delivered: Or rather 2. the unbelieving and ungodly Jews; of whom these very Words are used again, Isa. 57. 21. and to whom such a Denunciation as this, was far more proper and necessary, at least in this place, than to the Babylonians; for he had already said far more and worse things, than this concerning them, having again and again declared, That Babylon should be destroyed, in order to this deliverance of God's People out of it. But there was great need why he should say this to the ungodly Jews, because they were exceeding prone to cry peace, peace to themselves, when there was no solid ground of Peace; and they confidently expected a share in this great Deliverance. This therefore was a very seasonable Caution to the Jews in Babylon, to take heed to themselves, and to prepare for this Mercy, and to purifie themselves from all Wickedness; because those of them, who should either wickedly tarry in Babylon, when God invited and required them to go out of it; and when their Godly Brethren returned to their own Land, and to the place of God's Worship, or continue in Wickedness, when they were restored to their own Country, should not enjoy that Tranquility and Comfort, which they promised to themselves. And the necessity of this Commination appears from the event; for the Jews that returned to Canaan, did for the most part, relapse to many of their former Sins, and therefore fell short of that Peace and Prosperity, which otherwise they might have enjoyed.

CHAP. XLIX

1 LIsten, O Isles a, unto me b and hearken ye people from far c. The LORD hath called me from the womb d, from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name e.

a God having in the last Words secretly signified the Wickedness of the Jewish Nation, after so glorious a Deliverance, and foreseeing, that, for their Wickedness, he should cast them off, he here turneth his Speech to the Nations of the Gentiles, who are frequently described in this Prophecy, and elsewhere, under the Title of Isles, as hath been formerly noted, and inviteth them to hearken to those Counsels and Doctrines which the Jews would reject. b Unto Christ: for it is apparent from ver. 6. and other passages of this Chapter, that Isaiah speaks these words in the Name of Christ, by whose Spirit they were dictated to him, 1 Pet. 1. 11. and unto whom alone they belong, as we shall see. So this Chapter is a Prophecy of Christ, which is also very proper and seasonable in this place. The Prophet having at large prophesied of the Deliverance of the Jews out of Babylon; he now proceeds further, and prophesieth of the Redemption of the World by Christ, of which that deliverance out of Babylon was a Type and Forerunner. c Which live in Countries far from Judea, now the only place of God's special Presence and Worship. It is evident from the foregoing Clause, and many other Passages following, that he speaks of distance of Place, not of Time. d This or the like Expression is used of Jeremy, chap. 1. 5. and of Paul, Gal. 1. 15. but it was far more eminently true of Christ, who, as he was chosen to this great Office of Redemption from Eternity; so he was separated and called to it before he was born, being both conceived and sanctified by the Holy Ghost in his Mothers Womb, and sent into the World upon this Errand; of which see Mat. 1. 21. and Luke 1. 31. &c. and 2. 11. &c. e Called by my Name, and by such a Name as signified my Office and Work, in the Places now mentioned.

2 And he hath made my mouth like a sharp sword f, in the shadow of his hand hath he hid me g, and made me a polished shaft h, in his quiver i he hath hid me.

f As he made me the great Teacher of his Church, and of the World, so he assisted me by his Spirit, and made my Word or Doctrine Quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, &c. as it is said to be, Heb. 4. 12. killing Men's Lusts, convincing, humbling, and converting their Souls; and Mighty to the pulling down of strong holds;

And

And every high thing that exalteth it self against the knowledge of God, and bringing into Captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ, as we read, 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. g He will protect me by his Power from all mine Enemies, until I have finished the work for which he sent me. h Like an Arrow, whose point is bright and polished; which therefore pierceth deeper. This Metaphor signifies the same thing with the former, Christ's piercing of Men's Hearts by his Word and Spirit, i where Arrows are hid and kept. This Quiver signifies the same thing with the shadow in the foregoing Clause, even God's powerful and gracious Protection of him from Dangers and Mischiefs.

3 And said unto me, Thou art my servant, O Israel k, in whom I will be glorified.

k As the name of David is sometimes given to his Successors, 1 Kings 12. 16. and particularly to Christ, Jer. 30. 9. Ezek. 34. 23. Hos. 3. 5. and Jacob is called, as many things by the name of his Grand-father, Abraham, Act. 7. 16. and the Name of Isaack is given to his Posterity, Amos 7. 9. So here the name of Israel may not unfitly be given to Christ, not only because he descended from his Loins; but also because he was the true and the great Israel, who, in a more eminent manner, prevailed with God, as that Name signifies, of whom Jacob, who was first called Israel, was but a Type: And as the Name of Christ, the Head is sometimes given to the Body, the Church, as 1 Cor. 12. 12. So it is not strange if, on the contrary, the name of Israel, which properly belongs to the Church, be given to Christ the Head of it. But this Word may be otherwise rendred, being joyned, Either 1. with the foregoing Words, Thou art my servant, unto, or in, or for Israel, i. e. to bring them back unto me, from whom they have revolted: Or 2. with the following words; it is Israel, in whom I will glorifie my self by thee.

4 Then I said l, I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength for nought m, and in vain, yet surely my judgment n is with the LORD, and ‖ my work with my God.

‖ Or, my reward.

l By way of Objection. Lord, thou saiest thou wilst be glorified by my Ministry; but I find it otherwise. m Without any considerable Fruit of my Word and Works among the Israelites. n My right, the reward which by his Promise, and my Purchase is my right. Judgment is oft put for that which is just or right, as Exod. 23. 6. Job 8. 3. and in many other places. And so this Clause agrees with the next; and the Sense of both is this: Though I see no fruit of my Labour among the Jews, and meet with nothing but contempt and reproach, and ill usage from them; yet God sees my fidelity and diligence in my Work, and he will give Judgment for me, and my reward is laid up with and by him, which he will give me in due time.

‖ Or, that Israel may be gathered to him, and I may, &c.

5 And now, saith the LORD that formed me from the womb to be his servant, to bring Jacob again to him, o Though Israel be ‖ not gathered p, yet shall I be glorious in the eyes of the LORD q, and my God shall be my strength.

o To convert the Wicked and Apostate Israelites unto God. p Not brought home to God by my Ministry. This Word implies, That the Israelites were divided and scattered from God, and divided among themselves, as they were in an high degree when Christ came into the World, and Turned every one to his own way, as is said, Isa. 53. 6. and therefore needed to be gathered. Either it is a Metaphor from wandring Sheep, which the good Shepherd diligently seeketh, and bringeth home to the Fold: Or, it is an Allusion to the state of the Israelites, who either now were, or shortly were to be dispersed into several parts of the World, from whence God had promised to gather them, and bring them into their own Land, and unto his Temple, Isa. 43. 5, 6. and elsewhere. The Sense is, Though Israel God's own and only People, reject me, which will be an occasion of great wonder and scandal. q God will not despise me for the unsuccessfulness of my Labours, but will honour and glorifie me, both with himself, and in the face of the World, in crowning my Endeavours with glorious Success among other People. r To support and strengthen me under this, and all other discouragements and difficulties in the discharge of mine Office.

‖ Or, art thou lighter than that thou shouldest, &c.
‖ Or, desolation.
* Chap. 42. 6.

6 And he s said, ‖ It is a light thing t that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob u, and to restore the ‖ preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a * light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation x, unto the end of the earth.

s The Lord expressed both in the foregoing and following Verses. t This is but a small Favour in comparison of what follows. u That remnant of them which shall survive all their calamities and desolations. x I will make thy labour effectual for the illumination and conversion, and salvation of the Gentiles in all the parts of the World: Which cannot be said of Isaiah with any truth or colour, and therefore must be understood of Christ, by whom this was literally and fully accomplished. By my Salvation he means the great Instrument and Author of that eternal salvation which I will give to the Gentiles.

‖ Or, to him that is despised in soul.

7 Thus saith the LORD the Redeemer of Israel, and his Holy One y, ‖ to him whom man despiseth z, to him whom the nation abhorreth, to a servant of rulers: Kings a shall see and arise b, Princes also shall worship, because of the LORD, that is faithful c, and the Holy One of Israel, and he shall choose thee d.

y The Holy One of Israel, as he is frequently called. z To Christ; to whom, as he was in the days of his Flesh, this description doth most truly and fully agree, being the same in effect with that, Isa. 53. 3. for men, both Jews and Gentiles among whom he lived did despise him from their very hearts and souls, as is here implied; and the whole Nation, of which he was a member, and among whom he conversed and preached, abhorred both his Person and his Doctrine; and he was so far from being a great temporal Monarch, as the Jews vainly imagined, that he came in the form of a Servant, and was a Servant of Rulers, professing subjection, and paying tribute unto Cæsar, Mat. 17. 24, 25. & 22. 21. and being treated by the Rulers both of the Jews, and of the Romans, like a Servant, being despightfully used and Crucified, which was the proper punishment of Servants. a Tho for a time thou shalt be despised, yet after a while thou shalt be advanced to such Royal Majesty and Glory, that Kings shall look upon thee with admiration and reverence. b From their seats in token of reverence, as was usual, Levit. 19. 32. Judg. 3. 20. Job 29. 8. or to worship thee, as the next clause explains it, shall see and arise may be put for when they see thee they shall arise to thee: which is a common Hebraism. c Because God shall make good his promises to thee concerning the raising thee from the dead, and concerning the effusion of his Spirit upon thy Disciples, by whose assistance they shall preach most powerfully, and confirm their Doctrine by evident and glorious miracles, and concerning the giving unto thee the Heathen for thine Inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the Earth for thy possession, as he promised, Psal. 2. 8. These and such like considerations were the great motives which prevailed with the Princes and People of the Gentiles to receive thee as the true Messiah and Saviour of the World. d And although thou shalt be rejected by thine own People, and refused by their Builders or Rulers, as was Prophesied, Psal. 118. 22. and for a time, and in some respects forsaken by God himself, Mat. 27. 46. yet God will return to thee and chuse thee again, and manifest unto the World, that thou, and thou only art the Person whom God hath chosen to be the Redeemer of mankind, and whom, in spight of all opposition, he will make the head-stone of the Corner. For the Phrase see on Isa. 48. 10. But these words are well rendred by others, who will chuse, or hath chosen thee, the Conjunction, and, being put for the Pronoun Relative, as Isa. 44. 14. and in many other places, as hath been observed before.

* 2 Cor. 6. 2.

8 Thus saith the LORD e, *in an acceptable time f have I heard thee g, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee: and I will preserve thee i, and give thee for a covenant k of the people l, ‖ to establish the earth m, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages n.

‖ Or, raise up

e God the Father unto Christ. f Heb. In a time of good will, in that time when I shall have, and in a special manner manifest my good Will to the Sons of Men, in the Day of my Grace, and of Man's Salvation, as this Phrase is explained in the next Clause, in the time of the Gospel, which is in the time of God's good Will towards men, as the Host of Heaven declared at the Birth of Christ, Luke 2. 14. In the days of thy flesh, when thou didst offer up Prayers and Supplications with strong crying and Tears, unto him that was able to save thee from Death, as we read, Heb. 5. 7. which Text is a good comment upon this place. g Though not so as to deliver thee from death, and from the sense of my wrath, yet so as to keep thee from sinking under these burdens, and so as thou shouldest not be holden under the Pains or Power of Death, Act. 2. 24. and so as to Crown thee with Glory and Honour, and a blessed Success of all thy labours and sufferings. h In the time of Grace, and of the Gospel, which I have appointed for the working out of Man's Salvation by thee. i Upon Earth till thy Work be finished, and unto that eternal Kingdom and Glory which is prepared for thee. k To be the Mediator and Surety of that Covenant which is made between me and them; as Christ is called, Heb. 7. 22. and 8. 6. to renew and confirm the Covenant, which the Messiah is said to do, Dan. 9. 27. by his own Blood, by which God and Men are reconciled, and united one to the other. And therefore he may well be called the Covenant by a known Metonymy, which which is very usual in such cases, as upon the same account Circumcision, the sign of the Covenant, is called God's Covenant, Gen. 17. 10. and the Paschal Lamb is called the Passover, Exod. 12. 11. and the Sacramental Cup is called the New Testament, Luke 22. 20. and the Communion of the Blood of Christ, 1 Cor. 10. 16. l Indefinitely of all my People, not only Jews, but also the Gentiles, as may be gathered from the Context, and by comparing this place with Isa. 42. 6. Where the same Phrase is used. From both which places it is most manifest, that the Messiah is designed, and not Isaiah, to whom this and divers other Phrases here used cannot be ascribed without great force. m To compose and settle the Earth, and the Inhabitants thereof, by making Peace between God and Men, and between Jews and Gentiles, and by establishing Truth and Righteousness and Holiness upon Earth, and by subduing those Lusts and Passions, which are the great Disturbers of Humane Society: which was the design of God in sending, and of Christ in coming into the World. n That desolate places may be repaired and repossessed. That Christ may possess the Heathen, according to Psal. 2. 8. who were in a spiritual Sense in a most desolate and forlorn condition.

* Chap. 42. 7. 9 That thou mayest say o * to the prisoners p, Go forth q: to them that are in darkness, Shew your selves: they shall feed in the ways, and their pastures shall be in all high places r.

o To wit, with power and effect, as when God said, Let there be Light, &c. p To the Gentiles, who are fast bound by the cords of their sins, and taken Captive by the Devil at his Will, as this same Phrase is understood, Isa. 42. 7. q Come forth to the light, receive Divine Illumination and consolation. r They shall have abundant Provision in all places, yea even in those which commonly are barren and unfruitful, and such are both common roads and high grounds.

* Rev. 7. 16. 10 They shall not * hunger nor thirst, neither shall the heat nor sun smite them s: for he that hath mercy on them shall lead them t, even by the springs of water shall he guide them.

s They shall be supplied with all good and necessary things, and kept from all evil occurrents. t God who hath magnified his mercy to them, will conduct them with safety and comfort.

11 And I will make all my mountains a way, and my high ways shall be exalted u.

u I will remove all hindrances, and prepare the way for them, by levelling high grounds, and raising low grounds: of which see on Isa. 40. 3, 4.

12 Behold these shall come from far x: and loe, these from the North, and from the West y, and these from the land of Sinim z.

x My People shall be called and gathered even from the most remote parts of the earth. He speaks here, and in many other places of the Conversion of the Gentiles with allusion to that work of gathering, and bringing back the Jews from all parts, where they were dispersed into their own Land. y From the several parts of the World; which are here synecdochically expressed, as they are in many other places. z Either of the Sinites, as they are called, Gen. 10. 17. who dwelt about the Wilderness of Sin, which was Southward from Judea: Or, of Sin, a famous City of Egypt, called the strength of Egypt, which may be synecdochically put for all Egypt, and that for all southern parts. And so he here mentions the several quarters of the World, where the generality of the Jews were dispersed; the North, which is every where named as the chief place of their banishment and dispersion, as Jer. 16. 15. and 31. 8. and elsewhere; the West, the western Countries and Islands, and the South.

13 Sing, O Heavens, and be joyful, O Earth, and break forth into singing, O Mountains: for the Lord hath comforted his people a, and will have mercy upon his afflicted.

a God hath now sent that long desired Consolation of Israel.

14 But Zion said, the LORD hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me b.

b This is an Objection against all these glorious predictions and promises hitherto mentioned. How can these things be true, when the condition of Gods Church is now so sad and desperate, as it was when the Jews were Captives in Babylon, in which the Prophet here supposeth them to be?

† Heb. from having compassion. 15 Can a woman forget her sucking child, † that she should not have compassion on the Son of her womb? yea they may forget, yet will I not forget thee c.

c Earthly Parents sometimes are so unnatural and monstrous; but do not entertain such unworthy thoughts of me. I will remember thee effectually, to bring thee out of Babylon, and which is infinitely greater, to send my Son into the World to work out eternal Redemption for thee.

16 Behold I have graven thee upon the palmes of my hands d: thy walls are continually before me e.

d Mine eye and heart is constantly upon thee. He alludes to the comon practice of men, who use to put signs and memorials upon their hands or fingers of such things as they dearly affect, and would remember. See Exod. 13. 9. Deut. 6. 8. Prov. 6. 21. Cant. 8. 6. Jer. 22. 24. e My thoughts run continually upon the Walls of Jerusalem, which are now broken down, that I may repair them as soon as ever the set time cometh, and then proceed to do far greater things for thee.

17 Thy children f shall make haste, thy destroyers, and they that made thee waste, shall go forth of thee g.

f Or, as others render it, thy Builders; which is favoured by the next clause where the destroyers are opposed to them. Howsoever the sense is the same, for her children were her Builders, as we read in Ezra and Nehemiah. g Shall be separated and driven from among thee, and so shall neither hinder nor annoy thee.

18 * Lift up thine eyes round about, and behold: all these h gather themselves together and come to thee i: as I live, saith the LORD, thou shalt surely cloth thee with them all, as with an ornament k, and bind them on thee as a bride doth. * Chap. 60. 4.

h To wit, the Gentiles, as sufficiently appeareth from what hath been already said, and from that which followeth. The sense is, Thy Church shall not only be restored and established in Jerusalem, but it shall be vastly enlarged and adorned by the accession of the Gentiles to it. i To receive instruction from thee, and to be incorporated with thee into one and the same Church. k They shall not be a burden, as the Gentiles formerly were when they mixed themselves with the Jews, but an Ornament in respect of those excellent gifts and graces wherewith they shall enrich and honour thy Church.

19 For thy waste and thy desolate places l, and the Land of thy destruction m shall even now be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants, and they that swallowed thee up, shall be far away n.

l Thy own Land, which is now wast and desolate, and whereof divers parts lay formerly wast and desolate for want of People to possess and manage them. m Or rather, Thy Land of destruction, so called, because it is devoted and shall be exposed to destruction. n To wit, from thee.

20 The children which thou shalt have, after thou hast lost o the other, shall say again p in thine ears, The place is too straight for me: give place to me that I may dwell.

o Heb. The Children of thine orbity or barren and Childless state. Those Children which thou shalt have when thou art grown past the ordinary age and state of Child-bearing, as Sarah in that case was made the Mother of a most numerous posterity: to which he seems here to allude. Those Gentiles which shall be begotten by thee, to wit, by the Ministry of thy Children, Christ and his Apostles, when thou shalt be deprived of thine own natural Children, when thou shalt become barren and unfruitful as to Conversion of natural Jews, when the generality of the Jews shall cut themselves off from God, and from his true Church by their Apostacy from God; and by their unbelief, and obstinate refusal of their Messiah. p Or rather, shall yet say, tho for the present it be otherwise.

21 Then shalt thou say q in thine heart, Who hath begotten me these r, seeing I have lost my children s and am desolate t, a captive, and removing to and fro u? and who hath brought up these x? Behold I was left alone, these, where had they been?

q Not without admiration. r Whence, or by whom have I this numberless Issue? s Seeing it is not long since that I was in a manner left childless. t Without an Husband, being forsaken by God, who formerly owned himself for my Husband, Isa. 54. 5. Jer. 31. 32. and elsewhere. u Which condition is in many respects a great impediment to the procreation of Children. x The same thing repeated again to express the miraculousness of this work, and the great surprizal of the Jews at it: which sheweth that he speaks of the Conversion of the Gentiles.

22 Thus saith the Lord God, Behold I will lift lift up mine hand y to the Gentiles, and set up my ſtandard z to the people a: and they ſhall bring † Heb. boſome. thy ſons b in their † armes c: and thy daughters ſhall be carried upon their ſhoulders d.

y I will call them to me, and command them to do this work, as men commonly ſignifie their calls and commands by this geſture. z As Generals do to gather their Forces together. See on Iſa. 11. 12. a Unto thee, or to thy Church and People. b Thoſe which ſhall be thine, if not by natural Generation, yet by Adoption, that ſhall own God for their Father, and Jeruſalem for their Mother. c With great care and tenderneſs, as Nurſes carry young Infants. The ſenſe is, even the Heathen ſhall contribute to the increaſe and preſervation of thoſe Children which ſhall be begotten to thee. d As ſick or infirm perſons uſed to be carried. See Mark 2. 3. Luke 15. 5.

† Heb. nouriſhers. † Heb. Princeſſes. 23 And Kings ſhall be thy † nurſing fathers, and their † queens thy nurſing mothers l: they ſhall bow down to thee with their face toward the earth, and * lick up the duſt of thy feet f, and thou ſhalt know that I am the LORD: for they ſhall not be aſhamed that wait for me g.

* Pſal. 72. 9.

e Kings and Queens ſhall have a ſincere affection, and tender regard unto thee and thy Children, which was in ſome ſort fulfilled by Cyrus, Ahaſhuerus, and ſome few others of the Perſian Kings or Queens, but much more truly and fully by thoſe many Kings, and Emperors of the Gentile World, which after Chriſts time did both themſelves embrace the true Religion, and alſo ſet it up in their ſeveral Dominions. f They ſhall highly reverence and honour thee, and ſhall moſt humbly and readily ſubmit themſelves unto thee, which was not verified in any of the Perſian Kings, but only in theſe Kings who were converted to the Chriſtian Faith and Church. The expreſſions are borrowed from the practice of the Eaſtern People in their proteſtations and adorations, when they bowed ſo low as to touch and kiſs the ground, whereby they did or might ſeem to lick up the very duſt of the ground which was about, or under the feet of thoſe whom they adored. g Their hopes and expectations ſhall not be diſappointed, but abundantly ſatisfied.

‡ Heb. the captivity of the meſt. 24 Shall the prey be taken from the mighty h, or † the lawful captive delivered i?

h Here he ſtarteth an objection againſt the forementioned promiſes: How can God's Church be delivered when ſhe is become a prey to, and is in the hands of her moſt potent Enemies? i He who was taken Captive in a juſt War, as Gods People might in ſome ſort be ſaid to be, becauſe God himſelf had delivered them into their Enemies hands, and that juſtly for their Sins. So here is a double impediment to their deliverance out of their corporal and ſpiritual bondage, the great Power of the enemy which kept them in bondage, and the Juſtice of God which pleads againſt them and againſt their deliverance.

† Heb. the captivity. 25 But thus ſaith the LORD, Even the † captives of the mighty ſhall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible ſhall be delivered: for I l will contend with him that contendeth with thee, and I will ſave thy children.

k Or, of the violent, which is oppoſed to the lawful Captive in the foregoing Verſe: and it is hereby intimated that although God was juſt in delivering them into Captivity, yet their Oppreſſors were guilty of injuſtice and violence both in deſiring and endeavouring to keep them in perpetual bondage, beyond the ſeventy years which God had fixed, and in their cruel uſage of them. l I the Almighty God will undertake thy quarrel, and this work, and therefore it muſt neceſſarily be accompliſhed.

* Rev. 14. 20. and 16. 6. ‖ Or, new wine. 26 And I will feed them that oppreſs thee, with their own fleſh m, and they ſhall be drunken with their own * blood, as with ‖ ſweet wine: and all fleſh ſhall know that I the Lord am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob.

m I will make them eat their own Fleſh, either through hunger, as Levit. 26. 29. Iſa. 9. 20. or through rage and madneſs. Or, I will make thine Enemies to deſtroy one another, and that greedily and with delight, as the next clauſe implies. All their Enemies are here repreſented as one body, and ſo when one part of them devoured another, it was their own fleſh that was deſtroyed.

CHAP. L.

* Hoſ. 2. 2. * See 2 Kings 4. 1. 1 THus ſaith the LORD a, Where * is the bill of your mothers divorcement b, whom I have put away: or which of my * creditors is it to whom I have ſold you c? Behold, for your iniquities have you ſold your ſelves, and for your tranſgreſſions is your mother put away d.

a This is another Sermon begun here, and continued in the next Chapter. The main ſcope of it is to vindicate Gods Juſtice, and to convince the Jews that they were the cauſes of all their calamities which they imputed to God. b God had formerly eſpouſed the Iſraelites to himſelf in a kind of Matrimonial Covenant, but ſeemed to caſt them off when he ſent them to Babylon, and did wholly reject them afterward from being his People, and took the Gentiles into their ſtead; which great and wonderful change was foretold in the Old-Teſtament, as hath been already obſerved, and we ſhall ſee again, and accompliſhed in the New. And becauſe God foreſaw that thoſe ſtrange diſpenſations would provoke the Jews to murmur and quarrel with God, for caſting them off without ſufficient cauſe, as indeed they were always prone to accuſe God, and to vindicate themſelves, he bids them produce their Bill of divorce: For thoſe Husbands which put away their Wives meerly out of Levity or Paſſion, were obliged to give their Wives a Bill of divorce, which vinicated the Wives Innocency, and declared that the Husbands Will and Pleaſure was the cauſe of the Divorce; of which ſee the notes on Deut. 24. 1. Mat. 19. 3. c Have I any creditors to whom I was obliged or willing to ſell you for the payment of my Debts? Produce then the Bill of ſale to witneſs againſt me. Parents might, and in ſome caſes were forced to ſell their Children to their Creditors: of which ſee on Exod. 21. 7. & 2 Kin. 4. 1. d You can blame none but your ſelves and your own ſins, for all your captivities and miſeries.

* Num. 11. 23 Ch. 59. 1. * Nah. 1. 4. * Ex. 14. 21. * Joſh. 3. 16. 2 Wherefore e when I came f, was there no man g? when I called h, was there none to anſwer i? * Is my hand ſhortned at all, that it cannot redeem? Or have I no power to deliver k? Behold, * at my rebuke, I * dry up m the ſea: I make the * rivers a wilderneſs n: their fiſh ſtinketh becauſe there is no water, and dieth for thirſt.

e The general Accuſation delivered in the laſt words he now proveth by particular Inſtances. f When I, firſt by my Prophets, and at laſt by my Son, came unto them, to call them to Repentance, and to redeem and deliver them, as it is explained in the following clauſes of this verſe. g That regarded and received me, that complied with my call and offer of Grace, as it follows. Whereby he implies that the generality of the Jews were guilty of groſs Infidelity, and obſtinate Diſobedience, and therefore might juſtly be rejected. h Called them to repentance, or to come unto me, or to do my Will, as Maſters call their Servants. i To come at my Call, to obey my commands. k What is the reaſon of this horrible contempt and Rebellion? Is it becauſe you expect no good from me, but think that I am either unwilling or unable to ſave you? Becauſe you ſee no miracles wrought for you to ſave you from the Babylonians, and becauſe my Son, your Meſſiah, cometh not with Pomp and Power, as you expect, but in the form of a Servant, poor, and expoſed to contempt and death; do you therefore believe that my power to deliver you is leſs than it was? l This Phraſe is borrowed from Pſal. 106. 9. and it is uſed Mat. 8. 26. At my word or command, whereby I rebuke and check its proud waves. m Heb. I will dry up, or can dry up; the future verb being put potentially. As I did it once, ſo I can and will do it again, when occaſion requires it. n As dry and fit for travel as a Wilderneſs.

3 I cloath the heavens with blackneſs o, and I make ſackcloth their covering p.

o Or, I will or can clothe, &c. What I once did in Egypt, when I drew black curtains before all the heavenly lights, and cauſed an unparallel'd and amazing Darkneſs for three days together, to the great terror of mine Enemies, ſo I can and will do ſtill when it is neceſſary to ſave my People. And therefore you have no reaſon to diſtruſt me. p I cover them with thick and dark clouds black as ſackcloth, as is ſaid, Rev. 6. 12. or as that ſtuff of which the Tents of Kedar were made, Cant. 1. 5. From this and ſome other Expreſſions it appears, that they wore a black ſackcloth, which alſo was moſt ſutable to the ſtate of mourners, by whom it was uſed.

* Mat. 11. 28. 4 The LORD God hath given me g the tongue of the learned h, that I ſhould know how to ſpeak a word in ſeaſon to him that is * weary i: he wak eneth k morning by morning, l he wakeneth min e ear to hear m him as the learned n.

g God having aſſerted his own power to ſhew the groundleſneſs of the Infidelity of the Jews, he proceeds to ſhew what excellent and effectual means he uſed to bring them to Repentance and Salvation; which he mentions as a great aggravation of their Unbelief and Rebellion, which by this means was without all excuſe. This and the following paſſages may be in ſome ſort underſtood of the Prophet Iſaiah, tho but obſcurely and imperfectly, but they are far more evidently and eminently verified in Chriſt, and indeed ſeem to be meant directly of him. For ſeeing there are many other paſſages in this Prophecy, which are directly meant of Chriſt, and of his Miniſtry and not at all of the Prophet, why may not this be added to the number of them? eſpecially conſidering that there is nothing here which forceth us to underſtand this place of Iſaiah, and ſeveral of theſe paſſages are expounded of Chriſt in the New Teſtament, as is confeſſed. Beſides, this ſeems to ſuit beſt with the coherence: For according to this expoſition the ſame perſon ſpeaketh here who hath ſpoken in all the foregoing Verſes of the Chapter, even the Lord himſelf conſidered as Man, becauſe he was both God and Man, as is abundantly evident from many Scriptures, both of the Old and New Teſtament, as hath been already proved, and will hereafter be more fully evinced. h An ability of ſpeaking plainly, and convincingly, and perſwadingly, and in all points ſo as becometh a perſon taught of God, and filled with all Divine and Heavenly Wiſdom and Knowledg, and with a ſingular skill of winning Souls, and of working upon Mens Hearts and Conſciences. i Burdened with the ſenſe of his ſad and deplorable condition; in which caſe a word of comfort is moſt ſeaſonable and acceptable. This was the proper and principal deſign of Chriſts Miniſtry, to give Reſt and Comfort to diſtreſſed Souls, according to what is ſaid, with reſpect to this place, *Mat.*11.28. And all the Doctrines, Reproofs, and Threatnings of Chriſt were directed to this end, to make men fit for comfort and ſalvation. k To wit, me, the Pronoun being oft underſtood: or, as it follows, mine ear. l From time to time, and continually. m Becauſe human Nature is of it ſelf weak and ſloathful, he by his Divine Power aſſiſteth and ſtirreth me up to the obſervation and practice of all his Commands and my Duties. n Either 1. As learned Men or Teachers uſe to awaken their Scholars to hear, and learn of them from time to time: Or rather 2. As thoſe that are or deſire and endeavour to be learned, uſe to hear with all poſſible attention and diligence: For this title of learned is in the former part of the verſe given not to the Teacher, who is ſaid to be God, but to the perſon taught by him.

* Joh. 14. 31. Phil. 2. 8. Heb. 10. 5. &c.

5 The LORD GOD hath opened mine ear n, and I was not * rebellious o, neither turned away back p.

n Hath revealed unto me: or rather, hath given me a power and will to hear and receive his commands, as this Phraſe is uſed, *Pſal.*40.6. *Iſa.*35.5. and elſewhere. o I readily did and ſuffered what he required of me. p The ſame thing repeated in other words. I did not turn away mine Ear from hearing any of Gods Commands, nor my Feet from going where God ſent me, how difficult or dangerous ſoever my employment was. He ſeems to allude to the former Prophets who had, divers of them, ſhrunk back, and for a time refuſed ſuch work as God called them to, as Moſes, Exod. 3. 11, 13. Jonas, ch. 1. 3. and others.

* Mat. 26. 27. & 27. 26. * Lam. 3. 30.

6 * I gave my back to the ſmiters q, and * my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair r: I hid not my face from ſhame s and ſpitting t.

q I patiently yielded up my ſelf, and turned my back to thoſe who ſmote me. I was willing not only to do, but to ſuffer the will of God and the injuries of men. This and the following paſſages were literally fulfilled in Chriſt, as is expreſly affirmed, *Mat.*26. 57,67. & 27.26,30. and elſewhere; but we read of no ſuch thing concerning Iſaiah. And therefore it is moſt ſafe and reaſonable to underſtand it of Chriſt; the rather becauſe it is not uſual with the Prophets to commend themſelves ſo highly, as the Prophet here commendeth the Perſon of whom he ſpeaketh. r Which was a contumely or puniſhment inflicted upon Malefactors, *Neh.*13.25. s From all manner of reproachful uſages, but did knowingly and willingly ſubmit my ſelf thereunto. t Spitting in a mans Face was uſed in token of contempt and deteſtation, *Numb.*12.14. *Job.*30.10. And this was literally fulfilled in Chriſt, Mat. 26. 67.

7 For u the LORD GOD will help me x, therefore ſhall I not be confounded y: therefore have I ſet my face like a flint z, and I know that I ſhall not be aſhamed.

u Or rather, But, as this particle is oft rendred. For Gods favour is here oppoſed to the injuries of Men. x Tho as a man I am weak and inconſiderable, yet God will ſtrengthen me to go through my great and hard work. y Therefore I aſſure my ſelf of ſucceſs in my employment, and of victory over all mine Enemies. z I have hardned my ſelf with reſolution and courage againſt all oppoſition. So this or the like Phraſe is uſed, Ezek. 3. 8, 9. which elſewhere ſignifies obſtinacy and impudence, as *Jer.*5.3, Zech. 7. 12. ſo that it notes any ſettled and unmoveable purpoſe, whether good or evil.

* Rom. 8. 32, 33. † Heb. the maſter of my cauſe or ſuit.

8 * He is near a that juſtifieth me b, who will contend with me? let us ſtand together: who is † mine adverſary? let him come near to me c.

a God, tho he ſeem to be at a diſtance, and to hide his face from me, yet he is in truth at my right hand, and ready to help me. b That will publickly acquit me from all the calumnies of mine adverſaries, who ſay that I am a tranſgreſſor of the Law, a falſe Teacher and Deceiver, a Blaſphemer, and a Devil, and the like, in which Opinion they are confirmed by my Death and Sufferings. But God will clear up my righteouſneſs, and ſhew by many and mighty ſigns and wonders, that he is well pleaſed with me, and that I lived and died his faithful Servant. c I challenge all my Accuſers to ſtand and appear before the Judge Face to Face, and produce all their charges againſt me: for I am conſcious of mine own innocency, and I know that God will give ſentence for me.

9 Behold, the LORD GOD will help me, who is he that ſhall condemn me d, lo, they all e ſhall wax old as a garment: the * moth ſhall eat them up f. * Ch. 51. 8.

d That dare attempt it, or can juſtly do it. e Mine Accuſers and Enemies. f Shall pine away in their iniquity, as God threatned *Lev.*26. 39. ſhall be cut off and conſumed by a ſecret curſe and judgment of God, which is compared to a moth, Hoſ. 5. 12. whilſt I ſhall ſurvive and flouriſh, and the pleaſure of God ſhall proſper in my hands, as is ſaid, Iſa. 53.10.

10 Who is among you that feareth the LORD g, that obeyeth the voice of his ſervant h, that walketh in * darkneſs i, and hath no light k? let him truſt in the name of the LORD, and ſtay upon his God l. * Ch. 58. 8, 10. & 59. 9, 10.

g He now turneth his Speech from the unbeliving and rebellious Jews to thoſe of them who were or ſhould be pious. h Of the ſame perſon of whom he hath hitherto ſpoken, of Chriſt, who is called Gods Servant, *Iſa.*52.13. & 53.11. partly by way of eminency, and partly to intimate that altho he was God, yet he ſhould take upon himſelf the form of a Servant, as is ſaid, *Phil.*2.7. He hereby ſignifies that the Grace of God, and the comfort here following belongeth to none but to thoſe that hear and believe this great Prophet of the Church; which alſo was declared by Moſes, *Deut.*18.15. compared with *Act.*3.22,23. i Not in ſin, which is oft called darkneſs, as walking in darkneſs is put for living in wickedneſs, 1 *Joh.*1.6. but in miſery, which alſo frequently cometh under the name of darkneſs; that liveth in a moſt diſconſolate and calamitous condition, together with great deſpondency or dejection of Spirit. k No comfort nor hope left. l Let him fix his Faith and Hope in the name, i. e. in the moſt excellent and amiable nature, and infinite perfections, and eſpecially in the free Grace, and Mercy, and Faithfulneſs, of the Lord, declared in his word, and in his propriety or intereſt in God, who by the mediation of this Servant is reconciled to him and made his God.

11 Behold, all ye that kindle a fire m, that compaſs your ſelves about n with ſparks o: walk in the light of your fire, * and in the ſparks that ye have kindled p. This ſhall ye have of mine hand, ye ſhall lie down in ſorrow q. * Joh. 9. 39.

m That you may enjoy the light and comfort of it, as it is explained in the following words. You that reject the light which God hath ſet up, and refuſe the Counſel of his Servant, and ſeek for Comfort, and Safety, and the Knowledge of Gods Mind, and the enjoyment of his favour by your own inventions; which was the common error of the Jews in all Ages, and eſpecially in the days of the Meſſiah, when they refuſed him, and that way of Righteouſneſs and Salvation which he appointed, and reſted upon their own Traditions and Devices, going about to eſtabliſh their own Righteouſneſs, and not ſubmitting unto the Righteouſneſs of God, as is expreſſed, Rom. 10.3. n Indeavouring to warm and refreſh your ſelves on all ſides. o Or rather, with Firebrands, as this very word is fitly rendred, *Prov.*26.18. which is better than ſparks or flames which is there put in the margent, becauſe firebrands only, and not ſparks or flames, are capable of being thrown by one man at another. And this word is no where elſe uſed in Scripture. He mentions fire-brands, either to imply that theſe fires yielded more ſmoke than heat or light: or becauſe theſe were the uſual materials of a fire. p Uſe your utmoſt endeavours to get comfort and ſatisfaction from theſe devices. q This ſhall be the fruit of all, through my juſt Judgment, that inſtead of that comfort and ſecurity which you expect by theſe means, you ſhall receive nothing but vexation and miſery which ſhall purſue you both living and dying: for this word, which is here rendred lie down, is frequently uſed for dying, as Gen. 47. 30. Job 21. 26. and elſewhere. Or it is a metaphor from a man that lying down on his Bed for reſt and eaſe, meets with nothing but trouble and pain, as Job complained, chap. 7. 13, 14.

CHAP. LI.

1 HEarken to me, ye that follow after righteouſneſs a, ye that ſeek the LORD b: look unto the rock whence ye are ‖ hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are ‖ digged c. ‖ Or, were. ‖ Or, were.

a Now he turneth his Speech again to the believing and godly Jews. b That make it your chief care and buſineſs to ſeek favour and help from God. c Conſider the ſtate of Abraham and Sarah, when they procreated Iſaac, from whom Jacob and all of you ſprang: For he ſo explains the Metaphor in the next verſe. He compareth the Bodies of Abraham and Sarah unto a Rock, or Pit, or Quarry out of which ſtones are hewed or digged, thereby implying that God in ſome ſort actually did that which Chriſt ſaid he was able to do, *Mat.*3.9.

even of stones raise up Children unto Abraham; it being then as impossible by the course of nature for Abraham and Sarah in that age to procreate a Child, as it is to hew a living Child out of a Rock, or to dig one out of a pit of stone.

2 Look unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah that bare you; for I called him d alone e, and blessed him, and encreased him f.

d From his own Country and kindred to follow me to an unknown Land, where I promised that I would multiply and bless him, as is particularly explained, *Gen.*12.1,2,3. e Heb. one, either 1. Him only of all his kindred; for though he carried some few of them with him, yet I called none but him. So this notes Gods singular favour to their Progenitors above all the rest of the World. Or 2. Him when he was alone or solitary, to wit, as to any Issue, when he neither had nor was likely to have any Child by Sarah. And this word, alone, seems to belong not only to this word wherewith it is join'd, but also unto the two following words, especially if we consider the order of the words in the Hebrew Text, where they lie thus; for, one (or alone, or when he was alone, or but one) I called him, and blessed him, and encreased him. f Into a vast multitude, when his condition was desperate in the eye of reason. And therefore God can as easily raise and deliver his Church when they are in the most forlorn condition, and seem to be dead, and buried, and consumed, so that nothing but dry bones remain of them, as it is declared at large, *Ezek.*37.

3 For g the LORD shall comfort Zion h: he will comfort all her waste places, and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desart like the garden of the Lord i: joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of melody.

g So this comes in as a reason why they should look unto, or consider that famous example of Abraham and Sarah, because they should find the like wonder wrought on their behalf. Or, Therefore, or for the sake of Abraham, my Friend, and of that Covenant which I made with him, and by which I promised to bless him and his seed for ever. h His Church, which is frequently called by that name both in the Old and New Testament. i Although she shall be waste, and desolate, and like a Wilderness or Desart for a time, yet she shall be restored, and be made as pleasant and flourishing and as the Garden of Eden was.

4 Hearken unto me, my people k, and give ear unto me, O my nation: for a law l shall proceed from me, and I will make my judgment to to rest m for a light of the people n.

k Seeing the Gentiles will hearken to me, as I have formerly told you, take heed that you Jews, whom I chose to be my peculiar people, do not reject my counsel, nor forsake your own mercies, as I fear you will do. l A new Law, even the Doctrine of the Gospel, which ought to have the force of a Law with you, and I expect your Obedience to it, no less than to my Law delivered by Moses. m Judgment is here the same thing with Law in the former clause, the word of God, which is frequently called Judgment, as hath been observed again and again, or the Evangelical Doctrine, of which he saith that he will make it to rest, i.e. settle and establish it: whereby he may possibly intimate the stability and perpetuity of this light in the Church, that it shall not be like the light of the Mosaical Dispensation which was only to shine for a season, even until the time of Reformation, Heb.9.10. when all those dark shadows were to vanish and give place to the Sun of Righteousness, and to that Kingdom and State that should never be removed, as we read *Dan.*2.44. Heb. 12.26, 27,28. and in many other places. n Heb. of or to the peoples, not only unto you Jews, but unto people of all sorts and Nations, who shall receive and walk in that light which you will reject, and use all possible endeavours to extinguish.

5 My righteousness o is near: my salvation is gone forth p, and mine arms shall judg the people q: the isles r shall wait upon me s, and on mine arm shall they trust.

o My Salvation, as it is expounded in the next clause, the Redemption of all my people, both Jews and Gentiles, which is the effect of his Righteousness, either his Justice, or his Faithfulness, or his Mercy and Goodness, for all these are called by the name of Righteousness in Scripture, and all these contributed to the work of Mans Redemption. p Shall shortly go forth: my secret and eternal purpose of saving my People shall speedily be fulfill'd. q Either 1. Shall destroy those People who obstruct or oppose this work. Or rather 2. Shall subdue the Gentiles to mine Authority, and rule them by my Word and Spirit, which agrees best with the following clause. r The remote Countries of the Gentiles, as *Isa.*41.1. & 42.4. and elsewhere. s Shall confidently expect and hope for this promised Righteousness and Salvation from me, and from me only, and not from Idols, as they have none, nor by any other way.

6 Lift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath: for * the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment t, and they that dwell therein shall die ‖ in like manner u: but my salvation shall be for ever, and my righteousness shall not be abolished.

* Pſ.102.26. Mat.24.35. ‖ Or, as a louse.

t The Heavens and Earth shall pass away, either 1. Simply, and by a substantial corruption or annihilation, which yet is to be understood comparatively or conditionally, that these should sooner vanish into nothing, than Gods promise of Salvation should not be accomplished: as when it is said, Heaven and Earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away, Mat. 24.35. It is thus expounded, It is easier for Heaven and Earth to pass, than (for) one tittle of the Law to fail. Or 2. In regard of their present State and Properties, and Use, as Smoke is here said to vanish, although the substance of it be not destroyed. u As they shall be dissolved, as we read, 2 *Pet.*3.11. and death is nothing else but a dissolution.

7 Hearken unto me, ye that know x righteousness, the people * in whose heart is my law y, * fear ye not the reproach of men z, neither be ye afraid of their revilings.

* Pſ.37.31. * Mat.10.28.

x That love and practise it, as knowing is commonly used. y Who are tacitly opposed to the carnal Jews that had the Law written only in Tables. Compare 2 *Cor.*3.3. *Heb.*8.10. z The censures of the carnal Jews, who will load their believing and godly Brethren with a world of Reproaches: but let not these things discourage you.

8 For * the moth shall eat them up a, like a garment, and the worm shall eat them like wool b: but my righteousness shall be for ever, and my salvation from generation to generation.

* Ch. 50.9.

a Your Reproaches shall be easily destroyed, and so God will revenge your cause upon them, and deliver you from their Reproaches. b Like a woollen Garment, which is sooner corrupted by Moths or such Creatures than linnen.

9 Awake, awake c, put on strength d, O arm of the LORD; awake, as in the ancient days, in the generations of old. Art thou not it that hath cut e Rahab f, and wounded the * dragon g?

*Pſ.74.13,14. Ezek.29.3. Ch. 27.1.

c Thou who hast carried thy self like one asleep, and unconcerned for thy People, and unable to save them. The Prophet having foretold what great things God would do for his Church, and longing for the accomplishment of them, and knowing that Prayer was one means by which God fulfils his Promises, he poureth forth this Prayer to God in his own name, and in the name of Gods People. d Clothe and adorn thy self with mighty works, put forth thy strength. e Heb. hewed with thy Sword. f Egypt, so called here, and *Psal.*87.4. & 89.10. either from its Pride or strength, or from the shape and figure of that Land. g Pharaoh, so called, *Psal.*74.13. *Ezek.*29.3. & 32.2.

10 Art thou not it which hath * dried the sea h, the waters of the great deep? that hath made the depths of the sea a way for the ransomed i to pass over?

* Ex. 14.21.

h Art thou not the same God, and as potent now as then thou wast? i For thy people whom thou didst redeem and bring out of Egypt.

11 Therefore k * the redeemed of the Lord shall return, and come with singing unto Zion, and everlasting joy shall be * upon their head l: they shall obtain gladness and joy, and sorrow and mourning shall flee away.

* Ch. 35.10. * Pſ.7.16.

k Or, So. Heb. And. This verse contains an answer to the the Prophets Prayer. It is true, I did these great things, and I will do the like again. l Like a Crown of Glory. But for the accomplishment of this magnificent Promise we must needs look beyond their return from Babylon into their own Land, when they met with many discouragements, and troubles, and calamities, and extend it unto the coming of Christ, by whom these great things were procured, and actually conferred upon his People.

12 I, even I am he that comforteth you: who art thou m, that thou shouldest be afraid * of a man that shall die, and of the son of man which shall be made * as grass n?

* Pſ. 118.6. * Ch. 40.6. 1 Pet. 1.24.

m How unreasonable and distrustful art thou, O my Church! how unlike to thy self! how unsuitable in these despondencies unto thy own professions and Obligations! n Of a weak mortal and perishing Creature.

13 And forgettest the LORD thy maker o, that hath * stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth? and hast feared continually every day, because of the fury of the oppressor, as if he ‖ were ready to destroy p? and where is the fury of the oppressor q?

* Job.9.8. Pſ. 104.2. Ch. 40.22. & 42.5. & 44.24. ‖ Or. made himself ready.

o And dost not consider the infinite power of that God who made thee, and who will plead thy cause. p As if it were in his power to destroy thee in a moment. q What is become of the power and rage of the Babylonians? Is it not all gone? Are not they broken, and thou delivered? He speaks of the thing as if it were already done, becauſe it ſhould certainly and ſuddenly be done. Where is it? It is no where, it is quite loſt and gone, as this Phraſe is frequently uſed, Pſal. 42.3. *Zech.*1.5. 1 *Cor.*15.55.

14 The captive exile haſteneth that he may be looſed r, and that he ſhould not die in the pit, nor that his bread ſhould fail.

r God is not ſlack, as you think, but maketh haſte to fulfil his promiſe, and to reſcue his captive and oppreſſed People from all their oppreſſions and miſeries.

‖ Or, that ſtilleth the ſea when the waves thereof roar.

15 But I am the LORD thy God ‖ that * divided the ſea, whoſe waves roared: the LORD of hoſts is his name.

* Job.26.12. Jer.31.35.

16 And I have put my words * in thy mouth s, and have covered thee in the ſhadow of mine hand t, that I may plant the heavens, and * lay the foundations of the earth u, and ſay unto Zion, Thou art my people x.

* Deut.18.18. Ch.49.2,3. * Pſ. 11. 3. & 60. 2. & 75. 3.

s Theſe great and glorious Promiſes which are in thy mouth, are not the vain words of man, a weak, and unconſtant, and unfaithful Creature, but the words of the Almighty, unchangeable, and faithful God, and therefore they ſhall be infallibly accompliſhed. Theſe words are manifeſtly ſpoken by God, either 1. To Iſaiah, by whom theſe promiſes were delivered: Or 2. To Chriſt, of whom, and to whom many things are ſaid in this Prophecy, as we have already ſeen, and will further appear. And ſuch abrupt and ſudden Apoſtrophes to perſons not mentioned in the foregoing words are not unuſual in this Propheſie, as hath been obſerved. Or rather 3. To Iſrael, to Gods Church and People, to whom he ſpeaks both in the foregoing and following verſes. For Gods Word is frequently ſaid to be put into the mouths, not only of the Prophets, but of the People alſo, as *Iſa.*59.21. as alſo Deut. 30.14. *Joſ.*1.8. &c. t Have protected thee by my Almighty power. See the ſame Phraſe, Iſa. 49.2. u I have given thee theſe promiſes, and this protection in all thy calamities, to aſſure thee of my care and kindneſs to thee, and that I will reform thee in a moſt glorious manner, and bring thee unto that perfect and bleſſed eſtate which is reſerved for the days of the Meſſiah, which in Scripture Phraſe is called a making of new Heavens, and a new Earth, *Iſa.*65.17. & 66.22. 2 *Pet.*3.13. and elſewhere. x That I may own thee for my People, in a more illuſtrious manner than ever I have done.

* Ch. 52. 1.

17 * Awake y, awake, ſtand up z, O Jeruſalem, which haſt drunk at the hand of the LORD the cup of his fury a; thou haſt * drunken the dregs of the * cup of trembling b, and ‖ wrung them out c.

* Pſ. 75. 8. * Zech.12. 2. ‖ Or, ſucked them out.

y Either 1. Out of the ſleep of ſecurity. Or 2. Out of the ſleep of death. Heb. rouſe up thy ſelf: come out of that forlorn and diſconſolate condition in which thou haſt ſo long been. This ſenſe ſuits beſt with the following words. z Upon thy feet, O thou who haſt ſain, and been thrown down to the ground. a Which haſt been ſorely afflicted; for ſo this Metaphor is is uſed, *Pſal.*75 8. *Jer.*25.15,&c.& 49.12. b Which ſtriketh him that drinketh it with a deadly horror. c Drunk every drop of it. See on *Pſal.*75.8.

18 There is none to guide her among all the ſons whom ſhe hath brought forth: neither is there any that taketh her by the hand, of all the ſons that ſhe hath brought up d.

d When thou waſt drunk with this Cup, and not able to go, neither thy Princes, nor Prophets, nor Prieſts, were able or willing to lead and ſupport thee.

* Ch. 47. 9. † Heb. happened. † Heb: breaking.

19 * Theſe two things e † are come unto thee: who ſhall be ſorry for thee? deſolation, and † deſtruction, and the famine, and the ſword: by whom ſhall I comfort thee f?

e Either 1. Thoſe who were now mentioned, 1. that ſhe was drunk with the cup of Gods Wrath, v. 7. that ſhe had none to ſupport or comfort her in that condition. Or 2. Thoſe which here follow, which altho they be expreſſed in four words, yet they may fitly be reduced to two things, the deſolation or devaſtation of the Land, and the deſtruction of the People, by Famine and Sword. So Famine and Sword are not named as new evils, but only as the particular ways or means of bringing the deſtruction there mentioned; and the words may be thus rendred, deſolation and deſtruction, even (this Hebrew particle being oft taken expoſitively, whereof many inſtances have bin given) famine (or, by famine) and ſword. Or, two may be put indefinitely for many, as double is put for abundantly more, Job 11.6. Iſa 40.2.& 61.7. *Zech.*9.12. and elſewhere. f I cannot find any man who is able to comfort & relieve thee.

* Lam.2. 11. 12.

20 * Thy ſons have fainted g, they lie h at the head of all the ſtreets i as a wild bull in a net k: they are full of the fury of the LORD, the rebuke of thy God.

g They are ſo far from being able to comfort thee, as was ſaid *v.*18. that they themſelves faint away for want of comfort, and through Famine. h Dead by Famine or the Sword of the Enemy. i Where men enter in or go out of the ſtreets, where the Enemy found them either oppoſing their entrance, or running out of them to make an eſcape. k Thoſe of them who are not ſlain are ſtrugling for Life; and altho they murmur at God, and fight with Men, yet they cannot prevail or eſcape.

21 Therefore hear now this, thou afflicted, and * drunken, but not with wine l.

* Ch.29. 9.

CHAP. LII.

1 * AWake, awake, put on thy ſtrength a, O Zion, put on thy beautiful garments b, O Jeruſalem, the holy city c: for henceforth there ſhall no more come into thee d the uncircumciſed e, and the unclean f.

* Ch.51.17.

a God biddeth his Church do that which ſhe intreated him to do, *ch.*51.9. And becauſe Gods word is operative, and effectual, and his ſayings are doings, this is a prediction and promiſe what ſhe ſhould do, that ſhe ſhould awake or ariſe out of her low eſtate, and be ſtrong and couragious. b Thy ſorrows ſhall be ended, and thou ſhalt be advanced into a moſt glorious and bleſſed condition. c O my Church, which is every where called by the name of Zion or Jeruſalem. d Either to moleſt thee, or to aſſociate themſelves with thee: or to defile or corrupt thee. e Heathens, or Infidels, who are commonly called uncircumciſed. f Nor any others, who tho they be circumciſed, as the Jews generally were, are unclean in any thing. Whereby he intimates that there ſhould be a greater purity and Reformation in the Church than formerly there had been, which was eminently accompliſhed in the Church and Kingdom of Chriſt.

2 Shake thy ſelf from the duſt g: ariſe, and ſit down h, O Jeruſalem: looſe thy ſelf from the bands of thy neck i, O captive daughter of Zion.

g In which thou haſt lain as a Priſoner, or ſate as a Mourner. h Upon thy Throne. Or, ſit up, as this word is rendred *Gen.*27.19. i The yoke of thy Captivity ſhall be taken off from thee. It is a Metaphor from Beaſts that have the yoke faſtened by bands to their necks.

3 For thus ſaith the LORD, * ye have ſold your ſelves k for nought l, and ye ſhall be redeemed without money m.

* Pſ.44.12. Ch.45.13. Jer.15.13.

k By your ſins, into the hands of the Chaldeans. l Without any price or valuable conſideration paid by them either to you, or to me your Lord and Owner. m Without paying any ranſom.

4 For thus ſaith the Lord GOD, My people went down aforetime into ‖ Egypt to ſojourn there n, and o ‖ the Aſſyrian p oppreſſed them without cauſe q.

‖ Gen.46.6. ‖ Jer.50.17.

n Where they had protection and ſuſtenance, and therefore owed ſubjection to the King of Egypt. And yet when he oppreſſed them I puniſhed him ſeverely, and delivered them out of his hands. Which is eaſily underſtood from the following words. o Or, but; for here is an oppoſition made between theſe two caſes. p The King of Babylon, who is called the King of Aſſyria, 2 King.23.29. compared with ch 24.7. as alſo the Perſian Emperor is called, Ezra 6. 22. becauſe it was one and the ſame Empire which was poſſeſſed, firſt by the Aſſyrians, then by the Babylonians, and afterwards by the Perſians. q Without any ſuch ground or colour, by meer force invading their Land, and carrying them away into Captivity. For altho it be ſaid that God gave this Land and People into his hand, 2 *Chr.*36.17. by his Counſel and Providence, yet that was neither known to, nor regarded by the King of Babylon, nor was it a good and lawful Title, Gods Word, and not his Providence, being the rule by which Mens rights are determined; otherwiſe a Robber hath a right to my purſe, which he cannot take away from me upon the high-way without Gods Providence.

5 Now

5 Now therefore, what have I here r, ſaith the LORD, that my people is taken away s for nought t? they that rule over them u, make them to howl x ſaith the LORD, and my name continually every day is * blaſphemed y.

* Ezek. 36. 20, 23. Rom. 2. 24.

r Heb. What to me here? The ſenſe is either 1. What do I here? Why do I ſit ſtill here, and not go to Babylon to puniſh the Babylonians, and to deliver my people? Or 2. What honour have I by ſuffering this Injury to be done to my People? s Were carried away Captive by the Babylonians. t Without any provocation or pretence of right. See before on v. 3. u Who by their Office were obliged to deal juſtly and tenderly with their Subjects. x By their tyrannical and unmerciful uſage of them. y In ſtead of that praiſe and ſervice which the Babylonians owe me for all their ſucceſſes and Conqueſts, they blaſpheme me as if I wanted either Power or Goodwill to ſave my people out of their hands.

6 Therefore my people ſhall know my name z: therefore they ſhall know a in that day b, that I am he that doth ſpeak, behold, it is I c.

z They ſhall have ſenſible Experience of my infinite power and goodneſs in fighting for them and againſt you: whereby they ſhall be able to put your blaſphemous Tongues to ſilence. a Which word is underſtood from the foregoing clauſe, as is very frequent in Scripture. b When I ſhall redeem my People: which work was begun by the return of the Jews from Babylon, and afterwards carried on, and at laſt perfected by the coming of the Meſſiah. c That all theſe promiſes are not the words of a weak, or fickle, or deceitful man, but of him who is the Omnipotent, and Unchangeable, and Covenant-keeping God. Or thus, That I who have formerly ſpoken to you by my Servants the Prophets, (for it was the Spirit of Chriſt which was and ſpake in them, 1 Pet. 1. 11.) do now ſpeak to you in my own perſon, being cloathed with fleſh. Which agrees well, as with the Analogy of Faith, and with divers other Scriptures, ſo particularly with the next verſe, and with divers following paſſages, which ſo evidently ſpeak of the perſon and Kingdom of Chriſt, that they cannot without great force be underſtood of any other.

7 * How beautiful d upon the mountains e are the feet f of him g that bringeth good tidings, that publiſheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that publiſheth ſalvation h, that ſaith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth i.

* Nah. 1. 15. Rom. 10. 15.

d Theſe are words of rejoicing and admiration. They are exceeding precious and acceptable. e Of Zion, and Moriah, which are ſometimes mentioned as one Mountain, and ſometimes as two. Or, in the mountanous Country of Judea, to which theſe glad tidings were brought, and from which they were ſpread abroad into other Countries. f Which carry this welcom meſſenger, or the meſſenger himſelf. g Or, of them. For the ſingular number is oft put for the plural: altho it may be here emphatically uſed, to ſignifie that altho there were many Meſſengers, yet one was the chief, and Lord of the Emoaily, whoſe coming was more acceptable than the reſt: which ſuits excellently to the Meſſiah, who is called the Meſſenger of the Covenant, Mal. 3. 1. and is oft ſaid to be ſent by God, as Joh. 6. 38. & 8. 16, 18, &c. to publiſh the glad tidings of Salvation. h Thoſe emphatical and repeated Expreſſions are a ſufficient evidence, that ſomething further and better is here intended than their deliverance out of Babylon, which in it ſelf was but a very imperfect work, and reached at firſt but to a few of that numerous People, and was attended with many fears, and ſorrows, and remainders of their Bondage, Ezra 9. 8, 9. Nehem. 1. 3. and altho that was the beginning of theſe glad tidings, yet they extended much further even to the coming of Chriſt, by whom alone true Peace and Salvation were procured. i It is true, this might in ſome ſort be ſaid when God ſo over-ruled the affairs of the World, and the Heart of Cyrus, that his People were freed from the Babyloniſh Captivity, and reſtored into, and ſetled in their own Land. Altho he that conſiders the ſtate of Gods People in their own Land after their return, will find that the reign of God in and over the World was not then either very conſpicuous or glorious. And therefore it ſeems far more reaſonable to underſtand it of the days of the Meſſiah, when God did diſcover and exerciſe his Dominion over the World far more eminently than ever he had done from the beginning of the World until that time.

8 Thy watchmen k ſhall lift up the voice l, with the voice together ſhall they ſing: for they ſhall ſee m eye to eye n, when the LORD ſhall bring again Zion o.

k Thy Miniſters who ſhall deſcry the approach and coming of this Heavenly King and Kingdom. l Partly to give notice to all people of theſe glad tidings; and partly by way of exultation, to ſing forth the Praiſes of God for this glorious day and Mercy, as it here follows. m They ſhall underſtand, and ſo be able to teach Divine Myſteries. n Very diſtinctly, and clearly, and familiarly, their Eyes beholding the Eyes of this King of Glory, as it is ſaid of Zedekiah, Jer. 34. 3. Thine Eyes ſhall behold the Eyes of the King of Babylon; and as it is ſaid, Mouth to Mouth, Numb. 12. 8. and Face to Face, Gen. 32. 30. Exod. 33. 11. Numb. 14. 14. They ſhall ſee with their bodily Eyes the King of the Church, or the Word made Fleſh, as they are ſaid to have done, Joh. 1. 14. & 1 Joh. 1. 1. They ſhall be Eye and Ear-witneſſes of the Words and Works of Chriſt, and therefore their Teſtimony of theſe things ſhall be more certain and valuable. o When God ſhall compleat the work of bringing his Church out of Capeivity; which was begun at the return out of Babylon, and perfected by Chriſts coming into the World.

9 Break forth into joy, * ſing together, ye waſte places of Jeruſalem p: for the LORD hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jeruſalem.

* Ch. 49. 13; & 55. 12.

p For you ſhall be reſtored unto your former, and a far greater fertility.

10 The LORD hath made bare his holy arm q in the eyes of all the nations, and * all the ends of the earth ſhall ſee the ſalvation of our God r.

* Pſ. 98. 2; Luk. 3. 6.

q Hath diſcovered and put forth his great power, which for a long time hath lain hid, and ſeemed to be idle. r All Nations of the World ſhall with aſtoniſhment behold the wonderful Work of God, firſt in bringing his People out of Babylon, and afterwards in their Redemption by Chriſt.

11 *Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence s, touch no unclean thing t, go you out of the midſt of her; be ye clean, that bear the veſſels of the LORD u.

* Ch. 48. 20; 2 Cor. 6. 17. Rev. 18. 4.

s Make haſte, O ye baniſhed Jews, to depart out of Babylon into your own Land, that there I may meet with you, and bleſs you, and perform thoſe further and greater things which I have promiſed there to do for you. And this invitation was the more neceſſary, becauſe God foreſaw that a great number of the Jews would upon worldly conſiderations continue in thoſe foreign Countries in which they were ſetled, and be very backward to return to the Holy Land. t And when you go thence, take heed that you carry not along with you any of their Superſtitions or Idolatries, but purifie and prepare your ſelves, that ſo God may return to you in mercy, when you return into your own Lands. u And eſpecially you Prieſts and Levites, whoſe Office it is to miniſter in holy things, and to carry back the holy Veſſels of the Temple, keep your ſelves from all pollution.

12 For ye ſhall not go out with haſte, nor go by flight x: for the LORD will go before you: and the God of Iſrael will † be your reward y.

x But ſecurely, and in triumph, being conducted by your great Captain the Lord of Hoſts. And therefore you will have both the greater Obligation, and the more leiſure and opportunity to cleanſe your ſelves from all filthineſs. y So that none ſhall be able either to oppoſe & ſtop you in your march, or to fall upon you in the rear, as Enemies commonly do.

13 Behold a, my ſervant b ſhall ‖ deal prudently c, he ſhall be exalted, & extolled, and be very high d.

‖ Or, proſper;

a This is the beginning of a new Prophecy, which is continued from hence to the end of the next Chapter; and therefore it is well obſerved by divers, both ancient and modern Interpreters, that the Fifty and Third Chapter ſhould have begun here. b Qu. Of whom doth the Prophet here ſpeak? It is apparent that theſe three laſt verſes of this Chapter, and all the following Chapter ſpeak of one and the ſame perſon. And that that Perſon is Chriſt is ſo evident, that the Chaldee Paraphraſt, and other ancient, and ſome later Hebrew Doctors, underſtand it directly of him, and that divers Jews have been convinced and converted to the Chriſtian Faith by the evidence of this Prophecy. And there is not a verſe in this whole context which doth not afford a clear and convincing proof of this truth, as we ſhall ſee. And there needs no other Argument to confirm it, than the variety and vanity of the pretended Expoſitions of the Jews, who uſe all poſſible Wit and Art to wreſt all theſe paſſages to other perſons. Thoſe who would ſeem wiſer than the reſt, and confute the other Expoſitions of their Brethren, underſtand it either of the Jewiſh People in general, or of the prophet Jeremiah in particular. But both theſe conceits are ſo groundleſs and abſurd, that there is ſcarce a verſe but confutes them, as we ſhall clearly diſcern in the Expoſition of them. And therefore other Jews reject them both, and underſtand it of Abraham, or Moſes, or Joſiah, or Ezra, or Zorobabel; and they might as well have named twenty perſons more, to whom this place might be applied upon as good grounds as to any of theſe. But there is not one clauſe in all this context which is not moſt truly and fitly applyed to Chriſt, as I ſhall make apparent, ſtep by ſtep. And firſt this Title of Gods Servant is in an eminent and peculiar manner given to Chriſt in this very Prophecy, as Iſa. 42. 1. & 49. 6. & 53. 11. & Ezek. 34. 23. Zech. 3. 8. c Shall manage his Kingdom with admirable Wiſdom. Or, ſhall proſper, as it is in the margent, and as this word is frequently rendred, and particularly in this very caſe, and of this ſame perſon, Jer. 23. 5. Which alſo ſeems beſt to agree with the following clauſe, and with chap. 53. 10, 11. And this intimation concerning the future Proſperity and Advancement of the Meſſiah, is fitly put in the firſt place to prevent thoſe ſcandals which otherwiſe might ariſe from the ſucceeding paſſages which largely deſcribe his ſtate of Humiliation and deep affliction. d Here are three words ſignifying the ſame thing to expreſs the Height and Glory of his Exaltation. Which agrees moſt fitly to Chriſt, but cannot without great force be applied to Jeremiah, who had no greater Honour or favour done him by the Chaldeans at the taking of Jeruſalem, than to be left at liberty to go where he pleaſed, Jer. 40. 4. and who after that time met with great contempt and hardſhip from his own Countrymen, Jer. 42, and 43, and 44.

14 As many were aſtonied e at thee f; (his * Ch.53.3,10. * viſage was ſo marred more than any man, and his form more than the ſons of men g.)

e Were ſtruck with wonder, either 1. At his glorious Endowments, and the excellency and power of his Doctrine, and his miraculous works. Or rather 2. At his great Deformity, and ſtupendious humiliation and calamity, as may be gathered, both from the following words, and from the uſe of this word in Scripture, which is generally uſed in a bad ſenſe, or of wondring at ſome extraordinary evil, as *Jer.*18.16. & 19. 8. and oft elſewhere, and never in a good ſenſe, or of wondring at any thing which is extraordinarily good. f At thee, O my Servant, to whom he now turneth his ſpeech, and then turneth his ſpeech from him, and ſpeaks of him in the next words; ſuch ſudden changes of Perſons, and ſpeaking of one and the ſame Man, ſometimes in one perſon, and then preſently in another, being very frequent in the Writings of the Prophets, as we have already ſeen in divers inſtances. g He was more deformed or uncomely than any other man. Which was undoubtedly verified in Chriſt, who in reſpect of his Birth, and Breeding, and manner of Life, was moſt obſcure and contemptible, and therefore ſaid to be a worm, and no man, a reproach of men, and deſpiſed of the people, Pſal. 22. 6. who was more hated and vilified by the generality of the Jews, than any man upon Earth, and was accounted and called by them a Deceiver, a Samaritan, a Blaſphemer, and a Devil. &c. whoſe Countenance alſo was ſo marred with frequent Watchings, and Faſtings, and Troubles, that he was thought to be near Fifty years old when he was but about Thirty, *Joh.*8.57. and was farther ſpoiled with buffetings, and crowning with Thorns, and other cruel and deſpightful uſages from men, and with the deep and continual ſenſe of the burden of mens ſins, and of Gods diſpleaſure due unto them; all which did not only oppreſs his Spirit, but had a great influence upon the very conſtitution of his Body.

15 So h ſhall he ſprinkle i many nations, the kings ſ Rom.15.21. ſhall ſhut their mouths at him k: for that * which had not been told them ſhall they ſee l, and that which they had not heard ſhall they conſider m.

h His Exaltation ſhall be anſwerable to his Humiliation. i Either 1. With his Blood, which is called, the blood of ſprinkling, Heb. 12. 24. or, ſhall juſtifie them, as it follows, Iſa. 53. 11. which is frequently expreſſed by waſhing, as Pſal. 51. 2, 7. Ezek. 16. 9. and by ſprinkling clean water, Ezek. 36. 25. Or 2. With his Word or Doctrine; which being oft compared to Rain or Waters, as Deut. 32. 2. Iſa. 55. 10, 11. Habak. 2. 14. &c. may be ſaid to be ſprinkled, as it is ſaid to be dropped, Deut. 32. 2. Ezek. 20. 46. & 21. 2. And this ſenſe ſeems to be moſt favoured by the following words. k Shall be ſilent before him out of a profound Humility, and Reverence, and Admiration of his Wiſdom, and an eager deſire to hear and receive Counſels and Oracles from his Mouth. Compare Job 29. 9, 10, 11, 21. They ſhall no more contend with him, nor blaſpheme the true God and Religion, as they formerly uſed to do. l For they ſhall hear from his Mouth many excellent Doctrines, which alſo will be new and ſtrange to them, ſuch as men are very deſirous to hear. And particularly they ſhall hear from him that comfortable Doctrine concerning the Converſion and Salvation of the Gentiles, which was not only new to them, but was ſtrange and incredible to the moſt of the Jews themſelves. m Or, they ſhall underſtand. Which is added to ſhew that the ſeeing in the former clauſe was meant of diſcerning theſe things with the Eyes of their Minds.

CHAP. LIII.

1 * WHo hath believed our ‖ † report a? and to whom is the Arm of the LORD b revealed c?

* Joh.12.38. Rom.10.16. ‖ Or, doctrine. † Heb. hearing.

a The Prophet having in the 3 laſt verſes of the former Chapter made a general report concerning the great and wonderful Humiliation, and Exaltation of Chriſt, of which he intended more largely to diſcourſe in this Chapter, before he deſcended to particulars he thought fit to uſe this Preface, Who, not only of the Gentiles, but even of the Jews, will believe the truth of what I have ſaid and muſt ſay? Few or none. The generality of them will never receive, nor believe in ſuch a Meſſias as this. Thus this place is expounded by Chriſt himſelf, *Joh.*12.38. and by Paul, *Rom.*10.16. And this premonition was highly neceſſary, both to caution the Jews that they ſhould not ſtumble at this ſtone, and to inſtruct the Gentiles that they ſhould not be ſurpriſed, nor ſcandalized, nor ſeduced with their example. b Either 1. the Word of God, called the report in the former clauſe, the Doctrine of the Goſpel, which is expreſly called the power of God, *1 Cor.*1.18. becauſe of that admirable Virtue and Succeſs which accompanied the preaching of it. Or 2. The Meſſiah, who alſo is called the arm, or power of God, 1 Cor. 1. 24. and that moſt fitly, becauſe the Almighty power of God was both ſeated in him, and declared and exerciſed by him in his powerful words and mighty Deeds, as Simon for ſome great works wrought by him, was called by the Samaritanes, the great power of God, Act. 8. 10. c Not outwardly, for ſo Chriſt was revealed and preached to vaſt numbers, both of Jews and Gentiles, as is evident from this Context, and from divers other places of Scripture, but inwardly and with power to their Minds and Hearts, of which kind of Revelation, ſee Eph. 1. 17, 18, 19. and compare it with *2 Cor.*4.4. Thus even Moſes, tho ſufficiently revealed to the Eyes and Ears of the Jews, yet is ſaid to be unrevealed or hid from their Minds and Hearts, 2 Cor. 3. 14, 15. The ſenſe of the place is, few or none of the Jews will believe the Goſpel, or receive their Meſſiah when he comes among them.

2 * For he ſhall grow up before him as a tender * Ch. 49. 7. & 52. 14. Mark 9.12. plant, and as a root out of a dry ground d: he hath no form nor comelineſs e: and when we ſhall ſee him, there is no beauty that we ſhould deſire him f.

d And the reaſon or occaſion why the Jews will ſo generally reject their Meſſiah, is becauſe he ſhall not come into the World with ſecular pomp, and power, like an earthly Monarch, as they carnally and groundleſly imagined, but he ſhall grow up (or ſpring up, Heb. aſcend, to wit, out of the ground, as it follows, be brought forth, and brought up before him (before the unbelieving Jews of whom he ſpake v. 1. and that in the ſingular number, as here, who were witneſſes of his mean original; and therefore deſpiſed him, according to Chriſts obſervation, Joh. 4. 44. or, as others, according to his face, or outward appearance, as he was man; whereby he ſufficiently implies that he had another, a far higher, and a Divine Nature in him) as a tender plant (or, as this very word is tranſlated, Ezek. 17. 4. a young twig, which is a ſmall and inconſiderable thing) and as a root (as Chriſt is called, Rom. 15. 12. and elſewhere, or, as a branch, the root being put metonimically for the branch growing out of the root, as it is apparently uſed, where Chriſt is called the root of Jeſſe, and of David. Iſa. 11. 10. Rev. 5. 5. and in other places, as 2 Chr. 22. 10.) out of a dry ground, out of a mean and barren ſoil, whoſe productions are generally poor and contemptible; either 1. Out of the womb of a Virgin; but that was no ground of contempt: Or 2. Of the Jewiſh Nation, which was then poor, and deſpiſed, and enſlaved: Or 3. Out of a poor, and decayed, and contemptible Family, ſuch as the Royal Family of David was at that time. e His bodily preſence and condition in the world ſhall be mean and contemptible. f When we ſhall look upon him, expecting to find incomparable Beauty and Majeſty in his Countenance, & Carriage, and Condition, we ſhall be altogether diſappointed, and ſhall meet with nothing amiable or deſirable in him. This the Prophet ſpeaketh in the perſon of the carnal and unbelieving Jews, we, i.e. our People, the Jewiſh Nation.

3 He is deſpiſed and rejected of men g, a man of ſorrows h, and acquainted with grief i: and ‖ † we hid as it were our faces from him k; he was deſpiſed, and we eſteemed him not l.

‖ Or, he hid as it were his face from us. † Heb. as a hiding of faces from him, or, from us.

g Accounted as the ſcum of Mankind, as one unworthy of the company and converſation of all men. h Whoſe whole Life was filled with, and in a manner made up of an uninterrupted ſucceſſion of ſorrows and ſufferings. i Who had conſtant experience of, and familiar converſe with grievous afflictions: for knowledge is oft taken practically, or for Experience, as *Gen.*3.5.2 *Cor.*5.21. and elſewhere. k We ſcorned and loathed to look upon him. Or, as others, he hid as it were his face from us, as one aſhamed to ſhew his Face, or to be ſeen by any Men, as perſons conſcious to themſelves of any great deformity, do commonly ſhun the ſight of Men, as Lepers did, *Lev.*13.45. l Here are divers words expreſſing the ſame thing, to ſignifie both the utmoſt degree of contempt, and how ſtrange and wonderful a thing it was, that ſo excellent a perſon ſhould be ſo deſpiſed.

4 Surely * he hath born our griefs, and carried * Mat. 8.17. our ſorrows m: yet we did eſteem him ſtricken, ſmitten of God, and afflicted n.

m And whereas it may ſeem an unreaſonable and incredible thing, that ſo excellent and glorious, and ſo innocent and juſt a perſon ſhould meet with this uſage, it muſt be known that his griefs and miſeries were not laid upon him for his own ſake, but wholly and ſolely for the ſake of ſinful men, in whoſe ſtead he ſtood, and for whoſe ſins he ſuffered, as it here follows. n Yet our people, the Jews, were ſo far from giving him the Glory and Praiſe of ſuch a prodigious condeſcention and compaſſion, that they made a moſt perverſe conſtruction of it, and ſo great was their prejudice againſt him, that they believed that he was thus diſgraced and puniſhed, and at laſt put to death by the juſt judgment of God, for his Blaſphemy and other manifold Wickedneſſes.

5 But o he was ‖ * wounded p for our tranſgreſſi- ‖ Or, tormented. ons q, he was bruiſed for our iniquities; the * Rom.4.25. 1 Cor.15.3. chaſtiſeour nature, by which the punishment of vice and the rewards of virtue are put off, or not discernible to the eyes of the world, though this can never to a thinking mind lessen his belief of the certainty of such. It is this mistaken notion of happiness which has betrayed men into many absurdities, which they otherwise might have eschewed. We have each a different road to happiness, and in travelling thro' it we hesitate not to make any attempts to gain our end. The avaritious man sees happiness in his increasing heaps; this consideration absorbs every other idea; he is attentive to every shift, however pitiful, that can augment his funds, but dead to every reflection, however reasonable, that thwarts his favourite pursuit. The man of learning calls reading "the feast of reason;" on this he feeds eagerly, but if too much so, he loses his appetite for other concerns that no less interest him who is to live in society—The lover forms to himself a plan which he thinks differs from every other in being more certain, in being more innocent, and even the idea of which enables him to anticipate the much-wished for event; but in proportion as his hopes are sanguine, in the same proportion will his disappointment be bitter. A thousand circumstances may fall out to snatch from him his beloved object, and he will startle not a little to find reason staring him in the face to reprobate his conduct. But let not the young be deceived in their notion of happiness. There is no happiness without the reflections of conscious rectitude, no rectitude without virtue, and no virtue durable without piety. Happiness built on any other foundation will but elude the grasp, and we shall curse the hour when we became the dupes of a phantom, and deprived ourselves of more substantial enjoyments. It may be said, that many whose virtue is exalted, whose conduct is irreproachable, are nevertheless unhappy if we may judge from the melancholy cast of their behaviour; but here we are liable to a deception. They may sigh for the recollection of dear but departed friends, and grief may encircle every thought, and speak in every utterance, yet they still possess the heart-felt satisfaction of spotless reflection, which to lose is the only irremediable calamity.

For the WESTMINSTER MAGAZINE.

The following Account of the RABBI who appeared at GLASGOW, we received in a Letter from that Place.

HE is a native of Germany, the son of a High Priest, and he himself a teacher of the law. It seems it is customary at one of their feasts to have an annual sermon against the Christian religion; and this young man was at two several times appointed to preach this sermon; he performed the task the first time; but the second year, discoursing on the 53d of Isaiah, and coming to these words, "He made his grave with the wicked," which he was obliged to apply to Moses, but told his audience plainly, that this could never respect the lawgiver; for Moses never "made his grave with the wicked;" for "the Lord buried him." Before his discourse was done he was quite confused in his thoughts, and turned afterwards very melancholy, and decayed in his health. His father, perceiving this sent for a physician, who used his utmost skill, but in vain; at last he made free to enquire if his disease was not in his mind, promising at the same time if he would reveal it, he would not divulge it without his consent. He then told him it was about religion, forasmuch as he could find no comfort in the Bible, on account of the contradiction of the promises he met with. The physician asked if ever he had read the New Testament. He answered he had read the Alcoran, Voltaire, and many other books on religion, but that he would not read the New Testament. The physician insisted, as he had read many other books that had the name of religion, it was but reasonable he should read it. He persuaded him to consent, and went to a Popish Priest and borrowed one, and brought it him. He began with the first chapter of Matthew; but no sooner met with the name Jesus Christ, than he threw it in the fire; but recollecting it was borrowed, he drew it out before the fire had caught it, and immediately blotted out the name

Christ

Chriſt wherever he met with it. This done he ſet about reading it again, and wondering to ſee how it was connected with the Old Teſtament, began ſeriouſly to think there was more than ordinary in this book, read on till he ſaw ſtill more and more connection between the two diſpenſations; but grew exceed ngly ſorry for his blotting out the names. All this time he continued preaching in the old way, but was not ſo inveterate againſt the religion of Jeſus. He took care all this time to lock up the New Teſtament; but happening one day to leave it out, his ſervant came into the room, accompanied by another Jew, enquired of his neighbour if he knew what book it was; he looked into it, and urged it was the book of the Impoſtor. They then both ran into the Synagogue while this young man was in the pulpit, and alarmed the whole congregation that he was turned Chriſtian. He came down, and had to flee from them. Some time after this his father ſent to him, that if he would recant, he would forgive him. He attempted it, but in vain; for he was almoſt ſeized with deſpair, thinking he had ſinned the unpardonable ſin; and the phyſician brought the Popiſh Prieſt, who laboured to perſuade him to the contrary.

To be ſhort, his father, ſeeing he could not perſuade him to recant, hired three villains to aſſaſſinate him. His friend the phyſican got ſome intelligence of this, and deſired him to flee; he immediately fled into France, and got into a convent; but not agreeing with their doctrines of tranſubſtantiation and prayers for the dead, he aſked one of the friars for an explication, and at the ſame time told him his own opinion. The friar ſaid, he ſuſpected he had been reading the works of Luther and Calvin. He anſwered he had never heard of them, nor ſeen their books. This ſet his curioſity on edge, and immediately he went to a library and bought them, from which he ſaw plainly the inconſiſtency of the Popiſh doctrine with the New Teſtament; and leaving the convent came over to Dublin, where he was made Profeſſor of the Oriental Languages, and preached in ſome of the Diſſenting churches. The faculty of Iriſh Profeſſors would not allow him to preach without taking orders in the Church of England. He told them that his conſcience would not allow him to ſubſcribe the Thirty-nine Articles; and leaving Dublin came directly to this place, and took private lodgings. Mr. David Dale hearing of him ſought him out, and took him to his own houſe, and then he began to grow more public. The moſt of the Miniſters in town, Meſſrs. Sheares, Wardlow, Patterſon, &c. dined with him on Friday, when it was ſettled he ſhould preach in Dr. Giles's church on Sabbath afternoon, and in another church at night. I heard him in the evening; his text was Heb. xiii. 8. The heads of his diſcourſe were, Firſt, to prove that Chriſt was the ſame before there was any written revelation; 2dly, that he was the ſame under the law; and, 3dly, that he was the ſame, but ſtill more glorioufly diſplayed, in the goſpel diſpenſation. All which he was exceeding beautiful in, illuſtrating eſpecially from the Old Teſtament, and gave ſome grand ſignifications to the original. On Monday he preached at our church; laſt night at Mr. Bell's; this night at the Chapel of Eaſe. The churches are always very crowded; and on Sabbath night there were ſome thouſands could not get admittance. His deſign in coming here, he ſays, was not to preach, but to hear, and to ſee who walks moſt agreeably to the word of God. He ſets off for London on Monday, to get a book printed in the Hebrew language, which he intends to ſpread among his brethren there and in Germany. Some perſons aſked if he was not afraid they would take his life? He anſwered, "that as long as God had any uſe for him, there was no fear; and after that, he might do what he would with him. It would not do for him to be too long in Glaſgow; for they made ſo much of him, that he was afraid he would forget Chriſt altogether."

chastisement of our peace r was upon him s, and with his * † stripes we are healed t.

* 1 Pet. 2. 24.

o But this was a most false and unrighteous Sentence. p Which word comprehends all his pains, and punishments, and his Death among and above the rest. q Not by them, which is expressed by another particle, not by the wickedness of the Jews, but for or because of them, as this particle commonly signifies, for the guilt of their sins, which he had voluntarily taken upon himself, and for the expiation of their sins, which was hereby purchased and procured of God for Men. Which Interpretation is confirmed 1. By the opposition of this truth to the false opinion mentioned in the foregoing clause, that he was smitten of God for the guilt of his own sins. 2. By the following clause, as we shall see. 3. By the nature of the thing, this being evident from Scriptures both of the Old and New Testament, that Christ was not to suffer for his own, but for other mens sins. See *Dan.*9.24, 26. r Those punishments by which our Peace, i.e. our reconciliation to God, and Salvation, or Happiness, was to be purchased. s Was laid upon him by Gods justice with his own consent. t By his sufferings we are saved from our own sins, and from the dreadful effects thereof.

6 All we t like sheep u have gone astray x: we have turned every one to his own way y, and the LORD † hath laid z on him the iniquity a of us all.

† Heb. hath made the iniquities of us all to meet on him.

t All mankind, the Jews no less than the Gentiles. u Which are simple and foolish Creatures, and exceeding apt to straggle and lose themselves. x From God, and from the way of his Precepts, in which he put our first Parents, and in which he commanded us to walk. y In general, to the way and course of sin, which may be well called a mans own way, as sins are called mens own Lusts, Jam.1.14. 2 Pet. 3. 3. and elsewhere, because sin is natural to us, inherent in us, born with us, and very dear to us; and in particular, to those several paths of divers Lusts, which several men chuse and follow, according to their different Opinions, Inclinations, Occasions, and Circumstances. z Heb. hath made to meet, as all the Rivers meet in the Sea. a Not properly, for so he knew no Sin, 2 Cor. 5. 21. but the punishment of iniquity, as that word is most frequently used, as *Gen.*4.13, *Lev.*20.17. &c. That which was due for all the sins of all his people, whether Jews or Gentiles, which must needs be so great and heavy a load, that if he had not been God as well as Man, he must have sunk under the burden of them. This was actually verified in Christ. And both this and divers other passages here do as manifestly and fully point at Christ, as if they were not a prophetical Representation of things to come, but an historical Relation of them after they were done. Nor do I see how they can be excus'd from a fearful wresting of the Scripture, that expound these places of the Prophet Jeremiah, of any other person but Christ.

7 He was oppressed, and he was afflicted b, yet * he opened not his mouth c, he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb d, so he openeth not his mouth.

* Mat. 26. 63. & 27. 12. 14. Mar. 14. 61. & 15. 5. Act. 8. 32.

b He was sorely punished for our sins. But there is another Translation which seems to be more emphatical and more agreeable to the Hebrew Text: It (to wit, our iniquity last mentioned, or the punishment of all our sins) was exacted or required; (as this word most properly and frequently signifies, of which see my Latin Synopsis. Gods justice expected and required satisfaction from us for our sins; which, alass! we could not make to him:) and he was afflicted or punished: he bore the guilt and punishment of our sins in his Body upon the tree, as is said 1 *Pet.*2.24. or, as others render this last word, and he answered, i.e. became our surety, or undertook to pay the debt, and to suffer the Law in our stead, and for our sake. c He neither murmured against God, for causing him to suffer for other mens sins, nor reviled men for punishing him without cause, nor used Apologies or endeavours to save his own life; but willingly and patiently accepted of the punishment of our Iniquity. d Bears the loss of its Fleece or Life without any such clamour or resistance, as other Creatures use in such cases.

8 ‖ He was taken from prison and from judgment e: and who shall declare f his generation g? for he was cut off h out of the land of the living; for the transgression of my people † was he stricken i.

‖ Or, he was taken away by distress and judgment, but, &c.
† Heb. was the stroke upon him.

c These words are understood either 1. Of Christs Humiliation or Suffering: and then the words are to be thus rendred, He was taken away (to wit, out of this Life, as this word is used, *Psal.*31.13. *Prov.*1.19. and elsewhere: he was put to death:) by distress (or violence, or tyranny, as this word is used with this Preposition before it, *Psal.*107.39.) and judgment, by oppression and violence under a form and pretence of Justice. Or rather 2. Of Christs Exaltation, because of the following clause: which is not unseasonably mentioned in the midst of his Sufferings, to take off the scandal which might have arisen from Christs Sufferings, if there had not been a prospect and assurance of his victoriousness over them, and his Glory after them: and so the words may be rendred, He was taken up (or, taken away, freed or delivered) from prison, (i.e. from the Grave, which being called an house, Job 30.23. and a pit, in which men are shut up, *Psal.*69. 15. may fitly be called a prison: or from distress, or affliction, or oppression, from the power and malice of his Enemies, and from the torments of his own Soul, arising from the sense of mans sins and Gods displeasure) and from judgment, i.e. from all the sufferings and punishments inflicted upon him, either by the unrighteous judgment of men, or by the just judgment of God, punishing him for those things which he had voluntarily taken upon himself: or, which is the same thing, from the sentence of Condemnation, and all the effects of it: for in this sense judgment is very commonly taken both in Scripture and other Authors. f Who can declare it? The future being taken potentially, as it is frequently: no words can sufficiently express it. g Either 1. His Age, or the continuance of his Life. So the sense is, That he shall not only be delivered from death, and all his punishments, but also shall be restored to an inexpressible or endless Life, and to an everlasting Kingdom. Thus great Interpreters understand it: with whom I cannot comply, because I do not find this Hebrew word to be ever used in Scripture of the continuance of one mans Life. Or rather 2. His Posterity: and so this word is unquestionably used, Gen. 45. 16. *Exod.*20.5. Deut. 23. 2, 3, 8. and in many other places. And so the sense of the place is this, That Christs death shall not be unfruitful, and that when he is raised from the dead, he shall have a spiritual seed, as is promised, v. 10. a numberless multitude of those who shall believe in him, and be regenerated and adopted by him into the number of his Children, and of the Children of God, *Joh.*1.12. Heb.2.10,13,14. b To wit, by a violent death. And this may be added as a reason both of his exaltation, and of the blessing of a numerous posterity conferred upon him, because he was willing to be cut off for the transgression of his people; and, as it followeth, *v.*10. made his soul an offering for sin; Christs death being elsewhere declared to be the only way and necessary means of obtaining both these ends, *Luk.*24.26,46. *Joh.*12. 24, 32, 33. *Philip.*2. 8, 9. But these words may be rendred, although he was cut off; to signifie that his death should not hinder these glorious effects. i This is repeated again, as it was fit it should be, to prevent mens mistakes about, and stumbling at the death of Christ, and to assure them that Christ did not die for his own sins, but only for the sins and salvation of his People.

9 And he made his grave with the wicked k, and with the rich l in his † death m, because he had done no violence, neither was any * deceit in his mouth n.

† Heb. deaths.
* 1 Pet. 2. 22. 1 *Joh.*3.5.

k And altho he did not die for his own, but only for his Peoples sins, yet he was willing to die like a malefactor, or like a sinner, as all other men are, and to be put into the grave, as they used to be; which was a farther degree of Humiliation. He saith, he made his grave, because this was Christs own act, and he willingly yielded up himself to death and burial. And that which follows, with the wicked, doth not note the sameness of place, as if he should be buried in the same Grave with other Malefactors, but the sameness of condition: as when David prayed, *Psal.*26.9. Gather not my soul (to wit, by death) with sinners, he doth not mean it of the same Grave, but of the same state of the Dead. l This passage is thought by many to signifie that Christ should be buried in the Sepulcher of Joseph, who is said to be both rich, Mat. 27.57. and honourable, Mark 15.43. which they conceive to be intimated as a token of Favour and Honour shewed to him. Which to me seems not probable, partly because this disagrees with the former clause, which confessedly speaks of the dishonour which was done to him; and partly because the burial of Christ, whatsoever Circumstances it was attended with, is ever mentioned in Scripture as a part of his Humiliation, Act. 2. 24, 27. And it seems more reasonable, and more agreeable to the usage of Holy Scripture, that this clause should design the same thing with the former, and that by rich he means the same persons whom he now called wicked, not as if all rich men were, or must needs be wicked, but because for the most part they are so; upon which ground, riches and rich men do commonly pass under an ill name in Scripture; of which see *Psal.*37.16. & 49.6. *Luk.*6. 24. & 18.24. *Jam.*1.11. & 5. 1. m Heb. in, or at (or after, as this particle is frequently taken, as hath been already noted) his deaths: for Christs death might well be called deaths in the plural number, because he underwent many kinds of death, and many deadly dangers and pains, which are frequently called by the name of death in Scripture, of which instances have been formerly given; and he might say, with no less truth than Paul did, 1 *Cor.*15.31. I die daily, and 2 *Cor.*11.23. I was in deaths oft. n This some suppose to be added as a reason of the last branch of the foregoing clause, why God so over-ruled matters by his providence, that Christ should not be buried in the same Grave, or in the same ignominious manner as malefactors were, but in a more honourable manner, in Joseph's own Tomb. But the last part of the foregoing clause cannot, without violence, be pulled asunder from the former, wherewith it is so closely joined, not only by a Conjunction copulative, and, but also by being under the Government vernment of the ſame Verb: And therefore this later clauſe of the verſe, if thus rendred, muſt be added as the reaſon of what is ſaid to be done in the former. And ſo the ſenſe of the place may be thus conceived, This was all the reward of the unſpotted Innocency of all his words and actions, to be thus ignominiouſly uſed: But theſe words may well be, and are otherwiſe rendred both by Jewiſh and Chriſtian Interpreters, either thus, although he had done, &c. or rather thus, not for (as theſe two ſame particles placed, in the very ſame order, are rendred by our Tranſlator, and others, Job 16.17.) any violence (or injury, or iniquity) which he had done, nor for any deceit which was in his mouth; not for his own ſins, but, as hath been ſaid before, for his Peoples ſins. In which Tranſlation there is nothing ſupplied but what is moſt frequent in Scripture uſe.

10 Yet it pleaſed the LORD to bruiſe him o, he hath put him to grief p: ‖ † when thou ſhalt make his ſoul an offering for ſin q, he ſhall ſee his ſeed r, he ſhall prolong his days s, and the pleaſure of the LORD ſhall proſper in his hand t.

‖ Or, when his ſoul ſhall make an offering.
† If thou ſhalt make his ſoul ſin: 2 Cor. 5. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 24.

o But altho he was perfectly innocent, it pleaſed God for other juſt and wiſe reaſons to puniſh him. p God was the principal cauſe of all his ſorrows and ſufferings, altho mens ſins were the deſerving cauſe. q When thou, O God, ſhalt make, or have made, thy Son a Sacrifice, by giving him up to death for the attonement of mens ſins. His Soul is here put for his Life, or for himſelf, or his whole humane nature, which was ſacrificed, his Soul being tormented with the ſenſe of Gods wrath, and his Body crucified, and Soul and Body ſeparated by Death. Or the words may be rendred, When his ſoul ſhall make, or have made, it ſelf an offering for ſin: whereby it may be implied that he did not lay down his Life by force, but willingly. r His death ſhall be glorious to himſelf, and highly beneficial to others; for he ſhall have a numerous iſſue of Believers reconciled to God, and ſaved by his death. s He ſhall be raiſed to immortal Life, and ſhall live and reign with God for ever; he ſhall die no more, Rom. 6. 9. and of his Kingdom there ſhall be no end, Luk. 1. 33. t Gods gracious decree for the redemption and Salvation of Mankind ſhall be effectually carried on by his Miniſtry and Mediation.

11 He ſhall ſee u of the travel of his ſoul x, and ſhall be ſatisfied y: by his knowledg z ſhall * my righteous ſervant a juſtifie b many c: for he ſhall bear their iniquities d.

* Ch. 42. 1. & 49. 3.

u He ſhall receive or enjoy, as this word commonly ſignifies. x The comfortable and bleſſed fruit of all his hard labours, and grievous ſufferings. y He ſhall eſteem his own and his Fathers Glory, and the ſalvation of his people, an abundant recompence for all his Sufferings. z Either 1. Actively, by that knowledg of Gods Will, and of the way of Salvation, which is in him in its higheſt perfection, and which by him is revealed unto men, and by his Spirit is imprinted in the minds and hearts of his People, ſo as to produce Faith and Obedience in them. Or 2. Paſſively, by the knowledg of him, as my fear and thy fear are put for the fear of me and of thee, Pſal. 5. 7. Jer. 32. 40. Knowledg being here, as it is moſt frequently in Scripture, taken practically for that kind of Knowledge which worketh Faith, and Love, and Obedience to him. So the ſenſe is the ſame in both caſes. a Which title is here given to Chriſt, partly to vindicate him from thoſe falſe imputations of wickedneſs which were faſtened upon him by his Adverſaries, and which found the more belief becauſe of his moſt grievous and unexampled Sufferings both from God and Men; and partly to ſhew his fitneſs for this great work of juſtifying Sinners, becauſe he was exactly holy, and harmleſs, and undefiled, Heb. 7. 26. and fulfilled all righteouſneſs according to his duty, Mat. 3. 15. and therefore his perſon and performance muſt needs be acceptable to God, and effectual for the juſtification of his People, which was the great deſign of his coming into the World. b Acquit them from the guilt of their ſins, and all the dreadful conſequences thereof: For Juſtification is here oppoſed to condemnation, as appears from the following clauſe, and from many other paſſages in this Chapter, and as it is uſed in all places of Scripture, one, or two at moſt, excepted, where it is mentioned. And Chriſt is ſaid to juſtifie ſinners meritoriouſly, becauſe he purchaſeth and procureth it for us; as God the Father is commonly ſaid to do it authoritatively, becauſe he accepted the price paid by Chriſt for it, and the pronunciation of the ſentence of Abſolution is referred to him in the Goſpel Diſpenſation. c Which word is ſeaſonably added, partly by way of Reſtriction, to ſhew that Chriſt will not juſtifie all, but only ſuch as believe in him, and obey him: and partly by way of Amplification, to declare that this bleſſed priviledge ſhall not now be, as hitherto it had in a manner been, confined to Judea, and the Jews, but ſhall be conferred upon an innumerable company of all the Nations of the World. d For he ſhall ſatisfie the Juſtice and Law of God for them, by bearing the puniſhments due to their ſins, and therefore by the principles of Reaſon and Juſtice they muſt be juſtified or acquitted, otherwiſe the ſame debt ſhould be twice required and paid.

12 Therefore will I e divide him f a portion g with the great h, and he ſhall divide the ſpoil with the ſtrong i: becauſe he hath poured out his ſoul unto death k: and he * was numbred with the tranſgreſſors l, and he bare the ſin of many m, and * made interceſſion for the tranſgreſſors n.

* Mar. 15. 28. Luk. 22. 37.
* Luk. 23. 34. Rom. 8. 34. Heb. 7. 25. & 9. 24. 1 Joh. 2. 1.

e God the Father, the ſpectator and Judge of the Action or Combat. f Give him his ſhare. Or, impart, or give to him; for this word is oft uſed without reſpect to any diſtribution or diviſion, as Deut. 4. 19. & 29. 26. and elſewhere. g Which is very commodiouſly ſupplied out of the next clauſe, where a word which anſwers to it, the ſpoil, is expreſſed. h Or, among the great: ſuch as the great and mighty Potentates of the World uſe to have after a ſharp Combat and a glorious Victory. Tho he be a very mean and obſcure perſon, as to his extraction and outward condition in the World, yet he ſhall attain to as great a pitch of the Glory as the greateſt Monarchs enjoy. i The ſame thing is repeated in other words, after the manner of prophetical Writers. The ſenſe of both clauſes is, That God will give him, and he ſhall receive great and happy ſucceſs in his glorious undertaking, he ſhall conquer all his Enemies, and lead Captivity Captive, as is ſaid Eph. 4. 8. and ſet up his univerſal and everlaſting Kingdom in the World. k Becauſe he willingly laid down his Life in Obedience to Gods Command, Joh. 10. 17, 18. and in order to the Redemption of Mankind. Death is here called a pouring out of the Soul, or Life, either becauſe the Soul or Life, which in living Men is contained in the body, is turned out of the Body by Death; or to ſignifie the manner of Chriſt's death, that it ſhould be with the ſhedding of his Blood, in which the life of Man conſiſts, Levit. 17. 11, 14. l He was willing for Gods Glory and for Mans Good to be reproached and puniſhed like a Malefactor, in the ſame manner and place, and betwixt two of them, as is noted with reference to this place, Mark 15. 27, 28. m Which was ſaid v. 11. and is here repeated to prevent a miſtake, and to intimate, that although Chriſt was numbred with Tranſgreſſors, and was uſed accordingly, yet he was no Tranſgreſſor, nor did ſubmit to, and ſuffer this uſage for his own ſins, but for the ſins of others, the puniſhment whereof was by his own conſent laid upon him. n Either 1. By way of ſatisfaction: he interpoſed himſelf between an angry God and ſinners, and received thoſe blows in his own Body, which otherwiſe muſt have fain upon them. Or 2. In way of Petition, as this word is conſtantly uſed. He pray'd upon Earth for all Sinners, and particularly for thoſe that crucified him, Luke 23. 34 and in Heaven he ſtill interceedeth for them, not by an humble Petition, but by a legal demand of thoſe good things which he purchaſed for his own People by the Sacrifice of himſelf, which, though paſt, he continually repreſents to his Father, as if it were preſent.

CHAP. LIV.

1 *SIng, O barren a, thou that didſt not bear; break forth into ſinging, and cry aloud thou that didſt not travail with child: for * more are the children of the deſolate, than the children of the married wife b, ſaith the LORD.

* Zeph. 3. 14. Gal. 4. 27.
* 1 Sam. 2. 5. Ch. 49. 20, 21.

a The Prophet having largely diſcourſed of the ſufferings of Chriſt, and of the bleſſed fruits or effects thereof, among which one is that he ſhould have a numerous ſeed that ſhould believe on him, and that when the Jews rejected him, the Gentiles ſhould gladly receive him, and here foreſeeing by the Spirit of God that glorious ſtate of the Church, he rejoiced in it, as Abraham did upon the like occaſion, Joh. 8. 56. and breaks forth into this ſong of triumph. He turneth his Speech to the Church and Spouſe of God, or of Chriſt, as is manifeſt from the following words, and eſpecially from v. 5 and from Gal. 4. 27. where it is ſo expounded. And altho this Chapter is by ſome underſtood of the flouriſhing condition of the Jewiſh Church and State after their return from Babylon, yet the magnificent and glorious Promiſes here following do ſo vaſtly exceed their condition at that time, which was full of Uncertainties, and Diſtractions, and Troubles, as all the Hiſtories of thoſe times aſſure us, and far from that Glory and laſting Tranquillity which is here aſſured to her, that it muſt neceſſarily be referred to the times of the Goſpel, in which all that is here ſaid was, or will be remarkably fulfilled. And therefore as the foregoing Chapter doth directly and literally ſpeak of Chriſt, ſo doth this literally ſpeak of the Church of Chriſt, or of the Kingdom of the Meſſiah, of whom the antient Hebrew Doctors underſtood it. And this Church, conſiſting at firſt of the Jews, and afterwards of the Gentiles, who were incorporated with them into the ſame Body, he calleth barren, not becauſe it now was ſo, but becauſe before and until the coming of Chriſt it had been ſo, as Simon is called the leper, Mat. 26. 6. after he was cured. Now this Church of the Jews might well be called, and had been, barren, becauſe the ſincere Converts brought forth to God by her Miniſtry had been but few among the Jews comparatively, and ſimply few among the Gentiles. b The Church or Congregation of the Gentiles, which in the times of the Old Teſtament was deſolate, having neither Husband nor Children, Children, doth now under the Gospel bring forth unto God a far more numerous posterity than the Church of the Jews, which had been married to God for many ages, until by her Apostacy from God, and from her Messiah, she provoked God to put her away. He alludeth here either to the History of Sarah, who was long & naturally barren, but by the supernatural power of God, was enabled to bring forth a numberless issue: or to that remarkable passage of Gods Providence concerning Hannah and Peninnah, 1 Sam. 2. 5. the barren hath born seven, and she that hath many children is waxed feeble.

* Ch. 49. 19, 20. 2 * Enlarge the place of thy tent c, and let them d stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations: spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes e.

c That it may be capable of the Gentiles, which shall flock to thee in great numbers, and desire to associate themselves with thee. d Those to whom that work belongs. The meaning is, they must and shall be stretched out. e That they may be able to support that great weight which the Tents thus enlarged shall be upon them.

* Ch. 61. 4, 5, 6. 3 For thou shalt break forth f on the right hand, and on the left g, and thy seed h * shall inherit the Gentiles i, and make the desolate cities k to be inhabited.

f Thou shalt bring forth a multitude of Children; for this word is commonly used of any great and extraordinary propagation of living Creatures, whether Beasts or Men, Gen. 30. 30. Exod. 1. 12. g On every side, in all the parts of the World. h Either 1. Thy spiritual seed, the Church of the New Testament, which is accounted Abraham's Seed, or Children, Gal. 3. 7, 8, 9, 29. Or 2. Thy natural seed, Christ and his Apostles, and other Ministers, who were Jews, by whom this work was first and most eminently done. i Shall subdue the Gentile World to the Church, and to the Obedience of the Faith. k These Cities and Countries which in a spiritual sense were desolate and forsaken by God.

4 Fear not, for thou shalt not be ashamed l: neither be thou confounded, for thou shalt not be put to shame: for thou shalt forget the shame of thy

* Ezek. 23. 8. * youth m, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood n any more.

l For that Barrenness and Widowhood, which was once the matter of thy grief and shame, because now thou shalt be delivered from it, and God will own thee for his Wife, and beget Children of thee; as it is explain'd in the following words. m It shall be forgotten both by thee and others: thou shalt not be upbraided with thy former barrenness in thy youthful state, nor confounded and tormented with the remembrance of it; both remembring and forgetting in Scripture use connote or comprehend those affections which naturally and usually follow upon them; so great shall be thy fertility and felicity, that it shall cause thee to forget thy former unfruitfulness and misery, as men commonly do in like cases, as Gen. 41. 51. Job 11. 16. Isa. 65. 16. Job. 16. 21. n That time and state when thou wert like a Widow disconsolate and desolate, forsaken by her Husband, and having in a manner no Children; which was a great reproach, especially among the Jews.

* Luk. 1. 32. 5 For thy maker o is thine husband p, (the * LORD of hosts q is his name) and thy redeemer the holy One of Israel, the God of the whole earth r shall he be called.

o He who made thee out of nothing, and therefore can easily fulfil all these Promises, how unlikely soever they seem to be; and he who made thee a people, and which is far more and better, his People, and therefore will not easily nor utterly forsake thee. p He will own thee for his Spouse, and will do the part of an Husband to thee. q Who hath the sovereign command of all Men and Creatures, and therefore can subdue the Gentiles to thee, and can make thee to encrease and multiply in so prodigious a measure, even in thine old age, notwithstanding thy barrenness in the days of thy youth, of which he speaketh in the foregoing verse. r The God and Father of all Nations, whereas formerly he was called only the God of Israel, and the Gentiles had no special relation to him, nor interest in his Covenant and Favour, as was observed Psal. 147. 19, 20. and elsewhere.

6 For the LORD hath called thee s as a woman t forsaken and grieved in spirit x, and a wife of youth

* Jer. 30. 17. y, when thou * wast refused z, saith thy God a.

s To return and come again to him. t When thou wast like a Woman forsaken. Or, as an Husband recalleth his Wife. u By her Husband, who hath given her a Bill of Divorce. x For the loss of her Husbands favour and society, and for the reproach attending upon it. y Or, and, as (which note of similitude is supplied here by the Seventy, and Chaldee Interpreters, and is easily understood out of the foregoing clause, in which it is expressed) a wife of youth, i.e. as readily and affectionately as an Husband recalleth his Wife which he married in her and his own youth, of whom see on Prov. 5. 18. whom though he might through a sudden and violent passion put away, yet he soon repents of it, and his Affections work towards her, and he invites her to return to him. z When thou wast in a desolate estate, and hadst been for some time rejected by me, then I recalled thee. Or, altho thou wast refused, or dismissed, or despised by me, and that justly, yet I had mercy upon thee, and freely offered Reconciliation to thee. a Who will again be, and still shew himself to be, thy God, and will renew his Covenant with thee.

* Ps. 30. 5. Ch. 26. 20. 2 Cor. 4. 17. 7 * For a small moment b have I forsaken thee c, but with great mercies d will I gather thee e.

b For the space of some few years, as seventy years in Babylon, and some such intervals, which may well be call'd a small moment in comparison of Gods everlasting kindness mention'd in the next verse. c Withdrawn my favour and help from thee, and left thee in thine Enemies hands. d Such as are most precious and sweet for quality, as is here said, and such as are of long continuance, as is said in the following verse. e From all the places where thou art dispersed, from all the parts of the World.

8 In a little wrath I hid my face f from thee, for a moment; but with everlasting kindness g will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD thy redeemer.

f I removed the means and pledges of my presence and kindness. g With kindness to thee and thy seed through all succeeding Generations, here, and unto all eternity.

* Gen. 8. 21. & 9. 11. 9 For this is as the waters of * Noah unto me h: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth, so have I sworn that I would not be wrath with thee i, * nor rebuke thee.

* Ps. 9. 5.

h This Covenant of Grace and Peace made with thee shall be as certain and perpetual as that which I made with Noah, that there should never be another flood of Waters to drown the World, of which see Gen. 9. 11. i To wit, so as I have been, or so as to forsake thee utterly.

* Ps. 46. 2. Mat. 5. 18. 10 For * the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed k, but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace l be removed, saith the LORD, that hath mercy on thee m.

k Which hath been verified in some Mountains and Hills, that by Earthquakes, or otherwise, have been removed from their places. But these kinds of absolute expressions are oft times comparatively understood, of which see on Isa. 51. 6. and so the sense is, The Mountains shall sooner depart from their places, than my kindness shall depart from thee. As when it is said absolutely, I desired Mercy and not Sacrifice, is meant comparatively, I desired Mercy more than Sacrifice, as it is explained in the following clause. l That covenant whereby I have made peace and friendship with thee, and have promised unto thee all manner of happiness, which frequently comes under the name of peace in Scripture. The sense of the place is, That God will not cast off his Christian Church, as he did cast off the Church of the Jews; and that the New Covenant is established upon better and surer Promises than the Old, as is observed Heb. 8. 6, 7. &c. and elsewhere. m Who doth thus with thee not for thy own merits, but meerly for his own Grace and Mercy.

* 1 Chr. 29. 2. Rev. 21. 19. 11 O thou afflicted, tossed with tempests, and not comforted n, behold, I will lay thy stones with * fair colours, and lay thy foundations with saphires o.

n Oh thou my poor Church, who hast frequently been, and wilt again and again be in a most afflicted and comfortless condition for a time; be not discouraged thereby. o I will make thee exceeding beautiful and glorious. Which yet is not to be understood of outward Pomp and worldly Glory, as is evident from many places of Scripture, which assure us that Christs Kingdom is of another nature, and that the external condition of Gods Church is, and for the most part will be, mean and calamitous in this World, but of a spiritual Beauty and Glory consisting in the plentiful effusion of excellent Gifts, and Graces, and Comforts: altho these shall be followed with eternal Glory in Heaven. See the like description of the Churches Glory, Rev. 21. 11. &c.

12 And I will make thy windows of agates p, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders q of pleasant stones.

p One kind of which stones was transparent like glass, as Pliny writes in his natural History, b. 37. ch. 10. But some render this word, chrystal, and the Seventy, and some other of the ancients, translate it jasper. But the proper signification of the Hebrew names of precious stones is unknown to the Jews themselves, as hath been noted before. It may suffice us to know that this was some very clear, and transparent, and precious stone. q The utmost parts or walls. The Church is here evidently compared to a Building, whose Foundation, Pavement, Gates, and Windows, were named before.

* Ch. 11. 9. Jer. 31. 34. Joh. 6. 45. 1 Cor. 2. 16. 1 Thes. 4. 9. 1 Joh. 2. 20. 13 And all thy children shall be * taught of the LORD r, and great shall be the peace s of thy children.

r Not only outwardly by his word, which was made known to all the Jews under the Old Testament, but inwardly by his Spirit, which is poured forth under the New Testament, both upon a far greater number of persons, and in a far higher measure, and with much more efficacy and success than it was under the Old. s 1. Inward peace of mind or conscience arising from the clear discoveries of Gods Love and Reconciliation to us, and wrought by the spirit of adoption which is more abundantly given to Believers under the Gospel, whereas the Spirit of Bondage was more common and prevalent under the Law. 2. Outward Peace, Safety, and Happiness, which is more fully promised in the following verses, and which God, when he sees fit will confer upon his Church.

14 In righteouſneſs t ſhalt thou be eſtabliſhed: thou ſhalt be far from oppreſſion u, for thou ſhalt not fear x, and from terrour, for it ſhall not come near thee.

t Either 1. As the means of thy Eſtabliſhment. This Kingdom ſhall not be ſet up, and ſetled by fraud or Tyranny, as other Kingdoms frequently are, but by Juſtice: Or rather 2. As the effect of the eſtabliſhment. Thine affairs ſhall be managed with Righteouſneſs, which is the Glory and Felicity of any Society, and not with oppreſſion, as it follows. Juſtice ſhall be freely and impartially executed. u Either by thine own Governours, or by Foreign Powers. x Thou ſhalt neither have any juſt cauſe of fear, nor be given up to the Torment of fear without cauſe.

15 Behold they ſhall ſurely gather together y, but not by me z: whoſoever ſhall gather together a againſt thee b, ſhall fall for thy ſake c.

y It is true, there will not want ſome that ſhall combine and make an attempt againſt thee. z As they do this without any ſuch commiſſion from me, as Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar had, Iſa. 10. 6, 7. Jer. 25. 9. ſo they ſhall not have my help in it, without which all their endeavours will be vain and unſucceſsful. a To battle, as is manifeſt from the following words, of which kind of gathering this word is uſed, Pſal. 140. 2. and elſewhere. b Heb. with thee. But to fight with a man is all one with fighting againſt him. c For that Reſpect and Love which I bear to thee. Or, before thee, as this particle is ſometimes uſed, ſo as thine Eyes ſhall behold it.

16 Behold, I have created the ſmith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringeth forth an inſtrument for his work, and I have created the waſter d to deſtroy e.

d Both the Smith that maketh all warlike Inſtruments, and the Souldier that uſeth them, are my Creatures, and totally at my Command, and therefore they cannot hurt you without my leave. e To deſtroy only whom and when I pleaſe.

17 No weapon that is formed againſt thee, ſhall proſper f, and every tongue that ſhall riſe againſt thee in judgment, thou ſhalt condemn g. This is the heritage h of the ſervants of the LORD, and their righteouſneſs i is of me k, ſaith the LORD.

f And as they cannot do any thing againſt thee without my leave, ſo I aſſure thee I will not ſuffer them to do it: and if any Smith ſhall make any Weapons to be employed againſt thee, he ſhall not ſucceed in it. g And I will deliver thee not only from the fury of War, but alſo from the ſtriſe of Tongues, from all the threatnings and boaſts, and reproaches of thine Enemies, and from all the claims and pretences which they have of any right and power over thee. So thine Enemies ſhall neither prevail againſt thee by violence, nor by pretences of Juſtice. h This bleſſed condition deſcribed in this Chapter, is the portion allotted to them by me. i Either 1. The Reward or Fruit of their Righteouſneſs, as Righteouſneſs is uſed Pſal. 102. 3, 9. Or, 2. Their Right or the righteous Adminiſtration of all their concerns, whereby they are preſerved from all manner of oppreſſions, as Righteouſneſs was uſed v. 14. k I give it, and I will continue it unto them, and who can take it away from them?

1 HO, * every one a that thirſteth b, come ye to the waters c, and he that hath no money d; come ye, buy e and eat, yea come, buy wine and milk f, without money, and without price.

a Not only Jews but Gentiles. The Prophet having largely diſcourſed of Chriſt, ch. 53. and of the Church of Chriſt, ch. 54. doth here invite all perſons to come to Chriſt, and to his Church. b For the Grace of God, and the bleſſings of the Goſpel. This thirſt implies a vehement, and active, and reſtleſs Deſire after it, not to be ſatisfied with any thing ſhort of it. c Which are mentioned either 1. As the place where they were to buy the following commodities, it being uſual to convey proviſions to Cities by Rivers. Or rather 2. As the Commodity to be bought, the Graces and comforts of Gods Spirit, which are frequently compared to Waters, as Iſa. 12. 3. & 35. 6, 7. Joh. 7. 37, 38. and elſewhere, and which are deſigned by all theſe Metaphorical Expreſſions of Waters, Wine, Milk, and Bread. d Even thoſe who are moſt poor in the World, and thoſe who are moſt worthleſs and wicked, if they do but thirſt, may be welcom. e i.e. Procure or receive that which is freely offered to you, if you do but come for it, and are willing to take it. Thus buying is uſed, Pro. 23. 23. Rev. 3. 18. Nor can this be underſtood of buying properly, becauſe here is no price paid. f Which are Synecdochically put for all ſorts of proviſions; which are alſo to be underſtood of Spiritual and Goſpel-Bleſſings, as is evident from the following words.

e All your time, and ſtrength, and coſt in ſeeking it. f For thoſe vain or ſoliſh things which can never nouriſh or ſatisfie you, ſuch as wordly goods, or your own Inventions, Superſtitions and Idolatries. g Unto my Doctrine and Counſel. h That which is truly, and ſolidly, and everlaſtingly good, and not ſuch things which though they be called, and ſeem to be good, yet really are evil, and moſt pernicious to Men. i In this fat and moſt pleaſant food of Goſpel-enjoyments.

k Hearken attentively and obediently to my counſel: hearing being oft put for obeying, as Deut. 18. 15. 1 Sam. 15. 22, 23. Pſal. 95. 7. &c. l To wit, comfortably and happily; which only is worthy of the name of Life. m That everlaſting Covenant of Grace and Peace which I made with Abraham, and his Seed, the Iſraelites, I am ready to make it with every one of you thirſting Gentiles. n Even that Covenant which was made firſt with Abraham, and then with David, concerning the Exhibition of thoſe glorious and ſure mercies or bleſſings which God hath promiſed to his People, one and the chief of which mercies was the giving of Chriſt to die for their ſins, and to riſe again for their Juſtification. This Expoſition may receive light and ſtrength by comparing this place with Act. 13. 33, 34. He mentions David rather than Abraham, either 1. Becauſe theſe Promiſes, and eſpecially that great promiſe, which is the foundation of all the reſt, concerning Chriſt and his eternal Kingdom, were far more frequently and expreſly, & fully made and revealed to David, than they were to Abraham. Or 2. Becauſe David was a more evident and illuſtrious type of Chriſt than Abraham was, as being raiſed from a mean condition to the higheſt honour, being made a great and moſt victorious and righteous King, and the firſt King of that Throne upon which the Meſſiah was to ſit. Or 3. Becauſe the name David is not here put perſonally for the King of that Name, but patronimically for the Meſſiah who was to be Davids Son and Succeſſor, and who is therefore called David in the prophetical Scriptures, as Jer. 30. 9. Ezek. 34. 23, 24. & 37. 24, 25. Hoſ. 3. 5. as Rehoboham upon the ſame account is called David, 1 King. 12. 16. And this is the more probable, becauſe the next verſe, which hath a manifeſt Relation to this verſe, is confeſſedly underſtood of Chriſt.

4 Behold, I have given him p for a witneſs q to the people r, a leader and commander s to the people.

o I have already appointed, and will in due time actually give. p The David laſt mentioned, even Chriſt, the Son and Succeſſor of David, as is plain and certain from the titles and works aſcribed to him in this and in the following verſe. But of this ſee the laſt note upon the former verſe. q To be a Prophet or Teacher, to declare the counſel and will of God concerning the duty and ſalvation of Men, to bear witneſs unto the truth, as Chriſt himſelf affirmeth, Joh. 18. 37. to confirm Gods promiſes, Rom. 15. 8. and, amongſt others, thoſe which reſpect the calling and reconciliation of the Gentiles, to be a witneſs for both parties of that Covenant made between God and Men. r Not only to my People of Iſrael, but to all People, Gentiles no leſs than Jews, as is evident from the following verſe, and from Iſa. 49. 6. and divers other places. s A ſovereign Prince to give them Laws and exact their Obedience, & in caſe of their Obedience to give them Protection and Rewards.

5 Behold, thou l ſhalt call m a nation that thou ‖ knoweſt not n, and nations that knew not thee o ſhall run unto thee p, becauſe of the LORD thy God q, and for the holy one of Iſrael; for he hath glorified thee r.

l Thou, O Meſſiah, of whom he now ſpake, v. 4. and to whom he ſuddenly turneth his ſpeech, as is very common in the Prophets. m To wit, unto thy ſelf, and to the knowledge of thy ſelf, as appears from the following words, and by thee unto acquaintance and fellowſhip with God. n Or rather, didſt not know, to wit, with that ſpecial knowledg which implies approbation, & tender care and affection, as words of knowledg are moſt frequently uſed in Scripture: the Gentiles to whom, in former times, thou didſt not make known thy Law and Covenant, and the way of Salvation, Act. 14. 16. & 17. 30. o That had but little knowledg of God, and no knwledge of the Meſſiah. p Upon thy call ſhall ſpeedily and readily come to thee to receive Inſtructions from thee, & to follow thee whitherſoever thou ſhalt lead them. q Becauſe the Lord ſhall by many evident and unqueſtionable tokens, manifeſt himſelf to be thy God, and thee to be his Son and faithful ſervant. r Becauſe the God of Iſrael, who is the only true God, will highly honour thee by his ſingular preſence with thee, by his almighty Power accompanying thy Word, and making it wonderfully effectual for the converſion of an innumerable company, both of Jews and Gentiles, and by confirming thy Word with illuſtrious ſigns and miracles, and particularly by thy Reſurrection and glorious Aſcenſion. Theſe and other like conſiderations were the motives which convinced the Gentiles, that Chriſt was the true Meſſiah, and the Religion which he taught was the true Religion.

6 * Seek ye the LORD s while he may be found t; call ye upon him while he is near u.

* Pſ. 32. 6.

s Having diſcours'd of the Office and Work of Chriſt, and ſhew'd that he ſhould call People and Nations to himſelf, and to God, he now endeavours to perſuade the People to hearken to his Call, and

and to seek the Lord, i. e. to labour to get the knowledge of Gods Will, and to obtain his Grace and Favour; neither of which things were to be done but in and through Christ. And this Invitation or exhortation is general like that v. 1. reaching to all Nations, both Jews and Gentiles, implying, that both of them had lost him and his Favour, and were gone astray from him. Seek him ye Gentiles, whom he now inviteth so to do, and will assist in finding him. And seeing the Gentiles seek him earnestly, let their example provoke you Jews to imitate them therein, and take heed you do not reject him whom they will receive and own. t In this day of Grace, while he offereth Mercy and Reconciliation to you; which he will not always do. Compare Prov. 1. 24. &c. Luk. 19. 44. 2 Cor. 6. 2. u Near to you by his gracious presence and offers, in his Ordinances, ready and desirous to receive you to Mercy upon the following conditions.

† Heb. the man of iniquity.

7 Let the wicked [illegible] x forsake his way y, and † the unrighteous man his thoughts z: and let him return unto the LORD a, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God b, for † he will abundantly pardon c.

x Any wicked man, either Jew or Gentile. y His evil or wicked way, as is evident from the foregoing word, and as it is more fully expressed, Jer. 18. 11. & 25. 5. which is called his way, because it is natural and customary, and dear to him, and in opposition to Gods good way: his sinful course or manner of Life. Let him cease to do evil, as it is Isa. 1. 16. This he adds to intimate that Mens seeking and calling upon God will do them no good without Reformation of their Lives. z The sinful devices and purposes of his Mind. Thus he strikes at the root of sinful actions, and sheweth that the heart must be purg'd and chang'd as well as the outward actions. a As he hath departed from God by sin, let him turn to him by sincere Repentance, and the practice of all Gods precepts. Whereby he intimates that a meer abstinence from wicked courses is not sufficient, without the exercise of the contrary Graces, that we must not only cease to do evil, but also learn to do well, as it is prescribed, Isa. 1. 16. b To the God of Israel who is, and hath shew'd himself to be a most merciful and gracious God. c He useth so many words and arguments to encourage them to repentance, because the persons here invited were guilty of Idolatry, Apostacy, and many other gross wickednesses: which he knew, when they came to themselves, and to a serious sense of their sins, and of the just and holy Nature and Law of God, would be an insupportable burden to their awaked Consciences, and make them very prone to conclude, that God either could not or would not pardon such horrid Delinquencies, and therefore would rather drive them from God, than draw them to him.

8 For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways d, saith the LORD.

d My disposition and carriage is vastly differing from yours. If any man provoke or injure you, especially if he do it greatly and frequently and maliciously, you are very slow and backward to forgive him, and if you do or seem to forgive him, and promise to forget, and pass it by, yet you retain a secret grudge in your hearts, and upon the least occasion, and slight offence, you forget your Promise, and are soon weary with forgiving, and prone to revenge your selves upon him; but it is not so with me: For I am slow to anger, and ready to forgive all true penitents, how many, and great, and numberless soever their sins be, and my promises of Mercy and Pardon shall be infallibly made good to them. And therefore you need not fear to come to me, or to find Mercy and acceptance with me.

9 For as the heavens are higher than the earth e, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.

e Inexpressibly and infinitely: for the distance between the Earth and the highest Heavens is unmeasurable by any man upon Earth.

* Deut. 32. 2.

10 For * as the rain cometh down, and the snow f from heaven, and returneth not thither g, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater h.

f Which in its season contributes to the fruitfulness of the Earth as well as the Rain. g To wit, void or without effect, as it is expressed in the next verse: or immediately: it is not drawn up again as soon as it is come down, but abides for a convenient time upon the Earth, until it do that work for which it was sent. h That it may bring forth store of Bread-corn, both for mens present supplies, and for seed for the next year.

* Ch. 45. 23. Mat. 10. 13.

11 So shall my word i be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not * return unto me void k, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it l.

i My promises before recited concerning the sending of the Messiah, and the blessing of his Labours with such wonderful success, and concerning the reconciliation and pardon of the greatest sinners, and concerning the redemption and salvation of his People. k Without success. It is an allusion to an Ambassadour who returns without dispatching that business for which he was sent. l It shall have that effect which I intended, it shall certainly be fulfilled in manner before expressed.

12 For m ye shall go out n with joy, and be led forth o with peace p: the mountains and the hills shall * break forth before you into singing, and all * the trees of the field shall clap their hands q.

* Ps. 96. 12. & 98. 8.

m Or, Therefore: because God hath promised it, and therefore will effect it. n Ye shall be released from the place and state of your Bondage. He alludes to their going out of Egypt, which was a type of their succeeding deliverances, and especially of their Redemption by Christ from the power of sin and of the Devil. o Or, be led along, be conducted by the gracious and powerful presence of God, as you were in the Wilderness. p Safely and triumphantly without fear of being retaken and brought back into slavery by your Enemies. q There shall be a great and a general rejoycing at your deliverance: so that even the senseless Creatures shall seem to rejoice with you and for you.

Ch. 35. 1. * 1 Chr. 16. 33.

13 * Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir-tree, and instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle-tree q: and it shall be to the LORD for a name r, for an everlasting sign s that shall not be cut off t.

q Whereas your Land was filled with Thorns and Briars, as was foretold, Isa. 7. 24. they shall be rooted out, and it shall be planted with Fir-trees and Myrtle-trees, and such other Trees, which are useful either for Fruit or for Delight. Or, this Promise may be answerable to that Ezek. 28. 24. There shall be no more a pricking briar unto the house of Israel nor any grieving thorn, &c. but instead of them shall be such Trees as shall yield shade and refreshment. The meaning is, The Church shall be delivered from pernicious men and things, and replenished with sincere and serious Believers, and with all sorts of divine Graces and Blessings. r This wonderful change shall bring much honour to that God by whom it is wrought. s For a Monument, or evident and glorious Token of God's infinite Power, and Faithfulness, and Love to his People unto all succeeding Generations. t Which shall never be abolished, but shall always live and flourish in the minds and mouths of men.

CHAP. LVI.

1 THus saith the LORD a, Keep ye ‖ judgment, and do justice b: for my salvation c is near to come, and my righteousness e to be revealed.

a This verse and the rest of this Chapter, until v. 9. seems to belong to the foregoing Prophesie. From the consideration of Gods Promises made to them he moveth them to perform their duty to him. b This Phrase elsewhere signifies the duties which one man oweth to another; but here it seems to signifie the Duties which men owe to God, as it is explain'd in the following verses. c That eminent Salvation by the Messiah so largely promised, and insisted upon in the foregoing Chapters: for which it behoves you to prepare your selves, and in which, without this condition you shall have no share nor benefit. d So the Scripture useth to speak of things which are at a great distance, as if they were present or at hand. See Habak. 2. 3. Jam. 5. 8, 9. Rev. 22. 20. e The same thing which he now called Salvation, and here calleth his Righteousness, because it is an evident demonstration of Gods Righteousness, as in the fulfilling of his promises, so in the punishment of sin, and in the salvation of sinners upon just and honourable terms.

2 Blessed is the man f that doth this g, and the son of man that layeth hold on it: that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it i, and keepeth his hand k from doing any evil l.

f Every man, not only Jews, but Gentiles, or Strangers, as it is explained in the following Verses. g Judgment and Justice, mentioned v. 1. h Or, that holdeth it fast, that is resolute and constant in so doing, that not only begins well, but perseveres in it. i That guardeth the Sabbath from profanation, that doth not defile it, either by forbidden practices, or by the neglect of commanded duties. And though Sabbath seems to be put here, as Sacrifice is elsewhere, Synecdochically for the whole Worship of God, whereof this is an eminent part, and the bond of all the rest. k Which being the great Instrument of Action, is put for all the kinds and means of Action. l To wit, to ones Neighbour, as it is more fully expressed, Psal. 15. 3.

3 Neither let the son of a stranger m, that hath joined himself to the LORD n speak, saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people, neither let the eunuch o say, Behold, I am a dry tree p.

m The stranger, as the son of man is the same with the man, v. 2. the Gentile, who by birth is a stranger to God, and to the Common-wealth of Israel. n That hath turned from dumb Idols to the living God, and to the true Religion: for such shall be as acceptable to me as the Israelites themselves, and the partition-wall between Jews and Gentiles shall be taken down, and Repentance and Remission of sins shall be preached and offered to men of all Nations. o Who is here joined with the stranger, because he was forbidden to enter into the Congregation of the Lord, Deut. 23. 1. as the stranger was, and by his barrenness might seem no less than the stranger to be cast out of God's Covenant, and cut off from his People, to whom the blessing of a numerous posterity was promised.

promiſed. And under theſe two Inſtances he underſtands all thoſe perſons, who either by Birth, or by any Ceremonial Pollution, were excluded from the participation of Church priviledges, and ſo he throws open the door to all true Believers without any reſtriction whatſoever. p A fapleſs and fruitleſs Tree, accurſed by God with the curſe of barrenneſs, which being oft threatned as a Curſe, and being a matter of Reproach among the Jews might eaſily occaſion ſuch diſcouraging thoughts as are here expreſſed.

4 For thus ſaith the LORD unto the eunuchs that keep my ſabbaths, and chooſe the things that pleaſe me q, and take hold of my covenant r.

q That obſerve my commands not by cuſtom, or force, or fear, but by free choice, and full conſent, with love to them and delight in them. r That reſolvedly and ſtedfaſtly keep the conditions of my Covenant.

5 Even unto them will I give in mine houſe s, and within my walls t, a place and a name better than of ſons and daughters u: I will give them an everlaſting name, that ſhall not be cut off.

s In my Temple, to ſerve me there as Prieſts, which Eunuchs were not allowed to do, Lev. 21. 17. &c. Deut. 23. 1. t In the Courts of my Temple, which were encompaſſed with Walls. This ſeems to be added with reſpect to the People who were admitted into the Court, but not into the Houſe it ſelf: u A far greater Bleſſing and Honour than that of having poſterity, which was but a temporal mercy, and that common to the worſt of men, even my Favour, and my Spirit, and eternal Felicity.

6 Alſo the ſons of the ſtranger, that join themſelves to the LORD x, to ſerve him, and to love the name of the LORD y, to be his ſervants, every one that keepeth the ſabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant:

x That with purpoſe of heart cleave unto him, as is ſaid, Act. 11. 23. y To ſerve him out of love to him, and to his Worſhip.

* Ch. 2. 2. 7 Even them will I * bring to my holy mountain z, and make them joyful a in my houſe of prayer b: their burnt-offerings and their ſacrifices ſhall be accepted upon mine altar c: for *mine houſe ſhall be called an houſe of prayer for all people d.

* Mat. 21. 13. Mar. 11. 17. Luk. 19. 46.

z To my houſe, as it is explained in the following clauſe, which ſtood upon Mount Sion, largely ſo called, including Mount Moriah. Formerly the Gentiles neither had any deſire to come thither, nor were admitted there; but now I will incline their hearts to come, and I will give them admiſſion and free liberty to come into my Church. a By accepting their ſervices, and comforting their hearts with the ſenſe of my Love, and pouring down all ſorts of bleſſings upon them. b In my Temple, in, and towards which, Prayers are daily made and directed unto me, 1 King. 8. 19, 28. c They ſhall have as free acceſs to mine Houſe and Altar, as the Jews themſelves, and their ſervices ſhall be as acceptable to me as theirs. Evangelical Worſhip is here deſcribed under ſuch Expreſſions as agreed to the Worſhip of God, which then was in uſe, as it is Mal. 1. 11. and elſewhere. See alſo Rom. 12. 1. Heb. 13. 15. d Jews and Gentiles ſhall have equal freedom of acceſs to my Houſe, and ſhall there call upon my Name. Poſſibly he may call it an Houſe of Prayer, either to imply, that Prayer to God, whereof Thankſgiving is a part, is a more conſiderable part of Gods Worſhip than Sacrifice, which being conſidered in it ſelf is little valued by him, as he frequently declareth: or to ſignifie that in the New Teſtament, when the Gentiles ſhould be called, all other Sacrifices ſhould ceaſe, except that of Prayer, and ſuch like ſpiritual Services. Which alſo is confirmed from the nature of the thing. For ſeeing Sacrifices were confined to the Temple at Jeruſalem, and it was impoſſible that all Nations ſhould reſort thither to offer up Levitical Sacrifices in ſuch time and manner as God appointed, it was neceſſary upon ſuppoſition of the general converſion of the Gentiles, that that way of Worſhip ſhould be aboliſhed, and ſuch a way preſcribed as they were capable of practiſing.

† Heb. to his gathered. 8 The Lord GOD, which gathereth the out-caſts of Iſrael e, ſaith, Yet will I gather others to him, † beſides thoſe that are gathered unto him f.

e Which will gather to himſelf, and bring into their own Land, thoſe poor Iſraelites which are, or ſhall be, caſt out of their own Land, and from Gods preſence, and diſperſed in divers parts of the World. f As there are ſome few Gentiles whom I have made Proſelytes, and added to the Jewiſh Church, ſo I ſhall make another and a far more comprehenſive gathering of the Gentiles, whom I ſhall bring into the ſame Church with the Jews, making both Jews and Gentiles one fold under one Shepherd, as it is promiſed, Joh. 13. 16.

9 All ye beaſts of the field, come to devour, yea, all ye beaſts in the forreſt g.

g This invitation or proclamation is a prediction of Iſrael's Deſtruction by their cruel Enemies, which are oft expreſs'd in Scripture under the names of ravenous Beaſts. But the great Queſtion is, What connexion this part of the Chapter hath with the former? which may be thus conceived: The Prophet having largely diſcourſed concerning the Meſſiah, and his Church and Kingdom, and particularly of the great acceſſion and converſion of the Gentiles to it, and of the Infidelity, Apoſtacy, and manifold Wickedneſſes of the Jewiſh Nation, and having comforted and encouraged the Gentiles with Gods gracious promiſes made to them, he now proceeds to terrifie the unbelieving and ungodly Jews, and to ſhew that as the Gentiles ſhould believe, and be ſaved, ſo they ſhould reject their Meſſiah, and be utterly deſtroyed; altho we need not labour much about the coherence: For this may be a new Sermon, and therefore many learned Interpreters make this the beginning of the 57th Chapter.

10 His h watchmen i are blind: they are all ignorant k, they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark l, ‖ ſleeping, lying down, loving to ſlumber m.

‖ Or, dreaming, or talking in their ſleep.

h Iſraels, as is evident frm the following verſes; the Pronoun Relative being but without, and inſtead of the Antecedent; of which I have given divers Inſtances before. i Prieſts and Prophets, or other Teachers, who are commonly called Watchmen, as Ezek. 3. 17. & 33. 2. Hoſ. 9. 8. He mentions only the Teachers, becauſe Ignorance was moſt ſhameful in them, but hereby he ſuppoſeth the groſs ignorance of the People, who neither pretended nor deſired to be wiſer than their Teachers. k Of Gods Will and Word, and of their own and the Peoples Duty, and of the true Meſſiah. l They are alſo ſlothful and negligent in inſtructing the people, and do not faithfully reprove them for their ſins, nor warn them of their dangers, nor keep them from Errors and corruptions in Doctrine, and Worſhip, and Converſation, as they ought to do. m Minding their own eaſe and ſafety more than the Peoples benefit.

* Heb. ſtrong of appetite. † Heb. know not to be ſatisfied. * Ezek. 34. 2, 3. * Ch. 53. 6. & 57. 17. 11 Yea, they are † greedy dogs which †* can never have enough n, and they are ſhepherds that cannot underſtand o: they * all look to their own way p, every one for his gain from his quarter q.

n Inſatiably covetous. o Heb. that know not to underſtand, that do not care, or love, or deſire, (as knowing is frequently taken) either to underſtand the Law, or Word of God themſelves, or to make the People to underſtand it. p They regard neither Gods Command and Glory, nor the Peoples good, but only the ſatisfaction of their own baſe Luſts. See on Iſa. 53. 6. q In their ſeveral places and ſtations, as they have opportunity: Heb. from his or their end or extremity, i.e. univerſally, or all from one end of that Body or Society of men unto the other: as the ſame word ſignifies Gen. 19. 4. from one end of the City to the other, or, as we there render it, from every quarter: and as the ſame word is by divers learned men rendred 1 King. 12. 31. not of the meaneſt of the people, but out of all the people, or indifferently out of every Tribe: of which ſee my note there. But if that Phraſe be rightly rendred there, out of the meaneſt of the people, as divers alſo expound the ſame Phraſe, Gen. 47. 2. of the meaneſt of his Brethren; why may it not as well be rendred here, even from the meaneſt or pooreſt of his flock, which is a great aggravation of their covetouſneſs and cruelty, to extort gains from ſuch as needed their Charity.

12 Come ye, ſay they q, I will fetch wine, and we will fill our ſelves r with ſtrong drink, and to morrow ſhall be as this day, and much more abundant s.

q Unto their Brethren, by Office, and in Iniquity, unto their Fellow-Prieſts, or other jolly companions. r We will drink not only to Delight, but even to Drunkenneſs, as this word ſignifies, Mich. 1. 10. and elſewhere. s Which ſheweth their dreadful ſecurity and contempt of God, and of his Judgments, and their total and reſolved abandoning of all care of their own or Peoples Souls.

5 Enflaming your ſelves † with idols r * under every green tree s *ſlaying the children t in the valleys u under the clifts of the rocks x?

r Heb. being inflamed, &c. luſting after them, and mad upon them, as the Phraſe is, Jer. 50. 38. fervent both in making and in worſhipping of them, as was obſerved, Iſa. 44. 12. &c. It is a Metaphor borrowed from Whoredom to which Idolatry is oft compared. s Whereſoever you ſee an Idol erected, which was commonly done in Groves, or under great and ſhady Trees, which both defended the Worſhippers from the heat of the Sun, and were ſuppoſed to ſtrike them with a kind of ſacred Horror and Reverence. See on Deut. 12. 2. 2 King. 16. 4. & 17. 10. t In way of Sacrifice to their Idols, after the manner of the barbarous Heathens; of which ſee on Lev. 18. 21. Deut. 12. 31. 2 King. 21. 6. & 23. 10. u Or, beſides the brooks, which run in valleys: which was moſt commodious for ſuch bloody work. He ſeems to allude to the valley of Hinnom in which theſe cruelties were practiſed, Jer. 7. 31. through which alſo the Brook Kidron is ſuppoſed to have run. x Which they choſe either for ſhade, or for thoſe dark vaults and hollow places, which were either by Nature or Art made in rocks, and which were convenient for, and frequently appointed to idolatrous uſes.

6 Among the ſmooth ſtones of the ſtream y is thy portion y; they are thy lot z: even to them haſt thou poured a drink-offering, thou haſt offered a meat-offering a. Should I receive comfort in theſe b?

y Thou haſt choſen for thy portion thoſe Idols which were either made of thoſe ſmooth ſtones which were caſt up by Rivers; or which were worſhipped upon Altars made of ſuch ſtones; or which were worſhipped by the ſides of Brooks or Rivers where ſuch ſmooth ſtones commonly lie. z Thou haſt forſaken me and choſen Idols for the great object of thy Worſhip and Truſt. a For the Devil is Gods Ape, and Idolaters uſed the ſame Rites and Offerings in the Worſhip of Idols which God had preſcribed in his own, Num. 15. 4. &c. b Should I be pleaſed with ſuch a People and ſuch Actions? Muſt I not needs be highly provoked, and ſhew my diſpleaſure by an exemplary puniſhment of ſuch wicked and fooliſh Actions? This is an uſual Figure, called Meioſis, or Litotes, when leſs is ſaid, and more is underſtood.

* Ezek. 16. 16. 25.

7 * Upon a lofty and high mountain c haſt thou ſet thy bed d: even thither wenteſt thou up to offer ſacrifice.

c In high places, which were much uſed for religious Worſhip, both by Iſraelites and by Heathens. d Thine Altar, as appears from the Sacrifice here following, in which thou didſt commit ſpiritual Whoredom with Idols. Compare Ezek. 23. 17, 41.

* Ezek. 8. 10. & 23. 14.

8 Behind * the doors alſo & the poſts e haſt thou ſet up thy remembrance f: for thou haſt diſcovered thy ſelf to another than me f, and art gone up g: thou haſt enlarged thy bed h, and ‖ made a covenant with them i; * thou lovedſt their bed ‖ where thou ſaweſt it k.

‖ Or, hewed it for thy ſelf larger than theirs.
* Ezek. 16. 26, 28. & 23, 12. &c.
‖ Or, thou provideſt room.

e Which by a Figure called Hendiadus, may be put for the doorpoſts, as it is expreſſed, Deut. 11. 20. Behind the poſts of the doors of thine Houſe: where the Heathens are ſaid to have placed their tutelary gods to whoſe protection they committed themſelves & their Houſes, that ſo they might have their Eyes and Minds upon them, whenſoever they went out or came in. Here alſo the Iſraelites might put them in ſome cloſe corner, that they might keep them ſecret, it being opprobrious, and oft-times dangerous for them to worſhip Idols. f Thoſe Images or Monuments and tokens which thou didſt make and ſet up there as remembrances of thoſe Idol-gods whom they repreſented, or to whom they belonged. He ſaith, thy remembrance, in oppoſition to Gods remembrances, or to that Writing of Gods Law upon their doorpoſts, which God preſcribed to keep him and his Law in their remembrance, Deut. 6. 9. & 11. 20. f Thou haſt uncovered thy nakedneſs, i.e. proſtituted thy Body (as that Phraſe commonly ſignifies) to others beſides me thine Husband. Heb. from with me (departing from me, or, as it were riſing out of my Bed) thou haſt uncovered or proſtituted thy ſelf to others like an impudent and inſatiable ſtrumpet. g Into the Adulterous Bed, as this very word is uſed, Gen. 49 4. b That it might receive many Adulterers together. Thou haſt multiplied thine Idols and Altars. i Thou haſt covenanted to ſerve them, and to expect help from them. But becauſe the Verb here uſed being thus put by it ſelf never ſignifies to make a Covenant, it ſeems to be better rendred in the margent of our Bible, and by others, haſt hewed it (to wit, thy Bed, which is expreſſed both in the next foregoing, and in the next following words:) for thy ſelf (for thine Idolatrous uſes c) larger than theirs, than their bed, as it follows: or thus, didſt hew down (to wit, trees, which is eaſily underſtood both from the Verb, and from the nature of the thing) to or for thy ſelf (to make Images or other things relating to thy falſe Gods) more than they, more than the Heathens, of whom thou haſt learned theſe practices, as God complains, 2 Kin. 21. 9. Ezek. 16. 46, 47. 52. k No ſooner didſt thou ſee their Idols but thou waſt enamoured with them, and didſt fall down and worſhip them, like an unchaſte and lewd Woman, who upon all occaſions, and at the very firſt view of any man, is inflamed with Luſt towards them. Heb. thou loveſt their Bed (i.e. their filthy converſation) in the place (for ſo this Heb. word frequently ſignifies, as Deut. 23. 12. Iſa. 22. 18. and elſewhere) where thou ſaweſt it. Or, thus, thou lovedſt their bed, thou didſt provide (as this word ſignifies, Exod. 18. 21. and ſo doth a word of the very ſame ſignification, Gen. 22. 8.) a place for it, to receive their Bed, to ſet up their Idols in thine own houſe.

9 And ‖ † thou wenteſt l to the king m with ointment n, and didſt encreaſe thy perfumes o, and didſt ſend thy meſſengers far off p, and didſt debaſe thy ſelf even unto hell q.

‖ Or, thou reſpecteſt the King.
† Ch. 30. 6. Ezek. 16. 33. & 23. 16.

l Either by thy ſelf, or, by thy meſſengers, as it follows. Or, thou didſt look, to wit, earneſtly, with expectation and vehement affection. m Either to Moloch, which was as it were the King or chief of their Idols, and which ſignifies a King. Or, to the great King of Aſſyria, called the King by way of eminency, to whom the Iſraelites in the days of Iſaiah were very prone to ſeek, and truſt, and ſend preſents. Although the word, King, may be here taken collectively for the Kings of Aſſyria or Egypt, or any other King, from whom they deſired or expected help in their ſtraits. And ſo the Prophet paſſeth here from their Idolatry to another ſin, even to their carnal confidence in Heathen Princes, for which they are oft ſeverely reproved; although theſe two ſins were commonly joined together, and they eaſily received Idolatry from thoſe Kings whoſe help they deſired. n Wiſh precious Ointments, and particularly with balm, which was of great price, and was a commodity peculiar to thoſe parts, and was ſometimes ſent as a preſent. See Gen. 43. 11. Jer. 8. 22. & 46. 11. o Didſt ſend great quantities thereof to them to procure their aid. p Into Aſſyria, which was far from Judea. q Thou waſt willing to ſubmit to the baſeſt terms to procure their aid.

10 Thou art wearied in the greatneſs of thy way r; yet ſaidſt thou not, There is no hope s; thou haſt found the ‖ life of thine hand t, therefore thou waſt not grieved u.

r Thou haſt not eaſed or relieved, but only tired thy ſelf with all thy tedious journeys, and laborious endeavours. s And yet thou waſt ſo ſtupid under all thy diſcouragements and diſappointments, that thou didſt not perceive that thy labour was loſt, and that thy caſe was not mended but made worſe and deſperate by theſe practices. t Thou haſt found (i e. Thou falſly imagineſt that thou haſt found, or ſhalt aſſuredly find by theſe courſes) the life (i e. the ſtrength or vigor) of thine hand, that thine hand is ſtrengthened by theſe practices: or, life by thine hand, i.e. by theſe endeavours and applications of thy ſelf to others for help. Or, thou haſt ſometimes found ſucceſs in theſe ways. u Therefore thou didſt not repent of thy ſin and folly herein, but didſt perſiſt and applaud thy ſelf in ſuch courſes.

11 And of whom haſt thou been afraid or feared x, that thou haſt lied y, and haſt not remembred me z, nor laid it to thy heart a? have not I held my peace even of old b, and thou feareſt me not c?

x And what or who are they, the fear of whom drives thee to theſe wicked and deſperate courſes? Are they not men, weak and mortal Creatures, ſuch as wholly depend upon me, and can do nothing to thee either againſt me or without me? y That thou haſt dealt thus diſloyally and perfidiouſly with me, and ſought for ſuch foreign aſſiſtances, contrary to my command, and thy ſolemn Covenant. z Haſt thou forgotten all thoſe great things which I have done for thee, and all thoſe Promiſes which I have made to thee, and conſtantly performed, when thou haſt not groſly violated the conditions upon which they were made. a Or thus, nor ſet me upon thine heart, as theſe very words are rendred Cant. 8. 6. And ſo this is a repetition of what is ſaid in the foregoing clauſe in other words. The ſenſe is, Thou haſt not ſeriouſly and affectionately conſidered what I am, how all-ſufficient, and faithful, and gracious, for then thou wouldeſt not have diſtruſted or diſobeyed me. b Have not I forborn to reprove and puniſh thee for this and for thy other sins, from time to time, ever since thou wast my People, that by this goodness I might oblige thee to love me, and to cleave unto me? c Or, therefore thou dost not fear or regard me. Thus thou abusest mine indulgence and long-suffering, taking occasion from thence to despise me.

† Heb. and.

12 I will declare d thy righteousness and thy works e, † for they shall not profit thee f.

d I will no longer be silent and patient towards thee. e Which may be put for the righteousness of thy works by that known figure, of which see the first note on *v.*8. whereby he means their wickedness, which he calleth their righteousness either Ironically, or because it was covered with a pretence of Righteousness, and they alledged that this was a just and lawful thing when they were distressed to seek for help from their Neighbors or Allies. The sense is, I will discover whether thy works be righteous, as thou pretendest they are: my punishments shall manifest the wickedness of thy Actions. f These Actions shall do thee no good, but much hurt.

13 When thou criest g, let thy companies deliver thee h: but the wind shall carry them all away i; vanity k shall take them l; but he that putteth his trust in me, shall possess the land, and shall inherit my holy mountain m:

g To wit, unto me for deliverance. h Expect it not from me whom thou hast forsaken and despised, but from those foreign Helps to whom thou hast sought and trusted for succour. i But they shall be so far from saving thee that they shall not be able to deliver themselves, but shall be carried away suddenly & violently by the blast of mine anger. k A vapour or puff of Breath which quickly vanisheth away. It is the same thing in effect with the wind. l Or, take them away, as this verb signified, *Hos.*11.13. and elsewhere. m Shall enjoy my favour and presence in my Temple.

* Ch.40.3. & 62.10.

14 And shall say n, * Cast ye up, cast ye up o, prepare the way, take up the stumbling block out of the way of thy people p.

n Heb. And he shall say; or, and one shall say. God will raise up a man who shall say these words, and that with authority and efficacy, so as the thing shall be done. o Make causeways, where it is needful, for their safe and easie passage. p Remove all things which may hinder them in their return.

* Psal.34.18. & 51. 17. & 138.6. Ch.66 2.

15 For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy q, I dwell in the high and holy place; * with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit r, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones.

q Who is omnipotent, everlasting and unchangeable, holy in all his words and ways, and therefore both can and will deliver his People, as he hath promised to do. r With such also whose Spirits are broken and humbled by Afflictions, and by a sense of their sins for which they were afflicted; which doubtless was the case of many of the Jews in the Babylonish Captivity: whom therefore he here implies that God would pity, and deliver out of their Distresses.

* Ps. 103.9. Mic.7.18. † Num.16.22. Job 34.14. Heb.12.9.

16 For * I will not contend for ever s, neither will I be always wroth: for the spirit should fail before me, and the souls † which I have made t.

s I will not constantly proceed to the utmost severity with sinful men in this Life, and therefore I will put an end to the miseries of the Jews, and turn their captivity. t For then their Spirits would sink and die under my stroke, and I should do nothing else but destroy the works of mine own hands. Therefore I consider their Infirmity, and spare them. Compare *Ps.*78.38,39. & 103.13,14

17 For the Iniquity of his covetousness u was I wroth, and smote him: I hid me x, and was wroth, and he went on † frowardly in the way of his heart y.

u Of which sin the Jews were eminently guilty, as is expressly affirmed *Jer.*6.13. & 8.10. But this is not mentioned exclusively as to other sins, but Synecdochically so as to comprehend all those sins for which God contended with them. x I withdrew my Favour and Help from him, and left him in great calamities. y Yet he was not reformed by corrections, but in his distresses trespassed more and more, as was said of Ahaz, and obstinately persisted in those sinful courses which were chosen by and were most pleasing to the Lusts of his own corrupt Heart.

18 I have seen his ways a, and will heal him b: I will lead him also, and restore comforts unto him, and c to his mourners d.

a I have taken notice of these evil ways in which he seems resolved to walk, and that he is neither bettered by Mercies nor Judgments. b Or, yet I will heal him. Although I might justly destroy him, and leave him to perish in his own ways, yet of my meer Mercy, and for my own Names sake, I will pity them, and turn them from their sins, and bring them out of all their troubles. c Or, to wit, the copulative Conjunction being put expositively, as it is frequently. d To those that are humbled under Gods Hand, that mourn in Sion, Isa. 61. 2,3. for their own and others sins, *Ezek.*9.4. and for the calamities of Gods Church and People, *Isa.*66.10.

* Pro.16.1. Heb.13.15.

19 I create e * the fruit of the lips; peace f, peace g to him that is far off, and to him that is near h, saith the LORD, and I will heal him.

e I will by my Almighty Power, and in a wonderful manner produce. f Either 1. Praise or Thanksgiving, which is called the fruit of our lips, Hos.14.2. Heb. 13.15. and Peace: Or rather 2. That Peace which is not wrought by Mens hands, but only by Gods Lips or Word, Peace with God, and in a mans own Conscience, which God hath promised to his People, and which he hath published and offered to all sorts of men by the preaching of the Prophets, and especially of the Apostles; as may be gathered both from the Object of this Peace in the following words, and by the exclusion of all wicked men from this peace, *v.*20,21. g The doubling of the word signifies the certainty and abundance of this Peace. h To the Gentiles who are far from God, and from Salvation, Act. 2. 38, 39. *Eph.*2.12. &c. as well as to the Jews, who are called a people near unto God, Psal.148.14.

20 But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt i.

i Their Minds are restless, being perpetually hurried and tormented with their own Lusts and Passions, and with the horror of their guilt, and the dread of the Divine Vengeance due unto them, and ready to come upon them.

* Ch. 48. 22.

21 * There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked k.

k Though they may have as great a share of prosperity as the best of Men have, as appears from *Psal.*37.35. & 73.3. &c. Eccl. 8.14. & 9.1. yet they have no share in this inward, and spiritual, and everlasting Peace.

CHAP. LVIII.

† Heb. with the throat.

1 CRy † aloud a, spare not b, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins.

a The Prophet having in the foregoing Chapter noted and censured divers gross miscarriages of the Jews, proceeds upon the same Subject in this Chapter, and in Gods name expostulates with them for other misdemeanors. b Forbear not to speak whatsoever I command thee for the conviction of this People.

‖ Heb. judgment. Jer. 5. 4. & 8. 7.

2 Yet they seek me daily c, and delight to know my ways d, as a nation that did righteousness e, and forsook not the ‖ ordinance of their God f: they ask of me the ordinances of justice g: they take delight h in approaching to God i.

c They cover all their wickedness with a profession of Religion, from time to time resorting to my house, pretending to ask Counsel of me, and to desire and seek my Favour and Blessing. d Either 1. They seem to delight in it: for men are oft said in Scripture to be, or do, that which they seem or profess to be, or do, as *Mat.*13.12. that which he hath is thus explained in *Luk.*8. 18. that which he seemeth to have, and *Rom.*7.9. I was alive, i.e. I falsly thought my self to be alive. See also *Phil.*3.9. Or 2. They really delight; for this is evident, that there are many men who take some pleasure in the knowledge of Gods Will and Word, and yet do not conform their Lives to it. e As if they were a righteous and godly People. f As if they were not guilty of any Apostacy from God, or neglect of, or disobedience to Gods precepts. g As if they desired and resolved to observe them. h Of which see the second note upon this verse. i In coming to my Temple to hear my Word, and to offer Sacrifices.

3 Wherefore have we fasted, say they, and thou seest not k? wherefore have we afflicted our soul l, and thou takest no knowledg? Behold, in the day of your fast m ye find pleasure n, and exact all your ‖ † labours o.

k They complain of hard usage from God, that although they prayed and fasted, and kept the rest of Gods ordinances, all which are synecdochically comprehended under the title of fasting, all their labor was lost, and God neither regarded nor delivered them l Defrauded and pinched our Appetites with fasting, of which this Phrase is used, *Lev.*16.29. & 23.27,29. m In those solemn days of fasting which I have appointed: or, in those times when I have called you by the course of my Providence, and counsels of my Prophets, unto fasting, and weeping and mourning, &c. *Isa.*22.12. n Either 1. You indulge your selves in sensuality, as they did, *Isa.*22.13. But this doth not agree with that afflicting of their Souls which they now professed, and which God acknowledgeth, *v.*5. Or rather 2. You pursue and satisfie your own Lusts: though you abstain from bodily food, you do not mortifie your own sinful concupiscences, and when you are restrained from outward Acts, yet even then your Thoughts and Affections are set upon, and working towards those things which gratifie your fleshly Inclinations and worldly Interests. o Your mony got by your labour, and lent to others either for their need, or your own advantage: for Labour is oft put for Wealth, as *Deut.*28.33. *Isa.*45.14. &c. Heb. your griefs, not passively, those things which are grievous to you, but actively such as are very grievous and burdensom to others, either hard Service, above the strength of your Servants, or beyond the time limited by God for their Service, of which see an Instance, *Jer.*34.13,14,15,16. or debts, which you require, either with usury, or at least with rigour and cruelty, when either the general Law of Charity, or Gods particular and positive Law, commanded the release, or at least the forbearance of them; of which see an instance, *Nehem.*5.1,2. &c.

‖ Or, ye fast not as this day.

4 Behold, ye fast for strife and debate p, and to smite with the fist of wickedness q, ‖ ye shall not fast

as ye do this day, to make your voice r to be heard on high.

p Your fasting days, wherein you ought in a special manner to implore the Mercy of God, and to shew Compassion to Men, you imploy in a great measure in injuring or quarreling with your Brethren, your Servants, or Debtors, or in contriving mischief against them, as if the design of your fasting and praying to God, were only to obtain a licence to oppress men. Compare Mat. 23.14. q Or, with a wicked fist, a Genitive of the Adjunct. To deal rigorously and injuriously with your Servants or Debtors, which Servants, it may be, had sold themselves to the year of Redemption, Exod. 21. 2. Lev. 25. 39, 40, 50. You handle them with an hard hand, the word is used for fist; Exod. 21. 18. the LXX add the humble, poor, or inferiour person, and that not only their Debtors with a summum jus exact rigour, which seems elsewhere to be expressed by grinding the face, ch. 3. 15. and in that Parable by taking by the Throat, Mat. 18. 28. but also their Servants out of meer Will and Pleasure, and in contempt of them, treating them opprobriously as Christ was handled in contempt and scorn, Mat. 26. 67, 68. Joh. 18. 22.

r Either 1. In strife and debate, in which mens Passions shew themselves by loud clamours. Or 2. So as to cause the cry of the oppressed, by reason of your injuries, of what kind soever, to enter into the Ears of God, which is a crying sin, whether it proceed from unmercifulness, Exod. 22. 25, 26, 27. which sometimes encreaseth to rage, 2 Chr. 28. 9. or from injustice, ch. 5. 7. or from fraud and deceit, Jam. 5. 4. The Scripture doth frequently express whatever sin is against Charity in special, as also general complex sins, by crying, Gen. 18. 20, 21. Jon. 1. 2. Or 3. By way of Ostentation, to note their Hypocrisie, they love to be taken notice of by others, Mat. 6. 2, 5, 16. or, their Folly, supposing that they shall be heard for their much speaking, upon which account Baals Priests are mocked by Elijah, 1 Kin. 18. 27, 28. 4. Voice here relates principally to their Prayer, it is a Synecdoche of the kind, so the sense is, this is not the way to have your Prayers heard, if you desire that, you must fast in another manner, and abstain from all kind of oppression: And this seems best to suit the Context, which is to shew what kind of fast the Lord reproves, and what he approves in the following verses.

* Zech 7. 5. * Lev. 16. 29. ‖ Or, to afflict his soul for a day.

5 Is it * such a fast that I have chosen s? * ‖ a day t for a man to afflict u his soul x? is it to bow down his head as a bulrush, and to spred sackcloth and ashes under him z? wilt thou call a this a fast b, and an acceptable day to the LORD c?

s Approve of, accept, or delight in, by a Metonimy, because we delight in what we freely chuse. t Or, to afflict his Soul for a day: It is an Hypallage, and so it may be understood, either for a man to take a certain time to afflict his Soul in, and that either from even to even, Lev. 23. 32. or from morning to evening, Judg. 20. 26. 2 Sam. 3. 35. or else, to afflict his Soul for a little time. u Or, keep himself low, or chastise the Body for want of Food, viz. outwardly without any inward sorrow, or compunction for sin working a true Humiliation in the sight of God. x Put here Synecdochically for the Body or Person, as is usual in Scripture, Gen. 46. 18. 22, 25. Lev. 2. 2, 4. & 7. 20, 21, 27. & 22. 1 f. y Here the Prophet sets down those external gestures and postures in particular, which they did join with their hypocritical fasts, as he had mentioned it before in general. To bow down, bowing is the posture of Mourners, Psal. 35. 14. and here it is either, as if through weakness of Body their Heads did hang down; or counterfeitly, to represent the posture of true penitents, moving sometimes their Heads this way, and that way, as the word signifieth, not unlike the ballance of a Clock, as the Bulrush moved by the Wind boweth it self down, waving to and fro, in a kind of circular, or semicircular motion, the contrary motion of lifting up the Head being an Indication of Pride, ch. 3. 16. It is the guise of Hypocrites to put on affected Countenances, Mat. 6. 16. z The Jews to express their sorrow, made use of Sackcloth and Ashes two ways: 1. Sometimes by putting on Sackcloth upon their Bodies, as 1 Kin. 21. 27. Ps. 69. 11. and casting Ashes upon their Heads, 2 Sam. 13. 19. And 2. Sometimes by spreading Sackcloth under them, and lying down upon Ashes, Esth. 4. 3. Job 2. 8. The Intent of Sackcloth was to afflict the Body by its unpleasing harshness, and of Ashes to represent their own vileness, as being but Dust and Ashes; their putting of them on might note their uneasiness under sin, and laying on them their self-abhorrency, shaming themselves for it. Q. Are such Rites now convenient on a day of Humiliation to help us in our afflicting of our selves? An. Gospel Services neither require them, or need them, respecting more the Inward afflicting of the Soul with godly sorrow, and deep contrition; yet they may carry this instruction along with them, that our Ornaments, our best and gawdy Apparel, ought to be laid aside, as not suiting either the ground and cause, or the end and design of days of Humiliation. a i.e. Canst thou upon a rational account as a meer man call it so? Canst thou think, suppose, or believe it to be so? b It being such an one as hath nothing in it, but the lifeless skeleton and dumb signs of a Fast, nothing of deep Humiliation appearing in it, or, real Reformation proceeding from it: Not that the Prophet blames them for these external Rites in this outward way of afflicting themselves. For this he commands, Lev. 23. 27, 31, 32. and appoints certain Rites to be used, Lev. 16. 19, 21. And these particular Rites were frequent in their solemn Humiliations, 1 Kin. 21. 27. Esth. 4. 3. Dan. 9. 3. used also by the Heathen, Jon. 3. 5, 6. See Mat. 11. 21. But that which he condemns is their Hypocrisie in separating true Humiliation from them: for bodily exercise profiteth little, 1 Tim. 4. 8. c A day that God will approve of, as before. Heb. a day of acceptance, or that will turn to a good account on your behalf.

6 Is not this the fast that I have chosen d? to loose the bands of wickedness e, to undo † the heavy burdens f, and * to let the † oppressed h go free g, and that ye break every yoke i?

d Or, approve, as before 5. or, ought not such a Fast to be accompanied with such things as these, where he is now about to shew the concomitants of a true Fast, with reference to the thing in hand, namely, to exercise works of Charity, consisting partly in acts of Self-denial in this Verse, and partly in doing good to those in distress in the next. In this verse he instanceth in some particulars, and closeth with a general. e viz. The cruel Obligations of Usury and Oppression. f Heb. bundles, a Metaphor, possibly pointing at those many bundles of Writings, as Bills, Bonds, Mortgages, and acknowledgments, which the Usurers had lying by them. The former may relate to unjust and unlawful Obligations extorted by force, or fear, which he would have cancelled; This later to just Debts contracted through poverty and necessity, the rigour whereof he would have abated, whether by reason of loans upon too hard conditions, called a drawing them into a net, Psal. 10. 9. and so much is implied, Prov. 6 5. or, under too hard circumstances, whether they were loans of Food, or Money, of which the People so bitterly complained, Neh. 5. 1, 2, 3, 4. and is expresly forbid Exod. 22. 25. For debts may be called Burdens, 1. Because they lie as a great load upon the Debtors Spirits, under which whoever can walk up and down easily, doth not so much excel in fortitude as in folly. 2. Because they usually introduce Poverty, Slavery, Imprisonment, &c. g Either in a large sense, viz. any ways grieved or vexed, whether by the gripings of Usury, or the bondage of Slavery accompanied with cruel usage; or, more peculiarly (according to some) relating to their being confined, and shut up in Prisons, which later sense the word free, may possibly seem to favour, the former being comprised in that general expression that follows of breaking every yoke. h Heb. broken, i.e. like a bruised Reed, so crushed and weakned, that they have no consistency or ability, either to satisfie their Creditors, or support themselves, and we usually call such insolvent persons, broken, that cannot look upon themselves to be, sui juris, but wholly at anothers Mercy; you have the same kind of oppression, and the same words used Amos 3. 1. i Namely, That is grievous, a Metaphor, i.e. free them from all sorts of Vexation, whatever it is that held them under any Bondage; the LXX refer it to Bonds and Writings: But it seems more general the word properly signifies that stick or cord that holds both ends of the yoke, that it spring not out, or fall off from the neck on which it is laid, Exod. 25. 14. where the same word it used for staves, and called the bands of the Yoke, Lev. 26. 13. I have broken the bands of your yoke, and made you go upright, the same thing that God would have them do here.

7 Is it k not * to † deal l thy bread m to the hungry, and that thou bring n the poor o that are ‖ cast out p, to thy house q? when thou seest the naked r, that thou cover him s, and that thou hide t not thy self from thine own flesh u?

k Viz. The Fast that pleaseth me, supplied from the former verse; having shewed the evil they are to abstain from in order to an acceptable Fast, viz. cruelty, he here speaks of the duty that is required, viz. Mercy, as a manifestation of Repentance, Dan. 4. 27. Luk. 19. 8. For there are two parts of Justice, one to do no man wrong, the other to do good to all. Which two ought always to accompany each other, and cannot be parted, especially in acts of Humiliation, and as by those evils mentioned he understands all other evil whatsoever, that they are to be abstained from as the consequence of a day of Humiliation, so under these duties mentioned are comprised all the duties that we are to set upon as the effect of true Repentance; and he instanceth rather in those of the second Table than those of the first, not that they are to be neglected, but because chearful performance of external duties to our Neighbour, is the clearest discovery and indication of our inward Piety towards God, 1 Joh. 4. 20. l The word properly signifies to divide, or break into parts, for the more equal and expeditious doing whereof, they were wont of old to bake their Loaves with cuts or clefts in them, more or fewer according to the bigness of the Loaf, not much unlike that which we ordinarily call buns. It implies, that as none is obliged to give away all, so none is exempted from giving some, but a distribution to be made according to the abilities of Rich and Poor, or, the meaning is, what thou spareſt on thy fasting day from thine own Belly, thou give it to refresh the bowels of the hungry: What thou takest from thy self, give to another, that thy poor Neighbours Body may be refreshed by that, from the abstinence whereof thine own is afflicted. m Bread is taken for all necessaries for the Support of human Life, and here for all kind of Food; and it is here limited by a term of propriety, Thy, Which may seem to have some Emphasis in it: see my note on Eccles. 11. 1. speaking of their grinding and oppressing the poor, he would have them be sure to give of their own, not that which of right is anothers, and thou hast, it may be unjustly gotten. For to refresh some poor with that which thou hast gotten by the oppression of others, and thereby possibly made them poor, will turn but to a bad account, it will bring a curse upon thy house, or Family, Prov. 15. 27. or will transfer thy Estate over to such strangers, that will manage it as thou shouldest have done. Prov. 28. 8. n i.e. Voluntarily, without pressing. Invite, encourage, freely accommodate. o Viz. That are not only needy, and necessitous, as to their present condition, but helpless, and shift-shiftless as to the means of getting out of it. p And thereby become wanderers, having no abiding place; or rather, suffered to abide no where, such are mentioned *Heb.*11.37,38. Or, this word coming from a root that signifies to rebel, it may be applied to such as have been adjudged, whether wrongfully or no, Rebels, and therefore cast out, viz. of favour and protection, and so become as banished ones, or Pilgrims in another Country; or afflicted, as in the margent, viz. grievously oppressed by the cruelty of great men, whereby they are cast out of their possessions, and so become wanderers, seeking Relief abroad. q That thou be hospitable, and make thy house a shelter to them that have none of their own left, but as we usually say, cast out of house and home; see *Act.*16.34. r i.e. Either that have no cloaths, or that are so meanly cloathed they have scarce enough to cover their nakedness, 1 *Cor.*4.11. where naked is to be taken as hunger and thirst is, not absolutely starved, so neither quite stripped: But either in a ragged and undecent condition, as to others sight, or so thinly and insufficiently cloathed as not to defend him from the injury of weather, as to his own sense of feeling. s i.e. That thou give him raiment suited to these wants, or that wherewith he may procure it, *Jam.*2.15,16. most of these circumstances we find were the cases of the Apostles, 1 *Cor.*4.11. t That thou not only seek no occasion to excuse thy self, either by absence, or discountenancing, and disowning of him; but that out of compassion thou apply thy self heartily to his speedy relief, that thou beest not like that Priest, and Levite, Luk. 10.31,32. but like the good Samaritan, *Luk.*10.33,34,35. not giving him occasion to complain as David, *Psal*142.4. u Some confine this to our own Kindred and Relations, and Family, and this the LXX seem to favour, who render it, Those of thine own House, of thine own Seed overlook not; agreeable to that of 1 *Tim.*5.8. where the Apostle useth the same word that the LXX doth for Kindred: But this would confine our Charity within too narrow a compass, in as as much as often, nay most commonly, the necessities of others are greater than our own; neither is it congruous that the other words should be taken in the greatest latitude, and this alone confined within so narrow a compass: 'Tis true the Hebrews by their own flesh do mostly understand those who are of the same Stock, or Lineage, and Tribe, as *Gen.*37.27. & 2 *Sam.*19.12,13. and thus many understand Paul's meaning, *Rom.*11.14. But here it is to be taken more generally, for every man, he being thine own nature; and in this latitude our Saviour interprets the relation of neighbour to that Lawyer, *Luk.*10.29,30,&c. We can look on no man, but there we contemplate our own flesh, and therefore it is barbarous, not only to tear, but not to love and succour our own flesh, *Neh.*5.5. In which soever of these two senses you take it, there is a note of similitude to be understood; so that the sense is this, Break thy bread,&c. to them as unto thine own flesh; be not more severe to them, than thou wouldst be to thy self; and thus it agrees with that of our Saviour, Mat. 22. 39. and with that of the Apostle, *Eph.*5.29. in short feed him as thou wouldst feed thy self, or have it fed; shelter him as thou wouldst shelter thy self, or have it sheltered; cloath him as thou wouldst cloath thy self, or be cloathed; if in any of these respects thou wert in his circumstances.

* Job 11.17. Ch.50.10. & 59.9,10.

* Ch.52.12. † Heb. shall gather thee up.

8 Then shall thy * light x break forth as the morning y, and thine health z shall spring forth speedily: and thy righteousness a shall go before thee b, the * glory c of the LORD † shall be thy reward d.

x It is put in general for all happiness and prosperity; as all kind of Adversity and Calamity is set forth and resembled by darkness; but here more particularly for a comfortable and free Estate after their dark and calamitous condition in the Babylonish Captivity; for the like reason Josephus tells us, *lib.*12.*cap.*11. that the Jews instituted a Feast to be observed by their posterity, upon the account of the service of the Temple being re-established, which they called, The Feast of Lights, because, saith he, so great a Happiness brake forth upon them beyond their hope. y Here is a Metaphorical allusion in a Metonimical Expression, viz. of the efficient, describing the comfortable effect of humbling themselves in a right manner, which, like the day-light, shall break from the blackness of their night of affliction, and bring with it the joy and comfort of all good things; And he doth not only say this light shall appear, but break forth, dart it self forth, notwithstanding all difficulties, as the Sun breaks, and pierceth through a cloud, noting how ready God is to help his People, when they are rightly humbled, how quickly, and how clearly Salvation shall break forth upon them. z Another Metaphor to express the same thing, unless there may be this difference, the Light with reference to their outward state, and Health with reference to the inward delight of their Minds, in both to describe the compleat satisfaction they should have: Deliverances out of great pressures are often in Scripture represented by the Recovery of Health, as *ch.*57.18. & *Jer.*8.22. and this Prophet especially delights in this Metaphor; because all affliction is as it were a sickness to the Soul, altering the Heart and Countenance. See *Neh.*2.2,3. and a recovery out of this estate maketh the Heart glad, and the Countenance chearful, *Esth.*8.16,17. *Jer.*33.6. compare *v.*10,11. Hence the LXX render it Medicines. a Either 1. Thy uprightness and sincerity, *Gen.*30.33. Or 2. The reward of thy Righteousness, by a Metonimy, *ch.*48.18. Psal. 24.5. and here perhaps it may particularly relate to their works of Mercy, and Charity, it being the thing in hand, and often so called, Psal. 112.9. and applied by the Apostle to this purpose, 2 *Cor.*9.9. It brings temporal, spiritual, and eternal Blessings, and all this not of desert but free Grace, as a reward, that naturally springs forth from the faithfulness of his Promises, as the Harvest from the Earth, when the seed is sown, see *Hos.*10.12. so the fruit and reward of our Righteousness springs not from our deserts, but from Gods Righteousness, *Heb.*6.10. Or 3. The witness of thy Righteousness, by what thou dost thou wilt appear to be righteous, *Psal.*37.6. For such a notion as this was vulgarly sucked in, that Adversity did never befal a Person or People, but for their sins, and was strongly urged by way of argument against Job's Integrity by his Friends, therefore thy being delivered shall be as a testimony of thy Righteousness. Or 4. The fruit and effect of thy Righteousness, viz. the due, just, and right order of thy Government, which, as Calvin saith, is a sign of Gods fatherly kindness; things that are now in a confusion he will bring into right order again, i.e. Justice shall be duly administred, and men shall carry themselves justly all the Land over. See *Isa.*32.16,17,18. Or 5. Christs Righteousness, *Jer.*23.6. compare with 33.16. Then the meaning is, He shall go in and out before thee. b As it were making way for thy better state, as the break of day, or the morning Star goes before the Sun. c i.e. The glory of his Power and Providence, or his glorious Power shall be seen in bringing thee up from Captivity, and defending thee from their pursuit; or, as some, a glorious state shall succeed this thy calamitous condition, and called the Glory of the Lord to express the greatness of this glory, as very great mountains are called the mountains of God, and tall Cedars the Cedars of God, the glorious Lord, by a Metonimy of the Adjunct. d Heb. shall gather thee, thus the word is used concerning Dan, who was appointed to bring up the Rear, or to close up the march of the Israelites, when they marched from the Wilderness of Sinai, *Num.*10.25. This Office God takes upon himself; for it argues great skill, and courage, and makes much for the Honour and Glory of a Commander, both to gather up all the stragglers, that none be picked up by the Enemy, which relates to the Hebrew word of gathering, and to secure and cover the Rear of his Army; Thus the Angel of his presence secured the Israelites when they came up out of Egypt, *Exod.*14.19.

9 Then shalt thou call e, and the LORD shall answer f, thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am g: if thou take away from the midst h of thee, the yoke i, the putting forth of the finger k, and speaking vainly l.

l They made great complaint, *v.*3. that God took no notice of their Services, which complaint God seems now to satisfie, q. d. these conditions observed, call upon me, and thou shalt see I will regard, *Psal.*34.15. See *Isa.*1.18. f He will give an effectual demonstration, that he hears thee, by the real answer that he will give to thy request, *Psal.*34.17. & 99.6. & 118. 5. g A Phrase that notes a person to be ready at hand, for Work, as Isaiah, *ch.*6.8. or for Help, as God here, and *Psal.*46.1. or both, *Psal.*145.18,19. h Not a Geometrical middle, or center, but having a place among others, the meaning is, from among you. i i.e. All those pressures and Grievances before mentioned *v.*6. all that barbarous slavery they brought their Brethren into, the particulars expressed by that one Hebrew word, motah, three times used in this Chapter. k There being often an indication of a mans Mind by the postures of several parts of the Body, as of Lust, Malice, Scorn, Revenge, &c. Prov. 6. 12,13,14. the putting forth of the finger may point at divers things all springing from two roots; either the secret malice of the Heart, or unjust and open violence. It is used 1. Sometimes by way of scoff, reproof, or disdainful insulting, as the Pharisee seems to point at the Publican, *Luk.*18.11. pointing with the Finger, like winking with the Eye, seeming to indicate somthing that may cause shame in another; and this is reckoned among great afflictions; *Heb.*11.36. See 2 *Chr.*36.16. *Jer.*20.7. 2. Sometimes for beating, or other injurious treating men, seizing either their Persons or Estates; such a putting forth of the Hand you have mentioned, 1 *Sam.*22.17. and this agrees well to the fist of wickedness, *v.*4. and so the Finger may be put by a Synecdoche for the Hand, and that which before was called the Fist, may be here called the Finger. 3. Sometimes as a token of putting Suitors by, and refusing to hear their Petitions, and requests, seeking to them for Mercy and Pity. 4. Sometimes to express an angry Mind, stirring up it self, either to the imperious commanding of a thing, or to Revenge, whether by the gesture alone, or accompanied with menacing expressions, signifying thereby a purpose to put our power in execution. l Heb. aven, it signifies a Lye, or Iniquity, as *Psal.*5.5. & 6.8. and so the sense may be, if thou dost not proceed to indecent Expressions in thy strifes, brawls, and threatnings with thy Finger, which is seldom done without sin; and thus the counsel here may suit with our Saviours, *Mat.*5.21, 22. viz. not only not stretch out thine hand against thy Brother, but not so much as be lavish with thy tongue, so speaking vanity may be a Meiosis, for not railing, the LXX render it muttering, which is an incompleat kind of speaking, whereby we reproach another in low, informed, undigested Expressions: But it seems here rather to signifie Affliction, not only because the word used in this place doth properly so signifie, but because it is most agreeable to the matter discoursed of, and the Chaldee render it violence, and then the sense is, speaking words of affliction, or that will vex and grieve, like those words of Nabal to Davids Servants, 1 *Sam.*25.10,11. *Prov.*18.23. And thus it relates to their harsh and unjust Commands, wherewith they were wont to burden their Servants, a Synecdoche of the kind.

10 And if thou draw out m thy soul n to the hungry, and satisfie o the afflicted soul p; then shall thy light light rise q in obscurity, and thy darkness be, as the noon day r.

m Or, open, as when we break open a Store, or Magazine to satisfie the wants of the needy, it implies Bounty and Liberality. A Phrase contrary to that of shutting up the Bowels, 1 Joh. 3. 17. n Thy affection, i. e. thy pity and Compassion, a Metonimy of the Subject, as one that condoles with them in their misery; affectionately, and with delight, Rom. 12. 8. 2 Cor. 9. 7. God loves a chearful giver, as well as a liberal giver, not gradgingly, not of constraint, not because thou must, but because thou wilt, not out of necessity, but of choice: Compassion and Mercy in a work is more than the work of Mercy it self; for this is something only without a man, but the other is something from within, & of himself: This argues a Sympathy, which the other doth not, all without this being as nothing, 1 Cor. 13. 3. o Here the Prophet notes the work that is to be done, as in the former Expression the affection wherewith it is to be done, otherwise it would be no more than what the Apostle James reproves, Jam. 2. 15, 16. and the Psalmist joyns them both together, Psal. 37. 21. And then further it implies a compleat and proportionable answering of his wants, that the supply answer the necessity, that is, be such as may satisfie, not barely keep him from starving. p i. e. The person afflicted with wants. q This is the same promise, and expressed in the same figure, as in v. 8. See the same phrase opened there. The Hebrews delight to express the same things often by a little altering of the phrase; only here it seems to be carried to an higher degree: There the Light shall break forth, but here Light shall be in obscurity. r In the very darkness of the affliction it self thou shalt have comfort, Psal. 112. 4. There it shall be as the morning still increasing, here as the noon-day in its Zenith, and height of perfection, which shall be without so much as any shadow of affliction.

11 And the LORD shall guide thee s continually, and satisfie thy soul * in † drought t, and ‖ make fat thy bones u: and thou shalt be like a watered garden x, and like a spring of water, whose waters † fail not y.

* Or thee.
† Heb. droughts.
‖ Or, make nimble thy bones.
† Heb. lie, or deceive.

s Viz. like a Shepherd, Psal. 23. 1, 2, 3. or, as the Vulgar, shall give thee rest, & so it may relate to the rest that God would give them in Judea, upon their return from Captivity, as answering to their complaints in Babylon, Lam. 5. 5. And he adds continually, to shew that his conduct and blessing shall not be momentary, or of a short continuance, but all along, as he did to Israel in the Wilderness, not leaving them, till he brought them into Canaan. t Heb. Droughts, or drought of droughts; which being in the plural number, notes extremity of drought, Ps. 78. 72. Skilfulnesses, that is, great skill: and Prov. 1. 20. Wisdoms, i. e. excellent wisdom; and consequently great scarcity and famine: The meaning is, that when thy lot shall fall in the extremity of such a condition, either as to time, or place, he will abundantly satisfie thy soul, i. e. thee, by a Synecdoche, thou shalt have plenty, when others are in scarcity. u Or, make nimble, and so the expression relates to bones full of marrow, which causeth agility and nimbleness, a state of health and strength; see Prov. 15. 30. Or, it notes chearfulness, which is often the cause of bones well cover'd with fat, therefore a broken, or a sorrowful spirit is said to dry up the bones, Prov. 17. 22. This may be spoken in opposition to the sad effects of Famine, whereby the flesh is consumed away, that it cannot be seen, and the bones that were not seen stick out, Job 33. 21. they cleave to the skin, Psa. 102. 5. And thus it may have respect to their afflicted state in Babylon, where they complain that their bones were broken, Lam. 3. 4. but now in their return their bones should not only be made whole, but strong, and in good condition; see Ps. 51. 8. Our English Annotations, after divers senses given, chuse to close with the Vulgar Translation, he will deliver, or set free thy bones, and so the word doth signifie, Prov. 11. 8, 9. Some make each expression of these promises to answer as suitable, and conditional rewards of their several Duties, ex. gr. If thou conduct the cast-outs, and harbourless to thy house, v. 7. God will guide and conduct thee continually: If thou draw forth thy soul to the hungry, so as to satisfie them, v. 10. God will satisfie thee in a time of drought, and in famine thou shalt have sufficient, Psal. 33. 19. If thou let the oppressed go free, and break every yoke, v. 6. & 9. then God will make thy bones to rejoice, by delivering them from their burdens, i. e. if thou wilt free them, he will free thee. And if thou continue thus to draw forth thy soul, that it be ever running to the refreshing of the needy, thou shalt be as a spring of waters that shall never fail thee, but like the Widows Oil, ever flowing: If thou relieve the poor, thou shalt never be poor, but as a well watered Garden, always flourishing; see Prov. 3. 9, 10. x Like a Garden, for the pleasure and beauty of it, a Paradise, like a garden watered for the continual flourishing of thy estate, there shall be no withering, or decay upon thy prosperous condition, Psal. 1. 3, 4. contrary to what is said of the wicked, Psal. 37. 2, 10, 20, 35, 36. And thus Jeremiah speaks of the return of this same People, Jer. 31. 12. y Heb. deceive nv, a Metaphor which further notes also the continuance of this flourishing state, which will not be like a land-floud, or brooks, that will soon be dryed up with drought; see Job 6. 15. but will be fed with a spring of blessing, that will never fail; a very significant Metaphor, it being the nature of springs, spontaneously and freely, as it were to pour out their bowels to all, that upon their wants come to receive it; neither is ever scanty, but flows still like fresh Milk to the Breast the more it is drawn; hence God is called a fountain of goodness.

12 And they that shall be of thee z, * shall build the old wast places a: thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations b; and thou shalt be called c, The repairer of the breach d, the restorer of paths e to dwell in f.

* Ch. 61. 4.

z i.e. Either 1. A remnant of thee among the Captivity, that shall be as persons raised from the dead: Or 2. Thy Posterity, expressed thus, because they sprang, or proceeded from them. a Heb. wasts of eternity, i.e. which have lain long waste. For olam doth not always signifie what is bounded by no time, but what respects a long time, looking either forward, as Gen. 13. 15. Exod. 21. 6. or, backward, as here, viz. the space of seventy years, and so may truly be rendred the wasts of an Age. By wast places he means the City and Temple, with Cities, and places adjacent, turned as it were all into a wast, or wilderness, void and untilled, and which was done not only by Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon, but by Sennacherib also, and the other Kings of Assyria. They had lain so long desolate, that the Foxes inhabited them instead of men, Lam. 5. 18. And it was turned so much into a Desert, that they were forced to fight with the Basts that possessed it, to get their food, Lam. 5. 9. b Either the foundations that were laid many generations ago, as those of Jerusalem, which was not only built, but was the head of a Kingdom in the days of Melchezedek, who was King thereof in the days of Abraham, as appears, Gen. 14. 18. If that Salem were Jerusalem, as is generally agreed, and Josephus writes lib. 1. antiquit. cap. 10. who was born about the 300th year after the Flood, the superstructures were now destroyed, viz. of Jerusalem, and divers other Cities; or, that shall continue for many generations yet to come. c Thou shalt be honoured with this Title, as we use to say the Father of our Country, i.e. deservedly so call'd because thou art so; the like phrase, chap. 48. 8. d Breach is put here collectively for Breaches, which were made by Gods Judgments breaking in upon them in suffering the walls of their Towns and Cities to be demolish'd, and their State broken, ch. 5. 5. e Such an one was Moses, Psal. 106. 23. And this tends to the same sense with the former expression, because men were wont to make paths over those Breaches, to go the nearest way, or, it may more particularly point at the recovering of the ancient paths, and bringing them into their wonted course, which were either those chief Streets through the Gates of the Cities, or other Lanes out of those Streets, which were now forgotten and lost, partly by being covered with rubbish, and partly by those shorter paths that were trod, and made over the Breaches; such a Restorer of paths was Nehemiah, Neh. 6. 1. And we read of the several Repairers he made use of, Neh. 3. Or, those paths that led from City to City, which being now laid desolate, and uninhabited, were grown over with grass, and weeds, for want of Travellers, or safety of travelling (of something a like case we read in the time of the Judges, Judg. 5. 6, 7.) and so lost as in a wilderness, wherein there is no way, and by building up those Cities again, the several paths leading to them would be restored. f These accomodations being all recovered, their ancient Cities might be fit to be re-inhabited.

13 If thou turn away thy foot g from the sabbath h, from doing thy pleasure i on my holy day k, and call the sabbath a delight l, the holy of the LORD m, honourable n, and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways o, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words p.

g This is taken, either, properly, i. e. if thou take no unnecessary journeys, or do any servile works either of hand or foot that are forbidden on the Sabbath day, the instrument being here put for the work; or, Metaphorically, i.e. if thou keep thy mind, and affections clear, and restraining thy self from whatever may prophane it, as David did concerning the word, Psal. 119. 101. Feet are often put for the Affections, Eccl. 5. 1. because the mind is moved by the affections, as the body is by the feet, if we do not let our thoughts be extravagant either upon impertinencies, or unlawful things. The sum is, if thou be careful not to break the Sabbath. h Or for the Sabbath's sake, whether we understand it more largely, of the occasional Sabbath in solemn humiliations, or otherwise set apart for sacred services, which is called a Sabbath, Lev. 16. 31. and 23. 32. Days of this nature were set apart before the captivity, Ch. 22. 12. Jer. 36. 9. and also in the Captivity, Zech. 7. 5. And thus it may be pertinent to the occasion of this discourse, v. 3. And further, though Sabbath be here only mentioned, yet it may take in every institution of God, that they were in a capacity of observing during their captivity; Thus I conceive it is understood, ch. 56. 1, 2. Or, whether we take it more particularly for the weekly Sabbath, such a carriage doth God expect, as doth become it. i Satisfying thy lusts, and the corruption of thy will. k i. e. on my Sabbath, which is an holy day. l Full of delights in thy Judgment, not looking on it as a burden; and Practice, performing the duties of it with chearfulness, delighting in the ordinances of it, and so the Sabbath by a Metonimy is put for the works of the Sabbath, the time being put for the things that ought to be done in that time; Therefore calling here is not only a verbal, but affectionate calling, the understanding assenting, the will consenting, & the actions conforming thereto; this delight appears in the Saints of God in their breathings after it, as it did frequently in David, Psal. 27. 4. & 36. 8. & 42. 1. with many more. m Or to the Lord, i.e. dedicated to them, consecrated to his service. The Jews had a law that no man might take from the Sabbath to add to the prophane days, but he might on the contrary. n viz. the chief of days, worthy of all honour, and therefore honourable, because holy; and so shall honour, either it, i.e. the day; or him, i.e. the Lord, whose day it is. For to sanctifie God, and to sanctifie his day is all one, compare ch. 8. 13. with Exod. 20. 8. thus esteem it an honour as well as a pleasure. o Or works, or course of life; a mans whole course being described by a way or walk, Gen. 7. 1. Eph. 5. 8. p Viz. That are properly thine own, i.e. thine own in opposition to what God commands, proceeding from the corruption of Nature, and vanity of the mind, or not speaking words, i.e. vainly, impertinently, and not suitable to the work of the day, tending neither to thy profit, or pleasure; or rather injurious, revengeful, or reproachful words, contrary to rest, quiet, and sedate composedness of the Sabbath. And thus it refers to what was their usual practice upon their solemn Assemblies, or Sabbaths towards their poor brethren, which they are charged with, v. 3. and is called speaking vanity, v. 9. See there: and accordingly the seventy render it, if thou speak not a word in anger.

14 Then shalt thou delight thy self q in the LORD, * Deut. 32. 11. and I will cause thee to * ride upon the high places of the earth r, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob s thy father; for the mouth of the LORD t hath spoken it.

q This hath reference to the foregoing verse. If thou wilt delight thy self in the Sabbath, then thou shalt delight in the God of the Sabbath; or, thou shalt have cause to delight in the Lord, viz. in his goodness, and faithfulness to thee, and so shalt live by faith in him as the fountain of all good, as Ps. 37. 4. in the assurance of his love and favour, Psal. 33. 21. and that in great abundance, Psal. 36. 8. Such delights as no wicked man can have, Prov. 14. 10. r Thou shalt be above the reach of danger, ch. 33. 16. Or, it may have respect to their being brought out of Babylon, which lay very low in respect of Judea, called the Earth, as it is elsewhere, Luke 23. 44. and high, both in respect of the situation of it, as also its mountainousness: Or, the expression may import the subduing of their enemies, as it is Deut. 33. 29. Riding is oft used for conquering, Psal. 45. 4. See the note there, Rev. 6. 2. The sense is, they shall come out of Babylon, not sneakingly as on foot, but triumphantly and gloriously riding, as God brought Israel out of Egypt harnassed, in good order, and with an high hand; or, they shall ride to, and fro in their Chariots at their pleasure. s i. e. Thou shalt enjoy the good of the Land of Canaan, which God had promised as an heritage to Jacob, and his seed, Gen. 35. 12. and feed on the fruits of it. Quest. Why doth he say of the heritage of Jacob, and not of Abraham, or Isaac? Answ. Because the whole Posterity of Jacob was within the Covenant, but Ishmael and Esau, one the seed of Isaac, the other the seed of Abraham, were both excluded. t This is to express the certainty, and indubitableness of it, being from the mouth of him who cannot lie: see of the same expression of assurance, ch. 1. 20. & 40. 5. And this Calvin refers both to what was spoken in the beginning of the Chapter, that it was in vain for those hypocrites to contend with God; and also as the confirmation of his promise, if they would rightly observe those promises, the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it, he speaks of himself, as of a man by a Prosopopœia: Or, it may relate to the Propher, the Lord, whose mouth and instrument I am.

CHAP. LIX.

* Num. 11. 23. Chap. 37. 27. & 50. 2. 1 BEhold, the LORDS hand is not * shortned u, that it cannot save: neither his ear heavy x, that it cannot hear.

u He is not grown weaker, than in former times, as omnipotent as ever he was; hand is here by a Synecdoche put for arm, and so for strength, because the strength of a man doth generally put forth it self in his arm, and thus it is applied to God in his bringing Israel out of Egypt, Psal. 136. 12. * x Or thick of hearing, he is not like your Idol Gods, that have hands, and cannot help, and ears, and cannot hear. The phrases are much to the same purpose, save only, that they seem to be appropriated to the double cavil, or quarrel, that the Jews might have with God, as 1. Surely if God were not heavy, or hard of hearing, he could not but hear those strong cries that we put up in the days of our fast; or 2. If he did hear, certainly he could not help us, and thus it may have respect to the beginning of the 58*th. chap.* Or, the words may be by way of confirmation, and establishment, and so may relate to the close of it, to let them know, that if they sought him as they ought, and was before prescribed, he was not inexorable, but willing to hear, and able to make good all those promises that he had made from v. 8. to the end. The sum is, to shew that the fault was not in God, that their fasts and cries were not regarded, for his ear was as quick to hear as ever; nor their services rewarded, for his hand was as able to help as ever, but their obstruction lay in their sins, which is positively asserted, ver. 2. and a more particular account given of them in the sequel.

‖ Or, have made him hide. 2 But your iniquities have separated y between you and your God: and your sins ‖ have hid his face z from you, that he will not hear a.

y Have been as a thick wall between God and you, have set him at a great distance, Prov. 15. 29. z This may be put Synechdochically for the whole person, and the Prophet speaking of God by an Anthropopathy may understand his presence, and then it is, hath made him hide, or withdraw his presence as one that turns away his face from some noisom thing, or rather his favour, that though you cry to be delivered out of Babylon, yet you shall not find that favour. a i. e. He will not grant it, thus it is used, Psal. 45. 12. Hos. 5. 15. see on chap. 1. 15. see Judg. 10. 13.

3 For * your hands are defiled with blood b, * Chap. 1. 15. and your fingers c with iniquity, your lips have spoken lies d, your tongue hath uttered e perverseness f.

b Here the Prophet comes from a more general, to a more particular charge against them; by blood we are to understand either murders, and bloodshed, properly so called, or ways of injustice, extortion, oppression, and cruelties, whereby men are deprived of a livelyhood; hence hating our Brother, is called murder, 1 John 3. 15. and the inhabitants of Jerusalem called murderers; see how the propher phraseth their oppression, Mic. 3. 1, 2, 3. c This is not added to protract the Discourse, but to aggravate their sin. q.d. Not only your hands, but your fingers; you are not free from the least part of injustice. d Not only properly so called, but perjuries, and wronging your Neighbours by slanders, and false accusations, wherein he shews they did not only offer violence by the hand, but they had ways of circumventing with their lips. e The verb doth properly signifie to muse, or meditate; then the meaning is, that what they mutter, or utter with the tongue, they do it out of premeditated malice from a perverse spirit; you may have a larger comment upon this, Jer. 9. 3, 4, 5, 6. f Perverse words are such as are contrary to Gods Word, and it is put here in the abstracti, to intimate that their words were every way contrary to Gods Will.

4 None calleth for justice g nor any pleadeth for * truth: they trust in vanity h, and speak lies i, * they conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity. * Jer. 9. 4. * Job. 15. 35. Psal. 7. 14.

g i.e. None seek to redress these wrongs, and violences, they commit all rapines, and frauds under impunity: Either 1. Because the Judges are corrupt. Or, 2. Because none will warn the Judges of their Duty. Or, 3. Because none seek to bring offenders to Justice. Or, 4. Because none will plead a righteous cause, or plead it righteously, or countenan e goodness; and this the next expression favours, and so Justice suffers, which the Hebrew word nispat being in the passive voice, seems to intimate; the sense is the same, and whereas it is said none, it is as much as to say very few, as we say few or none, the like Psal. 14. 3. Qu. How could this be charged upon them, when in the time of their Captivity they had no Courts? Answ. It is probable they had Courts among themselves, to judge between one another by leave of the Babylonish Kings. h Either, 1. Relating to their lies, which are words empty, and void of all consistency, and so it is the same with the next expression, and speak lies. Or, 2. In their Idols, which are stocks and stones, and so oft called vanity and nothing, 1 Cor. 8. 4. For even in Babylon, they worshipped Idols as appears by Jer. 16. 11, 12, 18. Or, rather, 3. In their power, and craft, and policy, whereby, laying aside Justice, they can oppress others, and so he calls it vanity by a Metonymy of the Adjunct, because it would prove all vain in the end, and either 1. Frustrate their ends. Or, 2. Not justify them against Gods proceedings with them. Or, 3. Bring all into emptiness and confusion; the word is tohu, whereby the confusion, and mingling of all things is expressed, before the world was brought into order, and from Gen. 1. 2. i It may refer both to the Judges, and to the Lawyers, and false Prophets, that tell them they shall not go into Captivity, they speak that which they know to be false. k These two words of Conceiving, and Bringing forth, note their whole contrivance, and perfecting their wickedness, the former notes their plotting, the later their execution of mischief; whatever is in the mind only out of sight, warmed, and formed there by cogitating & meditation, is called conception, which being ripe, and produced to view, is called a Birth, intimating that the wicked sin not occasionally, and accidentally, but premeditatingly, and professedly, they grow big with it. The expression is Allegorical, and in the two next verses compar'd to the Cockatrices Eggs for the wickedness of it, and to a Spiders Web for the vanity of it.

5 They hatch ‖ cockatrice-eggs l, and weave the spiders web m: he that eateth n of their eggs dieth, and ‖ that which is crushed, breaketh out into a viper o. ‖ Or, adders. ‖ Or, that which is sprinkled, is as if there brake out a Viper.

l Or Adder, or Basilisk; one kind put for any venemous creature, a proverbial speech signifying by these Eggs mischievous designs, and by hatching them their putting them in practice; this is to shew, that mischief is natural to them, and they can do no otherwise, as poison is natural to these Eggs. m Another Proverbial speech, whereby is taught, both how by their Plots they weave nets, lay snares industriously with great pains and artifice, whereby they may entangle, and involve their poor Neighbours in intricacies, and perplexities, and so devour them, as the spider weaves her web to catch flies, and then to feed on them: And also how that they contrive nothing but what will tend to their own ruin, as the issue of the Viper is the death of the Mother; and they, and their designs will come to nothing, and not answer their end, as the Spiders web is soon swept away, and is seen no more, which doth well agree with what follows. n Here is a Catachrestical allusion noting, that he who hath commerce with them, and approves their Counsels, which are the Eggs which they hatch, will be poysoned with them. o If and be copulative here, then the sense is either, if any seek to crush, and disappoint their plots, or if they be sprinkled, or dispersed abroad (as the margin seems to favour) they will seek his ruine, will be as a Viper to him: But if and be causal, as it often is, and may be here, then the sense is, q.d. he dieth, because the Eggs being crushed, a poisonous Viper proceeds from it, the more you partake of their counsels, the more you are infected, there lies such a deadly poison embodied in them.

* Job 8.1,4,15. 6 * Their webs shall not become garments p, neither shall they cover themselves with their works: their works are works of iniquity q, and the act of violence is in their hands r.

p i.e. Their contrivances, and deep designs shall not advantage them, they being like a thin and raw garment, either through which all their wretchedness, and malice will appear, as the next words intimate; or, for want of solidity, and substance, shall not be able to defend them from their impending evils. q i.e. Works of injustice, whereby they grieve and vex their Brethren, which the next words do clear. r i.e. They exercise themselves in all acts of violence and oppression.

* Prov. 1. 16. Rom. 3. 15. † Heb. breaking. 7 * Their feet s run to evil, and they make haste to shed innocent blood: their thoughts t are thoughts of iniquity, wasting and † destruction are in their paths u.

s This seems to be taken from Prov. 1. 16. See the note there. He had spoken of their Hands, Lips, and Heart, &c. before, and now of their Feet, to shew that they were wholly set upon mischief. t i.e. Their heart, and Mind, is set upon doing wrong, and injury, they not only do evil, but do it deliberately. You have the wicked described by this kind of working of their thoughts, Psal. 64. 6. they meditate on little or nothing else. u A Metaphor put for the behaviours and carriages of Men; in what way or work soever they are engaged, it all tends to ruin and destruction, a Metaphor taken from an overspreading torrent, or sweeping plague, or Beasts of prey, that tear and devour whatsoever comes in their way.

‖ Or, right. 8 The way of peace they know not x, and there is no ‖ judgment y in their goings z: they have made them crooked a paths: whosoever goeth therein shall not know b peace.

x Of such turbulent Spirits, living in such continual contentions and discords, that breaking in pieces the very bonds of Society, they neither know 1. How to make and keep Peace; neither 2. Do they feel or enjoy the sweet fruits of it: And therefore by consequence. 3. They take not the course that leads to Prosperity and Happiness. They are not friends to Peace. y i.e. No Justice, Equity, Faith or Integrity, which are the foundation of Judgment. z As Paths did note their habitual way or manner of loving, so goings do signifie their actual progress in that way, or their works, thus Job 13. 16. a They walk by no rule, which should discover the crooked from the streight; they are full of unevennesses and uncertainties, contrary to what David speaks, Psal. 26. 12. The LXX render it perverse: Moses joins them both together, Deut. 32. 5, and so doth Solomon, speaking what Wisdom shall deliver from, Prov. 2. 15. and it stands in opposition to them that walk uprightly, Prov. 28. 18. It may note 1. Their Hypocrisie, that pretend one thing, and do another; that oppress under the pretence of Justice. Or 2. Their professed and owned irregularities, and deviations from the rule of Justice. b i.e. Shall not experience it; Whosoever do as they do will be turbulent, and perverse, as they are, and have as little peace within, or happiness without, as they have ch. 57. 21. They shall be poisoned by having converse with them, as in v. 5. which the next words do intimate.

* Ver. 11. & 14. 9 Therefore is * judgment far from us c, neither doth justice d overtake us: we wait for light e, but behold obscurity; for brightness, but we walk in darkness f.

c This seems to be spoken in the person of those Jews that did partake of these sins, giving the reason by way of complaint of those evils that they groaned under. d Judgment, and so Justice is here taken for deliverance, Isa. 1. 27. q.d. God doth not defend our right, nor revenge our wrong, nor deliver us because of these outrages, and acts of violence, injustice, and oppression, that are committed among us, so that deliverance is called here Judgment and Justice, by a Metonymy of the efficient. q.d. If we had executed Judgment, and equity among one another, they would not now have been far from us; as works are sometimes put for the reward of works, Job 7. 2. Psal. 109. 20. So Judgment and Justice is put for the reward of Judgment and Justice; or wicked men are in power, and seats of Judicature, that execute no judgment or justice in the behalf of the oppressed. e How the Hebrews use Light and Darkness, see before on ch. 58. 8, 10. f Or, mist, we are in such a thick mist, that which way soever we look, we see no way out, no hope of deliverance, we are still in captivity, and like so to be, till we see Judgment and Justice executed, and then we may expect good days.

* Deut. 28. 28, 29. Job 5. 14. Amos 8. 9. 10 We * grope g for the wall like the blind, and we grope as if we had no eyes b: we stumble at noon-day i as in the night; we are in desolate places as dead men k.

g As a blind man, that hath no other Eyes than his Hands, feels for the Wall, from whence he expects either direction, or a resting place to lean on, so they expect Salvation as it were blindfold, not taking direction from the Prophets, but hoping to obtain it by their cries and fasts, tho they continued in their sins, and therefore may well be said to grope after it; See Deut. 28. 28, 29. Job 12. 25. h As if we were stark blind, and being here put for yea, thereby aggravating the misery in repeating the expression. i This notes their exceeding blindness, as it must needs be with one that can discern no more at noon day, than if it were midnight. Job 5. 14. k He compares their Captivity to men dead without hope of recovery, their bonds render them as free among the dead, Psal. 88. 5. They can see the way, or get out of their Captivity no more than dead men can out of their Graves; Thus a calamitous estate is set forth, Psal. 44. 19. great calamity and despair oft going together, they are as men cast out, no more to be looked after. Compare Lam. 3. 6. All darkness is uncomfortable, but that of the grave terrible.

* Ch. 38. 14. 11 We roar l all like bears, and * mourn m sore like doves: we look for Judgment, but there is none; for salvation, but it is far from us n:

l This signifies the greatness of their anguish, that forced from them these loud outcries. m This notes some sense of their condition, that wrought in them these sorrowful Lamentations: Or, it may relate to the condition, that both sorts of people were in under their oppressing Governors. It made the wicked roar like Bears, and the godly mourn like Doves: It is thus expressed because these properties are peculiar to these Creatures: The Bear, when robbed, goes into his Den and roars: The Dove, when absent from her mate, sits solitary, and mourns. n See the Exposition of this last part of the verse, v. 9.

12 For our transgressions n are multiplied before thee o, and our sins testifie p against us: for our transgressions are with us q, and as for our iniquities we know them r:

n The word here signifies sins of an high nature, such as wherein there is much of Mans Will against Light, Rebellious Sins. o q.d. They admit of no excuse; for they are slain before thee, and multiplied against thee, whereby thou art justly provoked to deny us all help. p Every sin that is charged upon us is like so many Witnesses produced to prove the guilt of our Consciences; or, as the Hebrew word, do answer, and so some make it an elegant Metaphorical Allusion to the Eccho, which, as it returns the voice again, so those Judgments they cry out of, are but the meritorious repercussion of their sins: they had been cruel to others, neither had they executed Judgment and Justice, and here they suffer all kind of cruelties, and indignities from the Chaldeans, as the true and just representation or Eccho of their own works; See a personal instance in Adoni-bezek, Judg. 1. 6, 7. q i.e. We lie under the guilt of them, they are a burden to us, God hath not yet forgiven them. r We are convinced of them, our guilty Consciences must own and acknowledge them, Psal. 51. 3. It notes either their Conviction, or Sorrow, or both. See Jer. 14. 7. Or, we know what are those sins thou art so angry with us for: and this is favoured by the sequel, where they seem to particularize those sins in the following verses.

13 In transgression s and lying t against the LORD, and departing u away from our God, speaking x oppression and revolt, conceiving and uttering y from the heart words of falsehood z.

He now enumerates some of those particular sins they profess themselves to be convinced of, whereby he doth not mean the sins of some particular persons, or some slight sins, but a general defection and corruption of the whole body. s Properly we rebel against God, so the word is, ch. 1, 2. and have persisted in our Rebellion. t Being true to none of their Engagements, Vows and Promises; some make transgressing here; and lying, to be one and the same thing, inasmuch as in their transgression of the Law of God, they did break their solemn engagement to God upon Mount Sinai, Exod. 19. 8. & 24. 3. and elsewhere frequently, which is a down right lying against God: For wherein do we more lye to God, than in a perfidious withdrawing from him? So that by transgressing here he doth mean not a breach of one, or another of the Laws of God, but their being as it were fugitives, that would be under no yoke. u [illegible] Turning from God to Idols. x As it were talking of little else one among another, but how to oppress their Neighbours, and apostatize from God. y i.e. First contriving and forging in their heart false accusations to the ruin of their Neighbour, and false Worship to the dishonour of God, laying the contrivance so, that it might be effectual, and then uttering it, or venting themselves one to another in their discourses, thereby encouraging each other in their perverse ways, see v. 3. and whereas it is said from the heart, it notes a resoluteness in their wickedness, being a great deal worse, than now and then to deal falsely upon some occasion or temptation. z They are called words of Falsehood, both with reference to men, and to signifie slanders, and false accusations; as also to God, and so signifie their dealing falsly with God, as an Adulteress doth with her Husband, hence Idolaters are called the seed of falshood, ch. 57. 3, 4, 5. and it is said from the heart, to shew that when they dealt with men in ways of fraud, it was from the heart, but when they speak with God, it was but from the lip.

14 And judgment is turned away backward a, and justice standeth afar off b: for truth is fallen c in the street d, and equity cannot enter e.

a He speaks here of the Sentences and Decrees in courts of Judicature, which are carried quite contrary to Right and Justice: God denies you Justice as you have denied help to others. b It notes the same thing with the former, to shew that Justice and Judges are far asunder. c A Metaphor taken from a feeble person, that wants support, without which he falls; Thus Truth hath none to suport or patronize it: the same, only otherwise expressed, with *v.*16. Truth is cast upon the ground, and Justice trampled under foot. d i.e. in publick. e No such thing will be admitted in their Courts, all corrupt, so that all Equity and Justice is violently kept off by the Authority of the great ones.

15 Yea, truth faileth f, and he that departeth from evil g ‖ maketh himself a prey h: and the LORD saw it i, and † it displeased him k that there was no judgment.

‖ Or, is accounted mad. † Heb. it was evil in his eyes.

f q.d. Truth is more than fallen, which he had said in the former verse; it faileth. For being only fallen it may recover it self again, but failing notes the loss of its very vitals. As being every where neglected, in Court, in City, in Country, in inferiour as well as superiour Ranks, in the Streets, in the Gates, in the Markets, in the Fairs, in all publick places of commerce, the condition much like that under the Beast coming out of the Earth, *Rev.*13. 11. &c. See Ps. 10. 7, 8. &c. All things are amiss, neither Judgment, or Justice, or Truth is to be found among us, but Fraud, and Deceit, yet none troubled at it. g That separateth himself from evil things and persons, will not be as vile as others. h Or, is accounted mad, is laughed at that talks of Justice, so some. Josephus tells us, that immediately before the destruction of Jerusalem it was matter of scorn to be religious. Tho there be no solid ground for, nor need of that marginal reading, yet is it a truth: The Translators reach the meaning by Prey: The wicked, like wild Beasts, endeavouring to devour such as are not as bad as themselves; where Wickedness rules, Innocency is oppressed, in bargaining, as buying and selling, they that are simple and innocent are outwitted by the crafty and fraudulent, as not willing, or rather daring to oppose fraud with fraud, but to do all things in sincerity. i i.e. Took notice of it, 'tis spoken of God after the manner of men, as Gen. 11. 5. & 18. 21. and many other places. k q.d. If you would know why God is so angry with you, it is for such things as these, the Lord takes notice of it, and it is a great evil in his eye.

16 And he saw that there was no man l, and wondred m that there was no intercessour: * therefore n his arm brought salvation unto him o, and his * righteousness p it sustained him.

* Psal. 98. 1. Ch. 63. 5. * Ch. 42. 21. & 63. 5.

l Viz. To intercede, which is supplied from the following words; or no man to help in such a case, to shew himself, and appear in such a corrupt state in the behalf of equity, as v. 4. the like circumstances we have Ezek. 22. 29, 30. or none fit to intercede. m Heb. iistomen, was amazed, astonished, as it were, not knowing what to do: This notes both Gods sollicitousness about their condition, and their hypocrisie, as if God took no notice of them, together with their dulness and blockishness, in not concerning themselves about it, especially considering they had been a people so well instructed, and yet under the guilt of such gross sins, should be no more sollicitous about pardon, which God would readily have granted, if any such could have been found, *Jer.*5.1. n Or, Tet, as it is used, *ch.*7. 14. & 51. 21. o This may relate 1. To the parties thus oppressed: Or 2. To God, as that either 1. He would do his work without help from any other, ch. 51. 5. Or 2. He would avenge himself, his own honor; thus the word is used 1 *Sam.*25.26. and this may, and seems to be the meaning of the next clause: Or 3. He had made provision for the maintaining his own righteous cause, and peoples interest; this sense, that phrase, so like this, favours *ch.*63.5. Salvation unto me. p Viz. His Justice, q.d. seeing there could be no Justice found among them, he would avenge the innocent himself, which agrees with v. 8. and is justified by *ch.*63.5. where speaking of the destruction of the Idumeans, you have the same words, only the word Fury changed for Righteousness. The literal meaning is God's taking vengeance on the Chaldeans for his Peoples sake. The mystical is Christs making use of his own Righteousness for the redemption of lost man, being destitute of all other.

* Eph. 6. 14, 17. 1 Thes. 5. 8.

17 * For he put on righteousness as a breastplate q, and an helmet r of salvation upon his head; and he put on the garments of vengeance s for clothing, and was clad with zeal t as a cloke.

q God, resolving to appear as a man of War against Babylon, that did now oppress his People, puts on his Arms, Heb. wrapt himself, & particularly his Breast-plate which he calls Righteousness, to shew the justness of his cause, as also his faithfulness in making good his promises to his People. r As the Breast-plate is to defend the Heart & vital parts, whereby God doth signifie the Innocency and justness of his Cause, as well as his Faithfulness; so the Helmet is to defend the Brain, the fountain of the animal Spirits, & therefore by this piece of armour would have us know that he is invincible: As by the other that he defends a just cause in his truth and faithfulness, so by this, that he cannot be disappointed in it by reason of his Power and Invincibleness. s Or Garments made of Vengeance, as God is said to put on the former for their sakes, whom he would preserve, so he puts on these for their sakes, whom he will destroy, viz. his Peoples Enemies, the Chaldeans, and other enemies of the Jews. t Either 1. Zeal to his own honour, which had been given to Idols, or 2. Zeal for his own People, who were now in distress: Or 3. Zeal, and indignation against the Babylonians, who were such great oppressors of his People, which are the materials, that his garment of vengeance, and his cloak of Zeal is made of it. It may be trifling to follow this Metaphor of Garments too close; see of the Phrase, *Judg.*6. 34. marg. The sum of all these expressions is this, to describe both the cause, and effect together; the cause was Righteousness and zeal in God; the effect Salvation to his People, and vengeance on his enemies, as is evident from the next verse.

18 * According to their † deeds n, accordingly he will repay, fury x to his adversaries, recompense to his enemies, to the islands y he will repay recompense.

* Ch. 63. 6. † Heb. recompenses, or, deserts.

n Heb. Recompenses or deserts, i.e. he will recompense his Adversaries with those effects of his fury that they have deserved. x A Metonymy of the Efficient; for the effects of his fury. y Or, Islanders, a Metonymy of the containing for the contained, either Mesopotamia, and other adjacent Islands, encompassed by Tygris and Euphrates; or those remoter Nations (for the Hebrews call Nations remote from Judæa Islands, Gen. 10. 5. ch. 41. 1. See on *ch.*20 6. and the reason of it) under the King of Babylon, that thought themselves secure.

19 So shall they fear the name of the LORD z from the west a, and his glory b from the rising of the sun c: when the enemy d shall come in * like a flood, the spirit of the Lord shall ‖ lift up a standard e against him.

* Rev. 12. 15. ‖ Or, put him to flight.

z i. e. Either worship the Lord: For the name of God is put for God himself, as hath been often shewed; and Fear is put for his Worship. Or, make his name renowned. a Viz. The western part of the world. b Or the glorious God. c Viz. the Eastern parts of the world: The sum is the whole World, either a Synecdoche of the part for the whole; or, if you divide the World through the poles the one half will be East, and the other West, and so compriseth the whole World. It shall fear and worship God, and make his Name renowned, laying aside their Idolatries, whether you refer it to the deliverance of his people out of Babylon, when they shall hear how God hath executed vengeance on his Enemies; or, to the Redemption by Christ, and his calling of the Gentiles, *Mal.*1.11. d Either against the Babylonians, as some understand it, and so it is probably meant of Cyrus, who shall come like a violent floud, against which there is no head to be made: Him God would stir up against the Babylonians for the deliverance of the Jews. Or, against his own People, and so it may have either 1. A more particular respect to Jerusalem, when Sennacherib came up against it, which suits well with what God saith of him, *ch.*8.7,8. Or 2. More general at what time soever the Devil, or his Instruments shall make violent irruptions upon the Church, Rev. 12. 15. for powerful Enemies invading a Country are oft compared to a River. See on *ch.*18. 2. It is an allusion to the overflowing of Euphrates, which by its violent inundations was wont to do much hurt and damage to the Babylonians. e And here again, if it be taken in the first sense, viz. against the Babylonians, then the meaning is, God himself shall as it were carry the standard in the midst of Cyrus his Army, the Medes and Persians, and that with a great deal of fury intimated here by the Spirit of the Lord: for Spirit is often used among the Hebrews for the passions of the Soul, as Anger, Wrath, Fury, &c. Or, as a violent blast, or gale of Wind shall help forward the violence of the torrent, and if so, then him, by an Enallage of the number, which is frequent, is put for them. But if in either of the other two senses, viz. with particular respect to Sennacherib, then the spirit of the Lord, as with a blast, only shall puff him away, which was made good, *Is.*37. 7, 36, 37. Or, with more general reference to the violence of Enemies against the Church; then the meaning is God shall make known himself to take their part and defend them, *Pj.*6.3,4,5. and cause the Enemies to give back, or put them to flight, as in the margin, *Isa.*17.12,13,14. and that without Power, but by his spirit alone, as easie as by a puff of wind, Zech. 4. 6. Again, if you take this (as some learned men do) in a spiritual sense, then it notes the suddenness of the Gospels spreading it self by the Spirit in the Ministry of the Apostles and Evangelists, bearing down like a flood, all that oppose it, the Lord Jesus Christ being lifted up in it as a Banner or Ensign; but this sense, though true, seems to be more forced, and as it relates to temporal deliverances, more genuin and natural: however the prophet being about to speak of the spiritual deliverances, and state of the Church by Christ, he seems to slide, as it were, into it by such plain Allusions and Types, being to speak of it more directly in the following Chapter.

20 And f * the redeemer g shall come to Zion h, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob i saith the LORD k.

* Rom. 11. 26.

f Moreover, or to wit. And being here not so much copulative as expositive. g The word notes a Redemption with power, viz. 1. Cyrus, the instrument for the efficient, viz. God the redeemer, *ch.*43.14. and 45.13. Or 2. Christ of whom the Apostle expounds it, Rom. 11.26. the Prophets usually concluding their premises of temporal deliverances with the promises of spiritual, especially such, of which the temporal were evident Types. h Viz. Jerusalem, to which, though Cyrus came not in person, yet his favours, and the good effects of his Conquest over Babylon, reached it, setting free the Citizens of Zion, as Christ also his Church, which is often called by the name of Zion, and Jacob, and Israel, &c. i Viz. Among the Jews, who were the Children of Jacob, and he describes to whom of these, namely to them, and none else, that turn from trangſgreſſion, ſuch only, whoſe hearts God touched, and turned to Righteouſneſs; And ſo to come to Sion here by the Prophet, and out of Sion by the Apoſtle, is one and the ſame thing, ſee on *Deut.*33. 2. for the Hebrew lamed is not only an Article of the Dative Caſe, but put often for mim, of or from, ſo that let Sion is out of Sion: And for Chriſt to be given a Redeemer to Sion is the ſame thing, as his coming to take iniquity from Jacob. And ſo the Apoſtle doth by this expound that, taking an Apoſtolical liberty not only to quote, but to expound this Text, and ſo by laying them together, and making them one, would teach us, that God muſt do for us what he requireth of us, Acts 3.26. or elſe, which is the opinion of ſome, he takes the laſt clauſe from ſome other Text, or Texts, as *Iſa.*4 4. I incline to the former, partly becauſe there is no need of ſearching for any other Text, and partly becauſe, as the Apoſtle quoteth it, it is agreeable to the LXX, which he frequently makes uſe of; and this the Apoſtle improves as an Allegory to prove that the Jews toward the end of the world ſhall be converted and ſaved, when the fulneſs of the Gentiles ſhall be brought in. q. d. As this People of old were delivered out of a dark and doleſome eſtate, when they ſeemed as it were extinct, ſo toward the end of the world the remnant of the Jews, that ſeem to be rejected, God will again bring home unto himſelf. k Or, thus it is Decreed, and determined by the Lord, the Prophets are wont to ſet down theſe words as a ſacred ſeal of certainty, ſecurity, or confirmation of ſuch ſignal promiſes as this is of the Redeemer. like to that of the Apoſtle, 1 *Tim.*1.15.

21 And as for me, this is my covenant l with them, ſaith the LORD, My Spirit that is upon thee m, and my words which I have put in thy mouth n, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy ſeed, nor out of the mouth of thy ſeeds ſeed o, ſaith the LORD, from henceforth and for ever p.

l Or what I have promiſed, and ſo am engaged to ſee fulfilled, viz. to them that turn from their iniquity, or rather, the promiſe of his word, and Spirit to abide in his Church, upon which account it is alſo, that the ſpirit is promiſed in the next words, by which is underſtood, either the gift of Prophecy, or the Prophecy it ſelf given here to Iſaiah, and ſo to the Church. And being here, as in the foregoing verſe explicative, not copulative, unleſs it note, that in an ordinary way the Spirit, and the Word go together wherever either of them are effectual, the Spirit impreſſing what the word expreſſes, *Joh.*14.16,17,26. and it is the Spirit of Satan, that is different from the word. m See on Num. 11. 17, 25, &c. & 2 *King.*2. 15. n Which thou haſt uttered by vertue of my Spirit, it being the Churches great treaſure and happineſs to have God preſent with his word. o The ſenſe is either, theſe words, and the fulfilling of them, ſhall be always talked of wherever the mention of this deliverance ſhall come, as is ſaid of Mary's oyntment, *Mat.*26.13. Or, rather, he ſeems to promiſe the perpetual preſence of his Word and Spirit with the Prophets, Apoſtles, and Miniſters, and Teachers of the Church to all ſucceeding Ages thereof, and may have a ſpecial reference to the Goſpel, or new Covenant in Chriſt. p i.e. for a long, though yet a definitive ſpace of time, as it is often uſed.

CHAP. LX.

1 ARiſe q, ‖ ſhine r, for thy light s is come, and * the glory of the LORD t is riſen u upon thee.

‖ Or, be enlightned, for thy light cometh.
* Mal. 4. 2.

q A word of encouragement accommodated to the Jewiſh, or Hebrew ſtyle, wherein, as by lying down is deſcribed a ſervile and calamitous condition, *chap.*47,1. So by riſing, and ſtanding up, a recovery out of it into a free and proſperous one, as may be ſeen frequently; Rouze up, intimating her deliverance to be at hand, and here under a type, or hieroglyphical deſcription of Jeruſalems reſtauration, is diſplayed the flouriſhing ſtate of the Gentile Church under the Meſſiah, and that in the greatneſs, for quality, and alſo the number of her Proſelites, in the deſcription whereof the Evangelical Prophet, whatever he doth in other parts of his Prophecy, doth here moſt briskly ſparkle forth in divine Eloquence. r Diſcover thy ſelf as one breaking forth from a dark night, or look out, as men do at Sea, who uſe to look out ſharp, to ſee what they can diſcover after a dark and ſtormy ſeaſon; or be enlightned with more knowledge; or, be thou filled with Joy, a metaphorical metonymy of the efficient, as thou art about to change thy condition, change thy countenance, be chearful in that light, or ſalvation that is approaching. s Either, 1. Thy flouriſhing and proſperous eſtate, an alluſion to peoples riſing, when after a dark night, the light breaks forth, they begin to riſe: Or, 2. The Cauſer of thy light, the effect for the efficient, viz. Thy God, or Chriſt, becauſe the fountain of all happineſs, as the Sun and Moon are called Lights, becauſe they give light, *Gen.*1.16. Thus Chriſt is called the true Light, *Joh.*1.9. and compare *Joh.*8.12. with *Eph.*5.14. and you'l find theſe words quoted to that purpoſe. t i.e. The greateſt glory, as the Cedars of God, the Mountains of God, &c. comp. *Rev.*21.11. or, the glorious Lord, or the Lord of glory, or Chriſt, who is the glory of the Father, is come unto thee, he is at hand to make himſelf glorious in ſome wonderful work for thy ſalvation: either, in his Doctrine, or Miracles, or work of Redemption, that his glory may reſt upon thee ſuitable to the Pſalmiſts Prayer, *Pſal.*85 6,7,9. u Like as when the Sun ſpreads it ſelf into every place, leaving none dark, thus it refers to the glorious Goſpel, called ſuch a glorious light, 2 Cor. 4. 4.

2 For behold, the darkneſs x ſhall cover the earth y, and groſs z darkneſs the people: but the LORD a ſhall ariſe upon thee, and his glory ſhall be ſeen b upon thee.

x Either Affliction, and Miſery, a known Metaphor, or Ignorance and Idolatry, as alſo all kinds of Errors and Immoralities, with which all that are out of the Church are ſmutted and polluted, compare Eph. 4. 18,19. y Either 1. General, all the Inhabitants of the Earth, ſuch as through Ignorance reject the Goſpel. Or rather, 2. More particular, the Babylonians by a Synecdoche of the whole for a part in that diſmal condition, being haraſſed by Cyrus, whereby the Jews were delivered, this being alſo a type of the deliverance of Gods people by the Meſſiah, which this Text principally intends. z An alluſion to that Egyptian darkneſs, Exod. 10.21. &c. palpable ignorance the inlet and nurſery to groſs Idolatry, and all prophaneneſs. a i. e. Chriſt, Mal. 4. 2. Luke 1. 77, 78,79. b Shall be wonderful conſpicuous; as the Lords ariſing anſwers to the darkneſs covering the Earth; ſo the glory being ſeen, anſwers to that groſs darkneſs. The ſenſe is, that whereas the time was, that the people of God were under great calamities, while their enemies were in eaſe and proſperity, now it ſhall by quite contrary; now theſe ſhall be in adverſity, and thoſe in proſperity, a great turn of Providence; and withal implies, that this light of grace is a peculiar to his people, in reſpect of which, all other proſperity is but darkneſs and miſery; as light was peculiar to Goſhen, when darkneſs was in all the Egyptian houſes, *Exod.*10.23.

3 And the * Gentiles ſhall come c to thy light, and d kings e to the brightneſs of thy riſing.

* Rev. 21.24.

c Either to congratulate thy deliverance, or the reſpect that ſhould be ſhewn them by other Nations upon their deliverance; or rather, ſhall be allured by thy light to come to thee, as Travellers in a dark night, and out of their way, when a light diſcovers it ſelf, do make to it; ſo the Doctrine of the Goſpel ſhall ſhine ſo bright, and be made ſo conſpicuous by preaching, and miracles, that they ſhall not only congratulate them, and wiſh them much joy, but rejoyce and participate with them in their happineſs, Rev. 21. 24. A plain prophecy of the calling of the Gentiles, which promiſe was made to Chriſt, *ch.*49.6. d Or yea, or even kings, which was fulfilled under Cyrus, Darius, Alexander, and the Egyptian Kings. e To add to thy luſtre, thou ſhalt not be honoured only by the converſion of mean perſons, but even of honourable Perſonages, embracing the Chriſtian Faith, and ſubmitting themſelves to Chriſt's Scepter and Government. See ch. 49. 23. To obſerve thy progreſs, and how thou ſhalt encreaſe by degrees, as the Sun in its aſcending; In Chriſts time there were 12 Apoſtles, afterwards 120 Diſciples, in a ſhort time many thouſands, then the Church grew into Congregations, and then to ſpread Nations.

4 * Lift up thine eyes round about f and ſee; all they gather themſelves together g, they come to thee, thy ſons h ſhall come from far, and thy daughters ſhall be nurſed at thy ſide.

* Chap. 49. 18, 22, 23. & 66. 11, 12.

f Or in a circle; into all parts of the Earth; it ſeems to relate to the Apoſtles, and Diſciples, with their Succeſſors, carrying the Goſpel into all parts of the world: And in regard it would be as it were a thing incredible, he bids them liſt up their eyes, as if they were to behold it in ſome Viſion, or upon ſome Watch-Tower in Jeruſalem; there is the like expreſſion, ch 49.18. g He ſpeaks more particularly either of the Jews flocking from all parts to Jeruſalem, when they ſhall hear of their return from Babylon, which may be true in the type, or eſpecially, of the coming in of ſome of all Nations to the Goſpel. h The ſame thing, only for elegancy ſake expreſſed in its parts, the ſenſe reſpects both Perſons and Place; as to perſons, thy Sons and thy Daughters alſo ſhall be brought unto thee tenderly, as it were in arms, *Iſa.*49.22. where by thy ſide by equivalent expreſſions of Arms, Boſom, and Shoulders, is ſupplied with reference to them both, and may import they ſhall be brought into the Church of Chriſt as unto their Mother, and it may further be obſerved, that where the Maſculine Gender is joined with the Feminine of the ſame ſpecies, it notes multitude, and variety, as *Eccl.*2.8. Men-Singers and Women-Singers, i.e. All ſorts and variety of vocal Muſick: and as to place both thy Sons and thy Daughters that are not only near, but alſo afar off, ſhall come to thee as we ſay far and near, Acts 2. 39. or, it is the ſame with what was ſaid before round about in all quarters of the world; from far noting the Longitude, and ad latas, at, or on thy ſide the Latitude, and even thoſe that perhaps were at enmity one with another.

5 Then ſhalt thou ſee i, and ‖ flow k, together, and thine heart ſhall fear l, and be enlarged m, becauſe the abundance of the ſea n ſhall be converted unto thee o, the ‖ forces p of the Gentiles ſhall come unto thee.

‖ Or, ſhine.
‖ Or, noiſe of the Sea ſhall be turned toward thee.

i viz. With a great deal of delight the multitudes of thy children running to thee. k As when one river meeting with another and joining waters, run ſweetly together as one and the ſame river, this notes the abundance of their united joys & delights; or they ſhall flock together to behold ſuch an amazing ſight. l As ſtanding amazed to ſee ſuch multitudes come into the Lord Chriſt, ſee on *ch.*54.1,2. &c. As it were ſurprized with it, as thoſe, Act. 2. 7. or, overwhelmed with the joyful ſight, as Jacob was with the tydings of Joſeph, *Gen.*45.26. & thoſe of the Circumciſi-

6 The multitude of camels q shall cover thee: the dromedaries r of Midian and Ephah s: all they from Sheba t shall come: they shall bring ‖ * gold and incense u, and they shall shew forth the praises x of the LORD.

‖ Or, wealth. * Chap. 61. 6.

g i. e. The abundance of wealth, and treasure, that is brought upon Camels, this being the Creature the Eastern people used for carriage of their gold and spice, and other rich treasure, which are said to cover them, the like phrase with that Judg. 6. 5. or, whereby is understood those people, that did use to ride on Camels, as the Arabians, and the bordering Countries; for by these, and such like figurative, and borrowed expressions in several verses of this Chapter is particularized several Nations, and by them is implyed the coming in of all Nations unto Christ, and therefore they are brought in as presenting the choicest Commodities of their respective Countries, so that we may be the better excused from speaking particularly to them in their respective places. r or, also, or even the Dromedaries, which are a lesser sort of Camel, so called from their swiftness in running, to which they are the better enabled, because, as Pliny observes, they can indure thirst four days together. q.d. They shall make all the hast imaginable in bringing their Riches to thee. s Both these Midianites, and Ephaites descended from Abraham by Keturah, Gen. 25. 2, 4. they dwelt beyond Arabia, and Camels are mentioned coming from hence, because of all places they were the most numerous here, Judg. 7. 12. t This Sheba descended from Cush, the Son of cursed Ham the Son of Noah, Gen. 10. 6, 7. from whom a certain Country in Arabia Felix took its Name, whose Queen it was that came to visit Solomon, 1 King. 10. 1. and her bringing gifts might be a type of this, Solomon being a type of Christ, of which the wise men might be the first fruits, Mat. 2. u The principal Commodities with which this Country abounded, and by which we are to understand whatever is precious; and Frankincense is only peculiar to Arabia. x The motive drawing them thither being more for Religion than Trade.

7 All the flocks of Kedar y shall be gathered together unto thee, the rams z of Nebajoth a shall minister unto thee: they shall come up with acceptance b on mine altar, and I will glorify the house of my glory c.

8 Who d are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows?

d In the 4*th verse* he spake to them as upon some high watch Tower, where they might behold as in a circle all the parts of the World. Now espying from all parts, he brings them in calling out with admiration who are these? Partly with reference to the number, or partly with reference to the Persons; so the Heb. what are these? They being not Jews, but strangers, and so directly intimating the Gentiles flocking into the Church, that come so swiftly, & in so great flocks, the same thing still; The former Metaphor of clouds imports their number as well as their speed, Ezek. 38. 9. this abundance of Witnesses as call'd a cloud of witnesses, Heb. 12. 1. the scope is to note the great confluence of people that should come into the Church, that should be begotten by the Apostles Doctrine; which the LXX Translation seems to point at, who render it as Doves with their young ones, unto me, and by flying may be noted their spiritual state, being elevated above the world, as the clouds above the earth, and Doves when upon the wing.

9 Surely the isles f shall wait for me, and the ships g of Tarshish h first i, * to bring thy sons k from far l, their m silver and their gold with them, unto the name n of the LORD thy God: and to the holy One of Israel because he hath glorified thee o.

By reading it with a supplement of the note of similitude, which is frequent, as at first, or formerly, viz. As in the days of Solomon, who was a type of Christ, the matter here spoken of seeming to suit with it, 1 King. 10. 12. See 2 Chro. 9. 21. &c. Or rather 2. By taking the word first, as the Hebrews mostly do, not so much with reference to time, or order, as to dignity, namely, they shall have the precedency, and honour of bringing themselves, and conducting others; this may be true also as to time, and so verified in the wise men coming the first to Christ, when he was born, and as a first fruits of the rest of the Gentiles. k Begotten by the word. l From the remotest parts, this may be understood with reference either to place, at how great a distance soever either in place or state, they shall come to Christ who hath Sons abroad in Gods decree, not yet called, other Sheep that he will bring into his Fold, Joh. 10. 16. m Their may refer either to the Merchant bringing traffique with him, as verse 6. or the Jews, as Israel came out of Egypt with all their treasure with them, and what others gave them, Ezr. 1. 4. as also the vessels, that were sent back with them, Ezr. 1. 7. n i.e. To the Lord himself by a periphrasis, or to his Temple, where his name was placed, the type of the Church, comp. 2 Sam. 7. 13. with 1 Chro. 17. 12. or in the name of the Lord, or for his sake, who is the holy one, the like Metonymies having been formerly and frequently pointed at. o He will spread thy fame, and make thee honourable in the eyes of the world, and that especially in setting up the Ministry of the Gospel in the midst of thee. The name of God, and so also of Israel were contemptible among the Gentiles before the coming of Christ, and spreading of the Gospel, but (as a consolation to his people) it is promised they shall both be honourable; and here God by an Enallage of the Person speaks of himself in the third Person.

10 And the sons of strangers p shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister q unto thee: for in my wrath I smote thee, but in my favour have I had mercy r on thee.

p Viz. Such as were not Israelites, and he puts Sons of strangers by an usual Hebraism for strangers properly termed alienigenæ, see chap. 56. 3. this was literally fulfilled in repairing the walls of Jerusalem; he spake before of the Temple, now of the City, and spiritually in the Ministers of the Gospel, who are the walls, and Bulwarks of the Church by preaching, and writing for her; and Ecclesiastical History affords us many instances of Kings, and Princes that were great Benefactors to her, among whom Constantine did greatly excel, not caring what he bestowed on her, Valentinian and Theodosius, &c. q Shall administer all necessaries to thee; as they had been demolished by the Babylonians, so they were repaired by the favour of Cyrus, Darius, Hystaspes, Artaxerxes, &c. All strangers, Ezra 6. 7. &c. or strangers becoming Proselytes, see Chap. 56. 6. r As I afflicted thee in my anger, so out of my compassions I will abundantly bless thee.

11 Therefore s thy gates * shall be open continually, they shall not be shut day nor night, that men may bring unto thee the ‖ forces t of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought u.

* Rev. 21. 25.

s For that end and purpose, or by reason of the conflux of people, that shall be continually flocking thither, arguing abundance of peace and security, and great enlargement of the Church, and that the Christian Church shall be always open to the Godly, to receive all comers freely. t Or wealth either all wherein they excel; or all the prey taken in fight. u As it were Captives in chains, such as they took in war, being made victorious, so say some; but rather such as were led, and conducted in state.

12 For * the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee x shall perish: yea these nations shall be utterly wasted z.

* Zech. 14. 17.

x Do offices of kindness, so is the word used, ch. 19. 23. or rather that will not submit to Christ's Scepter. y Shall be no more sui juris, but subdued to thee, and as refusing subjection to Christ shall perish everlastingly, as they all perished in the deluge, that were not in the Ark, they that should be saved were added to the Church, Act. 2. 47. and Rev. 21. 24. z Heb. Wasting be wasted, viz. By the Sword: accordingly we read of many victories in Josephus that the Jews obtained, and in the book of the Mac-

Macchabees as a fulfilling of this Prophecy, but this doth Principally relate to the Spiritual Jerusalem, and this seems to anticipate an objection, If the gates stand continually open, we shall be in danger of enemies; not so, saith he, for they shall all either serve thee, or perish.

* Chap. 35. 2. & 41. 19. 13 * The Glory a of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir-tree, the pine-tree and the box together, to beautify b the place of my sanctuary c, and I will make the place of my feet d glorious.

a The Box, the Fir, the Pine, and the Cedar, on account whereof Lebanon grew so famous, a Metonymy of the Efficient, Kings, Princes, and great ones the glory of the world, and also persons of a lower rank, the Pines, Firs, and Box trees, as also the choicest Persons, endued with the special gifts of the Holy Ghost shall be the materials, and members of Christs Church as those also of a lower size, and measure, we find the godly called trees, ch. 61. 3. they shall have sweet Communion together; the Box shall not envy the Pine, nor the Pine despise the Box, they shall Worship the Lord together. b This is the reason and end why the glory of Lebanon is to be brought hither; by these trees understand the beauty, and Nobility of the Church. Trees being both for building and for beautifying. c The Temple wherein was the Sanctuary, this being a type of the Church both actively, as that which his presence sanctifyeth; and passively as that, wherein he is worshipped, and sanctified. d Viz. The Ark, 1 Chro. 28. 2. described here by a periphrasis so called, because supposing God after the manner of man to sit as on a seat between the wings of the Cherubims, his feet would rest upon the Ark, and therefore called the mercy-seat, Exod. 25. 17, 18, 19, 20. The Temple, and Sion is called his rest, Psa. 132. 13, 14. and all this is made good in the Gospel-Church 2 Cor. 6. 16.

* Chap. 45. 14. & 49. 23. * Rev. 3. 9. 14 The sons e also of them that afflicted thee, shall * come bending f unto thee, and all they that despise thee shall * bow themselves down at the soles g of thy feet; and they shall call thee, The city h of the LORD, the Zion of the holy One of Israel.

e Either their posterity acknowledging their Fathers sins in afflicting thee, or themselves, for it is the manner of the Hebrews to put the Sons of a thing for the thing it self. f Humbling themselves, as penitents, this being a sign of reverence, and respect, and that either for love, or fear, submit to the yoke of Christ, they shall be like Christ, of an humble and meek Spirit, and the degree of this is mentioned in the next clause. g This notes that great degree of submission that even despisers, and enemies shall yield to the Church prostrating themselves as humble suppliants. See, chap. 49. 23. or rather to Christ, the Head, King, and Husband of the Church. h They shall give her that honourable title, or acknowledge her to be so, and so called, both from the Love that God had for her, and from the Temple of God that was in her.

15 Whereas thou hast been forsaken i and hated k, so that no man went through thee l, I will make thee an eternal excellency m, a joy of many generations n.

i Both of God. i. e. As to outward appearance, and of her inhabitants, being upon the matter depopulated. k Either slighted, and neglected, or suffering actual miseries, and slaughters; thus was she dealt with, Lam. 1. 2. l Thy streets were left desolate. m The Abstract is put here for the Concrete, whereby the Hebrews are wont to express the superlative degree, and in this happy estate we find the Church, Zech. 2. per tot. and 9. 9. &c. Which refers to the coming of Christ; and it is said to be Eternal. i. e. For a great while, it being an hyperbolical expression frequent with the Hebrews, who express a long time by eternity. n The Churches happiness should be the rejoicing and comfort of succeeding generations, she would be the matter of their great rejoicing, a Metonymy of the Object.

* Ch. 49. 23. & 61. 6. * Chap. 43. 3. 16 * Thou shalt also suck o the milk of the Gentiles, and shalt suck the breast of kings, and thou shalt know p that * I the LORD am thy saviour and thy redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob q.

o A Metaphor taken from Children sucking nourishment from the breast, the sense is, that the Church should draw, or drain the wealth of Nations, and the riches, and power of Kings, and what ever is most excellent, and that it should come freely, and affectionately, as milk flows from the breast of the Mother; the same thing intended, chap. 49. 23. and in the foregoing verses. p i.e. Experience it; knowing is often put for an experimental knowing. q Styled so either with reference to Jacob's Person, he being the first that gave God this Title, Gen. 49. 24. or with reference to Jacob's posterity, viz. the Jews. These things will certainly be accomplished, for he is the mighty God, and so able, and the God of Jacob, so obliged by Covenant, and Relation.

17 For brass I will bring gold r, and for iron I will bring silver, and for wood brass, and for stones iron: I will also make thy officers peace s, and thine exactours righteousness t.

r Here is the effect of the former promise, thy poverty shall be turned to riches, all things shall be altered for the best, an allusion to the days of Solomon, when Gold was as brass: thus on the contrary, when they change for the worse in the state, it useth to be expressed by the like Metaphors, ch. 1. 21, 22, 23. s i.e. Loving, Meek, and Peaceable, the Abstract put for the Concrete, as is usual, whether you understand it of Under-officers, they shall be officers of peace, or, of Governors, thou shalt have a peaceable Government, as was made good to them under Ezra, Nehemiah, Zorobabel, and such like. t Most righteous, as before peace for peaceable, the Church is not freed from Taxes, and paiments, that is given by Christ and Peter unto Cæsar, but it shall be without oppression, and grinding; no more than is necessary, and not exacted rigorously; though all these were made good in their return out of Babylon, yet doth it more properly relate to the meliorating of the Church under the Gospel, wherein instead of carnal Ceremonies, she had Spiritual Ordinances, which is the scope of the Apostle, Heb. 9. and larger measures of the holy Spirit, and should have such Officers as would speak peace to the Consciences by discovering the compleat, and perfect righteousness of him, who fulfilled all righteousness.

18 Violence u shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders x: but thou shalt call * thy walls salvation y, and thy gates praise z. * Ch. 26. 1.

u That this, and what follows, must necessarily be understood of the Church Triumphant (tho there only it will be compleat) I see no necessity, neither will I obtrude my Judgment, but leave it to the judicious as being more proper in a Comment; none to offer violence to this quiet state thou shalt attain to, either within thee to oppress by Injustice, Rapine, or Fraud, or without thee by hostile invasions, and this the Prophet mentions as the effect of good Officers in the former verse. x No havock made among thy people. y They shall be safe, and able to defend thee, thou shalt be as safe as salvation it self can make thee, when a thing is said in Scripture to be called so, it often signifies as much as to be so, ch. 26. 1. & 47. 1. & 56. 7. and it intimates as much as that God will be salvation to his Church, when they shall be without Gates, and Walls, he will be their safety, and the matter of their praise, see Isa. 26. 1. and God's care of his Church is the matter of that exhortation to praise him, Psa. 147. z A double Metonymy, viz. of the Effect, as salvation will cause praise, and of the Adjunct as it is worthy of praise, so that within or upon thy Gates and Walls, thou shalt sing praises.

19 * The sun shall be no more thy light a by day, neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee: but the LORD shall be unto thee an everlasting light b, and * thy God thy glory c. * Rev. 21. 23. & 22. 5. * Zech. 2. 5.

a These shall not be at all esteemed in comparison of the spiritual light of the Church, and this is laid down as the assurance of the Churches comfort as the former was for her safety, so that God will not only be a shield, but a Sun to her, Psal. 84. 11. not that they shall not have the Sun, and Moon among them, but that the light of the godly as such, should principally consist in what is spiritual. b Christ shall scatter all darkness and ignorance, enlightning thee with the Doctrines of the Gospel, & graces of his Spirit, and this shall be Everlasting, not wax, and wane, and suffer Eclipses, and settings, as the Sun and Moon do, but it shall be constant without shadow of change, no night, which will be undoubtedly true of the Church in Heaven, whatever it will be, or how near soever it will come to it here, which I presume will bear its analogy. c Always ministring matter of thy glorying in him, or thy interest in this God shall be great honour to thee; or else, it is the same thing with the sentence immediately before in other words, that will make thee glorious, a Metonymy of the Efficient, thus he is said to give glory, Psa. 84. 11.

20 Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw it self: for the LORD shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended d.

d Literally he means the Jews mourning in Babylon; but especially the uninterrupted happiness of the Church; the Hebrew here for ended signifies recompensed, their days of rejoycing shall abundantly recompense all their days of mourning.

21 Thy people also shall be all e righteous f: they shall inherit the land for ever g, the * branch of my planting h, * the work of my hands, that I may be glorified i. * Ch. 4. 2. & 61. 3. See Chap. 32. 16. Mat. 15. 13. * Chap. 29. 23. & 45. 11.

e i.e. The greater part, the word in this use hath been shewn frequently, or, altogether righteous, compleatly righteous. f As this respects the Jews, the sense may be, they went into Captivity wicked, but most of them being dead, and many of the Survivors tarrying behind, they that returned are said to be righteous, ch. 1. 25, 26, 27. and 4. 4. but principally as it respects the Church; they shall be all Saints either by profession, as Paul calls them frequently Saints by calling, or rather by an inherent righteousness or perfectly by the imputed righteousness of Christ, see on ch. 35. 8. g i.e. for a long time, as you have many instances, and this is spoken, lest that poor remnant should be afraid of being driven out again; but with reference to the Church, that they should for ever be continued as God's peculiar people, h Put by apposition, viz. Thy people being of my planting, and so also the next clause, the work of my hands, and therefore cannot miscarry, being what I shall take delight in, and thus the Children of God are said to be his his workmanship created in Christ Jesus, *Eph.*2.10. i Either that I may make them glorious in being thus planted, or, my self glorious in thus planting them.

22 A little one shall become a thousand k, and a small one a strong nation l: I the LORD will hasten it in his time m.

k Though of very small beginning and contemptible, yet shall greatly multiply: Though the Church at first will be but a very few, yet will it encrease into many thousands, this plant or seed will spring up to many; some understand it, that many shall be converted, and brought into the Church by men of very few, low, and mean parts; however these things seem to agree better to some state of the Church here, than to the state of the Church Triumphant. l If this signifie not the same with the other, as probably it may, the word strong signifying numerous, Joel 1.6. then we may understand it, that as the former respected their number, so this their strength. m Viz. In due time, the time that I have appointed, q.d. Let not this be doubted because I have undertaken it, to whom nothing is difficult, when the time of the promise comes, he will make hast, it will be done speedily; or, as soon as it begins, it shall hasten apace, as it did in Peters Sermon, 3000 in one day, Acts 2. and 5000 in another, Acts 4. and so soon filled the whole world, and one Paul planted whole Churches, as the people in Egypt increased from 70 persons to a vast multitude.

CHAP. LXI.

* Luke 4. 18. 1 THe * spirit of the LORD is upon me n, because the LORD hath anointed o me to preach good tidings p unto the meek, he hath sent me to bind up q the broken-hearted r, to proclaim liberty to the captives s, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound t.

n As it were to accomplish that which is foretold, and promised in the foregoing Chapter, whereby this appears to be either the Holy Ghost, see on 1 *Kin.*18.12. or the Spirit of Prophecy, i.e. the gift of Prophecy; so we are often to understand by the Spirit, viz. The gifts, as the Spirit upon Sampson, viz. The gift of valor, and courage and strength, see 1 *Cor.*12.4. &c. Though the Prophet may speak this of himself in Person, yet that it is principally understood of Christ, is evident, because he applieth this Text unto himself, Luke 4.18. being the first text he preached upon after his Baptism, at which time the Holy Ghost did descend upon him in a visible shape, of which that John, who Baptized him, was an ocular witness, * *Joh.*1.32,33. and so making good the truth of this Prophecy; and it is said to rest upon, and dwell in him, according as it is prophecied, *ch.*11.2. & 42. 1. o Set me apart. i. e. both capacitating him with Gifts, and commissionating him with Authority, and yet more, as it is applied to Christ, a Power to make all effectual, from whence he hath also the name of Messiah among the Hebrews, and of Christ among the Greeks; nay Christ alone among the Prophets hath obtained this name, Psal. 45.7. and the Prophet seems here to describe, first, who Christ is, and then what are his Offices, this being the usual Ceremony for the designing Persons to the Offices of Prophets, Priests, and Kings, as hath been diverse times shewen, in all which respects it doth most eminently belong to Christ, so that the Prophet doth hereby intimate both the final cause of his unction, viz. that he should execute these Offices to which he was anointed, and the effect of it; that unction being upon him as the head, it would flow from thence to his members, and so is an unction more peculiar to them, and in a more general way it hath respect unto all the faithful, 2 *Cor.*1. 21,22. 1 *Joh.*2.20,27. p Being meant of Christ, this relates to his Prophetical Office. Literally, this points at the good news that Isaiah brought, of Cyrus his being raised up, to bring them out of Babylon, now they are become meek and humble: But if it be thus taken, it must be understood of his Prophecies left behind him, for he died many years before the Captivity. But they chiefly signifie the good tidings of the Gospel, that discovers Christ come in the flesh, to redeem poor sinners from the Captivity of sin and Satan; such as are meek and humble, or afflicted, as the word signifies; because ordinarily, afflictions make men meek and humble; called also the Poor, and our Saviour expresseth it by that word, *Luk.*4. 18. To these the Gospel, these good tidings are brought, Mat. 11. 5. Whether by Poor, you understand, 1. The Gentile void of all Grace and Salvation, or tenders of it, till now. Or, 2. Properly so called, indigent and needy Persons, of which sort were the greatest number that followed Christ; of which the reason might be, because Christ preached the Contempt of the World and Riches, which the Poor would therefore sooner embrace, and the Rich more likely to oppose. Or, 3. The Poor in Spirit. q Now follow several particular expressions, to describe the same thing that he mentioned before more generally; a Metaphor taken from Chirurgions, that carefully and tenderly roll up a broken bone, Hos. 6. 1. and this relates to Christ's Priestly Office. r The heart dejected and broken with sorrow, I am sent to ease their pains, whose Consciences are wounded with a sense of God's wrath. s Those Captives in Babylon, but principally to Satan, that they shall be delivered; and this appertains to Christ's Kingly Office, whereby he proclaims liberty from the dominion and bondage of Sin, and from the fear and terrour of Hell. See *ch.*42.7. t i. e. Supposing them to be in chains and fetters, yet they should be delivered, though in the greatest bondage. The further explication of these things will be found upon Luke 4. 18. because there are some passages, expresly mentioned here.

2 To proclaim u the acceptable x year y of the LORD, and the day of vengeance z of our God, to comfort all that mourn a.

u To declare, as it respects the Jews, that their liberty is at hand. x Viz. the happy age of Gods grace, either which will be grateful, and welcom news to them, or acceptable to God, a time wherein it pleaseth him to favour them, but this must be understood of a farther extent than to Babylon, and rather unto Mankind in Jesus Christ, *Gal.*4.4. and *Tit.*3.4. called a time of Gods good will in that Angelical song, Luke 2. 14. On the account of those good tidings which the Angel brought, *v.*10,11. called so possibly from the arbitrariness, and good pleasure of God, having no respect to any satisfaction from man. y Not precisely, as if Christ preached but one year, the mistake of some Ancients mentioned, and refuted by Irenæus, *lib.*2.*ch.*38. But for time indefinitely, and may include the whole time of preaching the Gospel. See Rom. 10. 15. which I take to be the meaning of that now, 2 Cor. 6. 2. and probably hath a pertinent allusion to the year of Jubile, which was a general release proclaimed by sound of Trumpet, which relates also here to the word Proclaiming, *Lev.*25.10. z Viz. on Babylon, it being necessary, that where God will deliver his People, he should take vengeance on their Enemies; but mystically, and principally on the enemies of his Church, and the spiritual ones chiefly, viz. Satan, Sin, and Death. a Either by reason of their sufferings, or of their sins, *Mat.*11.28. Or, the miseries of Sion. See on *ch.*57.18.

3 To appoint b unto them that mourn in Zion c, to give unto them beauty for ashes d, the oyl of joy for mourning e, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness, that they might be called f trees of righteousness g, the planting of the LORD h, that he might be glorified i.

b Supplie it. Viz. Comfort, or Joy, or else it may refer to those Accusative cases following, Beauty, Oyl, Garments. c Put by a Metonimy for the Jews, q.d. among the Jews; and they for the Church of God, or, according to the Hebrew For Zion. d By ashes understand whatever is most proper for days of mourning, as Sackcloth sprinkled with Ashes, and these Ashes which were sprinkled on their heads, mixing themselves with their tears, would render them of a woful Aspect, which was wont to be the habit of Mourners, as by Beauty whatever may be beautiful, or become times of rejoycing. e The sense is the same with the former, he calls it Oyl of Joy, in allusion to those anointings they were wont to use in times of Joy, Psal. 104. 15. and also the same with what follows, viz. gladness for heaviness, gladness brings forth praise to God; and it is called a Garment, in allusion to their Festival Ornaments, for they had Garments appropriated to their conditions, some suitable to times of rejoycing, and some to times of mourning, or else an allusion to comely garments; and the spirit of heaviness, because heaviness doth oppress and debase the Spirits. It is all but an elegant description of the same thing, by a three-fold Antithesis. f That is, that they may be so as it is usually expressed, ch. 58. 12. & 60. 18. they shall be acknowledged so, v. 9. g He ascribes Righteousness to Trees, understanding thereby Persons, by a Metaphor, by which he means, that they shall be firm, solid, and well rooted; being by faith engrafted into Christ, and bringing forth fruit suitable to the Soil wherein they are planted, that had been as dry Trees, see on Isa. 56.3. viz. the Church, the Vineyard of God, and the word by which they were planted, as in the next words. h Planted by the holy Lord, who being himself holy and righteous, would plant none but such; which notes also their soundness and stability, an allusion to that passage in Moses his Song, Exod. 15. 17. i Either in that glory which he should confer upon them, or that glory which he may expect and receive from them, that so it may be evident whose handy-work it was. See ch. 60. 21.

4 And they shall * build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations k. * Ch. 58. 12.

k See ch. 58. 12. As it is applied to Gospel-times, the meaning may be, that Gentilism, which was as a Wilderness over-grown with Briars and Thorns, shall be cultivated, and those Cities and Provinces of the Gentiles, that lay as it were waste, void of all true Religion, shall now, by the Ministry of the Word, be edified in the true worship of God,

5 And strangers l shall stand m and feed your flocks n, and the sons of the alien o shall be your plough-men, and your vine-dressers p.

l Viz. Gentiles; such as are not of the natural race of the Jews, but Gentile-Converts, or such as shall have no more than an outward profession, strangers to the true work of Grace. m Ready to be at thy service, a like expression, *ch.*48.13. n The Churches with the word of God. o The same with strangers, or their successors. p As the words describe the prosperous estate of the Jews, the meaning of them is, that they should be in such a flourishing and prosperous condition, that without their own labour, they should have all inferiour offices executed, either by slaves taken ken in War, or by Persons hired for reward, which they should have riches and wealth enough to accomplish; But as they principally relate to the spiritual State of the Church, so probably by Strangers we may understand Converted Gentiles with their Successors meant by the Sons of Aliens, which should be ready to discharge all offices for the advantage of the Church, feeding the Flocks, viz. the Churches of Christ with the Word of God, and should manage the whole work of God's Spiritual Husbandry therein; see 1 *Cor.*3. 6, 7, 8, 9. Or, by Strangers may be meant Members of the Church only by an outward Profession, even they shall be some way serviceable to her in ordinary and inferiour matters: The Earth shall help the Woman, Rev.12.16.

* 1 Pet.2.5. 9. Rev.1.6. & 5. 10. * Chap. 60. 6, 16.

6 But ye shall be named the priests q * of the LORD: men shall call you the ministers of God: * ye shall eat r the riches of the Gentiles, and in their glory shall ye boast s your selves.

q For your part, ye emphatically shall be as Priests, Either, 1. For Maintenance, as the Priests of old were plentifully provided for without their labour, so shall you by the labour of Strangers: Or, 2. For Countenance, you shall be every where as greatly valued as the Priests were wont to be; you shall be esteemed as Princes; for so the word is often used, the word Priest being applied not only to the Sacred Function, but to one that was of great note among the People, and was supplied with all necessaries from others, without any labour of his own. Thus David's Sons were called Priests, or Princes: Or rather 3. For Priviledge, the whole body of them shall now be as peculiar, and as near to God as the Priests were formerly, and shall be a Royal Priesthood, 1 *Pet.*2.9, This is most certainly true of all the faithful under the Gospel; hence they have also their Spiritual Sacrifices, *Rom.*12. 1. Heb. 13. 15, 16. 1 *Pet.*2.5. r It relates to the Riches of the Gentiles, which did consist most in Flocks and Herds: Or, what you eat shall be purchased by the Riches of the Gentiles. s You shall exalt your selves, or be renowned by others. The LXX render it, you shall be wonderful, or to admiration; or, grow high by the access of that Glory, which they shall bring unto you, viz. in Riches, Parts, Learning, chap.60. 5, 11.

7 For your shame ye shall have double t; and for confusion they shall rejoice in their portion u: therefore x in their Land they shall possess the double: everlasting y joy shall be unto them.

t See on chap. 40.2. Supple honour, tho you have been little accompted of among your Enemies, yet now you shall be greatly in their esteem, *Zech.*9.12. you shall have double damages. u viz. of honour, that God will give them, the same thing with the former; or, in their Inheritance, which God shall restore to them; and that either, 1. For worth and value through God's blessing upon it: Or, 2. For room and space, and that possibly by reason of the few that will return to inhabit there, viz. only a tenth part chap. 6. 13. Or, that which he shall give them out of their Enemies Land. x Or rather, Because, being rendred as a reason of their rejoycing, because of the doubling of their portion, in which sense it is taken, chap. 16. 14. y Of long continuance here, and everlasting hereafter; or to be perpetually remembred on their Anniversary Festivals; tho this had its accomplishment in their return from Babylon, yet was it most signally made good in that great change for the better, which they should find in the Gospel-state in the enlargement of Christ's Kingdom, and encrease of his People, with whom they should ever rejoice together.

* Chap.1.13. ‖ Or, recompense. Heb. give. Ezek.7. 3.

8 For I the LORD love judgment z, * I hate robbery a for burnt-offerings, and I will ‖ direct their work in truth b, and I will make an everlasting covenant c with them.

z q.d. They have suffered a great deal of hardship under their Enemies, and I will do them right, for I love Justice in my self, and in them that practice it: Or, he gives a reason why he will recompense those Strangers that did so freely minister to his people. a All things gotten by injustice, tho it be for Sacrifice: As God will not accept of that which cost nothing; so much less of that which is the effect of Rapin and Oppression; a foundation, whereon most of our Abbies and Monasteries were built, viz. to explate some great Crimes. And thus by making God a Receiver, they did interpretatively make him a Confederate. b Either I will lead and guide them so, that they shall do all things in sincerity; they shall do good works, and to good Ends; they shall now love Truth, and walk in Truth, and serve him in Spirit and Truth: Or, I will reward them; or, I will make their work stable and firm; Truth notes stability; see the Notes on *ch.*16.5. (work being here put metonymically for the reward of work) proportionably to their work. c q. d. Tho you have broken Covenant with me, and I have seemed to forsake you in giving you up to Captivity, yet I will renew my ancient Covenant made with your Fathers, confirmed with the blood of Christ, and it shall be everlasting, never to be abrogated, viz. it shall be continued in the Gentiles that shall come in your rooms, that for breach of Covenant were broken off.

9 And their seed shall be among the Gentiles d, and their off-spring among the people: all that see them shall acknowledge them, that they are the seed which the LORD hath blessed e.

d i.e. Eminently, a promise of the encrease of the Church; such shall be their prosperity & multiplying, that they shall be known abroad by their great encrease, or else, the meaning is, the Church shall have a seed of the Gentiles, the borders of the Church shall be enlarged, whereas it hath been confined as it were to one corner of the world, now it shall remain in one Nation alone no more, but shall fill all the Nations of the Earth. e They shall be known to be the seed of Abraham, partly by their holy conversation, and partly by their exceeding blessings, it being the seed that the Lord had so often promised to bless: There shall be such visible Characters of Gods love to them, and of God's grace in them.

10 I will greatly rejoyce f in the LORD g, my soul shall be joyful in my God h; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation i, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness k, as a bridegroom † decketh himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels. † Heb. decketh as a priest.

f This by a Prosopopœia is spoken in the Person of the Church, wherein she doth thankfully acknowledge Gods kindness to her in the forementioned promises expressed here in the greatness of her affection, with reference both to her present deliverance from Babylon, and to the happiness of her Gospel state. g Or because of the Lord, or of the goodness of the Lord towards me, an usual form of gratulation, 1 *Sam.*2.1. and *Hab.*3.18. and Luke 1.47. or thus, I will not rejoyce so much in my deliverance, as in the Lord. h This clause is to the same purpose, save only she varies the expression, q. d. Yea I do it with my whole Soul. i With Salvation, as with a garment, so in the next with righteousness, as with a Robe, the meaning is the Salvation, that God will work for me, will render me as beautiful and considerable as they are, that are clothed with the richest garments, as Bridegrooms usually are, and Brides with their Jewels, or as venerable as Kings in their Princely Robes, my Sackcloth will now be turned into Robes; or, I shall be compassed about with glory, as garments do compass the body. k i.e. Either with the fruits and effects of his Love, and many Favours to the Church, in which sense Righteousness is taken, *Psal.*112.3,4,9. compared with 2 *Cor.*9.9. and ch. 51.6,8. she should see the righteousness of God in fulfilling all these promises. Or that Righteousness of Christ imputed to us, which we are said to put on, *Rom.*13.14. or those Graces imparted to us, and acted in an holy life.

11 * For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth l: so the Lord God will cause righteousness m and praise n to spring forth before all Nations o. * Chap. 45. 8.

l By this and the other Metaphor he shews not only the reviving of the blessings of the Church after they had been as it were dead in the winter of affliction, but the great plenty and abundance of blessings that should break forth; that which had been as a wilderness, shall be as a Paradise, pointing at the effects of his grace and bounty. m i.e. His great work of Salvation shall break out and appear. n As the natural product and fruit of it, his own glory, being the principal end of making his righteousness to appear and manifest its self. o These things will not be done in a corner, but will be eminently conspicuous to the sight of all the world, for which purpose those Hymns penned by the godly will ever be famous in the Churches of Christ to all ages, as of Moses, Hannah, Mary, Zechary, Simeon, &c.

CHAP. LXII.

1 FOR Zions p sake will I not hold my peace, q and for Jerusalems sake I will not rest, until the righteousness r thereof go forth as brightness s, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth t.

p viz. The Churches sake, Sion and Jerusalem being both put for the Church, Heb. 12.22. q These seem to be the words of the Prophet strongly resolving, notwithstanding all difficulties, to sollicit God for the Churches happiness, and constantly excite to the belief of it by his preaching, tho it were long ere it came, for Isaiah lived near 200 years before it was accomplished, but his Prophecy lived, and the tenour of it was continued by other Prophets, whom the Lord stirred up to be still establishing his people till his Salvation was wrought; his meaning might be, as long as he lived, he would never hold his peace; or he might include himself among those, who should be then alive, as Paul doth amongst the other Saints, 1 *Thess.*4.17. we which are alive. Thus may we also include God speaking these words as some would have it, viz. By the Mouth of Isaiah, and other of his holy Prophets, that never held their peace, till they saw this blessed state of the Church appear. r With reference to the Babylonians understand it of the righteousness of God, who hath promis'd his people deliverance, and he must be righteous, and so understand Salvation before; or rather, the vindicating of his peoples cause in the Eyes of the Nations by the ruin of the Babylonians, he will shew that his people have a righteous cause: or with reference to the Church, till Christ, who is her Righteousness, shall appear and be manifested in the Gospel. s Clearing up their miserable and dark estate which the Church might be supposed to be in before Christ's coming with much joy and happiness. t And to that purpose is set up where it may be seen continually, to signify how eminently conspicuous this prosperous estate of the Church should be among the Nations, and as it may particularly relate to revealing of Christ unto the world.

2 And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness u, and all kings x thy glory: and * thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the LORD shall name y.

* Ch.65. 15. see ver. 12.

u See what is said in the foregoing verse, some read thy Just One, viz. Jesus Christ. x Those that were wont to scorn thee, shall now be taken with the admiration of thy Glory. y Not the seed of Abraham, or the Children of Israel, but of God, that whereas they are by nature the Children of Wrath, now by Grace they shall be the Children of God: Or, another name, as it is said of Tongues. Compare Mark 16.17. with Acts 2.4. Or, a Name, the honor whereof shall make them famous; as Gen. 11.4. they shall be called Christians. Or, The Church shall be more renowned than ever, both in respect of her condition, and so called Hephzi-bah, and of her Relation, and so called Beulah, and this new name the Lord gives them accordingly, ver. 4.

* Zech.9.16.

3 Thou shalt also be a * crown of glory z in the hand of the LORD a, and a royal diadem b in the hand of thy God.

z An Expression to set forth the dignity of her state. a i.e. Either, as placed upon thee by Gods hand, that he will dispose of, or dispense to thee, an usual form of speach in Scripture, as Hag. 1.1. by the hand of Haggai, so Mal. 1.1. Or, In the hand of God: He shall so manage thine honourable estate, that thou shalt be a Crown, a Credit and Honour to him, and so the word Crown may be used for any kind of ornament; or matter of honour: Or, preserved and defended by Gods Hand, a Phrase that expresseth it to be out of all danger, as to put a mans Life in his hands is to expose it to dangers, Judg. 12.3. 1 Sam. 19.5. & 28.21, b The same thing with the former for substance. Or, the Royal Priesthood, whereof the Apostle speaks, 1 Pet. 2.9.

* Hos.1.10. 1 Pet.2.10. * Ch.54.67. ‖ That is, my delight is in her. ‖ That is, married.

4 * Thou shalt no more be termed, Forsaken c; * neither shall thy land d any more be termed desolate e: but thou shalt be called f ‖ Hephzi-bah g, and thy land ‖ Beulah h: for the LORD delighteth in thee, and thy land shall be married i.

z As a Woman forsaken by her Husband, contemptible, and of low esteem. d i. e. The Inhabitants of the Land, a Metonymy of the Subject. e Tho it be now almost void of Inhabitants, it shall be empeopled again. f i. e. Be, as you have frequently had such Instances. g My delight is in her, a new name agreeing with her new Condition. h Married, agreeing to her New Relation, she shall be as one well married, to the great improvement of her state, Jer. 3.14. Hos. 2.18,19,20. i Thou shalt see the increase of thy Children again in thy Land, as the fruit of thy married condition, which by reason of thy being forsaken of thy Husband, were in a manner wasted and decayed: And this refers to the great enlargement of the Church in the Gospel-days: Or rather, shall be possessed, as the word baal properly signifies, and so it answers to desolate, thou shalt be no more desolate, but possessed. and this helps to solve a difficulty in the next verse, which otherwise may seem an impropiety, That the Sons should marry the Mother.

† Heb. with the joy of the bridegroom. * Ch.65. 19.

5 For as a young man marrieth a virgin k, so shall thy sons l marry thee: and † as the bridegroom rejoiceth m over the bride, so * shall thy God rejoice over thee.

k This is delivered as a demonstration of what was said in the close of the 4th verse, and is said Young, and Virgin, to note their suitableness, not Old, and Young, but such as may delight each in other, signifying that mutual content that would be in all parties, thus it was at the first preaching of the Gospel, Act. 2. 41 to 47. l Whereas it is improbable that the Spirit of God should carry on so sacred a Prophecy by a similitude so abhorrent to Nature, the Son should marry the Mother, the scruple is easily satisfied by taking the word in is right signification to possess, as in the foregoing verse, reading it thus, as a young man marrieth or possesseth a Virgin, so shall thy Land be inhabited or possessed by thy Sons, they shall dwell with thee as a man dwells with his Wife, and thus the LXX. And it is said Sons to distinguish them from strangers, by whom she should not any longer be inhabited, but by her own natives, and expressed by marrying, to signifie not only their unity of affection in the evenness of their living, but of Faith in their common profession called the Common Fath, Tit. 1.4. according to which Paul calls him his Son. m Taketh delight in her, so shall thy God, viz. Christ, God and Man, in thee; see ver. 4. Christ is often called a Bridegroom, and his Church a Bride, 2 Cor. 11.2. Rev. 21.2,9.

* Ezek.3. 17. & 33.7. ‖ Ye that are the Lords remembrancers. Ch. 43. 26.

6 * I have set watchmen n upon the walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day nor night o: ‖ ye that make mention p of the LORD, keep not silence;

n Understand by these either 1. Angels, as they are called, Dan. 4.13,23. Or 2. Magistrates, see chap. 56. 10. Or rather 3. Ministers. When once the Church shall be restored again, God will undertake for its safety and Protection, partly by Magistracy, and partly by Ministry, whom he here by a Metaphorical Allegory calls Watchmen, but the next words seem principally to intimate Spiritual Watchmen, thy spiritual safety, Heb. 13.17. and said to be upon the Walls, as being thence able to espy dangers at the greatest distance, Cant. 1.7. o There shall be a most vigilant and industrious Ministry, their constancy being intimated by Day and Night, either in Praying or Teaching, or warning, this being their Office. p i.e. Are his servants; to make mention of one, is, according to the Hebrew Phrase, to be servant to him of whom we make mention, ch. 26.13. And here especially are meant his Servants in ordinary, his Remembrancers, either such as put God in mind of his promise, like such Officers that great Men have about them on purpose to mind them of the publick affairs: Or, such as make the Lord to be remembred, putting his People in mind of him. q This seems to be the charge that he gives to his Watchmen, that they never prove remiss or negligent.

7 And give him no † rest r, till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the Earth s.

r The same with the foregoing Verse, and very acceptable to God, Luke 11.8,9,10. s By sending the Messiah, and those Labourers into his Vineyard, whereby the Church may be established and setled on sure foundations, and so become matter of praise to God, All the Nations may praise him for her, Psal. 67. 3,4. Or, that she may be praised, and become renowned, and famous in the Eyes of the World, see ch. 60. 9. & 61.9,11.

† Heb. If I give, &c. * Deut.28.31. &c. Jer. 5.17.

8 The LORD hath sworn by his right hand t, and by the arm of his strength, † surely u, I will no more * give thy corn to be meat for thine enemies, and the sons x of the stranger shall not drink thy wine, for the which thou hast laboured y.

t This, and the next Verse are much to the same purpose, wherein the Prophet, to encourage them to their industrious endeavours, tells them that the Lord had sworn to see to the prosperity of Jerusalem; And he names the Hand to signifie his faithfulnes, as the giving of our hand notes our Fidelity, and Arm to signifie his Power, the Arm of his strength, i.e. his strong Arm; these being eminently to be engaged, and put forth for his people, he swears by them. u Or, If I give, an usual Aposiopesis, an abrupt form of swearing, implying something of an imprecation, as great as can be expressed, q.d. never account me Faithful, or Almighty, if I accomplish not this. x See ch. 61.5. y The meaning is, that Meat, and Drink, and all necessaries that thou hast laboured for, the Babylonians took away from thee, but now it shall be so no more, he will not give thee up to the Will of thine Enemies.

* See Deu.12. 12. & 14.26. & 16.11, 14.

9 But they that have gathered it z, shall eat it, and praise the LORD a; and they that have brought it together, shall drink it * in the courts of my holiness b.

z i.e. The Wine mentioned in the former verse, that have brought it from their several Vineyards, and laid it up in their Cellars, every one shall eat the fruit of his own labours, thou shalt not sow, and another reap, as formerly. a They themselves shall praise him, viz. for his Bounty and goodness; and others also, that shall be partakers with them; God will be bountiful, and they shall be thankful. b As I have commanded, Deut. 14.23, in my Courts: Holiness being put for God himself by a Metonymy of the Adjunct, alluding to those anniversary Feasts and Thank-offerings that were to be eaten in those places about the Temple, and perhaps in special to that part which was appropriated to the Priests, implying herein, that they should be all Priests; and, for ought I know, here may be an allusion to the great Gospel-feast, or Thank-offering in the Lords Supper, these promises being not only applicable to, but do point at the Soul-protections, and the Soul-provisions of the Church of Christ.

* Ch. 40. 3. & 57.14.

10 Go through, go through the gates c; * prepare ye the way d of the people, cast up, cast up the high way, gather out the stones e, lift up a standard f for the people g.

c It is doubled by way of Emphasis, q. d. make haste to your own land, as if Cyrus should say, get you out of Captivity as soon as you will, ch. 48.20. Or, it may intimate an invitation issued out from them at Jerusalem to those that were scattered about in the Captivity, therein possibly typifying the going of Christs Disciples into the various parts of the world, to bring those that were scattered up and down into the Church. Or, go meet the Gentiles, whom God purposeth to bring into the Church, that by pure Doctrine, and your holy Lives, they may be the sooner won. d Let them not have any obstructions in their way, he seems to call upon others to prepare the way for them; Thus John was sent to prepare the way for Christ as was prophecied, ch. 40. 3. accordingly it is ordered to be cast up, see ch. 57.14. e That there be no stumbling stone, or offence in their way: Or, q.d. go to and fro, and remove every scandal that they may boggle at, Rom. 14. 13

The

The former notes the certainty of their deliverance, harbingers sent before; this the speed of it, no impediment. f An allusion to Soldiers, that usually set up their Standard that the Army may know whither to repair from all quarters. See ch. 49. 22. and lifting of it up, is that it may be more visible, see ch. 11. 10, 11, 12. and this is Christ held forth in the preaching of the Gospel. g Or over the People.

11 Behold, the LORD hath proclaimed b unto the end of the world, * say ye to the daughter of Zion i, Behold, thy salvation k cometh; behold, his* reward is with him, and his ‖ work l before him.

*Zech. 9. 9. Mat. 21. 5. Joh. 12. 15. *Ch. 40. 10. Rev. 22. 12. ‖Or, recompense b This may be understood of Cyrus his Proclamation being thereunto directed by God, see 2 Chro. 36, 22. &c. i i.e. To Jerusalem, or the Church, the sum of which Proclamation is in the following words. k Either 1. The time of it is come, chap. 56. 1. & 60. 1. Or rather 2. The Person that effects it, thy Saviour, by a Metonymy of the Efficient, Luk 2. 30. l i. e. the Reward due to the work; the same thing with the former; see of this on ch. 40. 10. Or, his work is ready cut out for him, which he is to do: Or, he will industriously set himself about the work that is before him, Joh. 4. 34. and he is said to bring it with him, viz. the reward that he will give to his true Worshippers: Or, he brings eternal Salvation with him, or the Reward of Redemption which is the Subject of the next Chapter.

12 And they shall call them, The holy people m, the redeemed of the LORD: and thou shalt be called, sought out n, a city not forsaken o.

m Or, they shall be called, or they shall be a peculiar separate People, ch. 4. 3. n Or, one found that was lost, see Ezek. 34. 16. Or, sought out, or for, as one in great esteeem, one that the Gentiles should seek to join themselves withal, so as to be one Church with her: That reproach should be wiped off from her, that this is Sion whom no man seeketh after, Jer. 30. 17. Or cared for viz. by God, whom he hath out of infinite Love gathered to himself. o See v. 4. The meaning is, that thus they shall esteem the Gospel Church; she shall be accosted with such salutations as these are, the Holy People, the Redeemed of the Lord, &c.

CHAP. LXIII.

1 WHo is this p that cometh from Edom q, * with † died r garments from Bozrah s? this that is † glorious in his apparel t, travelling in the greatness of his strength u? I that speak in righteousness x, mighty to save y.

*Rev. 19. 13. †Heb. wet. †Heb. decked.

p In these two verses either the Prophet as in some vision or Extasy is put probably upon enquiry by God himself, rather than by Christ or Michael, or Judas Maccabæus, as some have thought and the rather, because this place doth thus suit best with ch. 59. 16, 17. Or, the Church makes enquiry, and that with admiration, who it is that appears in such a habit or posture, v. 1. and why. v. 2. q That is the Country of Idumæa, where Esau dwelt, and Esau himself was sometimes called by this name, Gen. 25. 30. and it is put Synecdochically for all the Enemies of the Church, as Moab is Isa. 25. 10. See the Notes. r Or, stained: Thus Christ is described, Rev. 19. 13. and so also ver. 3. LXX, the redness of Garments. s The Capital City of Idumæa; see further, chap. 34. 6. a parallel Text; and Edom and Bozra here are mentioned, either 1. Not as relating to the places so called, but by way of allusion as to the Garments of this Conqueror, Edom signifying Red, and Bozrah a Vintage. The one relating to his treading the Wine-press, and the other to the blood sprinkled upon his Garments, v 3. the like manner of speaking you have, Psal. 120. 5. Or rather 2. Put Synecdochically for all the Enemies of the Church, among whom, tho Antichrist be not particularly designed, yet may be reckoned, being one of the chief of them, thus typifying Christs Victories over all the Enemies of the Church, Rev. 19. 19, 20, 21. and this is usual; Babylon is put for any detestable City, and Moab for all that are vile and abominable, Isa. 25. 10. so Edom here for all Gods Enemies; and he mentions these Idumæans rather than the Chaldæans, who were the Jews chief and particular Enemies: 1. Partly to set forth the greatness of the enmity; being of old standing, and an inbred malignity, Gen. 25. 22, 23. and irreconcilable and perpetual, Amos 1. 11. and particularly put forth, when the Babylonians took Jerusalem, Psal. 137. 7. 2. Partly to comfort the Jews, both because God would take particular revenge upon Edom, as he had threatned, and prophecied by Obadiah, which is the substance of that whole Prophecy: And also these being their near Neighbours, God doth give them security, that they shall not only be delivered from the Chaldæans, those remoter Enemies, but from the Idumeans also, whose vicinity and Neighbourhood might have been troublesom to them. t Such as Generals are wont to march before their Armies in, or great Conquerors, that walk in state and gallantry from their Conquests. u In, or according to the Majesty of his Gate, being an indication of the greatness of his strength, and intimating that he hath throughly done his work, and fears no pursuing Enemy, as the Lyon that keeps his Majestick Gate without the fear of any other beast, Prov. 30. 30. this notes the invincibleness of his Power, and that it is his own strength, he needeth not the help of Armies or other Instruments, and thus he will travel through all the Countries of his Enemies. x Here the Lord Christ gives an answer, wherein he both asserts his Fidelity, that he will faithfully perform what he hath promised, and that he will truly execute Justice, Rev. 19. 11. and hereby also he distinguisheth himself from all Idol Gods, Isa. 45. 19, 20. y I have power to accomplish Salvation, as powerful as faithful, Isa. 19. 20.

2 Wherefore z * art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the wine-fat?

* Rev. 19. 13.

z Having enquired of the person, now he enquires the reason of his habit being thus sprinkled.

3 I have trodden a the wine-press alone b, and of the people there was none with me c: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury d, and their blood shall be sprinkled e upon my garments, and I will stain f all my raiment.

a i. e. I have destroyed the Enemies of my people, I have crushed them as Grapes are crushed, this being an usual Metaphor to describe the utter destruction of a Peoples, Ps. 44. 5. Isa. 25. 10. Rev. 14. 19, 20. and the easiness of doing it, no more than to crush a bunch of Grapes. b To note his good-will, and great power, the Masters of Vineyards are not willing to do this drudgery themselves, neither, if they would, could they be able to manage a whole Vintage by themselves: But Christ was willing to undertake it, and able to go through it, without calling in the help of any other. c 1. Not that he excludes the Jews, but the other Nations that dwelt about them, therefore he saith of the people there was none with him, but God and his own people may be reckoned as one, Judg. 5. 23. And tho this be true of his Passion, in which sense some would carry it, yet doth it not so well suit with the design: For Christ is described here not as a Priest Sacrificing, or shedding of his own blood, but as a King, conquering and shedding the blood of his, and his Churches Enemies; hence it is said their blood, not his own, to shew that it cannot fairly relate to his Passion: Besides Christ could expect no help in that, for he knew none could; but here he looked, and wondred that there was none, v. 5. And tho it may be said, that he makes use of Instruments, both in his conquering of temporal Enemies, and also spiritual, consider 1. That here he speaks as a General, & therefore the whole victory is ascribed to him alone. 2. They do it not only by Commission and Authority derived from him, but by strength conveyed to them from him, without which they could do no more than a Watch without a Spring, or Tool without the Workman's strength and skill: And that Christ may make it appear they are no Coadjutors that he needs, he makes them bring about such things as they never designed, as he speaks of the Assyrian, see on ch. 10. 6, 7. and this is to be understood in like manner of Christ's Conquests over spiritual Enemies, 2 Cor. 4. 7. See Acts 3. 12, 13. d This later expression is but an aggravating of the former; It implies a kind of insulting, an allusion to Conquerers, who are wont to make the conquered to lie down, that others might trample on them, ch. 51. 23. e Or, was sprinkled. As in treading of Grapes the juice sparkles upon the cloths, q. d. in his answer; thus came my Garments to be sprinkled. f It shall not be, or it was not only sprinkled, but perfectly stained, as it were rolled in blood, ch. 9. 5.

4 For the * day of vengeance g is in mine heart h, and the year of my redeemed i is come k.

* Ch. 34. 8. & 61. 2.

g Designed and purposed by me to take vengeance on the Enemies of my Church. Or, particularly the posterity of Esau; Day and Year is all one, save the later may have some respect to the length of their Captivity. h Or, was in my heart, a desire of Execution, Psal. 40. 8. I have meditated or studied revenge, being long forborn hath wrought in me resolutions of revenge, therefore wonder not that I am so bloody, noting the severity of his proceedings against his Enemies. i The Jews have this title, because he redeemed them out of Egypt, and would also out of Babylon. k Is at hand; see Psal 102, 13. ch. 34. 8. The former part of the verse shews that Christ is still about his work, tho he deser the execution till the fit time come; he may allude to the year of Jubilee.

5 * And I looked, and there was none to help l; and I wondred that there was none to uphold m: therefore mine own * arm brought salvation unto me, and my fury n, it upheld me.

* Ch. 59. 16. * Ps. 98. 1.

l Not that he needed it, for help implies a defect of power, or wisdom, or wealth, or opportunity, &c. But to see what men would do, in regard his people needed it; therefore the standing, or not standing by his people, is the same thing with standing, or not standing by him, Judg. 5. 23. Matth. 25, 35, 40, 42, 45. m A Metaphor, taken from a staff, that is an help to one that leans on it. n Or zeal, viz. Against the Adversaries of the Church: God's Arm notes his strength and power, and his zeal sets this power on work, chap. 9. 7. but see on chap. 59. 16, 17.

6 And I will tread down the people in mine anger, and make them drunk o in my fury, and I will bring down their strength to the earth p.

o The Hebrew often expresseth calamities by a cup of wine, or strong drink, by which the distressed persons are made drunk, Ps.

75.8. *chap.*51.21,22. they go as it were to and fro, not knowing what to do with themselves; and in special drunk with their own blood, *chap.*49.26. Rev. 16.6. p What ever it is wherein their strength lies, their strong ones, or, their strong places, or deep Counsels, &c. he will bring to the very dust, to nothing; like drunken men they shall fall to the ground, not being able to stand, the most miserable condition, that men can fall into, *Psa.*36.12.

7 I will mention q the loving kindnesses of the LORD, and the praises of the LORD, according to all that the LORD hath bestowed on us, and the great goodness towards the house of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them, according to his mercies, and according to the multitude of his loving kindnesses.

q Whether this ought to be the beginning of a new Chapter, or no, is not material, but certainly here begins a new matter, which contains the Prophets prayer, either in his own name, or the Church's to the end of chap. 64. wherein he begins with mentioning the great kindnesses that God had shewn the Jews, & that Emphatically, setting it forth with the greatest advantages; and the more either to aggravate their great unkindness, or to give them some hope of finding him the like again in their distresses, or by way of argument with God to shew them mercy, because he had been so good to them.

8 For he said r, Surely they are my people s, children that will not lie t, so he was their Saviour u.

r viz. within himself of old, when he made a Covenant with our Fathers, and brought them out of Egypt. s In Covenant, tho they are unworthy of me, yet I cannot but look upon them as my people, their enemies would persuade themselves, O they are not God's People, but cast-outs, that none cared for, or looked after, but God will own them. t That will keep my Covenant, they will not deal falsly with me, that are under such obligations, or, I presume they will not, tho they did go after their Idols, and prove unfaithful to me in serving Baal and Ashteroth, &c. Now I presume they will do so no more; thus Parents are apt tenderly to think of those Children, that they have been indulgent to, that they will not offer to abuse their kindness, thus God thinks the best of them: or, he intimates here what they are obliged to do, though he knew they would do otherwise: or, they will not degenerate after I have renewed them. u viz. On these hopes, and on these conditions he undertook the charge of them, Exod. 19.5,6. *Psal.*81.8,9,10. or he, so he alone was their Saviour, when none to save, none to uphold, then he saved them, not Cyrus, Zerubbabel, Nehemiah, &c. But Christ himself.

* Judg,10.16. * Deut. 7.7,8. * Exod. 19.4. Deut. 1.31. Chap. 46.3.

9 * In all their affliction he was afflicted x, and the angel of his presence y saved them z: * in his love and in his pity a he redeemed them, and he * bore them, and carried b them all the days of old.

x Because of all the afflictions they endured in Egypt; this notes the Sympathy that is in Christ, he having the same spirit in him, that the Church hath, and her head and Father; or, in all their afflictions, no affliction, so the words may be read, their afflictions were rather favours than afflictions, all that befel them from the red Sea through the wilderness; and then Tzar is taken actively he afflicted not; this may note his Clemency, their sting was taken out; either way it may be read according to the different spelling of lo, whether by Aleph or Vau. The first seems the more genuin, they that list to drive this notion further, may consult the Latin Synopsis and the English Annotations. y The same, that conducted them through the wilderness, called an Angel, Exod. 33.2. and his Presence, v. 14. and Jehovah, Exod. 13.21. so that it must be the Lord Jesus Christ, who appeared to Moses in the bush, as Stephen doth interpret it, Act. 7.35. &c. Other Angels are in his presence, but they were not always, he was ever so, therefore so called by way of eminency; hence the LXX express it not a Legate, or Angel, but himself. z From the House of Bondage brought them through the red Sea, the wilderness, &c. Their rock was Christ, 1 Cor. 10.4. a This shews the ground of his kindness, they were a stubborn, Superstitious, Idolatrous people, yet Christs love and pity saved them from all that; It was because he loved them. b He left them not to shift for themselves, but bare them as a Father his Child, or an Eagle her young ones; he carried them in the arms of his power, see *chap.*46.4. and on the wings of his Providence; see Deut. 32.10,11,12. and the Notes on *Deut.*1.31. And he is said to do it of old, to remember his ancient kindness for many Generations past; Olam signifies an Eternity, or a long time past, as well as to come, from the daies of Abraham or Moses, from their Bondage in Egypt, to the time of Isaiah; and it is used as an Argument to move him to do so still, he will carry her, till he bring her unto his Father.

* Exod.15.24 Num.14.11. Psal. 78.40, 56.& 95.9. Eph. 4.30.

10 But they rebelled, c and * vexed his holy spirit d; therefore he was turned to be their enemy, e and he fought against them.

c Many of their Rebellions we read of in Exodus and Numbers in their Travels. The Lord tells Moses, that they had tempted him ten times, and therefore severely threatens them, *Numb.*14.22,23. There were three principal Times of their Rebellion; 1. In the Wilderness, where they murmured for want of Bread and Water. 2. In Canaan, in not destroying, but only making Tributary such Nations as God commanded them to destroy. 3. Before the Babylonian Captivity, when they set themselves against the Prophets, which Stephen chargeth upon them, Acts 7.51, 52. Among which also we may reckon all their Behaviours under their Judges, and their Kings: Or, we may understand it of their not answering God's End and Expectation. d Spirit of his holiness; they vexed him by their obstinacy against his will and mind, and walking contrary unto him; not that there are such Passions in God, but it is spoken after the manner of men, as they are vexed when their will is crossed. e He overthrew them not only in the Wilderness, *Psal.*78.31,33,59,60.&c. sending among them fiery Serpents, *Numb.*21.6. but even in Canaan, stirring up against them Adversaries, sometimes the Philistines, anon the Midianites, and then the Moabites, &c.

11 Then f he remembred g the days † of old, Moses and his people h, saying, Where is he that * brought them up out of the sea o, with the ‖ shepherd k of his flock? Where is he that * put his holy spirit l within him?

† Heb. of eternity. * Exod 14.30. Jer. 2.6. ‖ Or, Shepherds, as Psal. 77.20. * Nch. 9.20.

f Or yet. g This relates either, 1. To the people, and then He is collectively take, and so it looks like the Language of the People in Babylon, and must be read, he shall remember. Or, 2. It may look back to their condition in the Wilderness, and thus they may properly say, Where is he? or that God that delivered his People of old, to do the like for us now? there is a like phrase used by Elisha, 2 *King.*2.14. Or rather, 3. To God as it were recollecting himself in a pathetical Prosopopœia; q.d. Where is he? Where am I with my former bowels, that mov'd me to help them of old, that I should now turn to be their Enemy? Or, is my hand shortned that I cannot do it? And so in the following verses he gives a particular description how kind he had been to them formerly, the times mentioned, *v.*9. and thus God seems to work upon himself. h Or, what great things he had done for them by Moses. i Here God speaks of himself, as in the former clause, viz. that divided the Sea from them, being one of the greatest Miracles that ever God wrought for his People; it is therefore frequently mentioned by way of encouragement to them, when they are in sore troubles. k Or, Shepherds, viz. Moses, that brought out his People as a Shepherd doth his Flock; He and Aaron are both joined, *Psal.*77.20. l i.e. Those Abilities and Gifts wherewith God furnished Moses as properly proceeding from the Spirit, he can do the like again, and qualifie Instruments for his work.

12 That led them by the right hand m of Moses, with his glorious arm n, * dividing the water o before them, to make himself an everlasting name p.

* Exod.14.21. Josh. 3.16.

m viz. The strength and power that God gave to Moses, expressed by the Right hand, that being usually esteemed the stronger, *Psal.*16.8. & 20.6. Or, the Rod in his Right hand; by which understand also all the wonders that he did for them in Egypt. n Or Arm, wherewith God gained to himself so much glory, being alway present at the assistance of Moses, *Deut.*4.34. Or, Moses his Right hand led by God's glorious Arm, as Parents lead their Children, that God may have all the glory in the using of his Instruments. o The Red Sea, *Exod.*14.21. and also Jordan, Josh. 3.15,16. p With reference both to his Power and Providence, as respecting either his Aim and End in doing what he did, or the effect of it when it was done. It got him Renown.

13 That led them through the deep, q as an horse in the wilderness r, that they should not stumble s.

q Shewing, that God did not dry up the shallow places, but the very depth of the Sea, the very Chanel, which is the deepest part. Or, between those heaps of waters, that stood up as a wall on each side of them, which might make it seem terrible, and therefore it is ascribed to their Faith, Heb. 11.29. r Or, Plain, for so Wilderness is sometimes taken, and may be here meant, by comparing it to a Valley in the next verse, viz. with as much safety as the Horse runs up and down in the plain ground. Or with as much ease and rendernes, as an horse led by the bridle; not as men affrighted, but soberly and orderly. s This may be taken metaphorically, they came to no harm: Or properly that, tho the Sea were but newly divided, yet it was so dried, that the mud, as also the unevenness of the ground, was not any occasion of their stumbling, or their sticking in it; probably so dried, and smoothed by the wind, that God sent as it were to prepare the way before them. See *Chap.*4.3,4,5.

14 As a beast goeth down into the valley t, the spirit of the LORD u caused him to rest x: so didst thou lead y thy people, to make thy self a glorious name.

t A laden Beast goeth warily and gently down the hill: or as a Beast goeth down to the vally for grass, that being a mountainous Country; or, going down for going along, so the word is used, Isa. 38.8. noting the evenness of their passage; or alluding to their going down from the shore into that great Channel (as the coming out of it is called a going up, ver. 11.) now made through the Sea, orderly and composedly, not like the Gadaren's Swine through consternation, ready to break their necks for hast. u i. e. The Lord himself. x Led them easily, that they should not be over-travelled, or fall down, or come to any injury through weariness; thus Jeremiah expresseth it, *chap.*31.2. and thus God gave them rest from their enemies, drowning of them in the Sea, and in their safe conduct, that they could not annoy or disturb them, leading them till he found them a place for resting, the word for leading, and resting being much of a like notion, Zech. 10.6. pointing at their several rests by the way, *Num.*10.33. or it may be read by way of Interrogation, as all the foregoing words, and be the close of that inquiry, and where is the Spirit, that caused them to rest? or he led them to Canaan the place of their rest, so called, *Deut.*12.9. and *Psal.*95.11. y The Prophet here by an Apostrophe doth only repeat the words in the name of the Jews, that he had spoke before, *ver.*12. q.d. as thou didst then, so maist thou do again if thou pleasest.

* Deut.26.15. 15 * Look down from heaven z, and behold from the habitation of thy holiness a, and of thy glory; Where is thy zeal b, and thy strength c, ‖ the sounding * of thy bowels d, and of thy mercies towards me? are they restrained e?

‖ Or, the multitude. * Jer.31.20. Hos.11.8.

z Now they, or the Prophet begin to pray, and expostulate with God, and to argue both from the goodness of his nature, and from the greatness of his works, that he had done. God sees every where, and every thing, but he is said to look down from Heaven, because there is his Throne whereon he sits in greatest Majesty and Splendor; behold is added to note, that he would not only barely see and look on, but that he would behold with regard, and respect his poor people in Captivity. a A description of heaven by a Periphrasis frequently used and explained, Deut. 26. 15. b What is become of that love, which of old would not let thee suffer thy people to be wronged, *chap.*37. 32. c That power of thine manifested in those valiant Acts, which thou didst put forth for thy people, *Psal.*145.11,12. and 150.2. see *Jer.*14.9. d By the sounding thereof may be understood those sympathizing sighs and compassionate groans, that proceed from the bowels when they are affected, which being thought the subject of pity, are often by a Metonymy put for compassion; and hence proceed those rumblings of the bowels occasioned by strong passions called yernings; it is spoken of God after the manner of men: Is all this shut up from me? Thou that art naturally so compassionate, doest thou lay a restraint upon thy self, that thy bowels shall not move towards me? Or canst thou be thus strainted, *Psal*77.7,8,9. and chap. 64. 12. an expostulation that agrees very well with the next verse, doubtless, &c. How can this come to pass?

16 Doubtless thou art our Father f, though Abraham be g ignorant of us, and Israel h acknowledge us not: thou, O LORD, art our Father, ‖ our Redeemer i, thy name is from everlasting k.

‖ Or, our Redeemer from everlasting is thy name.

f Thus they urge God with that relation he stands in unto them, Mal. 2. 10. therefore we as thy children expect thy bowels, and compassions of a Father. g He who was our Father after the flesh, tho he be dead, and so ignorant of our condition. h Or Jacob, who was also our Father, and therefore a vain thing to call upon them; or if they were not dead, they could not help us out of our streights; or if they were alive, we are so much degenerate, that they would not own us. Some say Abraham and Israel are here mentioned, and not Isaac, 1. Because the Covenant was made more solemnly, and the promises more frequently renewed with them, than with Isaac. 2. Because with Abraham the Covenant was first made, and the whole seed of Israel was taken into it, but not so of Isaac. Or else 3. Abraham and Israel being named, Isaac is included. i This is urged as another argument for pity, and the more, because their Father was their Redeemer, *Deut.*32.6. k Or, Redeemer is thy name from everlasting, thou hast been our Redeemer, of old.

17 O LORD, Why hast thou made us to err from thy ways l, and hardned our heart from thy fear m? Return for thy servants sake n, the tribes of thine inheritance o.

l Commandments: it is the Language of the godly among them being troubled, and therefore complaining, that so gracious a Father should leave them to such exigencies: made us to sin by withdrawing thy Spirit, and leaving us to our selves, *Psa.*81. 12. it is not to be understood, as if God did force them to it, but either letting loose their hearts, or by giving occasion to their hearts, being naturally too apt to apostatize by their severe Afflictions; see this more cleared in the Latin Synopsis: or make us desperate, by leaving us so long under the Oppression of the Adversary, thereby casting off thy Worship. m Or fear of thee, viz. as the object, *Psal.*5.7. or that we may not fear thee, as seeing, that they may not see, *Psa.*69.23. or thy service, *chap.*29.13. so as to go after other Gods. n Either our godly Fore-fathers, or particularly to Abraham, Isaac, &c. viz. For the sake of thy promises made to them: or rather, our sakes, that little remnant that are thy Servants, be reconciled to us, *Psa.*90.13. for the next words seem to be put by apposition to the former. o Either 1. The people themselves, which were divided into tribes: or rather 2. The land of Canaan, which God gave them as an inheritance, as appears by the next verse: q.d. What will thine Enemies say, if thou suffer us to perish, or thine Inheritance to be destroyed? or rods, meaning their rulers, see chap. 43. 28. or heads of their tribes.

18 ‖ The people of thy holiness p have possessed it but a little while q: * our adversaries have trodden down thy Sanctuary r.

‖ Or, they have possessed thy holy people for a while. * Psal.74.7.

p Or thy holy people, as being set apart for his Servants, holiness being to be understood for a covenant separation from other people. q i.e. 1. Comparatively to the promise which was for ever, tho they had possessed it about 1400 years: Or 2. It seeming to them so, as things, especially such as are desireable, seem when they are past, Job 9.25,26. and Psa. 90.4. or 3. they enjoyed but small spaces of time in quietness, so they had small enjoyment of it: or 4. It may respect the Temple which stood but 400 years. r The Temple called the Sanctuary from the holiness of it, this our Adversaries the Babylonians have trodden down, 2 Chro 36. 19. and this also implies the ruining of their whole Ecclesiastical Policy.

19 We are thine s, thou never bearest rule over them t, ‖ they were not called by thy name u.

‖ Or, thy name was not called upon them.

s We continue so; we are in Covenant, which they never were; and thus it is an argument they use with God to look upon them. Or the word thine being not in the Text, some do otherwise interpret it; we are even in the same condition we were in at first, either in Egypt, or Ur of the Chaldees, before thou broughtest us into Covenant, and are accordingly dealt with; we are become even as they, whom thou didst not bear Rule over. Or, we are as if thou hadst never ruled over us of old. t Not in that manner, or in that relation to them, that thou didst over us. u Neither owned thee, nor owned by thee; this phrase implies a near Relation in some circumstance or other, as Wife, or Servant, or Child, *&c. chap.*4.1.

CHAP. LXIV.

1 O That thou wouldst rent the heavens x, that thou wouldest come down, that * the mountains might flow down y at thy presence.

* Amos 9. 5. Micah 1. 4.

x Either the earnest desire of the Prophet, or the Jews strong wish for the coming of the Messias: Or rather, their cry to God for vengeance upon their Adversaries on consideration of the Enemies unmerciful dealing with them, and their insolent and opprobrious usage of God in his Temple; partly expressing their hast and earnestness, and partly intimating, that God would do it with violence and fury, implied in the word Renting them, Psa. 18.6, 7. &c. spoken after the manner of man, who, if he were shut up, must have room made for his coming forth: This God is said to do, when he puts forth some signal manifestation of his Power, *Psal.*144. 5. a Metaphor taken from men, that when they would resolutely and effectually help one in distress, break and fling open doors, and whatever may hinder coming to their relief. y Or, melt, Psal. 68. 1, 2. & 97. 5. Micah 1. 3, 4. that all impediments might be removed out of the way; possibly an allusion to God's coming down upon Mount Sinai in those terrible flames of fire, *Judg.*5. 4,5.

2 As when † the melting fire burneth z, the fire causeth the waters to boil, to make thy name known a to thine adversaries, that the Nations b may tremble at thy presence.

z Come with such Zeal for thy people, that the solid Mountains may be no more before thy breath, than Metal, that runs, or Water, that boils by the force of a vehement fire; and thus, for the most part, when God will take vengeance of his Enemies, the Scripture expresseth him coming with fire. a Thy Power known, that thine Enemies and Persecutors of thy Church may know thy Power, and that thy Name may be dreaded among them; his Name put for his Power, Psal. 106.8. b Not the Babylonians only, but the Nations round about.

3 When * thou didst terrible things c which we looked not for d, thou camest down, the mountains flowed down e at thy presence.

* Exod.34.10. Judg. 5. 4, 5. Psal. 68. 8. Hab.3 3.

c This may relate to what he did among the Egyptians, though it be not recorded, and afterward in the Wilderness. d Viz. Our Forefathers, of whose Race we are, before we expected them; or such things as we could never expect. e q. d. Seeing thou hast made the mountains thus to melt, thou canst do the same again: This may allude either, 1. To those showres of rain that fell with that terrible Thunder and Lightning, and so ran violently down those mountains, and the adjacent, as is usual in such Tempests: Or rather, 2. The running along of the fire upon the ground, Exo. 9.23,24. It is possible it may allude to those Mountains that do cast forth sulphureous matter, running down into the Valleys and Sea, like melted streams of fire. And Kings, Princes, and Potentates, may also metaphorically be understood by these mountains.

4 For since the beginning of the world * men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye ‖ seen f, O God, besides thee, g what he hath prepared for him that waiteth h for him.

* Psal.31. 19. 1 Cor. 2. 9. ‖ Or, seen a God besides thee, which doth so for him, &c.

f Whereas there are but three ways, whereby men ordinarily come to the knowledge of a thing, viz. by the Ear, either our own hearing, or by hear-say; and by the Eye, and by Reason, which the the Apoſtle adds, where he makes uſe of this Text, 1 *Cor.*2.9. two of them are mentioned here. g With reference either to the Gods that do them, never any other God could do like thee: Or, to things done, never any beſides thee, could do ſuch things as were never ſeen, or heard of, he refers to thoſe terrible things mentioned in the former verſe. It ſeems to be clear by comparing this with *Deut.*4.31,32,33,34,35. Not to be reſtrained to theſe, but to be applied to all the wonderful works of God at all times, wrought for his People: And thus they are a Plea with God, that they might well expect ſuch things from him now, that had done ſuch wonderful things for their Fathers of old. h The Apoſtle hath it, that Love him, 1 *Cor.*2.9. To ſhew that none can wait on him, that Love him not; ſo all that love him will wait on him. This may be taken with reference both to the ſtate of Grace and Glory, thoſe incomprehenſible things that are exhibited through Chriſt in the myſteries of the Goſpel, as well as the good things of this preſent life, which the Prophet may here literally aim at, it being not unuſual for the Prophets in mentioning theſe temporal things to point at ſpiritual, eſpecially being things that do ſo well ſuit with each other.

5 Thou meeteſt i him that rejoiceth, and work-
* Chap.26. 8. eth righteouſneſs k, * thoſe that remember thee in thy ways l: behold, thou art wroth, for we have ſinned m: in thoſe is continuance n, and we ſhall be ſaved o.

i Or, waſt wont to meet: Or, thou preventeſt him, *ch.*65. 24. and *Pſal.*21.2,3. as the Father the Prodigal. k viz. That rejoyce to work Righteouſneſs, the ſame thing expreſſed by two words, by a figure called Hendiadis. l An amplification of the former words, q.d. To walk in thy ways, whether of Providence, Precept or Counſel, by vertue of the Covenant they have with thee. m Or greatly angry, for, or becauſe we have ſinned, and provoked thee to wrath thereby, 1 *King.*8.46. i. e. to thoſe that work Righteouſneſs: in for to. o Viz. In ſo doing, in working Righteouſneſs. Or as ſome by way of Interrogation; in thoſe, i.e. In our ſins is continuance, and ſhall we be ſaved? Or in thoſe, viz. Works of Righteouſneſs, in keeping in them is our continuance, and means to be ſaved; or thou continueſt to ſhew mercy, and or therefore we ſhall be ſaved. The meaning of the place is to comfort the Godly, that though they may have provoked God by their ſins, yet looking upon the ways of Gods former proceedings (in which he ſtill continues being unchangeable) they may find hopes of Salvation, and this is that which is amplified in the three following verſes.

6 But we are all as an unclean thing p, and all our righteouſneſſes q are as filthy raggs r, and we
* Pſal.90.5, 6. all do * fade as a leaf s, and our iniquities, as the wind, have taken us away t.

p He alludes, either to things unclean under the Ceremonial Law, wherein the Leproſie was found, and was to be burnt, Lev. 13.55. or rather to perſons unclean. They compare their preſent ſtate with the former. q.d. Formerly there were ſome that feared thee, and walked uprightly before thee, and were in thy favour; but now we are all as one polluted maſs, nothing of good left in us by reaſon of an univerſal degeneracy, *Iſa.*14.6. q This according to the moſt Commentators, refers either to the obſervances of the Rites and Ceremonies of the Law, wherein they thought their Righteouſneſſes did moſt conſiſt; or to the beſt work and action that can be performed by us; or to our natural, univerſal depravities: but the beſt Interpreters, and ſuch as aim at the peculiar ſenſe of the place, refer it to the groſs provocations that this people were guilty of, cauſing God to caſt them out of their habitations, or elſe to their Perſons. i. e. the moſt righteous among us; and being plural, it raiſeth it up to the higheſt degree, the Scripture frequently putting the Abſtract for the Concrete, as wiſdoms for the greateſt wiſdom, *Prov.*9. 1. and many the like inſtances formerly given; ſo that the meaning is, the very beſt of us all are no better, than the uncleaneſt thing or perſons, ſee *Mich.*7. 2,3,4. and the rather becauſe he lived about the time of Iſaiah. r A cloth made up of patches, or ſuch as come from a putrid ſore: or are defiled with the menſtruous blood of a woman: the LXX, as a rag of one that ſits down, poſſibly alluding to Rachel, *Gen.*31.34,35. or whatever may be moſt filthy. s Blown off the tree, and ſo withers. t Carried us away to Babylon from our habitations, as leaves hurried away by a boiſterous wind; our iniquities have been the procuring cauſe.

u Or yet, there is none. i.e. Few, Pſa. 14. 3. they are not to be diſcerned among the multitude. x Such as call upon thee as they ought, as Jacob, and Moſes, and David, &c. did, which often prevents the ruin of a ſtate or kingdom, it points out the univerſal Apoſtacy of the laſt times of the Jewiſh ſtate, for which they were cut off. y Either to ſtay thee from departing from us, ſee *Luk.*24.28,29. or to fetch thee back, when departed, Jer. 12.7. or it is an Allegorical alluſion to one ſtruck down, and ſtill ſmitten, but never ſtirs to lay hold on the arm, that ſmites him, ch. 27.5. it notes their great ſlothfulneſs and careleſneſs, and ſome refer it to their lukewarmneſs and dead-heartedneſs, relying upon their priviledges before they went into Captivity, and ſo a great preſage of their approaching Judgments. z Or when; ſo the particle is uſed, Job 5. 21. *Pſal.*75.2. a Or melted; our ſins have kindled ſuch a fire of thy wrath, that we are melted with it. b Heb. in the hands of our Iniquities. i.e. Either in the place of our iniquities, the land wherein they were committed, or, into the hands of our iniquities to be puniſhed by them, and as it were conſumed or melted down, or our ſtrength exhauſted by them, as wax before the fire, Lev. 26. 39. *Ezek.*33.10. or, as we tranſlate it, our iniquities being the procuring cauſe of it.

8 But now, O LORD, thou art our Father c:
* Ch. 29. 16. & 45. 9. Jer. 18. 6. Rom.9.20,21. * we are the clay d, and thou our potter, and we all are the work of thy hand e.

c An argument, or pathetical plea for pity; or notwithſtanding all this, thou art our Father both by Creation and by Adoption, therefore pity us thy Children. d A Metonymy of the matter, clay for the veſſels made of clay: Or, we are clay, pointing at our Original matter: Or, it may relate to their ſtate, what God framed into a Body Civil and Eccleſiaſtical out of a confuſed multitude; they plead at the ſame time their own frailty, why they would be pitied, and God's Covenant-intereſt in them, why he ſhould pity them. e Another argument of the ſame nature with the former, Pſal. 138.8. not only as men, but as a body of men made thy peculiar people.

9 Be not * wroth very ſore, O LORD, neither * Pſal.79.8. remember iniquity for ever f: behold, ſee, we beſeech thee, we are all thy people g.

f viz. Thou haſt been angry with us a long time, be not ſo for ever, but deal with us as may beſt conſiſt with a Father's bowels: It hath reference both to Quantity and Time, that it might not be very great, nor of long durance. See on *Pſal.*79.8. g Thy peculiar People, *chap.*63.19. Another argument to back the former Petition, *Pſal.*28.9. Though we are very bad in our ſelves, and very badly handled by our Enemies, thou ſuffereſt in our ſufferings, for thou haſt no people in Covenant but us, and wilt thou not leave thy ſelf a people in the world?

10 Thy holy cities h are a wilderneſs, Zion is a wilderneſs, Jeruſalem a deſolation i.

h Either Sion and Jeruſalem, being the Cities they inſtance in, q.d. Thy holy Cities, viz. Sion and Jeruſalem: Or rather, other Cities alſo in the Land of Judea, beſides thoſe two, called Holy: Either 1. Becauſe they were built upon God's Inheritance, chap. 63.17. Or 2. becauſe they were inhabited by the Jews, who were an holy people, *Deut.*7.6. *Dan.*12.7. Or 3. Becauſe God had his Synagogues in them, *Pſal.*74.8. For all which reaſons alſo they are called thy Cities. i Utterly waſt, not only the ordinary Cities, but even Jeruſalem and Sion themſelves, the one called the upper Jeruſalem, or the City of David, becauſe it was built upon Mount Sion; the other the lower City, becauſe it lay under the Hill of Sion in the Valley; he particularizeth Sion and Jeruſalem, tho he had mentioned the other Cities before, becauſe the chiefeſt of the Cities, it being uſual notwithſtanding the mentioning of generals, in which all the particulars, or individuals, are included, to name the particular again; as, and from the hand of Saul, Pſal. 18. title.

11 Our holy and our beautiful houſe k, where our fathers l praiſed thee, is burnt up with fire: and all our pleaſant things are m laid waſt.

k The Temple, chap. 60. 7. q.d. Not only our Cities, and our principal Cities, but even our Temple, which we thought ſacred, and inviolable, in which we have gloried, becauſe it was Thine, and our Fathers, and Ours, the place where thy holy ſervice was performed, and thy Glory and Preſence was manifeſted. l Not preſuming to mention themſelves, they had been ſo every way abominable, but their Fathers. m The King's Palace, and the houſes of the Nobles, and other pieces of State and Magnificence, 2 *King.*25.9. *Lam.*1.7,10. Or their Synagogues: Or, thoſe ſtately pieces about the Temple.

12 Wilt thou refrain thy ſelf for theſe things n, O LORD? Wilt thou hold thy peace o, and afflict us very ſore p?

n viz. That are done by the Babylonians, do none of theſe things move thee to take vengeance on them? o Wilt thou be as one that regards not? Wilt thou be ſtill, and ſuffer them? p See *v.*9. For theſe our ſins, or for theſe our ſufferings, ſhall we feel the ſmart of it, that have done no ſuch things? but have been ſufferers under the Babylonians, to which God anſwers in the next Chapter.

CHAP. LXV.

1 I * am ſought a of them that asked not for me b:
* Rom. 9. 24, 25, 26. & 10, 20. Eph. 2. 12, 13. I am found c of them that ſought me not: I ſaid, Behold me, behold me, unto a nation d that was not called by my name.

That in the primary ſenſe of this Text, is a Prophecy of the Converſion of the Gentiles, upon the rejection of the Jews, for their contempt and crucifying of Chriſt, cannot be doubted by any, who will not arrogate

to themſelves a greater ability to interpret the Propheſies of the old Teſtament, than Paul had, who, Rom. 10.20. expreſly ſo interpreteth it, and applieth it, which ſheweth the vanity of the Jews in their other Interpretations of it.

a The word ſignifies properly a diligent enquiry in things relating to God, 2 *Chr.*14. 4. *Pſal.*34. 4. Jer. 37. 7. I am diligently enquired of by them. b That in times before made no enquiry after me; (as the Gentiles, and not being without God in the world, Eph.2.12.) as ſeeking may more ſtrictly relate to prayer, as the word is uſed, Iſa. 55. 6. ſo this word tranſlated asked, may alſo be ſo taken, and is ſo 1 *Sam.*1. 20. 1 Sam. 22. 13. but (poſſibly) it is better interpreted more generally. c Yea, I was found of them before they ſought me, thoſe who formerly did not ſeek me, now ſeek me, but they were found of me before they ſought me, I prevented them by my Grace, ſending my Son to preach peace to thoſe that were afar off, Eph.2. 17. and my Apoſtles to intreat them to be reconciled to God, 2 Cor. 5. 20. and my Spirit to convince the world of Sin, Righteouſneſs, and Judgment, Joh.16.8. d I invited whole Nations by the preaching of my Goſpel to behold me, and I invited them with importunity, doubling my words upon them, and this I did unto a Nation not call'd by my name, with whom I was not in Covenant, and which did not profeſs any relation to me, which none of the Gentiles could pretend unto. The Prophet ſpeaks of a thing to come many years after, as if it were a thing then done, to ſignifie the certainty of it. God doth the ſame thing yet in every ſoul that is converted. But the Text is manifeſtly to be interpreted of the converſion of the Gentiles.

2 I have ſpread out my hands e all the day long to a rebellious people f, which walked in a way that was not good g after their own thoughts h:

e Applied to the Jews, Rom 10.21. I have ſtretched out my hands, that is, I have uſed all probable means to reduce them, I have ſtretched out the hands of a paſſionate Orator to perſuade them, of a tender Mother to protect and defend them, of a liberal Benefactor to load them with my Benefits; this I have done continually in the whole courſe of my providence with them, yet f They are a rebellious people; Paul expoundeth it by ἀπειθοῦντα καὶ ἀντιλέγοντα, a People not perſuaded, not believing, but contradicting the will of God. g That walketh in a way that is not good, that term, is not good, often ſignifies what is very bad, ſee 1 Sam. 2.24. *Prov.*28.21. & 24. 23. *Pſal.*36.5. Tho all ſins be not equal, yet what is not good, is bad. h After their own thoughts. What is here called after their own thoughts, is elſewhere called a walking after the imaginations of their hearts, an ordinary phraſe, by which ſin (eſpecially ſins in the matter of the worſhip of God) are expreſſed eight times, in the Prophet Jeremiah ſinning is thus expreſſed, *Jer.*3.17. & 7.24. & 9.14. & 11.8. & 13.10. & 16.12. & 18. 12. & 23.17. ſo alſo Deut. 29. 19. Errors in matters of Worſhip are ordinarily thus expreſſed, certainly to let us know, that all Worſhip muſt be according to God's revealed Will, and of ſuch Errors this Text ſeemeth by what followeth, to ſpeak, tho indeed, the reaſon of all ſin is mens fondneſs of their own imaginations in oppoſition to Gods revealed Will, whence it is that ſelf-denyal is made the Law of a Diſcipleſhip to Chriſt.

3 A people that provoketh me to anger i continually to my face k, that ſacrificeth in gardens, and ‖ Or, upon brick. burneth incenſe ‖ upon altars of brick l.

i That the Jews are the People here intended is without queſtion; the Prophet ſpeaking of the calling of the Gentiles upon their rejection, reckons up their ſins, which were the cauſes. For tho their rejection and crucifying of Chriſt, was that ſin which was the proximate cauſe, yet God did but viſit on that Generation their Iniquities, and the iniquities of their fathers together, they having by that act filled up their meaſure. They had provoked God continually to anger to his face. k Either in his Temple, the place where he uſed to manifeſt himſelf: or (conſidering what followeth) more probably the phraſe ſignifieth their impudence, not taking notice of Gods Omnipreſence and Omniſcience. l The particular provocations inſtanced in, are deviations in matter of Divine Worſhip. Sacrificing in gardens is one thing inſtanced in, and burning Incenſe on brick, or altars of brick, is another, Deut. 12. 13. there was a particular Altar of Gold appointed for Incenſe, *Exod.*40.5. God commanded, Exod. 20. 24, 25. That his Altars ſhould be made of Earth, or rough ſtone. This people tranſgreſſed both theſe Laws, ſacrificing in gardens, for which the Prophet reflected on them, *ch.*1. 29. and again, ch. 66. 17. whether in Gardens conſecrated to Idols, or in ſuch Gardens as the Heathens worſhipped Idols in, is not much material for us to know, and burning Incenſe upon altars of brick, directly contrary to the Divine Rule. Their Worſhip was doubtleſs Idolatrous, and theſe Phraſes ſignifie committing Idolatry, but the expreſſing that ſin by theſe Phraſes lets us know, that the doing contrary to the direction of the Divine Rule in Gods Worſhip, is a great part of the ſinfulneſs of Idolatry.

4 Which remain amongſt the graves m, and lodge in the monuments n, which eat ſwines fleſh o, and ‖ broth of abominable things p in their veſſels.

m They remained amongſt the Graves, either there expecting Revelations by dreams, or there conſulting with Devils, who were thought to delight in ſuch places, or to practice Necromancy, all which were forbidden, *Deut.*18.11. *ch.*8.19. n And they lodged in the Monuments, the Hebrew word here uſed gives Advantage to Interpreters to vary in their ſenſes. The word ſignifying only Manſions, or obſerved, ſome interpret it of Idol Temples, ſome of Caves and Dens, in which the Heathens uſed to Worſhip their Idols, ſome of Tombs or Monuments for dead perſons, beſides the Idolatry of the thing, there was in it a ſinful imitation of the Heathens, and a ſwerving from the Rule which God had given them. o They alſo ate Swines fleſh, contrary to the Divine Law, Lev. 11. 7. *Deut.*14.8. and they endured in their veſſels, broth of abominable things, ſo the word is uſed, Jud. 6.19, 20. others read it parts or pieces of abominable things, that is, broth, or pieces of ſuch fleſh as was to the Jews unclean by the Law, Levit. 11. Every Creature of God is good, but Gods Prohibition had made the fleſh of divers Creatures an abominable thing to the Jews, they might not touch their fleſh, *Lev.*11.28. but they taking the meaſures of their duty from their Appetite, or from their Reaſon, concluding from natural Principles, made no Conſcience of the poſitive Law of God. This was their iniquity, which is further aggravated in the next verſe.

5 Which ſay, Stand by thy ſelf, come not near to me, for I am holier than thou q: Theſe are a ſmoak in ‖ my noſe r, a fire that burneth all the day. ‖ Or, anger.

q Tho they were ſo exceedingly guilty, yet they pretended to a ſingular Sanctity, ſo as they would not ſuffer others to come near or touch them. The Samaritans are uſually charged with this uncharitableneſs, and the uſe of this form of Words, but as ſome do more excuſe the Samaritans than the other Jews as to this rigour, ſo it may be queſtioned whether they were not at this time carried into Captivity: and certain it is, that amongſt the Jews there was ſuch a generation from whom the Phariſees in our Saviours time were derived, and this was the reaſon of their not eating, except they waſhed, when they came from the Market, Mar.7.4. leſt peradventure they ſhould have there touched ſome Heathen, or ſome perſon who was legally unclean. r Thus they eſteemed themſelves holier than others, tho all their holineſs lay in theſe rituals, and thoſe too ſuch as God never commanded. And indeed thoſe who moſt exceed in ſuch ritual Holineſs (lying meerly in a ſeparation from others, by the uſage of ſome unwritten Traditions) come moſt ſhort in moral and true Holineſs: For of theſe God ſaith, Theſe are a ſmoak in my noſtrils, a fire that burneth all the day; that is, a continual provocation to me; as ſmoak is an offence to our Noſes, *Prov.*10.26. which ſeemeth to be the ſenſe, rather than what ſome make, who make it a threatning of Gods wrath ſmoaking againſt them, which is ſufficiently expreſſed in the following verſes.

6 Behold, it is writen before me s, I will not keep ſilence t, but will recompenſe even recompenſe into their boſom u; s They may think that I take no notice of theſe things, or if I take any notice, I will forget them, or at leaſt not enter into judgment with them for them; but I as certainly know and will remember them, as Princes or great men that record things in writing which they would not forget. And they ſhall know that I know, and take notice of, and will remembnr them; for t I will not long neglect the puniſhment of them, tho for a while I have delayed it like a man who bites in his wrath, for ſomewiſe reaſons which are known to himſelf beſt, *Pſal.*50.21. u My puniſhment of them ſhall be ſevere and certain, but yet it ſhall be juſt, but a giving them what is their own, as they are obnoxious to my Juſtice, *Jer.*32.18. *Deut.*7.10. like the payment of an Ox for an Ox, Exod.21.36. (where the ſame word is uſed) they have been froward againſt me, and I will ſhew my ſelf froward againſt them, Pſal.18.26.

7 Your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers together x (ſaith the Lord) which have burnt incenſe upon the mountains y, and blaſphemed me upon the hills z: therefore will I meaſure their former work into their boſom a.

x Yea, and when I reckon with them, I will puniſh them, not only for their perſonal ſins but for the ſins of their Parents, which they have teſtified their approbation of, by continuing in them, and ſo made them their own, by an apiſh ſinful imitation. y Their Fathers burnt Incenſe upon the mountains, there performing to Idols that homage which I obliged them to pay unto me, or if any of them pretend it was to me, tho before an Image, yet it was in a way which I directed them not, who had appointed them the place where I would be worſhipped. z So as that inſtead of bleſſing, they indeed blaſphemed me upon the Hills, inſtead of ſpeaking well thy ſpake ill of my name, worſhipping me in a way which I had not appointed, and for which they only took their copy from Idolaters. a Therefore I will puniſh them, and that juſtly, as he that rendreth another his due by meaſure, giving meaſure for meaſure, and weight for weight, only they muſt expect that I ſhould not only puniſh the late ſins that they have committed of this nature, but the former ſins of this kind, which thoſe in this nation, that were before this preſent Generation, did commit, and the preſent age continued in the guilt of.

8 Thus ſaith the Lord, as the new wine is found in the cluſter, and one ſaith, deſtroy it not b, for a * bleſſing is in it a, ſo will I do for my ſervants ſake d, that I may not deſtroy them all.

* Joel. 2. 14.

b Theſe words muſt be conceived as a gracious anſwer from God to the Prophet, ſaying as Abraham, Gen. 18. 23. 25. or as Moſes, Ex. 32. 11, 12, 13. pleading Gods Covenant with Abraham, Iſaac, and Iſrael. To this God replieth, that he intendeth no ſuch ſeverity, the unfaithfulneſs of men ſhould not make his promiſe of no effect, Rom. 3. 3. His threatning ſhould be made good upon the generality of this people, whoſe Vine was of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah, Deut. 32. 32. c But yet, as in a Vineyard, which is generally unfruitful, there may be ſome particular Vine that brings forth fruit; oras in a Vine which is full of luxuriant branches that bring forth no fruit, there may be here and there a branch that bringeth forth fruit, and hath the hopes of new vine in the cluſter, and as to ſuch, the Gardiner bids his Servants deſtroy it not, or them not; for they are fruitful, there is in them what ſpeaketh Gods bleſſing, and what may be of uſe, and do us good. d So (ſaith God) will I do for my Servants ſake, that I may not deſtroy them all, either for the ſake of my Servants, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, with whom I anciently made a Covenant, or for my Servant Davids ſake, or for the ſake of ſuch as are my Elect, at this time amongſt them, ſee Jer. 30. 11. Amos 9. 8.

9 And I will bring a ſeed out of Jacob e, and out of Judah f, an inheritor of my mountains g: and mine elect h ſhall inherit it, and my ſervants ſhall dwell there.

e No ſeed beareth a proportion to the tree, or plant that it produceth, but in compariſon with that is very little, yet it is enough through the vertue which the God of nature hath put into it, to preſerve and uphold the ſpecies to which it doth relate. They are but a remnant (ſaith God) that ſhall be ſaved, ſee Rom. 11. 5. but a ſmall number that ſhall come out of the Captivity of Babylon, or (which I rather chuſe) they will be but a few that ſhall believe in my Son, yet they ſhall be enough for my promiſe to live in; this Paul argueth, Rom. 11. as the plant yet lives in the ſeed, when the root is pluckt up, the leaves dropt off, and the ſtalk is burnt up, ſo the promiſe of God lives in a few, when the generality of a people for their ſins are caſt off and deſtroyed. The favour of God to Men, and the promiſe of God to good men, lived in one family of Lot, when the five Cities were burned; and in the one family of Noah, when the world was drowned; the favour and promiſe of God to Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and David, lived in the few that returned out of Babylon, and in thoſe few who under the Goſpel received Chriſt, and believed in him, tho the generality of them rejected the counſel of God againſt themſelves. f God further promiſeth to bring out of Judah an inheritor of his Mountains, which the moſt and beſt Interpreters do interpret of the Jews return out of the Captivity of Babylon to Hieruſalem, and into their own Country, and particularly to worſhip God in his Temple upon Mount Sion, the Country of Judea was a Mountainous Country, Ezek. 36. 1. 8. The Mountains were round about Hieruſalem, Pſal. 125. 2. See alſo Ezek. 38. 8. God calls theſe Mountains his Mountains, becauſe he had choſen that Country before all others, and was once truly worſhipped there. h Mine Elect ſignifieth here Gods choſen ones, as in Pſal. 106. 23. ch. 48. 10. The term doth not always ſignifie ſuch as belong to the Election of Grace, but ſuch as are dignified with ſome ſpecial favour. The whole Nation of the Jews are called a choſen people. But poſſibly this promiſe is to be interpreted, with relation to the ſincerer part of that people, after that the others ſhould be waſted by the Captivity.

10 And Sharon ſhall be a fold of flocks i and the * Valley of Achor k, a place for the herds to lie down in, for my people that have ſought me l.

* Hoſ. 2. 15.

i Sharon was a place of great fruitfulneſs for paſtures. Davids herds were kept there, 1 Chron. 27. 29. It was become like a wilderneſs, Iſaiah 33. 9. God here promiſeth that it ſhould again be a place for the flocks. So Jer. 31. 27. God promiſed to ſow again the houſe of Judah, with the ſeed of man, and with the ſeed of beaſt. k The Valley of Achor had its name from the ſtoning of Achan there, Joſh. 7. 26. It is thought to have been the firſt place the Jews ſet foot in when they had paſſed Jordan, hence Hoſ. 2. 14. God promiſed to make it a door of hope, and here the text ſaith, the flocks ſhould lie down. l But leſt the wicked idolatrous Jews ſhould apply this promiſe to themſelves, God limiteth it in the laſt words to the people that had ſought him, that is, that had truly worſhipped him, according to his own inſtitution, and that the words have the force of ſuch a limitation, appeareth from what followeth.

11 But ye are they that forſake the Lord m, that forget my holy mountain n, that prepare a table for that troop o, ‖ and that furniſh p the drink offerings unto their ‖ number q.

‖ Or Gad.

m Do not you that are Idolaters, think that theſe promiſes belong to you, ye are they that forſake the Lord, that is, the way of the Lord, it is a phraſe oppoſed to a walking with God, our walking with God is in the ways of his ſtatutes, forſaking of him, ſignifieth a declining, or turning aſide from that way. n To forget Gods holy Mountain, ſignifies not to regard the true worſhip of God, or not to mind it. God calleth Zion his holy Mountain, Joel 3. 17. and Jeruſalem is called Gods holy Mountain. The hill of Zion is called the Mountain of Gods holineſs, Pſal. 48. 1. as the Temple is called the beauty of holineſs, Pſal. 29. Pſal. 96. 9. their not regarding the worſhip of God there, but worſhipping God or Idols in Gardens, amongſt the graves and monuments is what is here called, a forgetting of his holy Mountain. Iſaiah prophecied in the time of Ahaz, ch. 1. 1. of whom it is ſaid, 2 Chron. 28. 23, 24. that he ſacrificed to the Gods of Damaſcus, that he cut in pieces the veſſels of the Lords houſe, ſhut up the doors of the houſe of the Lord, and made him altars in every corner of Hieruſalem, and in every ſeveral City of Judah he made high places to burn incenſe to other Gods. See alſo more of his practices, v. 2. 3, 4. of that chap. and 2 King. 16. 3. 10. 11, 12. and there were certainly many of his People that joined with him, in his worſhip, who are all here ſaid to forget Gods holy Mountain. o And to prepare a table for that troop; The Idols of the ten Tribes, 2 King. 16. 3. and of the Aſſyrians, 2 Chron. 28. 23. which were a troop, whereas the God of Iſrael was one God. And as God had altars, which are ſometimes called a table, as in Ezek. 41. 22. So they prepared altars for Idols, as may be read in the aforementioned ſtory of Ahaz: tho by preparing a table, here ſeems rather to be meant the feaſts they made upon their ſacrifices in their feſtival days, which was in imitation of what the true God had commanded his people, Deut. 16. 14, 15. Idolaters alſo made in honour to their Idols, as appears from Jud. 9. 27. Ezek. 18. 6, 11. Amos 2. 8. 1 Cor. 8. 10. p Nor did they only feaſt in honour to the Idols, but they furniſhed drink offerings unto their number. God had appointed Drink-offering for his honour, and as a piece of homage to him, Exod. 29. 40, 41. Levit. 23. 18, 37. theſe people had paid this homage to Idols. See Jer. 7. 18. & 19. 13. & 32. 29. q What we tranſlate Number in the Heb. is La Meni to Meni. Avenarius tranſlates it Mercury, an Idol whom Merchants worſhipped for good ſucceſs in trading, others underſtand it of the Hoſt of Heaven, others of the multitude of their Idols, our tranſlation reads it their number. The word coming from an Heb. root, which ſignifyeth to number, is no where elſe found in Scripture, which makes it hard, too poſitively to aſſert the true meaning of it.

12 Therefore will I number you to the ſword r, and you ſhall all bow down to the ſlaughter s, becauſe * when I called t you did not anſwer, when I ſpake, you did not hear; but did evil before mine eyes, and did chuſe u that wherein I delighted not.

* Prov. 1. 24. ch. 66. 4. Jer. 7. 13.

r You have offended in number, worſhipping a multitude, a troop of Idols, there ſhall be a great number of you periſh by the Sword, or poſſibly the term number may refer to all in the next phraſe, ſo let them know that none of them ſhall eſcape, God ſaith he will number them, tell them out one by one to the Sword. s As you have bowed down to Idols, Iſa. 44. 17. (which are mine Enemies) I will make you bow down to your Enemies Swords. t I called you by my Prophets, Zech. 7. 7, 11, 12. you did not anſwer by doing the things which I by them ſpake to you for, but not conſidering that I ſaw you, or if conſidering it, yet not regarding it, you impudently did evil; yea, u You ſinned deliberately, chuſing ſinful courſes, the things which I hated, which are here (as often) expreſſed by a Meioſis, and called the things in which God delighteth not. In matters of worſhip we ought to chuſe nothing wherein God delighteth not, and reaſon, as well as Scripture, will aſſure us, he can delight in nothing of that nature which himſelf hath not directed. It is obſervable that ruin is here threatned to this People, not for their immoralities, or lewd lives, but for their errors, and ſuperſtitions in Divine Worſhip. Other ſins provoke God to wrath, but thoſe of this nature alone, are enough to ruine Souls and Nations.

13 Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God u: Behold my ſervants ſhall eat, but you ſhall be hungry x: Behold my ſervants ſhall drink, but you ſhall be thirſty: Behold my ſervants ſhall rejoice, but ye ſhall be aſhamed:

x As there are a party among you, who inſtead of ſerving God, are the Servants of men, in complying with Idolatry and Superſtition; ſo I have ſome Servants amongſt you who have diſtinguiſhed themſelves by keeping cloſe to my inſtitutions from the reſt of you; I will diſtinguiſh them from you in the diſpenſations of my Providence, thoſe that have eat bread at their Idol Feaſts, ſhall be hungry, my people that would not do ſo, they ſhall have enough, thoſe who have furniſhed a drink-offering to Meni, or that number of Idols, ſhall want that drink by which they have ſo prophaned my name, but my Servants, from whoſe mouths you pull'd the drink, becauſe they would only furniſh a drink-offering to me, they ſhall drink. My Servans whom now you make to mourn, and upon whom you pour ſhame and contempt, ſhall rejoice, and you ſhall be aſhamed, you that now rejoice and ſhout, while my Servants that cannot comply with you are afflicted, and by you made to mourn, you ſhall cry for ſorrow, and houl through vexation, while my Servants, who keep cloſe to my inſtitutions, ſhall ſing for joy of heart. Thoſe who in an hour of Perſecution for Religion, can have patience under the Enemies Triumphs and Rage, will find that the Rod of the wicked ſhall not always reſt upon the lot of the righteous.

14 Behold my ſervants ſhall ſing for joy of heart but ye ſhall cry for ſorrow of heart, and ſhall houl for vexation of ſpirit.

‖ Breaking.

15 And ye ſhall leave your name for a curſe unto my choſen y, for the Lord God ſhall ſlay thee z, and * call his ſervants by another name.

* Chap. 62. 2.

y Your name shall rot, as Prov.10.7. or only be used when men would curse others, saying, let them be made like such persons, as the names of Leah and Rachel, Ruth 4.11. and others of Gods Servants were used in blessing: so your names shall only be used in cursing, or when men will curse themselves, they shall use your names as examples of the eminent wrath of God upon sinners. z For you shall not perish by an ordinary hand, but by the hand of the Lord God, and as is the God, so is his justice, so is his strength, yea God himself shall look upon your name as accursed, and not suffer his people to be called by it, they shall not be called Jews, but Christians, Acts 11.26. The Children of God, Joh. 1.12. So detestable a sin is Idolatry, that God will not suffer himself to be called by a name given to Idols, how proper soever it be to express his perfection, *Hos.*2.16,17. Nor yet suffer his own people to be called by a name by which Idolaters are known.

16 That he who blesseth himself in the Earth, shall bless himself in the God of truth a, and * he that sweareth in the Earth, shall swear by the God of truth b, because the former troubles are forgotten, and because they are hid from mine eyes c.

* Deut.6.13. Psal.63.11. Chap.19.18. & 45. 23. Zeph.1.5.

a I will bring it to pass, that over all the world, if any man bless himself, or bless another it shall be in God, Amen. So the Heb. (we translate it the God of truth) Amen is a name given to Christ, Rev. 3,14. These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, being here applied to God, many think it makes a great proof of the Godhead of Christ, and judge the sense of this Text to be: That under the times of the Gospel men should not bless themselves (as before) in the names of Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, but in the name of Christ, in the God Amen, nor is this an improbable sense. Others taking it more appellatively by Elohim, Amen, here understand that God, who shews himself true and faithful in his promises. b In like manner it is prophesied, that those that swear, (by which some understand worship God, others calling God to be a witness) should swear by the God of truth; or in the God of truth. Either worshipping God in Christ the Amen, or calling the faithful God to attest their sincerity, or swearing by that God who hath approved his truth and faithfulness by saving and delivering his people. c Because they shall see what God promised is fulfilled, the troubles of his people are at an end, and they are hid from Gods Eyes, that is, they are at an end.

17 For behold c, I create * new heavens, and a new earth d, and the former shall not be remembred nor † come into mind e.

* Ch.66.22. 2 Pet.3.13. Rev.21.1. † Heb. shall come upon thy heart.

c I will tell you yet a more admirable thing, I am about wholly to alter and change the state, not only of my people, who are now afflicted, restoring them to a more lightsome state, more free from trouble and afflictions, but d Bringing a new face upon the world, sending my Son to raise up a new Church, and to institute a new worship, *Joh.*4.21.24. and giving out my spirit in a more plentiful manner, Acts 2.17. which new state shall abide until a new Heaven and Earth appear, in which shall dwell nothing but righteousness, 2 *Pet.*3.13. *Rev.*21.1. and e That state of things shall be such, and so glorious, as the former state of my People shall not be remembred, nor come into mind; whether this new Heaven, and new Earth here promised, signifies such a state of the Church, wherein Christ shall personally reign upon Earth, over his Saints, the wicked being destroyed (as some have thought he shall for a thousand years) I very much doubt, and do not see how from this, and the parallel texts, any such thing can be concluded.

18 But be you glad, and rejoice for ever f, in that which I create, for behold I create Hierusalem g a rejoycing, and her peole a joy.

f You that are my people, though you cannot rejoice with that degree of joy, that attendeth a present fruition of good, yet be glad, and rejoice with the rejoycing of hope, for the thing is certain, what I am already doing, nor let your present state, or the discouragements you have from seeming improbabilities, spoil your joy, for it is not a work to be produced in an ordinary course or by an ordinary power, but by the power of me who brings something out of nothing, or out of what hath no fittedness to such a production, and I will create g Hierusalem a rejoycing, and her people a joy; by Hierusalem here, must be meant the Church, as well under the Gospel, as under the Law, (because the Gospel Church is grafted into that Olive) or else this prophecy must be understood as fulfilled in the coming of Christ, Luke 2. 10. Or else it referreth to a more full calling of the Jews, than we have yet seen or heard of.

19. And * I will rejoice in Hierusalem, and joy in my people i, and the* voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying k.

* Chap.62.5. * Chap. 35. 10. Rev.7. 17. & 21. 4.

i The nature of joy lying in the satisfaction, and well pleasedness of the Soul in the obtaining of the thing it hath willed; agreeth unto God, and joy and rejoycing are applied to him, *ch.*62.5. and in this text, so also, *Jer.*32.41. *Zeph.*3.17. k Such kind of promises are to be found, *ch.*35.10. & 51.11. *Jer.*31.12. *Rev.*21.4. which must be understood either comparatively, They shall indure no such misery as formerly, or (if interpreted to a state in this life) as signifying only some long, or eminent state of happiness, if as to another life they may be taken strictly, as signifying perpetuity, and perfection of joy and happiness.

20 There shall be no more thence, an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days l: for the child shall die an hundred years old, but the sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed.

l Whereas God had made many promises of long life to the Jews, they should all be fulfilled to Gods people among them, so as there should be rare abortions among them, *Ex.*23.26. few infants should be carried out to burial, nor but few that should not have filled up their years, those that were now Children, should die at a great age, nor none of these things should be of any advantage to wicked men, but if any of them should live to be an hundred years old, yet they should die accursed. This seemeth to be the plain sense. If any desires to read more opinions of these words, he may find enough in the English Annotations.

21 And * they shall build houses and inhabit them. And they shall plant Vineyards, and eat of the fruit of them n.

* Amos 9. 14.

n The quite contrary to what is said of the sloathful man, and Job 27.13,14,15,16,17. *Prov.*12.27.

22 They shall not build, and another inhabit, they shall not plant, and another eat, for * as the days of a tree are the days of my people, and mine elect † shall long enjoy the work of their hands o.

* Psal.92.12. † Shall make them continue long, or shall wear out.

o Duration, and perpetuity are promised to them, in their happy estate.

23 They shall not labour in vain, nor bring forth for trouble, for they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their off-spring with them p.

p And not only a blessing to them, but also to their Off-springs, But, what is here promised which wicked men do not oft times enjoy, and Gods People oft times want? Ans. 1. Wicked men may have them for their good parents sake, and good men may sometimes want them for evil parents sake. 2. Bad men may have some of these things, but they cannot expect them: good men may at present want them, but they may expect them from the hand of God, if they be good for them. 3. Bad men may have them in wrath; the blessing of God gives them to good men, and adds no sorrow therewith.

24 And it shall come to pass that before they call, I will answer q, and whiles they are yet speaking r I will hear.

q God promised, *ch.*58.9. to answer them, when they called: here he promiseth to be so ready to answer, as to answer the words assoon as they should be formed in their hearts before they should get them out of their lips, Psal. 32.5. *Dan.*10.12. r Yea while they were speaking, *Dan.*9.20.23. Acts 10.44. nor doth God say only, they shall have the things they would have (for so wicked men may sometimes have from the bountiful hand of Divine Providence) but they shall have them, as an answer or return unto their prayers.

25 The * wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock s, and dust shall be the serpents meat t, they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain u saith the Lord.

* Ch.11.6,9.

s This verse containeth a promise much like that, ch. 11. 6, 9. And relates to the ceasing of persecution. The people of God for their whiteness and innocency, are often compared to Lambs, and Sheep, wicked men to Wolves and Lions, for their antipathy to the seed of the Woman, God here promiseth to take off the fierceness of the Spirits of his Peoples Enemies, so that they shall live quietly and peaceably together. t Wicked men are compared to Serpents, Micah 7.17. compared with *Psal.*72.9. God promiseth a time of tranquillity to his Church under the Meraphor of Serpents eating the dust, their proper meat, *Gen.*3.14. instead of flying upon men: it signifies such a time, when wicked men should mind their proper business, and not make it their work to eat up the people of God like bread. u For the last phrase, see *ch.*11.9. what is before noted. But will some say, When shall these things be? The Scripture gives us no record of any such period of time yet past. And it is very probable that this is a promise yet to be fulfilled, and it is not for us to know the times and seasons: but in the mean time to let our faith and patience be seen; in the mean time we may learn, That it is Gods work to restrain the Wolves and Serpents of the world, who would else be always doing what they are sometimes doing, and it is a sad sign that God is not yet at peace with that people, where we see Wolves devouring Lambs, and Serpents destroying men instead of licking up dust, nor well pleased with that part of his holy mountain where there is nothing but hurting and destroying, biting and devouring one another, when God shall be at peace with a people these things shall not be found amongst them.

CHAP. LXVI.

1 THus saith the LORD *, The heaven is my throne a, and the earth is my footstool b: where is the house that ye build unto me c? and where is the place of my rest d?

* 1 King 8.27. Acts 7. 48,49. & 17. 24.

a The Heaven, that is the highest Heavens, are the place where I most manifest my power and glory, and shew my self in my Majesty. So *Psal.*11.4. *Psal.*103.19. Matth. 5. 34. Hence we are taught to pray, Our Father which art in Heaven. q And the Earth is my footstool, or the Place where I set my feet, Matth. 5: 35. d Can there be an house builded, that will contain me, who can encompass the Heavens and the Earth with an house? d Or, where is the place wherein I can be said to rest in a proper sense? The Arke is indeed called God's foot-stool, and the place of his rest, in a figurative sense, because there God manifested himself, though in degrees much beneath the manifestations of himself in Heaven, but properly, God hath no certain place of Rest.

2 For all those things hath my hand made e, and all those things have been f, saith the Lord: but to this man will I look, * even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and * trembleth at my word h.

* Psal. 34.18. & 51. 17. Chap. 57.15. * Ezr.9.4. & 10.3. Prov.28 14. & v.5.

e The Heavens and the Earth are the work of my hands, Gen. 1.1. *Job.*1.3. (some expound it of the Temple, and the Sacrifices.) f They were not only made by God, but subsisted and were kept in being by him. These things were not therefore valued by him, nor could he have any need of, or respect to an house which is but a very little part of the Earth; he having made the Heavens and the Earth, had them all at his command, and how could he need a Temple? or, wherein could he be advantaged from it? g But God will look with a respect, and with a favourable Eye to him that hath a broken and contrite spirit, whose heart is subdued to the Will of God, and who is poor, and low in his own Eyes, *Mat.*5.3. Luke 6.20. And h who trembleth when he heareth God's threatning words, nor ever heareth any revelation of the Divine Will without a just Reverence.

3 He that killeth an ox i, is as if he slew a man: he that sacrificeth a lamb ‖, as if he * cut off a dogs neck k: he that offereth an oblation, as if he offered swines blood: he that † burneth incense, as if he blessed an idol l: yea, they have chosen their own ways m, and their soul delighteth in their abominations n.

‖ Or kid. * Deut.23.18. † Heb. makes a memorial of.

i Solomon, *Prov.*15.8. gives us a short, but full commentary on this whole verse; The Sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord. He that killeth an Ox, that is, for Sacrifice, as it is expounded by the next words, He that sacrificeth a Lamb. k The comparison sheweth God's detestation of ceremonial performances from men of wicked hearts and lives. l From hence it is plain, that the Prophet is not here reflecting upon Idolatrous Worship, but Formal Worship: for to say, He that burneth Incense to an Idol, is as he that blesseth an Idol, is but to say, he that blesseth an Idol, blesseth an Idol; but upon those who in a formality worshipped the true God, and by acts which he had appointed, such were offering Sacrifices, Oblation, Incense. God by the Prophet declares, that these mens Services were no more acceptable to him than Murther, Idolatry, or the most horrid prophanation of his name; such would cutting off a dogs neck for Sacrifice, have been, or offering Swines blood, so little do ritual performances, though instituted by God himself, please God when they are but meer formalities, as they always are. m When those that perform them, live as they list, lewd, and loose lives, and think to save themselves by their prayers, like the Whore, *Prov.*7.14,15. n Not only sinning by humane frailty, but taking pleasure in their sins, Prov. 15.26. to offer a Sacrifice with an heart resolved (when it is offered) to go on in sinful courses, is to offer it with an evil mind. This is a dreadful text to persons who will murder, and steal, and swear, and curse, and lie, and commit Adultery, and then come and stand before God in his house, which is called by his name, that is, come to serve him in acts of Worship, *Lev.*10.3. See *Psal.*50. 16,17,18. *Isa.*1.11,12,13,14. *Jer.*7.9,10. *Mat.*7.21,22,23. *Job.*4. 24. 1 *Tim.*4.8.

4 I also will chuse o their ‖ delusions p, and bring their fears upon them q, * because when I called none did answer r, when I spake, they did not hear s, but they did evil before mine Eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not.

‖ Devices. * Prov.1.24. ch.65.12. Jer. 7.13.

o They had made their choice, they chose not the ways of God, but their own ways, that which God delighted not in, as in the later part of this verse, therefore (saith God) I will also chuse. p Their delusions, or illusions, or devices, Montanus translates it, adinventionibus, it is a Noun derived from a word which signifies to speak childishly, or corruptly, the word in this form is only used in this text, and in 1 *Sam.*25.3. it signifieth studies, or works, Psal.12.4. *Isa.*3.4. *Hos.*4.9. It is an ordinary thing for God thus generally to declare his justice against men. That he will deal with sinners, as they deal with him, so *Psal.*18.25,26. *Lev.*26.27. *Jer.*34.17. *Prov.*1.24.28. The meaning is, I will be no kinder to them, than they have been to me. They have chosen to mock and delude me, I will chuse to suffer them to delude themselves, or they have chosen to work wickedness, I will chuse to bring the fruit of their works upon them. They have chosen the cause, I will chuse the effect. q That is (say some) the things which they feared, and did these things to avoid, as *Jer.*42.16. *Ezek.*11.8. Others by their fears chuse rather to understand such terrors and affrightments as are natural to men upon the prospect of great evils, as *Jer.*20.4. as God in mercy delivereth his people from their fears, *Psal.*34.4. So in judgment he causeth fears as a great judgment to possess sinners, *Lev.*26.16. *Deut.*28.66. r Because when by my Prophets I exhorted you to your duty, very few yielded obedience; see *Prov.*1.24. *ch.*65.12. *Jer.*7.13. s Hearing here signifieth hearkning, or obeying, not hearing is expounded by doing evil, and chusing that wherein God delighteth not; God accounts that those do not hear, who do not obey his Will.

5 Hear the word of the Lord, you that * tremble at his word s: your brethren t that hated you, that cast you out u for my names sake x said, * Let the Lord be glorified y but he shall appear to your joy, and they shall be ashamed z.

* V. 2. * Ch. 5.19.

s The Prophet turneth his discourse from denouncing judgment against the Idolaters, and formalists amongst the Jews, to such as feared God, whose religion is described by a trembling at his word, as v.2. such a turning of the Prophets discourse was, *ch.*50.10. ch. 51.1.7. The same words belong not to Saints and presumptuous Sinners. t Your Brethren, by Nation, or by external profession in Religion, tho false Brethren, *Gal.*2.4. Thus Paul calls all the rejected Jews Brethren, *Rom.*9.3. u That either shut you out of their intimate society, or (which is more probable) excommunicate, and cast you out of their Synagogues, or cast you out of their City, and some of you out of the world, *Joh.*9.35.22. *Joh.*16.2. x i.e. For my sake, for your owning me, and adherence to my law, said. y Either mocking you as the Jews did Christ, when hanging upon the cross, *Mat.*27.43. Luke 23.35. thus they mocked at David, Psal.42.3. Or, Let the Lord be glorified, thinking they did God good service, *Joh.*16.2. z There will come a day when God shall appear and let them know his judgment concerning their violence, and rage, then you shall have joy, and they shall be ashamed, 2 *Thes.*1.6,17,18.

6 A voice of noise from the city a, a voice from the temple, a voice of the Lord that rendreth recompence to his Enemies b.

a The expression of a Prophetical extasy, as much as methinks I already hear a voice of noise, rather a sad and affrighting noise, than the noise of Triumphers (as some think) yea, it comes not from the City only, but from the Temple, wherein these formalists have so much gloried, and reposed so much confidence, there is a noise of Soldiers slaying, and of the Priests or poor people fled thither, shrieking, or crying out. b A voice of the Lord, not in thunder, which is sometimes called so, *Psal.*29.3,4,5,&c. but that rendreth recompence to his enemies. Thus, the noise of Soldiers, the roaring of Guns, the sounds of Drums and Trumpets are the Voice of the Lord. Thus the Prophet seemeth to express the destruction of the Jews by the Roman Armies, as if a thing at that time doing.

7 Before she travailed she brought forth, before her pain came she was delivered of a man-child c.

c The whole verse is expressive of a great and sudden salvation, which God would work for his Church, like the delivery of a woman, and that of a man child before her travel, and without pain. The only doubt is, whether it referreth to the deliverance of the people out of Babylon, or the worlds surprizal with the Messiah, and the sudden and strange propagation of the Gospel, and it is a question not easily determined. The delivery of the Jews out of Babylon, indeed was without struglings or any pain, not like their deliverance from Egypt, after the wasting of their enemies by ten successive Plagues, but by the kind Proclamation of Cyrus; but it seems not to have been sudden only as to the day, and hour, and manner, for Daniel understood by Books that the time was come, *Dan.*9.2. and the people had a prospect of it 70 years before, Jer. 25.12. & 29,10. The Prophecy therefore seems rather to refer to the coming of Christ, and the sudden propagation of the Gospel. The Popish Interpreters applying it to the Virgin Mary bringing forth Christ, is like other of their fond dreams.

8 Who hath heard such a thing d? who hath seen such things e? shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day? or shall a Nation be born at once? for as soon as Zion travelled, she brought forth children f.

d The Prophet calls either to the whole world, or to such as feared God amongst the Jews, to admire God in his stupendious works of Providence, either in the easie manner of the deliverance of the Jews out of the Captivity of Babylon, without any pain, without so much as one throw; or else in the erecting of his Gospel Church, into which all the Jews that received Christ, were gathered as well as Gentiles, making both one, Eph.2.14. e Which seems to be meant by the Earths bringing forth in one day as great a work of Providence, as if all the women in the world should have brought forth in a day; or as if all the plants of the earth had brought forth their flowers and fruit in one day. f As soon as the Church of the Jews began to move out of the captivity of Babylon, God put it into the hearts of multitudes to go up, *Exod.*1. 5. *ch.*2.1,2. &c. Or, as soon as the voice of the Gospel put the Church of the Jews into her Travel in John the Baptists, Christs, and the Apostles times, it presently brought forth. In John Baptists time, the Kingdom of Heaven suffered violence, and the violent took it by force, Mat.11.12. and it continued so, as 3000 were converted at Peter's Sermon, Acts 2. The Gentiles were the Children of Zion, being planted into their stock, the law of the Gospel first going out of Zion.

9 Shall I bring to the birth, and not ‖ cause to bring forth? saith the Lord g, shall I cause to bring forth, and shut the womb? saith thy God h.

g The work before spoken of, seemeth not after the manner of men, who do things that are great gradually, nor in an ordinary course of nature, whose motions also bring things by degrees to their perfection, but you must consider who it is that speaketh (saith the Lord;) now as is the God, so is his strength. Again, men may undertake things, and for want of power not bring them to perfection, but shall I do such a thing? I have by many prophecies and promises secur'd you in the expectation of such a thing, and shall I not by my Providence effect it? I, that in the ordinary course of my providence use to give a birth to Women, to whom I have given a power to conceive, shall I not give a birth to Zion, to my people, whom by my prophecies & promises I have made to conceive such hopes and expectations? b Nor shall Zion once only bring forth, but she shall go on teeming, her womb shall not be shut, she shall every day bring forth more and more children, my presence shall be with my Church to that end, to the end of the world.

10 Rejoyce ye with Hierusalem, and be glad with her all ye that love her: rejoyce for joy with her, all ye that mourn for her i.

i There is nothing more ordinary amongst men, than for friends and neighbours to meet together with their friends recovered from affliction, or brought into a better state, to rejoyce with them especially such friends as in their afflictions have mourned with them. Thus Mary, Luke 1.40. went to rejoyce with Elizabeth, and Job's friends came to rejoice with him, Job 42.11. The Prophet in like manner calls to all the friends of Hierusalem, especially such as in the days of her affliction had mourned for her, to come and rejoice and be glad with her, upon the prospect of her better state after the Babylonish Captivity: or at least in the time of the Messiah; for tho joy and gladness be the affection of the Soul that works upon its union with its desirable object, and the deliverance of the people out of Babylon, was not to be for many years after this, nor the Messiah to come, not many years after that, yet faith being the evidence of things not seen, there is a rejoicing of hope, hope giving the Soul an union with its object hoped for, and these things were now present to believers, who by faith called the things that were not, as if they were: because they had the security of a divine Revelation for them, and they were already existent in their necessary causes.

11 That you may suck and be satisfied with the k breasts of her consolations l, that you may milk out, and be delighted with the abundance of her glory m.

k Hierusalem is here set out as the Mother of us all, as indeed she was, for out of Zion went forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Hierusalem, Isa.2,3. Christ was of the seed of Abraham, he was sent to the lost Sheep of the house of Israel, and is called, *Rom.*15.8. the minister of the Circumcision: they were the Olive, the Branches, the Gentiles but a wild Olive grafted in amongst them, Rom.11.17. we sucked at their breasts, Christ was first preached to them, the 12.the 70.were all of them. l The Gospel doctrine was their breasts of consolation. Christ was in the first place. m The glory of the people Israel, tho he was also a light to lighten the Gentiles, Lu.2.32. we are required to rejoyce with Hierusalem, That we may suck, and be satisfied, &c. Intimating, that our joy should not be a meer act of charity to them, but a proper expression of our sense of Gods goodness to our selves, who should suck and be satisfied from the glad tidings of the Gospel first published unto them, and our selves be enlightned from what was at first the glory of Israel.

12 For thus saith the Lord, Behold I * will extend peace to her like a river, and the glory of the Gentiles n like a flowing stream o, then shall ye * suck p, ye shall be * born upon her sides, and be dandled upon her knees q.

* Chap. 48. 18. & 60.5.
* Chap.60.16.
* Chap. 49. 22. & 60. 4.

n That this promise respects the times of the Messias seems plain, not only from the consideration that no history giveth us any account of any great or long peace or prosperity the Jews had before that time, nor indeed then, if we understand it not of a spiritual Gospel peace, which Christ preached to them that were nigh as well as to those afar off, Eph.2.17. o It also appears from the mention of the glory of the Gentiles as a flowing stream, which can hardly be understood of any thing but Christ and the preaching of the Gospel to the Gentiles. But I leave it to the issues of Providence to expound and determine, whether the Prophecy of this Text doth not relate to a further conversion and calling of the Jews than hath yet been seen. p When Christ was revealed to the Jews, not those only of the Gentiles, but those of the Jews who belonged to Gods election, sucked Gospel doctrine, the Gentiles were born upon the sides of Hierusalem, and dandled upon her knees, as first hearing from the Apostles who were some of the Daughters of Hierusalem, members of the Jewish Church, the glad tidings of Salvation.

13 r As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you, and you shall be comforted in Hierusalem.

r That is, in the most tender and compassionating way imaginable, the husband doth not comfort his wife with that tenderness, and those bowels that the mother comforteth the Child after it hath received some fall or mischief. Hierusalem now mourneth, and you mourn with her, but she shall recover from her affliction and from her sorrows, and shall be comforted; and you that mourn for her, shall partake of her joys, as you now share with her in her afflictions, God in the day that he wipeth tears from her eyes, shall also wipe them from yours: and you shall have as great an occasion of joy from the happy, as now you have of sorrow from the afflicted state of Hierusalem.

14 And when you see this, your heart shall rejoice, and your bones shall flourish like an herb u: and the hand of the Lord shall be known toward his servants x, and his indignation toward his enemies y.

q The peace and tranquillity of the Church, and the propagation of the Kingdom of Christ, is always the cause of an heavenly joycing to such as fear God, Psal. 105.3. the reason is because it is the greatest objects of their desires which are then satisfied, and their thoughts are then at rest, and besides they are members of the same body, so as their own bones, which before are dry and withered, *Eze.*37.1,2. and the sinews, and the flesh comes again upon them, and the skin covers them above, so as they flourish like an herb in the spring, all whose verdure and beauty in the Winter was concealed in the root hid in the earth. x And in this the Power, protection, & influence of God for, of, and upon such as truly serve and obey him, shall be made manifest and known. y But the wicked shall be under a quite contrary dispensation, *Psal.*1.4. As they have had a day which hath been to you the power of darkness: so you shall have a day, which shall be to them the power of darkness; as Gods hand shall be upon, and towards such as fear me, to cover, and bless, and influence them, so his indignation shall in that day be shewed towards those of your Nation, who have declared themselves the Enemies of the Lord.

15 For behold the Lord will come with fire z, and with his chariots, with a whirle-wind a, to render his anger with fury b, and his rebukes c with flames of fire.

z Here the Prophet comes more particularly to expound what indignation should be shewed towards his enemies. That is, with terrible Judgments, nothing being more terrible and wasting than fire, or with fire in a proper sense, understanding it of the fire with which enemies use to consume places brought under their power. a With a sudden sweeping Judgment that like a whirl-wind shall destroy this people. b With fury, that is, with fervor, for fury properly so taken is not in God, *ch.*27. 4. but God sometimes executes justice and judgment more smartly and severely. c By rebukes, he means punishments, for it is said God will execute them with flames of fire. They had contemned the rebukes of his law, now God will rebuke them with fire and sword.

16 For by fire, and by his sword, will the Lord plead d with all flesh e, and the slain of the Lord shall be many f.

d This kind of rebuking is also called a pleading with them, so he threatens to plead against Gog with Pestilence and blood, *Ezek.*38. 22. God at first pleads with sinners by words; but if he cannot so prevail, he will plead with them in a way by which he will overcome by fire, pestilence, and blood. e Thus he threatens to do with all sinners, or with all the wicked Jews. f To the fire he threatens to add the Sword, so as the slain of the Lord, that is, those whom God should cause to be slain, should be many.

17 * They that sanctifie themselves, and purifie themselves in the gardens g, ‖ behind one tree in the midst h, eating swines flesh i, and the abomination k, and the mouse, shall be consumed together, saith thy LORD.

* *Ch.*65. 3,4.

g That the Jews might not think that the Judgments threatned, concerned only the Heathen, he tells them they concerned them, the Idol Worshippers amongst them, and not Idolaters only, but such as broke his laws about meats, which he had prohibited them to eat. Those that sanctified and purified themselves in gardens, gardens in which they worshipped Idols, *ch.*1.29.& 65.3.4. *Kin.*14. 23.& 15. 13. the word translated gardens signifieth such as were thick planted with trees, and had groves in them, where they set their Idols, 1 *Kin.*14.23. hence the Idol is called the Grove, 2 King. 23.6. they had also in these Gardens Pools where they washt themselves in a way of preparation for their Idol-worship, as the Priest by Gods ordinance was to bath himself, *Num.*1.97. h Behind one of the trees, or one by one behind the Trees. Some think that Achar is here a proper name of an Idol, behind which, or behind whose Temple these Idolaters were wont to purifie themselves. These Gardens were places too as well for bruitish Lusts as Idol-worship, as may be learned from 1 *King.*14.24. 2 *King.*23.7. and they by these washings thought to make themselves clean. i Eating Swines flesh forbidden, *Lev.*11.7. *Deut.*14.8. k And the abomination, either any abominable things, or all those beasts forbidden the Jews for meat, *Lev.*11, 9, 10. &c. Some think a particular abominable thing is here meant, and think it is the Weasel which *Lev.*11,29. is joined with the Mouse, which is here next mentioned. The word which we translate Mouse being no where found but there, and here, and 1 *Sam.*6.4,5,11,18. some think it is not that Creature we call a Mouse, (because a Mouse is properly no creeping thing; but the word *Lev.*11. 29. signifyeth a creeping thing) they therefore think it rather signifyeth some Serpent. It is a matter of no great consequence. The sense is, that God would not only destroy the open and gross Idolaters and superstitious persons, but all those also who had made no Conscience of yielding Obedience to the Law of God in such things as seemed to them of a minute nature, and such as they easily might have yielded obedience to; he saith that they shall all perish together. In the day of Judgment the Idolatrous Pagan and Papist, and the lewd and disobedient Protestant shall fare alike. It will be an hard thing for a thinking Soul to see how Baptism, and a membership in the Christian Church, should save men from Gods Wrath, without Holiness, more than Circumcision and Membership in the Jewish Church.

18 For I know their works, and their thoughts l, it shall shall come m that I will gather all nations n, and tongues, and they shall see my glory o.

l The Hebrew is thus word for word; And I their works, and their thoughts, coming together all nations and languages, and they shall come and see my glory. So that it is necessary for Interpreters to supply some words to make out the sense. And the sense will differ according to the nature and sense of those supplied words. We supply the Verb know, as Amos 5. 12. others supply, I have noted. Others make it a question. And I should I endure their thoughts and their works? Others, But as for me O their works, and their thoughts? Some make these words for I know their works and their thoughts it shall come, one sentence, and to relate to the judgments before threatned, v. 15, 16. and the later words a new sentence, and a promise of the call of the Gentiles. If we thus divide the words into two sentences, the former part doth but assert the certainty of the Judgment that should come upon this People, and the confirmation or reason of it from the Omniscience and Justice of God. They have done these things, and I know it, and am of purer eyes than to behold iniquity. I know I have marked their thoughts and works (before mentioned.) O the vileness of them! Should I suffer, should I endure them? No. It shall come, either the Judgments before threatned shall come: or it shall come to pass, that I will cast them off, and then I will gather all Nations, &c. m So as it shall come, may either refer to the threatning of Judgments in the former part, or the promise of calling the Gentiles in the later part of the verse. Others make the verse one intire Sentence, and the sense thus, seeing I know their works, &c. or when the time shall come, that I shall let them by my vengeance know, that I know their works. I will gather all Nations and Languages. n I will call the Gentiles into my Church, and o My Oracles, my holy Institutions and Ordinances, which hitherto have been locked up in the Church of the Jews, Rom. 3. 2. and been their glory, shall be published to the Gentiles, Psal. 97. 6. Isa. 40. 5.

19 And I will set a sign amongst them, and I will send those that escape of them unto the nations p, to Tarshish, Pul and Lud that draw the bow, to Tubal and Javan, to the Isles afar off q, that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory, and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles r.

p It is on all hands agreed that this Verse is a Prophecy of the conversion of the Gentiles. n By sign here some understand an Ensign, as the word signifies, Psal. 74. 4. which is a military sign to gather people together, by this may be understood Christ, Luk. 2. 34. See Isa. 11. 10. or as others the ministry of the word attended with miracles (often called signs) these were set up among the Jews first, then among the Gentiles. Others (but less probably) understand by sign a mark of distinction, like that mentioned, Ezek. 9. 4. so as, saith he, some shall escape and not be destroyed, and for those that shall escape, I will send them to q Tarshish, Pul, Lud, Tubal, Javan, to Europe, Asia, and Africa, to all the quarters of the world, (see the Latin Synopsis, and the English Annot. large discourses of these particular places) to all Nations that had never before heard of God or his true Worship. r And they shall every where preach the Gospel, and set up my Gospel-Ordinances and Institutions. This was eminently made good upon the Apostles leaving the Jews, and turning to the Gentiles, Act. 13. 46. and more fully after the destruction of Jerusalem, when the Believers among the Jews, as well as the Apostles, went about publishing the Gospel to all People, which was the declaring of the Lords Glory.

20 And they shall bring all your brethren s for an offering unto the LORD out of all nations: upon horses, and ‖ in litters, and upon mules, and upon swift beasts t, to my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith the LORD u, as the children of Israel bring an offering in a clean vessel into the house of the LORD x.

s Those who are the Children of Abraham, not considered as the Father of the Jewish Nation only, but considered as the Father of many Nations, and as the Father of the Faithful, or who are the Children of God being Believers, and receiving Christ y and do are your Brethren, (how contemptible soever you judge them,) shall be brought out of all Nations for an offering to the Lord. God will have no more offerings of Bullocks and Rams, or Lambs, but of Men, and Women, reasonable Services, Rom. 12. 1. he will have an offering up of the Gentiles, Rom. 15. 16. t And because the Gentiles are many of them far off from Jerusalem, and as yet further off from God, Eph. 2. 17. God will find out fit means for this end, as Horses, and Litters, and Mules, and swift beasts are to bring Men and Women long Journeys. u And they shall be brought into the Church, which began at Jerusalem, and this you may be assured of, for the Lord hath said it, who cannot lye nor repent. x And they shall come with as much joy and gladness, with as much sincerity and holiness, as the Godly Jews use and exercise when they bring their offerings in clean vessels.

21 And * I will take of them for priests, and for levites y, saith the LORD. * Ex. 29. 6. Ch. 61. 6.

y Lest the Jews, being assured that the Tribe of Levi, which God anciently chose to minister before him, was among them, should say, Alas! if the Gentiles should be brought in, where would they have Priests or Levites? God here by his Prophet tells them, he would provide Priests, he would take of them, of these converted Heathens, for Priests and Levites; that is, for Gospel ministers, to teach and to instruct People, which was the Priests work of old, Deut. 33. 10. 2 Chron. 17. 7, 9. Mal. 2. 6. (for they are mightily mistaken, that think the Priests among the Jews had nothing to do, but to sacrifice and burn incense, which work is ceased) saith the Prophet, God will find amongst the converted Gentiles those who tho they be not of the Tribe of Levi, or House of Aaron, yet they shall do the true work of Priests and Levites. 1 Pet. 2. 9. Rev. 1. 6.

22 For as * the new heavens, and the new earth z which I will make, shall remain before me (saith the Lord) so shall your seed, and your name remain a. * Ch. 65, 17. 2 Pet. 3. 13. Rev. 21. 1.

This whole verse is only a promise of the perpetuity of the Gospel Church, and the not failing of the Additions to it of such as shall be saved till the world shall have an end. z The new state of the Church to be raised up under the Messias. a As I intend that shall abide, so there shall be a daily succession of true Believers for the upholding of it, for if Believers could fail from the Earth, the Church made up of them only, as the true Members of it must fail also.

23 And it shall come to pass that from one † new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another b shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the LORD.

† from new moon to his new moon, and from sabbath to his sabbath.

b In the Gospel-Church, there shall be as constant and setled a course of Worship (tho of another nature) as ever was in the Jewish Church, Christians are not bound to keep the Jewish Sabbath or New-moons, Gal. 4, 10. 11. Col. 2. 16. But New Testament Worship is often expressed by Old Testament Phrases. The Jews were only obliged to appear three times in a year at Jerusalem, but (saith the Prophet) the Gospel-Church shall worship God from one Sabbath to another. Zech. 14. 16.

24 And they shall go forth c, and look upon the carcasses of the men that have sinned against me d: for their * worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched e, and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh. * Mar. 9. 44, 46, 48.

c Either the Gentiles, or the sincerer part of the Jews shall go forth from their places, or from Jerusalem, or, go out of their graves at the last day. d And look upon the vengeance I have taken upon these vile Idolaters and Formalists, for their satisfaction, Psal. 58. 10. they shall see none of them alive, but they shall see their carcasses. e For the worms that feed on their slain carcasses shall not suddenly die, and the Enemies fire burning upon their Habitations shall not go out till they be wholly consumed: and after this Life, and at the day of Judgment, they shall go into eternal torments. See Mar. 9. 44, 46, 48. where they will feel a worm of Conscience that shall never die, and a fiery Wrath of God upon their Souls and Bodies, that shall never go out.
